GENEALOGICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL

ACKER FAMILY.

Philip Jacob Acker, the ancestor of this family, was born in 1696 in Germany and landed at Philadelphia on September 25, 1732, on the ship "Loyal Judith," with his brother Henry Acker. He was then thirty-six years of age. He settled in the district, which at that time was called Macungie in Bucks county, now Upper Macungie township, Lehigh county, about six miles west of Allentown, on what is now the Koch farm, on the south side of the public road leading from Allentown to Fogelsville, located several miles east of Fogelsville and probably one mile east of Chapman's Station on the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railroad.

Philip Jacob Acker was naturalized at the session of the Supreme Court in Philadelphia on September 27, 1743, and in 1745 he was one of the organizers of the Ziegel Church, located in Weisenburg township. On March 30-31, 1757, David Schultze surveyed land for Philip Jacob Acker in Macungie, as also for Dewald Koontz, Christian Heisler, Adam Fisher and Conrad Pien (See Perkiomen Region Vol. 3, Page 91). On January 11, 1759, Philip Jacob Acker was granted land adjoining his other land and that of Christian Heisler in Macungie township. In 1762 he was assessed £10 in Macungie township.

Philip Jacob Acker and his wife Anna Maria had one son, Jacob Acker, who was born July 25, 1736.

On March 24, 1786, Jacob Acker purchased by assignment from William Green, of Reading, Berks county, for the sum of £120 in gold and silver money, 170 acres of land in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, formerly owned by George Wise, of Germantown. This land is located five or six miles from the original Acker farm in Macungie township, and about six miles northeast of the Ziegel church. It is said the reason of the further removal from the fertile soil of Macungie to the hills of Weisenburg was the lack of water in the former lands, which was abundant, and still is abundant, in Weisenburg. The Acker farm in Weisenburg remained in the family until about 1870, when it was sold to a Mr. Grim. It is now owned by Mr. Grim's son.

In 1781 Jacob Acker was assessed for the old property in Macungie, but in the next published assessment in 1812 no Acker property was assessed in Macungie, but in that same year Daniel, Michael and George Acker were assessed in Weisenburg. These three individuals were sons of Jacob Acker, who had purchased the Weisenburg property in 1786 and who at this time was seventy-six years of age, and, no doubt, had transferred his property to his sons.

Jacob Acker's name is recorded as a Private in Captain Trexler's Company under command of Col. George Breinig of the Northampton Militia, May 14, 1788. (Page 111, Vol. 8, 5th Series of Pennsylvania Archives.) The names of Christian Acker and Jacob Acker, Junior, also appear in this muster roll. Jacob Acker, as well as his father, Philip Jacob Acker, was buried at Ziegel church. The tombstone of Jacob Acker, a slate slab, contains the following inscription: "Here rests in God, Jacob Acker, who was born July 25, 1736, had lived in the matrimonial state with Eberhartine Heisler for 47 years, to whom nine children were born, eight sons and one daughter." The rest of the inscription was defaced.

Eberhartine Acker survived her husband and lived to an old age in the small house on the old Acker farm in Weisenburg. Jacob Acker married Eberhartine Heisler, daughter of Christian Heisler and his wife Eva Elizabeth. They had these children: Christian, born December 25, 1755; Philip Jacob, born August 30, 1757; John Leonhart, born September 22, 1752; George Henry, born December 10, 1761; Daniel; Michael, born December 25, 1766; John, and two daughters.

Christian Acker was a soldier in the Continental Army. He and his wife Elizabeth had a son George Henry, born November 15, 1782.

Philip Jacob Acker is said to have lost his life in the service of the Continental Army. George Acker was at one time a member of the State Legislature of Pennsylvania. His descendants settled in Longswamp, Berks county.

Daniel Acker married May 21, 1793, Margaretha Schmidt. He owned the old Weisenburg farm. One of his sons, Joseph D., lived in West Chester, Pa. The other of his sons, George Acker, had a large farm, part of which was included in the limits of Allentown. He married Elizabeth, widow of Daniel Knauss, nee Frey, daughter of John Frey. She was born Oct. 28, 1795, and died March 9, 1855. They had five children: Abbie, who married a Mr. Foley; Reuben; George, a Civil War soldier, who died unmarried; Mary, married to Phaon Haas; and Sarah, married to Levi Kuhns.

Reuben Acker, the eldest son of George and Elizabeth (Frey) Acker, was born in Allentown, in 1825. He spent his youth upon his father's farm and his early education was limited to the opportunities of a farmer's boy in the common schools. During the entire period of his active life he was a hard worker at whatever his hands found to do. Mr. Acker, in 1847, at the age of twenty-two years, left home to seek his fortune, with a capital of one dollar and fifty cents. He went to New York City, from thence to Ohio, working at various employments, but always managing to save some of his earnings. In 1852 he, with others, set out with an ox team for California, and in just six months they reached their goal. Mr. Acker found work in Alameda county on a farm at eighty-five dollars per month "and found." He remained five years and with his savings embarked in business for himself. His first year's profit was $2,400; that of the second year about the same. He then engaged in buying and selling cattle, and continued in this business for upwards of eight years, meeting with fair success. In 1864 Mr. Acker returned to Allentown and purchased his parents' old homestead of one hundred and twenty-six acres, near Allentown, where he settled in 1865. In vain did he offer to give one-half his land to any person who would erect for him suitable buildings on the remaining half of the tract. This proved to be a blessing in disguise, as the growth of the city of Allentown extended to his property and its lands became populous and valuable, from all of which he derived a substantial benefit. He watched this growth and contributed his full share in promoting the interests of Allentown. After retiring from active farm work, he resided at 1125 Turner street, Allentown, giving considerable attention to real estate. In Sept. 1905, in company with his son-in-law, H. W. Haines, he went to the Pacific coast to visit the places in which he had formerly made his home. While on this visit he died, Oct. 5, 1905, and his remains were brought to Allentown and interred in Union cemetery. In politics he was a Democrat, always taking an interest in the city's political welfare and its institutions. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. Reuben Acker married, in California, Sarah Andrews, born Jan. 17, 1838, died Aug. 19, 1896, and who was interred in Union cemetery by the side of her husband.

Their children were: Joseph John, born June 7, 1868, died Nov. 12, 1885; Ida, born Dec. 16, 1869, died Feb. 15, 1880; Sarah E., born May 15, 1871, married Oscar D. Knauss; Agnes, born Jan. 9, 1873, baptized Oct. 2, 1873, married Harvey W. Haines. Issue: Ruth A., born March 15, 1895, who married, June 18, 1913, Claude U. Keck, of Allentown, and Helen Agnes Haines, born Dec. 3, 1903. Mrs. Agnes Haines has her home at 1613 Chew street, Allentown; Martha D., born Oct. 1, 1875, married Edward W. Lewis. Issue: Reuben, May, George and John Lewis.

A daughter of Jacob Acker married Michael Reichert and both are buried in Milton, Pa. Their descendants are: Rev. George W. Richards, D.D., of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Lancaster, and his son, Joseph W. Richards; Mary Louisa, wife of Dr. James S. Smith, of Allentown, and Cora D. Richards, who was a school teacher, married in 1914, Mr. C. J. Burger, of Allentown.

Another child of Jacob Acker, probably a daughter, was born August 3, 1771.

Michael Acker, youngest son of Jacob Acker, was born December 5, 1766. The sponsors were Christian Acker and Anna Maria, daughter of Adam Heberly, both single. He was born in Macungie and died at the age of 44 years. He married Maria Klein, daughter of Peter Klein, of Weisenberg and his wife, Margaret Stettler. They had six children, four sons and two daughters, namely:

Jonathan, the oldest son, married Sallie Schaeffer and died at the age of 62 years. They had a number of children, all of whom are now dead.

Elizabeth Acker, born September 6, 1790, married John Dennis. They lived in Snyder county, Pa. Mrs. Dennis died at the advanced age of over 88 years.

Jacob Acker lived and died in Upper Macungie. He married a Miss Feldhof. They had sons and daughters. Among them were: Jacob, of Allentown; and Caroline, who married a Mr. Kuhns, of Atchison.

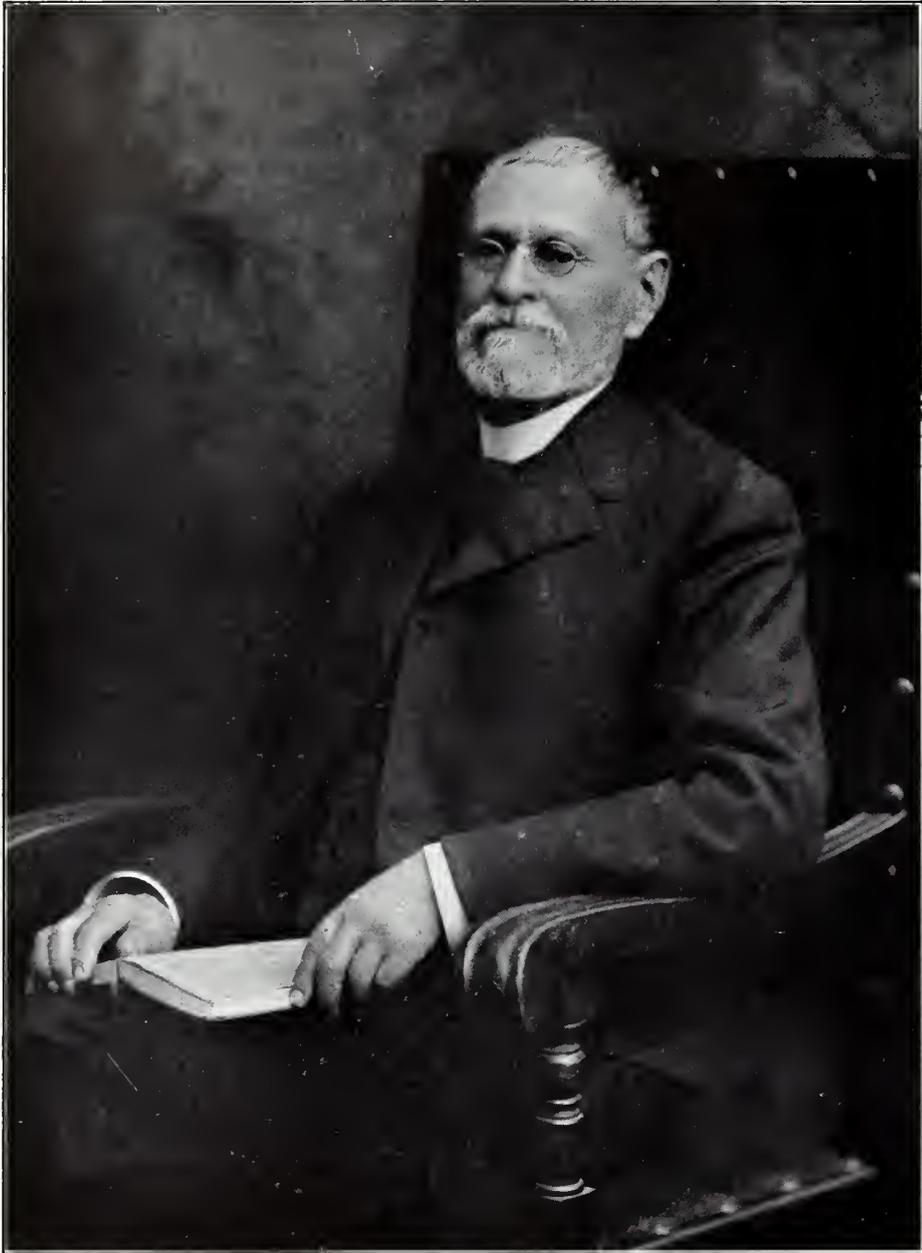

Henry Acker married Sallie Hartman. They settled in Ohio, about twelve miles west of Akron. He died at the age of 84 years and had sons and daughters.

Polly married Jacob Reinbold. He died at the age of 97 years, and she died at the age of 78 years. They moved on the south side of South Mountain, near Emaus. They had one daughter, Elizabeth, who married Solomon Reinbold and had sons and daughters. Mr. Reinbold died a number of years ago at the age of 58 years. Mrs. Reinbold died several years ago at an advanced age.

A daughter who died in her infancy.

They resided in Lehigh county for some years, but later removed to New York City, where he enlisted as a soldier in the Union Army in the Rebellion, and served as corporal in a New York heavy artillery regiment. After the war he lived in the State of Kansas, and died at the age of 79 years and is buried in Oswatomie, Kansas. They had sons and daughters. He was a faithful member of the Evangelical Association from his early years until his death. He married Helen Schumaker and had three sons and one daughter: Cyrus, of East Texas; Elmer, who married a Miss Sting, of Philadelphia, and had one daughter, Edna. They reside in Pen Argyl, Pa.; Curtis, of Bethlehem, who married a Miss Miller, who died several years ago. In 1848, in company with John Joseph Woodring, he walked from Lehigh county, Pa., to Seneca county, Ohio, and settled near Flat Rock, where he married Miss Sarah Casebier. They had two sons: Charles Fremont and James H. The mother died when the boys were quite young. He was married a second time to Miranda Engel. He followed the carpenter trade and farming. In 1869 they moved to Donophan county, Kas., purchasing a quarter section of the wild prairie land and by their industry and thrift procured a section of 640 acres of the best soil west of the Missouri. He is buried a short distance from their home in the Bellevue cemetery. His two sons reside close to the old homestead and are both farmers.

Edwin S. Woodring, pastor of Seibert United Evangelical church, Allentown.

REV. JAMES DANIEL ACKER, one of the best known Evangelical ministers of Pennsylvania, was born Dec. 14, 1830, in Lower Macungie township, one mile west of the little town of East Texas, on the banks of the Little Lehigh river. He was thirteen years of age when his father died and he afterwards lived with farmers. On Sept. 24, 1850, he came to Philadelphia. There were no railroads then from Allentown, but they had daily stage communication. He started at seven o'clock in the morning and arrived at Philadelphia at four o'clock in the afternoon. In his own words he stated: "I had only a few dollars in my possession when I came to the city, depending on finding employment, in which I was not disappointed. I also brought a certificate of church membership which I prized above the few dollars cash in my possession. In a few days I found a church home, and attended weekday evening prayer-meetings. Before the first Sabbath, I had found a young lady in the prayer-meeting, namely, Miss Emeline Kinsley, of Philadelphia, and on December 23, 1852, we started to "travel together" and we still travel side by side on the same road. In 1864 I became a commercial traveler, extending my trips westward to Omaha, Neb., northwest to Minneapolis, Minn., and southward to Memphis, Tenn. I was then young and vigorous, I am now 84 years old and great changes have taken place. Later in years I entered the ministry and at this writing I am still active in the work." Upon his arrival in Philadelphia in 1850 Mr. Acker united with the first church of the Evangelical Association in that city. Later he became one of the prime movers in the establishment of an English mission of that denomination on Darien street, popularly known as "Little Heaven." Later this congregation built a fine church on Eighth street, near Girard avenue.

For years Mr. Acker felt the call to the ministry, to which call he finally yielded and was ordained by the church of his choice. He served a number of important charges in the Evangelical Association and later in the United Evangelical Church, including appointments in Germantown and Philadelphia.

Although no longer serving a church in the active ministry, his services are still in demand and nearly every Sunday finds him actively engaged in preaching the Gospel.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Acker had the following children:

Emma Laura Acker, born October 26, 1853, married Cornelius S. Klein, who has been in the employ of the Finley Acker Company from the earliest days of its organization. They reside in Germantown and had three daughters: Edith S., married Arthur Kingman, of Newark, N. J.; Mary E., married William Rutter Jenks, of Germantown, and Laura, who died in infancy.

Durbin Stephen Acker, born December 25, 1854. He married Mary Radey, who died in 1912. He is an officer and member of the Finley Acker Company, resides in Philadelphia, and has three children. The eldest, John Henry Rader Acker, is a member of the law firm of Conlen, Brinton and Acker. He married Miss Crozer and has one child. The second, James Durbin Acker, of West Philadelphia, holds a position in the Finley Acker Company. He married Retta Smith. Helen Radey Acker, the youngest, married Samuel Woolford, an attorney of Philadelphia, and has one child.

FINLEY ACKER was born Nov. 8, 1857, in Lower Macungie township, Lehigh county. His early education was obtained in the public schools, supplemented by night school and business college training. He made his first step in the business world as a cash boy in the employ of Curwen, Stoddard & Co. After promotion to clerk, salesman and assistant buyer, at the age of twenty-one he opened a retail tea and coffee store on Eighth street, above Arch, in Philadelphia, which, with the co-operation of his brothers, he developed in a manner so different from conventional grocery methods as to attract the attention of the trade. His success in this business led him to extend the business to other mercantile lines. He later opened stores at Twelfth and Chestnut streets and Twelfth and Market streets, Philadelphia, and one in New York City. Because of his activities in the interest of pure food, he became treasurer of the first National Pure Food Show in this country, held at Washington in 1887.

He was actively concerned in the citizens' movement to require the street passenger railway companies to pay a fair price for the privilege of installing the trolley system in Philadelphia, in consequence of which effort the railway companies were required to repave many streets with improved paving. When the question of protecting the interests of the public regarding the gas lease and the traction system, upon the basis of insuring the maximum benefits to the public after the payment of reasonable returns upon money actually invested, was brought forth, he stood for the interest of the people as a whole as distinguished from any favored interest. His thorough analyses of these two problems were made in a pamphlet, entitled "Eminent Respectability," and in an address, entitled "The Rights of the People and the Rights of Investors in Philadelphia Street Railways," which address was delivered before the City Club in a joint debate with George H. Earle. He was chairman of the postal committee of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and of the National Board of Trade, for a number of years. As chairman of the banking and currency committee of the Chamber of Commerce, he appeared several times before congressional committees and his arguments for postal and currency reform were quoted by speakers in all sections of the United States.

Mr. Acker was a life long Republican. He was an active member of the "Committee of Fifty," and one of the organizers of the Municipal League. He was chairman of the executive committee of Independent Republicans when Robert E. Pattison was elected Governor over George W. Delamater. He was one of the organizers of the Midland Pennsylvania Railroad Company and a member of the Union League, the City Club, Poor Richard Club, Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Penna. Society of Sons of the Revolution and Penna. Society of New York. He married, in 1883, Elizabeth Boyle Cadmus. Mr. Acker died at his residence, 4943 Rubicam avenue, Germantown, on February 12, 1913.

Ellen Louisa Acker, born January 15, and died in June, 1861.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN ACKER was born Feb. 25, 1865. He was named the same hour when the martyred president, Abraham Lincoln, died. He married Emily Rebecca Focht, and has one daughter, Emily Lincoln. They reside in Tioga, Philadelphia. For a while he was a member of Mayor Weaver's cabinet, but preferred to return to his position as a member and officer of the Finley Acker Company. In 1911 he was elected to the office of sheriff of the city and County of Philadelphia on the Republican ticket, in which capacity he is serving his native city at this writing.

Harrison Benjamin, the youngest son of

Daniel Acker, was born October 9, 1838, in Salisbury, Lehigh county, three miles southwest of Allentown. He died at his home in Bellevue, Ohio, September 14, 1903, at the age of nearly 65 years. He married Eliza Amanda Hiskey of Lower Macungie township. In 1858 they moved to Flat Rock, Seneca county, Ohio. He followed the carpenter trade until the breaking of the Rebellion, when he enlisted as a soldier in the Thirty-Fourth Ohio Regiment. While in service he was stricken with typhoid-pneumonia and not expected to recover. His brother Alvin of Flat Rock, Ohio, went to the Army Hospital and nursed him, and his life was spared. The Doctor told him if he would take the best of care of himself, he might live for a few years. He followed this advice and lived forty years longer. He moved to Bellevue, Ohio, where he became highly respected by all classes. For a number of years he was treasurer of the city. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. (The compiler of these records is greatly indebted to him for much contained in these records.) They had five children:

Celesta Maria, a daughter of Harrison B. Acker, married George W. Barber. They reside in Bellevue, Ohio; their son is Ralph Acker Barber.

Clara Elmira Lavinia is another daughter of Harrison B. Acker. She married George Heter; they reside near Peabody, Kan. They have one son, Harry John, and a daughter named Georgia.

Later he was employed for seven years by Charles Ritter at Rittersville and worked in the store and farm. For more than seven years he was a bar-clerk for J. Frank Reichard and later was employed in the rolling mill in Allentown and also in the Bethlehem Steel Company. Edmond Ackerman, son of Jacob, was born in Montgomery county, in 1846. He removed to District township, Berks county, in 1868, and was a laborer, living near Landis Store, for eight years. His wife Mary S. Minner, is a daughter of Jonas Minner, who was a justice of the peace in District township for 45 successive years, dying in his 91st year of age. They had an only son, Jonas M., whose history follows. In the spring of 1906 Mrs. Ackerman settled in her own home at No. 629 Cedar street, Allentown, where her son, Jonas, tenderly supplies all her desires.

ARBOGAST FAMILY.

The ancestors of this representative Pennsylvania family came from Germany on the ship "Edinburgh," which arrived at Philadelphia, Sept. 16, 1751. His name on the ship's list of passengers is recorded as Johannes Arbengast. He was married and had among others two sons, Ludwig and Johannes. Johannes Arbogast, the son of Johannes, who emigrated, became one of the pioneer settlers in the territory which was embraced in the original Penn township, Snyder county. This territory was included in old Northumberland county, which was organized in 1772. That this pioneer planned well and was a most industrious and prosperous citizen of colonial Pennsylvania is evidenced by his many recorded land purchases and by his last will and testament which covers two pages, viz, 145 and 146, in Will Book 2, in the register's office at Sunbury, Pa. The will is a model in many respects, and reflects the noble character of the testator, who divided a very large estate among his five sons and three daughters, and for his dear wife, Catharine, who survived him, he provided most liberally.

The name of Ludwig Arbogast appears among a list of non-commissioned officers and privates of the First Pennsylvania Regiment, of the Continental Line, in the Revolutionary War. On Oct. 13, 1776, he was wounded at the Block House, and was discharged March 23, 1783. In 1835, he was still living, and resided in Philadelphia. Penna. Archives, Fifth Series.

The executors of the will were his sons, John and Ludwig Arbogast; and the witnesses to the document were his neighbors, John Moatz and Nich. Roth (or Rath). The will was made on the 15th day of April, 1811, and probated May 14th of the following month. It is evident that John Arbogast, the pioneer, passed from this life into his reward between these two dates. The names of the children follow in order as they are named in the will:

1. "I give and devise unto my son Nicholas, the sum of 400 pounds."

2. "I give and devise unto my son Peter, the plantation whereon he now lives, for which he shall pay out 100 pounds."

3 and 4. "I give and devise unto my two sons, John and Ludwig, whereon they now dwell, which I will and order shall be equally divided between the said John and Ludwig. (A long description as to how the land is to be divided then follows.) A public road passed through John's land to the town of Middleburg. John was to pay out the sum of 350 pounds; and Ludwig was to pay out 150 pounds."

5. "I give and bequeath unto my son William, 400 pounds."

6. "I give and devise unto my daughter, Catharine, now the wife of Christopher Schatzberger, the one-half of the undivided plantation whereon she now dwells, which is my share of such plantation."

7. "I give and devise unto my daughter, Anna Maria, now the wife of Jacob Felmlly, the sum of 243 pounds."

8. "I give and devise unto my daughter, Barbara, now the wife of John Zwally, the sum of 243 pounds."

The will follows:

(Here follows at length how more money shall be paid by the various heirs.)

And as touching all the rest residue and remainder of my personal estate I will and order that my hereinafter named executors shall take an inventory and expose the same to public sale as soon as they can after my disease, and the money now in my hands and the money standing out shall by my executors be applied toward pattering the land that I have bequeathed to my two sons, John and Ludwig, and then, if there is any money left in their hands they shall put it on interest, and the interest shall be paid to my wife, Catharine, as long as she lives and after her death I order that my executors shall sell by public sale the personal estate now let my wife Catharine and the money arising from sale and all other moneys of my estate I order shall be equally divided between my five sons and three daughters, and lastly I nominate and appoint my two sons, John and Ludwig Arbogast, both of Penn Township in the county aforesaid, to be the executors of my last will and testament.

He received his early education in the township schools, select schools and also took a course in the Allentown Business College, from which he graduated. He taught school four terms in South Whitehall, and in 1888 accepted a clerical position in Allentown. In 1906 he resigned his position and engaged in the business of wholesaling coffees, teas, rice, peanuts, etc., at 913 Linden Street.

Since 1889 Mr. Arner has been a member of Salem Reformed Church and from then until 1912 served as a teacher in the Sunday school, when he was elected one of the assistant superintendents. He learned paper box manufacturing in Binghamton, N. Y., and was employed in that city seven years. He then started a plant of which he was given entire charge as general superintendent, for a large corporation, which position he held six years. In February, 1892, he came to Allentown and became manufacturing manager for M. H. Ryan and Company who employ about 60 people. He and family are members of the Presbyterian church.

(3) Henry Arner son of William, and grandson of Felix, was born in Lehigh county, and while a child was taken with his parents to Carbon county. In 1817 he first rented a farm in Mahoning township, and about 1820 opened a shoe factory. In 1832 he erected a powder mill, and was the first to manufacture powder in Eastern Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia.

His mill was accidentally blown up on three different occasions, resulting in the loss of five lives. One of these explosions which occurred on June 8, 1841, killed his brother Daniel. Fire falling out of an old "tallow dip" lamp such as were then in use, was the cause of one catastrophe.

In addition to manufacturing powder Henry Arner operated a large farm, and was a man of more than common enterprise. He was a member of the German Reformed Church, and is buried at Becks Church in his native township. His first wife was Catharine Moyer, and they had six children: Ammon, Tilghman, Daniel, Eliza (m. (4) Ammon Arner, the second son of Henry, was born Feb. 2, 1822 in Mahoning township. He was actively engaged with his father in the manufacture of powder, and after the death of the latter conducted the business alone, in addition to operating the homestead farm. In 1869 he turned his attention to mercantile pursuits at New Mahoning, continuing until 1894 when he sold out to his son-in-law, Lewis J. Zimmerman, and retired from active business. He was a Reformed member of Becks Church, which he served as deacon.

On April 18, 1848, Ammon Arner married Annie Beltz, daughter of John and Hannah (Hummel) Beltz, of Mahoning township. His death occurred in 1904, and his remains are buried at Becks Church. ASCHBACH FAMILY.

In the Highlander, of May 17, 1842, published in Freiburg, Germany, appeared a biographical sketch of Gerhard Adolph Aschbach, the grandfather of Gerhard C. Aschbach, late of Allentown, Pa., and the subject of this article. The sketch came from the pen of his intimate friend, Hermann von Rotteck. From this we learn that Gerhard Adolph Aschbach was born at Hoechst on the Main, June 27, 1793. His father was the proprietor of a vermicelli factory, and a highly respected citizen of such culture and ability that he was the sole tutor of his son until the latter was fourteen years of age. Gerhard, ever cheerful and eager to learn, made rapid progress in his studies, and soon became the teacher of his younger brothers and sisters, especially of Joseph, who later became the well-known historian. When sixteen years old he was sent to the gymnasium at Idstein, where he so distinguished himself that he was allowed to skip two classes in the course.

Meanwhile the fortunes of his father had changed. War had destroyed his possessions and his son, Gerhard, had to leave school to help in the management of "The Three Kings," which the elder Aschbach had leased in Heidelberg. Later he resumed his studies, although he, like his brother Joseph, was obliged to support himself by teaching in an institution for young ladies. During vacation he was accustomed to make pedestrian trips to all parts of Germany, in one of which he had an encounter with a notorious robber of those days in the well-known Odenwald. He was of a quiet and peaceable disposition, but, when his honor was assailed or the name of a friend was attacked, he was bold and fearless. His skill in arms and his noble character rendered him particularly popular among the comrades of his student-corps.

When, in 1813, the Germans were summoned to arms to save the Fatherland, he abandoned his studies, was enrolled second lieutenant of the Seventh Battalion of the National Guard, and took part in the campaign of 1814, after which he returned to his books. When, in 1815, the war broke out afresh, he accompanied his regiment to Alsace, and was present at the battle of Strassburg. After the peace of Paris, he continued his legal studies, and in 1816 passed the state examinations with distinction.

He began his official life in Emmendingen, where he married the daughter of Dr. Gaup, in 1820. After a stay of two years in this place he was called to Karlsruhe and in 1825 he was appointed Judge and Aulic Councillor in Rastatt, being high in favor with the Grand Duke Ludwig. This position he held till 1833 when he was transferred to the imperial court at Moersburg. He was a member of the famous Chamber of Deputies, in which he labored in behalf of the constitutional rights of the people by the side of leaders like Rotteck, Welker, Duttlinger, Mittermaier, Hofmann, and Gerbel. After a two years' stay he was transferred to Constanz, and thence to Freiburg. He died suddenly on the 20th of April, 1842, from a stroke of apoplexy. His imposing funeral attested the high esteem in which he was held by his official colleagues and his fellow-citizens.

A younger brother of Gerhard Adolph Aschbach, born at Hoechst, April 29, 1801, educated at Heidelberg, made a Doctor of Philosophy by the University of Marburg at the age of twenty-two, became the famous historian later known to the world as Joseph von Aschbach. A man of great versatility, and the author of many learned works, he was called to the University of Vienna as professor of history in 1853, became a member of the Academy of Sciences, was appointed Aulic

Councillor, received the Order of the Iron Cross, and was raised by the Emperor to the Austrian nobility. In 1881 his students and colleagues celebrated his eightieth birthday by presenting an address and a silver laurel wreath on whose leaves were engraved the titles of his works. He died April 25, 1882. His son, Dr. Emil von Aschbach was a prominent member of the legal profession in Vienna.

Gustavus Adolphus Aschbach, the son of Gerhard Adolph Aschbach, was born at Rastatt, in the Grand Duchy of Baden, March 3, 1826. His father instilled in his mind the liberal ideas and hopes of a united fatherland, and placed him in the gymnasium at Freiburg. The son early chose jurisprudence for his life work, and upon the death of his father entered the University of Heidelberg. While he was at the University the revolution of 1848 broke out, and Aschbach, with many of his fellow students, threw himself heartily into the movement. The revolution failed, and he, with many others, was obliged to leave the country in order to save his life. He went to Rapperschwyl, Switzerland, where he applied himself to civil engineering, in which he became highly proficient.

In 1850 he came to this country and, after residing for a time in New York City, came to Allentown, Pennsylvania, in 1854, where his ability as architect and civil engineer soon made him prominent. He was repeatedly elected city engineer of Allentown, made excellent maps of the city and county from his own surveys and was largely engaged in the construction of the Allentown and Hamburg Railroad, being associated with George B. Roberts, who later became president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. A great part of the perfect arrangement of the streets of Allentown is due to his skill. Among the many buildings that still attest his taste and ability as an architect are the Lehigh county prison, which has received great praise as a model specimen of prison architecture, St. John's English Reformed Church, the Fifth Ward School House, and the residence of Mr. Thomas J. Koch.

During the Civil War he was engaged in constructing fortifications for the Union Army in Ohio and Kentucky under Generals Simpson and Burnside, and rendered valuable services to his country. As a result of exposure in the performance of his duties in the army, he was an invalid for many years, and at last died, in Allentown, of a complication of diseases, on April 17, 1875.

Mr. Aschbach was a man of high ideals, of noble impulses and of generous nature. No worthy cause ever appealed to him in vain, and he actively participated in the educational advancement of the community in which he lived.

During his lifetime he was a member of the German Patriotic Association, the Trexlertown Lodge of Free Masons, Allen Lodge of Odd Fellows, the German Association of Lehigh County, the Lehigh Saengerbund, the Academy of Natural Sciences, the Allentown Board of Trade and the Palette Club, of New York.

Mr. Aschbach met his future wife on the voyage from Havre to New York, which was made in the three master "Robert Kelly," Captain Kennedy, and lasted forty-two days. On April 11, 1854, he married Emilie Friederika Mayer, a daughter of Friederich Carl Mayer, and his wife, Christina, who was a daughter of Conrad Moritz, a retired landed proprietor, and his wife, Magdalena Steigelmann. Mrs. Aschbach was born in Bergzabern, in the Rhenish Palatinate, Feb. 14, 1832. Her father was register of landed estates, and a son of Rev. John Adam Mayer, a Councillor of the Consistory in Speyer-on-the-Rhine, who had married into a prominent patrician family of Frankfort-on-the-Main. Here her youngest brother, Julius Mayer, lived for many years, while her oldest brother, Professor Frederick Mayer, was for a long time superintendent of music in the public schools of Dayton, Ohio.

From this marriage of Gustavus Adolphus Aschbach with Emilie Friederika Mayer, were born Gerhard Charles Aschbach, and Emma Charlotte Elizabeth Aschbach, who, on Aug. 17, 1899, was married to Professor George T. Ettinger, Ph.D., of Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Pa. Mrs. Aschbach died on Jan. 27, 1911.

GERHARD CHARLES ASCHBACH, the son of Gustavus Adolphus Aschbach, and Emilie Friederika Aschbach, and the late head of the American branch of the family, was born in Allentown, Jan. 15, 1855. He received his education in the public schools of Allentown, the Allentown Military Academy and the Academic Department of Muhlenberg College. After learning the trade of cabinet maker in the establishment of Heimbach and Helfrich, he entered the organ factory of John Florey, whose business was later acquired by Ritter, Abbott & Ruhe, trading as the Allentown Organ Company. In 1876 he started in the music business at 810 Hamilton street, Allentown, but shortly afterwards moved into the basement of the Second National Bank Building, 532 Hamilton street, from which he in turn moved across the street into what was then known as the Osmun & Scholl Building. Here he remained for several years, until the Second National Bank vacated its Hamilton street home, when he moved back and occupied the entire building. Here he remained until 1891, when he purchased the Jonathan Reichard property at 539 Hamilton street, and erected the handsome four-storied building in which he had his permanent business home, until his death on Aug. 15, 1913. In all these years the field of his activity had been ever widening, until to-day the G. C. Aschbach Music House is the largest establishment of its kind in eastern Pennsylvania, requiring the constant services of twenty-two persons, importing extensively from foreign countries and handling all the leading instruments and publications.

For five years Mr. Aschbach was the manager of the old Hagenbuch Opera House, now occupied by the extensive grocery store of James K. Bowen. At the same time he managed similar establishments in Bethlehem and Mauch Chunk. To him Allentown owes its first modern theatre, as it was through his efforts that Music Hall, later known as the Academy of Music, was erected on the northeast corner of Sixth and Linden streets. During his management of the above-named theatres he presented many of the leading artists (literary, musical, and dramatic) then before the public, of whom may be mentioned Emma Abbott, Minnie Hauk, the Boston Ideals, Joseph Jefferson, E. L. Davenport, Lawrence Barrett, Joe Emmett, Henry Ward Beecher, Adelaide Neilson, Aimé, Emma Thursby, Robson and Crane, Fanny Davenport, Madame Carreno, Joseffy, Chevalier de Kontski, the original Swedish Quartette, Camilla Urso, and John T. Raymond.

In 1880 he married Miss Sallie R. Kramer, daughter of Allen and Anna Diefenderfer Kramer. This union was blessed with six children, of whom two survive: Emilie Mary, now the wife of George H. Meyers, Jr., of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and Gerhard Charles Aschbach, Jr., now the manager of the business.

Mr. Aschbach was confirmed in St. John's English Lutheran church, Allentown, by Rev. Reuben Hill, D.D., and for many years was a member of the same, until the organization of Christ Lutheran church, in the western part of the city, when he transferred his membership to the new congregation.

He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, the Heptasophs, the Knights of Malta, and the Livingston Club, and a contributing member of the Lehigh Saengerbund, and the Allentown Oratorio Society.

Upon the death of Mr. Aschbach, the Allentown Democrat, on Aug. 19, 1913, in an editorial said the following:

"The death of Gerhard C. Aschbach marks the passing of one of Allentown's most substantial business men. Mr. Aschbach was one of the city's strong men in the commercial sense. It is frequently stated that the great majority of the city's most successful merchants are men who are not natives of the city. The same is probably true of every community. There are, however, exceptions to all rules and Mr. Aschbach was one of these exceptions. He made good in the place of his nativity. He was successful because he deserved success. He prospered because he was ambitious, energetic, and conscientious.

"For a generation the name of G. C. Aschbach has been closely associated with the business life of the city, and it is a name that has always stood for everything that is honest and upright in business. None was more enterprising. It was through the efforts of our departed friend that Allentown secured its first theatre that was a credit to the town. For years Allentown was without a playhouse that was worthy of the name or in keeping with the city's reputation for enterprise. It was G. C. Aschbach who promoted the company that erected Music Hall, at Sixth and Linden streets, where the Democrat Building now stands. In later years Mr. Aschbach devoted all his time to the music house that he established in a small way many years ago and which has become one of the most important of its kind in the state. Only a man who possesses rare business ability could have succeeded as he has done.

"There are few men who had more friends than Mr. Aschbach had. He had mastered the secret of making friends and retaining them and to them his death is a grievous blow. The community has lost a good citizen whose place is hard to fill."

ADOLPH THEODORE ASCHBACH, the esteemed son of the late G. C. Aschbach, preceded his father in death by just two months and two days. In his death, the career of a promising and able young man was ended too soon.

He died after an operation for peritonitis, Wednesday, June 17, 1913, at the age of thirty-three years. The operation was performed at the Allentown Hospital on Sunday, and death followed three days later. The family, relatives, and many friends of this young man were shocked by the untimely death of one who still had much to live for, and who had given every promise of becoming a successful business man as well as a prominent citizen.

Mr. Aschbach was born in Allentown, Pa., on Oct. 31, 1880. His early education was obtained in the public schools of the city. Later he attended the Muhlenberg Preparatory School and Muhlenberg College. After a business course in the Allentown Business College, he entered the music store of his father. To fit himself particularly for the piano trade he spent three years in the Blasius Piano Company's factory, at Woodbury, N. J. He there familiarized himself with the details of piano manufacturing, and was soon among the leading piano men of the Lehigh Valley. He was given the supervision of the repair end of his father's business, and by adopting efficiency methods he soon secured a large patronage.

In 1904 he married Miss Bessie I. Dreifoos, who, with two children, Henry Gerhard, and Emilie Frederica, survive him. The deceased was a member of St. John's Lutheran congregation, as well as of a number of clubs and lodges.

He had a pleasing personality, and was enthusiastic, faithful, and capable. His untimely death cut short a business career of great promise.

GERHARD C. ASCHBACH, JR., who is the manager of the noted G. C. Ashbach Music House, at Allentown, was born in that city in 1885. After his education in the Allentown high school, Muhlenberg College, and the Allentown Business College, he learned piano building in one of the leading establishments in New York City, where he was employed upwards of two years. He then returned to Allentown and ably assisted his father and elder brother in the conducting of their large and firmly established business, until the death of his father and elder brother, when upon his shoulders fell the duties and responsibilities of successfully continuing the management of the G. C. Ashbach Music House, which has existed for nearly forty years.

Mr. Ashbach has membership in the following lodges and clubs: Jordan Lodge, No. 673, F. & A. M.; B. P. O. E., No. 110; F. O. E., No. 130; the Clover Club; the St. Leger Club, and the Lehigh Country Club.

ERNEST ASHLEY.

Ernest Ashley, florist of Allentown, is a native of England and there he learned his business. He was born in 1869 and at the age of 22 years came to Pennsylvania. He landed at Philadelphia on a Sunday night at nine o'clock; and the following Monday morning at nine o'clock had a position at work in a florist store. The employer who hired him thought he was too "green," nevertheless a few months later he was promoted to the position of assistant decorator of his large establishment. After serving this position for four years he went to Buffalo, N. Y., and there he was employed by a large florist, and later he was employed by the largest florist at Jamestown, N. Y. In 1895 he took a trip to England, and while doing so he represented a Philadelphia house in the sale of cultivators and patent articles to English florists.

Upon his return to America the same year, the same house offered him a road position to sell seeds and florist supplies in five states, and he continued in this position until 1902 when he located at Allentown, having leased the A. B. Ellsworth green houses for a term of 10 years. During this time he purchased two acres of land on Pike street, East Allentown, and there built large green-houses. He conducts one of the largest florist establishments in Allentown, at No. 943 Hamilton street. He is a member of the St. James Commandery, No. 68, Knights of Malta, and the Saengerbund of Allentown.

The ancestor of the Lehigh county Bachman family was Jacob Bachman, who was born July 25, 1704, and died in 1788, and is buried at Lowhill church. (I) Thomas Bachman was a large land owner, a considerable portion of which he cleared, converting the timber into charcoal, which he sold to good advantage. He was twice married, and had children by each marriage. His first wife was Anna, a daughter of Jacob Fogel, of Catasauqua, and she had children: Mary; Sarah; Stephen; Levi, of further mention; Charles, whose children were: James, Adam, and Mary. Adam Bachman was a school teacher and the organist of the church at Kunkeltown, Pennsylvania.

(II) Levi, son of Thomas and Anna (Fogel)

Bachman, was born December 1, 1840, and is now living retired in East Allentown. Early in life he was a slate roofer and a wheelwright, and came to Hanover township about 1862, and there found employment with Jacob Reichard, who later became his father-in-law. In 1864 he engaged in farming in what is now the Fourteenth ward, and the family still resides there. The frame house was built by Jacob Reichard in 1864, and a stone dwelling which was razed in 1902 was built about the time of the Revolution. The present brick residence was erected in 1878 by Levi Bachman. In 1906 he abandoned farming. In 1876 he had also established himself in the sand business, and now has the largest of this kind in the state of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Reformed church at Schoenersville. Mr. Bachman married, December 24, 1864, Henrietta, youngest daughter of Jacob Reichard, and they had children: Anna E., was graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, in 1888, taught fourteen terms in Hanover township, and was the salutatorian at the anniversary of the Philo Society; Osben J., died February 12, 1872, at the age of six years; L. Harvey, was graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, died September 29, 1894, at the age of twenty-five years; Lillie A., was graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, married C. F. Schadt, of Allentown; Emma H., was graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, married H. F. Clemmer, a merchant at Sunbury, Pa.; Ottilie C., died June 2, 1882, at the age of eight years; Marcus A., died December 27, 1903, in his twenty-sixth year, while in his senior year at the Keystone State Normal School; Mary A. J., married James A. Beitler; Milton H., of further mention.

(III) Milton H., son of Levi and Henrietta (Reichard) Bachman, was born in Hanover township, May 14, 1883. He was educated in the public schools, and at the age of seventeen years assumed the duties of clerk and manager for his father. In partnership with his sisters and brother—Annie, Mary, and Marcus A.—he leased the Levi Bachman sand quarries in 1900, and after the death of Marcus A., re-leased the quarries with his sisters, under the firm name of M. H. Bachman & Company. This is now the largest sand dealing firm in Lehigh county, and employs twenty people. Until 1911 they had employed thirty-five men, but in that year they installed a breaker and cable excavator, which enabled them to reduce their working force, and yet obtain better results. The land covered by this quarry is sixty-five acres in extent, on the left side of the Allentown and Bethlehem turnpike. It was formerly the Jacob Reichard homestead. Mr. Bachman is a member of the Lutheran Church, and is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Improved Order of Red Men, the Owls, and the Pension society.

George W. Bachman is a well-known resident of Freemansburg, Northampton county, Pa. He married, March 14, 1874, Mary E. Freeman, born September 14, 1854, baptized by the late Rev. W. R. Hofford, March 31, 1873, died in 1911 after a long illness. She was a daughter of the late George W. and Tillie E. (Seip) Freeman, and a sister of Dr. Walter S. Freeman, of Philadelphia, and of Dr. E. J. Freeman, of Freemansburg. The following children also survive her: Jennie, who married William Bachman, of Harrisburg; Laura E., married Davison Clark, of Freemansburg; Ralph S., of Philadelphia; and Roland A., who was living with his parents.

Henry Bachman, born January 31, 1821; died October 5, 1864. John Bachman, born May 10, 1763; died May 1, 1841. Thomas Bachman, born May 11, 1802; died November 13, 1862. He was engaged in farming near Vera Cruz, Upper Milford township, this county, where he had a large farm which was later owned by Jonas Backenstoe. Mr. Bachman was a staunch Democrat, and never missed an election. He refused the nomination of county commissioner. For thirty years before his death he lived retired at Allentown. He was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran church, and is buried on Fairview cemetery. He married Fronica Bogert, daughter of John Bogert. She was born in 1800 and died in 1886. Solomon Bachman was born April 8, 1824, on the homestead in Upper Milford township, which he farmed, and later he conducted a general store, at what was known as Gabel's store, in Upper Milford. In 1860 he moved to Emaus and there carried on the mercantile business until September, 1862, when he moved to Allentown, and conducted a general store on North Seventh street. Previous to this he had one in East Allentown, which was later converted into the Lehigh and Susquehanna depot. The store on Seventh street was abandoned in the latter part of 1864. In 1865 he removed to Philadelphia, and followed mercantile pursuits until his return to Allentown in the fall of 1865. For a time he was a partner with his son, Charles A., in mercantile business at the southeast corner of Ninth and Hamilton streets. He then lived a retired life until his death April 9, 1887. He was an active member of the United Brethren Church.

He was married to Sarah E. Breinig, daughter of John Breinig. She died October 7, 1862, aged 31 years. They had the following children: Charles A., Alfred P., S. Harry, Ella, married to Dr. W. Niles Powell, of Yellowstone Park, Wyoming. Four others died small.

Charles A. Bachman, of Allentown, was born November 9, 1852, on the homestead in Upper Milford township. In 1859 he came with his parents to Emaus, and later to Allentown. At the age of thirteen, he began clerking in stores, and continued until 1869, when he became a member of the firm of B. Stettler & Co. This firm continued until 1870, when J. L. Breinig purchased the share of Mr. Stettler, and the name was changed to Sieger, Bachman & Co. Two years later Mr. Bachman became the sole owner and conducted it until 1875, when he erected a building at the northeast corner of Tenth and Turner, and there conducted a grocery business until he retired in 1898.

He is a member of the U. B. Church, and served as trustee for twelve years. He is a Democrat in politics, and in 1887 was elected to select council, and in 1890 represented the Seventh ward as a member of common council.

He was married in 1872 to Frances Yingling, daughter of Israel Yingling. She died in 1909, aged 60 years. They have the following children: Herbert W., George W., Willis B., Hattie M., married to Fred Rapp, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Fairmount, W. Virginia.

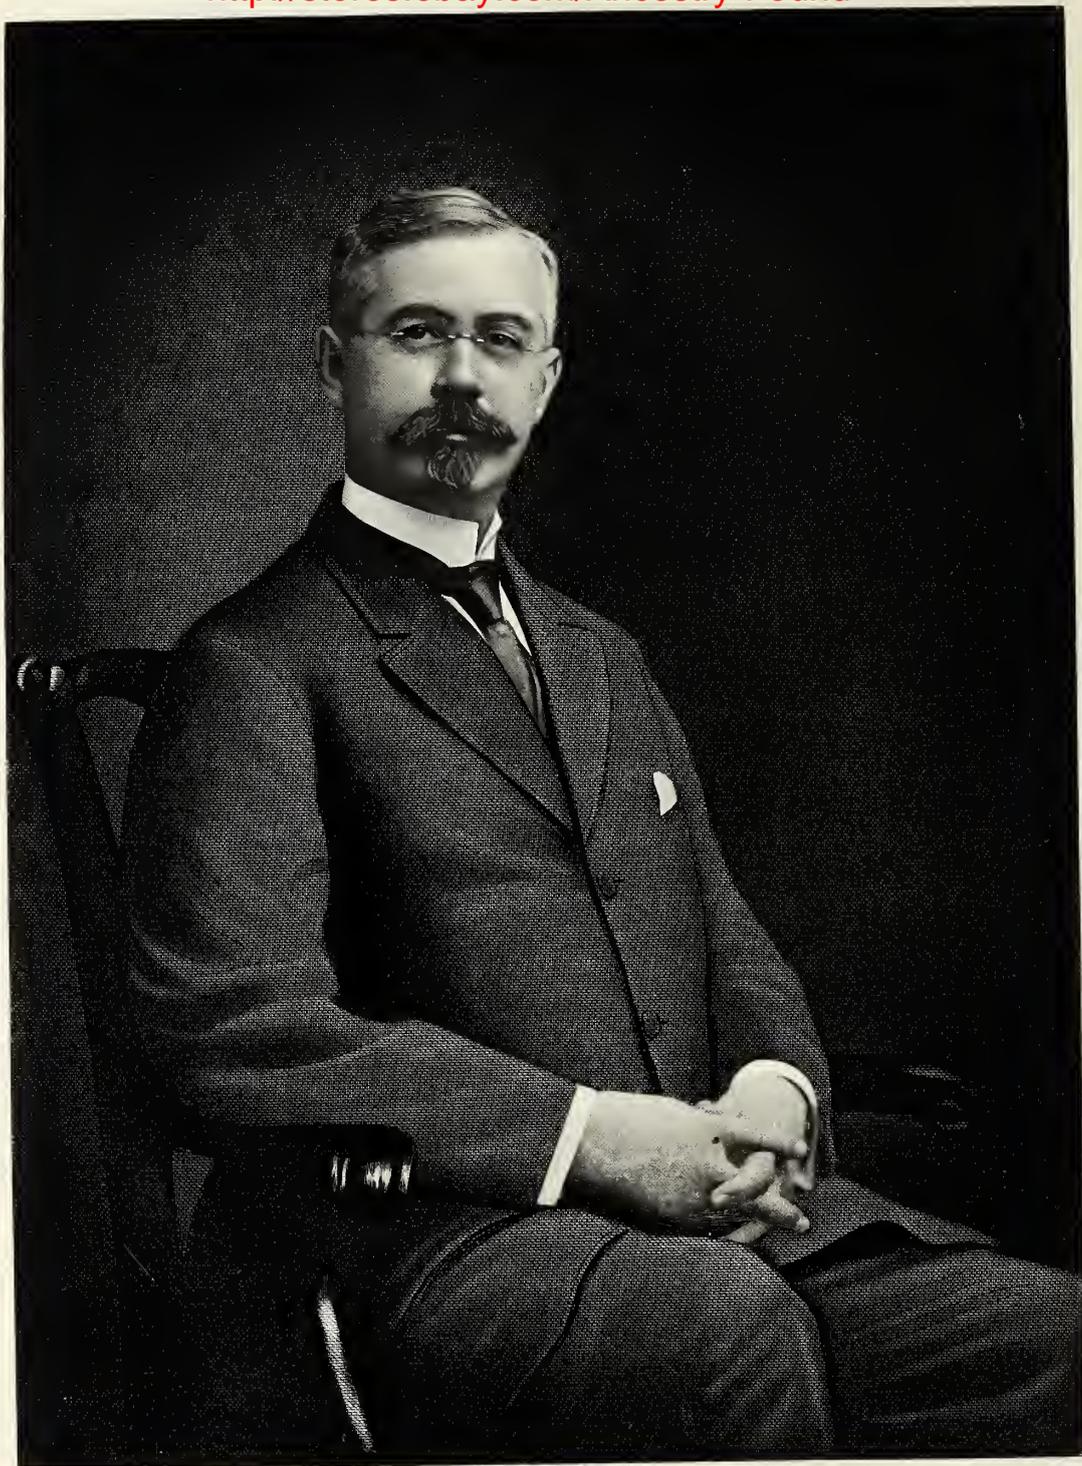

Alfred R. Bachman, of Breinig & Bachman, Allentown, was born in Upper Milford township, October 20, 1857. In 1862 he came to Allentown where he was educated in the public schools and the Allentown Business College. In 1869 he entered the employ of H. Leh & Co. as shipping clerk and later became assistant bookkeeper and rose step by step to bookkeeper, which position he held until 1879, when he entered the Allentown National Bank, where he was general ledger clerk, individual ledger clerk and teller, for nine years. In 1888, with George F. Breinig, he formed a partnership under the firm name of Breinig and Bachman. They began at 632 Hamilton street, and continued there until 1891, when they bought the old corner of Weinsheimer and Newhard, at which stand they conduct one of the leading clothing houses in the city.

BACKENSTOE FAMILY.

Ulrich Bagenstose, ancestor of the Bagenstose family of Berks county, was probably a passenger on one of the ships that brought Swiss emigrants to Philadelphia in 1743. These emigrants followed the waters of the Schuylkill river until they came to what is now Centre township, Berks county. This district was formerly a part of old Bern township, and among the list of taxables in 1752, we find the name of this pioneer settler. His long will is on record in Will Book B, p. 347, in which he disposes of a very large estate. It is written in English, the signature alone being in German, "Ulrich Backenstoss." The document was made Nov. 20, 1793, and was entered for probate Jan. 20, 1794, therefore it is evident that his death occurred between those two dates. In item No. 1 in the will he makes abundant provision for his wife Catherine, among the things mentioned being: "plenty of grapes, from the one-acre vineyard; flax; one gallon apple-jack, one gallon rum; plenty of potatoes; plenty of cider and vinegar, plenty of winter apples and wood, plenty of everything she needs." This she was to receive annually, in addition to money and a home. Other items were: son John to receive the plantation; a son Henry to receive the plantation in Bethel township, Dauphin county; and Jacob to receive the other plantation of 100 acres situated in Bethel township. The will, which also mentioned children Elizabeth, Susanna, Catherine Eckel and Christina Moyer, was witnessed to by Jacob Runkel and Jacob Himmelberger. The executors were John Bagenstose and George Sharff.

BAER FAMILY.

The Baer family of Lehigh county are descendant from Melchior Baer, Sr., who is said to have emigrated from Zweibrucken in the Palatinate. The family is said to be an old Palatinate family whose family seat was at Baeren Huette. It is also related that Peter Von Baer in the distant past was married to a daughter to the count of the Palatinate. The family is originally said to have been of Swiss origin. The parish of Bar, the church in which is said to have been built by Emperor Charles in the fifth century, derives its name from the family of Bar, whose name appears in Swiss history as early as 1245.

Melchior Baer, Sr., apparently made his home with his son, Melchior, Jr., until in 1762, when Melchior, Jr., sold the homestead to his father, Melchior, Sr., and removed to Macungie township. In 1769, Melchior, Sr., sold his homestead to his son, John Peter, whom he in his will, designates as his chief heir at law. The date of his death and that of his wife, Elizabeth, are unknown, both were living in 1769 when they signed, the wife making her mark, the deed of the homestead to the son, John Peter. In his will he mentions besides his wife Elisabeth and son John Peter, a daughter, Elisabeth, and a granddaughter, Maria Turney. No document has been discovered giving a list of their children. However, from various documents and family traditions it would appear that among them were: Melchior, Jr., Johannes, Christophel, Philip Jacob, John Peter, Elisabeth, and Maria, married to Peter Steckel.

Melchior Baer, Sr.; Melchior Baer, Jr.; Johannes and Christophel came across the ocean from the fatherland in the good ship Phoenix and landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 30, 1743. They were staunch members of the Reformed Church to which most of his descendants still belong, and in which many of them occupy places of honor, both in the ministry, and among the laity. The descendants of these pioneers have organized a family reunion, which usually holds its reunions at Kutztown. It was one of the first families to hold reunions and one of the few that are chartered.

John Peter Baer, of Heidelberg, usually only written Peter, son and principal heir at law of Melchior Baer, Sr., took up a tract of land in Heidelberg township, prior to that of his brother, Melchior, Jr., who had a tract joining his warranted to himself Nov. 1, 1749. This tract John Peter bought from his father, Melchior, Sr., to whom Melchior, Jr., had sold it in 1762. He was naturalized October 15, 1765, by the court at Philadelphia. From the certificate we learn that he was of foreign birth, had resided for seven or more years in the province and had taken the sacrament of the Lord's Supper within three months. He was married to Elisabeth, a daughter of Michael Hoffman, who in his will, dated Jan. 20, 1777, and pro-bated Jan. 17, 1787, provides for the following children: John, Michael, Maria, Magdalene, married to Theobold Kennel; Catharine, Elisabeth, married Peter Baer; Julian, married Henry Smithof; and Maria Barbara, married Sameul Wottering.

Peter Baer in his will mentions Catharine Elisabeth, his wife and John Jacob, John Peter, John Henry, Mary Catharine, Anna Margaretha, and Anna Apolenia. For Mary Catherine and Anna Margaretha, minors above fourteen years of age, Samuel Woodring, of Whitehall, was appointed guardian, and for Anna Apolenia, under fourteen years, John Baer, of Whitehall, was appointed guardian on petition of Hans Jacob Baer. Their next friend, Peter Baer, at the time of his death was possessed of considerable wealth. The sons received 70 pounds and the daughters 30 pounds.

Melchior Baer, Jr., was born Jan. 6, 1726, in the Fatherland, and died Feb. 28, 1773; his remains lie buried in a small private cemetery near Zionsville, Lehigh county. There was issued unto him a warrant on Nov. 1, 1749, for two tracts of land situated in Heidelberg township, Northampton county, one tract was called "Neglect," bounded and described as followeth, viz.: Beginning at a marked Black Oak thence by Peter Baer's land North one hundred and thirteen perches to a post, thence by a line of Marked Trees North seventy-seven Degrees, West eight perches to a stone, thence by Michael Hoffman's land, South fifteen degrees, West two hundred perches to a Post, thence by Peter Koshers land South thirty-two Degrees, East eighty perches to a post, thence by vacant land and Peter Baer's land North forty Degrees, East one hundred and sixty-four perches to the place of beginning containing one hundred and forty-four acres and three-quarters and an allowance of six acres for roads," etc. The second tract, "Quiet Enjoyment," surveyed at the same time. It contained fifty-four acres and was bounded by Jacob Thinkey's land and other vacant tracts. The purchase price for these two tracts containing 199 acres and 40 perches, was thirty pounds, nineteen shillings and six pence. In 1762 he sold seventy acres of this original tract to his father, Melchior Baer, Sr., for the sum of sixty pounds. From the deed of Melchoir Baer, Sr., to his son, John Peter, dated Aug. 3, 1769, it appears that Melchior Baer, Sr., purchased all of the above described tracts from his son, Melchior, Jr., for in it the identical tracts called for in the original survey are transferred to his son John Peter Baer, of Heidelberg township, for the consideration of natural love and affection and the sum of one hundred pounds. The sale by Melchior Baer, Jr., to Melchior Baer, Sr., is witnessed to by Christopher Baer, George Steininger and Heinrich Schleich, and that from Melchior Baer, Sr., to his son, John Peter, by Heinrich Finck and Heinrich Reinhart.

The wife of Melchior Baer, Jr., who is said to have been considerable younger than himself, was Eva Elisabeth Christman, a daughter of Jacob and Eva Margareth Christman, of Lynn township. Jacob Christman died cir 1761, leaving seven children: Eve, the wife of Melchior Baer, George, Jacob, Susanna, John, Philip and Henry.

Melchior Baer, Jr., died Feb. 28, 1773, and was buried in a small cemetery near the Zionsville Reformed church, of which he and his congrue township, containing 174 acres, and appraised at $5,610.00; this petition happily contains the names of his children, which were omitted in the will; the following is the order of the names of the children of Melchior Baer, Jr., as they appear of the petition of 1821:

1. Elisabeth, married to Lorentz Kern, who had died prior to the date of the petition, leaving three children, Henry, Margareth, and Elisabeth, married to John Jacoby, and several grand-children, the issue of Magdalena married to — Bittenbender. Lorentz Kern is said to have removed to York county.

2. Regina, married to Jacob Haman, she also had died prior to the petition of 1821, leaving two daughters: Hannah, married to Jacob Mohr, and Margareth. The latter was born October 27, family were members. In his will he speaks of eight children, but mentions only two, Jacob and Melchior, to whom he makes special bequests, and he gives the special instruction that his children are to be instructed in the Reformed faith. The executors of the estate, Eve Elisabeth, his wife, Anthony Stahler and Leonard Steininger, encountered considerable difficulty in adjustment of the estate. It is said that some of the money received by the executors was in continental currency, which depreciated in their hands. In 1790, Jacob Lindeman, in right of his wife, Eve Elisabeth, petitioned the court to appoint John Romig, of Macungie, and George Kriebel and James Gill, of Upper Milford, to audit the accounts of the executors. It further appears that from a petition dated Dec. 7, 1821, almost forty years after his death, that Melchior Baer died intestate as to a tract of land in Ma-

1782, and died Jan. 4, 1856. She was married in 1808 to Henry Dubbs, (see Dubbs family) a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Dubbs. He was a potter and about 1835 removed to Hamilton, Butler county, Ohio. They had issue: Michael, David, Jonathan, Salome and Hannah. The latter was married to Carolus Borger, and had four children: Sarah, Anna, David D., Jacob Henry, and Margareth, the wife of Rev. F. W. Berlemann, a Reformed clergyman in Philadelphia. To her were born three daughters, Hannah Elisabeth, Sophia B., and Bertha Agnes, the wife of Rev. William J. Hincke, at one time pastor of Trinity Reformed congregation, Allentown, now professor of Oriental languages in the Auburn Theological Seminary.

3. Margaret, married to Philip Christman.

4. Barbara, March 13, 1760—June 28, 1845, married to Nicholas Stahler (June, 1752—Sept.

JOHANNES BAER, sometimes written John Adam Baer, settled near Claussville, in Weisenberg township. He was a blacksmith by trade. In 1750 he was a member of the Reformed Consistory of the Ziegel church, and together with the pastor and other members of the Reformed Consistory, signed the agreement drawn up between the Lutheran and Reformed congregations at the dedication of the church. Those who signed the articles of agreement on behalf of the Reformed congregation were: Rev. Philip Jacob Michael, Gideon Grimm, Nicholas Moyer, Peter Haas, George Adam Leibelsperger, Melchior Kloss, Johannes Baehr and Daniel Knauss. In 1754 when the Weisenberg church was erected, he became a member of that congregation and was buried in the cemetery there at his death. His tombstone, a slate stone, has partly disintegrated, but a part of the name and the age were still legible in 1912. He was 48 years of age and died some time prior to Dec. 21, 1758, when the court appointed Peter Grow, of Weisenberg township, guardian for the eldest son, John, and Daniel Knows guardian for the other three children, Barbara, Jacob and Adam. At the time John and Barbara were above fourteen years of age, and Jacob and Adam under fourteen years of age. He was accordingly born about 1720. In 1762 there was a distribution of the estate made, as follows: to the widow, 10 pounds, 5 shillings and 2½ pence; to John, the

The Johannes Baer homestead consisting of 260 acres, was not disposed of, but was kept for John, the oldest son, who later came into full possession of it. From an entry in the Orphans' Court at Easton, March 18, 1776, it appears that the second distribution of two hundred and twenty pounds was made, which was divided among Mrs. Peter Grow, Jr., the widow; John Baer, Jacob Baer, Henry Fetter, in right of his wife, Barbara, and John Adam Baer.

Jacob Baer, the second son of Johannes, was born 1745 and died in 1810. His wife's name was Elizabeth; she was born March 5, 1748, and died June 16, 1815. Jonathan, son of Adam, removed to Whitehall township, where he died and was buried at the Unionville church. He was the father of five children, among whom were: Jonas, John and Abraham.

Jonas Baer, the third son of Jonathan Baer, was born at the homestead in North Whitehall township, Lehigh county, Aug. 13, 1818. Upon attaining young manhood he removed to Weidasville, Lowhill township, and located on the old Peter Seibert farm, which he purchased in 1840. He cleared some woodland and also operated an apple-jack distillery which was on the property. At that time wheat sold for three dollars a bushel, and applejack at from eighteen to twenty-five cents per gallon, and by his extensive operations along both these lines he accumulated sufficient money to become the proprietor of three farms adjoining each other, the Seibert, the Andrew Knerr and the Daniel Clauss farms. He operated the Seibert farm for twenty-seven years, and then moved on the Clauss farm in Weidasville, where he died January 11, 1869.

ALBERT J. BAER, eldest son of Lewis and Julia Ann Baer, was born Sept. 25, 1865. He received a good common school education, and assisted with the work on the farm until he was 18 years of age. He left home in order to learn the blacksmithing trade at Levi Werley's coachmaker shops near Claussville, Lehigh county, and when his apprenticeship expired in the fall of 1886, he entered the horseshoeing shop of David S. Wismer, the "Yankee" horseshoer of Richlandtown, Bucks county. After serving in this connection for some time, he accepted a position with Mr. Owen Grube, of Hellertown, and subsequently located in Scranton, Pa., where he secured employment in the blacksmith department of the Scranton Buggy and Wagon Company. The company, appreciating his efficiency, soon promoted him to a better position in their repositories. During the typhoid epidemic in 1888, both Mr. and Mrs. Baer were among the many persons who suffered from the disease, Mr. Baer having had three attacks. Owing to these distressing circumstances, they determined to leave the city to return to their native county, and in the following year he established a horseshoeing and general jobbing shop at New Smithville, Weisenberg township. After a period of seven years he removed to Shoenersville, Lehigh county, which offered better facilities in every way for his line of business. In addition to the successful management of a coach and wagon-making shop and a horse-shoeing shop, Mr. Baer pursued a course of lessons on the anatomy of the foot and leg of a horse, he also took lessons on cast steel, and how to work it into tools of various shapes and kinds and successful dressing under the supervision of Prof. W. S. Casterlin, of Pittston, Pa. In 1899, in Shoenersville, he introduced a cold tire-setting machine, which was the first machine of its kind operated in Eastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Baer also invented some very labor-saving tools for blacksmiths, of which the most noted is the "Baer Easy Hoof Parer." The patent for this invention was issued Jan. 2, 1900, and among the many useful articles he invented, this was the only one for which he received a patent. Like his father, Mr. Baer is actively connected with the Reformed Church.

and casts his vote with the Democratic party. Socially he is affiliated with the order of Golden Eagles, and the Junior Order of American Mechanics, having filled all the chairs of the latter organization.

5. Appolonia, died unmarried.

6. John Jacob was born in 1761 on the old homestead. He was made the executor of his father's will. In 1800 he removed to a farm near Cumberland, Md., where he died in 1823. He was twice married having four sons with the first wife and two with his second.

One son of the first marriage was John Jacob, he lived in and died in Somerset county. One of his sons, Daniel, died there in 1900 at the age of eighty-five.

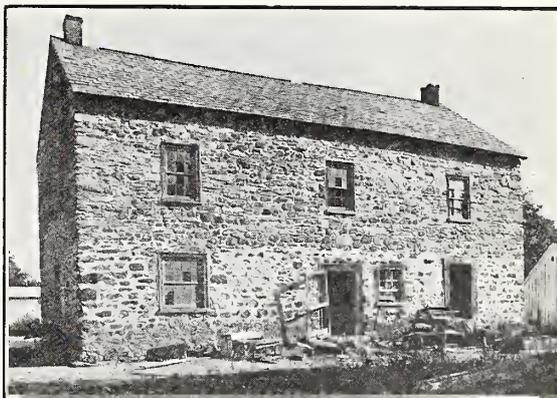

Major Solomon Baer, the youngest son of John Jacob, was born near Unionville in 1794. He removed with his parents to Maryland in 1800 and in about 1816 removed to a farm in Somerset county. He died in Somerset in 1812, aged 88 years. To him and his wife Anna Maria were born four sons: Henry, an editor, contracted consumption in the Union Army and died; the late ex-judge William J. Baer; ex-Judge Herman Baer, of Somerset, and George F. Baer, late president of the Reading Railway.

HENRY C. BAER, the present owner, was born on the old homestead, April 28, 1854. He was educated in the public schools and the Keystone State Normal school. After clerking for several years in the store at Guth's Station, he engaged in farming on the old homestead. The farm comprises about one hundred acres. The homestead originally comprised about five hundred acres. Henry Baer, the grandfather of the present owner divided the farm into three tracts. The old house erected by Christophel Baer is still standing. The above illustration shows it in its present condition. It was, as may be seen from the reproduction, originally only one story high. During the Indian uprisings it was frequently used as a house of refuge for the near-by settlers, hence it is frequently spoken of as the Indian Fort. Henry C. Baer is a Democrat in politics, and has served as school director for a period of seven years. He and his family are members of the Jordan Reformed church, where his father and grandfather lie buried.

In 1877, he was married to Sarah M. Worman, a daughter of Abraham and Mary (Roth) Worman. To them were born two children: Robert, a farmer in North Whitehall and Eva S., a school teacher. She was graduated from the township high school in 1905, after which she attended the Schnecksville academy and prepared herself for the profession of teaching. Since 1907 she has been teaching in her native township. She takes an active interest in the Ironton Sunday school.

Henry Baer, son of Melchior and grandson of Christophel Baer, lived on the old homestead in Whitehall township. In connection with the farm he also conducted a distillery, which stood near the Coplay creek, three hundred feet south of the present dwelling. The building was torn down in 1900 and some of the stones were used in the erection of the new farm house. In this old distillery there had been preserved in a small chest many old documents and papers. This chest with its precious documents was destroyed by the present owner. What a pity, that this present generation should have been so careless, with the papers and documents of their ancestors. Let this be an admonition to others who may read the pathetic story that they destroy not the sacred documents of their forefather's but in honor to them preserve them, either by presenting them to some family association or historical society or carefully treasuring them, themselves. He was the father of four sons: Peter; Henry; Adam and John; and five daughters: Magdalena, who was never married; Hannah, married to Owen Neihard; Judith, married to Daniel Levan; Sallie, married Elias Kennel, and Eliza, married to Mr. Leiser.

Adam Baer, son of Henry, was a lifelong farmer and resided on the old homestead where he lived retired many years. To him and his wife, Salanda Stopp, were born the following children: Willoughby; Henry C.; Lewis, who resides at Paunee, Ill.; Amanda, married to Edwin Oswald, of Schnecksville; Sarah, married to Tilghman Weaver and Elemina, married to Henry Fenstermacher.

Willoughby J. Baer, son of Adam, lives retired on a part of the old homestead. He was born Sept. 5, 1840 and was a shoemaker by trade

In 1876, he purchased a part of the original Baer tract, which he continued to till, until 1912, when he retired and was succeeded by his son-in-law. He built the house in 1886 and the barn in 1890. He is a Democrat in politics and a member of the Jordan Reformed congregation. He is married to Emma Weaver, a daughter of Tilghman Weaver. They have issue: Harvey of Whitehall; Katie J., married to George Blose; and Carrie, married to Francis Schmoyer.

BAHNER FAMILY.

The following letter, written by Rev. Dr. F. F. Bahner, a Reformed minister, located at Waynesboro, Pa., to his second cousin, Rev. J. E. Bahner, a minister of the United Evangelical church, stationed at East Greenville, Pa., is herewith published in its entirety.

WAYNESBORO, PA., Sept. 26, 1912.

MY DEAR COUSIN:

I was glad to get your letter of yesterday. I have never contemplated setting up a "family tree," but have been greatly interested in tracing my great-grandfather, Nicholas Bahner, to the old ancestral home in Germany, and I have my heart set on going over there some day and eating and sleeping in the old house, built in the 13th century, and still occupied by a family of our relatives. I would also like to attend services in the old church in which he worshipped, built in the 10th century, and still used by the Reformed people of the village. In the list of Hessian soldiers (of 1776) at Marburg, the name appears as Nicholas Bahner, but on the church record, in his native village, Reichenbach, it is Johann Nicolaus Bahn. The "er" was affixed to the name either by the recruiting officer, or by my great-grandfather himself. That is a point which I have never been able to clear up satisfactorily to myself. There are also Bahners in Germany, and I have a letter from one of them, but they do not come from Hesse. I have no doubt as to the identity of Johann Nicholas Bahn and Bahner, for the archivist at Marburg says that the two names stand for one and the same man.

Your great-great-great-great-grandfather was: Johann Georg Bahn. Your great-great-great-grandfather: Johann Heinrich Bahn, baptized June 13, 1728; confirmed, March 22, 1742, and as you know, your great-great-grandfather was Johann Nickolaus Bahn, born Jan. 18, 1754; baptized Feb. 28, 1754; died Feb. 5, 1824; aged, 70 years and 18 days (or as it appears at Marburg, and as he himself wrote it in this country, Nicholas Bahner).

As my father's name is John, you see that my male ancestors, on my father's side, were Johns for at least, five generations.

I lately got copies of the order of worship, hymn book, and catechism used by the Reformed congregation in the old church in Hesse, and a gown and cap such as all the ministers there wear, etc.

I have received a number of post cards from Hesse—one of the old ancestral Bahn house, of the parsonage, church, &c.

I expect to visit the graveyard at the Stone Valley church again in the near future. Some years ago I made a record of the inscriptions on the stones over the graves of both my great-grandfather and great-grandmother, and if you could spare me one of your pictures of them, I would greatly appreciate it.

Did you ever, in your researches, find any records in a family Bible, or elsewhere, made by the hand of my great-grandfather? All I ever saw was his name attached to a will—Nicholas Bahner—written by himself. What further do you have? Can you let me have one of your pictures of the grave? Yours sincerely,

F. F. BAHNER.

THE AMERICAN LINE OF THIS FAMILY.

Nicholas Bahner and His Descendants in Pennsylvania.

Nicholas Bahner, founder of the American branch of this family, came to this country during the Revolutionary War as one of the Hessian soldiers. He was born Jan. 18, 1754, and after the Revolutionary War, first located near Womelsdorf, in Berks county, Pa., thence he moved to Lebanon county, near Frederickburg, and from there to the Lykens Valley, in Dauphin county, near Gratz. He lived there some years on a tract of land in Lykens township, then moved to what is now Jordan township in Northumberland county, where he bought a tract of land which remained in the family name to the third generation. He followed farming to the end of his days. He was a tall, erect and handsome man, the ideal of a soldier. He died Feb. 5, 1824, and is buried at the Zion's church, in the Stone Valley, where his wife also rests. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He married Margaret Stahr, born Feb. 26, 1754, and who died Aug. 13, 1831. She was a native of Lebanon county. To them were born four sons and a daughter. The sons being: Jacob, Heinrich, Frederick, and John. The daughter was married to a Stump, in Northumberland county, and they settled in Ohio.

Jacob Bohner, the oldest son of Nicholas, was born Nov. 8, 1783, in Lykens Valley. He was a successful farmer, owning three good farms. For some years he lived near Hebe, and was a member of the Hebe Reformed Church, and there he is buried. He died Dec. 20, 1863. His wife, Catharine Deibler, was born May 16, 1789, and died Sept. 27, 1855. Their children were: Jacob, Jonathan, John, Abraham, Daniel, David, George, Matthias, Michael, Elizabeth, Eva and Polly.

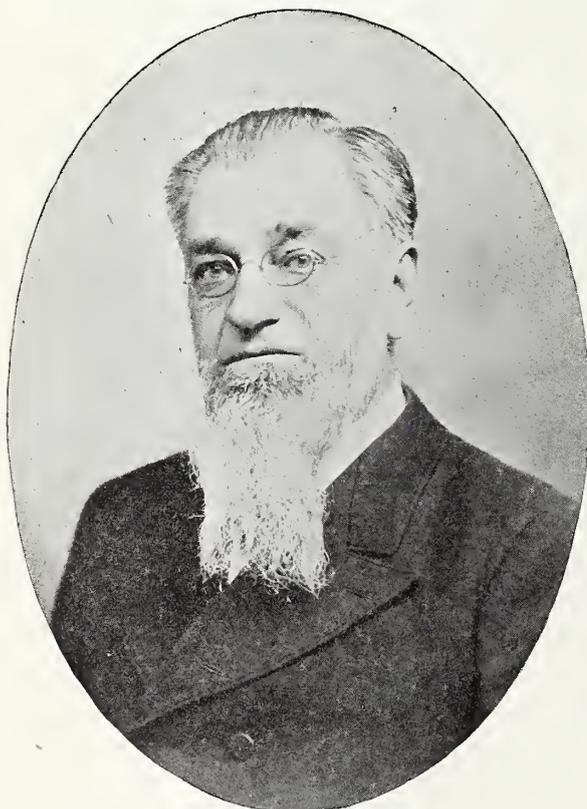

Henry Bohner, the second son of the ancestor, remained on the homestead, and followed farming. He was twice married, first to a Brosius, and second to Rebecca Troutman. By the first wife he had Peter, Jacob, Henry, Nicholas, Catharine, Elizabeth, Rebecca, and Mrs. Jacob Miller. By his second wife he had William and Sarah.

Frederick Bohner, the third son of the ancestor, was born June 20, 1790, and died March 12, 1831. He settled near Uniontown in Jordan township, and was a prosperous farmer, owning and cultivating a large farm, a part of the homestead. He was a public spirited and highly respected citizen. He was one of the founders of the Evangelical Church in Uniontown. He married Eva Brosius, born in 1792 and died in 1872. They are buried in Bohner's (Union) cemetery, near Uniontown. Their children were Daniel (m. Julian Mease); Lydia (m. Rev. Mr. Anspach); Sallie (m. a Wildermuth); Rebecca (m. Moses Troutman); and Phoebe (m. a Mr. Mease).

John Bohner, the youngest son of the ancestor, was born Sept. 4, 1792, in the Mahantango Valley. He owned a valuable farm of 140 acres located near Mahanoy, Pa. He was a stone mason and followed that trade most of the time. His children conducting the farm. He died June 7, 1880, and is buried at the Mahanoy Church, of which he was an official member. His wife, Maria Delp, was born 1789 and died in 1868. Their children were Peter, Daniel, David, Simon, John, Benjamin, Elizabeth, Susanna, Maricha, Catharine and Dinah.

Daniel Bohner, son of Frederick, son of Nicholas, lived near Uniontown, on part of his homestead, being the farm of Daniel K. Schlegel. He acquired a substantial property, but lost heavily in the U. B. graveyard insurance venture. A man of intelligence and remarkable foresight, he was a leader in his community in many ways. Converted at his home during the thirties, under Bishop Seibert, then a presiding elder of the Evangelical Association, he was one of the founders of the church of that denomination at Uniontown and was one of the most zealous and effective advocates of the doctrines of that sect in his vicinity, doing much for its advancement. He helped to erect the first Evangelical Church at Uniontown, giving liberally not only of money but of lumber and other material, doing considerable hauling, boarding workmen, etc. He held many offices in the church and to the end of his days was an ardent Christian and a truly spiritual man. The camp-meeting was held in his grove, and through his zealous efforts many members were brought into the church. He served as lay delegate to many church conferences, and to the general conference. He was a devout student of the Bible. Mr. Bohner died March 29, 1904, at the advanced age of 91 years, 10 months and 7 days. He was always a strong man physically, was short, heavy set, broad shouldered, and had a full face. In 1874 he built a large vault in Bohner's Union cemetery, near Pillow, and about 20 years before his death had a steel coffin made for himself and wife, Julianna Measy (Mease), who passed away Dec. 8, 1898, aged 81 years, 8 months and 13 days. They had children as follows: Emanuel, Rev. Benjamin, Henry, Daniel, Phoebe (m. William Spotts and lived in Kansas), Annie, Mary (known as Polly, died unmarried), Sarah (m. Jeremiah Weaver) and Emma (m. Simon Eyer, of New Jersey).

REV. BENJAMIN FREDERICK BOHNER, son of Daniel and Juliana Bohner, was born in Jordan township, Northumberland county, Pa., June 17, 1837, and was reared on a farm in Uniontown, Pa. He began his education as a boy in the township schools of his native place and concluded it in Union Seminary, at New Berlin, Pa. While still a youth he was converted in a Church which his parents helped to build, during a revival meeting conducted in 1854 by the Rev. Andreas Ziegenfus. He at that time joined the Evangelical Association, of which he has continued a useful and highly esteemed member until the present day. In 1857 he was elected an exhorter in what was then called Trautman's Class, which office he served for four years. In 1862 he was licensed as a preacher in the East Pennsylvania Conference, of the Evangelical Association, and in 1865 was ordained a deacon and in 1868 an elder. On March 19, 1867, he was married to Miss Catharine Kistler, daughter of Daniel S. and Magdalena Kistler, of West Penn township, Schuylkill county, Pa. The fruits of the union were four sons: Ausben D., and Harvey E., both of Allentown, Pa., Rev. Charles H., of Ocean City, N. J., and Benjamin F., deceased. Being able to preach with equal facility in both the English and German languages, Rev. Bohner was of service to his Conference in many of the best parishes within its bounds, and was uniformly acceptable to the people both within and without the churches he served. He was stationed on the following charges: Montgomery circuit, Fairville circuit, Womelsdorf circuit, Mahantango circuit, Milton Grove and Conewago, Easton, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Salem, Reading, Norristown, Salem, Allentown, Catasauqua, Bethlehem and Immanuel, Allentown. At the sessions of the conference in 1891, held in the Immanuel Church, Allentown, of which Mr. Bohner was then pastor, he was elected a presiding elder, having received all the votes cast, save his own. This office he held in succession for twenty years, thus becoming a leader in the conference which had honored him by electing him seven times as its representative in the General Conference of the Church. He was elected to three terms of four years each on the Board of Publication by the General Conference. His present incumbency on the Board will expire in 1916. Rev. Bohner has served in the active ministry for fifty years and at the session of his conference in 1913, held at Allentown, his name, at his own request, was placed on the superannuated list of that body, which took recognition of his long and useful ministry by the unanimous adoption of the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, This session of Conference completes the semi-centennial of Rev. B. F. Bohner's admission into the East Penna. Conference, he having been licensed in the year 1862, therefore Resolved, That we are thankful to God for the faithful and efficient services of Rev. Bohner as a pastor, also for his self-sacrificing, conscientious and honorable career as a Presiding Elder.

Resolved, That while we must recognize that added years have brought with them waning physical strength, we are glad that there remains an undiminished spirituality and devotion and that we shall not cease to hold him in the highest esteem and lovingly remember his faithful services through many trying years, as also his loyalty to his God and to his Church and her doctrines, and at this session, which is the fiftieth year of his ministerial career, pray that He whom he has loved and served these many years may be especially near and helpful to him in future days.

HARVEY E. BOHNER, son of Rev. Benjamin F. and Catharine Bohner (daughter of Daniel S. and Magdalena Kistler), was born January 10, 1871, at Harrisburg, Pa. After graduating from the public schools of Bethlehem, Pa., in 1888, he was entered as a student in the American Business College, of Allentown, Pa., from which institution he was graduated in 1890. He at once entered the employ of the F. Hersh Hardware Co. as a book-keeper, and after several years transferred his services to the C. A. Dorney Furniture Co., of which he became head book-keeper. In 1901 he became associated with M. A. Helfrich in the manufacture and sale of furniture, at 734 Hamilton street, Allentown, Pa., where under the name of Helfrich & Bohner the firm conducts a large retail business. Mr. Bohner was married to Miss Salome Roth, daughter of Samuel and Cecilia Roth, on December 1, 1893, and is the father of three children: Marjorie E., B. Frederick, and Lucy Salome. As an active and representative citizen of Allentown, Mr. Bohner has many religious, social and business associations. He is president of the Board of Trustees, of Salem Evangelical Church, a trustee of the Public Library, Treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce, Treasurer of the Associated Charities and a charter member of Jordan Lodge, F. & A. M. No. 673.

REV. CHARLES H. BOHNER, son of Rev. Benjamin F. and Catharine Bohner (daughter of Daniel S. and Magdalena Kistler), was born January 16, 1875, at Mauch Chunk, Pa. He received his elementary education in the public schools of the various cities in which his father served his several pastorates. After leaving the Allentown High school he was prepared for college in the Allentown Preparatory School. In 1895 he entered Muhlenberg College, from which institution he was graduated with first honors. He then pursued a course of study in the Illinois Wesleyan University, of Bloomington, Ill., from which he was graduated with the degree of Ph.B. In 1908, on the submission of his thesis, he received the degree of A.M. from Muhlenberg College. He also took lectures in theology at Princeton Theological Seminary. In 1900 Rev. Bohner was ordained an elder in the ministry of the Evangelical Association, and served successful pastorates in Salem Church, Reading; Ebenezer Church, Allentown; and Trinity Church, Easton, in all of which he remained the full length of time allowed by the polity of the denomination. In June, 1911, having received a unanimous call to the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, of Ocean City, N. J., he entered upon the work there, where he is at present enjoying a very successful ministry. In addition to his active pastoral career, Mr. Bohner has found time to do considerable literary and educational work, having been editor of the East Pennsylvania Conference Minutes for eight years, Sunday school editor of the Evangelical Messenger for five years, and staff lecturer on sociological subjects at Schuylkill Seminary, Reading, Pa. He was united in marriage to Miss Carrie A. Smith, daughter of Edward J. and Annie Smith, of Allentown, Pa., in 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Bohner have traveled widely, having visited many lands, including Turkey, Syria, the Holy Land, Egypt and the various States of Europe. Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M., owns him as a valued member, of which body he has served as chaplain.

BALLIET FAMILY.

The ancestry of the Balliet family has been traced to Tancred le Balyard, who was commander-in-chief of the army of Chlodwig, King of France, about the year 500. The name Tancred, in old French, meant "many wounds or scars," and it is said that at the time of his death about 524, he had more than a hundred scars on his body. He married Yutta de Mezieres and had two sons, Hugo, who entered ecclesiastical life and died as the Archbishop of Mailand; and Alfred, who became a soldier. He carried on his shield a man's head with a cloth wound about it, as a mark of the many scars of his father. This mark, with the crest, a cock, signifying warlikeness and military courage, is still the arms of the family. After many campaigns, Alfred Balyard settled in Normandy and married Amelie de Chateau Roux. He had two sons, Franz and Reynald, whose descendants lived in France until about 1066, when the majority of them went with Duke William, of Normandy, to England and settled in the county of Sussex. Gualther Balyard remained in France and married Undine de Perigord. An active soldier, he met his death in the first Crusade, at the storming of Jerusalem in 1099. His two sons, Andre and Charles, remained in Jerusalem. The family flourished in the Levant and when the Crusades were over about 1280, a Bertrand Balyard returned to France and was made Lieutenant of Burgundy. He had brought a wife from the East, named Adelheid von Bernstorf, of German origin, and left after his death in 1312, a son named Sylvester Balyard. His descendants lived in Burgundy, one of whom, Raimund Balyard, died in 1554, in Paris, leaving five sons: Armand, Michael, Louis, Frederick, and Berno. Their descendants were greatly scattered during the civil and religious wars of France, and one line of the family settled in Germany.

Paul Balliet, grandson of Jacob, of Schalbach, of this branch, was born in Alsace in 1717, and emigrated to America on the ship Robert and Alice, which arrived at Philadelphia on Sept. 10, 1738. He settled not long after in Whitehall township, as on Sept. 23, 1740, his name, Paulus Balliet, appears as a sponsor to a child of John Nicholas Snyder, who came to America with him. On April 12, 1749, he secured 97 acres by warrant and by 1774 had added to this 713 acres. He married, in 1749, Maria Magdalena, daughter of Abraham Worting. She was born in Lorraine in 1727 and died in 1802. He was naturalized April 10, 1759. A license was granted to him to keep a hotel on June 22, 1756, and again at the June term of Court in 1759. The hotel was built of logs and later weatherboarded. It was known as the Whitehall Hotel and its sign was the flowing bowl. He was called by the Indians, "Bowl Balliet," it is said, from the fact that he furnished them refreshment from a wooden bowl. He also conducted a store where the Indians received their supplies. During the French and Indian War, in 1756 and 1757, he furnished provisions, with Adam Deshler, to the provincial forces at Forts Allen, Norris and Hamilton, and to Indians. The hotel was a post station for many years, where the daily stage coaches changed horses on their way north and returning. As other families settled there the place became known as Ballietsville. The log hotel was torn down in 1840 and the remainder of the house stood until April, 1884. Paul Balliet was a member of the Egypt Reformed congregation and in 1767 represented the Whitehall charge at the meeting of Cœtus at Lancaster, as an elder from Egypt, and was paid ten shillings for expenses. He died March 19, 1777, and was buried at Unionville, where his tombstone can still be seen. In his will, dated March 15, 1777, and probated Aug. 2, 1777, he states that his son Stephen "shall have the plantation in Towamensing township on the Blue mountains, whereon Samuel Somery lives, and if Stephen wants the old plantation, he shall have it, and son John shall have where Somery lives; son Paul shall have the tract of land bought of Samuel Morris." The witnesses were David Hahn, Joseph Balliet, Nicholas Mark and Samuel Somery. This Joseph Balliet was a relative who lived in Whitehall as early as 1762. He and his wife, Mary Barbara, had sons, Jacob and Leonhard, and a Daniel, born Sept. 13, died Oct. 18, 1773. Jacob and Leonhard subsequently resided in Northampton county, east of the Lehigh. Leonhard had a son, John, born March 18, 1783, and a son, Leonhard, born Feb. 14, 1786.

Paul and Maria Magdalena Balliet had nine children: Jacob Balliet, born Dec. 23, 1750, died young; Maria Catharine, born July 28, 1752, died Jan. 28, 1823, married, Nov. 7, 1769, Adam Deshler, Jr.; Stephen Balliet, born in 1753, died Aug. 4, 1821; Susanna, born about 1755, married John Baer. On Nov. 23, 1794, their names appear as sponsors in Whitehall. They later removed to Hampshire county, Virginia, where Mrs. Baer was living in 1811; Eva, born in 1760, baptized March 26, 1760, died March 20, 1797, she married, April 10, 1781, Nicholas Saeger; John Balliett, born Nov. 31, 1761, died Nov. 2, 1837; Magdalena, under 14 in 1777, when Peter Rhoads was appointed her guardian, who married Christian Troxell; Paul Balliet, born May 24, 1766, died Feb. 17, 1845, whose guardian was Peter Burkhalter, appointed in 1777. After attaining the age of fourteen he chose Jacob Wert as his guardian. He married, Dec. 19, 1819, Mrs. Elizabeth Mickley, nee Deshler, widow of Christian Mickley, born 1773, died 1840. They had no children. Nicholas Balliet, under 14 in 1777, when Peter Kohler was appointed his guardian. He removed to Penn township, Northumberland county, where he was a tanner, and died at Selinsgrove in 1808.

L. B. Balliett

Stephen Balliet, eldest surviving son of Paul, was born on the homestead in 1753. He assisted his father in the store and hotel and in December, 1776, was commissioned lieutenant-colonel of the Second Battalion of Northampton county militia, commanded by Col. George Breinig. He was in command of his battalion at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, and saw service on the frontiers. He was one of the officers in command on the march to Nescopeck. He was appointed agent for forfeited estates on May 6, 1778, and on Oct. 20, 1783, was elected a member of the Supreme Executive Council, then the governing body of the state. He was appointed a member of the Board of Property on June 7, 1784, and was elected to the Assembly in 1788 and 1789. In 1797 he was appointed revenue collector, for this, the Ninth District. He died Aug. 4, 1821, and was buried at Union church. He married Magdalena, daughter of Peter Burkhalter, Esq. She was born April 17, 1765, and died in 1805. Mrs. Edw. G. Martin, of Allentown, is the owner of their likenesses in oil. They had two sons, Stephen and Joseph.

Stephen Balliet, the eldest son, was born Oct. 27, 1781. He became a prominent iron master in the early days of the iron industry in the county and was the owner of Balliets' or Lehigh Furnace, which he started in 1826, with Samuel Helffrich. In 1828 they erected a forge in East Penn township, Carbon county. Mr. Helffrich died in 1830 and his interest was purchased by Mr. Balliet. In 1837 he removed to the locality and purchased about 3,000 acres of land, on which he erected a furnace and four houses. He resided there until his death in January, 1854. He married, Jan. 22, 1804, Susan Ihrie, daughter of Conrad Ihrie, of Northampton county. She was born Oct. 7, 1784, died March 28, 1852, and was buried at Ashfield, Carbon county. They had eleven children: Stephen, died young; Susan, born 1806, died 1873, married Dr. Jesse Hallman, born 1795, died 1861, and had six children: Mary A., Nathan, Louisa, Stephen, Elmira, wife of Charles H. Nimson, and Joseph; Stephen, Jr.; Paul; Aaron; Maria; George; John; Charles; Sabina; and Caroline.

Stephen Balliet, Jr., son of Stephen, was born March 25, 1809, and died July 13, 1860. He married, March 10, 1831, Maria Anna Bieber, daughter of Theobald Bieber and Elizabeth Sasamanhausen. She was born Oct. 11, 1811, and died April 17, 1832. They had one child, Dr. Lewis Bieber Balliet, who was born at Ballietsville, March 3, 1832. He attended the public schools and graduated in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, April 1, 1854. He practiced medicine at Unionville until 1894, when he removed to 734 North Seventh street, Allentown, where he conducted a drug store and practiced medicine. He died Jan. 28, 1913, aged 80 years, having been 58 years a physician. He was a man of strong mentality and a delightful conversationalist. A student of history and genealogy, he wrote the genealogy of the Balliet family and owned a number of the valuable family relics, some of which he presented to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. He was well acquainted with the early history of the county and the writer wishes to pay tribute to him for the knowledge gained in many pleasant hours spent in his company. He was twice married and had one daughter, the wife of Rev. Phaon Kohler, of Glasgow, Pa. Stephen Balliet, Jr., married second, Elizabeth Huntzinger, of Orwigsburg, and had eleven children, five of whom grew to maturity: Sarah F., wife of Dr. Edw. G. Martin; Emma, who married Dr. John P. Kohler; Fannie, wife of Dr. Francis Troxell, of San Diego, Cal.; Margaret L., wife of Wm. H. Weinsheimer; and Arabella, who married Morris L. Kauffman, Esq.

Paul Balliet, son of Stephen Jr., was born May 11, 1811, and died Dec. 26, 1886. Aaron Balliet, son of Stephen Balliet and his wife Susan Ihrie, was born in North Whitehall township, March 7, 1813. He spent his boyhood days in his native township, where he acquired his early education and later studied at Easton. He became interested in the iron business and with his brother-in-law, Benjamin F. Levan, and others, built and operated the Coplay iron furnaces. Subsequently with his brothers, John and Paul, he purchased a furnace near Lehighon, which they operated for some time. He aided in the organization of the Second National Bank and was one of its directors for twenty-four years. His political affiliation was with the Whig party until its absorption by the Republican party, with which he became identified. He served many years as justice of the peace in his township and was active and progressive in all public matters. He died Nov. 1, 1895, and is buried at Unionville, where he was a member of the Reformed congregation.

He was twice married. His first wife was Sarah Dengler, daughter of John Dengler. She was born Oct. 31, 1827, and died Aug. 3, 1863. They had eight children:

C. Samuels, and has three children: George S., who married Lizzie Heffner; Robert, who married Irene Frederick and has six children: Miriam, Lee, Emma, Grace, Raymond, and Francis; and Marcus, who is single.

DR. A. H. BALLIET was born in Ballietsville, North Whitehall township, Dec. 27, 1867. He obtained his education in the public schools of the township, at Hagerstown, Maryland, Academy, and Wyoming Seminary, at Kingston, Pa. He later completed a course in veterinary surgery at Toronto, Canada, from which he was graduated with honors in 1888. Returning to his native town, he opened an office and continued in practice for eleven years, when he removed to Allentown, and remained in the practice of veterinary surgery for two years, when he retired from that business, directing his energies in other channels. In 1900 he became associated with Walter Biery in the operation of the Eagle Cigar Box Factory and after a period of about six months, Mr. Balliet purchased his partner's interest in the business and continued alone.

A. H. Balliet, cigar box manufacturer, is the successor to John M. Stevens. The plant was then located on Maple street, near Hamilton, at the rear of H. Leh & Company's building. Three years later the location was changed to the Yeager building at the corner of Lumber and Chestnut streets, where it remained five years, when the present large plant, occupying an entire block, was built at Franklin, Warren and Fifteenth streets. When the industry was purchased in 1900 there were 22 employees and a capacity of 1,500 boxes per day, which has now increased to 20,000 boxes per day and now employs 250 people and is one of the largest of its kind in the country. All kinds of cigar boxes are manufactured. "No Shrink" Boards are a specialty. A large quantity of cedar lumber, all ready for use, is sold to smaller dealers through the United States. Many cedar boxes are manufactured here. The main building is five stories and 160 feet by 77½ feet in dimensions, which is of brick, with an addition containing the boiler house and other buildings. This plant was opened for business on April 1, 1908. The plant is conceded by manufacturers in the line to be one of the finest cigar box factories in the United States, and because of its model construction and modern equipment has attracted attention from far and near. The huge red Spanish cedar logs, which go toward making the better grade of boxes, are imported directly from Cuba. These cedar trees, which sometimes grow to a height of 50 feet and three feet in diameter, are cut in the swamps and groves of Cuba, stripped of their bark or hewn into square logs, taken to streams and floated to seaport towns. They are here loaded on ships, taken to New York and shipped directly to Allentown. A siding constructed from the West End branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, carries the logs directly to the yards of the factory. The timber is unloaded by a huge derrick, conveyed to saws, which cut it into proper lengths. Some of this stock is sold to other box factories in the United States. On the first floor of the four-story factory these parts are again cut into fletches corresponding to the size required for the boxes. Six large saws are used in this process. The wood is then taken to six concrete fire-proof driers. The Emerson system of drying by automatic compression is used and over 140,000 feet of piping are scattered through the six kilns. Fifteen thousand feet of timber can be placed in each kiln at a time. It takes two days to dry the wood, thus the driers turn out 40,000 feet of perfectly dried lumber. This is one of the most important and exact processes of the manufacture of the cigar box. After it is taken out of the kiln, the wood is planed and prepared for the manufacturing department on the second floor. It is sawed into box lengths and sorted by experts. The sorting is done on the standard of quality and color. After that the process of constructing the boxes piece by piece begins. This is done by eleven automatic self-feed nailing machines. From here the product goes to the automatic trimmers and sanders, after which it is ready to go to the edging room and the finishing rooms on the third floor, where all the labels, edging and trimmings, including the cigar factory and district, are put on the box and when this is done the article is ready to be filled with the weed.

As is very evident, the danger from fire in such an industry, is very great. Throughout Dr. Balliet's factory there are distributed 1025 automatic sprinklers and every one of the 250 people which he employs has been trained to use the fire apparatus at a moment's notice. A tank on the roof contains 25,000 gallons of water, which is released for service when the heat from a fire melts a leaden guard. Not the least splinter of wood or grain of sawdust is wasted. Through a process designed by Dr. Balliet, the slabs or rounded sides of the logs are trimmed into shape for the making of smaller boxes. All waste and sawdust is deposited into hoppers, ground up into small particles and by compressed air, blown through pipes underneath the boilers where it is turned into fuel.

The factory has a capacity of 20,000 boxes a day. Local dealers use nearly the entire output.

In a special department handsome mothproof cedar wood chests are made and a department is being fitted up for the manufacture of hosiery boards.

The factory is of fire-proof construction throughout. It was erected by H. G. Scheldon & Company under Dr. Balliet's supervision. The boiler room, electric light plant, coal bins and repair rooms occupy an annex to the main factory. To conform with the insurance regulations the drying kilns are constructed under ground with entrances from the basement. Wide stairways and a large electric elevator connect the floors.

Three 125-horsepower boilers were installed by William H. Taylor & Company, and the Warren & Webster vacuum heating system and the automatic sprinklers were also installed by the Taylor firm. The building was wired by the Lehigh Electric Company and a factory 'phone is connected with every department.

Dr. Balliet gives his entire time to the supervision of the work of the 250 people in the plant. The top floor or finishing department is in charge of Miss Sallie Edinger. Fred Doll, Jr., has charge of the manufacturing floor, and takes care of the basement in which the planing, drying, re-sawing and staining is done. Fred Doll, Sr., manufactures the cedar chests and shaping boards. Edw. Kemmerer is in charge of the printing office.

The automatic nailing, sanding and trimming machines are the most modern. They are made by L. F. Grammes & Sons, of this city, who are also the patentees.

Mr. Balliet was married, Feb. 21, 1889, to Miss Anna Morgan, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Romich) Morgan. Mrs. Morgan was a daughter of John Romich. Thomas Morgan had five children:

- (1). John, who married Sarah Geiger.

LINEAGE OF JOHN BALLIET, SON OF PAUL

By W. W. Deatrick, Sc. D., Professor of Literature in the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, Pa.

John Balliet, son of Paul, the pioneer, was born at Whitehall on Dec. 1, 1761. At an early age he married Catharine M. Mickley, born March 28, 1764, died Jan. 2, 1835, a daughter of John Jacob Mickley. He served as a private in the Revolution and afterwards in the border troubles. First he was a private under his brother, Col. Stephen Balliet; later he was captain of a company in Col. Abraham Rinker's Battalion. History tells how John Balliet, of Whitehall, prevented by illness in the family from participating in the expedition made by the detail under command of Col. Stephen Balliet, to Sugarloaf Valley to bury the dead massacred by the Indians in 1780, heard from the returning soldiers of the beauty and fertility of that then unoccupied region. Having had his imagination fired by these glowing accounts, in 1784, with his wife and two children, Balliet removed thither, settling at a spring, headwaters of the Little Nescopeck, in the upper end of the valley, at a place later known as Beisel's, about one mile west of Drum's, becoming the first settler in the entire valley. Travel to that place could be made only on horseback. The two children, as the story goes, were placed one in each of two beegums which, strapped together, were slung over the back of a horse. In descending Broad mountain, the connecting strap broke and the beegums with their human treasure fell down the mountain side. His first habitation was of poles set up against a tree; later he built a log house which, being destroyed by fire several years after, was replaced by a frame structure, the first frame house in the Nescopeck Valley, still standing, removed from its original site, and doing duty as a shed on the farm of S. F. Readler, the present (1913) owner of the property. In the same year, 1784, John Balliet took out warrants for two tracts of land, one of 103 acres, 65 perches, the other of 101 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres "in Towamensing."

So existing receipts to John Balliet, son of Paul, prove. These receipts and other papers which refer to the subject of our sketch and which speak of him as "John Balliet of Towamensing" seem to make it questionable whether John Balliet, son of Paul, was the "John Balliet of Whitehall" who was the first settler in Nescopeck Valley. Various records, cemetery, church, and military, seem to make it certain that about 1780 there were several John Balliets in Whitehall. Whether what is now Butler township in Luzerne county was then included in the not clearly defined "Towamensing," this narrator has not been able to determine. Northampton county, about that time, as shown by the maps of the period, extended to the north branch of the Susquehanna.—W. W. D.

Oct. 17, 1806, John Balliet purchased 240 acres of land in Turbot township, Northumberland county, Pa., (now Limestone township, Montour county), near the present village of Limestoneville. Renting this property shortly afterwards to his son, John Balliet (2d), he purchased a farm nearby and erected on it a commodious stone dwelling in which he resided to the time of his death, Nov. 2, 1837. He is buried by the side of his wife in the graveyard of Paradise Reformed church, of which the Balliets were prominent members, just over the border line of Montour and Northumberland counties. About 1810 he served for a time as collector of taxes for Turbot township. He left two children, Magdalena, born Jan. 5, 1872, married Solomon Levan, died 1867; and John Balliet (2d).

John Balliet (2d), born March 14, 1784, married Elizabeth Schreiber, born Sept. 7, 1782, and died March 25, 1858, of Coplay, daughter of Jacob Schreiber. He spent his life on the farm purchased by his father in Turbot township, Northumberland county (now Limestone township, Montour county, Pa.) He died Feb. 1, 1854, and with his wife lies buried not far from the graves of his parents in Paradise Reformed church graveyard mentioned above. To John Balliet and his wife Elizabeth, were born six sons and two daughters: John Balliet (3d), Stephen Balliet, Levi Balliet, William Balliet, Josiah Balliet, Jacob Balliet, Nancy Balliet (Mrs. Abraham Stroub), and Mary Balliet (Mrs. Joseph McNinch by first marriage, Mrs. John Klapp by second marriage). All of these children, except Mrs. Stroub, lived to an advanced age.

John Balliet (3d), born May 17, (?) 1806, spent his life in the Balliet settlement near Limestoneville. He married Catharine Kuhns, born 1810, with whom he had eight children: Charles Edward Balliet, born Feb. 28, 1828, resident (in 1913) in Macdougall, N. Y.; Peter Balliet; Caroline Balliet; Elizabeth (Mrs. Ellis Frederick), of Watsonstown, Pa.; John W. Balliet, of Watsonstown; Ellen Balliet (Mrs. Wm. Dunn), of the same place; Mary Balliet; David A. Balliet, also a resident of Watsonstown. Mr. and Mrs. William Dunn celebrated their golden wedding on May 14, 1913.

Stephen Balliet, son of John Balliet, 2d, spent his long life in the same section, occupied in agriculture. He married Susan Newcomer and to the pair were born nine children: William H. Balliet, late of Hughesville, Pa.; Stephen D. Balliet; Charles A. Balliet; Edmund N. Balliet; Levi W. Balliet; John F. Balliet; Ambrose E. Balliet, a business man of Williamsport, Pa.; Susan Elizabeth Balliet; Mrs. Charles A. Wagner, of Watsonstown, Pa.; and Mary Irene Balliet, (Mrs. John D. Clapp), also of Watsonstown. A son of Mrs. Charles A. Wagner, Prof. Carroll Wagner, is a prominent educator in Madison, South Dakota.

Levi Balliet, son of John Balliet (2d), devoted his life, not to agriculture, as did most of his brothers, but to manufacturing and business, spending many years in merchandising at Limestoneville, McErensville, and in the latter years of his life (died 1891) in Milton, where he suffered grievously in the great fire of May 14, 1880. He was married twice, first to Elizabeth Folmer, and second to Matilda Hackenberg. The former union was blessed with four children: John Calvin Balliet, long associated with his father in business in Milton, Pa.; Susan F. Balliet (Mrs. Swartz), now resident in Bradford, Pa.; Dr. Lorenzo Dow Balliet, a prominent homeopathic physician, in active practice in Atlantic City, N. J., for some years past; and Mary Balliet, long deceased. Of the latter marriage there were two children: Mary Louisa Balliet, of Kutztown, Pa.; and Emma Jane Balliet, wife of the Rev. W. W. Deatruck, Sc. D., for the past twenty-three years professor of higher English in the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, Pa.

William Balliet, fourth son of John Balliet, 2d, was the last to pass away of this long-lived family, dying a little more than a year ago at Limestoneville. Throughout his mature life he tilled the ancestral acres and only after his death did the estate of John Balliet (1st) pass out of the possession of the Balliet family. His wife was Rebecca Haag. To these two were born eight children: Mary E. Balliet (Mrs. C. E. Royer), lately deceased, of Limestoneville; Sarah Balliet; Emma L. Balliet (Mrs. Charles A. Leinbach), resident in Milton; Alcesta Balliet (Mrs. I. Albert Eschbach), deceased; William Josiah Balliet, a farmer, residing near Milton; Calvin Balliet; Clarence Franklin Balliet, Milton; and Ida Balliet.

Josiah Balliet, fifth son of John Balliet, (2d), removed years ago to Lockport, New York. He Elizabeth Eschbach. Of them were born seven children: Aaron F. Balliet, Sarah Balliet, Elizabeth Balliet, Josiah Albert Balliet, William Balliet, Oliver Balliet, and Melva Balliet. The male members of this branch of the family have devoted their activities successfully to various forms of business.

Jacob Schreiber Balliet, fifth son of John Balliet, (2d), followed agriculture. His wife was Catharine G. Lewars. In this family there were five children: M. BENFIELD FAMILY.

The family historian of the Benfields has traced the name back to the time of William the Conqueror in his conquest of England, 1066. In his army was a General John Benfield, from Normandy, who after the conquest moved his family to England and became a man of prominence in the circles of the Court. After his death he was buried in Westminster Abbey, where there is a tablet to his memory. The family in the course of time spread into Scotland and Ireland, and from the Scotland family, so far as the historian is able to discover, came two brothers, who were Thomas and John. The former is the head of the Benfield family of this section as well as those of the Central and Western States, and the latter is the head of the family in North and South Carolina as well as Georgia, whither he emigrated from Union township, Berks county, about 1760, with the Boone family. These brothers emigrated to America about 1712, so far as can be learned from records, and located above Pottstown, several miles, in Union township, where they owned tracts of land.

In 1728 Thomas Benfield bought a tract of land in Oley township, Berks county, and sold it to Abijah Sands in 1733, having lived there during that time. The next year he received a patent for land (100 acres) now in District township, which is owned by Israel Weller and his brother. In 1744 another patent was granted to him for a tract of 52 acres, adjoining the 100-acre tract, which became the home of the family, and there he raised a family of two sons and four daughters. This same Thomas Benfield while he lived here purchased several other tracts in Union and Amity townships. Two tracts were sold by him in 1762 to John Wanger, of the same township; located near Port Union and still in the Wanger family name. From the tax lists in the possession of the Berks County Historical Society we find that he paid taxes at different dates, showing that he either lived in these townships or owned property and paid tax. In 1759 he paid £8 tax in District township; and from 1761 to 1769 he paid tax in that township. There he died and his son Samuel was executor of his will and filed his statement in 1771.

Samuel was a taxable in East District (now District) township in 1790. He and his wife, Anna, lived in District till 1792, when he moved to Northampton (now Lehigh) county. In 1811 he moved to Albany township, Berks county, where he died. His will was probated in 1813, John Benfield and George Greenwald, executors. In his family were two sons and five daughters, all mentioned in the will, namely: John, Catharine, Margaret, Susanna, Elizabeth, Maria and Jacob. The sons, moving to western Pennsylvania, left one grandson of this Samuel, Henry Benfield, who moved to District township with a man by the name of Gluck, by whom he was employed.

John Benfield, brother of Samuel, left no issue. He also moved to Lynn township, Northampton (now Lehigh) Co., Pa., but moved into West Penn, Schuylkill county, where he died. Three of the daughters (sisters of John and Samuel) were married, as follows: Catherine to a Mr. Ulrich, Mary to a Mr. Harp, Elizabeth to a Mr. Updegrave, and Susanna remained single. Of these persons very little is known.

Of Samuel's two sons, John, as before intimated, moved to Montour county, where his descendants now live and are prominent; Jacob moved to central Pennsylvania, where he died. He and his wife (whose maiden name was Keck) raised a family of five sons and one daughter, all but one left for the West, George locating in Illinois, Jacob and Daniel in Crawford county, Pa., John in Michigan and Maria (Mrs. Schlosser) in Crawford county, Pa., thus leaving one, Henry, in Berks county.

Henry Benfield raised eight sons and one daughter, all the sons becoming prominent farmers and business men. On Aug. 20, 1906, his descendants held a reunion at Huff's Church, the first gathering of this family, and six of his sons, as well as many grandchildren, were present on the occasion. He was born in Lynn township, Lehigh Co., Pa., Sept. 3, 1803, and in 1824 came to Hereford township, Berks county, where he worked one year for Mr. Gluck on the farm later owned by his son George and now the property of his grandson, Henry W. Benfield. He then learned the blacksmith's trade from Jacob Heydt and followed that trade for several years, until he commenced farming on his own account. The rest of his active years he spent in agricultural work, but retired many years before his death, which occurred Jan. 21, 1891, at the ripe age of 87 years, 4 months, 18 days. In his early years he was a teamster, hauling for different forges. He bought a farm of 15 acres above Bechtelsville, in Washington township, which is now the property of his grandson, William Benfield. He was a Reformed member of the Hill Church, where he is buried. He married Sarah Becker, born July 4, 1806, died Feb. 22, 1886, aged seventy-nine years, seven months, eighteen days. Of their nine children, (1) David, born March 26, 1827, died Nov. 27, 1903; his wife, Anna Maria, born in 1830, died in 1904. He was in his younger years a teacher and later a very prosperous farmer in Washington township, and the possessor of considerable real estate, being the owner of the home of his father, Henry Benfield. (2) Abraham and (3) Daniel both became farmers and contractors and lumbermen, and are the owners of oil land in Ontario, Canada, where Daniel lived many years, pumping oil from their wells. Both reside near Huff's Church, and live retired. (4) Henry was a shoemaker by trade, but started farming, and later became interested in iron ore mining, in Longswamp township, Berks county, and neighboring localities. This was his vocation for many years. Later he also became a lumberman, in which line of business he continued up to his death. (5) Jacob and (6) Aaron both worked at their trades, but later became tillers of the soil. Both are still living, Jacob in Washington township, near Bechtelsville, and Aaron near Huff's Church. (7) George B. was a farmer all his life, living near Bechtelsville. (8) Samuel, a farmer, finally drifted into the hotel business, living in Lehigh county and having hotels at Wanamakers, Kempton, and Emaus. All these brothers have been very industrious. They are men of means and stand high in social circles. Their descendants are scattered far and wide, and have engaged in various vocations, farmers, mechanics, educators, doctors, prominent business men, etc. Henry Benfield's only daughter, Elizabeth, now deceased, was the wife of Joseph Dotterer.

Most of the history given in the foregoing was contributed by Mr. Harry N. Benfield, son of Aaron Benfield, and now located at Pottstown, Pa. He is more fully mentioned later, in the paragraphs concerning his father.

Abraham Benfield, son of Henry, was born June 21, 1830. He learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed at Norristown some years. He next engaged in lime burning in Washington township, and later hauled ore. In 1869 he bought 169 acres of land in District township, upon which was an old saw and grist mill, built in 1769. He remodeled the mill and put it in operation. He owns another farm in Washington township and a small tract in Hereford, and a limestone quarry in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county. Since 1900 he has lived retired in a tenant house on the old home farm. Though past fourscore years he is well preserved and active, still interested in all that goes on. In 1905 he purchased his father's farm and mill property, including 136 acres. He has since operated both mill and farm. He also has 28 acres of wood and pasture land in the same township. In partnership with his father he owns 100 acres of woodland in District township, and with Frank R. Meck a tract of 20 acres of woodland. With his uncle, Henry Benfield, he conducts a portable sawmill. In 1898 in partnership with Jonas Weiler he formed the Royal Dynamite Co., and for one year they manufactured dynamite, but since then Mr. Benfield has abandoned its manufacture, though he continues to buy and sell it. In 1908 he rented the mill to his son Claude E., who now operates it. He is a Democrat, and in the spring of 1885 was elected justice of the peace of his township, and he has been five times re-elected. For ten years he was committeeman of the township, and though he declined to serve longer, he was again elected. He and family are Reformed members of Huff's Church. BENNIGHOFF FAMILY.

The Bennighoff family of Lehigh county was founded by Valentine Bennighoff, whose name is recorded in the Pennsylvania Archives as having emigrated on the ship Edinburgh, which landed at Philadelphia Sept. 16, 1751, and shortly afterward he settled in Lowhill township, Northampton county (now part of Lehigh), for he took out a land warrant for 32 acres in that district which is dated April 22, 1752.

In 1812, the names of John Bennighoff and Sebastian Bennighoff appear on the assessment list of Lynn township, and both of these men are buried in the cemetery at New Tripoli.

A branch of this family settled in Berks county, for in 1800 the name of Philip Bennighoff appears on the tax list of Albany township, and in 1815, in the same district, the name of William Bennighoff.

Peter Bennighoff, of this family, a farmer, was located in Greenwich township, Berks county. His wife was Polly Haring and they had three sons, William, Benjamin and Peter, and a daughter, Abby, married to Charles Eck. Benjamin, one of the three sons named, was born Jan. 23, 1818, and died April 28, 1884. He was a weaver by trade and also carried on farming, having owned a farm in the township named near the Roth school-house containing 70 acres. His wife was Sarah Spohn and they had nine children: Noah (1842-1907, supervisor of Maxatawny township for 21 years); Mary, married to Abraham Geist; Sarah, married to Henry Derr; Benjamin, resided at Claussville; Moses; Emma; and William; and two others who died young.

John (Johannes) Bennighoff, the ancestor of most of this family name in Lynn township, Lehigh county, was born Dec. 27, 1768, and he died on his farm near New Tripoli, Jan. 23, 1845. He was a wood-worker of rare ability and this came to be transmitted to some of his sons and grandsons. He made wooden plows and harrows, by the aid of which the pioneer settlers tilled the soil. His wife was Elizabeth Daubert, born May 1, 1777, died Jan. 11, 1858, and buried at New Tripoli, and they had a large family of children, among them the following: Heinrich, Daniel, Isaac, John, and Mrs. Catharine Herman, who moved West.

Heinrich Bennighoff was born in Lynn township about the year 1805 and under his father he came to be an exceptionally able wood-worker in making wagons, plows, harrows, rakes, forks and cradles. When thirty years old he had accumulated the sum of $200, and by the aid of this money he moved by team with his family to Seneca county, in Ohio, and there he lived as a wood-worker and farmer until he died. His brother, John, went along with him to take back the horses to Lehigh county which he had hired for the occasion.

He was married to Phillipina Fenstermacher, daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Derr) Fenstermacher, of Lynn township, and they had a number of children.

Daniel Bennighoff was a farmer of Lynn township, his farm being now in the possession of his son Aaron; and he was also an experienced and successful woodworker having made many wagons which were said to have been the best in that section of the county. He was born July 26, 1808, and died Feb. 10, 1896. His wife was Salome Shellhammer, born March 4, 1816, and died Sept. 5, 1893. Their children were: Mary, and Polly, both of whom died in childhood; Daniel; Catharine, married to Levi Clauss, and lived in Schuylkill county; Franklin; Carolina; and Aaron.

Isaac Bennighoff was born Oct. 8, 1814, and died April 25, 1900. He owned part of his father's homestead near Mosserville and was a successful farmer, having left an estate at his decease valued at $30,000. His favorite nephew was Franklin Bennighoff, son of his brother Daniel, who farmed for him for a period of thirty-three years in a most faithful manner and before he died (1891) he sold the farm to this nephew at a reasonable price in appreciation of his long-continued services. He was buried at New Tripoli. He was married to Sarah Sensinger, now the oldest surviving person in Lynn township, having been born Aug. 29, 1814, and being 98 years old. She continues to live on the old homestead and is well cared for by her nephew, Franklin Bennighoff. They had no children.

Daniel E. Bennighoff, son of Daniel, farmer of Lynn township, owns and operates part of the original John Bennighoff homestead, which embraced the farms of Daniel and Franklin Bennighoff. He was born Jan. 30, 1839, and reared as a farmer, and since 1860 he has been farming for himself. The tract was thirty-six acres when he began but he added twelve acres which he purchased. His son, Wilson A., was married to Angie Oswald, and they have three children: Bessie, Howard, and Alice.

FRANKLIN BENNIGHOFF, son of Daniel, is a farmer, located near Mosserville. He was born Feb. 24, 1843, and learned the trade of wheelwright under his father, which he followed for some time; then he engaged at farming for his uncle Isaac, and continued doing so for thirty-three years, when he was encouraged by his uncle to buy the place, who offered it to him at a reasonable price. This was in 1891. The barn was built by John Bennighoff shortly before he died, to take the place of the first building which was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The dwelling house has a year mark, 1837, cut on a stone which is set in the chimney to show when it was built, and this was also by John Bennighoff.

In 1868, he married Leanna Zellner, daughter of Daniel. She died in 1882, aged 36 years. They had eight children: Albert, married to Mabel Oswald; Lewis; George; Ella; Angelina, married to William J. Wertman; Mary; John, married to Mary Moyer; and Francis, married to Jane Bechtel. They reached White Haven, where the father took sick and died. The widow and children, with their dead husband and father, returned to New Tripoli, where he was buried. His wife, who was Kate Hoffman, a sister of Nathaniel Hoffman, died about 1853. She is buried on Hoffman's private burial ground. Three children were born to this family: Catharine, married James Bachman; James, mentioned later; and Phanus, of Kunkel-town, Pa.

The effects of these sufferings followed him for a long time after his return to Heidelberg township. He could move about with difficulty with a cane. As his strength and health gradually returned, he again followed the carpenter trade. In 1868, he moved to Slatington, where he followed his trade until 1870, when he became a teamster, which he followed for nine years, after which he engaged in the coal business, which he followed until 1900, when his son succeeded him.

ALFRED FRANKLIN BERLIN.

In the year 1738 there came from the Palatinate, in Southern Germany, on the ship "Charming Nancy," Abraham Berlin, who immediately after landing went to Easton. By trade he was a blacksmith. In course of time he became one of Easton's foremost citizens, and during the war of the Revolution was elected chairman of "The Committee of Safety" for the then Northampton county. Living carefully and frugally he acquired a competence. He married at Easton, and in course of time there came to him a son, who was named Abraham. He in due time learned the avocation of his father and also became a noted gun-maker. The defeat of the British army is attributed to these fine guns made by him and others in the vicinity, and used in battle by the Pennsylvania German soldiers. He joined the Continental Army but with other gun-makers was ordered back home by the military authorities to make these necessary implements of warfare. He married Maria Hay, an Easton lady, and to them was born on the 14th day of May, 1777, a son, who was also named Abraham. He left Easton and settled at the now village of Berlinsville, in the western part of Northampton county, where he bought a fine farm and plied his trade of blacksmith, which he learned while with his father at Easton. The village was named after him.

Here was born to him the fourth son, Daniel, who was the father of the subject of this sketch. He also learned the trade of blacksmith and moved to Cherryville, same county, where he went into the business of blacksmithing and carriage-maker. He in time became the most prominent citizen in the western part of Northampton county. He was for a term elected treasurer of that county. It was during his term that the jail at Easton was built. He married Catharine Kuntz, and to them came their first son, the subject of this sketch. He, like many another country boy, grew up strong and healthy. At the age of four years he was sent to school a little over a mile away and there began his education. When twelve years old he moved with his uncle to Easton, where for a time he went to school, then to a business college at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which institution he graduated and from there he came to a position in a wholesale house on Broadway, New York. Meeting there Mr. W. R. Lawfer, at one time one of Allentown's most successful business men, he was induced to begin with that firm, Lawfer & Steckel, which he did against the wishes of the firm he was connected with while in New York. He remained with the Allentown firm for seven years. Tired of being held up inside of a store he became a commercial traveller, to which business he has stuck ever since.

Mr. Berlin from his boyhood up was a diligent student, especially of the science of archæology. He became a dilettante collector of American antiquities, gathering in course of time one of the finest private collections on the Atlantic coast. This magnificent collection is now safely housed in separate cases, as the A. F. Berlin Collection, in the rooms of the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society, at Wilkes-Barre, Penna. It is to be regretted that Lehigh county failed to become possessed of it. It is safe to say that at present his magnificent library is the finest and best for educational purposes in the city of Allentown. Not alone has he been a collector of American antiquities, but he has also written much on his favorite science. He was for a year president of the American Archæological Association, for several years editor of The American Archæologist, and assistant editor of The American Antiquarian. He wrote chapter three of Prehistoric Implements, a production much in demand by collectors. As the heading of chapter three of this history shows, honors have been conferred upon him by many learned societies. He has the honor of being named as one of America's eminent citizens, which can be seen in the biographical dictionary of "Who Is Who In America."

In 1908 he was elected prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas, which honor he held for a term of three years.

THE BEST PIONEERS AND SOME OF THEIR DESCENDANTS.

Best, or Bescht, as the name originally was in German. The first persons of that name to come to America, of whom there is any record were three brothers, Jeremiah, Nicholas, and George. These three settled in what is now Williams township, Northampton county, Pa., in 1730. Jeremiah Best bought 213 acres of land from William Allen and received a deed Dec. 7, 1745. The other two brothers probably also purchased adjoining lands. Jeremiah had at least two sons, Jacob and John. He died at quite an old age, about 1787. Oct. 11, 1788 his farm was deeded to his son, Jacob, by John Best, executor of the estate.

Jacob Best was born in America in 1718 and married Catherine, nee ————. They had two sons, John and Conrad, and two daughters, Anna, wife of Andrew Uhler; and Christina, who married Jacob Dech. Jacob Best died Mar. 9, 1789 and his tombstone is in the Hay Cemetery, South Easton, Pa.

Conrad Best was born Nov. 25, 1745. His wife was Hannah, daughter of Cornelius Weigant, of Easton, Pa. They were the parents of John, Jacob, Catherine, wife of Philip Hoffman; Mary; Conrad, Jr.; Elizabeth, wife of Frederick Kreidler, George, Margaret, wife of Abram Stem; Henry and Peter.

June 20, 1770, the deed was granted to the Moravian Bishop, Nathaniel Seidel, for the Nazareth tract of land. An agreement was made Dec. 8, 1772, between "Bischof" Seidel, Conrad Best, of Williams township, and Jacob Dech, of Forks township, for 300 acres of the Western end of this Moravian land at 55 shillings per acre in good Pennsylvania currency. The deed was executed Dec. 31, 1785. This land is about one mile east of Bath, and the farm has been in the possession of the descendants of Conrad Best and Jacob Dech ever since. The former died Sept. 25, 1826. He is buried at the Hecktown church. Jacob Dech was born 1746, died 1833. His wife was born 1751, died 1822. Both are buried in Shoenersville church-yard.

John Best was born Nov. 27, 1769. He married Catherine Fink. Their children were: John, Jr., George, Hannah, wife of Paul Miller; and Elizabeth, wife of Peter Transue. He died Nov. 7, 1839, and is buried at Bath.

George Best, born Feb. 26, 1802, married Elizabeth Kreidler. They had four children: Mary C., wife of Jeremiah Beck; Susanna, wife of Henry Beck; Elizabeth, wife of George H. Dech, and Reuben H. George Best departed this life Feb. 4, 1864. His grave is in Bath Cemetery. His son, Reuben H., purchased the old Best homestead. He was united in marriage with Lydia Remaly. Their children are John G., Oscar H., and Minnie E., wife of Daniel Reinert. She and her husband own and live on the Conrad Best farm. Reuben H. Best died May 31, 1903, aged 62 years.

John G. Best married Annie S. Bauer and they live in Bath, Pa. They have one child, Helen, wife of Albert Leiby.

Oscar H. Best is a busy merchant in Bethlehem, Pa. His wife was Mary E. Sloyer. They have no children.

Nicholas Best, one of the pioneers in Williams township, died there Dec. 8, 1778. His wife, Elisabeth Catherine, was executrix of the estate.

Of their children the names of only two are known to the writer, Christian and Nicholas, Jr.

The aforementioned Conrad Best was well-known and prominent in Northampton county. Among the descendants of his daughter, Christina Dech, are Commodore Wilson Dech, his sister, Mrs. John Stopp, and her sons, Rev. S. A. Bridges Stopp, Allentown; Joseph H. Stopp, Esq., Philadelphia, and John F. Stopp, Los Angeles, California; Mrs. M. C. L. Kline, widow of the late Congressman Kline, and her son, Edwin Keller Kline, Esq.; and her daughter, Miss Claude G. Schankweiler, of Allentown, Pa. Mrs. Rudolph Bapp, of Nazareth, Pa., and her son, Rev. Jacob W. Lazarus, Vinemont, Pa.; Newton C., deceased; George Lazarus, M.D., Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Rev. Luther D. Lazarus, pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran church, West Bethlehem, are also descendants of Jacob and Christina Dech.

There are other descendants of the three Best pioneers in Lehigh and Northampton counties. The writer has given this brief sketch, so that others can more readily trace their ancestral line.

J. A. SCHEFFER.

ANCESTORS OF THE BESTS IN THE UPPER PARTS OF NORTHAMPTON AND LEHIGH COUNTIES, PENNSYLVANIA.

Wilhelm Bescht, born in 1713 (later written William Best), landed in Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1738. He arrived with two hundred and fifty one persons, who came from the Palatinate. This is the country along the River Rhine, Germany, now given in the geography as the Rhine Province and Rheinisch Bavaria. He may have been a relative of the three Best brothers, previously mentioned in this history. At any rate he went to the same section of country and some of the baptismal names of his children and later descendants are the same as theirs. William Best, Sr., secured fertile land along the east bank of the Lehigh river in what is now Lehigh township, Northampton county, Pa., a mile below Walnutport. This was then on the border of the woodland sold by the Indians to Penn. And the country north to the Blue mountains is still known as Indian-land. Here with his family he lived on the frontier, having Indian neighbors.

The eldest son, William, was five years old when the parents came to America. The names of their other children living in 1769 were Henry, born 1748; Barbara; Michael, and Sabilla.

The Best family lived near the Indian trail from the North branch of the Susquehanna river to Bethlehem and Easton, Pa., the road over which Benjamin Franklin led his regiment to Weissport, opposite Lehigh, where the Indians had massacred the Moravian settlers. William Best, senior and junior, were soldiers in the French and Indian War.

Owing to the many hardships endured William Best, Sr., died 1762, aged only 49 years. His grave is in St. Paul's or Indian-land churchyard, near Cherryville. He died intestate or without leaving a will and in 1769 his estate was appraised and the son, William, bought the farm. Michael and Sabilla were then less than fourteen years old or minors. (See Orphans' Court Record, Northampton Co., Book D, pp. 67 and 76.)

A son of William Best, Jr., died in 1769 and a daughter in 1773, who are buried in St. Paul's graveyard, Cherryville, Northampton county, Pa.

In 1773 or 1774 William Best, Jr., sold his property and with his family went to Westmoreland county, Pa., where he purchased 338 acres of land, now the northern part of Greensburg. Here he cleared and cultivated a large farm and prospered. He also had a mill and saw-mill on the north branch of the Sewickley. He had two sons, Henry and Nicholas, and two daughters, Mrs. Christian Ruch and Mrs. John Cherry. The children by the second wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Dorn, were William, Michael, and George, Barbara, married John Scheffer; Susanna Jacob Hauck, and Mary Daniel Eschbach.

William Best was captain of a military company to defend the frontier settlements against the raids of the British and Indians during the Revolution. He and his family were members of the First Lutheran church, Greensburg, Pa., in which he was deacon and elder. June, 1818, he sold 208 acres of his farm and with the money purchased several hundred acres for each of his children in what was then part of Venango county, but is now in the southwestern section of Clarion county, Pa. In 1821 he sold the remainder of his property in Greensburg and went to live near where all his sons and daughters, except Nicholas, had their homes. The latter settled in Armstrong county, near Freeport, Pa.

William Best died in 1823, aged 90 years, and was buried in the cemetery he had given to St. Paul's Lutheran congregation, known as Best's church, in Beaver township, Clarion county, Pa. At the Best reunion near this church in 1901 the historian stated that at that time the descendants of William Best were over nineteen hundred. Most of those living are in Western Pennsylvania, but a considerable number are in the southern and western states. Two of his great grandchildren, namely, the wife of the late Rev. J. B. Fox, who was pastor of the Heidelberg charge from 1889 till his death, and lived at Slatington and the Rev. J. A. Scheffer of Allentown, returned to live in Lehigh county. The Misses Estella and Alberta Fox also had their home in Slatington. Mrs. Fox was a sister of the late Rev. J. A. Kribbs, a brave officer during the Civil War, and former congressman; and Judge G. F. Kribbs, who is one of the graduates of Muhlenberg College. His sons and sons-in-law were industrious and well-to-do farmers and mechanics. And many of their descendants have followed similar occupations, though quite a number have been and are merchants, teachers, ministers, doctors, and lawyers, soldiers and officers in the army, members of the state legislature, congressmen and judges.

William Best, Sr.'s son, Michael, married Eva Catherine Schaeffer. June 8, 1786 a daughter was born to them and was named Barbara. July 2, she was baptized by the Rev. Solomon Frederici, a well-known Lutheran pastor among those early settlers. Her sponsors were Henry Best and wife. According to the census of 1790 Michael Best and wife had three daughters, but no sons. In 1802 the family moved from Heidelberg township, Northampton, now Lehigh county, to Murraysville, Westmoreland county, Pa. Barbara was married to Daniel Andreas (later written Andrews), in 1805. Andreas and his wife, several years afterward returned to Lehigh county, and lived near Slatington, where she died in 1882, in her 96th year. Their descendants still live in that vicinity.

To whom William Best's, Sr.'s, daughters, Barbara and Sabilla, were married, the records of St. Paul's church near Cherryville, do not give, but only the burials. From 1756 to 1888 more than thirty persons by the name of Best were buried there. It is not indicated whether it is the family or married name of the women.

Henry Best (son of William, Sr.), born 1748, is probably the ancestor of all those of the name Best who lived and still reside in the upper part of Northampton and Lehigh counties.

Henry Best was the father of Nicholas Best, born Nov. 23, 1775 and John Best born May 22, 1778. Nicholas Best and wife, Catherine, nee Schleicher, had nine children: Daniel, born 1807; Conrad, born 1810; Christian; Elias; Jacob; Lewis; Mary, Lucy, and Caroline.

Daniel Best married Eliza, daughter of John and Susanna (Guth) Bertsch. He died in 1849 and his widow in 1902. They had the following named children: Susanna, married Amandus Anthony, Stephen, died in Minnesota; Lewis H., and Elias Best, who is a Lutheran minister, and lives in Shelby, Ohio.

Lewis H. Best, born Aug. 1, 1843, married Louisa, daughter of Christian and Mary (Esch) Bilheimer. Their sons and daughters are Sylvester, deceased; George D., of Lincoln, Neb.; Henry O., South Whitehall township; Stephen A.; Walter J.; Franklin L.; Jane, deceased; William H.; Lillie M., married to Richard Peters, and Carrie L., married to Oliver Hausman, all live in Allentown. Lewis H. Best owned and cultivated a farm in North Whitehall township from 1873 to 1905, when he removed to Allentown, where he now lives. He served as school director and deacon of the Lutheran congregation, Unionville, where he and his family were members.

FRANKLIN L. BEST was born Dec. 22, 1871. He was educated in the public school and Kutztown Normal School, taught two terms. In 1891 he accepted a clerkship from H. Leh & Co., and later was with Hess Brothers. In January, 1910, he went into the grocery business at the corner of Ninth and Liberty streets in which he is prospering. He married Nora E., a daughter of Peter J. and Amanda (Hollenbach) Hoffman, of Balliettsville. Their children are Harold F., Grace A., Carl H., Lillian R., and Arline.

Mr. Best was elected school director several times in the Eighth ward and by the section board to the board of control. He is a member of several fraternal orders; and is active in church and Sunday school work.

Conrad Best, son of Nicholas, married Lydia Remely, born 1813. Their eldest son, William W., born 1834, is still living. He was the tender of the first canal lock below Walnutport, fifty-four years, and the company is now giving him pension for his long and faithful services. Of his brothers and sisters, Lewis Best married Jane Kern and lives on the Conrad Best farm near the railroad bridge below Walnutport. Christian went to Logansport, Ind.; Elias was killed in a slate quarry; Mary, married Philip Andrews, of Washington township; Lucy, married Henry Hankee, and Caroline, married Wilson Kelchner, of Walnutport, Pa.

Three of the seven children of William W. Best by his first wife are living, namely: John; Rosie, married to Josiah Gable, lives near her father in Walnutport; and Jennie, to James O. Werth, Philadelphia. The second wife and two of her five children are living: Cora, married to Howard Opplinger, Berlinsville, and Josephine, married to Charles Saeger, lives in Weissport, Pa.

John Best, son of Henry, and wife, Elisabeth, nee Saeger, had these sons and daughters: Adam, born 1808; Jacob; Solomon; David; Elisabeth, married Daniel Kern; and Mary, married to Henry Peter. Adam Best lived at Berlinsville. He had two sons and a daughter: Stephen A.; William J.; and Sarah A., married to George Eckert. The latter's sons were: Adam; James J.; and Tilghman. The daughter was married to Amandus Snyder and lives in Allentown.

Stephen A. Best, born 1839, married Matilda, daughter of Joseph Smith. He died at the age of 52 years and his widow at the age of 67. Their graves are in Indianland church cemetery. They had three children: Lizzie, who married William H. Merkel, residing at Slatington; Joseph A., and Amandus. Stephen A. Best had a farm of 69 acres. He was active in political affairs and served as constable of Lehigh township 18 years. He was interested in the welfare of the Lutheran Church, of which he was a member.

JOSEPH A. BEST, born July 9, 1869, attended school in Berlinsville and Cherryville and later the American Commercial School in Allentown. He learned the stove and tinware business at Slatington, where he was employed for nine years. Mr. Best and William Neff, in 1893, formed a partnership and opened a stove store on North Tenth street, Allentown, and later removed to 34 North Seventh street. January, 1901, they dissolved partnership. The following April he and Lewis A. Acker formed the Joseph A. Best & Company stove and tinware firm, locating at 440 North Tenth street. The firm employs a considerable number of men and is doing a large, paying business.

Joseph A. Best married Annie Gruver. Mrs. Best died in 1900. They had a son, named Russel H. Mr. Best's second wife is Gertrude S., daughter of William Graul. They have these children: Clarence Stephen, Helen Elizabeth, and Willard Joseph. He and family are members of the Lutheran Church. They reside in a fine home at 921 Gordon street, Allentown. Joseph A. Best was elected and re-elected to the select council from the Eighth ward and he is its Democratic county executive committee representative. He is active in the Pioneer Fire Company. He is identified with a number of beneficial and social organizations.

William J. Best, son of Adam, his wife having died, sold his farm a mile east of Walnutport and resides with his children: Mary A., died; Catherine R., married A. M. Minnich, and lives in Allentown; Cora, married Mr. ——— Reinert; William A. Best married Rosina Becker; and Wesley F., Jennie Hunsicker, and lives in Neffsville.

Jacob Best, son of John, born 1821, probably on his grandfather, Henry Best's, farm in the eastern border of Walnutport. He bought a farm in Washington township, Lehigh county, and lived on it. He was a carpenter by trade. He was a Lutheran member of the Unionville congregation, a deacon and one of the building committee that erected the present large church. His wife was Mary, daughter of George Krause. They had the following named children: Rose A., married David Reber; Madina, died; Elias, who lives at Neffsville; and David E., who lives at the old homestead, near Friedens church. Jacob Best died in 1876 and with his wife is buried in the Unionville cemetery. David E. Best was educated in the common school and at Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He was reared on the farm and at an early age showed a fondness for bees. He has made a business of dairying, having as many as forty-four cows, and in 1911 fifty swarms or hives of bees. He is not only a truck farmer, but an apiarist and dairyman. He has the golden Italian bees and makes a specialty of Queen bees, which he sells and sends by mail to Texas and other states, having a large market for them.

Solomon Best (a grandson of John and great-grandson of Henry Best), owned a 100-acre farm where Best's postoffice and station on the Berks and Lehigh railroad now is. His wife was Caroline Peter. They had two sons and two daughters, Wilson, Lewis A., Henrietta J., and one daughter, who died in infancy. He and his family were Lutheran members of the Heidelberg church.

Solomon Best was an economical, thrifty farmer. He erected the buildings in which there has been a general country store for about forty years and Best's postoffice since 1875. The writer remembers seeing him some twenty years ago. He was a typical Best and Pennsylvania German.

Lewis A. Best, son of Solomon, was born 1856, in Washington township, Lehigh county. He worked on his father's farm till he was of age. Then he was in the mercantile or store business and had charge of the post office four years. In 1881 he went to Missouri where he was employed a year as apiarist. His next work was in California, where he was with a man who had three hundred swarms or hives of bees, that made tons of honey every year. Mr. Best having returned to Lehigh county, in 1885, married Rosa J., a daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Blose) Wehr. The next year he began farming on what is known as the Jacob Peter homestead, and where he has since lived. Mr. Peter erected the stone house and log barn that are still used, about one hundred and fifty years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Best have had four children: Bessie L., died; Hattie, married George Hunsicker, Gertie B., and Jessie S., are at home.

Henrietta J. Best is the wife of Jarius Krause. They live and have charge of the business at Best station.

N. B.—The writer of the Best biographical sketches has been able to gather very little information of but a few of the many families of that relationship. He asks that any one having reliable information, or records in old family Bibles, baptismal certificates, and other papers, would let him know that a fuller history may be written. He trusts these brief sketches are correct, and if not, is willing to be corrected. The foregoing paragraphs are published with the hope that it may help others to search for a fuller history of their ancestors.

BIEBER FAMILY.

Jacob Bieber, the ancestor of this branch of the Bieber family, was born Dec. 24, 1731. He settled in Salisbury township in 1786, having purchased the large farm of Frantz Roth, and in that year was taxed on 460 acres. This land was warranted by Henry Roth, grandfather of Frantz, and one of the founders of the Salisbury church, as early as 1738. Jacob Bieber married Christina Steinbrenner and had eight sons and two daughters. He died Oct. 16, 1798, and is buried at Western Salisbury church. Among his children were George, Conrad, Abraham, and John.

George Bieber was born Jan. 25, 1768, and died June 30, 1839. He received 157 acres of his father's land, married Eva Klein, born Nov. 12, 1765, died Nov. 13, 1845, and had six children: David, Solomon, Jonathan, Polly, Elizabeth, and Hannah.

Conrad Bieber, born 1771, married Catharine Biery, and secured 151 acres of his father's land. His son Henry, had a daughter, Anna, who married Jacob Mauser.

Abraham Bieber was born Nov. 22, 1777, and died Dec. 5, 1804, aged 27 years. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Abraham Griesemer, born Oct. 19, 1783, and they had two children: Abraham and Solomon.

Solomon Bieber was born in Salisbury township, March 28, 1803, and died Aug. 22, 1856. He followed farming all his life, and was overseer of the poor, and held other township offices. He was a member of the Western Salisbury Lutheran church, in which he was elder and deacon for many years. He is buried in the church cemetery. His wife was Barbara Gangewere, born May 18, 1807, died Oct. 7, 1861, daughter of Daniel Gangewere, of Hanover township, Lehigh county. They had ten children: Angelina, married Amos Heller; Isabella, died single; Charles, deceased, married Mary Danner; Henry G.; Sylvester, born 1834, died 1905, married Tevillia Kline, was a miller by trade, and had a son, Morris; Emma, married David Danner, and resides at Slatington; Maria, single; James, deceased, who was married, and lived at Frankfort, Ind., where he left a family; Milton, living in Huntington, Ind.; Loraine, married Amandus O. Greenawald, of Stroudsburg, Pa., and who died in 1900.

HENRY GANGEWERE BIEBER was born May 10, 1832, in Salisbury township, where he owned a farm of 89 acres. He was reared on the farm, received a common school education, and later, about 1850, learned the trade of carpenter with Schwartz & Diefenderfer. He followed the trade as a journeyman in Newark, N. J., and Catasauqua for a few years, when he formed a partnership with Abraham Diefenderfer, engaging in the contracting and building business at Allentown for a number of years.

In 1857 he returned to his farm, the Bieber homestead. He was a member of the Salisbury Reformed church and served as deacon, elder, and trustee. He was a Democrat in politics, and was road supervisor of Salisbury township for thirteen years and school director from 1862 to 1865. His first vote was cast for James Buchanan. He died June 2, 1914.

In 1858 he married Eva Elisabeth Kline, daughter of Reuben and Judith (Wieand) Kline, of Salisbury township. They had four children: Ellen, at home; Emma, married Jacob L. Schantz, of Upper Milford; George H., at home; and John R., of Allentown, who married Laura Romig.

BIEHM FAMILY.

Andrew W. Biehm married Mary Coper, whose father was an officer in Washington's army.

Their only child was a son, Henry W. Biehm, who was born April 21, 1834. He was reared upon the farm and educated in the public schools. He married Julia Ann Kline. Issue: Andrew W., of Emaus; Annie (Mrs. L. Sones of the Blue Church); Oscar J. (was a veterinary surgeon); and Charles F. Biehm.

CHARLES F. BIEHM, Justice of the Peace of Center Valley, is a son of Henry W., and was born March 3, 1877, in Upper Saucon township, Lehigh county. He was reared upon the farm and was educated in the public schools until 18 years of age after which he attended the Keystone State Normal school, at Kutztown, Pa., graduating in the class of '98. He began to teach the same year in Upper Saucon township, also taught at Emaus. In politics he is a Democrat; was registration assessor of the district for four years; was appointed by Gov. Edwin Stuart, in 1910, as Justice of the Peace of Saucon township, and in 1911 was nominated by the Democrats and endorsed by the Republicans and elected without opposition. His term of office expires in 1918. He served as superintendent of the Sunday School in the Union Chapel at Centre Valley for seven years and also was a trustee of Union Chapel Association. He is a member of the Reformed congregation, of Blue Church, of which he was a deacon for two years.

He was married to Sarah R. Wireback, a daughter of Jacob and Amanda (Schantz) Wireback. Two children bless their union, namely: Leroy W. and Arline E. Biehm.

BIERY FAMILY.

The founder of the branch of the family established in Lehigh county was Joseph Biery, a native of Oberland, in the Canton of Bern, Switzerland. The old form of the name was "Bieri" and is so written at the present day in Switzerland. The family is probably of French origin, a branch of which, however, was located in Bern as early as 1511.

Joseph Biery, the emigrant, was born in the year 1703. He was a man of position and property in his native land, and came to America, arriving at Philadelphia, in the ship, "Samuel," commanded by Hugh Percy, taking the oath of allegiance at the Colonial Court House, soon after landing on Aug. 27, 1739. Among his fellow passengers were Sebastian, Christopher, Philip, and Casper Doll, and their sisters, Catharine, Barbara, Margaretha, and Elizabeth. The friendship formed during the long voyage, ripened into a closer tie, when Elizabeth Doll became, soon after their arrival, the wife of Joseph Biery.

Accompanied by the members of his wife's family, Joseph Biery proceeded to Oley, in Berks county, where they sojourned for a brief period, removing subsequently to Ruscombmanor, on the Little Lehigh creek, in what is now known as Longswamp, in Berks county. Here he acquired, nearly a thousand acres of land. In addition to being a large land-owner, he built and operated a saw-mill, grist-mill, and an iron forge.

His enterprises became known as "Biery's Mills" and are so named on Surveyor-General Nicholas Scull's map of eastern Pennsylvania, in 1759. He was a prominent member of the Reformed church at Longswamp, which was organized long before 1750. In the records of the church his name appears as the largest contributor for the building of a church in 1748. He was also the treasurer of the congregation as well as one of the two members composing the "building committee."

His brother-in-law, Christopher Doll, in a will dated the 24th day of June, 1751, bequeaths to him his estate of two hundred acres in consideration of which he is to maintain "his sister, Catharina Doll during her life" and to pay certain legacies to his brother Philip and "other sisters." Caspar Doll became a resident of Plainfield township, Northampton county, and served as a captain of the Revolution.

Joseph Biery entered into a certain agreement with his two sons, Henry and Philip, dated the 21st day of May, 1766, that "they should have all his lands and part of his personal estate, on condition that each of them should pay to their sister, Anna Margareta, the sum of seventy-five pounds and also maintain him and his wife during their natural lives." He died in the early part of February, 1768, leaving no will. Letters of administration were granted to his widow, Feb. 10, 1768. He left three children: Henry, Philip, and Anna Margareta, the wife of Peter Keyser, of Macungie.

Philip Biery disposed of his property in Berks county before the year 1786, removing from Longswamp soon after. No record has been found, however, showing where he made his new home though it has been thought that he settled in Virginia. The only trace of his after career is found in a baptismal record of the First Reformed church, at Lancaster, Pa, where Susan, daughter of Philip and Elizabeth Biery, born July 2, 1791, was baptized Sept. 7, 1791.

Philip Biery was evidently named after his maternal uncle, Philip Doll. His wife's name was Maria Elizabeth, as shown by the church records at Longswamp, which also show the following baptisms of their children: Anna Margaretha, June 7, 1772; Maria Catharina, Oct. 23, 1774; Johannes, born Nov. 5, 1776; Daniel, born Aug. 16, 1779; Maria, born Aug. 5, 1786, Lehigh Church.

Henry Biery, the eldest son and heir-at-law of Joseph Biery, was born on the Biery homestead, at Longswamp, March 25, 1741. He resided on the homestead with his brother, Philip, during the lifetime of their father. He had acquired other landed property before entering into his inheritance, and was rated as one of the wealthiest men in Berks county.

Desiring to locate in Whitehall township in Lehigh county, he sold his properties to George Schall, of Earl township, Berks county, the deed thereof bearing date April 6, 1785. George Schall was a brother-in-law and close friend of Henry Biery. His wife was Catharine Newhard, of Whitehall township, a sister of Henry Biery's wife. The Biery homestead at Longswamp in recent years, was owned by the Trexler family.

Henry Biery, soon after the sale of his property to George Schall, purchased a plantation of several hundred acres in the neighborhood of the Egypt church, in Whitehall township, where he made his new home. He married, in 1764, Maria Salome, daughter of Michael Neuhard. (See Newhard Family.) Henry Biery, after his removal to Egypt, soon took a prominent part in the affairs of the township and of the Reformed Church, of which the Biery family since the days of Zwingli have been staunch supporters. His children inter-married with the leading families of the county, and their descendants to this day have been closely identified with the material civic and political development of the county. He died May 1, 1804, leaving a large estate which was divided among his children of whom he had thirteen, two of whom died in infancy. His widow, Maria Salome, survived him twenty-five years, dying Jan. 12, 1829. Their remains are buried in the Egypt church-yard. A tombstone in good preservation marks the last resting-place of Maria Salome Biery. The first of their children were born at Longswamp, the remainder in Whitehall township.

Joseph Biery, born Nov. 5, 1766; died in infancy. Henry Biery, born Oct. 1, 1768. Frederick Biery, born April 22, 1770. David Biery, born Feb. 19, 1772. Maria Salome Biery, born Jan. 30, 1773. Maria Magdalena Biery, born March 24, 1776. Anna Margaretha Biery, born June 2, 1778. Johan Peter Biery, born July 12, 1780. Barbara Biery, born June 5, 1728. Abraham Biery, born April 21, 1784. Maria Catharina Biery, born June 28, 1786. John Jacob Biery, born Nov. 9, 1787. Elizabeth Biery, born April 8, 1791.

Henry Biery or "Beary," as he wrote his name, the founder of Bearytown, Seneca county, New York, the second son of Henry Biery, was born at Longswamp, Berks county, Pa., Oct. 1, 1768. In the deed of partition "between Henry Biery and his brother, Frederick Biery, for property located in Hanover township, now in the borough of Catasauqua, bearing date, Oct. 1, 1802, the names of both brothers are spelled

"Beary" in the body of the deed, while they vary in the signatures; Henry signing himself "Beary," and Frederick spelling the name "Biery." The wives of the brothers, who also joined in the deed, signed their names in the Swiss form of "Bieri."

Henry Biery was married on May 5, 1799, to Maria Catharine Ruch, born Oct. 30, 1775, the daughter of Lorenz Ruch and sister of Brigadier-General Peter Ruch, a soldier of the War of 1812. He and his younger brother, Frederick, purchased on the 30th of July, 1801, from their kinsman, Jacob Newhard, the old grist-mill and saw-mill and one hundred acres of land on Catasauqua creek, now within the borough limits of Catasauqua.

Henry Beary removed to Seneca county, New York before the year 1819, where he purchased a large tract of military lands. He soon established a business center, first known as "Beary's Corners," but which subsequently grew into Bearytown, by which name it is known to this day, a beautiful, typical New York state village.

Henry Beary was one of the most popular men in Seneca county, his place was a favorite gathering place for military organizations on general training days, and also for political conventions. A quaint old stone church building in which the members of the Reformed congregation worship, stands opposite Henry Beary's old home. In the graveyard in the rear of the building lie the remains of many of the Beary family. A granddaughter of Henry Beary in recent years presented a chime of bells to the congregation. Henry Beary died Jan. 6, 1836, and his wife, Catharine, January 22, 1863.

The pastor of this congregation for over sixty years (1821-1882), was the Rev. Diedrich Willers, D.D., who studied theology under the Rev. Dr. Jacob Christman Becker. Through the instrumentality of Henry Beary he received a call to the Bearytown church, the only charge he ever served. Dr. Willer's daughter, Margaret, became the wife of Henry Beary.

Knauss, a soldier of the Revolution and granddaughter of Judge John Griesemer, a patriot and soldier of the Revolution and member of the Northampton County Committee of Safety.

Frederick Biery became a resident of what is now known as Catasauqua in 1801. The Biery homestead, a dwelling-house on Race street, located near the ancient dam, a great stone building, with massive walls two feet thick, was built as early as 1760, and probably earlier by the owners of the mill. It was remodeled by Frederick Biery in 1803 or 1804. Frederick Biery was a man of unusual business ability and soon established a thriving business, adding to his grist- and saw-mills, a fulling-mill. He also carried on farming, but his chief concern was to build up Biery's Port as a business center. The beautiful stone buildings he erected at various times near his mills are lasting monuments to his good taste. He also established a ferry across the Lehigh river and in 1824 he built one of the first chain bridges in the United States, which less than ten years afterwards was swept away by the flood of 1841.

Frederick Biery took an active part in the affairs of Hanover township and frequently held office. He was a staunch adherent of the Reformed Church, and in politics was a Federalist and Whig. He was married for a second time, April 26, 1827, to the widow Catherine Dorney, nee Frederick. He died Aug. 31, 1846, and was buried in the graveyard at the Shoenersville church.

Michael Biery was born Aug. 2, 1739, and came to America on Oct. 1, 1754, on the ship, "Phoenix." BILLIG FAMILY.

The Sixteenth Century is one of the most notable periods of all history, for then the great masses began to realize that their consciences were dominated by the priests, while their lords regarded them as vassals and mere chattels. John Calvin, born in 1509, in Picardy, France, became the great spiritual leader of the oppressed Huguenots. Between the Revocation of the Edict at Nantes in 1685 and the Edict of Toleration in 1787, the situation was terrible, and thousands of people fled in poverty to America. Among this number were the Adam, Brobst, Bailey, Billig, Frees and other families, who settled in Allemangel, in Berks and Lehigh counties, in Pennsylvania.

Johann Arnold Billig emigrated on the ship "Pink Mary," which landed at Philadelphia on Sept. 29, 1733. In the year 1752 he settled in Allemangel, and there seven years later he and his son Francis were taxable residents, the former then paying a tax of eight pounds and the latter of seven pounds. The Federal census of 1790 records "Widow" Billig as the head of a family of eight children, three being sons under sixteen years of age. She lived in Greenwich township, where members of the family still live. The Billigs are scattered over Berks, Schuylkill and Lehigh counties.

At the Grimville church, in Berks county, is buried Catharine Hoffman, who was married to Heinrich Billig. She was born June 7, 1780, and died Feb. 17, 1826.

Johannes Billig, son of Michael and Magdalena, was born Nov. 29, 1806, and died Oct. 31, 1852. His wife, Hannah, nee Schlenker, was born in 1805, and died in 1882. His wife was Elizabeth Spohn, and their children were: Sarah (married Frank Kramer of Alburts); Hettie (married S. J. Miller of Krumsville); Emma (married Geo. E. Rothermel of Guthsville); George (of Claussville), and Rosa (married James Lawrence.)

Heinrich Billig was a farmer on a tract of land upwards of 200 acres, situated in Lynn township, Lehigh county, one mile south-west of Lynnport, on the south side of the Ontelaunee creek, and this homestead is now the property of Benjamin Henry. He was a Lutheran member of the Jacksonville church. He was born March 1, 1777, and died October 3, 1859, aged over 82 years. In the early part of his life he lived near Lynnville church; but later he bought a 58-acre farm in a hilly section of the township, locally known as "Die Schweitz," and there he died December 28, 1866, in the 67th year of his age. This farm now belongs to David H. Fetherolf. He and his family were members of the Lutheran congregation at the New Jerusalem church.

His wife was Eva Catharine Rausch, born December 27, 1800, and died July 21, 1851, in the 51st year of her age. He married Mary Oswalt. They were the parents of nine children: Jacob, Peter, Charles, David, William, Catherine, Mary, Elizabeth and Margaret.

For a period of twenty years he conducted business at No. 718 Penn street, where he became well known.

Owing to continuous indoor confinement, his failing health caused him to make a change of occupation and location. He purchased a small tract of land in Exeter township, where he resided about two years and a half, when his health had so much improved that he returned to Reading and opened a shop at No. 122 South Eighth street, and later removed to 343 North Eighth street, where he continued until his retirement from business, in 1881. He died at his home on June 2, 1901, at the age of 79 years; was interred in the Charles Evans cemetery.

In 1869 he removed to Allentown, Pa., and established himself in business on Hamilton street, where he successfully conducted a chair shop for a period of four years. In 1873 he entered the United States mail service as a railway postal clerk, which position of trust and responsibility he filled for a period of 14 years, running on various lines of roads throughout Pennsylvania.

In 1887 he resigned his position and established himself in the mercantile business in Allentown, opening a store at Fifth and Union streets. Here he conducted a grocery store for four years, at the end of this period he was appointed by Mayor Allison a sanitary inspector of the city of Allentown, Pa., he being the first appointee in this department. After a period of about one year, he was appointed superintendent of the city water works, and in 1897 he accepted the position of superintendent of the Allentown Steam Heat and Power Company, located at South Hall street. BLANK FAMILY.

The pioneer of this early settled Pennsylvania family was Adam Blank. He came to Salisbury township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, at an early period. There he owned a large farm and at his death left a large estate which was divided between his widow Margaret for whom he made ample provision in the will, and the following children: John George; George Adam; Christopher; John; Anna Margaret; Catharine; and Anna Elizabeth. The will was made Aug. 19, 1765, and was probated on Oct. 1, of the same year. It is of record at Easton, in Will Book I, page 1. He died between these two dates. The executors of the will were George Blank and Peter Boger.

John George Blank, apparently the oldest son of the pioneer, Adam, was born in 1729, and died in Upper Saucon township in 1799. He was married to Elizabeth, a daughter of Valentine Steimetz, and after the death of his father-in-law succeeded to and settled upon his estate. He died in April, 1799. The will refers to him as a yeoman considerably advanced in years. Items of the will follow: "My son George shall have my farm in Upper Saucon, containing 366 acres. My daughters Barbara, Magdalena and Elizabeth each shall have eight hundred pounds of lawful money. The sum of eight hundred pounds shall be equally divided between Elizabeth and Catharine Gerhardt, my granddaughters. The will was made Oct. 20, 1798, and was probated at Easton in Will Book III, page 167, on May 14, 1799.

The Penna. Archives record that Adam, John, John George, and Peter Blank served in the Revolutionary War from Northampton county; also that Christopher Blank on June 8, 1758, owned a pack horse in Whitehall township, and that he paid a tax of sixteen pounds in 1762.

The following two items are taken from the Blue Church Marriage Records:

"Johann Blank on 4 May, 1758, and Eva Elisabeth Beil, Balthasar Beil's daughter, from Upper Saucon."

"Widower Adam Blank and Anna Margretha Weiland, Adam Schäfer's widow, were married Nov. 30, 1758."

Charles F. Blank, of Sunbury, Pa., is the senior member of the extensive milling concern trading under the firm name of Blank & Gottshall, Sunbury, Pa.

Mr. Blank was born Oct. 31, 1851, in Upper

Saucon township, this county; attended the public schools at Emaus and Allentown; worked at various avocations until the age of eighteen years, when he learned the carpenter trade at Cetronia, and followed the same as a journeyman, as well as the millwright trade which he commenced in 1875 until in 1888. He then formed a partnership with William B. Gottshall who was formerly with the Wolf & Hamaker Company, at Allentown, and like himself a miller by experience. Messrs Blank & Gottshall came to Sunbury in the employ of a Chambersburg firm to remodel the historic old "Haas Mill." They soon leased this property and successfully operated it until 1895, by which time they had completed the large mill they since occupy. Their main building is 40 by 230 feet, with a two story addition 50 by 115 feet, with other large buildings, including the engine house. The business interests of Blank & Gottshall are very large. Besides trading very extensively in all kinds of flour and feed, they are extensive dealers in cement, plaster, and similar commodities. Their principal brands of flour are the celebrated "B & G's Best," "Flaky Loaf," and "White Cloud." They are also the manufacturers of widely used buckwheat and pan-cake flour. The daily capacity of the flour-milling equipment is as follows: Two hundred barrels of wheat, seventy-five barrels of rye; 100 barrels of buckwheat and cornmeal. Besides, they manufacture about forty tons of chop daily, the B. & G. cattle and poultry food, also the B. & G. Chick and Hen Food which has an extensive sale in Pennsylvania and throughout the middle states. Their hay shed is forty by sixty feet and the grain elevator has a capacity of 40,000 bushels. The firm has shown their enterprise in the completeness of their plant which faces the Susquehanna river and it runs parallel with the P. & R. railroad tracks. The firm also has siding connection with the Pennsylvania railroad lines. An engine with a 150 horse power supplies the motive power of this great enterprise. This industry is one substantial factor in the prosperity of Sunbury, where Mr. Blank is one of the valuable, substantial, intelligent, public-spirited and respected citizens. Not only is he prominent in the business life of Sunbury and of Central Pennsylvania, but in church and the social life he occupies an important place. Both Mr. and Mrs. Blank are active members of the First Reformed Church, of Sunbury, and he is a member of Maclay Lodge No. 632, F. & A. M.

REV. CALVIN AUGUST BLIEM.

Calvin A. Bliem was born April 9, 1833, in Northampton county, Pa., died in Allentown, May 14, 1911, aged 78 years 1 month and 5 days. He was the son of David and Susanna (Boyer) Bliem farmers of Northampton county, Pa. He received a good education in the public schools and also attended a college. In early boyhood he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for some years, after which he operated his father's homestead farm of 140 acres. He remained here for some years, when in the early seventies he sold his farm and removed to Allentown, locating at first on North Eighth street, where he built a home and occupied it until 1902, when he built the fine residence, No. 829 Linden Street, where he resided until his death. He built and owned several other houses.

In politics he was a Republican. He filled the office of school director in Allentown, was a public spirited citizen, possessed quiet and unassuming manners and was devoted to his church, his home and to his faithful wife.

His religion was one of admiration and worthy of emulation. It is best told in the words written at the time of his death, by the Rev. F. S. Borkey, and published in The Evangelical, as follows:

Rev. Calvin A. Bliem was born in Northampton county, Pa.; was united in wedlock to Matilda Sanders, in 1855, and the Lord permitted them to enjoy 56 years of happy wedded life together. He was converted when 22 years of age and soon after felt the call of God to the active ministry. In 1872 he was licensed by the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Church as a preacher on trial and appointed Junior preacher with F. Seachrist on Lehigh circuit. He served one year, then located and gave his life to the church as a devoted layman. For many years he was a teacher in the Sunday school and served the church as a class leader. At the time of his death he was teacher of the German Bible class in the Sunday school and the leader of the Tuesday evening German prayer meeting class. He was a constant student of the Bible and a faithful leader of his prayer meeting. His members speak appreciatingly of his spiritual exhortations and earnestness in prayer. He never missed his class on account of rain, but was always at his post. He was a faithful member of old Trinity United Evangelical Church, a great friend of his pastors, and his home was always open with a cordial welcome to all the visiting preachers of the church. Our brother enjoyed good health up to within two weeks of his death. On May 1st he suffered a stroke of paralysis, which only partially disabled him, but a second stroke followed on Thursday of the same week, which left him practically helpless in body, though his mind was remarkably clear to the end. He frequently expressed his consciousness of the nearness of his Saviour to him in his sickness and of the joyous hope of everlasting life. He quietly fell asleep May 14, 1911. The funeral services were in charge of the pastor, assisted by Bishop W. F. Heil and "Uncle" Butz. Our brother is survived by his widow and two sisters —Mrs. Amanda Laubach and Miss Mary Bliem.

Rev. Calvin A. Bliem, on Jan. 2, 1855, married Matilda Ann Sanders, born at Cedarville, Pa. May 23, 1837, daughter of George and Rebecca (Brobst) Sanders and grand daughter of John Sanders and Daniel Brobst. Of this union there was no issue. This couple lived together in happy wedlock for upwards of 56 years. Since the death of Mr. Bliem, Mrs. Bliem has been tenderly cared for by her niece, Mrs. W. L. Guth, who together with her mother make their home with Mrs. Bleim. Mrs. Bleim is a true Christian woman, a member of the United Evangelical church and an active worker in the various societies of the church. She is noted for her many acts of charity, her devotion to her late husband and to her home.

George Sanders, father of Mrs. Bliem, was a farmer. He married Rebecca Brobst and they were the parents of the following named children: Rebecca, widow of Levi Eberhart, residing in Chicago, Ill.; Amanda, who died in young womanhood; Matilda Ann, now the widow of Rev. Calvin A. Bliem; Hannah, who married Lewis Rhinehart and resides in South Allentown, Pa.; Francis, who died from shot wounds received in the war of '61; Uriah, who was also a soldier in the Civil War, who died in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Emma, widow of Harris Bortz, who makes her home with her sister, Mrs. Bliem, as elsewhere noted. George Sanders died in Cedarville, Pa., and his widow died in Allentown; both are buried in Cedarville cemetery. They were both members of the Evangelical church and pious people.

BLOSS FAMILY.

Compiled by Clinton J. Bloss.

The Bloss family whose descendants are especially numerous in Lehigh and in Carbon counties, trace their ancestry to the progenitor, Conrad Bloss, who emigrated from southern Germany. He sailed from Rotterdam on the ship Francis and Elizabeth, commanded by Capt. Geo. Worth, and landed at Philadelphia Sept. 21, 1742. Besides Conrad Bloss, we have record of the following coming to America and landing at Philadelphia.

Geo. Conrad Bloss, ship Lydia, John Randolph Capt. from Rotterdam, qualified Oct. 13, 1749.

Jacob Bloss, ship Two Brothers, Thomas Arnt Capt., from Rotterdam, qualified Aug. 28, 1750.

Michael Blaass, ship Neptune, Geo. Smith, Capt., from Rotterdam, last from Gosport, qualified Oct. 7 1755.

Peter Blaass, ship Chance, Charles Smith, Capt., from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, qualified Sept. 23, 1766.

It is not known what relationship existed, if any, between Conrad Bloss and each of the four persons just mentioned; doubtless some kinship did exist. Nor do we know up to the present time of living descendants from any one of them except from Conrad Bloss. Conrad Bloss, a weaver by trade, settled in Washington township, this county, then Heidelberg township, Northampton county. The exact time is not known, but as early as Oct. 4, 1749, he took out a warrant for twenty-five acres of land in Bucks county, which then embraced all of what is now Lehigh county. On May 30, 1750, he took out a warrant for a tract of fifty-six acres and thirteen perches called "Issenberg"; on May 9, 1765, he purchased from John Engel Thomas a tract called "Manheim," which was taken out by a warrant dated Oct. 19, 1757, for 139 acres; on April 9, 1767, he purchased from the heirs of Jacob Shellhammer a tract called "Berlin" of fifty-eight acres. The last three tracts are embraced in a patent that was granted April 10, 1767, to Conrad Bloss, by Thomas Penn and Richard Penn. On Aug. 25, 1765, he made application for twenty-five acres and in pursuance of warrant No. 623 dated Aug. 14, 1766, there was granted to him Aug. 25, 1766, a tract of twenty-five acres and fifty perches called "Schwabstadt."

Another warrant was taken out for twenty-eight acres and thirty-two perches on Aug. 14, 1766. The total land he owned amounted to 331 acres and ninety-five perches. In the Proprietary Tax list of 1772, Conrad Bloss, farmer, is assessed one pound and four shillings. The first official act in recognition of Heidelberg as a township was made at the October term of court 1752, when Conrad Bloss was appointed constable for it. On Aug. 6, 1776, Conrad Bloss was a member of Capt. Nicholas Kern's company, in camp at Perth Amboy, N. J., which composed part of the Flying Camp of Ten Thousand men commanded by Col. Hart in the Battle of Long Island. This was the Third company in the First Battalion of the Northampton county Associators. It is history that most of the men of the First Battalion were either killed or wounded in the engagement with the British on Long Island, Aug. 27, 1776. Doubtless Conrad Bloss lost his life in this battle as we find no trace of him after this date.

The Heidelberg Reformed Church records in 1781 record his wife Anna Magdalena, as a widow, who acted sponsor for her granddaughter, of the same name, a child of her son John George Bloss. The Federal Census of 1790 record "Lanah Plose" as a widow in Heidelberg township. In the history of the Heidelberg Church by Rev. William Helfrich, he mentions Conrad Bloss and George Bloss as heads of families who helped to build the second church. Magdalena Bloss lived with her son-in-law Peter Seidel, five years prior to her death, which occurred in 1803, having attained the age of about 77 years. Doubtless she is buried on the old cemetery adjoining Heidelberg church, although no trace is found of her. Peter Seidel was appointed administrator of her estate, Aug. 8, 1803. Conrad and Magdalena Bloss had at least eight children, viz: John George, Susanna, Eva Elizabeth, Daniel, Peter, Henry, Sonia (?) and Conrad.

Concerning the other four persons who came to America; namely, George Conrad, Jacob, Michael, and Peter Bloss, no more is known at the present time than what is noted in the following: According to the Lutheran Church records of New Hanover (Falckner Swamp) Church in Montgomery county, George Conrad Bloss was married to Mary Catherine ———. BLUMER FAMILY.

The Blumer family is descended from Othmar Blumer, who lived at Luchsingen, on the river Linth, in the canton of Glarus, Switzerland, and who was church steward at Schwanden in the sixteenth century. Schwanden was a town which had many converts in the time of the Reformation and in 1528 the images were taken out of the church and the mass was abolished in 1543. Othmar Blumer had two sons: Wolfgang, governor of the province of Werdenberg in 1580, and Esaias. Othmar Blumer, son of Esaias, had a son, Peter Blumer, who was born in 1581 and died in 1669. In 1654 he was governor of the free cities. His son, John Jacob Blumer, was governor of the county of Baden in 1661. He married Agatha Zeiflin, and had five sons. His fourth son, John Henry Blumer, was born in 1663, and became pastor of the church at Grabs, in the canton of St. Gallen. Grabs is included in the province of Werdenberg, and is situated in the valley of the Rhine, among beautiful mountain scenery, not far from Wildhaus, the birthplace of Zwingli, and is mentioned in history as early as the year 948. John Henry Blumer had a son, Peter, who died an officer in the army of France, and John Jacob.

John Jacob Blumer became the pastor at Betschwanden and Grabs, and married, May 3, 1726, Salome Shindler, of Mollis. He died in 1746.

He had five sons: Conrad, born April 6, 1727, who became an officer in the Swiss regiment in the service of the King of Sardinia and died at Alexandria; John Henry, born 1728, who became a surgeon and major in a Swiss regiment and died at Breslau; John Jacob, born Sept. 28, 1729, who died a cadet in the Meyer regiment at Taggis; Fridolin, born Feb. 17, 1732, who died on the voyage to America; and Abraham.

Rev. Abraham Blumer was born in Grabs, in the province of Werdenberg, then in the canton of Glarus, now a part of the canton of St. Gallen, on Dec. 14, 1736, according to the old style calendar, or December 25th, new style. He attended the German school until his tenth year, when his father died, and his relatives having determined that he should enter the ministry, he was sent to the Latin school, where he remained seven years. He then entered the University of Basel, Aug. 1, 1754, and was ordained a minister of the Reformed Church on June 8, 1756. He became chaplain of the Swiss regiment Meyer, in the service of the King of Sardinia, on July 11, 1757, and served until September, 1766, when he left the service and became vicar to a sickly minister and tutor in languages and sciences to several young people until the beginning of 1770. At this time the desire to go to America, which he had felt in his younger years, again awakened and he determined to go on a voyage to Holland and England.

Rev. M. Planta, pastor of the German Reformed church in London, strongly urged his appointment to a charge in America in a letter dated June 26, 1770. Rev. Blumer appeared before the deputies of the North and South Holland Synods at the Hague, on Aug. 23, 1770, and was chosen a minister to be sent to Pennsylvania. He left Amsterdam, Sept. 6, 1770, and after a long and hard voyage arrived in New York in the latter part of January, 1771. In February, he appeared before the Cœtus in Philadelphia, and was placed in the Whitehall charge. On Feb. 17, 1771, he became pastor of Allentown, Egypt, Jordan and Schlosser's (now Union) congregations, in this charge, and served until May 17, 1801, a period of thirty years and three months. During his pastorate the number of his baptisms was 2,517, and he confirmed 1,137 persons. He was clerk of the Reformed church Cœtus in 1773 and 1784, and president in 1774 and 1785. He was a finely educated man, versed in the English, German, French and Dutch languages, and a master of Latin, Greek and Hebrew. He received a call from the French Reformed church of New York city in 1774, which he declined in a letter written in the French language. In 1785, he purchased 195 acres of land along the Jordan creek, north of the present "Iron Bridge," on which a house built by him still stands.

He lived retired on his farm but was frequently called upon to officiate at weddings, baptisms and funerals among his former parishioners, who greatly admired him. It was during his pastorate of Zion church, Allentown, and probably with his knowledge, that the Liberty Bell was concealed in the church. During his pastorate, also, new stone churches were built by the Allentown, Egypt, and Union congregations. Rev. Blumer, in his report in 1785, stated that his yearly salary was £100, with £20 perquisites, and £95 expenses. He married, Feb. 25, 1772, Susanna Maria Frary, who was born in 1743 and died Jan. 1, 1825. Rev. Blumer died April 23, 1822, aged 85 years. He and his wife are buried in the old churchyard at Jordan Reformed church. They had five children, the eldest of which died soon after birth in December, 1772. He was the son of Samuel Musick, of Whitehall, who died in 1780, and his wife, Dorothea Musgening. Anthony Musick was sheriff of Lehigh county from 1817 to 1820. Their children were: Aaron, Josiah, Reuben W., and Henrietta.

Jacob Blumer, the eldest son, was born in Whitehall township, April 13, 1774. He was well educated by his talented father and being of a mechanical turn of mind became a clockmaker, and made many of the tall clocks now so highly prized. In the War of 1812 he was First Lieutenant of Capt. John F. Ruhe's company, called the "Northampton Blues." He was town clerk of Allentown from 1812 to 1829. He died Sept. 5, 1830, and was buried on the old Allentown cemetery with military honors. He married, June 20, 1802, Catharine Rhoads, only daughter of Judge Peter Rhoads. She was born April 26, 1780, and died Dec. 25, 1817. She was a talented and accomplished woman, the idol of her father, who gave her everything she desired. About 1795, he purchased a pianoforte for her, the first in the town, and she also had a maid, who dressed her hair in the elaborate fashion of the day and starched and ironed the large ruffles worn at that time. Her silhouette is reproduced at the end of the nineteenth chapter in the first volume of this work. Mrs. Blumer died while several of her children were still small.

REV. JOHN PHILIP BOEHM AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

Rev. John Philip Boehm, the ancestor of one of the earliest Pennsylvania families, was born in the Palatinate, Germany, in the year 1683, son of Philip Lewis Boehm, a Reformed minister at Machenberchen, near Hauau. Rev. John Philip was a pioneer preacher and came to America as early as 1720. He brought with him "testimonials that he had been for about seven years a faithful parochial school-teacher, and precentor in the Reformed church of the city of Worms, and that he had been driven thence by the Roman Catholics for holding the Reformed faith." These testimonials, read in the light of the law and customs of those days bear eloquent witness to his talents and attainments. In the year 1725 through great pleading by the inhabitants of Montgomery county, he became the unordained pastor at Falkner Swamp, Skippack and White March.

Of Father Boehm's temporal circumstances and of his descendants another will give a sufficient account. We will simply add that he carried on an extensive correspondence and that it was his custom to preserve carefully all letters, documents and records which pertained to the business of the church. For the preservation of these valuable papers, he had made a large iron-bound chest. After his death, this chest passed from one to another of his descendants until at last it found its ways into the garret of a house on Third street, Philadelphia.

Its history was forgotten, and its contents, unappreciated, were eventually destroyed. In the words of Harbaugh, "there is no use in either weeping or growing indignant. The folly has been perpetrated. It was a small trouble and required little wit and wisdom, to burn those records of historical facts, but no amount of pains and research can ever restore them to the church." Whoso readeth, let him understand.

First: Father Boehm did not despair of small beginnings. He gathered the fragments that nothing be lost. He watched over them, ministered unto them and when God called him to come up higher, the work went on gathering strength and has continued unto the present day.

Second: Father Boehm had a high regard for sacred things.

Third: Father Boehm believed in law and order.

Fourth: Father Boehm was a noble character and stood for righteousness and the things not made of hands eternal in the heaven.

This ancestor was married to Anna Maria Sherer and they had six children: Anthony William; Anna Marie; Sebina; Elizabeth; Maria Philippina and John Philip.

The records show that John Philip Boehm became a land owner on the Saucon Creek, at what is now Hellertown, in Lower Saucon township, Northampton county, as early as February 5, 1740, A. D., and that on May 16, 1743, he took out a second warrant, containing 103 acres. The first warrant was for 200 acres. The records further show that on Sept. 13, 1743, John Philip Boehm and Anna Maria, his wife, conveyed unto their eldest surviving son, Anthony Philip Boehm, "for natural love and affection and for better perferment in the world for divers other good causes," a tract of land in Whitpain township, Philadelphia county; that by indenture dated Nov. 13, 1762, Anthony Philip Boehm obtained from the Penns three tracts in Upper Saucon township, now Lehigh county, the first tract was twenty and one-half acres; the second tract was for thirty-eight acres; the third tract contained sixty-eight acres.

BORTZ FAMILY.

There were three Bortz brothers who emigrated from Germany before the Revolutionary War and landed in Philadelphia. Their names were Henry, John Jacob and George.

Mention is made in Rupp's "Thirty Thousand Names of Immigrants in Pennsylvania," of Ludwig Bortz, who was one of the first settlers in this county, but it is not known whether he was related to the three brothers above named, who arrived at a later date.

These three brothers settled in Oley township, Berks county. Later one of them moved to Millerstown, now Macungie, and another to Longswamp, which is also in Berks.

Henry Bortz was married to Lydia Reintzheimer in Germany. They spent eighteen weeks on the ocean in coming to this country. When within sight of land their oldest child died, but the captain permitted them to bring the remains to Philadelphia, where the child was buried.

According to a statement made by Rev. F. J. Schantz at the Bortz reunion in Mercer county in 1887, Henry Bortz moved from Oley to the head of the Cedar creek in Lehigh county. There he bought a mill property and built a log house, in which he resided for a time. Later he moved to what is now called Wescoesville. The exact date of this removal is not known. There was only one small stone building in the place then, but in 1797 Henry Bortz built a very large stone house, the stones of which were hauled a distance of more than two miles. He built this house for a hotel, and it is the hotel of Wescoesville to-day.

His family consisted of nine children, six sons: John, Jacob, George, Philip, Henry, Christopher; and four daughters: Maria, Margaretha, Magdalena, and Eva who married John Michael Mosser.

Philip Bortz married Lydia Steininger and in 1805 moved to Canfield township, Trumbull county, Ohio. After residing there six months he removed to Ellsworth township in the same county. His descendants are numerous in Ohio.

John Bortz married Mary Kemmerer. He resided near the mill property at the Cedar creek, and had one son, John, and one daughter, who was married, first, to Mr. Unger; second, to a Mr. Ritter; and afterwards to John Biery.

Jacob Bortz resided near Guthsville. He was married to a Miss Guth, and had three sons: Peter, Jonas and Edwin, and several daughters, one of whom was married to Titus Kern, of Reading.

Henry Bortz, Jr., was twice married. By his first wife, Catharine Kromer, he had one son, named Nathan; by his second wife, who was a sister of Hon. John Fogel, he had a daughter named Lucy. He died in 1826. He was the owner of the hotel his father had built. In 1827 this property was sold to Philip Wescoe, after whom the village was named Wescoesville.

George Bortz went to Cumberland Valley, Bedford county, married a Miss Smith, and died there. He had no children. After his father's death, his mother, who was then ninety-five years old, rode in a heavy covered wagon from Lehigh to Bedford county, to visit her son and her daughter. Having remained there some time, she died at the age of ninety-seven and was buried at French Cove, Bedford county.

Christopher Bortz was born in 1781 and was married to Catharine Ueberroth. His family consisted of five sons: David, John, George, Jesse and Henry; and three daughters: Fyetta, Sophia and Henrietta.

Maria Bortz was married to Jacob Schantz in 1788. Mr. Schantz resided on the mill property at the head of the Cedar creek. They had three sons: Jacob, Peter and John; and six daughters, who became the wives of Jacob Henninger, Peter Mohr, Rev. John Helffrich, Jacob Fisher, John B. Shimer, and Charles B. Shimer.

Another daughter of Henry Bortz, Sr., was married to Isaac Larosh and lived near what is now East Macungie. A third daughter was married to a Mr. Schaefer. They lived for a short time in Lehigh county and then removed to French Cove, Bedford county. There Mr. Schaefer died and Mrs. Schaefer married again. Her second husband was Rev. Yeager.

Henry Bortz the elder died in 1810 and was buried at the Lehigh church. The Bortzes were of the Lutheran faith.

Owen Bortz, a son of Solomon and Maria

(Hoffman) Bortz, was born in Upper Macungie township, Jan. 5, 1820, and was reared in Rockland township, Berks county, Pa. In this vicinity he obtained a practical education in the common schools. He remained at home until he learned the trade of a miller, when he removed to Lehigh county and for seven years conducted a mill. He later became a farmer, achieving a fair degree of success, for many years and during the last years of his life gained a lucrative livelihood by engaging in the coal business at Allentown. He was a straight-forward honorable man, and numbered among the valued and substantial citizens of his community. He had five brothers: Gideon, Jonas, William, Nathan, Benneville and Edwin; and two sisters: Fianna and Caroline.

By his marriage to Hannah Wenner, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Strauss) Wenner, and a native of South Whitehall township, Lehigh county, the following children were born:

- (1). Harrison, who was born Nov. 15, 1844.
- (2). Louis Franklin, who was born Jan. 14, 1846.
- (3). William, who was born June 10, 1849, and died Feb. 9, 1854.
- (4). Maria Elizabeth, who was born May 15, 1855.

Mr. Bortz died Dec. 20, 1891, aged 71 years, 11 months and 15 days. Mrs. Bortz died Jan. 18, 1889, aged 72 years and 7 months.

He first settled in Marlboro township, Philadelphia county, where he secured 200 acres of land and owned and operated a grist-mill. In the year 1751 his name, with that of his wife, Eva Elizabeth, appears as sponsor at the baptism of a son of George Klein, in Lower Milford township. About 1755, he removed beyond the Blue mountains, to Northampton county, to what is now Lower Towamensing township, Carbon county. Here he cleared a tract of land and lived until his death in 1762, leaving a widow and four children: Bernard, Henry, Mary, and Sabilla.

Henry Bauman, son of John Dieter and Eva Elizabeth Bauman, was born Sept. 29, 1751. He followed farming and lumbering and lived in a large stone house which he built two miles north of Lehigh Gap, near the Towamensing church, and which is still standing. His family was occasionally threatened by the Indians, and in one instance Mr. Bauman sent his wife and children to a place near Easton for safety, while he remained alone in the wilderness. This hotel was on the line of the old turnpike leading from Berwick to Easton, and it was a stopping place for travellers on that highway. He was a commissioner of Carbon county for three years and an active, enterprising, and leading man of his county. By Rev. James L. Tonkin.

Bishop Thomas Bowman, D.D., son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Weiss) Bowman, was born in Lehigh township, Northampton county, Pa., May 28, 1836. He was the fourth child and the first son born to the family. Very early in life he took a great liking to books, and realizing the value of an education, immediately set out to acquire that mental culture, so essential to a successful public career. Being a hard worker and an apt student, he soon finished the work in the common schools, and was sent to an academy at Easton, Pa., where he completed his course with honor both to himself and the parents who had placed so much confidence in him, and had so largely guided his principles, conduct, and habits.

Upon the completion of his course at school he entered the employ of his father, serving as a clerk, in a store at Aquashicola, Carbon county, Pa. After serving in this capacity for a few years, being diligent in his work and showing so many good business traits, at the early age of 20, he took complete control of his father's mercantile business, and continued it with success until he entered the ministry.

On April 26, 1856, he was married to Diana Young, daughter of Joseph and Rebecca (Wentz) Young, which union was blessed with one daughter, Tillie Louise. Mrs. Bowman came from a prominent Northampton county family. Her father was treasurer of Northampton county in 1856.

Bishop Thomas Bowman was reared in a Christian home. His parents were devoted and faithful members of the Evangelical Association for many years. At the age of 18 he was soundly converted to God in a revival meeting held at Weissport, Pa., and about one week later was received into the church by the Rev. Christian Mayers, one of the pioneer preachers of the Evangelical Association. In his church activities, as well as in his business, he put himself into the work, and it was not long before the people discovered that he was possessed of extraordinary talent and ability and his rise in the church was almost phenomenal. He served as Sunday school superintendent and class leader for a number of years. In those days the preacher had large circuits, and one evening the regular pastor failed to fill his appointment, the congregation insisted that Mr. Bowman should occupy the pulpit that evening. He reluctantly consented to preach. Afterward the people urged him to accept the call to the Christian ministry, which came to him so forcibly that he could not reject it. He had been engaged in a lucrative business, with bright prospects of making a fortune, and at the same time, had been offered an annual salary of several thousand dollars to represent a Philadelphia firm, he sacrificed all these business prospects and entered the ministry in the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Association, at a salary of $100 a year, to work for the good of man and the glory of God. His recommendation for license to preach was secured by his pastor, the Rev. John Schell, and he was licensed to preach at the twentieth session of the East Pennsylvania Conference, held at Lancaster, Pa., April 9, 1859, and was stationed on Lehigh Circuit, including what is now known as Lehigh, Bucks, and Northampton counties. On this circuit there were about fifteen appointments, or preaching places, he traveled this circuit faithfully for one year, meeting with great success, hundreds of people were converted and added to the church during the year.

This was the beginning of the ministry and church activities of a man who became one of the great minds and historic centers in the annals of the Evangelical Association.

At the next annual session of conference he was stationed on Northampton Circuit, this circuit embraced the territory between the Blue mountains and Easton, Pa., and between the Lehigh and Delaware rivers. After two years of faithful service on this charge the membership was doubled. His next appointment was in the city of Allentown, where he served as pastor of the Linden Street church, and the Mingo Mission, now known as Emmanuel church, in the First ward. It was during his pastorate here that the Civil War broke out, and he took a firm stand against slavery and in favor of the federal government. In so doing he made some enemies but he also made hosts of friends. His sermons on the subject of slavery were pungent, and his church was crowded to the door almost an hour before the appointed time for preaching. On one occasion the church was too small to hold the vast crowd that had come to hear him. He came out of the church and using the steps in front of the church as a pulpit, thousands congregated on the street and listened to the sound logic and oratory of this man who denounced the detestable traffic in human beings. Several of his sermons, on this subject, were published in the Lehigh Patriot. To show the love and esteem in which he was held by the citizens of Allentown, it was announced that a special offering would be received for him at an evening service, and notwithstanding the money stringency of the time there were contributed 117 one-dollar bills by persons who were not members of his church. Some wonderful revival meetings were held in the Linden Street church resulting in the conversion of many of the best people in the city, and during his pastorate the membership was trebled.

His next appointment was Reading, which was then a mission, consisting of 35 members. This was an unusually hard field, but instead of being discouraged he went about his work in a cheertful and optimistic way and at the end of two years, he had completely renovated the church, increased the membership to 150 and the charge was changed from a mission to a station.

From Reading he was sent to Pine Grove, Schuylkill county, Pa., and served this appointment for two years, after which he was sent to Philadelphia, where he met with extraordinary success. He conducted revival meetings which resulted in the conversion of a large number of people. The congregation did not have a church edifice of its own but rented a place for worship. During his pastorate he collected over $12,000 toward the erection of a new church. From Philadelphia he was sent to Schuylkill Haven.

It became evident that a man of his ability would not remain in the pastorate very long, and at the close of his first year's work at Schuylkill Haven, he was elected presiding elder and stationed on Pottsville District. During his first year on this district, at Hamburg, Pa., he conducted the most remarkable and most successful camp-meeting in the history of the church; almost two hundred souls were converted and that many tents were pitched and occupied. At the end of the four-year term he was re-elected and stationed on the Easton District. He not only looked after the church interests on this district but started work in New Jersey and in New York City.

Because of his successful efforts as a minister and his administrative abilities the church called him to a higher sphere of usefulness. At the General Conference held at Philadelphia, in October, 1875, he was elected to the Episcopacy, which he has served longer than any other man in the history of the church. During his incumbency he has presided at all of the conferences in the United States and Canada. He has made eight Episcopal visits to the European Conferences, which cover Germany, Switzerland, and Russia. In 1881 he was elected a delegate to the first Ecumenical Council of all the Protestant religious bodies of the world, held in London, England. In 1892 he visited Japan and inspected the work of the church in that country. He has been a member of the General Board of Missions of his church uninterruptedly since 1871; he has been a member of the Board of Publication since 1872, and was president of the board for ten years; he has been a member of every General Conference of the church since 1867. He served very efficiently as president of Northwestern College, located at Naperville, Ill., for a number of years. He has been president of the board of trustees of that institution since 1888: he was principal of the Theological seminary located at Naperville, Ill., for 18 years and since 1908 has been principal emeritus. He was also elected chairman of the commissions appointed by the Evangelical Association and the United Evangelical Church to form a basis of union for the re-union of the two churches, and he has consistently labored for the accomplishment of this desired end.

Bishop Bowman possesses a strong personality, is of medium height, heavy set, has a full developed chest, silvery hair, a kind face and an open countenance. His gracious and dignified bearing, his frankness of mind, and his well-balanced temperament, amidst the tempestuous experiences through which he has passed, are strong characteristics of this man. He has established principles and firm opinions, but he has a like respect for the claims of others. He is a leader among men, and his well-defined plans and purposes have made him a great central figure and personage in the history of the church in which he has been an active, and honored member for nearly three score years.

WESLEY W. BOWMAN, of Slatington, was born at Miliport, Carbon county, April 7, 1849. At an early age he followed a clerical pursuit, and at the age of fifteen years he entered Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport; from there he attended Freeland Seminary, finishing his education at the Fort Edward Collegiate Institute, Fort Edward, N. Y., at the age of 26 years he was elected as the cashier of the First National Bank, of Lehigh, organized in 1875.

He served the above responsible position until 1888, at which time he removed to Slatington to engage in the slate business with his father-in-law, Henry Kuntz. They operated the famous Franklin quarry, which is the original, largest, and best developed quarry in the entire slate region. In addition they also operated a number of other successful quarries about Slatington, employing large forces of men. They also operated three blackboard factories, which, for some years, were the largest in the community.

Mr. Bowman retired in 1905, and resides on Lower Main street, in Slatington. He and family have been active members of the St. Paul's Evangelical Association. Mr. Bowman having served it in all its offices.

He was elected the first treasurer of Carbon county in 1844, and in 1847 and 1848 represented Lehigh and Carbon counties in the legislature. He became a contractor and builder of railroads, collieries, street railways, and mine-slopes, and later a prospector and coal operator. He was also engaged in the mercantile business at Tamaqua in 1849. In 1862 he removed to Mahanoy City, where he died, Dec. 4, 1901. He married, Jan. 16, 1840, Polly, daughter of Conrad Romich, of Hanover township, Luzerne county, who was born Oct. 3, 1820, and died May 6, 1866. Their children were: Isabelle, Milton, Mark D., Robert J., and Mary.

Isabelle Bowman married Daniel D. Dillman, a prominent lawyer of Schuylkill county. She was a musician and artist of ability, one of her oil paintings having been on exhibition at the New Orleans Exposition. Augusta A. Dillman, daughter of Daniel D. and Isabelle Dillman, graduated from the West Chester State Normal school and was for a number of years a teacher in the grammar grades of the schools of Mahanoy City. She is a Chataqua graduate, class of '98, a member of Liberty Bell chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, of Philadelphia, and is historian of the Bowman and Dillman families. She married Thomas L. Thomas, a wholesale grocer of Mahanoy City, and has two children: Muriel Isabel and Vivian Mary Thomas.

Rebecca Bowman, youngest daughter of John Dieter, was born Oct. 10, 1816, and died Jan. 24, 1903. She married James Dinkey, who was born Feb. 3, 1817, and died May 6, 1876. They resided at Easton.

Dennis Bauman, son of John Dieter and Margaret (Newhard) Bauman, was born April 10, 1819, at Bowmanstown, then a part of Northampton county. He assisted his father at an early age, upon the farm, and received his educational equipment as then afforded by the common school and later attended for two successive winters a boarding school in Bucks county. He then mastered the art of a surveyor, making this vocation his principal occupation for nine years, being appointed also as deputy surveyor of Carbon county by Gov. Shunk. From 1849 he served six years as prothonotary and was then chosen as one of the associate judges of the county, serving for five years. About 1855 he became a member of the firm of Bauman Brothers & Co., which established and operated an anthracite blast furnace at Parryville, Pa. In 1857, the Carbon Iron Co. was organized and incorporated. Mr. Bauman served as its president from 1857 to 1876, when the great financial panic forced the closing down of the industry, the Carbon Iron & Pipe Co. succeeding to the property. After this time Mr. Bauman attended to his private interests. He became connected with the Carbon Metallic Paint Co., and the First National Bank of Lehigh, and was a director for upwards of twenty-five years and for a time its vice-president. He was the first chief burgess of Parryville, when that town was created a borough, which position he held for several terms. He became a member of Mauch Chunk Lodge of I. O. O. F. in 1849. He has been an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and a loyal Sunday school supporter since 1858, and has filled many offices of honor and trust in these organizations. He is a grand old man, and is now, in his 96th year, living in retirement at Allentown.

He received his early education in the public schools and later attended the Allentown Business College. He located in Allentown in 1888 and entered the employ of William H. Ainey; then occupied a position as clerk for the Lehigh and Coplay Iron Co. for one year, and later located at Bethlehem, where he was employed as a silk weaver, continuing there until 1893, when he engaged in the retail provision business. The ensuing year he returned to Bowman's and was employed as a clerk in the general store of his brother, Penn, and in 1900 again located at Allentown and entered the employ of Pascoe and Crilly, for whom he secured the right of way for the trolley line from Mauch Chunk to Lehigh. He again returned to his trade and in 1902 entered upon his present business with offices in the Allentown National Bank building.

He was granted a patent on "penny in the slot" chewing-gum machines, on Sept. 21, 1912, which were specially devised for vending chewing gum on trolley cars. In order to promote his interest in the machines, he organized and incorporated the National Automatic Sales Company under a New Jersey charter. Mr. Bowman is president, and E. W. Rick, secretary and treasurer, of the company. Mr. Bowman is a member of the F. O. E. and K. G. E. He married, in 1891, Sallie H., daugh-

MARTIN H. BOYÈ.

Martin H. Boyè, M.D., was born at Copenhagen, Denmark, Dec. 6, 1812, when Frederick VI was king. His father was a chemist and superintendent of a large pharmaceutical establishment, and was superintendent of the Royal Porcelain Manufactory at Copenhagen. In 1831, he was admitted to the University of Copenhagen, where he passed with distinction the Philological and philosophical examinations. He afterward entered the Polytechnic School, studying analytical chemistry and physics under Oersted, Zeise and Fodchhammer, and he graduated from that institution in 1835.

In 1836 he came to New York, where he remained till 1837, when he removed to Philadelphia, and attended the lectures of Dr. Robert Hare, professor of chemistry in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, assisting him also in his laboratory. In connection with Dr. Forman Leaming, he translated into English several essays of Belles-lettres on chemical subjects. In 1838, he was appointed assistant geologist and chemist in the first geological survey of Pennsylvania under Prof. Henry D. Rodgers, whom he accompanied on a tour of investigation through the anthracite coal regions. On this trip the party was joined by the noted Canadian, Dr. Pappenheim. At Mauch Chunk they were conducted to the "Summit Mines" by David Thomas, who had not long before arrived from Wales to start and superintend the smelting of iron by anthracite coal. Mr. Boyè had subsequently assigned to him the exploration of the South mountains or Lehigh hills, which as a continuation of the New Jersey highlands, extend from Easton to Reading through the counties of Northampton, Lehigh and Berks, and the mapping down of the boundary lines of the different geological formations of which they consist and with which they are in contact. This work was in part performed during the intense political excitement attending the gubernatorial contest between Ritner and Porter in these counties, particularly in Berks.

Young Boyè was thrown into close relations with the distinguished scientific family of Rodgers. In 1839 and 1840 he was associated with Robert E. and James B. Rodgers in analyzing limestone, coal, iron ores, etc., for the geological survey, as published in the reports. While engaged in these analyses he discovered in connection with Prof. Henry D. Rodgers, a new compound of platinum chloride with nitric oxide, which was reported to the American Philosophical Society, and in January, 1840, he was elected to membership in that society, being at that time the youngest member of the society.

A few months later, in April, 1840, about a score of scientists met at Philadelphia and organized the American Association of Geologists, subsequently re-named the American Association of Geologists and Naturalists, out of which in 1848, was formed the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The importance of this movement can hardly be over-estimated, as the American Association has always been true to its name, a powerful factor in advancing science.

This initial meeting in 1840 is, therefore, one of especial interest to scientists. Of that little company who met at Philadelphia, young Boyè, then only 27 years old, was probably the youngest; Edward Hitchcock, of Amherst, was president; and Lewis C. Beck, of Albany, secretary of the association. No official record of the first members can be found, but the recollection of the survivors gives the following additional names: Prof. Vanuxem, Henry D. Rodgers, Conrad, Charles B. Trego and Alexander McKinley, of Pennsylvania; Emmons and Mather, of New York; James C. Booth, of Delaware; Dr. Hayden, of Virginia; and probably Prof. Johnson, of Philadelphia. The list was prepared by Bela Hubbard a few months before his death and revised by Dr. Boyè.

In the summer of the same year, Mr. Boyè, in connection with J. J. Clark Hare, discovered the first violent explosives, perchloric ether, which he proved was ten times as powerful as gunpowder. He also found a remedy against its unexpected explosion by dilution with alcohol. He was thus in an important sense a pioneer in the vast field of smokeless gunpowder, which has since been so diligently investigated. In the summer of 1841, he resumed field work, examining the bituminous coal regions along the Kiskimetas and Allegheny rivers and Beaver creek.

In 1842-44 he attended the regular course of medical lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, at the same time conducting a chemical laboratory in connection with Prof. James C. Booth, and wrote for Booth's Chemical Encyclopedia the article on "Analysis," and others, and performed many scientific analyses. In connection with Prof. Booth, he read a paper on "The Conversion of Benzoic into Hippuric Acid," at the one hundredth anniversary of the American Philosophical Society. In 1844, Mr. Boyè graduated at the University of Pennsylvania as a doctor of medicine, but he never practiced that profession. At the same time the collegiate department of the university conferred on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

In 1845, Dr. Boyè was elected professor of natural philosophy and chemistry in the Central high school, of Philadelphia, and held this position till February, 1859. Of his work at this time, one of his pupils, later president of Lehigh University, Dr. Thomas M. Drown, wrote that Dr. Boyè first inspired in him a love of chemistry. During this period Dr. Boyè wrote a treatise on "Pneumatics or the Physics of Gases" (published 1859; also a small introductory treatise on Chemistry, or the Physics of Atoms"); he also delivered many public lectures.

The extraction of oil from cotton seed had already been undertaken, but the product was almost black and very thick. In 1845, he invented a process of refining, which produced a bland and colorless oil adapted for cooking or for salad dressing. Toilet soap made from it equaled or surpassed the best castiles. In 1847-48 he began the manufacture and refinement of this oil on a large scale. This oil, some of which was preserved from 1848, and some was manufactured for the occasion, subsequently gained the award of first premium at the centennial exposition of 1876 at Philadelphia. Dr. Boyè was a member of the Franklin Institute.

His early work in the field gave Mr. Boyè a practical familiarity with the picturesque region of eastern Pennsylvania, and enabled him to select for the home of his mature and declining years one of the loveliest nooks; he called his home "Keewaydin," a name of the northwest wind from "Hiawatha." In 1890 he removed from Philadelphia to Coopersburg, where he since resided, engaged in what Washington termed the most notable and useful avocation of man, agriculture.

In early life, Dr. Boyè paid little attention to politics but when the slavery question became prominent, he became a "Free Soiler," and later was an ardent supporter of Lincoln and subsequent Republican candidates. Although always of a conservative disposition, he was a staunch supporter of law and order. During the riots of 1844 in Philadelphia, he joined with a number of other men of standing and formed a military company under the leadership of Horace Binney, Jr., to sustain the authorities in restoring order.

At the age of 81 years, Dr. Boyè made an extended trip to Alaska. He also later at the age of 85, visited Honolulu and witnessed the transfer of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States. Enroute he made stops in Louisiana, Texas, Arizona and California.

Dr. Boyè died March 5, 1909, and reached the venerable age of 96 years, 2 months and 29 days. He had a world-wide reputation as a scientist and was of the generation contemporary with Agassiz, Cuyot, Joseph Henry, the Rogerses, T. Romeyn Beck, Morse and Hitchcock.

Dr. Boyè was preceded in death by his wife and a son, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lewis De Schweinetz, of South Bethlehem, and Dora, wife of Emanuel Oppenlander, residing at the old homestead.

BOYER FAMILY.

The Boyer family is among the prominent families of Lehigh and Northampton counties, and its history form an interesting chapter in the early annals of Pennsylvania. It has had a number of successful "Family Re-unions" and its various branches have been carefully traced and compiled by the family historian, Rev. C. C. Boyer, of Kutztown, Berks county. The origin of the family in Eastern Pennsylvania starts with Andreas Beyer, or Beier, who emigrated with four sons, John Jacob, John Philip, Philip and Martin, from the Palatinate and landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1738.

John Jacob Beyer settled near the Lehigh Gap in Northampton county, (now Carbon) where he took up land in 1755 and carried on farming when the great incursions and massacres of the Indians arose. This land was previously owned by Charles Straub, and Boyer erected a log house for the protection of the first settlers of that vicinity. During those dangerous times he and his son Frederick were working in a field along the mountain when they were suddenly attacked by a party of Indians who violently seized the father and scalped him and took the son a captive together with a young daughter and led them to Canada. On the way in the long and difficult journey the brother and sister became separated and the sister was never afterward heard from.

Frederick Boyer, the brother, was discovered as a prisoner under the French and Indians for five years and in an exchange was sent to Philadelphia and from there soon found his way back to the Lehigh Gap. He secured the land of his father and married Susanna Mehrkam, a daughter of Conrad, who resided in that locality and subsequently took part in the Revolution; and they became the parents of eight children: John, George (born in 1768, died in 1861 at the age of 93 years, and married to Christiana Kline with whom he had three children, Adam, William and Jacob); Henry (married to Magdalena Strohl and had three children, Henry, Joseph and Reuben); Andrew (married to Mary Grunsweig and had five children, John, Andrew, Daniel, Frederick, and a daughter who became the wife of ——— Buck); Mary, Susan, Catharine and Elizabeth.

John Boyer, the eldest son of Frederick, was born Nov. 4, 1780, and he married Elizabeth Schneyder (born Sept. 13, 1784) and had with her five children: John A., Jacob, Samuel, Daniel and David.

John A. Boyer, the eldest of the five sons of John, was born March 30, 1806. He was recognized as a man of more than ordinary ability, possessed of marked character, and filled the office of Justice-of-the-Peace for fifteen years; and during the year 1827 was employed in the construction of the Lehigh canal. He was married to Elizabeth Christman (born March 30, 1806) and they had thirteen children: Lavina (married Robert Muschlitz), Franklin, Abel, Edward, Elizabeth (married Henry Kuntz), Mary (married Stephen Boyer), Priscilla (married Samuel Kostenbader), Matilda (married Alfred Keatz), John, Henry, Levi, James, and a son (who died in infancy).

ABEL BOYER, son of John A., a successful merchant at Slatington, was born at Millport on June 1, 1858. He was reared on a farm and when twenty-two years old learned the trade of painter and paper-hanger which he followed for a number of years; then, in 1902, he entered the employ of Edwin Rauch, who was engaged in the hardware business, and continued with him for one year when he and his brother Henry purchased the business and carried it on for five years under the name of Boyer & Bro., then, in 1908, he purchased his brother's interest and since that time he has conducted the business in his own name. He carries in stock a full line of general hardware and has a large patronage,—his store being recognized as the leading one in Slatington and vicinity for factory and quarry supplies. Mr. Boyer has come to be prominently identified with all local affairs for the general welfare of the community. He was one of the organizers of the Union Cemetery Association and has served as its president since 1900.

In 1889, Mr. Boyer was married to Maggie Bowman, a daughter of Josiah and Louisa (Berkemeyer) Bowman, of Bowmanstown, and they have five children: Pansy M. (a school teacher for a time at Slatington, but now a teacher in the Masonic Home at Louisville, Kentucky); Mabel E. (milliner at Slatington); Bessie M. (graduate from the Stroudsburg State Normal School, with the Class of 1912); Linda L. (a student at the Normal School mentioned); and Nettie B. (still at home, a pupil in the local public school). Mr. Boyer and his family are actively identified with the St. John's Reformed Church at Slatington, which he has served for a number of years as deacon and elder and also as treasurer; and he has also taken much interest in the success of the Sunday-school, and the public school, serving now as a director from the Third Ward of Slatington.

BOYER FAMILY.

The Boyers, as the original spelling of the name Beyer or Bayer indicates, are Rhine Bavarians. The records show that this family dates back into the earliest tribal history of Germany and France, in both of which countries they hold an honorable place to-day. Many of them became Protestants both in Germany and France; persecution drove them to America. About thirty-five Boyers, as the ships' list show, came to Pennsylvania before the Revolutionary War. From the well known fact that the earlier settlers "sent for their relatives and kin," we gather that the Boyer settlers of Pennsylvania were blooded relatives in Europe. There are thousands of them now in Philadelphia, Reading, and in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Illinois, etc.

Philip Beyer, who came over in the ship "Winter Galley" in 1738, was the European ancestor of Dr. Charles Clinton Boyer, of Kutztown. Philip Beyer, as the connection of events proves, found his way into Bern township, Berks county, where, as the list of Berks county taxables shows, he owned property in the vicinity of what is now known as St. Michael's church, before 1775. This church was founded a few years before Philip died, and it is likely that he is buried in the cemetery of St. Michael's, but the brown headstones found over the earliest graves of the church reveal nothing concerning him. The early church records, together with the list of Bern taxables, seems to prove that there were at least four sons, namely: Michael, Henry, John and Christopher. The mother's name, at this writing, has not been ascertained. Philip disappeared from the tax list in 1780.

Christopher Beyer, in all probability the youngest son of Philip Beyer, was born in Bern township, Berks county, about 1740 or 1745. He became a member of the Lutheran Church. To his marriage with Katharine Reifschneider were born children as follows: Christopher, born in 1765; Jacob, 1767; Henry; Christian, 1781; Daniel, and two daughters. In 1785, or soon afterwards, the family removed to what is now Brunswick township, Schuylkill county. The elder Christopher's name appears for the first time on the tax list of Brunswick township in 1791. He lived in a log hut, probably constructed by himself, against a hill side in the rear of what is now known as Friedens Church, about a mile north of McKeansburg. Whether or not he was the schoolmaster of the congregation is a little uncertain. Missionaries stopped at his house and preached in his barn, as Rev. H. A. Weller records in his history of Friedens Church. He was certainly closely identified with this congregation, as we infer from a fragment of church records to which his name is signed. His name disappears from the tax list in 1811, or soon afterward. He and his wife lie buried in Boyer's Row, Friedens cemetery, but the brown headstones that marked the graves were rudely removed when the present church building was erected.

Jacob Boyer, second son of Christopher and Katherine (Reifschneider) Beyer, was born in Bern township, Berks county, Jan. 14, 1767, and became a member of Friedens Church (Lutheran). In 1802 he owned a large farm in Lewistown Valley, about four miles north of Friedens church. He died April 1, 1829, and lies buried in Friedens cemetery. His wife, Susanna Schaeffer, born Jan. 14, 1775, died Nov. 4, 1849, in the home of a daughter, and is buried in the cemetery of the Lutheran church, East German town, Ind. Their children were: Jacob, Samuel, Joseph, Daniel, Mary, Elizabeth, Susan, Kate and Hettie.

Samuel Boyer, second son of Jacob and Susanna (Schaeffer) Boyer, was born in Lewistown, Schuylkill county, Feb. 12, 1801. He was confirmed in the Lutheran Church and on Nov. 9, 1823, was married by Pastor Schofer to Lydia Bensinger, daughter of Michael Bensinger. When his father died six years later, Samuel, who was a blacksmith by trade, took the father's farm, which, as the deeds show, comprised about 300 acres. On the Yost farm, which he owned soon afterward, he carried on milling. He was prominently identified with the founding and maintenance of the Lutheran Church at Lewistown. In 1873, when he was serving as township supervisor, he died in the Bauscher home, where he had called to warm himself on a bitterly cold morning. His wife, Lydia, born Feb. 29, 1808, survived him until 1894. They are buried at Lewistown. The sons and daughters of this marriage were: Israel, Samuel, Emanuel, Joseph, Benjamin, William, Jacob, Daniel, John, Catherine, Elizabeth and Caroline.

Joseph Boyer, the fourth son of Samuel and Lydia (Bensinger) Boyer, was born Jan. 27, 1831. When he began to go to school the free school bill of 1834 and 1835, framed by Lawyer Breck and saved by Thaddeus Stevens in Governor Wolf's administration, had just been put into operation by Secretary of State Thomas Burrows. The Lewistown school fell in line in 1837. The teachers, however, were poorly qualified. Joseph's best teacher was a Mr. Huey. The school terms were short, about three months, and the branches about the same as those of subscription schools. The rod was freely used, and the pupils were hardly able to understand the importance of an education. The English language was not in high repute in the valley as yet, and German spelling, together with the trapping system in the "paragraph reading" of the German Psalter, was about all that counted for much in serious study. There were no blackboards and few books. The long plank benches were arranged around the walls of the room, with benches for the smaller boys and girls in the middle of the room. The old frame schoolhouse, however, in which Joseph Boyer received his education, has long since been replaced. Joseph was a miller by trade, but lived on a Lewistown farm the greater part of his life. He was confirmed in the Lutheran church of Lewistown. In 1856 he married Magdalena Gunsette, daughter of Christian Gunsette [who came from Alsace with his father Philip Henry and his mother Margaret (Houser) Gunsette in 1828] and Mary (Lintz) Gunsette (a Lehigh county girl). To this marriage were born: Charles Clinton, Alice Minerva, George Harris and Frank Samuel. Joseph Boyer served his township eight terms as supervisor of roads, took an active interest in the political affairs of his times, and lived to enjoy a ripe old age. At this writing he is 83 years old and his faithful helpmate died June 29, 1910.

REV. CHARLES C. BOYER, PH.D., the oldest son of Joseph and Magdalena (Gunsette) Boyer, was born at Lewistown, Schuylkill county, Pa., August 6, 1860. He was educated at the Center Square Academy; graduated in 1885 from Muhlenberg College with second honors; studied theology at the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, but was called to the chair of Latin and Greek at Kutztown, Pa. He completed his theological course under Rev. G. B. Hauchers, Ph.D., was ordained with his class in 1888; then while teaching, preaching and writing, he completed six years of post-graduate work, and graduated from Wooster University in 1894, receiving the title of Doctor of Philosophy, cum laude. Dr. Boyer is connected with the Keystone State Normal School off and on since 1888; is the vice-principal since 1900. As an institute instructor and lecturer he has traveled through Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, as well as over his own state. He is an eloquent and able speaker; is a master in the art of thinking.

As an author Dr. Boyer has won fame. He wrote "Concrete Psychology," "Principles and Methods of Teaching," "Waymarks of General History," "Modern Methods for Modern Teachers," and a comprehensive genealogy in many volumes on "Boyers in America." He is a member of the National Education Association; the Pennsylvania German Society; Berks County Historical Society, etc.

In 1889, Dr. Boyer was married to Margie Wright, daughter of Calvin D. Wright, of Pottsville, Pa. Mrs. Boyer is a lady of culture and a gifted musician. Unto them is born one son, Karl Wright Boyer.

George H. Boyer, M.D., of Allentown, was born Sept. 6, 1866, in Walker township, Schuylkill county, Pa., and is the third child and second son of Joseph and Magdalena (Gunsette) Boyer. He attended the public schools and the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown; taught school eleven terms; graduated in medicine, in 1902, from the University of Maryland, Baltimore, and located at Allentown, where he had built up a very large general practice. He holds membership in the Lehigh County, the Lehigh Valley and the Pennsylvania State Medical Societies, and the American Medical Association. He resides with his family in their fine residence at No. 528 North Sixth street, Allentown.

He was married in 1890, to Jennie L. Hauser, a daughter of John F. and Emma S. (Seiberling) Hauser, of Tamaqua. Her paternal grandparents were Israel and Lydia (Heiser) Hauser, who also lived at Tamaqua. Mrs. Boyer's maternal grandparents were Peter and Catharine (Hartman) Seiberling, of West Penn township, Schuylkill county. The following children are born unto them: Miriam C., Ruth E., John F., Grace E., Gladys H., and Dorothy A. Boyer.

FRANK S. BOYER, M.D., the youngest son of Joseph Boyer, was born in Walker township, Schuylkill county, Pa., Sept. 7, 1875. At the age of nineteen years he began teaching school, after teaching three years, in 1894, he entered the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown. The following year he taught again and graduated from the above institution in 1898. Afterward he again taught school for seven successive years. In 1905 he entered the Medico-Chirurgical College, Philadelphia, and graduated in 1909. In the same year he was elected interne in the Allentown hospital and the following year (1910) he located at No. 16 North Second street, Allentown.

Dr. Boyer holds membership in the Lehigh County, Pennsylvania State Medical Societies, and the American Medical Association. He was one of the first medical inspectors of schools in the city of Allentown, which position he holds since February, 1911; is a member of Jordan Lodge, No. 673, F. & A. M., Allentown; Sauscona Lodge, No. 606, I. O. O. F., Hellertown;

On July 22, 1911, he was married to Carolina G. Belzner, daughter of George and Catharine (Fritchie) Belzner, of South Bethlehem, Pa.

Frederick Beyer or Boyer came to America about the year 1733. He came from the Palatinate and was a member of the Reformed church. He settled on the banks of the Lehigh River a short distance from what is now Rockdale. Here he took up several hundred acres of land. While working in his meadow he was killed by an Indian. He was married and had a son Henry who after he grew to manhood became the possessor of the homestead. He was married to Margaret Hanky to whom were born four sons and three daughters. Among his sons was John who was born December 26, 1781. In 1802 he was married to Elizabeth Reber. He purchased a farm about three miles north of his native home on which he resided for several years. Later on he purchased land nearer to his old home where he spent the greater part of his life being a farmer and dealer in cattle. After the Lehigh Canal was finished he was engaged in running boats from Mauch Chunk to Philadelphia. After the death of his wife, he resided with his son, Solomon, at Rockdale, with whom he removed to Allentown in the spring of 1871, and died on the 20th of February, 1874. His remains were buried in the cemetery belonging to the Union Church, in North Whitehall. Many of the children died young. Those who survived were: Elizabeth (married to Daniel Woodring, who died February, 1842), Polly (married to Abraham Woodring), Solomon, Daniel (who lived near the old homestead, and married Salome Klotz), George (who moved when a young man to Western Pennsylvania, where his descendants are now living), Elizabeth (married to Abraham Schneider), Maria (married to Andreas Walp), and Salome (married to Christian Horn).

Solomon was born Oct. 29, 1816, in Heidelberg township. During his boyhood days he attended school at the Union Church, which required a daily walk of four miles. He early sought employment as a boatman on the Lehigh and Delaware Canals, and continued thus engaged for six successive seasons, after which his attention was diverted to the pursuits of a farmer. In 1842 he purchased the hotel and store at Unionville, and managed both for two years, when he resumed again the labor of the farm. The same year Mr. Boyer erected a hotel and store at Rockdale Station, North Whitehall township, where he became landlord, merchant, and postmaster. In 1857 he purchased the East Penn Furnace, which was sold after an ownership of six years. After an active business life extending over a period of many years, he sold the property at Rockdale Station and retired to his comfortable home in Allentown. Mr. Boyer was married, Oct. 29, 1843, to Miss Lucy Ann, daughter of John Miller, of North Whitehall township, whose birth occurred March 11, 1825. Their children are: Flora E. (Mrs. John H. Beck), Anna Maria (Mrs. E. R. Newhard), John P. (married to Miss Lydia Hunsicker), Amandus O. (married to Miss Ella Kern), James Oliver (deceased), Agnes M., Ida R., Lillie C., and Sallie J.

He was a director of the Allentown National Bank and of the Carbon Manufacturing Co., and devoted some time to real estate.

Amandus O., while superintending the working of what is known as the Henninger iron-ore bed, in North Whitehall township, was instantly killed by a cave-in. He was at the time managing a pumping donkey at the bottom of the pit. Mr. Boyer in addition to his furnace interests, was for many years engaged in the purchase and sale of real estate. He continued these operations on his removal to Allentown, and also became owner of various iron-ore beds, which he still continues to work. In October, 1869, Mr. Boyer, his son, John and his son-in-law John H. Beck started with several hundred hands for Texas, where he graded five miles of the Memphis, El Paso and Pacific Railroad, after which he removed to Arkansas, and graded eight miles of the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad.

WILLIAM H. BOYER, farmer of South Whitehall, was born near Rockdale, Oct. 20, 1854. He received his education in the public schools of his native place, the schools in Allentown and the Allentown Business College. He stayed with his parents on the farm until 1871 when they moved to Allentown. For several years he worked at the cigar maker trade. In 1876 he became associated with his father in managing ore beds at Trexlertown, Guths Station, Shoenersville, Lehigh Mountains and Hecktown. He began his family life near Trexlertown and in 1878 he moved to Henningers ore bed and in 1880 he moved to Allentown. In 1884 he moved to South Whitehall where he and his father purchased the Daniel App farm of 98 acres. Here he has resided ever since with the exception of six years during which time they lived in Allentown. For twenty years Mr. Boyer sold fertilizers being one of the first fertilizer salesmen of this section.

In politics he is a Democrat and in 1911 he was elected Road Commissioner. He is a member of Salems Reformed church in Allentown. In 1876 he was married to Mary A. Albright, of Allentown; William H., a graduate of the Allentown Preparatory School and for two years a student in Muhlenberg College; Christine R., a graduate of the Allentown High School 1908.

After achieving financial success, he removed to Allentown, purchasing a commodious home, devoting some time to buying and selling real estate.

He settled in Weisenberg township, Lehigh county, where he farmed a tract of land and where he was assessed nine pounds tax in 1762. He had a brother, Philip, born in 1730, who came to America on Oct. 4, 1752, and who also lived in Weisenberg, where he was a sponsor in 1757, and who, on Sept. 1, 1757, enlisted as a private in Capt. Jacob Wetherhold's company of rangers in the French and Indian War.

George Ludwig Breinig resided in Weisenberg township until May 10, 1771, when he purchased from Peter and Catharine Trexler for 700 pounds a tract of 100 acres and a stone dwelling-house in Macungie township, situate on what was then called "the great road leading to Philadelphia." He added to this tract by the purchase of additional land and resided there until his death. He was one of the judges of election at Allentown, on July 8, 1776, when delegates to the first constitutional convention of the state were elected. In the War of the Revolution he was colonel of the Second Battalion of Northampton county militia, as shown by muster rolls dated May 21, 1777 and May 14, 1778. On Nov. 5, 1777, his battalion is mentioned in service at Billingsport. In 1786, he was commissioned a justice of the district of Macungie and Weisenberg townships. His son, George Breinig, removed to Allen township, Northampton county, in 1832, where he purchased the Beisel farm of 254 acres. Among his children was Simon Breinig, born Oct. 29, 1827, who bought his father's farm in 1862, the greater part of which is now cut into building lots at North Catasauqua. Simon Breinig was married, in 1861, to Eliza C. Dech. He died Dec. 7, 1905, and left one son, Joseph S. G. Breinig. Mosser and had three children, Olivia, Ida, and Hannah, who married Dr. Belden, of Akron, Ohio.

Benjamin Breinig, son of George, Jr., was born in Upper Macungie township, Dec. 6, 1793. In 1819, he removed to Whitehall township and purchased a 109-acre farm, west of Egypt, subsequently enlarged by additional purchases, to 250 acres in what is now the center of the cement belt. This farm had for almost a hundred years been owned by the Burkhalter family and is now owned by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. He was a prosperous and substantial farmer and a member of the Egypt Lutheran church, where he held office and was buried. He died April 16, 1879. Edwin L. Breinig was born June 8, 1826, and spent his boyhood days upon the farm and in the schools of the township. He became a farmer and cultivated his fine farm of 88 acres until 1884, when he removed to a house he had erected, now owned by his eldest son. In politics he was a Democrat and was school director some years. He was a member of the Lutheran congregation at Egypt, where he served as deacon, elder, and trustee. He died March 6, 1903. When a young man he had learned the trade of merchant tailoring with H. Leh, at Allentown, and later became associated with him in business. Afterward Mr. Breinig and Valentine Neligh formed a partnership under the firm name of Neligh & Breinig, and located at the corner of Church and Hamilton streets, conducting a successful merchant tailoring and clothing establishment for several years. Later H. M. Leh purchased the interests of Mr. Neligh and the firm then became known as Breinig & Leh. At a later date John Lewis Breinig, Henry M. Leh, and Hiram Leh formed a partnership and conducted business as H. Leh & Company, adding the wholesale shoe business. This firm conducted a large clothing and shoe manufacturing business at the old stand of H. Leh & Co. During the panic of 1873 they dissolved partnership and Mr. Breinig and H. M. Leh continued the clothing business under the firm name of Breinig & Leh. This firm constituted the pioneer clothing house of the city and from it originated the firms of Koch Bros., and Koch & Shankweiler.

At the age of seventeen years he learned merchant tailoring and cutting and in the centennial year (1876) he began working at the trade with Breinig & Leh. He continued in the employ of this firm until the retirement of his father, which was due to ill health, and the firm became known as H. M. Leh & Co. Mr. Breinig continued with H. M. Leh & Co. as chief cutter until 1888, when he and A. P. Bachman, (for many years connected with the Allentown National Bank), formed a partnership and adopted the firm name of Breinig & Bachman and occupied the old "Democrat Building," located at 632 Hamilton street. They continued business at this place until 1891, and then purchased the building then known as the "Pretz Building," from the Allentown National Bank and erected the first "B. & B. Building," which stood until Friday, Oct. 13, 1893, when a disastrous fire totally destroyed this and three other buildings, incurring a loss of $250,000. A week following this disastrous fire the firm of Breinig & Bachman again resumed business at 632 Hamilton street and continued there until the fall of 1894, when they erected the five-story building, of dimensions 40 x 113 feet, at Sixth and Hamilton streets. This firm employs forty-five people and is one of the largest and best established houses in the Lehigh Valley. During their career the firm erected fifty-five residences in this city and is one of the most progressive and public spirited business houses of Allentown.

He is active in religious affairs and since 1885 is the esteemed superintendent of the Zion's United Brethren church Sunday school, located on Linden street. He has now held this office for more than a quarter century. He takes a deep interest in the administrative affairs of the church and served as a member of the trustees and official board for many years. He also serves as a trustee of Lebanon Valley College, at Annville, Pa., since 1900.

In 1882 he was married to Celia E. Weber, a daughter of Solomon Weber, who died on July 12, 1899. They had no children. where he was the junior member of the wholesale grocery firm of Miller, Eninger & Breinig, which did a prosperous business until the panic of 1857. In 1858 Mr. Breinig removed to Allentown, and engaged in the business of manufacturing paints and fertilizers, which has been conducted since 1867 under the name of the Allentown Manufacturing Company. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran church, of Allentown. He died on Jan. 4, 1896, aged 84 years. His wife, Mary Rebecca Miller, a daughter of Peter Miller, of Montgomery county, died in 1888. They had three sons: Milton and Edmond, who died in early manhood; Alfred J., whose history follows:

ALFRED J. BREINIG, who died at Allentown on Nov. 22, 1912, was born at Breinigsville, Aug. 6, 1838, and with his parents removed to Philadelphia in 1845. He was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia, and was graduated from the Central high school with the Degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1858, at the age of seventeen years. He taught school at Trexlertown, Lehigh county, during the winter of 1867-68, and in 1867 he came to Allentown, and the following year entered his father's business, which he conducted successfully until his death, on Nov. 22, 1912. Mr. Breinig managed the business of the Allentown Manufacturing Company from its early beginning until it became a most prosperous concern, whose reputation extends throughout the Middle Atlantic States, where the name of Breinig is most favorably known. During his early residence, in Allentown, he was an active member of St. John's Lutheran church, serving the offices of elder and deacon; later he associated himself with the Presbyterian church, of Allentown, in which he was a teacher of the young men's Bible class, but later became the superintendent of the Sunday school and a ruling elder in the church. He was one of the organizers of the Lehigh County Sunday School Association, and was the honored president of this noble association for fifteen consecutive years. About 1875 he organized what was then known as the Allentown Christian Association out of which grew the Allentown Y. M. C. A. He also introduced gospel services in the Lehigh county jail, as early as 1867, and later at the county almshouse. The religious work in the jail under the able leadership of Mr. Breinig was continued successfully up to his decease and his associates still continue the work inaugurated by him.

The forty-second annual report of the board of prison inspectors of the Lehigh county prison under the caption of "religious work," prints the following: "We should have to consider this annual report incomplete without referring to the very valuable and conscientious labors of the Christian commission, under the inspiration and able direction of Messrs. Alfred J. Breinig and Thomas Weightman, in behalf of the spiritual upbuilding of the inmates. Of the very helpful and highly appreciated features of the jail work, were the inspired sermons, the Bible readings, and the spiritual songs. In many of these services the inmates manifested the greatest interest. To all these Christian workers the Board hereby extends its best thanks for their valuable services, together with the assurance that untold good was accomplished in a quiet, but very earnest way."

Mr. Breinig was one of the organizers of the first Allentown Board of Trade, becoming its secretary and holding that office some years. While acting as secretary, the Adelaide silk mill was organized through the financial efforts of the Board, and other large industries were brought to Allentown which materially benefited the city and community. The exemplary life of Mr. Alfred J. Breinig has been an inspiration to many of his fellow men and the permanent good he has accomplished can only be told by Him who keepeth all records. He believed the true measure of a man's life was faithfulness, rather than success, and kindly helpful words and deeds. It is related that one of Mr. Breinig's associate workers in the jail, told an inmate of his (Mr. Breinig's) death, whereupon the inmate replied: "Oh, no, Mr. Breinig did not die, he was only taken home to God."

In 1862 Mr. Breinig was united in marriage to Miss Naamah Erdman, a daughter of Isare Erdman, formerly a business man and an exemplary Christian gentleman and temperance worker. Mr. and Mrs. Breinig had two children: Paul E., who is the vice-president of the Allentown Manufacturing Co., Harriet M., who married George R. Witte, formerly a missionary of Brazil, now a resident of Northfield, Mass.

Mr. Alfred Breinig died at his late residence at 1103 Walnut street, Allentown, Pa., on November 22, 1912, and is buried on the fine burial plot of the family on Fairview cemetery, at Allentown.

The site is now occupied by Koch and Person. About one year later, Mr. Brensinger associated himself with L. Williams, of Slatington, and there they conducted a general store for five years. He was then married and became the manager of his father-in-law's (David Williams') general store in Slatington. REV. SAMUEL KISTLER BROBST was born November 16, 1822, in Kistler's Valley, Lehigh county, Pa. His parents were faithful Bible-loving members of the Lutheran Church. The Brobsts and Kistlers belong to the oldest German settlers in Pennsylvania; they emigrated from Western Germany early in the eighteenth century. Samuel Kistler Brobst was baptized by Father Knosky in the Jerusalem Church, in Lynn township. He was a great grandson of Philip Brobst, whose sons, Valentine, Martin and Michael, as well as George Kistler, his maternal great-grandfather, were among the founders of this early Lutheran congregation. The children of these two pioneer families were among the first to be baptized and confirmed by the Rev. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg. He attended the parochial school connected with the church, where he became acquainted with the elements of Christian knowledge. He was confirmed by Pastor Isaac Roeller in 1837, and then changed his abode to Washington, Western Penna., where he learned the trade of a tinsmith with a relative. Being of studious habits, he did not spend his leisure hours on the street, but studied his Bible. His intercourse with Christian people, especially with Dr. Brown, the principal of Jefferson College at Cannonsburg, who had taken an interest in the lonely youth, awakened in him the ever-increasing desire of entering the ministry of the gospel. In 1841 he became ill and had to return home. As soon as he felt stronger he went to Allentown, where he attended the Academy in order to study High German. His poor health compelled him to take another rest under the roof of his widowed mother; but he could not remain idle; weak as he was, he taught school in Kistler's Valley and organized a number of Sunday school institutions yet unknown in the rural districts. As soon as he felt a little stronger he went to Kutztown, afterwards to Mercersburg, and at last to Washington, Western Penna., where he, whilst a student, became instructor of German. One of his pupils was James A. Garfield, the lamented president of the United States. The faculty of Washington College wanted to retain him as German professor, but he declined because he wanted to become a preacher of the gospel. Another offer made by the American Sunday school Union to become its German agent in Eastern Pennsylvania, at a high salary, was likewise declined for the same reason. His love for the Lutheran Church, which was the ruling passion of his life, moved him to despise all claims for honors and preferment. Having been licensed to preach by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania in 1847, he was ordained at Pottsville in 1850, together with G. F. Krotel who likewise became eminent in the Church for his distinguished services in various capacities. He had now reached the goal of his holy ambition, but his poor health denied him the privilege of being the pastor of a church;

only during the last nine years of his life he had a congregation of his own, St. Peter's Church at Allentown, Pa., which he served with the utmost devotion. But he did not become discouraged; he took temporary charge of vacant churches, and was always ready to act as a supply for his brethren in the ministry. The great work of his life, which made his name a household word in the Lutheran Church, was his remarkable activity as an editor and publisher of church literature for thirty years. He knew and felt the great want of church papers which at that time were almost an unknown quantity in the American Lutheran Church. He devoted himself to this important and indispensable line of work with an energy and endurance commanding all admiration, and which had most blessed results. Dr. Passavant, that venerable worker of half a century had been the means of making him acquainted with English church papers whilst both were young men in Western Penna. He had not forgotten the impulse received at that time, but put himself to work as soon as he became convinced that he was called to be a preacher by the word of the pen and the paper. His first venture was the Jugenfreund in 1847, the first German Lutheran Sunday-school paper in the country, which at the time of its founder's death in 1876, was read by 50,000 people, and is still flourishing. In 1853 the first Lutherische Kalender made its appearance; in 1858 the Lutherische Zeitschrift was started. All three publications are still doing good work, and are rendering telling service to the Church. Die Theologische Monatshefte and Missions-Blatter were also published by him for a number of years. Pastor Brobst was a familiar figure on the floors of synodical meetings. The sickly, modest man was a strong and courageous champion of genuine Lutheranism, and his influence became a power for good. He was especially strong in his advocacy of Lutheran education and Home Missions. His name is inseparably connected with the founding and history of the Evangelical Lutheran Theological Seminary of Mt. Airy, Phila., and of Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Pa., the Emigrants' Mission, New York City, etc. He supported all movements toward the conservation of the Church according to the principles of the Reformation, regardless of the enmity and abuse heaped upon him by many who could not, or would not, keep pace with him. He never thought of himself, he suffered heavy losses, he denied himself all well-earned rest and comfort, and when he at last was laid upon his deathbed he thought only of his work, prayed for the Church and praised his Lord until his last breath. He was called to his heavenly rest, in the Church triumphant, two days before Christmas, 1876. The Lutheran Church in America is bound to speak of him as a minister of blessed memory, who while dead, yet liveth. He is survived by his widow, Mary E. Brobst and daughter Sarah L., both residents of Allentown,—Miss Brobst being well known for her activity in music; and one son, Samuel J., for many years church organist in Allentown, and presently holding a similar position in Fairmont, W. Va.

BROBST FAMILY.

Philip Brobst emigrated from Wurtemberg, or Lower Saxony, to America in 1720. He settled in what is now Albany township, Berks county, and there followed his trade of potter in connection with farming, the latter engrossing most of his time. "In 1740 Parson Muhlenberg gave them a small tract of land on which Philip's three sons and some new settlers, built a church and school house, which is occupied from that day to this for the worship of God, by the name of 'Allimingle Church.'"

Philip Brobst made his will in 1747 and it was probated March 21, 1760. It made provision for his children as follows: Michael 100 acres of land and a good grist mill belonging thereto; Martin, a tract of 50 acres and a good new grist mill; Valentine, his just portion of the estate; Eva Catherine, 50 pounds in money, and Dorothy (wife of Johannes Fetherolf), fifty pounds in money.

Philip Brobst and wife Cerine ———, had six children: (1) Martin; (2) Michael; (3) Valentine; (4) Mrs. N. Kutz; (5) Mrs. C. Hechler, and Dorothy (Mrs. Jacob Fetherolf).

In 1759, in Albany township, Michael Brobst was tax collector, and on the list of taxes paid were: Michael Brobst, 14 pounds; Martin Brobst, 14 pounds, and Valentine Brobst, 16 pounds.

Martin Brobst, son of Philip and Cerine (or his son), married a Miss Fuss. They had a son, John, who married a Miss Fries; Christian, who married Miss Marks and a daughter who married a Mr. Brobst and removed to Ohio.

The will of Martin Brobst was probated June 9, 1766, and Anna Elizabeth Brobst was named as executrix. This document mentions several children.

BUCHMAN FAMILY.

Martin Buchman, the ancestor of the Buchman family of Lehigh county, arrived in America at the port of Philadelphia on the ship Phoenix, John Mason, captain, from Rotterdam, Holland, on August 28, 1750. The ship carried 339 passengers and among them was a Jacob Buchman, probably a brother of Martin. This Jacob Buchman settled in Lehigh township, Northampton county, where he was assessed eight pounds in 1762. In 1780 and again in 1786, he was assessed as a farmer, and in the latter year he was taxed on 160 acres of land. A daughter, named Maria Margaret, was born to Jacob and Margaret Buchman, on June 12, 1763.

Martin Buchman was born May 31, 1728. He was buried in the old cemetery at the Weisenberg church, and his grave can be seen marked by a slate stone, which is gradually crumbling away. Unfortunately the date of his death has disappeared from the stone, only the date of his birth, and a few words of the inscription can be seen. The inscription reads: "Martin Buchman. Geboren 1728, den 31 May. Er begab sich in der Ehe mit Barbara, eine geborne ——— Jan. ———." It is from this stone, probably the only place that the information could be obtained, that a few years ago could have been secured the maiden name of his wife, and the date of his marriage and death, but nature has prevented the obtaining of this valuable information.

Martin Buchman secured a warrant for 25 acres of land in Lowhill township on April 14, 1757, which was surveyed on October 29, 1757, by George Schultz, a noted surveyor of Goshenhoppen, Montgomery county, Pa., as can be seen in his diary. In 1762, Martin Buchman was assessed fourteen pounds in Lowhill township, then a part of Northampton county. In 1772 he was taxed four pounds, eight shillings. On January 10, 1785, Martin Buchman and his wife, Barbara, conveyed to his son, Andrew, the tract for which he had secured the warrant in 1757, then given as containing 28 acres and 154 perches, and the 20th of January, 1785, they conveyed to Andrew the homestead and a tract of land called Strasburg, containing 120 acres, which Martin Buchman had received in 1768. After this date his name does not appear in the tax lists.

Andrew Buchman was the only son of Martin and Barbara Buchman, and was born between the years 1750 and 1760. He died in May, 1821, leaving a widow, Mary Magdalena and seven children. He was a tailor by occupation as well as a farmer and was taxed for 170 acres of land in 1785 and 198 acres, two horses and two cows in 1788. Andrew Buchman was one of the trustees of the Weisenberg church, of which his father was also an active member.

Andrew Buchman was active in the militia of Northampton county at the time of the Revolution, serving as first lieutenant of the Fourth Company of the Third Battalion of Northampton county militia, as appears in a return dated May 21, 1777, but there is no mention of the battalion having been called into service. On May 8, 1783, he was chosen major in the Militia Battalion District of Heidelberg, Weisenberg, Lowhill, Lynn, and Penn townships. In the census of 1790 the name of Andrew Buchman appears in Lowhill township as having two sons over and two under 16 years of age and four daughters.

"WHO'S WHO" AMONG THE MUHLENBERG ALUMNI, 1899.

Rev. Frank N. D. Buchman, Young Men's Christian Association Secretary at Pennsylvania State College, State College, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Frank N. D. Buchman, son of

Frank and Sarah (Greenawalt) Buchman, was born at Pennsburg, Pa., June 4, 1878. After preparing for college at Perkiomen Seminary and the Allentown high school, Mr. Buchman entered Muhlenberg College, from which he was graduated in 1899. He then took a theological course at the Mt. Airy Seminary and was graduated from this institution in 1902. His ordination by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania soon followed. During his first pastorate, at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Overbrook, Philadelphia, Mr. Buchman visited Europe and made a special study of Inner Missions, meeting Pastor Von Bodelschwingh in Germany, and other well-known workers.

Immediately after his return from Europe he founded the first Luther Hospice in America at Overbrook, in 1904; in September, 1905, he accepted the position of house father of the Luther Hospice at Twentieth and Race streets, Philadelphia. In 1906 he founded the first Luther settlement in America in the same city. Mr. Buchman may be termed a pioneer in Inner Mission work in America.

After three years at the hospice, Mr. Buchman again visited Europe, spending a year in travel and in further study both of inner and foreign missions. Egypt, the Holy Land, Greece, and Turkey, were included in his itinerary. During his visit to Greece, Mr. Buchman was entertained by those who were close to the Royal Family and in Constantinople he had the privilege of taking breakfast in the royal palace at the invitation of the sultan. On his return he accepted the position of secretary to the Young Men's Christian Association at the Pennsylvania State College, the position which he is still holding.

The Young Men's Christian Association of the Pennsylvania State College, enjoys the unique distinction of being the first of its kind in the student world. Men and women of prominence in the world's work are constantly challenged by the work, and as a result the entire atmosphere of the institution has been changed and many men are entering Christian service. State College has become the model for the student work throughout the country. It is not an uncommon thing to have a thousand or more men attend a single meeting of the Association. The strength of Mr. Buchman's work lies in individual work with individuals. He is constantly called upon to take part in religious movements in other universities.

High tributes to Mr. Buchman's work have been paid by such eminent men as Harlan P. Beach, of Yale; Robert E. Speer, the authority of foreign missions; John R. Mott, the leader of the Student Volunteer Movement; Charles Stelzle, and Graham Taylor, of Chicago.

Describing a visit to State College and its Association, the editor of The Continent thus sums up Mr. Buchman's work and pays this tribute to his personality: "As for that merciless and indefatigable and tireless Young Men's Christian Association secretary, whom the unsuspecting guest really should hold in enmity to the end of his days—he is a wonder; an asset for the kingdom at this strategic point, whose value is beyond at Werley's Corner on Dec. 1, 1859. He attended the State Normal School, later taught school. He graduated from the Bellevue Medical College in New York, and early gained a reputation for being a skilled diagnostician. He enjoyed a lucrative practice. He married Rosa, nee Snyder. Three children were born: Beulah, Daniel, and Edwin. Dr. Buchman died at Stine's Corner on the 3d of February, 1899, and was buried in the family plot in the Weisenberg Cemetery.

computation. What he compelled the wayfar-ing man to do, he himself is doing all the time.
Without a taint of professionalism or piety he has literally invested his life in the lives of those hundreds of young men. His name should be remembered in gratitude at many family altars

BUEHLER FAMILY.

The name and family of Buehler are essentially of German origin. The first of the family was Jacob Buehler, a native of the fatherland, where he resided and spent the whole of his life's career in the village of Huenterbuechelberg, in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was born Dec. 12, 1826. He was an influential and active citizen of the village and took an earnest part in the advancement of the educational interests. Having been for many years honored with public office, both of his village and of his native county.

Jacob Buehler married Barbara Schieber. She died at the homestead in Germany in 1907 soon after the celebration of the golden wedding anniversary at the advanced age of four score years.

Jacob Buehler and his wife Barbara had born to their union six children, as follows:

On three different occasions their son, Gottlieb, now of Allentown, Pennsylvania, visited his native land. In 1907, when his esteemed parents celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, Mr. Buehler and his eldest daughter crossed the Atlantic and participated in the ceremonies of this happy occasion. In commemoration of this event the King of Wurtemberg presented the aged couple with a gold loving cup. Mr. Buehler has also travelled through nearly every state in the Union.

Schantz, his bookkeeper, into partnership and conducted the business under the firm name of Gottlieb Buehler & Co. The same year the business was removed to the new building at Front and Chew streets, where the enterprise has been successfully carried on up to the present time. The establishment has become recognized as one of the leading ones of its kind in this city and gives employment to more than two hundred skilled mechanics and other operatives. The factory is a three-story brick building, which is 365 feet in length. In it are consumed three car loads of hard wood lumber each week. REV. CHARLES ALLABOR BUTZ, A.M., was born near Alburts March 14, 1874. At the age of nine he removed with his mother to Shamrock. He attended the public schools, and later the Kutztown State Normal School, at Kutztown. In the fall of 1893 he entered Ursinus College from which he was graduated with honors in the spring of 1899, taking high rank in German. He represented his class and his literary society (Zwinglian) in various literary and oratorical contests. He was a member of the editorial staff of the Ursinus Bulletin for two years and the artist for the college annual "Ruby" for 1898. In the fall of 1899 he entered the Ursinus School of Theology and from which he was graduated with honors in the spring of 1902. During the senior year he won a special prize in Church history. While a student in the seminary he pursued a special course in psychology at the University of Pennsylvania. He was licensed to preach the gospel by Lehigh Classis, in Trinity Church, Allentown, and on August 1, 1902, entered upon the work of the holy ministry in the Towamensing charge, East Pennsylvania Classis. Here he attained splendid results. The standard of benevolence was raised, a new congregation was organized at Bowmansville and a Sunday school started at Palmerton, which has since developed into a promising mission. In the fall of 1903 he received a call from the Bethel charge, Lebanon Classis. Before leaving the Towamensing charge he collected the greater part of the money for the church of the new congregation at Bowmansville, which was dedicated free of debt. His work in the Bethel charge was equally as successful as that of his first charge. He compiled and published histories of each of the congregations. Those of St. John's (Fredericksburg and St. Paul's, Klopp's), being rather comprehensive. In 1908 he accepted a call from the Dryland Charge, East Pennsylvania Classis, consisting of the Dryland (Hecktown) and Zion's (N. Bethlehem) congregations. At Zion's congregation the mortgage which was a burden for many years has been liquidated and a pipe organ installed and at Dryland, with the assistance of Rev. Klick, his colleague, a union constitution was adopted, which resulted in bringing order out of a long and bitter strife.

In the spring of 1904 he was married to Jennie B. Fritch, a daughter of Levi and Sarah (Miller) Fritch, of Mertztown, Pa. She is a graduate of K. S. N. S., at Kutztown; before her marriage she taught three terms in the public schools. This union is blessed with two daughters, Geraldine Euroma, born January 29, 1906, and Arline Fritch Butz, born June 20, 1913.

In 1906 his Alma Mater conferred upon him the degree of A.M. In spite of his activities, Rev. Butz finds time for art and literature. He has executed credible work in oil, water color, pastelle and pen and ink. They reside in Bethlehem.

VICTOR S. BUTZ, son of James, farmer of Ruchsville, North Whitehall township, was born August 7, 1862. He was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools. Here he followed the occupation of a farmer until his death which occurred on Dec. 10, 1826. He was united in marriage to Esther Egner. He had two brothers, one of whom, James, came with him to America and is said to have settled in Conyngham Valley near Berwick, Pa. His descendants now live at Scranton, Danville, Lewisburg and in that section of the state. The brother that remained in England was possessed of a large estate and is said to have died suddenly without issue, but was survived by several sisters.

Thomas Cawley on coming to America, bought 500 acres of land at Springfield, Durham, Lower Saucon and Williams township. He was engaged in the manufacture of gunpowder during the war for independence and sold it to the colonies. The powder mill accidentally exploded and was rebuilt and turned into a grist mill. Thomas Cawley died in 1804 and is buried at Springtown. He was a Presbyterian.

His wife was Sarah Cavender and their children are:

John Cawley, a son of John and Mary (Rohn) Cawley, was born in Lower Saucon township, Northampton county, in 1812 and died in Allentown in 1889, aged 77 years. He was a member of the Evangelical church and is buried in the West End cemetery, Allentown, Pa. He was a miller and farmer by trade. He owned and operated Cawley's Mill, which was located four miles north of Hellertown, near the Cawley homestead. DR. MORRIS F. CAWLEY, a son of John and Mary Ann (Harlacher) Cawley, was born at Cawley's Mill, Lower Saucon township, Northampton county, April 15, 1857. The first ten years of his life were spent about his father's mill and farm near Hellertown. He attended the public schools, Muhlenberg College, and at the age of 15 years was granted a license to teach and took up that profession first at Lehigh Gap and later in the Second Ward, Allentown. He continued to teach until he attained the age of 25 years, in order to secure funds to complete his education. In 1885 he entered the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1888. After spending a year in the German Hospital in Philadelphia, he returned to this city where he opened an office at 419 North Eighth Street, and soon afterward removed to his late office at 31 North Ninth Street.

Dr. Cawley was devoted to his profession and in this way became identified with many medical organizations and with medical activities. He was a member of both state and national medical associations and also of the Lehigh county Medical Association. From 1889 to 1896 he was secretary of the latter association and also served as presiding officer for a term. Since the establishment of a tuberculosis dispensary in this city he had been the chief physician and had been indefatigable in the fight against the White Plague. He also served in the capacity of examining physician for the Metropolitan Insurance Company. His work in the stamping out of epidemics brought him most prominently to public attention and some of his work in the treatment of typhoid and diphtheria epidemics should forever hold his name in remembrance in this community. All of them stamped him as a man of fine analytic qualities and of excellent judgment in his profession. One of his best known cases in his fights for the maintenance of ethical standards was in his recent trip to Jamaica, where he gave the most important testimony against the Thompsonian Medical Institute, a practically fictitious medical institute supposed to have its headquarters in this city and under whose diplomas men were practicing in that island as physicians. He served a three-year term as health officer of the city and since 1900 had been county medical officer.

Major Cawley entered the service as a private of Company B, Fourth Regiment on June 21, 1878. He was appointed as assistant surgeon on November 11, 1888, and was reappointed on January 1, 1891, and December 18, 1896. He was appointed surgeon with the rank of major and assigned to the Fourth Regiment on December 20, 1904, and November 18, 1909. In the war with Spain he was appointed assistant surgeon of the Fourth Regiment on May 5, 1898, and surgeon on May 12, of the same year. In all the encampments and in the course of the trying service of the regiment in the war with Spain, Major Cawley became a man who was known as a surgeon worth while. He did not go in for parade or display but was always busy with matters pertaining to the sanitation and the welfare of the men, and to him their care and health became a passion. It was appreciated too, for among the guardsmen nothing but the best word can always be heard of him. While in Porto Rico in the war he was stricken with malignant typhoid fever and after the war was confined for several months in St. Peter's Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y. He served in the Lattimer Strike at MacAdoo and Drifton, Pa., was in the Homestead strike in 1892, and later was in the strike at Shenandoah and Tamaqua, for six weeks.

He served as treasurer of the First Baptist church for a number of years and also taught Sunday school for a number of years. As a Republican he was twice elected as school director of the Fourth Ward, which he served two years and was then elected to the Board of Control by the School Board, and later elected treasurer of the Board of Control, which position he held for two terms. These various offices he served from 1891 to 1897.

He was married Oct 10, 1889, to Jennie Martin, born July 10, 1867, daughter of Dr. Franklin Martin and Amanda (Rohn) Lewis, widow of Arnold C. Lewis, of Catasauqua, who hailed from a line of eminent physicians for three generations.

The death of Dr. Morris F. Cawley occurred on January 8, 1912, at the age of 54 years, 8 months and 22 days. The services were conducted by Rev. Wm. Ward West, assisted by Rev. W. E. Brooks, and interment was made in the West End Cemetery, Allentown.

Dr. Samuel F. Dixon, head of the state department of health, conveyed the following expression upon the death of Dr. Cawley: "The death of Dr. Morris F. Cawley means a great loss to the state." Col. O'Neill in his order said: "His death is a distinct loss to the medical department and to this regiment, with which he was associated so many years."

The following editorial also appeared in one of the city papers: "Public service was the keynote of the life of Dr. Morris F. Cawley. If he had ever had a coat of arms there would have been inscribed upon it the motto of the Guelphs, 'Ich dien.' The greatest men have been those whose lives have been devoted to the welfare of the people. Judged by this standard the death of Dr. Cawley removes a man who truly was a leading man of this community and one whom we can ill afford to lose, especially since the safeguarding of the public health was his chief care, the subject of his constant study and attention, and the object of his most zealous work. To Dr. Cawley the public health was above all things and he fought for it to the sacrifice of friends, professionally, and to the sacrifice of his leisure and his business."

CLAUSS FAMILY.

The ancestor of the Clauss family was John Clauss, who died in 1748, at Volzburg, near Zweibruecken, Germany. His widow, Christina, emigrated to America in search of religious liberty, with her son, John George, and a daughter, sailing from Rotterdam, Holland, on the ship Phœnix, which arrived at Philadelphia, August 28, 1750. She was born at Kosteig, Alsace, in 1695, and died at Bethlehem in 1775.

John George Clauss, her son, was born February 28, 1722, and was aged twenty-eight upon his arrival in America. He settled in what was then Bethlehem township, now Upper Nazareth township, Northampton county, where he was a farmer. He was a member of the Moravian congregation at Schoenck, above Nazareth, where he was buried. He died February 13, 1763. He made his will February 5, 1763, which was probated on February 28th, and in it he bequeathed his wife, Christina, one of his best cows, his best horse, and one-third part of his estate, and the use of the other two-thirds until his son, George, attained the age of twenty-one years. He had a daughter, Anna Mary, who died in 1758, a son, Philip, born in 1752, and died in 1781, and a daughter, Mary, who was born in 1755 and died in 1827.

His sister, Christina Sophia, was born November 24, 1724. She married Christian Giese, and died June 13, 1814, and was buried in the Moravian Cemetery at Bethlehem.

His son, George Clauss, lived in Schoeneck and built there about 1780, the first brick house erected in Northampton county, which was torn down in 1904. A picture of this house and some of the original bricks made near the site of the house, are in the possession of George Knerr, of Allentown.

John Clauss, who appears to have been a brother of George, Sr., was born about 1730. He arrived at Philadelphia on October 10, 1752, on the ship Forest. In 1762 he was taxed seven pounds in Allen township. In 1772 he was taxed £3, 8, 0 as a farmer in Bethlehem township. In 1780 his property was assessed at £943. In 1785 he was the owner of 280 acres of land, four horses, and four cows. He was enrolled as a private in Capt. George Wolf's company of Northampton county militia in 1781 and 1782, although almost of the age of exemption from duty, namely 53. He died in 1796. He and his wife, Elizabeth, had the following children:

1. George, who was a shoemaker and lived in Bethlehem township.

2. Henry, born September 21, 1766, died June 8, 1853, aged 86 years. His wife, Elizabeth, born 1767, died January 22, 1844, aged 77 years.

3. Philip Clauss. He and his brother, Henry, received from John Penn, Jr., and John Penn, Esq., November 9, 1789, 279 acres in Bethlehem, which they deeded to Philip, February 2, 1804.

4. John Clauss.

5. Daniel Clauss, born January 7, 1771, died May 6, 1844, aged 69 years. His children were: Edwin, of Fogelsville; John, of Indiana Co., Pa.; George, of Breinigsville; Daniel, of Lehigh-ton; Elizabeth, married Joshua Seip; Lydia, married Jonas Faust, and Maria, married Aaron Winsch in 1813.

township and also owned a tract of 135 acres in Lower Saucon, along the Lehigh river, which he purchased from Peter Shimer in 1806. His children were: 1. John, who died before his father, and left children. 2. Daniel. 3. Catherine. 4. Christina. 5. Charles. 6. Sarah (single). 7. Juliana.

His estate was equally divided between his seven children. Mary Clauss, single, who lived in Bethlehem township in 1827, bequeathed a silver table and teaspoon to Mary, daughter of her brother, George Clauss, of North Carolina, and also made a bequest to her sister Catherine, wife of Henry Bloom, of North Carolina.

Adam Clauss, of Lynn township, who appears to have been a brother of George, Sr., and John, Sr., of Bethlehem township, was probably attracted to Lynn by the settlement there of Moravian families. As early as 1757 he was a resident of Lynn township, as on July 9, of that year, one of his children was killed by Indians. This melancholy affair happened while three or four neighbors were cutting Adam Clauss' corn, and as they were eating their dinner they were fallen upon by a party of savages. Two men, two women, and one girl escaped; but two men, three women, and children were killed. This occurred four miles from Fort Everett and near what is now Lynnport and the Indians were pursued by Lieutenant Jacob Wetherhold and seven men for four miles, when they came upon nine Indians, who shot at them. The lieutenant shot one and wounded another. The rest escaped in the thick forest, but the soldiers secured a mare and two saddles, bridle and halter, a keg of liquor, and cloth and a brass kettle and four Indian cakes baked in the ashes of wheat meal.

Adam Clauss was taxed in Lynn township in 1762, £9. He secured 136 acres by warrant in 1767. He was still living in 1781.

He was employed with one Heinrich Snyder for five years, when his employer favored him by renting him the shop and tools. In 1865 he conducted a smithy in Lynnville and the following year, 1866, moved to his present farm and erected a blacksmith shop, which he has conducted to the present time, and the people of his community for miles around patronize his shop. His farm at first consisted of 16 acres and he continually made additions until now it covers an area of 88 acres. Mr. Clauss built the present house and barn.

CHARLES E. CLAUSS.

Charles E. Clauss, the retired first brush manufacturer at Allentown, from 1858 to 1878, was born May 6, 1827, at Traben, on the Moselle, in Germany. After his preliminary education in the local seminary, he entered a gun factory in Belgium and was employed for some years until his health failed, when he was obliged to discontinue working there. In 1849 he emigrated to Pennsylvania, and from Philadelphia he proceeded up the Schuylkill Valley, to Reading and Pottsville, remaining at the latter place until 1857. While at Pottsville he carried on brush-making and took great interest in music. He taught classes in vocal culture and playing on various instruments, and he filled the position of organist of the German Lutheran church. He then visited his parents in Germany, and remained a year. Upon returning to Pennsylvania he located at Allentown and resumed his trade of brush-making, starting the first brush-factory at this inland town, along the Lehigh river. He carried on the establishment for twenty years when he retired from active business and he has continued to live in retirement until the present time. In 1870 he also embarked in the business of manufacturing materials for making tables, chairs, and bedsteads, and he had continued in it for three years when the hard times arose and he suspended operations by disposing of the plant. It was also the first enterprise of the kind started at Allentown.

Mr. Clauss, having been a musician of skill and culture, became one of the organizers of the Saengerbund, of Lehigh county, and the first director of it, which position he filled for five years. He also identified himself with the Ettinger Brass Band, of Allentown, and he is now the last survivor of this famous musical organization. This band was engaged to participate in the reception at Harrisburg to President-elect Abraham Lincoln, on his way to Washington, and on that great occasion Mr. Clauss, who was one of the performers, was enabled to secure a seat in the representative chamber, through the courtesy of Hon. W. C. Lichtenwalner, of Allentown, one of the assemblymen from the Lehigh district, a personal friend, and he heard Mr. Lincoln's address to the excited multitude. During the Civil War he was enlisted in the Emergency Troop of 1862, 5th Regiment of Penna. Vol. Inf., Co. G, commanded by Capt. George B. Schall.

Mr. Clauss married Agnes Henry, of Cresona, daughter of John Henry, master mechanic of the Penna. R. R. Co. shops, at that place. She was born at Gettysburg, Pa. They had ten children: Henry Otto, m. Louisa Meister; Caroline Amelia, m. Harmer H. Knauss; Amelia Bertha, m. Jacob Naef; Louisa; Florä; Rudolph, m. Minnie Huber; Louis, m. Anna Schoudt; and three died in infancy. His wife died in 1876.

His father was Johann Peter Clauss, a wine merchant of Traben on the Moselle, where he died in 1881, at the remarkable age of 94 years. He was married to Dorothea Moog, of Trarbach, a town on the opposite bank of the Moselle from Traben. Two other sons also emigrated and located in New York city: Rudolph and Henry Otto. A daughter of the former became the wife of Charles Ettinger, of Allentown. The latter was a practicing physician and he had a son, also named Henry Otto, who is a practicing physician in New York City.

CLEAVER FAMILY.

The ancestor of the Cleaver family was Derrick Cleaver, of Berks county. He was a Quaker in religion, and his name is found among the records of Douglass and Amity townships, where he owned large tracts of land. He died in 1768 in Douglass township. His last will was dated Oct. 25, 1767, and probated Feb. 26, 1768. In it he mentions a son, John, and a daughter, Mary; also grandchildren: John Hatfield, Nathan Hatfield, Mary Keely, John Short and William Short.

John Cleaver, the son of Derrick, was born in Douglass township, where he was reared on a farm and came to be a very prominent man, having owned an estate of 1,000 acres. He, too, was a Quaker in religion, having been identified with the Quaker meeting of Maiden Creek township with the Friends of the Exeter and Maiden Creek township Meeting Houses. During the Revolution he served as a captain, and was known as the "Fighting Quaker." He was married twice. His first wife, Rebecca, was a Quakeress, and by her he had three children: Joseph, born in 1764; John; and Ruth.

After the death of his first wife, he married a woman not of the Quaker faith, and upon his refusal to make a confession of his errors as to serving in the Revolution and marrying a woman not of his own religion, contrary to his profession of faith, he was "Read out of the Meeting." By his second wife he had seven children: Peter, Derrick, Issac, Jonathan, Nathan, Martha, and Rebecca, who was married to John Lykens.

Nathan Cleaver, a son of John Cleaver, was born in 1800 in Douglass township, and reared on a farm, and in the religious faith of a Quaker. He located at Pottsville, in Schuylkill county, and was there in the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company for a number of years. He was twice married. Among his children by the first marriage were John Oliver, Clinton DeWitt; Hannah, who died single; and Mrs. Edward Hughes. By his second marriage he had no children. In his later years he resided with his daughter, Mrs. Hughes, who resided near Shickshinny, located at the line of Columbia and Luzerne counties. There he died in 1876 and was buried at Shickshinny.

John Oliver Cleaver, the eldest son of Nathan Cleaver, was born in the year 1823, in Columbia county, Pennsylvania. He became identified with coal operations in Carbon county, and conducted the "Coleraine Colliery" from 1849 until his decease in 1852. He took an active interest in the local militia affairs of Mauch Chunk, having organized a company called the "Cleaver Artillerists," about 1850, which he commanded as captain until he died in 1852. He was married to Elizabeth Newton, a daughter of Baxter B. Newton, of Norwich, Vermont, and they had two children: Albert Newton; and Mary, who died in infancy. They were members of the Episcopal church at Mauch Chunk and there he was buried. His widow is still living, now over 84 years of age.

ALBERT NEWTON CLEAVER, banker and trust official of South Bethlehem, in Northampton county, was born Feb. 25, 1848, at Norwich, in the state of Vermont. He received his education in the Saunder's Institute in West Philadelphia, and at the Eagleswood Military Academy, at Perth Amboy, N. J. He was connected with coal operations for many years until 1896, more especially at the "Stockton Collieries," in Luzerne county, operated by Linderman & Skeer. From 1897 to 1902 he filled the positions of comptroller and treasurer for the Bethlehem Steel Company; then he became twice president of the Jeanesville Iron Works, at Hazleton, and served the company until 1909; and from 1909 to the present time he has been engaged in the administration of the large trust estate of Robert H. Sayre, who was his father-in-law. He assisted in organizing the Lehigh Valley National Bank of Bethlehem in 1872, and officiated as its first cashier; and he has served as a director of the E. P. Wilbur Trust Company since 1896.

In 1876, Mr. Cleaver was married to Elizabeth K. Sayre, whose father, Robert H. Sayre, was very prominent in railroad and banking affairs of eastern Pennsylvania, for many years.

Kimber Cleaver, the distinguished engineer by whom Shamokin was laid out in 1835, was a native of Roaring Creek township, Columbia county, Pennsylvania, where he was born on the 17th of October, 1814, and was the youngest of five children born to Joseph and Sarah (Brook) Cleaver, who was a son of John and Rebecca Cleaver, and was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, in October, 1764.

Kimber Cleaver began his career as an engineer during the construction of the Danville & Pottsville Railroad, located at Shamokin shortly after the town was laid out, and was a member of the firm of Fagley, Cleaver & Company until 1844. During this period he was also connected with the Mount Carbon Railroad, constructed a map of the middle anthracite coal field from personal surveys, and located the route for a railroad from Shamokin to Pottsville. He was principally engaged in professional work in Schuylkill county from 1844 to 1850, and in the latter year laid out Trevorton. He was chief engineer in the survey and construction of what is now known as the Herndon branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and was subsequently connected in a similar capacity with the Philadelphia & Sunbury Railroad; he also performed a large amount of very important engineering work at the various collieries of the Shamokin coal field. In politics he was closely identified with the Native American or Know Nothing party, of which he was the candidate for governor, surveyor general, and canal commissioner of Pennsylvania, member of Congress, etc. The suggestion of the Atlantic cable was originally due to him, and a variety of ingenious and useful inventions also emanated from his fertile brain. He died on the 19th of October, 1858.

Kimber Cleaver was married Jan. 1, 1839, to Elizabeth Montelius Taylor, a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Taylor, and was born Sept. 10, 1819, while they resided at Mifflinburg, Union county, Pennsylvania. Five sons and five daughters were born to this marriage, all of whom died in infancy and early childhood except Reynell C., and Kate, the sixth and ninth born.

Reynell C. was drowned while bathing in the Susquehanna river, Aug. 19, 1865, while a student at Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, Pa. Kate married, in 1876, Elmer Heffelfinger, then editor of the Shamokin Herald. Mrs. Cleaver died March 3, 1886.

HENRY S. CLEMENS, M.D.

Henry S. Clemens, M.D., late of Allentown, was a member of the learned profession who was a credit to the vocation he had chosen, and to the city itself. Dr. Clemens devotes himself assiduously to his practice and the scientific investigations which enhanced his professional knowledge and skill.

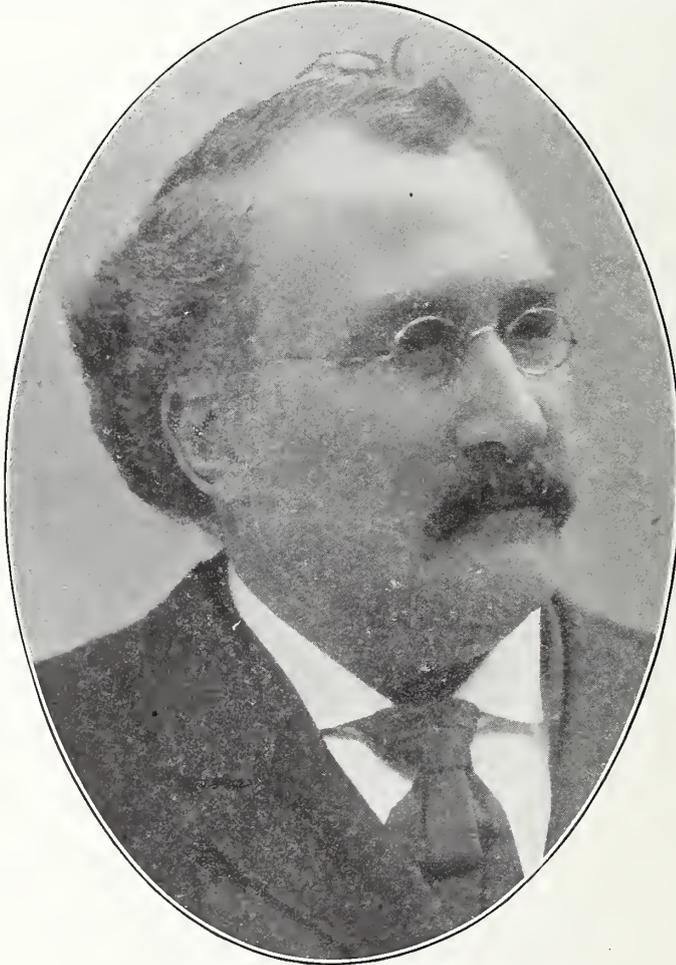

His father, Jacob Clemens, was a tanner by trade, but devoted the greater part of his life to farming pursuits, carrying on his agricultural labors in South Bethlehem. He died in 1872. The grandfather of our subject was Christian Clemens, a native of Doylestown, Bucks county, Pa. Our subject's mother, Catherine, was the daughter of Jacob and Mary Ott, natives of Pleasant Valley, Bucks county, Pa. She was born in that place Nov. 21, 1811, and died in South Bethlehem, March 11, 1890.

Dr. Clemens was the third in order of birth of a family of eight children, and was born Nov. 15, 1838. In his boyhood he was a student in the public schools of his native place, and later attended Tremont Seminary, at Norristown, and Union Seminary, in Union county, Pa. After a short time spent in teaching school in Northampton county, this state, he pursued his studies in the seminary at New Berlin, this state, and in 1857 carried out his long-cherished desire of studying medicine. His first studies were conducted in the office of Dr. Abram Stout, of Bethlehem, later he was with Dr. Kitchen, and then he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1861. After receiving his diploma he began the practice of his profession as his second wife Miss Elizabeth S. Jones, of Sinking Springs, Berks county, Pa.

In politics the Doctor was a Prohibitionist. He was of a very religious bent of mind, and at the age of fourteen was converted and professed sanctification in the true Biblical sense on the 9th of June, 1890. He took the four-year's course of theology laid down in the Methodist Episcopal discipline, after which he served for many years as a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal in Hosensack, Lehigh county. Later he removed to Friedensville, where he remained for seven years. He then came to Allentown, where he built up a lucrative practice, and lived until his death on March 27, 1901. He is buried on the family plot in Union cemetery.

February 2, 1862, Dr. Clemens married Miss Emelie, daughter of David Hartman. She died in Allentown, in October, 1870, after having become the mother of four children. He chose Church. Later he filled a similar position in the Evangelical Church. He was also a graduate of the Chautauqua School of Theology and the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. The Deacon's Orders conferred upon him by Bishop Bowman endowed him with all the functions of the ministry.

One of the chief ambitions of Dr. Clemens was to give advantages to those who had none. In his labors of love he was called upon to preach the Gospel and establish Sabbath schools in various obscure and neglected places throughout the county of Lehigh, and, as a result of his work, many Sunday schools were established and chapels built. He served many congregations without fee or earthly reward, and induced the prejudiced to come to Sabbath school, for in most of the localities the public generally were prejudiced against Methodism. For years, at great personal expense and sacrifice, he gave the children expensive rewards in order to induce them to come to church and Sabbath school, and thus cultivated a taste for a moral and religious life. In this way he was perhaps one of the greatest philanthropists who ever lived in this community, for he ministered both to the temporal and spiritual wants of the people. Not only did he preach regularly to his parishioners the Gospel of Jesus Christ, but also, without remuneration, he buried the dead, and baptized and married his people.

When the great split took place in the Evangelical Association in 1892, he did not connect himself with any branch, but went about far and wide preaching holiness to both sides of the division. God having sent Luther into the world to revive the Bible doctrine of justification by faith, and John Wesley to revive the Bible doctrine of sanctification by faith, these doctrines the Doctor maintained, were the true foundation upon which the Evangelical Association was based; and for wandering from this old and true foundation the people were being punished and they must get back to it again.

Nor was the Doctor less active in temperance than in religious work. He traveled through this county and elsewhere establishing divisions, circulating temperance literature, and lecturing without any remuneration whatever. In the Sabbath school, also, he inculcated in the minds of the children his own strict temperance principles, thus aiding them to start aright in the world. As a physician he was prominent, and had a large and profitable practice in the county, until he made chronic diseases a specialty, when his fame spread through the United States. He has treated patients also from Canada and Europe. Early in life he made a special study of the lungs, and pneumonia was the subject of his thesis when he was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, in 1861.

Probably no other physician has done as much as has Dr. Clemens to demonstrate the value of oxygen as a therapeutic agent. He manufactured it of the sesqui-oxide of iron in combinations with various other chemicals, all the particulars of which he specifies in his will to his wife and children, so as to make it perpetual. He discovered that by combining various chemical gases and medicated vapors a system of therapeutics could be established effectual in nearly all diseases, and which could be administered by inhalation alone, this being more potent in effect than by stomach medication. By throwing remedies into the circulation by the medium of the lungs he discovered that they acted more effectively than by sending them into the circulation (where all curative agents must go), through the stomach. He was the first to discover that from twenty to thirty pounds of beef could be forced into the circulation in the form of essence, by compelling or increasing the powers of assimilation, which is a great boon in all wasting diseases. He was also the first to discover that the vital calibre of the lungs could be enlarged from seventy to one hundred, two hundred, three hundred, or even four hundred cubic inches in consumptives, who are not too far gone in the work of decay in all tubercular affections, by inhaling oxygen in various combinations.

These two facts, the Doctor said, were part of the secrets of his great success in restoring consumptives or all persons suffering from wasting diseases. It was Dr. Clemens's discovery that the heart can be shrunk by inhaling oxygen in various combinations in cases of hypertrophy; that all tumors can be scattered by increasing the power of both secretion and excretion, and restoring every function to normal action by the oxygen treatment. He also discovered that all brain workers, who keep up a good physique by taxing the muscles as well as the brain, can greatly increase the powers of brain function or capabilities by an occasional inhalation of oxygen, whether they are sick or well. When the brain is not too much compressed, occasional inhalations of oxygen will so elevate and refine the higher and finer functions of the brain as to make a Christian (especially a minister) capable of expounding any subject wherewith he may be familiar almost with the eloquence of an angel, so that his influence will be increased two-fold. Man's brain, when treated physically by oxygen in a proper manner, can be subjected to enormous strain and lifted to heights of ecstatic rapture in men of intellect, addicted to no bad habits. This is a discovery that Dr. Clemens had made after many experiments and extended experience. Oxygen, he thought, is yet in its infancy as a therapeutic agent.

CLEWELL FAMILY.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF FRANTZ CLEWELL.

(Original name John Franz Clavell).

Translated from the German Moravian Church Records of Schoeneck, Northampton County, Pa.

I was born on September 24, 1720, in Auerbach, Baden-Durlach. My Grand Parents were French Protestant (Huguenots), who fled from Dauphine, France, with their children, leaving all their possessions behind. It was quick flight or sure death for them. They became members of the Reformed church at Auerbach, where I was born and baptized, and in my fifteenth year after careful instruction in Holy Writ and the doctrine of the Reformed Church was baptized and admitted to the Holy Communion. In my tenth year of age I had the misfortune of losing my father, Francis Clavell, by death, who in the full blessed assurance of Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, passed from time to eternity.

After a lapse of one year my mother married again, John G. Fallens (Feller) who was born in Switzerland but owing to the French wars, which brought ruin and desolation, they emigrated to North America, arriving in Philadelphia in the Fall of 1737.

On our arrival my dear mother handed me over to my future master, and she begged him earnestly to see to it that I attend church regularly, as well as attend to my private devotions, and admonished me to continue in the fear of the Lord.

In the home of my new master, in the vicinity of Oley, Pennsylvania, during the five years of my service, I fared well, but there was little opportunity to attend religious services, because there was no church near. On one occasion I passed a house where there was a large gathering, so that many had to stand on the outside. I thought it was a public sale, and tied my horse and went in. I inferred it was a Roman Catholic Seminary, but was informed they were the "Herrnhuter," Moravians, who a short time ago came to this country and preached a new doctrine. Upon further investigation I found the new doctrine the same which my sainted father held fast and in which he instructed me. The teaching of these truths engraved themselves upon my never dying soul, and through Grace and Mercy sprang up in due time and bore fruit. Amen!

In September, 1744, I married my dear wife, Salome Kuchley (a daughter of my mother's third husband), and we moved into the Oley Hills. The next year we sold our possessions there and moved with our first born child, Magdalene, to near Nazareth, now Aluta, commonly known as Gold farm, in Northampton county. We suffered pioneer hardships, and frequently the Indians menaced us. Our greatest sorrow was that we had no minister or place of worship. In 1755, the Brethern of the Synod held at Bethel on the Swatavia, sent us a preacher. On one occasion, while my family was gathered around the table, I listened to the conversation of my children, and watching them closely, a terrible fear came upon me, lest I fell short of my duty and perchance one or another of them might go astray. I could not refrain from tears. In the distress of my heart I left the table and went out into the woods, where I expected to work, but my feelings overcame me when I fell on my knees and earnestly besought the Lord that He might take them into His own hands and guard them from all evil, since I lacked the needed wisdom to train them up in His fear. Then and there I experienced such a blessed assurance that he had heard my prayers that I have since felt that they were safe in His hands.

These and many similar experiences which the dear Saviour made plain to my poor heart beside the testimony of the blessed Gospel by the Brethern who preached stately in my house, brought me into closer fellowship with Him: Since the year 1760, when they ceased to hold services in my house, we attended services at Nazareth, until October, 1762, when the first chapel in Schoeneck was dedicated. On that day I was admitted into the Society and on the first anniversary day of the congregation in November admitted into full communicant membership. On the sixth day of August, 1763, I was permitted to partake of the Holy Communion, for which I had anticipated.

But I had another experience. Oh! the blessed assurance I received I cannot describe. Heart and eyes overflowed with thankful, penitential tears. Here I experienced fully what free grace really is. On this Grace my dear Saviour I will steadfastly lean until mine end.

Thus ends his own recital, but his obituary, preserved in the archives of the Schoeneck Moravian Church, and from old documents, the following is culled:

Tradition stated, upon his arrival in Philadelphia he was bound over to a Dr. Heister. a planter.

His wife, Salome, was born in Neureuth, in Baden-Durlach, January 15, 1728. She came to America in 1737, and also served a time as "Redemptioner" in Oley. After the death of her husband she took apartments in the Sisters' House, at Nazareth, and rested (being constantly waited upon by her daughter) there until her peaceful and blessed end, May 18, 1812.

Father Clewell's real estate, which was sold by his executors after the death of his wife amounted to 294£ 13s 9d and the personal property was upwards of 143£. The total being equal to $15,000. During his life time he had acquired about 325 acres of land, which was sold for about $50 an acre.

His Last Will and Testament, recorded at Easton, Pa., is indeed that of the Christian. It bears date October 20, 1792. In his younger years he was steward of the Schoeneck congregation, and enjoyed the fullest confidence and respect of his entire community in which he lived. His married life of more than fifty-two years was full of happiness. Mingled with cares and anxieties. He possessed a vigorous constitution and good health until old age, but in the autumn of 1797 he began to fail visibly, being affected by dropsy. He lingered until January 24, 1798, at four P. M., when his spirit went home to dwell with God. He is buried in the Schoeneck graveyard. He was the oldest of two children of Francois and Louisa Frache (1695-1767) Clavell. The other son was George Craft Clavell (1726-1793) m. Anna Maria Knechle. They had twelve children.

THOMAS B. CLEWELL, of the firm T. B. Clewell & Son, manufacturers of the Keystone potato chips at Allentown, Pa., was born at Freemansburg, Pa., December 6, 1856. When fourteen years old, he began clerking in the store for Chas. M. Dodson & Co., at Beaver Brook, Pa., and at the age of eighteen years he learned the butcher's trade, which he followed until 1904. He was in the employ of Arbogast and Bastian Company, Allentown, Pa., many years, having been their first slaughterer and then he conducted a meat market at 605 North Seventh street, for them. Later they sold that business to him and he continued operating it until 1904. Then he became a member of the Keystone Potato Chip Company, located at Freemansburg, Pa., which was started by John R. S. Yoder, and afterward he and his son, Aaron F., purchased Mr. Yoder's interest in the business. They continued doing business under the old firm name until 1910, when they changed it to T. B. Clewell & Son, Manufacturers of Keystone Potato Chips. Besides consuming between 5,000 and 6,000 bushels of potatoes annually, the firm also manufacturers egg noodles extensively. Their factory is located at 429-431 Green street, Allentown, and they employ six men. Their potatoes are all peeled by machinery.

Mr. Clewell is a self-made man, and by his success has demonstrated his ability as a business man. He is a member of Franklin Chamber, Knights of Friendship, of Allentown.

For ten years he resided at Bethlehem, Pa. There he was one of the trustees who erected the present edifice of the United Evangelical Church. Since their removal to Allentown, Pa., the family connected themselves with Bethany United Evangelical Church, which he likewise served as steward and trustee.

In 1877 he was united in wedlock with Sarah C., daughter of Rev. F. P. Lehr and Froene, nee Fecht, his wife, he having been a United Evangelical minister of note. Four children have been born to them, all of whom reside at Allentown: Aaron F., Mary (wife of John Mertz, who have a son, John), Edgar T. (a machinist in the employ of the Bethlehem Steel Company, married to Helen Morris), Ruth (who graduated from the Allentown High School in 1913.)

Aaron F. Clewell was born September 20,

1879. He is a machinist by trade. In 1902 he became a member of the Keystone Potato Chip Company, which later began trading as T. B. Clewell & Son. He is a member of the Franklin Chamber, No. 9, O. K. of F. He and family are members of Bethany United Evangelical Church, and he is a teacher in the main Sunday-school. His wife is Mamie Knerr, and they have four children: Grace, Sarah, Albert, and Thomas.

EUGENE A. CLEWELL, contractor and builder at Allentown, was born near Bethlehem, May 10, 1869, son of Owen V. and Caroline (Zellner) Clewell, and grandson of Andrew Sydney and Rebecca (Michael) Clewell.

The parents of Eugene A. Clewell moved to Seneca county, Ohio, when he was a child, and there he was educated in the public schools. At the age of sixteen years his parents removed to Pennsylvania, where he was apprenticed to learn the millwright trade and to construct all kinds of farming implements and mining machinery. He pursued this trade until 1898, when he accepted the position of foreman in the carpenter and millwright department of the American Steel and Iron Company, which he served until 1910, when he engaged in the building and contracting business. During the past four years he has erected twenty-two fine residences which are reputed to be of the most substantially built houses in Allentown. He built five homes on Tilghman street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, and of these, No. 504, is occupied by Mr. Clewell. On North Sixth street he built numbers 604-8-10-12, during 1913-14. These houses, like those on Tilghman street, have Mt. Airey granite fronts. Mr. Clewell also built a number of cottages and bungalows in the beautiful Waldheim park. He employs ten and twelve mechanics.

Socially he is a member of Fleetwood Castle, K. G. E., and the Fair Council, Junior Americans. He is an Independent voter and he and family are members of Zion's Reformed church.

PAUL J. COBAUGH.

Lewis Cobaugh, the father of Paul J., was a native of Cambria county, Pa. He was a Brethren in Christ (Dunkard) minister at one time, served the Berkey congregation in Somerset county, Pa. He was a prominent and successful business man, conducting a big tannery and a store at Johnstown, Pa., where he died in 1868, aged 37 years. His remains lie buried at Johnstown, where his wife, Susan, nee Berkey, still resides. Their children are: Peter, Sarah, Hannah, and Paul.

Paul J. Cobaugh was born at Johnstown, January 27, 1864. He learned the trade of wire-making in his native city and continued there until the time of the great flood in 1899, when the establishment at which he was working was swept away. After which he came to Allentown and was employed by the Allentown Wire Mill as foreman and continued until in 1905, when he became foreman of a construction gang, for the Bethlehem Steel Works. Mr. Cobaugh is a charter member of Lodge No. 157, K. of P., of Johnstown, a member of Pride of Cambria Castle, K. G. E., No. 52, of Johnstown, in which he was vice-chief at the time of the flood, a member of the Allen Lodge, No. 149, K. of M. C., and of the F. O. E.

In 1887 he was married to Sallie Romig, a daughter of Jacob and Hannah (Miller) Romig, of the Mahoning Valley. She was born at Mauch Chunk. This union is blessed with one daughter, Florence H., who was graduated with first honors from the Allentown College for Women, in 1910, and is now a student at Smith College, Northampton, Mass. Mr. Cobaugh and family are members of Dubb's Memorial Reformed congregation.

In 1906 Mr. Cobaugh engaged in the retail coal business with yards located at Fifth street and Sumner avenue, where he owns extensive grounds.

CHARLES H. COHN.

Charles H. Cohn, connected with one of the most important departments of the city service, as chief of the fire department of Allentown, made for himself a record so commendable that it caused his re-appointment to the position in which he served for the second term. He is thus recognized as a forceful factor in community interests, and while the cause of his service is an immeasurable quantity, it is nevertheless uniformly acknowledged throughout the city and won for him the confidence, good will and regard of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Cohn was born in Jackson county, Tennessee, a son of Henry and Hannah (Hersh), Cohn, both of whom were natives of the State of New York. After the outbreak of hostilities between the north and the south they returned with their family to Pennsylvania, remaining in Philadelphia until the war was over, when they again took up their abode in Jackson, Tenn. When four years had passed they became residents of Cincinnati, Ohio, and in 1869 again located in Philadelphia.

Charles H. Cohn spent the first nine years of his life in his native state, and then resided in Philadelphia during the sojourn of his parents in that city at the time of the Civil War, going there in 1863. Again he accompanied them to Philadelphia in 1869. He had previously attended school there and in Jacksonville and in Brownville, Tenn., and upon his return to Philadelphia began learning the cigar-maker's trade, which he followed there for a year. On the expiration of that period he came to Allentown, and in 1872 entered the employ of Ruhe Brothers, cigar manufacturers, with whom he remained until the time of the financial panic of 1873 forced them to cut down their number of employees, and Mr. Cohn, being among the unmarried men, was discharged. He next entered the employ of A. & S. Grim, and later was with James Seip, following which he entered the employ of Felton & Schuman, by whom he was appointed foreman. After acting in that capacity for a time he went upon the road as traveling representative for that house, and a little later bought out his employers and began business on his own account. In this he continued successfully until he sold out in 1893 to Harry B. Schall, to enter upon active service as chief of the fire department.

Even while living in Philadelphia and learning his trade, Mr. Cohn became deeply interested in the system of fire protection, and since that time has been more or less active in this connection. His place of employment was on Eighth street, near Fitzwater, adjoining the headquarters of the Moyamensing Hose Company. When that company was called out to a fire he would respond, although not a regular member. During his residence in Allentown he has always been deeply interested in its fire service, joining the department in 1872 as a member of Good Will company No. 3, of which he became foreman, acting in that capacity for twelve years. During that time he became thoroughly conversant with the service, its needs and requirements, as well as its possibilities, and he was thus well qualified to assume the responsible duties of chief when appointed to that position by Mayor Allison. During Mayor Lewis' first term he was succeeded by Charles D. Grim, but has been re-appointed during Mayor Lewis' second term as the chief executive of the city. His efforts to promote the efficiency of the fire department have been very effective and are worthy of uniform approval. He has increased the pay part of the department about 20 per cent.; and the fire protection service of Allentown is among the best in the state. There are two chemical and two combination engines, two trucks and seven steamers. He has been in control at a number of important fires, where, had it not been for his prompt and efficient service, great damage would have been done to the property interests of Allentown. On the night of Oct. 13, 1903, when the wind was blowing a gale, at the rate of 75 miles per hour, the Breinig and Bachman building at 61 and Hamilton streets, caught fire. It is situated at the corner of one of the principal streets, and is surrounded by hotels and all kinds of business houses. It looked for a time as though there would be a most serious conflagration, but Mr. Cohn grasped the exigencies of the situation, placed his men and forces in the positions to do the most effective service, and succeeded in confining the fire to the building in which it started. A similar course was pursued by him at the Bittner-Hunsicker fire, Dec. 3, 1902. During the last year of his first term as chief he had thirty-seven bell alarms and fifteen still alarms, and the total property loss was less than five hundred dollars, a most remarkable record, showing quick and capable service, excellent management, and cool, calm judgment.

In his political views, Mr. Cohn is a stalwart Republican, recognized as one of the strong and able workers of the party in Allentown. He is identified with several fraternal organizations, including Allen Lodge, No. 71, I. O. O. F.; Greenleaf Lodge, No. 527, K. P., of which he is a past chancellor; Lechawonk Tribe, No. 201, I. O. R. M., and the Patriotic Order of Sons of America.

In 1893 Mr. Cohn was married to Emma Ritter, a daughter of Daniel and Eliza Ritter. The others of her father's family are: Martin; Charles, who married Miss Kemmerer, and has three children, Annie, Mamie and George; Lucinda, the wife of Cornelius Byscher, by whom she has two children, Helen and John. Sarah, who married Amandus Kemmerer, and has five children, Charles, Mamie, Sallie, Gertrude, and Edward; Alice; and Elizabeth, wife of William Marshall.

JOSIAH COLE.

Heinrich Kohl, the ancestor of Josiah Cole, who was a merchant at Slatington for seventeen years, and was interested in the manufacture of umbrella handles since 1912, was born Sept. 28, 1732, in the Palatinate Germany, and while a young man emigrated to the United States, settling in what is now Allen township, Northampton county, Penna. He purchased a tract of 146 acres along Indian creek near the Lehigh river about a mile northwest of Kreidersville, and engaged in farming and also the manufacture of gun-powder. He was married to Christiana Althaus and they had eight children: Henry, Adam, Peter, John, Mary, Christiana, Susan and Catharine. They were members of the Zion's Stone Church near Kreidersville. He died March 2, 1827.

John Cole, the youngest son of Heinrich, was born in Allen township on April 12, 1790. He learned the cooper trade and after following it for a time purchased a farm of 40 acres, adjoining his father's farm and situated partly in Allen township and partly in Lehigh township. He carried on farming there for thirteen years when he sold it and purchased the Esch homestead to which he afterward added 14 acres of the previous farm and built thereon in 1848 a stone dwelling house for himself as his residence. In connection with farming he also made cement barrels. He died April 22 1883, at the advanced age of 93 years.

Mr. Cole was married to Barbara Houser, a daughter of Christian, and they had eight children: Eliza, Henry, Reuben, Charles, John, Peter, Matilda and Susan. They were members of the Zion's Reformed Church.

Henry Cole, eldest son of John, was born in Allen township and reared on a farm, and he followed farming all of his active life. He came to be recognized as a superior type of farmer in the Lehigh Valley and died at the advanced age of 95 years, March 13, 1912, and was buried at Zion's Stone Church.

Charles Cole, the third son of John, was born in Allen township in 1822, and reared as a farmer. He purchased in 1848 a part of the homestead, embracing 52 acres, and in 1860 he built a fine two-story brick mansion to take the place of the old home. He carried on farming there, and also the manufacture of cement barrels, until his death February 3, 1874. He took an active part in politics for a number of years as committeeman of his district and as a delegate to county conventions. He was married to Sophia Mack, and by her had eight children: Samuel, Sarah, Amanda, Marietta, Magdalena, Josiah, Ida and Frank. They were members of Zion's Reformed Church. After his death, the widow made her home with the daughter Ida (married to Stephan Lett at Allentown).

JOSIAH COLE, the second son of Charles, was born Jan. 15, 1859, near Kreidersville in Northampton county, and received his education in the local schools while being reared on his father's farm. When seventeen years old he went to Slatington and entered the store of Williams, Brensinger & Co., as a clerk, and he was so engaged until 1893, when he embarked in business for himself by associating with Walter Bachman and trading under the name of Bachman & Cole. Three years afterward, in 1896, his firm purchased the interest of L. B. McLees & Co., of Philadelphia, in the old Lehigh Slate Co., and, in connection with the store business carried on the manufacture of roofing and structural slate. It was on their slate property that a serious and costly cave-in occurred on Saturday, the eleventh day of January, 1898, which shocked the community.

In February, 1912, he discontinued business as a merchant and became a partner in the Crescent Manufacturing Co., at Slatington, for the manufacture of umbrella handles of all kinds of which he is foreman in the factory.

Mr. Cole is a Democrat in politics and has frequently represented his district in county conventions. He has affiliated with a number of societies: Slatington Lodge No. 624, I. O. O. F. of which he is a Past Grand and treasurer, and was a representative at State sessions for nine consecutive years; and he is a Past-Grand Patriarch of the Slatington Encampment, No. 231. He was one of the charter members of Royal Arcanum, Council No. 2092; and he has been the Financial Secretary of the Vigilant Fire Co., No. 2 since its organization; a member of the Board of Trade, a director of the Retail Merchants' Association, and also a director of the Slatington Rolling Mills.

On Dec. 24, 1882, Mr. Cole was married to Isabella C. Acker, daughter of Jonas and Matilda (Dornblaser) Acker of Schnecksville, and they had four children: Helen (born May 7, 1886 and died July 7, 1887); Charles F. (born Oct. 17, 1888, and graduated from the Slatington High School with first honors); Walter J. (born Jan. 1, 1891, and graduated from the Slatington High School, studied art and graduated from the Philadelphia Museum of Art in 1913); and Raymond (born Feb. 28, 1895, graduated from the Slatington high school in 1912, and now taking a course in mechanical engineering at the Drexel Institute at Philadelphia). The family are members of St. John's Reformed Church, and for eight years he served as the superintendent of the Sunday school.

EDMON A. COLE.

Thomas Coles and his wife moved from New Jersey to Pennsylvania, settling about Nescopeec, in the coal regions, when their son Amos was a young man. They worked in the coal mines; but Amos (who dropped the letter "s" and thereby changed the name to Cole) was a blacksmith and pursued the trade at the mines until in 1854 or 1855, when he went to Allentown, and he resided there until his death. He was blind a number of years.

His wife was Sally Ann Frederic, whose name was anglicized to Ritzy. Their children were: William, James, Joseph, Sybella, Sarah, Amos, Jr., Norman, Madison, and Theodore (who died an infant).

Joseph S. Cole, son of Amos, was born Nov. 28, 1833. He was a machinist and was foreman of the Allentown Rolling Mill shop from 1854 or 1855 until 1892. He came to Allentown with his father, having previously worked at Harrisburg about one year. He was married, first, to Matilda Sensenbach, daughter of Israel Sensenbach, and they had a daughter, Clara, and second, Josephine Sensenbach, a sister of his first wife, who was born February 7, 1838, and died February 10, 1881. They had five children: Matilda Ann, Charles E., Edwin A., Fredman P., and Lucy C.

In 1885, he learned the machinist trade, following it with several large corporations until he engaged in business for himself in 1898, at 167-69-71 Turner street. He has a well-equipped general repair shop, and also deals in bicycles.

They attend the Evangelical Church. They were married in 1897. Mrs. Cole was Alvina Wertman, daughter of David and Flora (Miller) Wertman, of Lynn township, Lehigh county. The Wertman history appears elsewhere in this volume.

CRAIG FAMILY.

The Craig family are descended from William Craig, of Stirlingshire, Scotland, who, to escape the persecution of the Presbyterians by James I, settled at Dungannon, Ireland. Four of his sons and several of his daughters emigrated to America. The sons were Thomas, Daniel, James, and William. Sarah Craig, one of the daughters, was born in 1706 and married Richard Walker, Esq., a prominent resident of Warrington township, Bucks county. She died April 24, 1784. Margaret Craig, another daughter, married John Gray, of the same place. She died in 1782, leaving two sons, John and James, and two daughters. Jane Craig, another daughter, married Thomas Boyd, of Allen township, and had two sons, Robert and Thomas.

Daniel Craig settled on a tract of 250 acres in Warrington township, Bucks county, where he died in June, 1776, having been totally blind for some years. His widow, Margaret, survived him, with eight children: Thomas; John; William; Margaret, wife of James Barclay; Sarah, wife of John Barnhill; Jane, wife of Samuel Barnhill; Mary Lewis; and Rebecca, wife of Hugh Stephenson. His son Thomas took a prominent part in the Revolution, was commissioned a captain, Oct. 23, 1776, and commanded a company in Col. Baxter's "Flying Camp" in the battle of Fort Washington, November, 1776. He served throughout the war and at its close was Commissioner of Purchases with the rank of colonel. He married Jean Jamison. Sarah Craig, who married John Barnhill, survived her husband, who at his death in 1797, was a merchant at 42 North Third street, Philadelphia. They had three children: Robert, Margaret, and Sarah.

Robert Barnhill, born in 1754, married Margaret Potts, daughter of John Potts, of Germantown. He succeeded to his father's business and died in 1814. His daughter, Margaret, married Cornelius Van Schaich Roosevelt, grandfather of President Theodore Roosevelt.

James Craig settled in the vicinity of the Presbyterian church at Weaversville, where he purchased 250 acres from William Allen on June 13, 1743, and deeded the land for the church and graveyard to the Presbyterian congregation. He lived to an advanced age and although palsied, was always carried to church on Sundays by his sons. His wife died previous to April 16, 1774. He had sons: William, Thomas, and Robert. William married Elizabeth Brown, sister of Gen. Robert Brown, and removed to Northumberland county, where he died March 19, 1810. Robert married Esther Brown, and died March 19, 1818, leaving sons: James, Samuel, William, John, Robert, and Joseph.

Thomas Craig, Esq., the founder of the "Irish Settlement," or "Craig's Settlement," purchased 212 acres adjoining his brother Daniel's land in Bucks county, which he conveyed in 1753 to James Barclay, who had married his niece, Margaret Craig. In 1728 he removed to Allen township, then a part of Bucks county, now Northampton county, where he was the leading citizen for many years and one of the first justices of the peace in 1752. In 1731 his name occurs as the first elder of the Presbyterian congregation of Allen township, in the roll of the synod at Philadelphia. He lived on a tract of 500 acres purchased from Caspar Wistar, by deed dated March 28, 1739, and died in 1779 at an advanced age. His wife, Mary, died July 14, 1772, aged 75 years. He had sons: William and Thomas. William was the first sheriff of Northampton county in 1752, and had children: Thomas, Hugh, Charles, William, Mary, Sarah, Margaret, and Elizabeth. Thomas married Mary Wright, and died in 1746.

General Thomas Craig, son of Thomas, was born Oct. 26, 1739. He was engaged in farming and at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War entered the army and rendered valuable service in the struggle for independence. He was commissioned, Jan. 5, 1776, captain of a company in Colonel St. Clair's battalion, which saw strenuous service in the Canadian campaign. On Sept. 7, 1776, he was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel and on Aug. 1, 1777, to Colonel of the Third Pennsylvania Regiment. He participated in the battles of Germantown, Monmouth and Brandywine, and, to use his own words, "served faithfully from the commencement of the late war to the end of it." It is said he was the first officer to protect the Continental Congress and the first to march to Canada. He retired Jan. 1, 1783. In 1784 he was appointed associate judge, clerk of courts and recorder of Montgomery county, which position he filled until 1789, when he removed to Towamensing township, now Carbon county.

In 1798 he was commissioned Major-General of the Militia of the state, which position he held until 1814. Colonel Craig was at Valley Forge in the winter of 1777-1778, and it was through him that Mrs. Lydia Darrach, conveyed to Washington the warning of Howe's expected attack at Whitemarsh, she having overheard the plans discussed by the British officers at her home. During the last years of his life he resided with a daughter, Mrs. Kramer, at Allentown, where he died, Jan. 13, 1832, aged 92 years, and was buried with military and Masonic honors. The procession marched to the cemetery to the funeral strains of the Bethlehem Band, the tolling of bells, and the firing of minute guns. After the ceremonies were over, and the friends retired to the Lutheran church, the Lehigh Artillerists fired four salutes over the grave and then marched to the church, where an impressive sermon was delivered by Rev. Joshua Yeager. His remains were subsequently re-interred in Fairview cemetery.

General Craig married Dorothy Breinig, who was born in 1778 and died Sept. 1, 1846. She is buried at Lower Towamensing church. They had six children: Charles, Thomas, Eliza, Mary, Harriet, and William.

Charles Craig, son of Gen. Thomas Craig, married Salome Beisel. Benjamin Craig, son of Charles, was born in 1822 and died Jan. 10, 1861. He was a merchant in Allentown and married Matilda Brobst, daughter of Jacob and Anna Maria (Knerr) Brobst. They had two children: 1. Charles J., of Allentown, who married Ellen Butz and had six children: Ralph; Harry; Bertha; Edward, who died in 1904; Charles; and Robert; and 2. Mary Alice, who married James B. Roeder, and had two children: Frank C., who married Carolina Helwig; and Annie, who married Hector Tyndale Craig, of Lehigh Gap.

Thomas Craig, son of Thomas and Dorothy (Breinig) Craig, was born in Allentown in 1796. He attended the schools of his community, Wolfe's Academy, and a school in the Irish settlement for a few months. For many years he conducted a hotel at Lehigh Gap, and also conducted general farming and lumber business. In 1828 he became captain of what was known as a troop of horse in the Pennsylvania militia.

Mr. Craig was married the first time to Miss Kuntz, who bore him two sons, Thomas and Samuel. His second wife was Catharine Hagenbuch, daughter of John Hagenbuch, then proprietor of a hotel at Lehigh Gap. They were the parents of six children; Thomas, who represented his district four years in the house of representatives and three years in the senate; Eliza, wife of General Charles Heckman, an officer in the Mexican and Civil Wars; Allen, for many years judge of Carbon county; William, who moved to Nebraska, and Robert, a captain in the regular army at Washington. Mr. Craig died in 1858, and Mrs. Craig died in 1871.

Colonel John Craig, second son of Thomas and Catharine (Hagenbuch) Craig, was born in Lehigh Gap, Carbon county, Oct. 23, 1831. After attending the common schools of his native place he attended the private school at Easton conducted by Rev. John Vandever. He was connected with his father in the lumber business, and after his father's death, in 1858, he continued the business for some time.

When the Civil War broke out, he was one of the first to offer his services to his country, enlisting April 22, 1861 for three months. After the expiration of this term of enlistment, he re-enlisted and was commissioned captain of Company N, Twenty-eighth regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry. Among the battles in which he participated were those of Antietam, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold, Chattanooga, and a number of other engagements. Returning to his home after the war he formed a partnership with his brother in the general mercantile business under the firm name of J. & W. Craig. In 1882 his brother, William, withdrew, from the firm and he conducted the business alone, adding coal, lumber, and fertilizer to his business. In 1875 when the National Bank of Slatington was organized, he became one of the directors. In 1880 he became the president of the Carbon Metallic Company. He served his community faithfully for a number of years as school director and postmaster. From 1884 to 1886 he represented his district in the lower house of the state legislature. In the fall of 1866 Col. Craig was married to Emma Insley, daughter of Philip and Henrietta Insley, of near Bath. The following children were the issue of this union: Thomas; Charles P. Insley; H. Tyndale; Henrietta, wife of T. Griffith; Mary; Allen D.; and John D., deceased. Mr. Craig died in 1908. During the latter part of his life he lived retired.

CHARLES CRAIG, teller, of the National Bank of Slatington, was born at Lehigh Gap April 7, 1869. He was educated in the public schools of his home, the preparatory school at Easton, and the Wyoming Seminary. He assisted his father in the mercantile business at Lehigh Gap until 1892 when he became connected with the National Bank at Slatington as bookkeeper. This position he filled until 1902, when he was promoted to teller in the same institution. He is a member of Slatington Lodge, No. 440, F. & A. M., and Slatington Chapter, No. 292, Royal Arch Masons. He is a member of the Sons of Veterans, of Palmerton, which was named after his father, "Col. John Craig Camp, S. of V. No. 47."

He was married in 1895, to Bertha Shirey, daughter of B. and Emma (Medlar) Shirey. They have three children: Emma, Thomas, and John.

The first of the name Craig in this country emigrated about the close of the 17th century, and located in Philadelphia. Thence in 1728 Col. Thomas Craig moved to Northampton county, Pennsylvania, and settled in what was afterwards known as Craig's or Irish settlement.

The name of Col. Thomas Craig appears upon the roll of the Synod of Philadelphia for the first time in 1731, and by it we learn that he occupied the office of elder. As it was in the year 1731 that the Presbyterian Church was organized in the settlement, it may therefore be supposed that he was the original elder. His son, Thomas, was but a lad when his father came to this place. During his boyhood years he assisted in clearing the land and tilling the soil, and after attaining manhood, he engaged in farming for himself.

The next in line of descent was Thomas Craig, who was born in 1740. At the breaking out of the Pennamite War, in 1771, he was made a lieutenant in the Pennsylvania Militia, and his record was that of a gallant and faithful officer. At the opening of the Revolutionary War, he was an active champion of the Colonies, and on the 5th of January, 1776, was commissioned captain, being assigned to Col. St. Clair's Pennsylvania Battalion. After several engagements in the Canadian campaign, he was promoted to the rank of major in September, 1776, and in the summer of the following year became colonel of the Third Pennsylvania Regiment. Under command of General Washington he did good service in New Jersey, and subsequently took part in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown.

Mrs. Lydia Darrah, of Philadelphia, at whose house General Howe made his headquarters, secretly learning of the general's intended attack on Washington's army, then in camp at White Marsh, fourteen miles from the city, conveyed the information through Colonel Craig, so that the Colonial army was saved from a surprise and deadly attack. Colonel Craig remained with the army at Valley Forge, and from that place, April 12, 1778, addressed a letter strongly appealing for clothing for the soldiers and showing their destitute condition in that respect. In the battle of Monmouth his regiment was conspicuous for gallantry and was in the thickest of the fight.

At the close of the war Colonel Craig returned to Northampton county, of which he was appointed lieutenant in July, 1783. In 1784 Montgomery county was formed from Philadelphia, and he was appointed associate Judge, clerk of the courts, and recorder, all of which positions he held in 1789. He then settled in the vicinity of Stemblersville, in Towamensing township, (at that time in Northampton, now in Carbon county). For several years he was major-general of the Seventh Division Pennsylvania Militia. His death occurred in 1832, at the age of ninety-two years.

Thomas Craig was first married to Miss Kuntz, by whom he had one son, Thomas. His second wife was Catherine, daughter of John Hagenbach, then proprietor of a hotel at Lehighon. They became the parents of six children, to whom they gave the benefit of wise home training and good educational advantages. Thomas, now deceased, represented his district four years in the House of Representatives and three years in the Senate. Eliza is the wife of Gen. Charles Heckman, an officer in the Mexican and Civil Wars, now residing in Germantown, Pa. Hon. Allen Craig, for many years a leading attorney of Mauch Chunk, is now serving as district judge. William resides in Nebraska. Robert is a graduate of West Point Military Academy, and was a captain of the regular army stationed at Washington, D. C.

CREITZ OR KREITZ FAMILY.

This ancestor migrated from Nassau to Switzerland about the year 1680, and in 1735, John Adam Creitz emigrated to America with his family, settling in Allemangel, in that part now embraced in Berks county, Pennsylvania. His homestead was later owned by Jeremiah Bailey (Behly). There he died and doubtless is buried at the New Bethel church. On December 19, 1768, he obtained by warrant 154 acres of land, situated along the base of the Blue Mountain, back from Lynnport. On this tracts he located a son who bore his name. The pioneer left children of whom there were: John Adam, Jr., Christian, Samuel and Daniel.

John Adam Creitz, Jr., lived near Lynnport, on a large tract of land. The original tract which his father gave him was 154 acres and to this he added other tracts until he had fully 300 acres. He died in 1812, and tradition states that he was buried in the old graveyard at Jacksonville. At the New Bethel church, there is a brown sandstone tombstone with the following inscription: "Anna Catharine Schmitt, born November 25, 1739." She married John Adam Kreitz; and died February 28, 1824, aged 85 years, 3 months and 6 days. She doubtless was the wife of John Adam Kreitz, Jr. Their children were: Samuel, Jonas, Henry, Isaac, Mrs. Molly Williams, Mrs. George Hartman, and Rebecca the wife of Michael Everett. She was born in 1793 and died in 1817. They lived at Lynnport. Samuel Creitz was born in 1796; and in 1829 married Judith Stein. He died January 6, 1830, exactly eight months and three days after their marriage; and two months after his death his wife gave birth to a posthumous son. Isaac Creitz was born June 13, 1807, and died July 27, 1845.

Henry Creitz, son of John Adam, Jr., was born August 21, 1801, and died September 24, 1871. He lived at Jacksonville, where he carried on the business of shoemaker, drover, and farmer. His wife, Elizabeth Follweiler, was a daughter of Daniel and Dorothea (Leaser) Follweiler. She was born November 3, 1801, and died January 15, 1888. Both are buried in the cemetery at Jacksonville. Their children were: Hon. Daniel H., William, Charles, Lewis, Alvin F., Samuel, Henry, Leah (widow of William Ziegler, Allentown); Caroline (m. James Long), Mary (m. Lewis Neiman, who resides at Chillicothe, Mo.); and three died small.

Hon. Daniel H. Creitz, a native of Lynn township, was born January 1, 1824, and he died October 11, 1893, in Weisenberg township, with his son-in-law, William Benner. He was a self-made man with more than an ordinary education, and came to be a leader of his section of Lehigh county, having possessed pronounced convictions and advocating earnestly and successfully what he believed was for the best interests of his community. In politics he was an uncompromising Democrat, and during the Rebellion had strong friends but bitter enemies.

Mr. Creitz served in the school board many years; also as a member of the General Assembly for three terms, 1868, 1869, and 1870. He officiated as a Justice of the Peace for twenty-five years, and as a prison warden of the county for one year. He was a blacksmith by trade at Jacksonville for thirty years; and he owned and conducted a farm in Lynn township (now the property of Victor Snyder), and there he lived from 1855 until 1893. He and his brother Alvin F., owned the farm which is now the property of James W. Smith. He was prominently associated with Daniel Wanamaker and George Merkel in encouraging and securing the establishment of the Berks County railroad from Reading to Slatington, (now the Schuylkill and Lehigh) and his sagacity in business matters was highly esteemed and appreciated.

'Squire Creitz was a Reformed member of the Jacksonville church, and served all its offices. His wife was Elizabeth Oswald, born February 4, 1828, died April 2, 1906, aged over 83 years; and they had eight children: Elias O., Richard H. L., Emelina (m. William Benner now deceased), Rebecca (living at Seipstown), Rosalie M. (m. Alvin Snyder), and Daniel F., Francis D., and Ella, the last three having died young.

ALVIN F. CREITZ, late of Lynnport, was born at Jacksonville, January 24, 1835. He was educated in the local public schools and later attended the New Columbia Academy in Luzerne county for the purpose of taking a special course of instruction in the English language. When eighteen years old he went by team to Burlington, Bradford county, Pa., where he worked for his board and additional schooling, and later he was hired by his father to work in a general store at Tamaqua for one year. In 1855 he and his brother embarked in the store business at Jacksonville and carried it on for two years. Then, after making a trip to New Columbia, he taught public school for four terms and engaged at butchering in the summer season. About this time he bought a farm near Lynnport and this he operated for twenty years.

In 1862 Mr. Creitz was drafted into the Pennsylvania State Militia and served for a period of six weeks, having been elected and commissioned as captain of Company I, of the 176th Regiment. In 1868, he was elected as a justice of the peace of Lynn township and served this office continuously by re-election until 1903; then he received the appointment of notary public and he has served that office until his death. In 1870 he began to practice the surveying of land and he had been one of the best known surveyors in the upper section of the county. He had rendered valuable services in this business and on account of his experience and ability had been called upon as an expert in the adjustment of lines in disputed cases, in which he had been successful. He had acted as an underwriter for the Berks and Lehigh Mutual Life Insurance Company since 1880.

Squire Creitz, as he was familiarly known, was married in 1860 to Caroline E. Oswald. She died June 7, 1881. He died on June 25, 1913. They had thirteen children, eleven of whom are living: Laura E., Martha A., Mollie E., Charles E. (minister of the Reformed Church and now serving the St. Paul's congregation at Reading, Pa.), William H. (architect residing at Vancouver, in British America), Albert A. (residing at Aberdeen, Washington), Ellen A. (deceased), Oliver J., Leonora C. E., a deceased infant son, Emma B., Alvin F. (residing in Kentucky), and Blanche M. They are members of the Reformed church at Jacksonville, which he has served as a deacon and he has officiated as secretary of the consistory for twelve years.

RICHARD H. L. CREITZ, the second son of Squire Creitz, a farmer in Lynn township, was born August 17, 1846. He was educated in the common schools and also attended the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown while being reared on the farm. In 1871, he began farming his father's homestead and also the Robert Kunkel place which his father owned, and he continued for five years, when he moved to Maxatavny township, in Berks county, and farmed there six years, after which he returned to Lynn township. Then (1882) he bought a farm of 98 acres which he now occupies. This was the Levi Donat homestead, who built the present house on the place in 1852.

An old log house stood first on the tract, forty feet west of the present house. It had port holes and was regarded as a relic of the earliest period of the Colonial settlements. A man named Eckenroth was killed here by the Indians. The house was torn down in 1898.

He is a Democrat in politics, and a Reformed member of the Jacksonville church. In 1870 he was married to Sarah Ellen Holben, daughter of David and Carolina (Hartman) Holben, and they have six children: Elmira C. (m. Harry Shepherdson at Wind Gap), Daniel H. (carpenter at Summit Hill), David W., Alice M. (m. Phaon Kerschner at Hamburg, Pa.), John A., and George H. (at Bloomsburg, N. J.).

Adam Kreitz, a descendant of John Adam Kreitz (Creitz), was born June 14, 1815, and died August 3, 1843. He lived in Washington township where he carried on the business of shoemaker, and he was buried at Unionville. He was married August 9, 1835, to Maria Remaly, daughter of Jacob Remaly, and they had three children: William, Henry (who was killed in a slate quarry at Slatedale where he lived, and his wife was Josephine Leibenguth by whom he had a daughter, Emma Flora), and Leah (who died unmarried).

Mr. Kreitz had a brother who lived at Easton, Pa., and some of his descendants are living in the vicinity of Lynnport. They spell their name beginning with the letter "C" instead of "K."

William Kreitz, son of Adam Kreitz, was born September 28, 1835, and died July 27, 1899. He lived at Slatington where he carried on shoemaking; and he owned twelve acres of land on which he also carried on farming in a limited way. He was connected with the Reformed church and served the congregation as a deacon. His wife was Dinah Kunkel, daughter of Adam Kunkel, of Carbon county, and they had a son, Francis A. She resides at Slatington in the homestead.

FRANCIS A. KREITZ, merchant, manufacturer and slate operator who resides at Allentown, was born at Slatington on March 15, 1860, and after having been educated in the public schools of that place he taught school in Washington and Heidelberg townships for three terms. In 1881 he embarked in the business of selling hats, shoes and gents furnishing goods at Slatington on Upper Main street and he has continued in same town ever since; but in 1893 Stephen D. Behler became associated with him under the firm name of Kreitz & Behler and they have six men employed. In 1894 he was one of the organizers of the Eureka Slate Co. and since then the company has carried on a large and successful business. The employees number 100 and Mr. Kreitz serves as the secretary of the company. In 1898 he became associated with Thomas Zellner and later they united with them Reuben Kunkel for the purpose of manufacturing knitted hosiery and since then they have traded successfully under the name of Slatington Knitting Co.; and some time afterward they added dye works to their enterprise. They employ together about ninety-five persons.

Mr. Kreitz was also one of the organizers of the Blue Valley Slate Co., and he has since served as a director, the company employing sixty-five men; and he is interested in the Pennsylvania Slate Co. of which he is likewise a director, the employees numbering fifty men. In politics, Mr. Kreitz is a Democrat and he is one of the recognized leaders of the Democratic party in the county. In 1897 he was elected to the office of Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions and he served a term of three years. Previously he had filled the office of borough assessor for four years. He is affiliated with the Barger Lodge No. 333, F. and A. M., Allentown; also with the P. O. S. of A., at Slatington. Since 1898, his residence has been at Allentown at 17 So. Madison street.

Mr. Kreitz was married in 1888 to Annie M. Neff, daughter of the lately deceased county commissioner E. B. Neff. She died in 1896. They had three children: William (who died in infancy), Hilda L. (who was graduated from the Slatington high school in 1910, and has been assisting her father as his bookkeeper and also as secretary of the Pennsylvania Slate Co.), and Marion M. (who is engaged in the millinery business at Slatington). He and the family are members of the Reformed church. In 1898 he married a second wife, Bertha M. Becker, daughter of the late W. A. Becker and Alevesta Bosard, his wife.

Mr. Kreitz was one of the charter members of the Allentown, Slatington, and Slatington & Slatedale Trolley Companies.

CRESSMAN FAMILY.

The ancestor of this family came from Saxony to America about 1733, and settled in Philadelphia county, where he spent what of life remained to him. It is known that he had a son named Christian, who was born in what is now Montgomery county, April 13, 1753, and who died Dec. 5, 1827. HON. HUGH E. CRILLY.

James Crilly, born in Ireland, came to this country in early manhood, bringing his wife and children with him. His first place of residence here was in Lawrence, Massachusetts, from whence he removed to Phillipsburg, New Jersey, subsequently to Catasauqua, Pennsylvania, and finally to Allentown, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, where they lived on Second street. He was engaged in the general contracting business with his sons. Mr. Crilly married in Ireland, Mary McDonald, a native of that country.

Hon. Hugh E. Crilly, son of James and Mary (McDonald) Crilly, was born in County Armagh, Ireland, August 18, 1852. He attended the public schools of Catasauqua until August, 1865, at which time the family removed to Allentown. He was but a young lad when he commenced working in the rolling mills and, having learned the trade of finishing, followed this occupation until 1879. He then became associated with his father and with his brother, James H. Crilly, in the general contracting business, and the majority of the more important improvements made in Allentown and the adjoining country since that time have been due to his energy and constructive power. Bridges, railroads and trolley lines have claimed the greater part of his time but he has also been connected with contract work in various other directions. While a member of this firm the contract for constructing the sewers on Linden street was carried out, and several others of a similar nature in various sections of the city. The sewers of Bethlehem, and the approach to the Linden street bridge, were among the number of contracts fulfilled. In 1884 Hugh E. Crilly withdrew from this firm, his election as a member of the State Legislature interfering with his activity in that direction, and he served as a member of this honorable body for two consecutive terms. He was appointed a member of a number of committees, among them being: Education, Military, Judiciary, and Mines and Mining. Declining the honor of re-election, he resumed his work as a contractor, and has since been identified with it, to the great advantage of the city. He constructed the first electric railway in Allentown in 1891, performing this work under a contract with the Industrial Improvement Company, of Boston. The next undertaking was the electric road from Allentown to Catasauqua, which was followed by one from the last mentioned town to Coplay, in 1891. In 1892 he built a line for the same company, in South Bethlehem, and followed this by constructing a trolley line from Pottstown to Ringing Rock Park, Montgomery county, financing the last named enterprise himself. This was but one of many he subsequently himself financed, and it was no unusual thing for him to sell them after completion. In 1894 he re-organized the Lancaster Railway Construction Company, took over the electric lines running from that city, and built lines from Lancaster to Lititz, and from Lancaster to New Holland. The following year he built and financed the trolley line from Reading to Womelsdorf, and in 1896, reconstructed a large section of the electric trolley system at Reading. In 1896 he also constructed the road from Wilmington, Delaware, to New Castle, in the same state. In association with John H. Pascoe, he constructed the bridge at Freemansburg in 1897, and also commenced the trolley line to Hellertown, which was purchased by the Allentown system not long after its completion. Among other roads built by Hon. Hugh E. Crilly are the following: Allentown to Macungie, Allentown to Slatington, Slatington to Slatedale, Allentown to Philadelphia, Allentown to South Bethlehem, Lehigh to Mauch Chunk, Egypt to Levans, and South Bethlehem to Friedensville. In the course of the construction of these trolley lines, it has been nothing unusual for Mr. Crilly to have from four to five hundred men in his employ at one time, and his executive ability is of so high an order that his contracts have not been affected by labor troubles to such an extent as is frequently the case with undertakings of this nature.

The interest which has always been displayed by Hugh E. Crilly in the growth and development of Allentown is one which ought not be underestimated. Not alone the business enterprises have claimed his attention and thought, but the political welfare of the city, and its numerous institutions have been given a due share, and have benefited accordingly. He represented the Sixth ward of the city in select council for a period of six years, during which he was in office as president of this body, and was the youngest man ever thus honored in Allentown. From 1880 up to the time the new school code went into effect in 1911, he was a member of the Board of Education of Allentown. February 3, 1911, the State School Directors' Association, in convention assembled at Harrisburg, elected Mr. Crilly as vice-president of their association, an honor to him and to the city. The Bellevue Hotel, one of the largest in the county, was built by Mr. Crilly in 1902, and the Crilly mansion, at the corner of Ridge avenue and Liberty street, was erected by him in 1904-5. He has always given his staunch support to the Democratic party, and he was a candidate for the office of mayor in 1902 but defeated by a small majority. He and his family are devout members of the Roman Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception, and are among its most generous supporters.

Hugh E. Crilly married, in 1887, Mary A., born in County Donegal, Ireland, a daughter of Francis and Mary (O'Donnel) Cannon. They have had children: Mary C., who died in infancy; Hugh E., Jr. At the writing of this article, 1914, Mr. Crilly is still engaged in the contracting business, associated with the Freeland Construction Company of Luzerne county, Pa. as chief of construction in the building of improved highways for the above county.

CROLL FAMILY.

Sometime during the first half of the eighteenth century, Philip Croll emigrated from Germany to this country and settled in Montgomery county, Pa. He had four children, whose names in order of birth, are: Christian, Henry, Michael and Polly. The first of these married and continued his residence in the same locality. The second son, Henry, married a Miss Gilbert and then removed to Allegheny county, near Pittsburgh, Pa., where he farmed. The third son, Michael, married Rebecca Geiger, and shortly after removed to Greenwich township, Berks Co., Pa. Polly, the youngest child of Philip, married Jacob Esser, of Kutztown.

The children of Henry Croll were Joseph, John, Lydia, George, Michael, David, Addie, Henry. About 1808 Joseph Croll, son of Henry, of Allegheny county, a young man of about 16 years of age, was induced to join his uncle Michael from whom he learned the farmer's trade. In 1813 he married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Barbara (Tressler) Schlenker. Later he abandoned his trade and worked as day laborer, subsequently acquiring a few acres of ground near Krumsville, where he died March 22, 1847. The children were: John; Addie (married to Jacob Behler, of near Hamburg); Joseph (deceased, married to Elizabeth Miller, of near Pine Grove); Henry C. (deceased; married first to Lydia Kistler, and then to Sarah A. Seip, late of Endora, Douglass township); Samuel (died when young); Michael (married to Mary A. Dr. Danowsky was left at an early age with his grandmother at Woltin where his chances of acquiring an education were small. He therefore ran away and tramped some 300 miles to his father who died a year later. The captain's close friend, the Burgomaster of Berlin, agreed to care for the lad who desired a professional life. He became a ship surgeon, voyaging to Brazil, Greenland, etc.

In 1848, his home was destroyed by fire. He was one of 388 persons on board and his age was recorded as 22 years. He was born in 1714 and died in Heidelberg township, now Lehigh county, during the Revolutionary period. On Sept. 16, 1747, he took out a warrant for 197 acres of land, located in Heidelberg township. It is current tradition that the pioneers of the township held religious services in the house of Jacob Daubenspeck prior to the erection of the Heidelberg church, in 1744. Jacob reared a family of children among whom were: Jacob, Jr.; George and Philip. These three sons served in the War of the Revolution, from Northampton county. THOMAS DAUGHERTY.

Thomas Daugherty, of Allentown, was born Dec. 20, 1836, at Beaver Meadow, then Northampton (now Carbon county), Pennsylvania. The founders of the family were the parents of William Daugherty, who settled in Bucks county, Pa. William Daugherty afterward removed to the West Branch of the Susquehanna river, locating a few miles above Milton, where he followed farming on Muddy Run. In connection with his son-in-law, Marcus Hulings, he built and operated the first keel-bottom boat ever taken on the Susquehanna river to tidewater. The boat was built at Muddy Run.

Marcus Hulings was the great great grandfather of General W. J. Hulings, of Oil City, Pa., and who is prominently identified with the Pennsylvania National Guard, and is a member of the State Senate.

William Daugherty fought for a time in the French and Indian war, and became a member of the Warrior Run Presbyterian church. He married a Miss Means, a representative of one of the pioneer families of Kentucky, and the Means house in Towanda, Pa., was founded by a representative of this family. Their sons were John, Samuel, James, Abel, Robert, and probably Henry. Of the daughters, one married Marcus Hulings, one William McGrady, and one John Campbell. The sons and the sons-in-law of William Daugherty were prominent in the early history of Pennsylvania, and made splendid records as patriots. John Daugherty was a warm personal friend and a compatriot of Van Campen, and of the noted Brady boys, and the former in his narrative says: "No braver man than John Daugherty ever lived." Captain Samuel Daugherty, another brother, was detailed from Washington's army to protect the frontier, and was killed with Boone's company at Freeland's Fort, his scalp being recognized by a man named Robinson, who was lying in ambush behind a log. The scalp was being carried in the hand of a passing Indian, and the light-colored long, curly hair attracted the attention of Robinson. Both Captain Samuel Daugherty and his elder brother, Captain John Daugherty, were members of Captain Hawkins Boone's command. Samuel Daugherty advised against the attack on Fort Freeland, and his brother taunted him with cowardice, but he replied: "No Daugherty was ever a coward. I shall fight as bravely as yourself, but we shall be defeated," and the result was as he had foretold. Both Hawkins Boone and Samuel Daugherty were killed in the attack. During the fight Captain John Daugherty was accosted by an old Tory who was suspected of having betrayed the fort to the British, and who said, "Give it to them, Daugherty." "Yes," was the reply, "and I will give it to a d—d traitor." The story goes that he loaded his gun, turned, and shot the Tory down as coolly as if shooting a squirrel. John Daugherty was a noted small swordsman, and while the patriot army was in New Jersey he fought and killed a British officer who was also noted for his skill with the sword, for speaking contemptuously of the "so-called" rebels. The seven sons of William Daugherty all fought under Washington at one time or another during the Revolutionary war. After the war Captain John Daugherty returned to his farm on Muncy Creek, and was fatally stabbed by a knife in the hand of a bond boy whom he was correcting for some negligence. His lamentations when dying was that after fighting Indians, the British, and Hessians for so many years, he should be killed by a boy. James Daugherty, another brother, was taken prisoner by the British and the Indians, was sent to Canada, successfully passing the trying ordeal known as "running the gauntlet," and when peace was declared returned to Boston and made his way on foot to the west branch of the Susquehanna river. James Daugherty married Ann Hammond, whose brothers were George, James, William, Joseph, and David Hammond. Of these David Hammond was the father of General Robert H. Hammond, of the Mexican war, formerly a lieutenant of the Fifth United States Infantry. The brothers were all officers in the Revolutionary War, or members of the councils of safety. James Daugherty and Ann Hammond became the parents of the following named: George Hammond; Grace, who married Joseph Hogue; Susan, who married Henry Van Dyke; and Sarah, who married Daniel Bowman. The Bowmans and Van Dykes resided at or near Towanda, Bradford county, Pa. After the war for independence was terminated, the daughters of William Daugherty and their husbands removed to Ohio.

George Hammond Daugherty, born April 1, 1794, near Milton, Pa., learned the saddle-making trade and followed it until the Dearborn wagon was put on the market, and he said any shoemaker could then make harness and quit the business. After Hull surrendered in the war of 1812, he enlisted in the American army, but did not see any active service. Later he followed contracting, and was superintendent of the collieries at Beaver Meadow and Summit Hill. The last years of his life were devoted to farming on the Laird homestead in Madison township, Columbia county, Pa. His religious faith was that of the Presbyterian church. His first presidential votes were cast for Democratic candidates up to General Jackson, later he became a Whig, and at the dissolution of that party was known as an ardent advocate of the American party, and from the time of Lincoln's nomination for the presidency he was a stalwart Republican. A warm friend of the cause of education, he did everything in his power to promote the free school system, and it is said that he rode two horses nearly to death in the fight against the large landed proprietors who were bitterly opposed to be taxed in order to support the free school system. His electioneering was done at night, and quietly among the classes of people who were not property holders, and who outvoted their aristocratic neighbors, who had expected no opposition of any kind. Mr. Daugherty always favored progress and improvement, and his was an active, useful, and honorable career. He married Miss Mary Laird, who was born near Carlisle, Pennsylvania, March 15, 1794. He died at the age of eighty years, and was laid to rest by the side of his wife in the family burying ground of the Laids at the Derry meeting-house in Columbia county, Pa. There were seven children in the family, four sons and three daughters, but all are now deceased, with the exception of Thomas Daugherty. The eldest, James, was killed when with William Walker, the filibuster, in Nicaragua, Central America. Another son, George Hammond, lived to be seventy-five years of age, while Oscar died in young manhood. One of the sisters, Sarah Daugherty, died at the age of twenty-two years. Caroline became Mrs. Faris, and died at the age of sixty-eight years. Ada, who became Mrs. Tenbrook, died at the age of sixty years.

In the maternal line the ancestry of Thomas Daugherty can be traced back to his great-grandfather, William Laird, who was born in Ireland, Oct. 27, 1727, and was brought to America at the age of six years, and died April 11, 1820. In early manhood he had resided near Carlisle, Pa. He served as a member of the committee of correspondence in 1774 as delegate from the Fourth Battallion to the Lancaster County Association of Battalions in 1776, was captain of the Seventh Company of the Sixth Battalion in 1777, captain of the Eighth Company of the Ninth Battalion in 1780, and thus rendered efficient service to the cause of independence. His death occurred in what is now Madison township, Columbia county, and his remains were interred in the Derry churchyard. He was married to Martha Wilson, and they became the parents of eight children, including James Laird, the grandfather, who was born May 11, 1761.

James Laird was a very prominent man in his community, served in the Revolutionary War, participated in the battle of Brandywine, and by his numerous friends and acquaintances was always accosted as Captain Laird. He was a member of the Pennsylvania state senate from 1806 until 1812, representing the district comprising Northumberland and Luzerne counties. He and his father sold their lands in what was then Lancaster county and removed to Northumberland (now Columbia) county, about 1797 or 1798. James Laird wedded Mary McFarlane, and their children were William, Mary, and John. His second wife was a Miss Watson, and their children were Thomas, Samuel and Jane. When James Laird was serving as state senator his daughter, Mary, the mother of Thomas Daugherty, would ride on the pillion of his saddle to Harrisburg, where she was left to attend school, while her father attended the sessions of the legislature at the state capitol in Lancaster. Her death occurred when she was seventy-nine years of age and she, too, was laid to rest in Derry churchyard in Columbia county.

Thomas Daugherty, after attending the public schools until twelve years of age, entered upon his business career as a clerk in a general store at Summit Hill, Pa., where he remained until he was engaged in the location and construction of the Lehigh Valley Railroad as a member of the engineer corps from 1853 until the completion of the road in 1856. During the three succeeding years he was bookkeeper for Packer, Douglass and Co., at Nesquehoning, Pa. Early in the year 1859 he went to the west, crossing the plains from Leavenworth to Denver, Col., with an ox team. In the latter state he was engaged in prospecting and mining until the early part of 1861, and during the winter of 1859-60 he served as assistant clerk of the Colorado legislature under the provisional government, while, following the adjournment of the assembly, he taught the first school in the territory, at Golden City, Col. In the spring of 1860 he was with the prospecting party that discovered the California Gulch diggings at the headwaters of the Arkansas river, where twenty years later the Leadville diggings were opened. When he went West in 1859 he travelled for two hundred miles through the Buffalo range. The prairie at intervals was covered for miles with herds of buffalo, so that the district appeared to be one vast buffalo robe, thousands of the animals being on their way to the northern feeding grounds. Large numbers of them were slaughtered by the Pike's Peak emigrants, who generally only made use of the hump and tongue, the balance of the carcasses being devoured by the great packs of wolves that followed in the path of the emigrant trains.

Following the outbreak of the Civil War, Thomas Daugherty was mustered into the United States service on the 18th of April, 1861, and served for three months under the President's first call for 75,000 men, as a member of Company A, First Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, commanded by Captain James L. Selfridge. He became a member of Captain William J. Palmer's independent company, the Anderson Troop, on the 12th of October, 1861, at Carlisle, Pa. The company was raised under an order of the Secretary of War, and acted as bodyguard for Major General Anderson, of Fort Sumter fame, then commanding in Kentucky, and Mr. Daugherty became a fourth sergeant of the company. He participated in the battle of Shiloh, of Pittsburg Landing, Perryville, Murfreesboro, or Stone River, and was at Fort Donelson the day after the surrender, where he saw General Grant for the first time. He was also in the siege of Corinth, Miss., and in numerous smaller engagements. For a time he was on duty in the Gault House in Louisville, Kentucky, and witnessed the shooting of General Nelson by Jefferson C. Davis. On the 26th of March, 1863, Mr. Daugherty was mustered out of service with the entire company.

In the following year Mr. Daugherty became bookkeeper at the Yorktown Colliery in Carbon county, Pa., and continued in that position for thirty years, during the last eight years of which he was also a member of the firm, the business being conducted under the name of George H. Myers & Co. In November, 1894, he removed from Yorktown Colliery to Allentown, and became interested in the independent telephone business. He was one of the organizers and the president of the Lehigh Telephone Company, and remained at its head until the business was emerged into that of the Consolidated Companies of Pennsylvania, of which he is now a director. He is also a member of the directorate of the Inter-State Telephone Company of New Jersey.

Mr. Daugherty cast his first presidential vote for Bell in 1860, but since that time has been a stalwart Republican. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution, and is a thirty-second degree mason. Major Daugherty has a large and valuable library, and is exceptionally conversant with the history of the State.

Mr. Daugherty was married Jan. 15, 1859, to Miss Jane Hewitt. She was a school girl of Brooklyn Center, Susquehanna county, Pa, until twelve years of age, at which time the family removed to Nesquehoning, Carbon county, and there she afterward gave her hand in marriage to Mr. Daugherty. She is a descendant of Jedidiah Hewitt, who removed about 1800 from Rhode Island to Susquehanna county, Pa, and there her father, Abel Hewitt, was born in 1804. He was a man of much ability, was an uncompromising Democrat through his entire life, and for many years served as a justice of the peace in his native county, and also for a term in Carbon county. He was school director for many years, and took an active and helpful interest in all matters pertaining to the public schools and their substantial development. He died at the advanced age of eighty-eight years, and was buried in Fairview cemetery, Allentown, Pa. He married Julia Fish, a daughter of Anthony Fish, who was born at Mystic, Conn., whence he emigrated to Brooklyn, Susquehanna, Pa. The Fish family is a large and influential one in this state, and has furnished many soldiers and statesmen to Pennsylvania.

The children of Thomas Daugherty and Jane (Hewitt) Daugherty are as follows: Oscar Hammond, born in 1860, died at the age of nine years; William Hewitt, born in 1862, died at the age of twenty-two years; Mary Laird, born in 1865, died at the age of twenty years; George Hammond, born in 1868, is living in Allentown; Nellie Andrews, born in 1872, is the wife of Charles F. Huber, superintendent of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Co., Pa; Abel Hewitt, born in 1869, is married and lives in Bethlehem; Lillian Jane, born in 1874, is at home; and Julia Estelle, born in 1877, married W. A. Pollock, son of the Rev. Dr. J. F. Pollock, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Allentown.

George Hammond Daugherty, son of Thomas Daugherty, was born in Audenried, Pa., attended the public schools, and afterward became a student in the Bloomsburg State Normal School, but because of ill health he put aside his text books before graduation. He then went to Colorado, and after his health was improved he returned to Pennsylvania, and attended the Shortledge Academy at Media. When his course of study there was completed, he entered Pierce's Business College in Philadelphia, where he pursued a complete commercial course and was graduated with the class of 1887. Thus well equipped for business life he entered the office of George H. Myers & Co., coal operators, his father being interested in the business. Later he went to Birmingham, Alabama, where he established a foundry for the casting of hardware specialties. He conducted that enterprise for eight years, but misfortune overtook him, his entire plant being destroyed by fire. After this disaster he returned to Allentown, where he started the Daugherty Iron Foundry for the manufacture of general castings made to order. He also makes a specialty of grate bars. This business was founded in December, 1900, and is now in a profitable condition.

Mr. Daugherty is a staunch Republican in his political views, and in religious belief is a Presbyterian. While in the South he was married to Elouise Brooks, of Tuskegee, Ala., a daughter of Hon. A. L. Brooks, and a niece of Hon. C. W. Thompson, one of the leading politicians of the South. She has one brother, Lothair Brooks, of Ensley, Ala., who married Minnie Woods, and they have three children, Edith, Lothair, and George, the youngest son being named for George H. Daugherty. Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty have one child, a daughter, Jean Brooks Daugherty.

HOWARD E. DAUM.

John Daum was born in 1832 in Darmstadt, Germany. He emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1849, and located near Columbia, in Lancaster county, where he superintended the operation of a blast furnace for many years. He lived in retirement at Lancaster for some time, and died in 1907, his remains being buried in the cemetery of the church at Ironville. He was married to Mary Heineman, daughter of Isaac Heineman. She was born in 1835, and died in 1904. They had eight children: Alice, Henry, William, Anna, Sherman, Howard E., and two died in infancy.

Howard E. Daum, engaged in the slate business at Slatington and Slatedale for a number of years, was born at Ironville, Lancaster county, April 14, 1868, and attended the public schools there and at Columbia. He followed the printing trade for a time, but then learned telegraphing and filled positions with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Columbia and Wilkes-Barre, until 1889, when he became dispatcher for the P. & R. R. Co., at Slatington, and served three years. He then accepted the position of traveling salesman for the Slatington-Bangor Slate Co., in soliciting trade in the eastern section of the United States and continued with this company and others, until 1901, when he engaged in the business of manufacturing blackboards and structural slate, locating his factory at Slatington. His business soon developed to such proportions that he was obliged to remove his plant to Slatedale and there he conducted it in a most successful manner until he died Feb. 6, 1912. He became affiliated with the Elks, Knights of Pythias, Junior Order of U. A. M., and the Royal Arcanum. He took great interest in local education and served several terms as a member of the Slatington school board, officiating as secretary at the time of his decease.

On March 8, 1898, Mr. Daum was married to Ida Catharine Bachman, a daughter of Walter Bachman, whose sketch also appears in this publication, and they had one child, a son, named Ivor Howard.

GEORGE DAVIES FAMILY.

George Davies, deceased, formerly the senior member of the well-known foundry and machine firm of Davies and Thomas, Catasauqua, Pennsylvania, was born in the village of Merthyr-Tydvil, Glamorganshire, Wales, April 9, 1837. The firm of Davies and Thomas was formed in 1879 and rapidly built up a very large business. In the execution of some responsible contracts they established a great reputation throughout the eastern portion of the United States.

His father, Daniel Davies, also a native of Wales, and a molder by trade, left his native land in June, 1846 accompanied by his family, and arrived in New York in July of the same year. He found employment as a foundryman in the Novelty Works, New York City, afterward being employed in Jersey City, New Jersey, and Phoenixville, Pennsylvania; later he went to Tamaqua where he entered the employ of the late Hopkin Thomas, father of the junior partner of Davies and Thomas. In the early part of 1849 Mr. Davies left Tamaqua and went to Weatherly, and in July of 1850, came to Catasauqua, entering the foundry of the Crane Iron Company, under the late David Williams, manufacturing castings on contract. Severing his connection with the Crane Iron Company in 1865, he entered into partnership with William Thomas in the foundry business, purchasing the old planing mill in East Catasauqua; three months later his son, George, was admitted to partnership. After two years the firm of Davies and Thomas was dissolved, Mr. Thomas withdrawing his interest after which the title became Davies and Son, and the business was thus conducted until the death of Daniel Davies, in April, 1876, at sixty-three years of age.

He was a man of staunch integrity and honorable, upright principles, and for many years held membership in the Presbyterian church. His wife, Mary (Phillips) Davies, was born in Wales, and died there in the year 1839. Their children were: John, who died in 1862; George, mentioned hereinafter; and Mary A., who became the wife of James Thomas.

George Davies spent the first nine years of his life uneventfully in the land of his birth.

Coming to Catasauqua with his father in 1850 he worked at the trade of molder for two years, after which he served an apprenticeship of five years at the trade of machinist with the Crane Iron Company, under Hopkins Thomas. In 1861, in company with Thomas Jones, he entered Eastman's Business College at Poughkeepsie, New York, and graduated with honors from that noted commercial school. In 1863, while at Parryville, he enlisted as first sergeant of Captain James Thomas' Company, Thirty-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Emergency Volunteers, Colonel Charles Albright commanding. He marched with his company to Gettysburg, thence to Port Richmond, Philadelphia, and was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of service.

Mr. Davies, prior to the war, was employed as master mechanic in Belvidere, New Jersey, Camden and Amboy (New Jersey) shops, the Novelty Works, New York City, and at Parryville, Pennsylvania. After the close of hostilities he returned to the latter named place, and became master mechanic there for a short period of time. He then took up his residence in Catasauqua, and with the exception of about five years (1871 to 1876) when he had charge of the Carbon Iron Works at Parryville, he remained there until his death. In 1879 his brother-in-law, James Thomas, with whom he had been on terms of intimacy from childhood, purchased a one-half interest in the foundry and machine shop at Catasauqua, and this business relationship continued until the death of Mr. Davies. The two men were devoted companions, the wishes of one being law with the other. The firm manufactured castings for many important enterprises, including the underground electric railway in Washington, D. C., the Broadway cable in New York, the East River Tunnel, the Hudson River Tunnel and the Traction and People's cable lines in Baltimore. They also manufactured car castings and were the designers and original manufacturers of the Davies and Thomas engine. The works occupied at the time of Mr. Davies' death about ten acres, the foundry covering one acre, and the machine-shop being one hundred and thirty-five long by fifty feet wide. There were four large boilers, two blowers operated by two Davies and Thomas engines of one hundred and fifteen horse-power, and fifteen cranes, two of which, made by William R. Thomas, will lift fifteen tons each. The firm was identified with the Wahnetah Silk Company, of which Mr. Thomas was president and Mr. Davies a director. There was also the principal stockholders in the Electric Light and Power Company, which was established in 1890.

Mr. Davies was also a director in the Bethlehem Electric Light and Power Company, which was established in 1882, and of which James Thomas was president. He was the owner of valuable real estate in West Bethlehem, and a stockholder in the Catasauqua National Bank.

Mr. Davies was identified with the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Porter Lodge No. 284, at Catasauqua. He was a staunch adherent of the principles of the Republican party, but was unwilling to allow his name to be presented for official position, preferring to devote his entire time to business pursuits. As a member of the school board, upon which he was serving at the time of his death, he was instrumental in promoting the grade of scholarship in the Catasauqua schools. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which body he served in the capacity of trustee, steward and class-leader. He was a member of the building committee at the time of the erection of Grace Methodist Church and parsonage, and was one of the most liberal contributors thereto.

On August 4, 1864, in Catasauqua, Pennsylvania, Mr. Davies was united in marriage to Mary A. Evans, who emigrated from Wales and daughter of Thomas R. Evans, who emigrated from Wales to America, settling in Catasauqua, where for many years he followed the trade of blacksmith. Mrs. Davies received an excellent education in Tremont Normal school, and was a successful teacher prior to her marriage. The following children were born to them: John M., who died in 1885; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Harry E. Graffin, of Catasauqua; Rowland T., mentioned hereinafter; George, who was superintendent for the Westchester Lighting Company at White Plains, New York, for a couple of years; later was connected with the Davies and Thomas Company's Works, but is now serving a responsible position in New York; James T., who is mentioned later, and two infant children who died at Parryville.

Mr. Davies passed away at his late residence, Second and Race Streets, Catasauqua, Monday evening, October 1, 1894, after an illness of two days. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon from his late residence, the Rev. C. M. Simpson, his pastor, preaching an eloquent discourse, the Rev. Dr. Earle, of the First Presbyterian Church, offering the prayer, and a selected choir rendering appropriate music. It was one of the largest and most eloquent tributes ever paid to a deceased citizen of Catasauqua. The workmen attended in a body, and numbered about one hundred and fifty. The remains were interred in the family plot in Fairview cemetery. Mr. Davies was a most affectionate husband, a devoted father, a loving brother, a true and excellent citizen, a consistent Christian, a considerate employer, and on all sides were spoken words of praise for the manner in which he acted the part of a true man. His like is seldom met, and his sudden death was universally regretted. At a meeting of the board of directors of the Catasauqua School District, the president announced the death of their late fellow-member, George Davies, whereupon the following was unanimously adopted:

In view of the death of our fellow school director, Mr. George Davies, we, the remaining members of the Board, desire to put on record our conviction that in the death of Mr. Davies the educational interests of Catasauqua have suffered a heavy loss. The public schools have lost a liberal-minded and liberal-handed patron; the teachers and pupils have lost a kind and considerate friend, who was ever ready to promote their interests. In the School Board we have always found in him a congenial associate, a wise and prudent counsellor and an enthusiastic advocate of everything that seemed to be necessary for the improvement of our schools.

As a mark of respect for the departed, we close the schools on the day of the burial, in order that the teachers, as well as the Board of Directors, may attend the funeral in a body; and as a farther mark of respect, we agree to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Davies by the appointment of his eldest son, Rowland T. Davies, as a member of the Board until the next election.

A special meeting of the Board of Health called and convened October 3, 1894, to take action on the death of Mr. George Davies. On motion the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That in the death of Mr. George Davies the Board loses an honored, esteemed and efficient member, whose wisdom and council will often be missed in our deliberations.

Resolved, That we extend to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of trial and sorrow.

Resolved, As a last tribute of respect, we attend his funeral on Thursday, October 4, 1894, in a body. AUSTIN A. GLICK, Secretary.

ROWLAND T. DAVIES, the second oldest son of George and Mary A. (Evans) Davies, was born March 24, 1869, at Catasauqua, Pennsylvania. During his boyhood days he attended the public schools from which he graduated in 1884, and later became a pupil of A. N. Ulrich, of Catasauqua, who conducted a private school for the preparation of boys for college. Subsequent-

He was educated in the Catasauqua high school; the Beltz Academy, at Stamford, Connecticut; the Stiles' Preparatory Academy, at Ithaca, New York, and at the Lehigh University. He followed the machinist trade with the Davies Thomas Company for three years, then was transferred into the office and became the assistant to the purchasing agent, continuing in that position until February, 1911. He now conducts a cigar, tobacco and confectionary business at the corner of Bridge and Front streets, in Catasauqua, where he has always lived. He is a member of Porter Lodge, No. 284, F. A. DEIBERT FAMILY.

The name of the family was originally Tauber, signifying a dealer in doves. The name is still retained by a tributary of the main in Germany, whence the ancestors of the American stock emigrated. A peculiarity of some dialects in Germany, as well as of the Pennsylvania German vernacular, is the change of the initial "t" to "d," and the addition of the letter "t" to the suffix "er." Examples of the former change are the transition from Truckenmiller to Druckenmiller, Tiefenwifer to Diefenderfer, Taubler to Deibler; the latter transition will be noticed in the change of Boger to Bogert, Herber to Herbert, Schiffer to Schiffert. Both of these changes appear in this family name. The first transition was made to Taubert, subsequently changed to Teubert. Other recent forms of the name are Deuber, Deuver, Deiber, Deubert, and Deibert. Thus these various forms appear in the names of Catharin Tauber (Mrs. John Adam Roeder) who came to America in 1724; Rev. R. Tauber, Hosmer, S. Dak.; Wilhelm Taubert (1811-1891), a prominent musician in Berlin, and composer of "Kinderlieder;" Emil Taubert (1844-1895), teacher in Frederick Wilhelm's Gymnasium, dramatist and poet; Michael Teubert, later Michael Deiber, the first of the family in Lowhill; Michael Deiver, the first to settler in Berks county; Rev. S. Deuber, Mankato, Minn.; Rev. G. Deiber, Elma, Ia.

The first member of this family known to have emigrated to America was Michael Deiver (Deiber), "b" being changed to "v," a peculiarity occurring in Evert, Gruver and many other names. He was the ancestor of the Deiberts in Schuylkill county. He settled in Richmond township, Berks county, near Michael's church between the years 1714 and 1720. He emigrated from Wurtemberg, and brought with him three sons, Michael, Christopher, and Wilhelm, the oldest being three years of age. Christopher settled in Virginia. In 1744, Michael, married Miss Renschler, and Wilhelm, married Elizabeth Waver, obtained a tract of 300 acres in North Manheim township, Schuylkill county, Pa., along the road leading from Schuylkill Haven to Landingville. Their descendants located principally at Pottsville, Schuylkill Haven, and Orwigsburg, and constitute a numerous and notable branch of the Deibert family.

It was about the middle of the eighteenth century that Michael Deiber and Jacob Deiber (Teubert in the record) obtained from Johann Ulrich a tract of 400 acres in North Whitehall in what is known as Deibert's Valley. They were the ancestors of the Lehigh county branch of the Deibert family. In habits, religion, and distinctive family characteristics, there is so remarkable a similarity between the Lehigh county and Schuylkill county branches that their descent from a common ancestry is very obvious.

This tract was subsequently divided between Tobias and Jacob Deibert, sons of Michael Deiber, the former retaining the old log house in the southern section, which later became the possession of his son Tobias. He purchased an adjoining farm from Peter Kuntz, which he occupied after selling the old homestead to Tilghman Klotz. Jacob built himself a new house in the northern section which successively became the property of his son Henry, his grandson Stephen and Tilghman, and his great grandson, Milton.

Little is known of the descendants of Jacob Deiber, one of the original settlers. In the latter part of the eighteenth century three Deibert brothers emigrated west.

George Adam Deibert, believed to be another brother, remained in Deibert Valley. These four brothers were contemporaries of the children of Jacob's brother, Michael, and can only be accounted for by assuming that they were children of Jacob.

Peter Deibert was a son of one of the brothers who emigrated. He was a blacksmith and plied his trade in Lowhill, assuming charge of the shop of Michael Deibert, after his death in 1825. He was unmarried, and in old age he joined his brothers in the West.

George Adam Deibert had these children; Jacob (1794-1859), blind; Daniel (1801-); Michael, blind; Joseph (1857-1870), blind; George, almost blind; Mrs. Arndt, mother of blind children; Mrs. Moyer, mother of blind children.

Michael Deiber left his home in Deibert's Valley and settled in Lowhill, his name appearing on the tax list of that township in 1762. In 1774, he purchased a tract of 25 acres from the heirs of Nicholas Sieger. This tract was conveyed to Nicholas Sieger in 1759 by John Shade, who obtained it by proprietary warrant in 1754. In 1774, Michael Deiber also acquired another tract of 97 acres adjoining the first tract, from Jacob Wolf for one hundred pounds, and one penny. These latter tracts were sold to Lewis Ruschel in 1778 for one hundred and seventy-eight pounds. On the deed appear the names of Col. Stephen Balliet and Martin Groff as witnesses. These tracts formed the nucleus of Col. Harry Trexler's vast animal reserve. This tract was known as the Geiger farm, and is at present tenanted by James Snyder. He was a blacksmith by trade. He was married to Maria Barbara, and had these children: Michael (1756-1825), John (1766-), Tobias, Jacob, and Margaritha (1761-).

Michael Deibert, Sr., son of Michael Deiber, took an extensive section of land lying on both sides of the Jordan, and lived in the house lately occupied by the family of Solomon Klotz. He was a blacksmith and his shop was located opposite his house across the road. He was a member of the building committee that superintended the erection of the Union Church in 1797, and was also a member of the committee formed to conduct a lottery, authorized by act of Assembly, to defray the expense incurred in erecting a new school building at Unionville in 1808. It is now used as a dwelling house of the organist of Union church. He was married to Barbara Gross (1764-1840), and had these children: Michael (1785-1858), John (1790-1862), Jonas, Daniel (1787-1861), and Catharine (1792-1850).

Michael Deiber, Jr., and his brothers took the old tract and divided it. Michael took the section south of the Jordan constituting at present the farms of Henry Shoemaker and Charles George. John kept the old homestead, and later built himself a new brick house upon that part of his tract now owned by Frank Ult. Daniel took the part that was later owned by Moses Wehr, and is at present a part of Col. Harry C. Trexler's tract. Jonas who moved to Weisenberg township, received the rest of the tract. Michael and his son Dennis took charge of a store and hotel in Schencksville in 1833, but they returned to the Lowhill homestead in 1840. Later Michael erected a new home which was occupied by his son Reuben, with whom he lived until his death in 1858. He was a member of the building committee that erected the Morgenland church. JOSEPH P. DEIBERT.

By a former pupil, William Kistler Huff.

Whole libraries have been written on the influence of the schoolmaster, his power for good in the lives of his boys and girls; but one concrete example is infinitely more convincing than volumes of generalities. Those who can look back to schooldays under Joseph P. Deibert, principal of the schools of Schnecksville, Lehigh county, always regard him one of the most wholesome influences in their lives. Mr. Deibert was born in Schnecksville, attended the village schools, and in 1872 entered the Keystone State Normal School, from which he was graduated as valedictorian of the class of 1875. After teaching a year in Schnecksville he was for two years instructor in English in Northwestern University, Watertown, Wisconsin. This university conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Soon after returning east he was married to Miss Flora Kern, of Slatington. Again elected principal of the Schnecksville schools he has been teaching in North Whitehall township continuously for thirty-five years. He started a subscription summer school, which in 1885 became the Schnecksville Summer Normal. The fame of this training school for teachers spread rapidly, until it became necessary year after year to turn many away for lack of room. Pupils came from Lehigh and surrounding counties, in such large numbers that it became necessary to turn many away for lack of room. The purposes of the Schnecksville Summer Normal combined those of the old time academy and of the teachers' training school. Mr. Deibert is popularly known as the "Father of Teachers"; probably a hundred and fifty of his former pupils are now teaching, most of them in Lehigh county, an equal number having gone into law, medicine, the ministry, and business.

During the three years, 1906-1909, when he was principal of the North Whitehall Township High School, the number of annual graduates increased from four to sixteen. His success is to some extent due to his "School Outlines," published and copyrighted in 1905, revised and enlarged in 1912, consisting of facts, definitions and queries in Physiology, English Grammar, Spelling, Geography, American History and Civics.

The bare facts of his life, however, furnish a simple record, and fail utterly to do justice to his real work. To understand its real significance one must be on the ground as a pupil and have the benefit of his masterly teaching, his attractive personality, and his inspiring sympathy. In "The Ideal Teacher" George Herbert Palmer, one of the world's really great teachers, outlines the requirements of the ideal teacher, and Mr. Deibert stands the test: the scholarship, the inspiration, the forgetfulness of self in the desire to help the pupil, the understanding, and sympathy, of the ideal teacher, these are Mr. Deibert's dominant qualities. Had he desired to seek glory in that world beyond the quiet hills of North Whitehall he could doubtless have attained it; but he has done work equally great, he has made his community a better place to live in, and, above all, a better place to go to school in. He has raised the standards of its teaching unmeasurably by his influence upon the work of his pupils; and has by his precept and example instilled efficiency and inspiration into many a school-room in a way that printed books on pedagogic methods can never hope to do. Charles Rudy, once a teacher in Schnecksville, as the head of a great private school in Paris, the International Institute, brought fame to the Pennsylvania German village which had been his home, but Joseph P. Deibert is to-day revered by his community as Schnecksville's greatest school-master.

In David Grayson's masterly "Adventures in Contentment" probably the finest character is John North, the country doctor. After his death David Grayson sums up the doctor's lifetime of service in the simple phrase "He left his mark upon these hills." The whole countryside was better and happier for his presence and such inevitably is the highest service of a John North or a Joseph P. Deibert.

Here is a type of the true elder race,
And one of Plutarch's men stands—
With us, face to face.

DELONG FAMILY.

One of the most interesting strains among the Palatinate emigration to the new world, and especially to eastern Pennsylvania, is that of the Huguenots. These French Protestants (Reformed) after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, fled to Switzerland, to the Palatinate and to Holland, whence many of them finally came to Pennsylvania, and quite a few settled in Lehigh county. Dr. W. H. Egle says of them: "The Huguenot emigrants as a class have furnished a larger number of men of eminence in proportion to their number, than any other nationality. So strongly marked were their characteristics that neither time nor amalgamation with other races has as yet extinguished the traces of their high moral sentiments and love of liberty from the character of their descendants. This character is still a dominant force in our national life. In the fire of the pulpit, in the eloquence of the legislature hall, in the various fields of learning and research, the Huguenot spirit still leads the van." Among the many Huguenot families of eastern Pennsylvania the DeLong and allied families stand out prominently. The exact date of their arrival is uncertain. According to the New England Genealogical Register, there lived in Ulster county, New York, in 1711, a certain Francis DeLong, the father of four sons. He is said to have been a native of Ulster county.

Peter DeLong, the ancestor of the DeLong's of Berks county, migrated from Ulster county, New York, to Pennsylvania, and settled in Maxatawny township, Berks county (then Philadelphia county), in 1738. A patent for 186 acres was granted to him June 27, 1738. He was married in 1722 to Eva Elisabeth Weber, a daughter of Jacob and his wife, Anna Elisabeth Weber. Mr. Weber was a member of the famous Rev. Joshua Kocherthal Colony, which settled in Dutchess county, New York, in the spring of 1709. In a record of the colony made April 20, 1710, we find the following mention of him and his family: "Jacob Weber, aged 30, husbandman and wine-dresser; his wife Anna Elisabeth, 25, their children Anna Maria, 5; and Eva Elisabeth, 1." On the early record of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church of West Camp, New York, we find the following entries: "In the year 1708 on board the ship, the Globe, the following were baptized by me: 'September 14, Johann Hermann, son of Jacob and Anna Elisabeth Weber, sponsors: Hermannus Schunemann the clerk and Johann Roth the constable on board the ship; April 19, 1710, baptized by Rev. Justus Falckner (in the absence of Rev. Kocherthal) Johannes, child of Jacob and Elisabeth Weber, sponsors Michael Weigand and wife Anna Catharine.'" In 1719, there was patented, on the west side of the Hudson river, above the highlands of Ulster, near the place called Quassaick, lot No. 7, containing two hundred acres, to Jacob Weber and Anna Elisabeth, his wife, Eve Maria, and Eva Elisabeth, their two daughters, that is to say to each of them fifty acres." Mr. Weber was one of the trustees of the Lutheran congregation at Newburg. He is said to have removed to New Holland, Lancaster county, in 1736.

The land selected by Peter DeLong was a level tract of land, well timbered, a few acres of the original forest are still standing, and well watered, is rich and productive. He, the pioneer, toiled and struggled clearing the land and building a house and rearing a God-fearing family. Near the close of his life, Oct. 8, 1759, this pious Reformed Huguenot gave two acres of land for an "Evangelical Reformed Church and school house, not only for a short period, but as long as the sun and moon shall shine in the heavens and the rivers run down to the sea." It is therefore, not without reason that from the loins of this plain but God-fearing settler have sprung a long list of staunch Protestant heralds of the cross. He died about 1760 and his remains and that of his wife no doubt repose in the cemetery of the church of which he is regarded as the founder.

From the different records of will, church books, tombstone inscriptions, family Bibles, and baptismal certificates, the following genealogical table has been constructed: Peter DeLong, and his wife, Eva Elisabeth Weber DeLong, had the following children: 1. John. 2. Henry, born 1733, had fourteen children, five sons and nine daughters: Henry, Peter, John, Andrew, David, Catharine (Gressly), Elisabeth (Wassum), Sarah, Magdalena, Susannah, Maria, Elizabeth (Pick), and Catharine. Of these Peter settled at Shepherdstown, West Virginia, at the time of the American Revolution; descendants of the branch live at Topton, in the persons of Tilghman DeLong, and near Shenandoah, Henry DeLong. 3. Jacob, who sold his farm to Henry in 1769, was living in 1778, when his brother

Abraham died, and is mentioned as a beneficiary in Abraham's will. 4. Michael (1739-1819) had a family of twelve children, eight sons and four daughters: Gideon, Abraham, Michael, Isaac, David, Daniel, Polly, Gronan, Susan, Mrs. Repert, Mrs. Rauzahn. He owned that portion of homestead where Bower's Station is situated. David had twelve children: five sons and seven daughters: David, Samuel, Ephraim, Joel, Alvin, Caroline (Roth), Catharine (Croll), Esther (Ahn), Helena (Siegfried), Judith (Fegely), Sarah (Hensing), Susan (I. Hellick, 2. Brandt). 5. Abraham married _____, died before he was 35 years old, in 1778, leaving widow, no children. He left a considerable estate and bequeathed moneys to each of a number of nieces and nephews with express provision same to be expended on their education so they might learn to read the Holy Bible. His home was the present Grimm farm, north of Bower's, part of original DeLong tract. 6. Barbara, married, of her little is known. 7. Frederick, settled in Brunswick, now Schuylkill county, Pa. On Oct. 20, 1801, bought by patent 140 acres located here. Oct. 3, 1809, sold his land to his son Peter for 100 pounds in cash and support of self and wife during life. Descendants settled in Ohio.

John DeLong, son of Peter, was born in Ulster county, New York, March 27, 1723, and removed with his parents to Maxatawny. On April 4, 1749, he was married to Maria Catharine Dussinger. She was born in Nassau, Germany. He lived on a part of the old homestead now owned by James DeLong. On the fly-leaf of the old German Bible still in use in DeLong's Reformed church at Bower's Station appears his name under the date of Nov. 27, 1767, as the purchaser of the same on behalf of the congregation and his name also heads the subscription list, subscribing 5 shillings. During the Revolutionary War he espoused the cause of freedom and on May 25, 1777, appeared before esquire Samuel Ely and swore allegiance to the new government. He died Nov. 22, 1813, and was buried on the congregational cemetery at DeLong's church, where also the ashes of his wife and many of his descendants repose. To him and his good wife were born five sons and four daughters: Johannes, born Feb. 5, 1755; John Nicolaus, born July 19, 1756; Anna Maria (Neiss), born Aug. 15, 1757; Anna Margretha (Guth), born Aug. 18, 1759; Joseph, born March 18, 1764; Peter, born May 8, 1766; Moses, born Feb. 19, 1768; Eva Elisabeth (Neiss), born Feb. 28, 1770; Catharine (Leindeker), born Jan. 23, 1772. Captain DeLong, of the ill-fated Jeanette polar expedition was of this line.

Moses DeLong, son of Johannes, resided on that part of the old homestead was known as the Grim farm. He was anxious to have his children learn English. He erected a log school house on his premises and employed an English teacher. To this school came pupils for miles to learn English, it being the only English school in that section of the country. This building has long disappeared but the public school district is still known as DeLong's district. He was the father of seven children, of whom Joseph, Levi, and Lydia, went to New York; Jonathan, to Massachusetts; Abraham to Illinois; and Catharine and Margaret lived in Allentown. Of the above, Joseph still survives, residing in Brooklyn, N. Y. Recently he celebrated the hundredth anniversary of his birth.

Joseph DeLong, son of John and grandson of Peter, was twice married, the first time to Susanna Weber, of Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, by the Rev. John Henry Helfrich, May 17, 1795. She was born Sept. 4, 1775, and died Aug. 26, 1808. She was survived by: Joseph, who was married to Anna Wetzel, and had two daughters, Carolina Heston and Harriet Hummel; Elizabeth, married to Daniel DeLong; and Jacob. On May 16, 1809, he was married to Susanna Butz (See Butz Family). They had issue: Catharine (Nov. 28, 1812-June 16, 1886), married to Peter Hensinger; Francis; and Jane, married to Reuben Miller.

Jacob DeLong, son of Joseph and grandson of John, and great-grandson of Peter, was born on the old homestead March 27, 1803, and was married, May 1, 1836, to Sarah Schaeffer, a daughter of Philip Schaeffer, of Richmond township, Berks county. He was a life-long farmer and resided near Tipton, Pa. He was accidentally killed while hauling lumber from Allentown for the erection of a horse-power shed, Oct. 23, 1851. Mrs. DeLong survived her husband many years, living to be 92 years, 8 months and 18 days. Their ashes repose on the family plot at the DeLong's Reformed church, of which they were faithful members. Their union was blessed with four children: Joseph; Alfred; Philip; and Elizabeth, married to the late Daniel Merkel, of Fleetwood.

Joseph DeLong, son of Jacob, was born near Tipton, Feb. 11, 1837. At his baptism the grandfather, Joseph DeLong, was god-father. When the officiating minister inquired as to the name to be given to the child, instead of giving the name which the parents had selected he gave his own and the pastor, before the parents could interfere, baptized him Joseph. He was educated in the public schools and reared on the farm. On Dec. 25, 1861, he was married to Mary H. Yoder, a daughter of Martin and Catharine (Hoch)

Yoder, and a granddaughter of Martin and Susanna (Peter) Yoder, of Oley township, Berks county, Pa. This union was blessed with seven children, of whom Katie, Sallie and Harvey J. died in childhood, and S. Mollie, who was married to Marion Hertzog, was fatally injured in an explosion in Berwin garage at Allentown. Those still living are Calvin M. DeLong, pastor of the New Goshenhoppen Reformed church, East Greenville, Pa.; Elizabeth A., married to Rev. John Baer Stoudt, pastor of Grace Reformed church, Northampton; and Frederick H., who possesses the old homestead and resides with his mother at Tipton. Joseph S. DeLong died Feb. 25, 1896, and his remains were buried on the family plot at DeLong Reformed church, Bower's, Pa.

Francis DeLong (Feb. 20, 1815-Nov. 1, 1880) son of Joseph and Susanna (Butz) DeLong, was born and reared and lived on the old homestead near Bower's, Pa. He attended public school and was confirmed as a member of DeLong's Reformed congregation of which he and his good wife were faithful members and where their ashes repose. To him and his wife, Esther Schaeffer (Jan. 8, 1816-Nov. 20, 1893), a daughter of Philip Schaeffer and a sister to Sarah, the wife of Jacob DeLong, his brother, to whom he was married in 1837, were born seven children: Joseph; Rev. John F.; James; Winfield; Susan, married to Isaac Kutz; Maria, married to Rev. D. K. Humbert; and Hettie. "They were God-fearing parents and brought up their children strictly not only according to our Christian faith in general but strictly also according to the faith and customs of the Reformed Church. It was a rule of his house that not only the children but also the hired help as well had to go to the house of worship on Sunday. Apparently he believed with Joshua of old, that what ever authority came to him as the head of a household should be used by him to its fullest extent in the service of God."

REV. JOHN F. DELONG, D.D., was born on the old homestead near Bower's Station, Nov. 8, 1847, and was reared on the farm. He attended, in addition to the local school, Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, New York, and the Keystone Normal School at Kutztown, and in the fall of 1868 entered the sophomore class at Franklin and Marshall College from which he was graduated in the spring of 1871 with highest honors. In the fall of the same year he entered the Theological seminary at Lancaster, Pa., from which he was graduated in the spring of 1874. In June of the same year he took charge of Emanuel's Reformed congregation in Williamsport, Pa., and continued as its pastor until December, 1879, when he accepted a call from the Bellefonte charge, which he served until May, 1886. During his pastorate there, both the parsonage and the church were rebuilt. From 1886 to 1891 he served the First Reformed church at Lewisburg, Pa., and from 1891 to 1905 the Reformed congregation of Freemansburg, Pa. In connection with the latter congregation he also served the Rittersville Reformed congregation from 1891 to 1900 and the newly organized congregation of West Bethlehem. In the summer of 1905 he resigned his charge and retired from the active ministry. Rev. DeLong is a careful student, clear thinker and earnest preacher. He stands high in the council of his church and in classical and synodical gatherings his advice is frequently sought. He is one of the leaders of thought in his church, especially in the line of liturgics, of which he is a master. In recognition of his ability, scholarship and character, his alma mater conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He served as a member of the board of trustees of the Allentown College for Women from the time the college passed under the control of Eastern Synod until the fall of 1912, when he resigned on account of failing health.

Rev. DeLong is married to Amanda Laubach, a daughter of Samuel Laubach (See Laubach Family). This union is blessed with four daughters: Lucy; Helen, married to Rev. Paul S. Leinbach, of New York City; Miriam; and Dorothy. The family resides in their beautiful home on Broad street, West Bethlehem, and are happy in their large circle of acquaintances and friends.

Joseph DeLong, son of Francis and Esther (Schaeffer) DeLong, was born in Siegfried's Dale, Maxatawny township, Berks county, Pa. In choosing his life's work, he followed the example of his father and grandfather, namely the agricultural pursuit, which he followed for a period of twelve years in his native place, after which he moved to Bower's. He was a member of the school board for a number of years. He and family are members of the Reformed church at Bower's, which he served faithfully as deacon and elder. He was married to Catharine Siegfried, with whom he had the following children: John F., a farmer residing on the old homestead; Hattie H., married to James McKeever; Joseph, died in infancy; and Dr. George J.

DR. GEORGE J. DELONG, son of Joseph and Catharine (Siegfried) DeLong, was born at Siegfried's Dale, Oct. 8, 1876. He was educated in the public school of his native place, the Keystone Normal School and graduated from Philadelphia Dental College in 1897. After graduation he located at 16 North Seventh street, Allentown, where he has built up a fine practice.

He is a member of Salem's Reformed church, which he has served as deacon. He is a member of the following dental associations: Lehigh Valley, Susquehanna, Penn State, and National Dental Associations. He belongs to the following fraternal organizations: Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M., of Allentown; Allen Chapter, 203; Allen Commandery, No. 23, all of Allentown; Rajah Shrine, of Reading; and K. of G. E., No. 258. Dr. DeLong was married to Cora V. Bernd, daughter of Henry and Clara (Leibensperger) Bernd, now of Danbury, Conn., formerly from Allentown. This union was blessed with two children: Arline G. and Christine L.

OLIVER DELONG is a son of David DeLong, who lived and died in Heidelberg township, where he followed the occupation of farming. The old homestead is now in the possession of his son, Frank. In politics he was a Republican. His remains lie buried at the Heidelberg church, where he was a member of the Reformed congregation, in which he held various offices of honor and trust. To him and his wife, Marietta Reber, were born eight children, all of whom are still living. They are: Griffith, James, Oliver, Henry, Frank, Alice, Louisa, and Valeria.

Oliver was born in Heidelberg township, Nov. 20, 1857. He was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools. In 1883 he began to operate his father-in-law's farm in Washington township, and has continued up to the present time. Through inheritance his wife, Flora A. Blose, became the owner of it. The farm originally comprised forty-two acres to which Mr. DeLong has added a neighboring tract of thirty acres. On this adjoining tract stands an old stone house, which during the building of the Berks & Lehigh Railroad was used as a hotel. He also owns another adjoining farm of sixty-five acres, which is cultivated by his son, David S. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family are members of the Heidelberg Reformed congregation, in which he has served as a deacon and where for many years he is a member of the chair. He was married in 1882. This union is blessed with twelve children: David, Elinora, Katie, Minnie, Emma, Ellen, Louisa, Lillie, Irene, Frank O., Clara, Edna. Of these, Elinora and Emma have died.

JOHN E. DELONG, clerk at Ironton, is a grandson of Joel DeLong. His father, David J. DeLong, was born Sept. 17, 1862. As a young man his father worked in the mines in North Whitehall township and later was employed by Paul Balliet, at Ballietsville, having charge of his horses and cattle. Since 1894 he is employed as a teamster by Hon. O. E. Leh, at Egypt, during all this time he resides near Ballietsville. He is a member of the Unionville Reformed congregation, in which he serves as deacon. On Sept. 13, 1890, he was married to Ella J. Troxell, a daughter of James and Elemina (Koch) Troxell. To them were born four children: John E., Samuel, Harvey, and Maggie.

John E. DeLong was born in North Whitehall township, March 19, 1892. He obtained a fair education in the splendid schools of his native township. Since 1910 he is engaged as clerk in the general store at Ironton. He is a young man of ability and promise. He enjoys membership in Lodge Knights of Slatington, and the Camp of P. O. S. of A., located at Egypt.

Joseph DeLong, son of Paul and the father of Prof. Edgar DeLong, was born in Upper Milford township. He was a millwright by trade, which he followed for many years, working chiefly in Lower Lehigh and Upper Bucks counties. About the year 1877 he engaged in farming near Trumbauersville, Bucks county. He retired from active life in 1892 and died Dec. 5, 1895. To him and his wife, Elizabeth Kline, a daughter of Joseph and Catharine (Harring) Kline, of Bucks county, were born seven children: Harvey; Hiram; Katie, married to Alfred Koch; Franklin; William; Edgar; and Howard. Of these, Harvey, Hiram and Howard reside at Allentown. Franklin died aged 26 years and William was accidentally killed on the railroad in 1911. Mr. DeLong was a faithful member of the Reformed Church, serving at various times as deacon, elder and trustee.

PROF. EDGAR DELONG, musical director at the Ebenezer church, New Tripoli, was born at Trumbauersville, Bucks county, April 26, 1884. He was educated in the public schools of his native township and at the American Business College, Allentown. In early youth he indicated a special aptitude for music. In 1899 he studied privately under the famous musician, W. S. Benedict, of Philadelphia. In 1905, he was elected the organist at Grace Lutheran church, South Allentown. After serving for a period of two and one-half years, he was elected to a similar position in the Trumbauersville congregation, a congregation numbering more than six hundred. On Christmas Day, 1909, he was unanimously elected organist of the Ebenezer church at New Tripoli, a congregation numbering more than eight hundred. The choir at Ebenezer is exceptionally well trained. He conducts large classes in music. His private pupils often exceed sixty in number. He is Lutheran in faith. Socially he enjoys fellowship in Livingston Castle, K. of F., and Camp No. 596, P. O. S. of A., of Trumbauersville. He was married Dec. 22, 1906, to Estella Eisenhart, a daughter of Charles and Emma (Krum) Eisenhart.

BENJAMIN L. DELONG, a son of Benjamin and Carolina (Wetzell) DeLong, was born in Lower Milford township. He was raised on the farm and attended the common schools. He learned the carpentering trade and followed it for nine years. On June 22, 1895, he married Katie L. Dorney, a daughter of Henry W. and Ella (Fegely) Dorney, and they have one child, Carrie M., who resides at home. In 1907, Mr. DeLong engaged in farming and in 1911 took possession of the Dorney farm of 96 acres at Dorneysville, and is an up-to-date and prosperous farmer.

Abraham DeLong, who settled in the upper part of Lehigh county, is supposed to have been related to Peter and may have been a brother. He died in 1756, leaving a widow and nine children and a tract of two hundred acres. Among his children were three sons: Mathias, Lucus, and Edward. John DeLong, apparently of this family, rendered valiant service in the cause of Independence, both in the field and on the frontier, guarding against Indian attacks. In 1792 he was employed by Henry Drinker to cut a road from the settlements into wilds which he had purchased from the state. This tract of 25,000 acres consisted of the unsettled land on the head-waters of the Lehigh river and DeLong's creek, and comprised parts of Wayne, Pike, Monroe, and Lackawanna counties. This road passed the romantic Lake Henry, and ended in a branch on the Lehigh, known as Bell Meadow brook.

DENGLER FAMILY.

In the year 1737 Jacob Dengler emigrated to America, coming from Germany, probably from Wittenberg. His brother, Andreas, who soon followed, died in America, unmarried. Jacob Dengler settled near Amityville, Berks county, and there built a forge and manufactured various iron implements. His remains are buried at the Swamp church.

Henry Dengler, the progenitor of the Denglers in Oley township, Berks county, a grandson of Jacob, was born Oct. 3, 1792, in Amity township. He married Sarah Guldin, a lineal descendant of the Rev. Samuel Guldin, who emigrated to this country from Switzerland in 1710, and was the first Reformed minister in Pennsylvania. Henry Dengler moved from Amity to Friedensburg, now Oley, in 1829, and engaged in a mercantile business, in which he continued until near the close of his life. He was very active in public affairs, and took a deep interest in church matters, being one of the chief promoters of the building of the First Reformed church at Friedensburg, Berks county, in 1830, donating the land and contributing liberally otherwise. For many years he served as an officer of the Reformed Church. His death occurred March 19, 1860, when he was sixty-seven years, five months and sixteen days old. His wife, Sarah, died Oct. 30, 1883, aged seventy-six years, seven months and twenty-five days. Their children were: Henry G., deceased; John G.; James G.; Harriet, married to John C. Nipe, and lives in Philadelphia; George, lives in Clarion county; Washington, who enlisted at the age of eighteen, served for two years in the Civil War, was captured July 24, 1863, and kept a prisoner in Richmond until March 23, 1864, when he was taken to Andersonville, South Carolina, and there died of starvation, May 6, 1864; Jacob, married to Sarah N. Diehl, died in February, 1905, aged seventy-one years; Mary Ann, married to Isaac Vansickle; William G.; Susanna G.; Daniel G.; and Louisa G.; who have all departed this life.

The Rev. Dr. James G. Dengler, youngest son of Henry, has been in the ministry of the Reformed Church since June, 1874. He is a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, and of the Theological Seminary located there. For nearly a quarter of a century he served one charge in Sellersville, Bucks county, Pa.; other charges served by him were Maytown, Lancaster county, Pa., and Weissport, Carbon county, Pa. Dr. Dengler has been a frequent contributor to various publications, both religious and secular, and is a scholarly man of marked attainments. As a religious leader he has few equals in devoted piety and earnestness, of both life and teachings.

John G. Dengler, the revered veteran school teacher of Berks county, is a resident of Friedensburg, Oley township, where he was born Oct. 29, 1837. His education was obtained in the Oley Academy under Prof. Jacob H. Major, and the Freeland Seminary under Prof. Hunsicker. He was licensed to teach in the public schools under the first county superintendent of Berks county, Rev. William A. Good, in 1857, and taught the first term in Oley township, in school house No. 1. Prof. Dengler has since been teaching every successive school term (except during his army service), and also conducted select schools each spring term. He has instructed thousands of boys and girls of Berks county, forming their characters through his excellent example, as he shaped their minds with his wise precepts, and he is held in highest respect by the entire county. He is now teaching the grandchildren of his first pupils. Prof. Dengler possesses a kind and benevolent disposition, which is shown in his intelligent face, and is loved for his many excellent traits and lofty ideals of life.

During the many years that he has labored in Berks county he has witnessed many changes, especially in the public school system. His first salary was twenty-two dollars per month of twenty-two days. Not only has he instructed the children under him the text of their books, but gave them the benefit of his wide experience, varied reading and exhaustive studies, and never failed to hold up the highest possible standards before their young eyes.

On April 18, 1861, Mr. Dengler, filled with patriotism, enlisted in Co. C, 7th Pa. V. I., at Harrisburg, and was in active service at Martinsburg, Va. His first enlistment was for but three months; however, on Oct. 30, 1861, he re-enlisted at Reading, for three years, in Battery M, U. S. A., Capt. James McKnight commanding, and saw some very hard service, passing through the entire Peninsular campaign, and participating in the battles of the Wilderness. When he was mustered out, Oct. 30, 1864, at Staten Island, N. Y., he was in the Sixth Army Corps.

Having thus devoted over three years of his life to his country, Prof. Dengler came back to Reading, where he arrived after midnight on Oct. 31, 1864; so anxious was he to see his dear ones that he walked to Friedensburg, a distance of twelve miles. The following day he engaged to teach the school he had left three and one-half years before, at the call of duty, and accepted the position at the earnest solicitation of the patrons, who were anxious to secure his distinguished services. Prof. Dengler has also been active in church work, ever since young manhood, and is a member of Friedens Reformed church, of which he has been an elder and trustee. He is a trustee of the Friedens cemetery company; a trustee of the Oley Academy, founded in 1857, holding this office since 1875. Since his youth Prof. Dengler has been a faithful teacher in the Sunday school.

He is a member of Minnehaha Lodge, No. 154, K. of P., at Oley; also Jr. O. U. A. M. Council, No. 23, of the same place. In addition to all his other duties Prof. Dengler is the correspondent to all the Reading daily papers at Friedensburg.

In 1907, at the Berks County Teachers Institute, an hour was set apart in recognition of Prof. Dengler's long and faithful services as a public instructor at which time he was presented with a silver loving cup, fifty dollars in gold, and seventy carnations, the last named representing the number of years he had lived. Those having the program in charge very fittingly selected his birthday for the presentation day, and the speech which accompanied the gifts, as well as his reply, will never be forgotten by those present.

Prof. Dengler has been twice married. His first wife to whom he was married in January, 1860, was Catharine Schlotman, daughter of John and Lydia (Shade) Schlotman. She was born in Oley, in 1839, and died May 5, 1875, aged thirty-five years, the mother of children, as follows: Annie, married Harvey Wismer, deceased, has four children, as follows: Carl, Millard, deceased, Frank, and Ralph, and lives at Philadelphia; Millie, married Benjamin Swavelly, deceased, has five children, as follows: Miriam, married to Edwin Deisher; Hattie, Grace, and two who died in infancy, and lives at Friedensburg; Lilla, deceased, married Milton A. D. mail route at Oley, is married to Ella Christman, and has ten children, as follows: Blanche, Harvey, John, Ella, William, Alton, Leroy, Earl, and two died in infancy; John was drowned when fourteen years old; Sallie, married to Alton Wiest, of Reading, the mother of two children, as follows: Ruth and Earl.

HARVEY S. DENGLER, the fifth child of John G. and Catherine S. Dengler, and subject of this sketch, received his education in the public schools, and Oley Academy, and later commenced teaching school at the age of seventeen, at Pricetown, for three years.

On April 29, 1892, Harvey S. Dengler engaged in the insurance business with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at Reading for three years, and from March 25, 1895, with the Baltimore Life Insurance Company, at Pottsville, for six years. On April 1, 1901, he came to Allentown, and located his office at 711 Hamilton street, where he is the superintendent of the Baltimore Life Insurance Company, which he represented during the past nineteen years.

Mr. Dengler is a member of Salem Evangelical church, Allentown, and superintendent of the Sunday school for the past ten years. He is also treasurer of the East Penna. Conference Branch of the Young People's Alliance, and one of the first eight lay delegates of the East Penna. Simon Sipple, pastor of Zion's Reformed church of Allentown, and Mrs. Harry L. Mohr, of the Lehigh Valley Shoe & Rubber Company, of the same city. From this union two children were born: a daughter who died in infancy, and a son, John Samuel, born Nov. 9, 1909.

D. GEORGE DERY.

D. George Dery, of Catasauqua, has been actively and prominently identified with the silk industry for many years, being at the present time (1914) the most extensive silk manufacturer in the United States, operating sixteen mills, employing about 3,000 hands, and having a business second to none in this country.

In 1886 he came to the United States, and at once assumed charge of a large silk mill at Paterson, New Jersey, which city is noted for its many silk manufacturing plants, and remained in the capacity of superintendent of the same mill until the year 1892, when he engaged in business on his own account, having accumulated sufficient capital from his earnings. He erected a silk mill in Paterson, which he operated until 1897, under the name of D. George Dery, and in that year moved his plant to Catasauqua, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, where he established his home and which has since been the base of his operations. He erected his first plant in the Lehigh Valley at Catasauqua, which gives employment to three hundred and fifty operators, thus making it one of the principal industries of the "Iron City," adding to its growth and welfare. The Dery mill is of brick and well equipped with all the latest improved machinery for the purpose of manufacturing silk dress goods and staple silks. In 1900, he acquired the plant at East Mauch Chunk, Pa., which is on a more extensive scale, and gives employment to more than five hundred hands. Not being able to supply the demand from the two above mentioned plants, he erected another silk mill at Allentown, in 1902, where he gives employment to more than five hundred hands, and in the twelve intervening years has constantly added other mills, thus largely increasing his facilities for his constantly increasing business. All of the mills are substantial structures, well equipped for the successful conduct of silk manufacture, and are located as follows: Allentown, Mill A; Allentown, Mill B; Allentown, Mill C; South Bethlehem, Mill A; South Bethlehem, Mill B; East Mauch Chunk, Pa.; Northampton, Pa.; Catasauqua, Pa.; Emaus, Pa.; Wind Gap, Pa.; Kutztown, Pa.; Scranton, Pa.; Olyphant, Pa.; Taunton, Mass.; Forest City, Pa.; Marietta, Pa. They add materially to the growth and welfare of the sections where they are located, and not only the Lehigh Valley, but other localities as well have been benefited by the energy, enterprise and progressive ideas of Mr. Dery, who is held in high honor by his subordinates and employees. Mr. Dery, in company with Senator A. G. DeWalt, developed an extensive plot of real estate in the vicinity of Muhlenberg College, Allentown, in 1913, which is now becoming the finest residential section of Allentown. In addition to this, Mr. Dery is the owner of several hundred acres of fine farm land in Northampton county, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Dery purchased a fine residence, No. 926 Hamilton street, Allentown, in 1912, which was formerly the residence of Colonel H. C. Trexler, being in his possession from 1889 to 1912, a period of almost a quarter of a century. Mr. Dery is a member of the Lehigh County Historical Society; the Livingston Club, of Allentown; the Hamilton Club, of Paterson, New Jersey; the Lehigh County Club; the Northampton County Club; the Bethlehem Club; the Manhattan Club, New York; and the Manufacturers' Club, of Philadelphia. He is public spirited and enterprising, a man of marked individuality of character, well informed on the current topics of the day, and his active career has been a power for good in the communities where he has resided. He is married and resides in a palatial residence at Catasauqua. Mr. Dery is a lover of the home and fireside and his community bears evidence that he is the happiest in the companionship of his estimable wife and children.

DESHLER FAMILY.

The name Deschler is of Swiss origin. The direct ancestor in America was Capt. David Deshler, who was aide-de-camp to Prince Lewis, of Baden, Germany, in the war of the Spanish Succession. He married, in 1711, Maria Wuster, born in 1690, daughter of Hans Casper Wuster, and Anna Catharine, his wife.

David Deshler, son of Capt. David Deshler and his wife, Maria Wuster, arrived at Philadelphia, on the ship Hope, on August 28, 1733. He entered the counting house of his uncle, John Wistar, and became a leading hardware and paint merchant. The Philadelphia Directory of 1767-1768, records the following: "David Deshler, Director Phila. Contribution, hardware, paints, etc. Opp. Butchers Shambles, Market St. Sign of Green Frying Pan."

David Deshler built the historic Morris Mansion,* at Germantown, but died at his home on Market street on March 20, 1792, aged 81 years.

He married, March 20, 1738, Maria, daughter of Isaac and Catharine (Feree) Le Fevre. She was born Sept. 24, 1715, died on Feb. 25,

*This mansion, which is situated No. 5442 Germantown avenue, Philadelphia, was built in the years 1772-3-4 by David Deshler, a merchant of Philadelphia, who was so noted for his integrity that his name passed into a proverb—"as honest as David Deshler." The late David Lewis, a short time before his death, handed to Mr. Elliston P. Morris, the present owner (1898) of the mansion, a package of papers in the German language containing memoranda made by David Deshler, his grandfather. Upon deciphering and translating them, Mr. Morris found that one referred to the building of this mansion, giving the description and cost of material and labor for its erection, between the years 1772-1774.

At the time of the Battle of Germantown in 1777, Sir William Howe removed his headquarters to this house, the tradition says, that Prince William (afterwards William IV), paid him a visit there.

David Deshler continued to live in this house during the summer season, until his death in 1792. It was then sold to Col. Isaac Franks, of the Revolutionary army, who lived there until 1802. But in the year 1793, when yellow fever was raging in Philadelphia, this house was selected as a temporary residence for Gen. Washington, and Col. Franks acceded to the request to rent it to the President. General Washington, writing to Burgess Ball from Germantown, under date of Nov. 24, 1793, makes a reference to this house:

"The malady with which Philadelphia has been sorely afflicted, has, it is said, entirely ceased, and all the citizens are returning to their old habitans again. I took a house in this town when I first arrived here, and shall retain it until Congress get themselves fixed; although I spent part of my time in the city."

In 1802, the house was purchased by the brothers Elliston and John Perot, gentlemen of Huguenot extraction, and they used it as a summer residence. On the death of Elliston Perot in 1834, it became a part of his estate, in the settlement of the joint estate of the two brothers. His only daughter, Hannah, had married Samuel B. Morris, of the old shipping firm of Waln & Morris, and Mrs. S. B. Morris purchased the house in 1836, from his brother-in-law, Francis Perot. Mr. Morris lived in it until his death in 1859, leaving it by his will, to his son, Elliston Perot Morris, who now resides there.

The Germantown Morris House is built in the colonial syle, having a frontage of forty feet, which, tradition says, would have been wider, but for a noble plum tree on the south side, which David Deshler, the owner of the property, was averse to removing. The main body of the building is about forty feet in depth, with back buildings, extending into the large beautiful garden, which, commencing alongside and running southward, presents a width of one hundred feet, and extends westward 435 feet. In it may be seen some magnificent trees, and box bushes more than a century old. [Recorded in History Morris Family, Philadelphia, Vol. II, pp. 670, 680.]

1774. They were the parents of six children, namely:

Isaac, who died Sept. 18, 1749.

Samuel, who died Aug. 17, 1751.

Sarah, who died Oct. 11, 1757.

Mary, married to Ellis Lewis.

Esther, married to John Morton.

Catharine, married to Robert Roberts.

The first three of the above named children died unmarried. The three sons-in-law were merchants in Philadelphia. This family were members of the Friends Meeting House on Race street, Philadelphia. The archives of this Meeting House record the marriages of their three daughters, the death of the three above-named children, and the death of their noble parents.

The family were of the nobility in Germany, and at least three branches were honored with escutcheons.

Anthony Deshler, a brother of David, married Mary Elizabeth Bensel, and had two sons and three daughters.

Adam Deshler, another son of Capt. David, was one of the first to settle in Whitehall township, Lehigh county, being one of its pioneer settlers. Alfred F. Berlin, the noted historian and archæologist, in an article read before the Lehigh County Historical Society, quotes the following:

"An original warrant now in possession of The Lehigh Portland Cement Company, gave by patent from James Hamilton, then Governor of Pennsylvania, per John and Richard Penn, the proprietaries, to Adam Deshler, dated May 5, 1751 (Patent Book, Phila., Pa., A. Vol. 15, page 593), three tracts of land situate near the west branch of the Delaware river—the Lehigh River—on or near Indian Copelin's Creek, containing 301¾ acres. One of the boundaries contained in the description of one of the tracts containing 200 acres is the middle of Indian Copelin's Creek."

Adam Deshler was naturalized April 10, 1755. He was one of the most successful farmers in the township. From 1756 to 1758 he furnished provisions for the provincial troops in the French & Indian War. In the year 1760, Adam Deshler built a stone house,* upon this tract, which is

Deshler's Fort*, a relic of the times when Indians still frequented Lehigh county, stands on the north bank of Coplay creek, on a little eminence overlooking the meadows through which Coplay creek flows. It is a substantially built structure, forty feet long by thirty in width, two and a half stories high, with walls two feet thick, and heavy timbers supporting the interior. There were originally but a few small windows in the sides, each with four panes of glass, but more have since been added, and in the gable ends there were a row of loop-holes. A large hearth and chimney occupies the center of the house, and divides the lower and upper stories into still standing and in a good state of preservation, still giving unmistakable evidence by its heavy walls of superior masonry construction, that it was built to serve other purposes than those of an ordinary farm home. Adjoining the stone building upon the north, was a large frame building in which twenty soldiers might be comfortably quartered, and a considerable quantity of military stores kept. During the Indian troubles this place was a kind of military post, furnished gratuitously by Adam Deshler, who was one of the most liberal and humane men in the region. He was a member of the Egypt Reformed congregation, and is buried in the graveyard there. His last will and testament, dated Jan. 22, 1772, was probated Sept. 20, 1781. He bequeathed his property to his widow and six children, the oldest son, David, being appointed the executor of the will. The children of Adam and Appolonia Deshler follow:

II. David Deshler, the oldest son of Adam and Appolonia Deshler, was born in 1734; was naturalized on April 10, 1761, and was a miller by trade. In 1767, he purchased from James Allen, a tract of land, the interesting deed for this property follows:

This Indenture made the twenty-fourth day of February, in the seventh year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, George the Third, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith etc. in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and sixty-seven, between James Allen of the Town of Northampton in the County of Northampton, in the Province of Pennsylvania, Esquire, Of the one part and David Deshler of the said Town of Northampton, yeoman, of the other part, witnesseth: That the said James Allen for and in consideration of the sum of five hundred pounds lawful money of Pennsylvania, unto him in hand well and truly paid by the said David Deshler, at and before the sealing and delivery heretwo apartments. In the mantlepice above this can be seen the bullet-holes made by the Indians. Adjoining the house on the north, was a frame addition, which sheltered the soldiers quartered there at the time of the Indian troubles in 1763. The house was well prepared to withstand any attacks, as it was so strongly built, and furthermore it is said there was a well within the walls.

Together with the free right, liberty and privilege to and for the said David Deshler his heirs and assigns, occupiers of a certain Grist Mill, intended to be erected and built upon the tract of land above described, to raise, make and forever hereafter support and maintain a dam or dams across the said creek for swelling the water thereof to such height as he or they shall see cause to divert and lead the same unto the mill race and for supplying the said intended mill or mills at all times, forever hereafter with a sufficient head of water so as he or they do likewise make and forever support proper sluices or flood gates in the same dams for discharging the superfluous water of the said creek, occasioned, by any inundations or freshets in the same and through which the fish at times may have a passage up the creek. "David Deshler during 1767 built upon the tract of land above described, a certain grist-mill," of which a cut appears in Vol. I, page 398, of this history. He was one of the earliest settlers of what is now the city of Allentown, "where he is credited as having built the first house." He was assessed £9 in 1762, and in 1768 he was already taxed for a grist-mill, a saw-mill, and 75 acres of land, situated in Salisbury township.

On May 1, 1767, his father sold him two tracts of land containing 195 acres on Jordan creek, which had been purchased from Peter Troxell, Nov. 25, 1758. The language of the deed follows: "Adam Deshler, of Whitehall township, yeoman, and Appolonia, his wife, in consideration of their mutual love and affection for their son David, and for the better promotion and advancement in the world as well as the sum of £200 do grant to David Deshler, a massuage and two tracts of land in Whitehall township, on a branch of the Lehi, commonly called the Jordan." These tracts Deshler sold in 1773 to George Schweyer, who sold them in 1779 to Barbara Huber, and she sold them to Rev. Abraham Blumer, in 1785.

During the Revolution he was one of the most prominent patriots in Northampton county. He acted as commissary of supplies for the army, and with Capt. John Arndt, of Easton, also a commissary, advanced money to the Provincial government out of his private means in 1780, when the public treasury was empty, and that too, at a time when the prospect of it being returned was not very bright. They both labored with unflinching zeal to promote the welfare of the public cause, and to fill the quota of the county, as required by the Acts of Congress and the Provincial Assembly. The following letter taken from (Penn. Archives 1779-1781, page 517) is of interest here:

"David Deshler to Pres. Reed, 1780.

And further, an extract from the minutes of the Supreme Executive Council of Penn. (Col. Rec., Vol. XII, page 460.)

"PHILA., Sat., Aug. 26, 1780.

An order was drawn on the Treasurer in favour of Mr. Charles Deshler, for the sum of one thousand pounds, of the money emitted by an act of the General Assembly, passed the 25th day of March, last, to be by him paid to Colonel David Deshler, Commissioner of Purchases for the county of Northampton, for purchasing supplies for the use of the Army, to be charged to Colonel Jacob Morgan, Jr., Superintendent, &c., and deducted out of an order granted him on the 14th inst."

[The Charles Deshler here referred to, was a son-in-law of David Deshler.]

Colonel David Deshler was beyond doubt the most substantial resident of Northampton Town, in his time, and his influence helped very materially in the successful culmination of the War for Independence. In 1787, he was a delegate to the convention called to ratify the Federal Constitution. He was a man of great foresight and ability, and his character and reputation were beyond reproach. In 1782, he purchased from John Benezet, a merchant of Philadelphia, for £1,800 specie, the fine home and tract of 331 acres of land along the Lehigh (then in Allen, now Hanover township) which had been previously owned by George Taylor,* who had built the house still standing on the tract in 1768, and which Mr. Taylor had sold to Mr. Benezet in 1776. Here he spent the latter part of his life, and died there on Dec. 24, 1796, aged 62 years. David and Susanna Deshler had ten children, as follows:

DAVID DESHLER.

David Deshler, the second son of David Deshler, first above mentioned, and whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born at the old homestead in Whitehall township, on the 10th of September, 1798. He left home when about sixteen years of age. He became a surveyor, and assisted in the government surveys of Kansas and Missouri. He afterwards engaged in the mercantile business in St. Louis, and later in Tusculumbia, Ala. He conceived the idea and successfully carried out the project of building a railroad from that place to Decatur, forty-two miles across the neck of a great bend in the Tennessee river, connecting its navigable waters (the water in the neck being shallow), and thus materially enhanced the commerce of that region. This was in 1834 or 1835, and the road was the first west of the Alleghenies, and probably the third in the United States. It is now a link in one of the great southern railroads between Memphis and Charleston.

David Deshler married an English woman, Eleanor, daughter of John Taylor. She was born April 17, 1808, at Lancashire, England. Their marriage took place on the 17th of March, 1825, at St. Louis, Mo., and soon after they removed to Tusculumbia, Ala. David Deshler had three children: David Taylor Deshler, born July 31, 1826; Charlotte Ann, born June 13, 1831; and James Deshler, born Feb. 18, 1833, at Tusculumbia, Ala. David, the elder son, was drowned at at "Gus Point," Hudson River, N. Y., July 17, 1845, whilst a student at the Military Academy, West Point. He is buried in the National Cemetery at West Point. James, the other son, also a cadet, was graduated, served in the army, and lost his life in the battle of Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863, aged 30 years, a brigadier-general, commanding Texan Brigade, Confederate Army.

The daughter died April 3, 1844, at twelve years of age. His wife, Eleanor T., died June 11, 1854, aged 46 years.

son, James, in 1863 (the last member of his family), he founded a non-sectarian school for the education of young women, located at Tuscum-bia, Ala., incorporated under the name and style of "The Deshler Institute"; to said institute he made a bequest of his property at Tuscum-bia, Ala. in his will; following a description of which, he says: "forming and comprising the square of lots on which my home residence is located, and upon which is situated the house in which James Deshler (in memory of whom the above institute was named and incorporated) was born."

"Deshler Institute" is still in existence, and continuing its good work in education at this writing (1914). At the time of his death Mr. Deshler owned extensive properties in and near the city of Minneapolis, Minn.

After moving to the South, David Deshler evidently became a member of the Baptist Church. A man of high principles, and unswerving integrity, he was yet of a genial, kindly nature. Personally, he was of fine presence, tall, straight, and of dignified bearing. David Deshler died suddenly, on Dec. 5, 1872, aged 74 years, 2 months and 25 days. He is buried with his family in the cemetery at Tuscum-bia, Ala.

At the age of 13, he entered a French institute at St. Immier, where he remained two years. After private instruction for three years, he entered, in 1814, the medical department of the University at Freyburg, Baden, where he remained three years. He then resolved to visit America and devote four years to the collection of zoological, mineralogical, and botanical specimens.

He left Laugenbruck, April 2, 1817, and in company with General Count Vandamme, embarked at Rotterdam, on the ship John, an old three-master, with over 400 passengers, acting as ship's physician during the voyage. He arrived at Philadelphia, July 20, 1817, where he remained six months. At the suggestion of Joseph Bonaparte, General Vandamme, the eminent French doctor, Mimges, and other emigrés, he abandoned his collection tour and entered upon the practice of his profession at Allentown, on Sept. 3, 1817, as assistant in the office of Dr. Charles H. Martin, where he practiced seven months, with signal success.

During this period, there appeared in this section a disease attacking whole families, the cause of which, discovered by "the young German doctor," proved to be lead poisoning, from the glazing, with litharge, of earthen pots. This discovery and his successful antidotal treatment, created for him an enviable reputation, and he received many invitations to locate in other localities. In April, 1818, he removed to Hellertown, where he remained until 1852, when he removed to Easton. He then entered the wholesale drug business in Philadelphia, for a time, and later took an extra course in chemicals and explosives in Cooper Institute, New York. After having engaged in the manufacture of explosives and fireworks in New York for five years he traveled by water to California and was engaged from 1872 to 1875 in mining and chemical work along the Pacific coast from British Columbia to Chili. He then became a chemist with the Bethlehem Iron Company for eight years and in 1883 opened a private laboratory in analytical work on cement and other mineral resources, which he still conducts, having been one of the pioneers in this line of work. He worked on the farm for a time, and then served a three years apprenticeship at the blacksmith trade, under Peter Heller. DIEFENDERFER FAMILY.

This family derives its name from the village of Dübendorf, situated on the left side of the Glatt river, between Fellanden and Schwamendingen, belonging to the jurisdiction of the city of Zurich, in Switzerland. The name was formerly Dübeldorf, Toubilindorf and Tobelndorf, and in ancient times possessed a nobility of its own, as Burkhard and Gerlo are mentioned in the year 1130 in a document concerning the cloister at Fahr. In 1195, Werner von Tubelndorf was a witness to a deed at the convent of Seldnau, and in 1229, Cuno von Dübendorf, Knight, witnessed a deed at the cloister of Zurichberg. In 1274 Conrad von Dübendorf was a member of the Knights' council in the city of Zurich. The church at Dübendorf is mentioned as early as 1420. It was enlarged in 1682, and was damaged by fire on Sept. 6, 1690, when the school house was destroyed. It was considerably enlarged in 1743, 1754 and 1763. The records of this church prior to 1690 were destroyed in the fire of that year, and no records of the ancient home of this family, located six miles northeast of Zurich, are extant.

John Dübendorffer, of this family, was born Oct. 8, 1663. He located at Nersheim, in Churfälzischen, near Heidelberg, where his sons, John Michael and Alexander were born. John Michael was born Jan. 10, 1695, and married, Jan. 21, 1721, Barbara Hasen. He emigrated with his wife and young son, Michael, and his brother, Alexander, to America, arriving at Philadelphia on Sept. 18, 1727.

The ship, the William and Sarah, was the first recorded in the archives of the state. John Michael settled at New Holland, Lancaster county, where he died, Nov. 12, 1778. His wife was born in 1700 and died at Lancaster, March 15, 1785. They had five sons: Michael, John, Jacob, George, and Adam. Michael, the eldest, was born near Heidelberg, Nov. 4, 1721, and died at Lancaster, Sept. 3, 1789. The descendants of these sons reside in Lancaster county and the western part of the state, and spell their name Diefenderffer.

Alexander Diefenderfer, who accompanied his brother Michael to America, received a warrant for 150 acres of land, then in Bucks county, and now lying partly in Bucks and partly in Lehigh county, on June 1, 1734. This tract was located east of the Berks county line, near the present Kraussdale. In the Journals of the Proprietary Land Office is this entry: "Dec. 4, 1739. Rec'd of Alexander Defendelfer, in part for land in Milford township, £8. 0. 0."

Alexander Diefenderfer was naturalized in September, 1740. He farmed his tract of land and was a prominent man in the community. He was a member of the Great Swamp Reformed congregation, where he was buried. He died Nov. 29, 1768. His widow, Gertrude, died in 1789, in Macungie township. They had five children: Anna Margaret, Godfrey, Gertrude, Alexander, and John.

Anna Margaret, the eldest daughter, married, first, John Nicholas Oehl, who died in 1759; and second, Nov. 25, 1760, John Maurer. Gertrude, the second daughter, married Henry Miller. On Dec. 7, 1768, Henry Miller and his wife purchased from the other heirs the tract of land which their father had owned. It was bounded by lands of Balzer Krauss, Frederick Limbach, George Hillegas, the heirs of Rev. Rudolph Kidweiler, George Horlacher, and Ludwig Bitting. On Jan. 7, 1769, Henry Miller and wife sold 75 acres of this tract to Alexander Diefenderfer, Jr., which he sold on Feb. 7, 1774, to George Hillegas, and removed to Montgomery county. Alexander, the son, was confirmed at Great Swamp church in 1758. He married Elizabeth Gertrude Leydich, who was born in Holland, Oct. 10, 1746, and died Nov. 25, 1825. She was a daughter of Rev. John Philip Leydich, the Reformed minister (1715-1784) and his wife, Mary Catharine Homrighausen. It is not known whether they had any descendants.

John Diefenderfer, son of Alexander, Sr., settled in Macungie township, where he died in 1782, leaving a widow, Magdalena, and three children: Magdalena, Jacob, and Anna Mary, born March 29, 1776. Jacob Diefenderfer was born March 16, 1765, and died Sept. 29, 1837. He married Magdalena Biery, daughter of Michael Biery. She was born April 16, 1766 and died Sept. 30, 1831. They are buried at Trexler-town church. Jacob Diefenderfer received his father's land, which he farmed, and bequeathed to his son, Jonathan. His children were: Elizabeth, born Oct. 11, 1787, died April 27, 1863, who married Christian Miller; Jonathan; Anna, born April 19, 1800; and Solomon, born April 20, died May 8, 1805.

They had eight children: Reuben, born July 13, 1848; Elizabeth B., born 1850, died 1851; Clinton B., born July 29, 1853; Edwin B.; Sarah B., born

He was confirmed a member of the Great Swamp Reformed church, and about 1750 settled in Macungie township, where he secured a tract of 100 acres by warrant of Aug. 22, 1754, and later added to his holdings until he had over 200 acres. He and his sons, John and Jacob, were enrolled as privates in Captain Greenmeyer's company of the First Battalion of Northampton County Militia, commanded by Lieut-Colonel Stephen Balliet in 1781 and 1782, in the Revolutionary War. Godfrey Diefenderfer and his wife, Anna Margaret Mattern, had seven children: John, Gertrude, Jacob, Margaret, Henry, Anna Elizabeth, and Philip.

In 1784 he purchased a tract of 200 acres along the Lehigh river, then a part of Salisbury township, on which he was assessed in that township in 1785. It later became a part of Northampton township and is now included within the limits of the city of Allentown, where, in recent years, the Allentown Iron Company's furnaces were located. On this tract was a one and a half story log house, with a long, slanting roof, over which towered a large black walnut tree, where the family resided. A large spring bubbled out of the ground and flowed into the Lehigh, which was destroyed after the building of the dam. "Diefenderfer's Spring" was a famous picnic ground and many political meetings were held there prior to 1830. John Diefenderfer was an active member of Zion Reformed church at Allentown, and at his death, March 27, 1815, was buried in the old graveyard at Tenth and Linden streets. DIETRICH FAMILY.

In dem Grosse und Allemeines Wappenbuch, published by J. Siebmacher, at Nurnberg, p. 96, is of record the following account:

Kaiser Leopold I, on Oct. 15, 1700, elevated the Castle Hirschingen, belonging to JOHANN PETER DIETRICH and his two sons, FELIX ERNST and WILHELM EMANUEL, from the feudal service to the same amorial bearing as himself, a testimonial of merit, which in later days, as in many cases of like nature, was regarded as an evidence of the highest nobility.

The following history is a literal translation from the family Bible of Johann Elias Dietrich:

"I feel it incumbent on me to copy into this Holy Bible, some of the facts concerning our family, as I have them from my grandfather's note-book, Bible, and letters."

The first of our line, WILHELM EMANUEL DIETRICH,* was born in the year of our Lord, 1680.

"Grandfather's note-book says that the above was a baron and that his father was of the highest nobility.

* "The arms consist of an escutcheon, 'azure' (blue); in each corner of which is a star, 'or' (golden); in the middle of the escutcheon is a lozenge, 'gules' (red), the corners of the lozenge touching the borders of the escutcheon; in the lowest angle of the lozenge a tri-mount surmounted by a Spanish cross, 'argent' (silver).

"Ornaments: The escutcheon is surmounted by a helmet or casque, 'argent' (silver), overhung by leaves, on the right 'gules' and 'argent' (red and silver), on the left 'azure' and 'argent' (blue and silver), and with a crest into which are inserted five peacock feathers, 'verd' (green), the middle feather being inlaid with five stars, 'or' (gold)."

My grandfather's record in his own words follows:

The sons of Wilhelm were many, but the names of only five are recorded in the Bible, namely:

- I. Casper Dietrich born in 1710.
 - II. Elias Dietrich born in 1713, on the 27 day of January.

Johannes Dietrich, son of Casper (I) came to America on the ship "Phoenix," which landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 25, 1751. It appears that soon after his arrival in this country he settled in Berks county, Pennsylvania. He married Barbara Braucher, of Albany township, Berks county. He died in 1785, and his widow, Barbara, was appointed administratrix of his estate. They had three children, all sons, as follows:

Johannes; Jacob, who is said to have settled in Schuylkill county, Pa.; and John Adam.

One Johannes Dietrich, probably son of Johannes, born Nov. 7, 1760, in Maiden creek township, Berks county, located in East Buffalo township, Union county, Pa. From there he enlisted in Col. Servant's regiment, Wayne's brigade, Pennsylvania Line, when eighteen years old, and returned at the expiration of his service, in 1781. One of the sons of Reuben Dietrich, now living in Greenwich township, recalls that his father visited his uncle (Johannes) in Union county, making the journey on horseback, and that the visits were returned.

John Adam Dietrich, son of Johannes, the emigrant, was born Nov. 23, 1784, in Greenwich township, and died on his farm July 23, 1864. He was baptized Dec. 12, 1784, by Rev. Heinrich Hartzel, in Greenwich township, and the certificate states that his sponsors were his uncle Adam and his wife, Maria Barbara Dietrich.

In 1803, John Adam Dietrich married Susanna Arnold, born Feb. 5, 1783, died Oct. 6, 1869, and both are buried immediately back of the Lenhartsville Church, of which they were prominent members. They were pious people, good, though strict parents, and "Mother" Dietrich was an excellent housekeeper, noted especially for baking the good old-fashioned bread. She had few equals as a breadmaker, and her rye bread was the best that could be made. Visitors were always treated to butter-bread and honey. Most farmers in those days had from five to twenty-five beehives, and there was always plenty of honey. "Father" Dietrich was equally noted in his way. He began farming near Dreibelbis Station, and owned the tract now owned by a Stettler, from there moving to the farm which his youngest son, Reuben A., came to own after his death. It is now the property of Reuben's son, Thomas K., who is the fourth generation to own and live upon this land.

John Adam Dietrich was a carpenter by trade, and did such excellent work that he was known as one of the best wood-workers of his day. He built the present barn on the place in 1836, and the house in 1844. The house is of stone, and as only the best stones were used, and the masons of that day knew their work well, the walls are very substantially made, as well as workmanlike. The woodwork in the house shows the same care and skill, and was done for the most part by "Father" Dietrich himself. The last will and testament of this man is a model of its kind and shows that the spirit of a pure heart actuated his deeds. It was made a few years before his death, and is on record in Will Book II, page 333, in the court house at Reading, Pa. The old family Bible is well preserved, and is now owned by his grandson, Henry K. Dietrich's estate.

John Adam Dietrich and his wife had fourteen children, of whom we have the following record:

Name.	Born.	Died.

Catharine,	Dec. 15, 1821
Reuben,	Oct. 20, 1823

It will be noticed that six members of this family were born in the month of October. Isaac, Adam and Rufena are buried at Dunkel's church.

All the children of John Adam Dietrich remained in the locality where they were born, namely Greenwich and Albany townships.

Reuben A. Dietrich, youngest son of John Adam and Susanna (Arnold) Dietrich, was born in Greenwich township, Oct. 20, 1823, on his father's homestead near Klinesville, and died July 31, 1889. He was a life-long farmer, succeeding his father on the home place, which now consists of 155 acres of valuable land. He was prosperous, and added seventy acres to this tract, but this extra land was sold off again after his death. Mr. Dietrich was originally a member of the Dunkel Church, but in 1854, when the Lenhartsville Church was organized, he became one of its members, and he was an official of that church until his death. He married Catharine Kunkel, born in 1834. Children: Alfred K., is mentioned below; Lewis K. is mentioned below; Ellen, deceased, was the wife of Alfred Greenawalt, of Bernville; Henry K., deceased, born in 1860, was a farmer near Lenhartsville, and was the vice-president of the Dietrich Family Association. He married in 1883, Mary Seidel, and they had children: Robert, Lizzie, Edgar, Flora, Nora, Harvey, and Annie, of whom Lizzie, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, is engaged in teaching; Florenda, married George Kutz; Thomas K. owns and farms the homestead; he married Ida Komp, who died June 17, 1907, and has a son, Ira; Charles and James both died in childhood. The burial ground of this family is at Lenhartsville. Mrs. Catharine (Kunkel) Dietrich now makes her home with her son, Thomas, on the old homestead.

Alfred K. Dietrich was reared to farming, and when twenty-one years old, he learned milling from Solomon P. Dietrich, who then operated what has been known for many years as "Dietrich mill." The spring after his marriage Mr. Dietrich engaged in the business for himself at

"Dietrich's Mill," which he bought about 1889, and which he conducted in all for almost thirty years—from 1877 until two years before his death. This mill is located in the Stony Run dale in Albany township. The first mill at this site was built by a Grim, in 1750, and the present stone mill is at least the second, probably the third, mill at this place. On a stone in the wall of the south gable are the dates 1750 and 1795, the latter being probably the date of the building of the second mill or the repairing of the first one. To the mill property belongs a fine farm of ninety-five acres, lying in the potato belt of this section. Mr. Dietrich raised many potatoes, planting twenty acres every year. This property is a valuable one, the buildings being very substantial. The large Swiss barn was erected by Alfred K. Dietrich in 1891. He owned also the old Wiesner homestead in Stony Run dale, a farm of 122 acres, which he bought in 1898, and which is now tenanted by his son, Irwin C., who is an enterprising young farmer, and extensively engaged in potato planting. On this farm stands a stone house which was built in 1796, and which originally belonged to Samuel Miller. On a stone in the west gable of this house is the following:

S B & H M
P E & H M
1796

On Jan. 21, 1877, Mr. Dietrich married Louisa Merkel, daughter of William D. Merkel, of Windsor, and to them were born five children, as follows: Irwin C., Anson W., Mary V., married Elton J. Trexler, of Albany Pa., and has a son, Clinton M.; Howard W.; and Agnes C. Mr. Dietrich and family belonged to the Wessnersville (Friedens) Church, all being members of the Lutheran congregation there, of which Mr. Dietrich served as deacon. He was the third person buried in the new cemetery of that church. In politics he was a Democrat.

Levi K. Dietrich was a farmer of Lynn township for upwards of thirty years. He was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, Sept. 13, 1855, where he was educated and brought up on a farm, and he was there engaged at farming until 1879, when he purchased a farm of 76 acres in Lynn township, near Lynnville, in Lehigh county, which he carried on in a successful manner until he died on Sunday, Dec. 14, 1913, aged 58 years. He has served his district as a school director, supervisor, and judge of elections; and he was a member of Jerusalem's Lutheran church, in Albany township, which he had served as deacon and trustee. In politics he had been a Democrat.

In 1877, Mr. Dietrich married Emma E. Christ, a daughter of Jacob, of Greenwich township, by whom he had a son, Valorous K., who is engaged in the jewelry business at Kempton, in Berks county. After the death of the first Mrs. Dietrich, he married (second) in 1892, M. Alice Howerter, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Kistler) Howerter. Mrs. Dietrich's maternal grandparents were Nathan and Catharine (Dietrich) Kistler. They had eight children, namely: Robert F., who died young; William H.; Lizzie K.; Edgar H.; and Norman H.; and three who died in infancy.

(I) Adam Dietrich, the second son of Casper (I) son of Wilhelm Ernst, son of Johan Peter, was born in Germany, Oct. 28, 1740, was reared to agricultural pursuits in his native country, where he also learned the trade of weaver. In 1751 his elder brother, Johannes Dietrich, emigrated to America, and settled in Greenwich township, Berks county, Pa. He was followed to this country by Adam and another brother, Casper, in 1767. The two brothers crossed the Atlantic in the ship "Britannia," which landed at Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1767.

Adam Dietrich had first located in Lowhill township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county. A warrant for 80 acres of land located in Northampton county was deeded to him Feb. 15, 1767, possibly through his brother, Johannes, who had doubtless been located in the same locality. In 1769, less than two years after his emigration to this country, their daughter, Maria Barbara, born June 17, 1769, was baptized at the Heidelberg church, on June 18th, the day following her birth. Her sponsors were Johannes Dietrich and Maria Barbara Kindt. Anna Christina, another daughter, was born April 25, 1771, and was baptized on May 5th of the same year, also at the Heidelberg church. In 1772, Adam Dietrich paid a proprietary tax of $26.96, in Northampton county. In 1779 he was a resident of Greenwich township, Berks county, Pa., and was assessed with 4 horses and 3 cows, and owned 130 acres of land. In 1780-81-82-83 he was assessed with 130 acres in Greenwich township; and in 1779-80-81-82-83-84-85, he was also assessed in Maxatawny township. He is said to have conducted an inn, located a quarter of a mile northeast of Topton, Pa., for some years, in connection with farming in Greenwich township. On Feb. 15, 1787, he obtained a warrant for 60 acres located in Greenwich township. In 1785 he bought several lots of ground on White Oak street, Kutztown, from George Kutz. In 1793, he purchased more land in Kutztown from Samuel Schoedler. On Nov. 30, 1809, he was granted a warrant for 200 acres located in Greenwich township, and this tract he sold to his youngest son, Christian, on June 3, 1812, for $2,796.

Adam Dietrich was a patriot in the Revolutionary army, and espoused the cause of freedom in active service. The secretary of the Dietrich Family Association has certified records that Adam Dietrich was a sergeant in 1781, in Capt. Jacob Baldy's company, under Lieut. Col. Joseph Hiester, of Berks county.

This ancestor was married in 1764 to Maria Barbara Steinbruch, daughter of Jacob Steinbruch, born March 13, 1741, died on the homestead in Greenwich township, June 6, 1821, aged 80 years, 2 months and 24 days. He died in Greenwich township, March 21, 1817, aged 76 years, 4 months and 3 days. Adam Dietrich and his good wife were devoted Lutherans, and members of the Moselem Church (which was established in 1742) of which he was an official, and they are buried in the graveyard adjoining the church. Unto them were born thirteen children, the two oldest, Adam and Georg, were born in Germany, and as small children were brought by their parents to this country. The names of the children follow.

(II) Johann Adam Dietrich, oldest son of Adam, the emigrant, was born Dec. 11, 1765, in Germany, and when a mere child came with his parents to Pennsylvania. He grew up on the farm, and when twenty-one years old, in 1788, married Catharine Christ, born 1767, who died in Greenwich in 1837, aged sixty-nine years. He lived in Greenwich township for some years, and then owned a farm on which he lived in the Stony Run, in Albany township. Here he died suddenly of apoplexy, Aug. 19, 1823, aged fifty-seven years, eight months, eight days. He and his wife are buried at Grimville. His three children were: Johannes, born Feb. 26, 1795, died April 1, 1872; George, died in infancy; Mary, (1803-1883) m. Jacob Wessner.

(III) Johannes Dietrich (1795-1872), son of Johann Adam, lived in the Stony Run, on the homestead which latterly was owned by his son, John, who was over six feet tall and very strong. Johannes Dietrich kept many bees, and was very successful in raising them. Visitors to his family were treated to an abundance of honey, which he had the year around. His sons and grandsons inherited from him the knowledge of bees.

In 1823 he married Catharine Kunkel, born in Albany June 8, 1800, died Sept. 22, 1880, aged eighty years, three months, fourteen days. They had the following eight children: Polly, married Daniel Fenstermacher; Rebecca (1824-1891), married Johannes Schlenker; Daniel, married Catharyn Dietrich; Anna, married Samuel Miller; Maria C., married William S. Mosser; John H., married Polly Leiby, no issue; one died young; David (1840-1852).

(IV) Daniel Dietrich, son of Johannes, was born in Albany on the homestead in Stony Run, where all his brothers and sisters were also born. He died on his farm at the top of Stony Run hill, Oct. 5, 1901, aged seventy years, seven months, eighteen days. He was a life-long farmer, and also raised bees. He was an honest and kind-hearted man, tall, strong, and a little stoop-shouldered, and wore a heavy beard. He and his family were Lutherans and are buried at Grimville. His wife, Catharyn Dietrich, a daughter of Michael Dietrich, died Oct. 10, 1895, in her sixty-sixth year. They had these seven children: Levi D., married Mary Dietrich; Catharyn, married Augustus Dietrich (they have Newton E. and Walter L.); Daniel, married Emma Reinhart; Ellen, married Jacob George; Sarah, married Mr. Baer; Charles A., married Louisa Kutz; Mary A., married Nathan Zimmerman.

(II) Johann Georg Dietrich, the second son of Adam, came with his parents to America. He was born May 7, 1767, and lived for many years in Greenwich township, near Dunkel's church, of which he was a Lutheran member. In 1809, his name appears on the church record as an official. He died Nov. 4, 1845, aged seventy-eight years, five months, twenty-seven days. He and his wife, Elizabeth Brunner (1773-1850), are buried there. Their eight children were: (1) Johannes, born 1793, died 1872, married Maria Moyer (1793-1861), and had children: Polly, Hannah, Jeremiah, Hettie and Lucinda. Polly and Hettie lived on the farm, the former past ninety years old, and the latter

(4) Maria Magdalena (1801-1880), married John Komp, and had four children. (5) George B., born 1805, died 1878, was of Greenwich. He married Polly Riegelman, and had children: Fennias, Jonas, Katie, Lewis, and Helena. (6) Daniel, born Nov. 12, 1809, died Jan. 18, 1842. (7) Ann, married Benjamin Riegelman, of Greenwich township, and had two children. (8) Lucinda, married Jacob Leshar, of near Topton, Pa., and had six children.

(III) Daniel Dietrich, son of Johann Georg, was born Nov. 12, 1809, and died Jan. 18, 1842, aged thirty-two years, two months, six days; he was buried at Dunkel's church. He was a farmer in Greenwich township. On Oct. 17, 1830, he married Catharine Leshar (1812-1844), and they had five sons and one daughter, namely: (1) Benjamin, married and had children: John, Mary, Ella, Rachel, and James D. The last named was the father of Prof. A. M. Dietrich, of Reading. (2) Samuel lived at Lewisburg, Union county, where he died. He had two children: Frank and Laura. (3) Daniel, died at Mifflinburg, Pa., at the age of fifty-four. He had three children: Charles, George and Irwin. (4) Joel L., born June 6, 1837. (5) Isaac, is buried at Hamburg. His son, Irwin, lives at Schuylkill Haven, Pa. (6) A daughter.

(IV) Joel L. Dietrich, son of Daniel, born June 6, 1837, in Greenwich township, was reared to farming. In his young manhood he went to live with his uncle, Solomon Leshar, who was a farmer in Upper Tulpehocken township. There he lived some years, and was married to Catharine Unger, daughter of David Unger, of that township. Mr. Dietrich worked at carpentering for some years, and then engaged again in farming. He owned a farm of over one hundred acres in Jefferson township, near Bernville, and this he cultivated some years. He also owned a smaller tract adjacent. In 1905 he sold his land and retired, moving into Strausstown, where he makes his home at the present time. He is highly respected, and for many years was active in the Zion's Blue Mountain church. To him and his good wife were born twelve children, as follows: (1) Franklin P., born April 2, 1860. (2) George B., of Reading, married Valeria Groff, and has one daughter, Mary. (3) Milton C., of Reading, married, in 1890, Ida Fox, and their children are: Robert F., Ida S., John J., and Annie C. (4) William A., born Feb. 24, 1866, died Sept. 6, 1903. (5) Mary, married, in 1888, Charles Christman, and has four sons and four daughters. (6) Katie, married, in 1892, William Kenney, and has one son and four daughters. (7) Amelia, married, in 1889, Calvin Himmelberger, and has three sons and one daughter. (8) Lizzie, married, in 1892, Levi Christman, brother of Charles, and has a daughter, Ella. (9) Fietta, married, in 1892, Moses Ebling, and they have four sons and one daughter. (10) Charles (1863-1884). (11) Isaac, of Rehrersburg, married Lizzie Gehart. (12) John, a music teacher and organist and chorister of the Rehrersburg Lutheran church, married Lillian Bright, and has a son, Charles.

(II) Johann Jacob Dietrich, third son of Adam, the emigrant, was born in Berks county, June 25, 1773, and he died on his farm in Albany township, whither he had moved in 1817, Jan. 1, 1857. He was an official member of the Lutheran congregation of the Union church at Lenhartsville, and is buried in the cemetery there. He was an extensive landowner. In about 1817 he settled at "Spitzenburg," in Albany township, where he successfully conducted a tannery and hotel for many years. On Jan. 30, 1829, he purchased seventeen acres and three rods from Jacob Trautman, a neighbor in Albany township. On Dec. 22, 1829, he obtained a grant from the Commonwealth, for sixteen acres, twenty-six perches, for $33.78. This tract was lying adjacent to his other land. He also purchased a tract from John Stoudt, a neighbor, for £3,100. From the Christian Henry estate (to whom it had been ceded by the Commonwealth) he obtained 194 acres, 84 perches, in Albany, and adjoining his other land. He owned about 500 acres of land in the southern end of Albany township, around the south and west base of Spitzenburg, part of this land lying across the Albany line into Greenwich township, and he was known as "Spitzenburger Jake Dietrich." This land is now divided into three large farms: The 148-acre farm owned by Jacob H. Dietrich (son of Samuel P. and grandson of Johann Jacob); the Nathan Stump farm (on which Johann Jacob Dietrich built the present barn in 1837); and the Simon Bautsch farm. The last named tract was the homestead farm of Mr. Dietrich, and on it is a one and one-half story stone house, which was erected in about 1760 by the Henry family, the original owners. This had no cellar, and was used as a church many years ago, and also as a schoolhouse, one Karl Cook being the teacher. In a corner in the wall was an arch, in which the Holy Bible was kept. In the above house, Mr. Dietrich kept a very popular hotel, known as "Dietrich's Hotel," for many years. Battalion days were held annually in an open field at the Spitzenburg, and on this day the militia met and drilled in all the splendor they could muster. Each company tried to exhibit the best discipline. Dietrich's battalion was always largely attended, and was a very joyful occasion, the ladies in their bright attire adding to the brilliance of the scene. The day, however, usually wound up somewhat disastrously, as the disputes regarding the relative merits of those participating in the day's work were frequently settled by blows. Mr. Dietrich was also a distiller, and burned considerable apple-jack, the ruins of his old distillery still being visible in the meadow facing the house. He sold a "smaller," a drink of apple-jack, for two cents. He was a man of no little prominence and influence in his district, and while of mild disposition, and a kind heart, he was unbending in his convictions, and was very strict in the discipline of his children. He was smooth shaven, had black hair and good white teeth, and though small in stature was possessed of great strength.

He was educated in the schools of Albany and Greenwich townships, and when fourteen years of age was sent to Columbia county by his father to obtain an English education. While at this place he made his home with his uncle, Gideon Dietrich, and he attended school until eighteen years of age. He remained with his uncle eight years. At the age of twenty-two years he went to Montour county, and there in Derry township worked on a farm. In 1859 and 1860 he operated a farm for his father-in-law, Leonard Raub, and he later became foreman for a large lumber company in Cameron county, Pa., remaining there four years. He again worked at farming, following this occupation for ten years, when he removed to Richardson county, Neb., where he worked on a farm for three years. He then purchased a farm which he operated for nine years, and then bought 440 acres in Buffalo county, Neb., and 360 acres in Phillips county, Kan. These large farms he operated successfully for sixteen years, selling them at a very large profit. He understood the nature of the western soil, and raised very large crops. He also engaged in stock raising, meeting with great success. He purchased his land at several dollars an acre, and commenced raising alfalfa, which greatly enhanced the value of the land, and his real estate speculations always were profitable. During the winter of 1898-99 Mr. Dietrich came East, and, becoming ill, decided to remain in the region of his nativity. Until the spring of 1907 he resided on South Third street, in Hamburg, and he then located in Reading, where he purchased a fine home at No. 1019 Franklin street, where he died in 1911. They are buried beside each other in the graveyard at Lenhartsville. They were devout Lutherans, and he was a foremost member of the Lenhartsville church, serving the congregation faithfully as an official many years. He helped to build the church in 1856 and gave liberally towards its erection. Michael Dietrich, as he was known, began farming on a large tract located midway between Lenhartsville and Virginville, on the Ontelaunee. This farm is now owned by a Luckenbill. On April 14, 1814, he bought a 156-acre tract from George and Eva Heinly, located in Greenwich, one mile east of Klinesville. Here he built a big stone house and greatly improved the land. On Aug. 15, 1853, he sold this farm to his son, Michael, for $3,600. Michael Dietrich and wife remained on this farm until they died. Some of their children were born at this place.

After the father's death, Michael Dietrich, Jr., lived on the farm, and on April 17, 1867, sold it to his son, Eli, for $6,660. Eli Dietrich, in 1882, traded the farm to Henry Fraunfelder, for a 117-acre farm in Maxatawny, located to the right of the main road leading from Eagle Point to Kutztown. Here Eli has since lived and prospered. The "Dietrich Farm," near Klinesville, as it is still known locally, is one of the best farms in the township, and is bounded by lands of other Dietrichs.

Sophia Brunner, wife of Johann Michael Dietrich, was a devout Christian. She read her Bible daily and taught her children the love of the Master. This farm he cultivated some twenty-four years, operating at the same time a saw-mill. Benneville Dietrich was a veteran of the Civil War, going forth to do battle under the flag in Company K, 179th Pa. V. I. With his family he belonged to New Bethel Lutheran and Reformed (Corner) church. He is described as of sturdy build, and wore his red beard long and flowing. He married Matilda, daughter of Christian Braucher. Mrs. Dietrich was born March 22, 1835, and died Feb. 13, 1907, aged seventy-one years, eleven months, twenty-two days. The farm had been owned by his father-in-law, David S. Kamp, and consists of seventy-nine acres, twenty-nine of which is woodland. To this Mr. Dietrich has added a tract of 136 acres of wooded land adjacent. One of the particularly strong points of this farm is the excellent and abundant water supply. Mr. Dietrich built a barn in 1889, and in 1896 a substantial frame farm house. These, together with other minor improvements, have greatly increased the value of the farm. General farming is carried on by Mr. Dietrich and with a success which always attends earnest and persistent agricultural effort in Berks county. There he lived for three years. In 1834 he located in Bern (now Centre) township, where he purchased a farm of 121 acres from the Kauffmans. This was extremely fertile land, and was located along Irish creek, about two miles west of Centreport, and the cultivation of this farm engrossed his attention until his death. In politics he was a Democrat, and he was a man of high repute and of great influence in his district. In his earlier life he was a Lutheran member of Belleman's church, serving as an official, but later he became active in Salem United Brethren church of Tilden township. He was liberal in his contributions toward religious and charitable objects. At the time of his death his estate was valued at $32,000.

For one year he lived there as a tenant and then purchased the farm, cultivating it four years. In 1868 he moved to Reading, where the previous year (Nov. 7, 1867) he had bought out the mercantile firm of Leinbach & Brother, then located at No. 325 Penn street. Mr. Dietrich formed a partnership with Peter A. Althouse, under the firm name of Dietrich & Althouse, general merchants and merchant tailors, and this lasted eighteen months, when Elijah Ammon took the place of Mr. Althouse, and for twelve years the firm of Dietrich & Ammon had one of the largest and best known stores in the city and county. Mr. Dietrich continued the extensive business alone from 1882 until his retirement in 1902, when he was succeeded by his eldest son, Elmer W. He is buried at Grimville by the side of his wife, Judith (nee Kutz), a daughter of the late Joseph Kutz, [See Kutz History] who lived on the Sacyony, near Kutztown, and was nearly one hundred years old when he died. Heinrich Dietrich was reared upon the farm, and after he became of age rode on horseback to Ohio, where he lived two years and worked upon a farm. In 1842 he married and for some years was a farmer at Kohler's Hill, in Greenwich. Here one of his horses which had been bitten by a mad dog, had hydrophobia, which caused a great sensation in the district. Later Heinrich Dietrich bought a large farm located in Maxatawny township, across the line of Greenwich, and along Weisenberg township, Lehigh county. This farm he operated for many years. He also operated a clover-mill located on this place, in the Mill Creek valley. Early in the seventies he retired to a 40-acre tract lying adjacent to his large farm, which he sold to his son-in-law, Henry Fenstermacher. Here he lived until, becoming too old, he was requested by his daughter, Isabella, wife of Henry Fenstermacher, to make his home with them. This he did, and died there, ripe in years, a highly esteemed man. Heinrich Dietrich was better known as "Harry Dietrich." He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and throughout his lifetime a constant reader. He is remembered with profound reverence by his many grandchildren. He read the Bible often. He was a man of strong convictions and a strict disciplinarian in the family. He had one favorite ejaculation, "By Judas." He was never heard to use God's name in vain. He was tall, about six feet in height, and erect in his bearing until he was seventy-five years old, when he became very stooped and walked with a cane, but he was well preserved, had good teeth, eyes and ears, and retained all his faculties to the last. His thick hair was black until he was sixty-five years old. Altogether he was a man of fine appearance. He was a pleasant talker and loved company. On his eighty-fifth birthday his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren held a birthday party in his honor. They had an elaborate dinner, and he was given the seat of honor at the table, and with happy tears streaming down his cheeks praised God for this pleasant event. He told the gathering that this was his last birthday on earth, and his prediction proved true. In the late afternoon of the last Monday in May, following his birthday celebration, his spirit took its flight. His wife, Judith, had preceded him in death about twenty-five years. He was made administrator of an estate before he was thirty years old, and was helpful in many ways in his community. He owned a small farm one-quarter of a mile from where his father lived, located in Greenwich township, now owned by Lewis Behler. This he operated until the latter part of 1874, when it was sold and he moved to Hamburg where his death occurred. He worked in the ore mines in Maxatawny township in 1873 and 1874, during the spring and fall. At Hamburg he followed huckstering and butchering, and for a short time worked in the rolling-mill, which is now abandoned. Seaman, youngest daughter of Jonathan Seaman, a foremost citizen of Tilden township. She was born Dec. 24, 1844, and died suddenly of apoplexy Sunday night, June 4, 1899, in her fifty-fifth year. Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich are buried in the Dietrich family plot at Hamburg. Mrs. Dietrich was a woman of noble character and high intelligence. She was a pious woman and her death was one of victory. He spent his small fortune, and died in August 1857 or 1858, a poor man, in Albany township, where he was nevertheless respected by all who knew him. In subsequent years S. confessed, but the evil was done. Heinrich Dietrich in the later years of his life lived along the Ontelaunee, below the Albany station, near the railroad. DILLIARD FAMILY.

The progenitor of the Dilliard family settled in Moore township, Northampton county, at an early period in its history, and a son, Conrad, acquired a large tract of land there, which came to be divided into three farms. He left ten surviving children.

One of his sons, Joshua, was born near Petersburg, and became a tailor by trade. He was married to Hester, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Dieter, and they had eight children: Richard C., John A., Benjamin F., Alavesta, Diana, Susanna, Mary A., and Rebecca.

Jacob Dilliard, another son of Conrad, was born in Moore township and brought up on a farm. He learned the trade of a stone mason, and carried it on in connection with farming. He was married twice. His first wife was Elizabeth Wanner, with whom he had five children: William, Peter, Jacob, James, and Sallie, m. to Levi Schaneberger. His second wife was named Hannah, and they had a daughter, Harriet, m. to Adam Laub.

William, the eldest son of Jacob, was born in 1826, in Moore township. He was a stone mason by trade, and served as supervisor of the township for many years. He was married to Leah, a daughter of John Schaeffer, of that township, and they had nine children: William H. M., Gideon, Amandus, Dinah, m. to Michael Summers; Franklin, Israel, Maria, Jane, and Emma. They were members of the Reformed church at Moorestown, which he served as a deacon. He died July 12, 1898, and she died August, 1905.

William H. M. Dilliard, eldest son of William, was born in the same township in 1840, and brought up on a farm, and followed farming until he was twenty-seven years old. Afterward he was employed in slate quarries in Washington township, until 1909, when he retired. In 1867 he was married to Elemina Susanna, a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Rex) Weiss, and they had ten children: Edward T.; William H.; Edna L.; Lizzie, m. Richard Williams; Carolina, m. Richard Kern; Ursula, m. A. H. Kline; Minnie, m. P. J. Hockey; Ella, m. James Mack; Albert E., and Charles. His wife was born May 20, 1847, and died Jan. 7, 1912.

EDWARD T. DILLIARD, the eldest son of William H. M., was born at Slatedale, in Washington township, on June 25, 1867, and reared on a farm. At an early age he began to work in slate operations and he has continued to do so until the present time, having for many years filled the position of foreman for the Empire Slate Co. He is a member of the American Mechanics, and the Knights of Friendship, at Slatington. On May 30, 1887, he was married to Jane, a daughter of Henry and Sallie (German) Fenstermacher, and they have three children: Daisy M., Mamie A., and Sallie E. They are members of the Reformed congregation at Frieden's church.

WILLIAM H. DILLIARD, the second son of William H. M., was born at Slatedale, Feb. 26, 1869. After attending school until he was twelve years old, he was put to work in the slate operations. He worked there for ten years, then became superintendent of the Peter quarry and filled this position there and at other large operations until 1904. Then he assisted in organizing the Empire Slate Co., and served as manager for six years, when he became the sole owner, and he has since carried on the plant in a successful manner. He produces large quantities of roofing slate and blackboards, and employs thirty hands. He is a member of the Odd Fellows and American Mechanics. On Nov. 26, 1895, he was married to Gussie B., a daughter of Lewis and Marie (Dorward) Fink, and they have four children: Olive, Emma, Blanche, and Harrison.

DILLINGER FAMILY.

Heinrich Wilhelm Dillinger, the ancestor of the Dillinger family immigrated to this country in 1728 from Wurtemberg, Germany, in the ship "Mortonhouse" (Penna. State Archives 2d Series, Vol. 17, Page 12), and settled near and below the present Dillingersville, in Lower Milford township, Lehigh county, and located one hundred and fifty acres of land, on which he erected a dwelling house where he lived until his death—the house is still standing and is in a habitable condition. It is the oldest landmark in the whole of the lower section of the county. He subsequently acquired other adjoining lands, making a total acreage of two hundred and thirty. He divided the lands between his two sons: John George and John Jacob. He was a Lutheran and took a leading part in building the original Lutheran Church in the lower section of the county. He died between the years 1765 and 1770. His wife preceded him in death in 1761. They had seven children: Valentine, John George, John Jacob, Johannes, Anna Catharina (married Mathias Bastian), Anna Elizabeth (married George Welter), Anna Maria (married John Martin Schwenk).

Valentine is known to have had a daughter named Anna Rosina, born March 15, 1751.

Johannes probably died unmarried.

John George had eight children: John Pe er, John Henry, John George, Daniel, Eva Rosina, Eva Catharina (married Jacob Bertz), Gertrude and Anna Maria. He sold his real property in the year 1787 to his son John Henry, who resold it in 1792 and the same year John Henry purchased a farm of one hundred and sixty-two acres in Lower Milford township from his father-in-law, Mathias Ochs, Jr. John Henry died in 1839 and left four children: William, Henry, John and Elizabeth.

John Jacob in 1788 purchased one hundred acres of land, on which the present Dillingersville is situated and upon which he erected an oil mill which he operated in addition to his tilling the soil of this and his other lands until his death on December 5, 1803, aged seventy-one years. He married Catharina, daughter of Mathias Ochs, Sr., by whom he had four children: Mathias, born March 28, 1763; John, born November 13, 1767; Eve Christina born August 26, 1764, and Maria Catharina, born September 3, 1773. His wife died about 1774. He married a second time, Anna Maria, daughter of Jacob Dubs, by whom he had three children: Catharine (married Peter Rothenberger), Daniel, born May 24, 1779, and John George, born October 7, 1780.

John, the son of John Jacob and his first wife, Catharine, in 1805, established a general merchandise store in Dillingersville, and carried on the business for several years. He then sold the store and his other properties and removed with his family to Philadelphia where he established himself in the wholesale dry goods business, which he carried on successfully up to his death. He had three children: David, Jacob and Margaret. All three were born at Dillingersville.

DAVID DILLINGER.

David, the eldest son of John, remained in Philadelphia and engaged in the mercantile business until his death—he is, however, buried in the Allentown cemetery on his brother Jacob's plot. His wife was Christiana Memminger, sister of Hon. C. G. Memminger, of Charleston, S. C., who was one of the leading contemporary lawyers of the south, and was the first Secretary of the Treasury of the Southern Confederacy.

MARGARET DILLINGER.

Margaret, the only daughter of John Dillinger, was married in Philadelphia to Hon. William G. Hawkins, a lawyer of Greene county, Pa., where he practiced his profession at the time, and had represented the Senatorial District, of which Greene county was a part, in the State Senate of Pennsylvania for a period of six years and in 1828 was the speaker of the senate. He subsequently removed to Allegheny county where he and she died.

JUDGE JACOB DILLINGER, the other son of John, remained with his father's family in Philadelphia upwards of two years, during which time he was in a drug store learning the art of compounding drugs, when he came back to Lehigh county, and remained until his death. He was engaged in the mercantile business, respectively at Ironton, Ballietsville, Ruchsville and Allentown, and continued in mercantile pursuit until within several years of his death together with the many trusts he performed in filling important offices, surveying, settling decedent's estates, etc. During his life time no better known and more respected man lived in this section of the state. His name was synonymous with virtue, honesty and justice, and among many hundreds of people he was regarded as a Nestor; constantly his advice was sought and his counsel followed, for it never failed to lead to ends most satisfactory. He received his education in the schools of the neighborhood where he was born and at Philadelphia, and was a scholar in German, English and French, having a special taste for mathematics. He excelled most people in solving the mysteries held by figures in various puzzling combinations.

In the year 1825, while living at Ballietsville, he was nominated by the Democrats of this legislative district as their candidate for state representative and was elected. He was then but twenty-seven years of age and was successively twice re-elected. After the close of his legislative life he occupied the position of deputy surveyor for the county, which was at that time an office of importance. On August 3, 1828, he was commissioned by Gov. Shulze, lieutenant colonel of the 68th regiment of the militia of the 7th Division, composed of the militia of the counties of Northampton, Pike and Lehigh, to which position he had been elected. In 1830 when he had established himself in the mercantile business in Allentown, he was appointed and commissioned by Gov. Wolf, clerk of the court of quarter sessions; clerk of the court of oyer and terminer, and the clerk of the orphans' court, for the term of three years, and was reappointed and commissioned in 1833 for another term of three years. In 1836 he also held the office of Prothonotary to which position he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Charles Craig who had died during the last year of his term as prothonotary. He was the member, from this county, of the Constitutional Convention of Pa., of 1837-'38. In 1844 he was elected one of the Associate Judges and served the term of five years. While holding the position of judge he was nominated for congress by the Democratic convention to succeed Hon. John W. Hornbeck, who had died, but declined because of ill health. In 1850 he was elected a justice of the peace for Allentown, which office, however, he resigned in 1851 to again accept the position of associate judge to which he had been elected.

In 1855 when the Allentown Bank (now Allentown National Bank) was organized he was chosen its first president which position he served with honor and marked ability until his death.

Judge Jacob Dillinger was the very close rival candidate for canal commissioner at the time the Hon. Morris Longstreth was put upon the Democratic ticket. He was twice a Democratic elector, voting for Jackson and Van Buren. He was one of the chief projectors of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society, and it is to him, mainly, that its plan of organization whereby no one man can gain control of the capital stock, is due.

At the time the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company was first organized under its charter, Judge Dillinger, who had done much to help the movement forward, was chosen its first general superintendent. He, of course, never acted, preferring that some one more thoroughly acquainted with the management of a railway than he could be, should fill the responsible position.

He was a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, of Allentown, a Free Mason, having been admitted into Lafayette Lodge, No. 71, F. & A. M., Philadelphia, and later into Barger Lodge No. 333, F. & A. M., Allentown.

In 1831 he married Salome Schreiber, born September 6, 1803, a daughter of Jacob Schreiber and his wife Eve Catharine, a daughter of Conrad Leisenring, of North Whitehall township, this county.

Judge Jacob Dillinger was born May 27, 1798, and died November 3, 1861. He had five children: John P., David, Margaret E., Jacob S. and Dallas, all of whom were born at Allentown and all except Jacob S., are dead. David died in infancy.

Margaret E. Dillinger was married to Philip S. Pretz and are both dead. They had two children: Aline D. Pretz, and Jacob C. Pretz.

CAPT. JOHN P. DILLINGER was born May 3, 1833, and died May 15, 1889. He was a prominent man in Allentown, made so by his activity in business and his long and intimate connection with the local military, civic and fire affairs.

He was educated in the common schools and the Allentown Academy. In 1850 he took charge of the Allentown office of the Philadelphia and Wilkes-Barre Telegraph Company, being the first telegraph operator in Allentown. In 1852 he entered into partnership with his father and William R. Craig, engaging under the firm name of Dillinger & Craig, in the wholesale liquor business. Mr. Craig retired in 1854, and the business continued under the firm name of J. & J. P. Dillinger. When the father had been elected president of the Allentown Bank, the father's interest was sold to ex-Sheriff Nathan Weiler, and the business carried on under the firm name of Weiler & Dillinger until 1860, when he sold out his interest to Mr. Weiler and entered into partnership with Phaon Albright in the tube manufacturing business, and continuing in the same until 1865 when he went into the mercantile business under the firm name of John P. Dillinger and Co., until 1866 when Mr. Albright sold his interest to Huber Bro., the firm name then being changed to Huber & Dillinger, and so continued until 1868 when he sold out to Huber Bros. and removed to Siegfrieds, Northampton Co., and took charge of the station of the Lehigh and Susquehanna Division of the Railroad of New Jersey, as agent and telegraph operator, and remained in that position until 1874 when he returned to Allentown.

At the time he was in the tube manufacturing business he was captain of the then celebrated Allen Rifles, many of its members joined the 47th Regiment P. V. under Col. T. H. Good and marched to the front in 1861. Being precluded from accompanying them on account of his business arrangements, he, in whom the war spirit was by no means dormant, raised a company for the nine months' service, which Company, with him as its captain, was mustered into service on August 13, 1862, as Company D, 128th Regiment P. V. and took part in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville.

Capt. Dillinger was chief of the fire department of Allentown from 1878 for three successive terms of three years each. Before the close of his long term of nine years, the department became the cynosure and envy of neighboring towns. To his persistent effort, more than to any other one man, the city is indebted for the present efficient hook and ladder service, and the fire alarm telegraph. In each of his nine reports, rendered to councils at the close of every fiscal year, he urged the purchase of a first class hook and ladder truck, and the establishment of an electrical alarm system—both of which came; the latter during the last year of his administration and the other less than six months after his retirement. The poles, wires, boxes, etc., of the Gamewell system were put up under his direct supervision and then kept in perfect working order under his personal care, never, in a single instance, failing to answer popular expectation of a prompt and efficient notice in case of fire. His knowledge of telegraphy; the management of batteries; open and closed circuits, etc., enabled him to thoroughly demonstrate to a somewhat doubting public, the utility of a fire alarm system which lost no time and led to no mistakes.

Captain Dillinger was first a member of the Columbia but later joined the Good Will Fire Co. He was a member of E. B. Young Post, No. 87, G. A. R. He was a Mason, demitted from Union Lodge, No. 121, F. & A. M., Philadelphia, and admitted by Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M., Allentown.

He was nominated by the Democrats for burgess of Allentown but was defeated by a majority of only seventeen over Thomas Mohr, his Republican opponent.

He was married to Ellen B., daughter of Phaon Albright, and had four children: Lewis, Flora (married to H. D. Greenawald), Sallie (married to Edward Gross), and Myra (married to Fred H. Horlacher).

COL. JACOB S. DILLINGER, the nestor of the Lehigh county bar, and prominent citizen and Free Mason, was born April 20th, 1841, educated at the Allentown Academy and Fort Edward Collegiate Institute, Fort Edward, N. Y., and after studying law in the office of William S. Marx, Esq., and attending the law department of the University of Pennsylvania—class 1861-'62, he was admitted to the bar of Lehigh county in April, 1862.

Besides keeping up his practice as a lawyer, he has displayed superior executive and administrative abilities in various public trusts that he was called upon to perform: As member of select council of the city of Allentown, 1868-'69 and the last year as its president; as member of board of school directors and member of board of school controllers of Allentown successively for ten years, and the secretary of the board of controllers for five years; as cashier of the Allentown Savings Bank (a banking institution up to 1887) from 1866 until he resigned in December, 1869, to accept the office of prothonotary to which office he was elected; as prothonotary for two terms of three years each; and as assistant to the secretary of the board of world's fair managers of Pennsylvania.

He was a private in Company E, 5th Regiment Pa. (Emergency) Militia—called into service by proclamation of the governor and by authority of the president's letter dated September 11, 1862,—and was detailed to the Division Commissary department. On October 7th, 1875, he was commissioned by Governor John F. Hartman, brigade quarter master of the 5th Brigade 2d Division of the N. G. of Pennsylvania.

He is a member of St. John's Reformed Church of Allentown, and of Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M.

His wife, who died April 2, 1882, was Mary Butler Collings, a daughter of Hon. Samuel P. Collings, of Wilkes-Barre, and his wife, Elizabeth, a daughter of Hon. Andrew Beaumont, of Wilkes-Barre. Mr. Collings was an editor and died while he was consul general to Morocco. Her maternal grandfather was one of the best known men in northeastern Pennsylvania. He was prothonotary, postmaster, state legislator and congressman. They have three children living: Margaret E. Elizabeth M., and Alice W., married to Albert B. Jessup—and had one child, a son, Beaumont, who married but died without a child.

DALLAS DILLINGER, Sr., was born February 3, 1844, and died July 1, 1911. He was educated at the Allentown Academy and the Poughkeepsie Business College Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

He served during the Civil War, then only eighteen years of age, in Company D, 128th Regiment P. V., of which his brother, John P.

Dillinger, was captain. He participated in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville, two of the most important engagements of the bloody strife. Returning from the army he entered into the grocery business with the late ex-Mayor Herman Schuon. In 1880 he was nominated by the Democrats as their candidate for recorder of deeds of Lehigh county, and was elected and served as such for the term of three years, and shortly after his retirement from that office he was appointed court crier by Judge Edwin Albright and served in that capacity for nineteen years.

He was a Free Mason, a member of Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M.; Allen Chapter, No. 203, R. A. M., and Allen Commandery, No. 20, K. T. For many years he was the Tyler of these bodies and also of Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran Church of Allentown, and a charter member of Yeager Post, No. 13, G. A. R., and the Franklin Fire Company.

He was married to Sarah Halfpenny who died in 1887, and six children survived them: Aline T., Salome, Mabel, Fannie, Jacob and Dallas, Jr.

Jacob Dillinger, son of Dallas, resides at Salt Lake City, Utah, and is engaged in the commercial business, having a wife and four children: Philip, Charles, Wellington and Ralph.

DISSINGER FAMILY.

Eberhart and Anna Catharine Dissinger, natives of Gerschweiler, Duchy of Saarbrucken, emigrated to America in the year 1761, in the ship Snow Squirrel. Their nine children came with them. They were too poor to pay for their passage and were sold as "Redemptioners." Rev. Peter Mishler and John Jacob Vogelgesang, their two sons-in-law came with them. George Dissinger, son of Eberhart, was sold at Philadelphia into five years' servitude. He served two years of his term, then having a violent quarrel with his hard-hearted task-master, he made his escape and went to Schafferstown, Lebanon county, in the neighborhood in which his parents had located. He married Judith Lauser and they had six children, namely: John, Henry, George, Michael, Catharine and Elizabeth. His first wife having died he married Catharine Schweitzer and by her had Daniel and Elizabeth. In 1783 he was an ensign in a local company of the Associators and Militia. He was for many years identified with the local battalion and on one occasion at drill was severely wounded by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of Adam Sunday.

He held the office of constable of Heidelberg township and was a very prominent man in Dauphin county in which he was held in high esteem. He was born in 1747 and died in 1816.

William Dissinger, son of Michael and Magdalena (Miller) Dissinger, was born in 1820. He was a grandson of George who was born in 1747. He taught school a number of years and in politics was a Whig and later a Republican, was postmaster many years, and held a position in the United States treasury department at Washington many years. He was a farmer, merchant and for upwards of thirty years was a Sunday school superintendent. He married Margaret Schaeffer, a granddaughter of Captain Henry Schaeffer, who in 1783 was the head of a local military company. Issue: Frances, Clarissa, Edwin S., Celinda and Alice.

Benjamin Dissinger, son of Michael and Anna Maria (Garrett) Dissinger and a grandson of George, was born in 1824. He was for many years proprietor of the Red Lion (now the Central) Hotel, in Schaffertown. He was a Republican and in 1867 was elected prothonotary of Lebanon county. He was a prosperous man and lived retired from 1877 until his death. He was a liberal supporter of the Lutheran Church. He was never married and after his mother had died he lived with his sister, Sarah.

Rev. Moses Dissinger, son of John (John, George, Eberhart) was one of the oldest of thirteen children born to his parents, and was early in life hired out to farmers to work for his board and clothing, getting absolutely no schooling. At the age of thirteen years he was soundly converted to God in a revival meeting and soon afterward he united himself with the Evangelical Association. He was called to preach the gospel, but his lack of education was a serious obstacle. However, he surmounted that obstacle by getting private instruction from kind friends, which, with hard study soon enabled him to read the Bible which he loved fervently. He served as class-leader and exhorter, and in 1854 was licensed by the East Pennsylvania Conference to preach the gospel. He labored with marked success in various circuits of the Conference until 1879. In the spring of that year he joined the Kansas Conference and after three years of faithful service there, he died in Douglas county, Kansas, January 25, 1883.

Rev. Dissinger was a sincere Christian, a man of strong convictions and fearless in their utterance. He studied his Bible with great diligence and had committed numerous passages of scripture to memory, and in his sermons which were pointed and logical, he lashed the vices and all manner of sin with such animated fervor that people during the course of his discourses frequently fell under deep conviction. No one ever denounced the hollow pretenses of religion in plainer and stronger terms than he. During the Civil War he was intensely Union, and his fervent and intensely patriotic sermons were of untold service to the national cause. He exposed and condemned the wickedness of the copperheads and rebel sympathizers with such violent ardor that the actual result of his efforts to the perpetuation of the Union can only be conjectured.

During the last days of his earthly pilgrimage he sent a message to numerous Pennsylvania friends, as follows: "Tell my brethren in Pennsylvania if they wish to see Moses Dissinger again they will have to come to Heaven to see me."

Rev. Dissinger married (first) a Miss Clark and they had three children, namely: (1) a son who died aged 38 years, leaving a widow and two children. The widow afterward married David Morris and they reside at Allentown; (2) Charles F., of Allentown; (3) Abraham Dissinger is a successful farmer and lives near Lawrence, Kansas. Rev. Dissinger married (second) Amelia Stahler, an estimable woman, a daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Becker) Stahler, whose father came from Hessen, Germany, as a surgeon to take part in the Revolutionary War. Her mother was a Miss van Dalia, a Moravian, of noble birth whose cousin, Col. Christie, took a prominent part in the War of 1812. With the second union Rev. Moses Dissinger had ten children, five of whom are still living, namely: Anna, Laura, Sallie, Fred and Robert.

Franklin C. Dissinger, son of John, was born at Schaeffertown, Lebanon county. In 1883 he removed to Cornwall, Pa., where he conducted the anthracite boarding house two years, afterward he conducted one of the Robert Coleman dairy farms five years. In 1889 he moved to Brickersville, Lancaster county, and he is now 79 years of age. His wife is Elizabeth Fink, a daughter of Philip Fink, of Mt. Zion, Lebanon county. Mr. Dissinger has for many years been active in the United Evangelical Church of which their son, Rev. Solomon N., is now a minister.

Rev. Solomon Neitz Dissinger, son of Franklin C. and Elizabeth (Fink) Dissinger, was born Feb. 6, 1873, in Lancaster county. He was given a Christian training and from his youth up was a regular attendant in some Sunday school. In 1887 a serious accident befell him, while he and his oldest brother attended the State Militia encampment at Mount Gretna, he was accidentally stabbed by a careless guardsman, and for three months he lay seriously ill, suffering intensely and it was during this time that he dedicated himself to God. In the midst of this strange experience he was baptized on Aug. 7, 1887, by the Rev. W. F. Heil, D.D. In December of that year he united himself with the M. E. Church, at Cornwall, Pa. In 1891 he united with the United Evangelical Church at Lititz, Pa., and during 1892, '03, '04 and '05 he attended the Schuylkill Seminary, at Fredericksburg. In January of 1895 he moved with the school (now called Albright College) to Myerstown, Pa., remaining until March 2, 1895, when he was licensed at Schuylkill Haven Conference of the U. E. Church and by the earnest entreaties of the now sainted B. J. Smoyer, he entered the ranks of the active ministry as assistant to Rev. J. K. Freed on the Annville circuit. He was ordained a deacon at the annual conference held at Mohrsville, Bishop R. Dubs, D.D., presiding; and an elder at the annual conference held at Allentown in 1903. He served the following churches: Annville, Dauphin, Tower City, Danielsville, Perkasie, Shenandoah and Boyertown since 1910. He owns a large and valuable library, is a zealous and able minister of the conference and has rendered efficient services in the various fields where he had been stationed.

On July 2, 1895, he was united in holy matrimony with Minerva L., the accomplished daughter of R. A. Ennis, of Jonestown, Lebanon county, by the Rev. B. J. Smoyer, his presiding elder. Two children, Elizabeth E. and Chester B., bless their union.,

DONECKER FAMILY.

Jacob Donegan, a native of Ireland, emigrated to America and located at Reading, Pa. Later it appears he settled in Northampton county, where his son Jacob, was born, Nov. 1, 1795. The ancestor was twice married. The children by his first wife were: John, Jacob, Polly, married to Adam Fritzingler; and Sarah, married to John Muschlitz.

Jacob Donegan, son of the ancestor, followed the blacksmith trade in the vicinity of Seemsville and Kreidersville for a period of sixty-five years. He was an exceptionally able mechanic and produced much cutlery which in that day was all made by hand. His later life was spent in Catasauqua with his son William, where he died, April 9, 1864, in his 69th year.

His wife, Lydia Krupp, was a daughter of Henry and Margaret (Schutz) Krupp, who hailed of noted German parentage. In the Fairview cemetery at Catasauqua stands the tombstone of Jacob Donegan. By his side is that of his wife, Lydia Krupp. The tombstone cutter not being familiar with the reading of the German "daufshein," mistook the name of Margaret Schutz, her mother, for that of her daughter, Lydia, hence the error upon the tombstone, which has not been corrected up to this time. Lydia was born March 25, 1803, died March 31, 1855. They were members of the Lutheran Church. Their children follow: William J.; Clarissa (who died in 1888, was the wife of A. Gehris); Charles, of Easton; Edward, who was never married, was a soldier in the Civil War and is buried in the Arlington National cemetery at Washington, D. C.; Emma, wife of Peter Marks, and they reside at Mt. Carmel, Pa.; Jacob, died aged 22 years; and Augustus, of California. Of the above family, Edward and Augustus retained the old spelling, while the other members changed the name to Donecker.

William J. Donecker, son of Jacob and Lydia (Krupp) Donecker, was born March 19, 1830, at Weaversville, Northampton county. He was engaged for five years as a blacksmith, then as a miller for three years. Afterward he learned the carpenter trade, but for twenty-five years was engaged as a car inspector for the C. R. R. of N. J. Later he was the engineer at the Schneck & Bear furniture factory, Allentown, where he remained until his retirement about ten years before his death which occurred with his son-in-law, Mr. E. J. Rapp, Allentown, on Jan. 24, 1914, aged 83 years, 10 months and 5 days. He had lived at Catasauqua from 1869 to 1886. Up until three years before his death he was in perfect health. His memory for historical occurrences was almost remarkable and he was a veritable reference library for dates. He was one of the pioneers of the Evangelical Church, aiding greatly in building up that denomination, and at the time of his death was a member of Trinity United Evangelical church. He was thoroughly converted by the preaching of Rev. Hummel, at Weaversville, in 1851, and at that time joined the church, which he served devoutly as exhorter, class leader, trustee, Sunday school teacher, and superintendent. During the eruption of the church in 1892, he sided with the so-called "Minority," now the United Evangelicals.

In 1856, he married Elizabeth, a daughter of Jonathan Reinhart. She died in 1887, aged 56 years. The union was blessed with four children, one of whom, William J., Jr., died in youth. The surviving children are: Orrin Charles, whose history follows; Emma R., wife of Edward J. Rapp, whose history appears elsewhere in this volume; and Edwin A., whose history follows.

ORRIN CHARLES DONECKER was born Feb. 10, 1858, at Catasauqua. He attended the public schools, and when his education was completed he entered the employ of F. W. Windt, of Catasauqua and learned the carpenter and wood-working trade. By close application to his work he became the foreman, holding this position for thirteen years. He then removed to Allentown and entered the employ of Schneck & Bear, being their superintendent for ten years. At the end of this term he became foreman for his brother-in-law, Jacob Nagle, contractor and builder. In 1909 Mr. Donecker went into the business on his own account. He drew his own plans and erected a home and office for himself at 1801 Linden St. He built the Allentown public library, the Salem Evangelical Church, the Jewish Synagogue; superintended the erection of numerous factories, school buildings, etc.

In politics Mr. Donecker is a Republican. He became a member of the Evangelical church at Catasauqua and is now a member of the Salem Evangelical church, Allentown, and has been the musical director for eighteen years.

Mr. Donecker, aside from his regular business has also dealt in real estate. He was married Feb. 17, 1887, to Amanda Nagle, daughter of James and Rosetta (White) Nagle, of Allentown. To them eight children were born. Five died in infancy. Those surviving are: Blanche May, a graduate of Blackman's Business College;

Rosetta White, a teacher of piano, and Elsie Beatrice, a graduate of the Allentown High school, class 1913.

EDWIN A. DONECKER, of Allentown, was born at Catasauqua, Pa., where he attended the public schools and graduated from the Catasauqua high school with second honors in the year 1886. At this time he was apprenticed to Peters & Smith, druggists at Allentown. Some years later he took a full course in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, graduating from that established institution in 1892; again becoming an associate with Peters & Smith, at Allentown, for several more years.

In 1896 he became a member of the firm of L. H. Yeager & Company, Allentown, and continued with this company until in 1912, when he became the owner and successor of the Fuller Oil & Supply Company, one of the old established concerns in the Lehigh Valley and this business he has carried on with great success.

Socially Mr. Donecker has membership in the following lodges: Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M.; Allen Chapter, No. 203, R. A. M.; Allen Commandery, No. 20, K. T., and of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Reading; also the B. P. O. E., No. 130, at Allentown.

Mr. Donecker is prominently identified with the musical life of Allentown; was one of the organizers of the Lehigh Symphony Orchestra, which he served as secretary ever since its organization; has organized several Sunday school orchestras, and at present is director of the orchestra of St. John's Reformed Sunday school, having previously been the director of the orchestra of the Ebenezer Evangelical church and Sunday school.

On May 14, 1896, he was married to Minnie May Yeager, a daughter of L. H. Yeager, of Allentown, and they have five children, namely: Frances Y., Edwin A., Jr., Earl W., Karl Y., and Robert Charles. Edwin A. Donecker, Jr., died May 16, 1913, aged 13 years; and Robert Charles died in infancy.

THOMAS S. DONNAN.

From ancient documents in the possession of Thomas S. Donnan, of Slatington, it appears that the Donnan family is of old Scotch origin. His great-great-grandfather was Anthony Donnan who filled the office of Bailiff at Whithorn, in Scotland, and was the eighteenth generation that was known by the Christian name of Anthony and a native of Ayrshire, in Scotland. The homestead of the family was in continuous possession of a descendant for two hundred years and only passed into other ownership in 1876 when Jesse, the wife of Anthony sold out and emigrated to America. She was a Highlander, born at Campbelltown, the eleventh generation of her family, and her name was McCandlich. They had the following children: Anthony, James, Elizabeth, William (died in infancy), William (2nd), Jesse, a child (who died in infancy unnamed), Agnes, Thomas, Andrew, Isabella, Samuel (who died in infancy), and John.

Anthony Donnan was born at Newton Stewart, in Scotland, on February 28, 1829, and emigrated to the United States in 1852, locating at Slatington where he followed school teaching for a number of years and later operated several boats on the Lehigh canal. Then he became the marbleizer for the Lehigh Slate Co. and filled this position for some time. He afterward opened two slate quarries at Lynnport and another at Ironton, and in 1870 became associated with his brother Thomas in business. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted as a soldier.

Mr. Donnan was married to Margaret Thomas, of West Chester, and they had one daughter who became the wife of Lewis Thompson. He died in 1872 and since then his widow has made her home with the daughter.

Thomas S. Donnan, a former slate operator at Slatington, was born February 28, 1843, at Newton Stewart, in Scotland. He emigrated to America in 1862, and located first for a time in New York City, but a year later went to Slatington, where he engaged in the manufacture of marbled slate and slate black-boards, the place then had only fifteen dwelling-houses. His brother Anthony was associated with him in the old Lehigh Slate Co. which was the pioneer in the manufacture of these products and he continued with this company until 1896 when he engaged in the business of buying and selling slate materials. He is now extensively engaged in real estate and other enterprises. From 1866 to 1878 he lived at Philadelphia and looked after his marble and slate business while his brother operated the quarries; he then went to Buffalo and attended to the sales there until 1883 when he returned to Slatington and carried on the quarry of M. C. Hersh, at Slatedale, for several years and then for the next twenty years conducted slate operations in that vicinity for different parties. In 1906, Mr. Donnan visited his native place and extended his foreign travel through Ireland, England and France for four months.

In 1870 he was married to Agnes Marshall, daughter of Samuel and Mary Marshall, and she died March 26, 1896, without any children.

ANDREW DONNAN was born in Scotland in 1846 and emigrated to America in 1862, locating at Slatington, where he remained three years.

He then went to Philadelphia and worked with his brother Thomas for three years when he moved to Reading and was in the employ of the Eisbrown Brothers extensive manufacturers of granite monuments, for twenty-five years. He returned to Slatington in 1899, and died in 1902 unmarried.

DONAT FAMILY.

Jacob Donat, the immigrant and progenitor of this family, whose sketches appear in this publication, came to America on the ship Forest, landing at Philadelphia, October 10, 1752. In 1759 his name appears on the tax-list in Albany township, Berks county, and on November 13, 1811, he there made his last will and testament. From its probate on January 11, 1814, it is evident that he died late in the year 1813 or early in the new year of 1814; and in the document these children are mentioned: Catharine; Anna Maria; Elizabeth; Martin (1762-1839); Jacob; William or Wilhelm (1768-1829, married Catharine Holler); Peter (who had two children, Barbara and Catharine); Rachel; and Susanna (1779-1864, who was married to Abraham Merkel).

Martin Donat was born September 2, 1762, and died August 24, 1839. He was a farmer and owned a tract of farming land embracing 200 acres, situated near the present village of Wanamaker. This farm has been in the Donat family since 1805, when Martin's father, Jacob Donat, purchase it for him. It then included what is now the farm of James A. Donat (Martin's grandson) and also the property of Richard H. Creitz; and Martin erected the dwelling on the former portion, which now affords shelter to the fourth generation. He was a member of the Reformed congregation at Jacksonville, and took an active part in the consistory. He was married three times. His first wife was a Miss Nungesser, by whom he had three children: Henry (1803-1848); Lydia (married to Moyer, and moved to Ohio); and Judith (married to George Behler). His second wife was Christina Christ, born in 1779 and died in 1823, and by her he had ten children: Gideon (married to Salome Leiby); Levi (married to Catharine Gehrling, nee Sechler); Elias (married to Maria Behler); Aaron (married to Mary Magdalena Dietrich); Solomon (1815-1853, married to Lovina Henry, and had two daughters, Mary (married to Charles J. Kistler), and Sabilla M. (married to Wm. German); Fannie (married to Jacob Behler); Sallie (who died young); Henrietta (1814-1861, married to Gideon Behler); Hannah (married to Rudolph Sechler); and Eliza (married to Nathan Bachman). And his third wife was Anna Maria Horn, nee Wehr, by whom he had no children. She was born May 28, 1778, and died June 15, 1858, in her 82nd year.

Elias Donat, one of the sons of Martin, was a farmer near Jacksonville, in Lynn township, where he was born, and he died there at the age of 73 years. Besides owning a farm which contained a valuable deposit of slate, he was also the owner of the store-stand at Jacksonville, and at his death he left a large estate. He was a man of pleasing appearance, possessed of great energy and perseverance, and was recognized by all for his superior character. Previous to his death, he was a great sufferer from dropsy, but he bore his affliction with great patience and resignation under the guidance of a Christian spirit. His wife was Maria Behler, and they had three children: David, Amanda (married to E. F. Lutz, of Jacksonville), and Didama (married to Joseph Gerber, of West Penn township, Schuylkill county). They were buried in the graveyard at Jacksonville.

Aaron Donat, one of the sons of Martin, was born in Lynn township, July 3, 1811, and he died there October 7, 1897. He was a farmer and lived there all his life. His farm of 80 acres was situated near Wanamaker, and it is now owned by his son, James. He was one of the organizers and first school directors of the public school system in the township, having been a strong advocate of free schools and always deeply interested in the educational welfare of his own family and of the people of the township. In later years he again served as a director for a long period of time, and it was he and William Mosser who established a private school near Mosser's Mill for higher education. He was prominently identified with the Jacob's church at Jacksonville for many years. During 1862 and 1863 he was chairman of the building committee which erected the present church. He was deacon, elder and trustee successively of the Reformed congregation and took a very active part in the consistory for more than a quarter of a century, and he was generally recognized as a conservative and representative citizen of the highest type. His wife was Mary Magdalena Dietrich, daughter of John Dietrich, born September 8, 1819, and died July 28, 1907, aged 88 years, 10 months and 20 days. She was held in the highest esteem by the community and reverently addressed as "Mother Donat." Her piety, intelligence and affection exerted a strong influence over her family, so much indeed that two of her sons became ministers of the Gospel and one a public school teacher. They had eight children: Rev. Willoughby (born Nov. 1, 1841); Mary Christiana (born Nov. 2, 1842, married Charles H. Lutz); Charles A. (born Feb. 8, 1845); Rosanna (born Nov. 14, 1847, married Alfred A. Haberman); Rev. Wilson D. (born April 22, 1851, married first to Emma A. Meckley, and second to Sallie A. Miller); Allen M. (born Jan. 26, 1853, who died young); Prof. James A. (born April 17, 1855, married Victoria A. Lutz); and Lewis J. (born May 27, 1858, married Mary A. Scheetz).

JAMES A. DONAT, a representative farmer and former school teacher of Lynn township, near Wanamaker, who resides on the homestead of his grandfather, was born there April 17, 1855, and educated in the public schools of the township and also a select school established at Steinsville. In the Centennial year, 1876, he was licensed to teach and he taught his first term in Albany township, Berks county. The following two terms he was the teacher in the "Donat School" in Lynn township; but owing to the weakness of his eyes he was compelled to abandon a professional career, and then for eight years he assisted his father in farming operations. In 1888 he became the farmer of the place, and he has since carried on the farm, being now the owner of it. In politics he is a Democrat and he has served the township as a school director. For twenty-five years he was prominently identified with Sabbath-school work at Steinsville, having served as superintendent for many years; but in 1910 he was also obliged to discontinue his earnest efforts in that behalf. He has been one of the most earnest advocates of the reunions of the Lutz family since its organization. Mr. Donat was married to Victoria A. Lutz on February 18, 1883, and they have four children: Annie V. (wife of Charles O. Oswald, farmer near Jacksonville, and she is a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and a former teacher in Lynn township); Charles L. (educated in the local schools and the Normal School at Kutztown, and now taking a special course in the Agricultural Department of the Pennsylvania State College); Thomas A. (who died in infancy); and Hattie M.

LEWIS J. DONAT, a prosperous agriculturist of Lynn township, son of Aaron, was born near Wanamaker on May 27, 1858, reared upon a farm. He attended the public schools of his district, and was in the employ of his father on the farm until he became thirty years old, having been paid a salary at the rate of $65 per annum after he had become of age. In 1884 he moved upon the farm where he has since resided, and in 1888 he began to cultivate it for himself, in which he has been very successful. The tract contains 90½ acres.

In 1814, Michael Brobst sold this farm to Jacob Sechler and from him it descended to his son Jacob. The next owners were Albright & Wagner; and Aaron Donat became the purchaser in 1873, and it continued in his name until 1897, when the title passed to the present owner. The buildings are of a superior character, Mr. Donat having built the dwelling in 1899, and the large barn in 1905. There is an old log house still on the property which was the second dwelling on the land since its occupancy by the first settler.

Mr. Donat has affiliated with the Democratic party; and he is a member of the Reformed congregation at the Jacobs church, which he has served as deacon, elder and trustee. He was married on June 18, 1882, to Mary A. Scheetz, and they have three children: Calvin N., Edwin A. (who has been a school teacher of Lynn township since 1908), and Harry J. (student at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster.)

DORNEY FAMILY.

The name Dorney is found in old records spelled various ways, as Durney, Dorni, Thurney, Turnet and Tournet. From the latter spelling it appears that the name was of French origin.

Henry Dorney, who arrived at Philadelphia on Sept. 30, 1743, settled in Whitehall township, where we find the first mention of him on Nov. 10, 1745, when Eva Catharine, a daughter of Henry and Appolonia Dorney, was baptized. The sponsors were Lorentz Guth, Daniel Trachsel, Catharine Bear, and Eva Catharine, eldest daughter of Adam Deshler. In 1768, Henry Dorney rented 300 acres of land from Caspar Wistar, for which he was taxed £24. 16s. 0. He died previous to Dec. 18, 1771, leaving a number of children.

Peter Dorney, who arrived at Philadelphia Oct. 12, 1741, settled in this vicinity, as his name appears in 1749.

Daniel Dorney was taxed in Macungie township in 1768 upon sixty acres of cultivated and one hundred and forty acres of uncultivated land. On Dec. 31, 1774, Mary Plumstead, widow, and the executor of the late William Plumstead, Esq., sold to Daniel Dorney (spelled Turney) four tracts of land for 900£. Two hundred seventy-nine acres of this land was located along the Cedar creek. Daniel Dorney died in 1779. He and his wife Elizabeth had eleven children: John; Daniel; Henry; Philip; Anna Maria, wife of Lorentz Guth, Jr.; Eve; Barbara; Catharine;

Magdalena; Peter; and Adam, who was born in 1768.

Daniel Dorney, son of Daniel, was the owner of 140 acres of land in Whitehall and 49 acres in Salisbury township. He died intestate in 1788. He married, in 1771, Eva Barbara Guth, daughter of Lorentz Guth, Sr. She was born Jan. 8, 1749, and died Sept. 5, 1826. They had two children: Eva Catharine Dorney, born Jan. 30, 1772, and married a Mr. Myer; and Peter Dorney, born Jan. 5, 1775, and died Feb. 7, 1815. He was a saddler by occupation and had no children. Eva Barbara, widow of Daniel Dorney, subsequently married George Henry Mertz, who was born Sept. 4, 1755, and died July 23, 1827. With the second marriage she had one son, Henry Mertz, who was born July 21, 1782, and died March 11, 1844. Peter Dorney, saddler, having no children, left his property to his god-son, Charles Mertz, the son of his step-brother, Henry Mertz. This included the mansion house erected by his father, Daniel Dorney, Jr., and the 140-acre tract in Whitehall township.

Adam Dorney, who was probably a brother of Daniel, Sr., died in 1818. He was the owner of 150 acres in Whitehall township and served as an ensign in the Revolution. He and his wife Eva Margaret had six children: Peter, Adam, John, Margaret, Henry, and Hannah.

Peter Dorney, the eldest son, was born Oct. 2, 1771. He was a farmer and hotel-keeper at Dorneyville. He married, May 9, 1797, Mary Susanna Beck. She was born Sept. 24, 1772, and died July 28, 1858. Their children were: John, born in 1802 and died in 1871, he married Elizabeth Biery, and had eight children; Saloma, wife of Henry Schantz; Kate, born in 1800 and died single in 1875; and William, born in 1807 and died in 1881. He married Mary A. Mertz, and had a son, Henry and four daughters, Rebecca, married David Flexer; Emma, Maria, and Mattie A.

John Dorney, son of Peter and Mary Susanna (Beck) Dorney, was born Nov. 4, 1802. He was a farmer and hotel-keeper at Dorneyville and also a dealer in grain and lumber. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Catharine (Troxell) Biery. She was born March 12, 1810, and died Feb. 10, 1885. Mr. Dorney died March 18, 1871. Their children were: Tilghman; David; Mary, married James Yeager; Mrs. Adam Merkel; Matilda, married Edwin Muse; William; Elizabeth C., married Wm. F. Ruth; Lydia A., married Edwin H. Romig; Sallie A., married Willoughby Kline; Daniel D., born Aug. 19, 1848, died Dec. 3, 1912; and Leanda, died young.

Adam Dorney, second son of Adam Dorney, Sr., was born Sept. 26, 1774, and died March 29, 1845. He married Mary Magdalena Bogert. She was born Oct. 11, 1780, and died Oct. 20, 1840. They are buried in the Salisbury church cemetery.

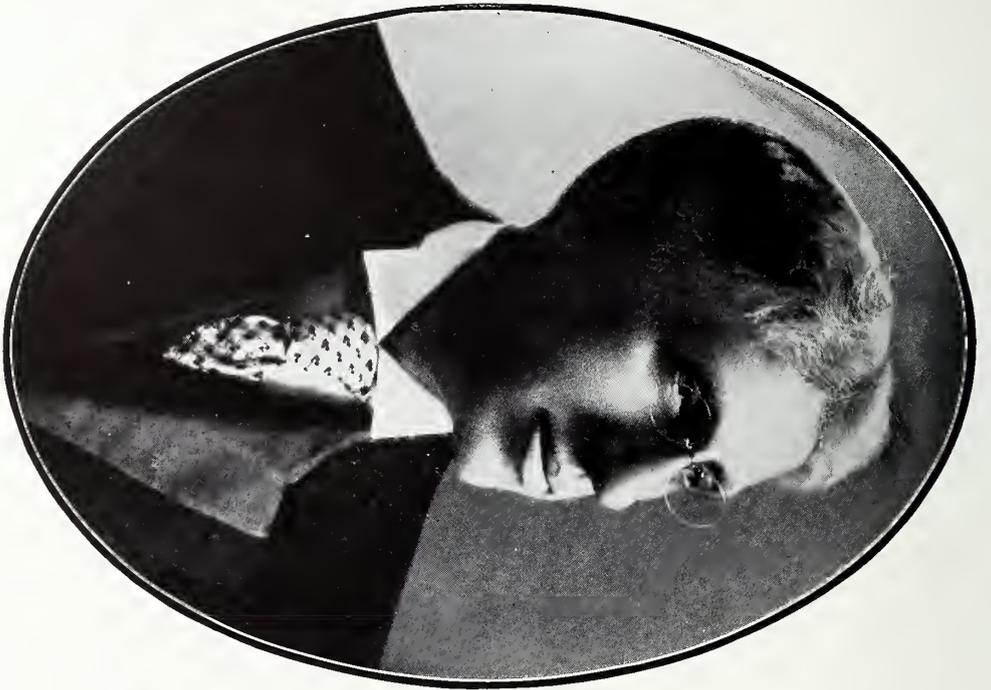

Solomon Dorney, son of Adam Dorney, Jr., was born Feb. 6, 1807, and died April 20, 1856. He married Susanna Scholl, daughter of David Scholl. She was born Oct. 27, 1810, and died Nov. 25, 1890. They had six children: Solomon; Charles A.; William T.; Isabella, wife of Tilghman H. Dorney; Ellen, wife of Dr. C. H. Apple; and Mary, wife of Thomas B. Faust.

Charles A. Dorney, son of Solomon, Sr., was born May 20, 1844, at the old homestead. He spent his youth upon the farm, attended the district school and was employed in mercantile pursuits. In 1869 he embarked in the furniture trade with Henry Berkemeyer under the firm name of Berkemeyer & Dorney. In 1873 Mr. Dorney sold his interest to Thomas B. Faust & Company. Five years later he again became interested in the company as the sole owner, after which he incorporated the C. A. Dorney Furniture Company. In 1898 Mr. Dorney retired from business, at which time the paid up capital of the firm was $200,000 and it employed two hundred men. He owned 12,000 acres of land at Hickory Run and was president of the Hickory Run Brick Company. On Dec. 10, 1865, Mr. Dorney married Caroline, daughter of Charles Mertz. They had no children. He died May 8, 1903.

The other children of Adam Dorney, Sr., were John, born Jan. 18, 1778; Margaret, born Jan. 9, 1781, and died Nov. 10, 1852, who married, April 21, 1800 Christopher Mohr; Henry, born Aug. 19, 1786, and died Sept. 4, 1871. Hannah Dorney, youngest daughter of Adam Dorney, Sr., was born Aug. 25, 1783, and died March 9, 1844. She married Gen. Henry Mertz. They had eighteen children. Adam Dorney, Sr., bequeathed £800 to each of his two daughters, a tract of 10½ acres to his son, Henry, and the balance of his land to his other three sons.

Solomon Dorney, father of Oliver C. Dorney, was born Aug. 12, 1831, and died June 11, 1901. He was a farmer, and at one time engaged extensively in the manufacture of carriages and sleighs. He also conducted Dorney's Park for thirty years, as well as a general store. For fifteen or twenty years he held the office of postmaster of Cedarville, Lehigh county. He married Elmina, daughter of Jonas and Lydia (Jones) Faust, and their children were: Ellen R., widow of H. O. Weaver; Franklin T.; Oliver C.; Albert H.; and Edward J.

Mrs. Dorney was a woman of unusual intelligence and energy and assisted her husband in his duties as postmaster and in the conduct of a general store.

FRANKLIN T. DORNEY, son of Solomon, was born in South Whitehall, Dec. 26, 1854. He was educated in the public schools and the Allentown Business College, after which he assisted his father in his general store at Cetronia and in the establishment of Dorney's Park. He then learned the baker trade in the county home bakery, and subsequently erected a building at the park, where he established the Dorney Park Bakery, which he still conducts and in which he has met with unusual success. He is the owner of several homes and a tract of land at the park, and holds membership in the Reformed Church. Mr. Dorney married, in 1877, Emma L. G., daughter of David and Abigail (Handwerk) Gilbert, and they have five children: Jennie, married Richard Peters; Cleon, married Beulah Henninger; Ellis, married Annie Guth; Marcus, married Edna Woodring; and Russell.

OLIVER CHARLES DORNEY, son of Solomon and Elmina (Faust) Dorney, was born March 18, 1862, in South Whitehall township, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania. He received his early education in the district schools from which he graduated at the age of fifteen. Upon the completion of his public school education in 1878, he entered business college in the city of Allentown, where he completed the course and having been a first honor graduate was at once retained as a teacher of these subjects, teaching during the winter months and helping his parents in their business during the summer months.

After having definitely determined to make the teaching of business his life work, and realizing the need of expert and special training along these lines he, in 1884, entered Kibbe's Writing Parlors and Gallery of Pen Art, Utica, N. Y., placing himself under the direct and personal supervision of H. W. Kibbe (the proprietor) that famous pen artist, who, as a critic and all-around penman in every branch of the art, had no superior and few if any equals.

Upon the completion of this professional course he returned to assume the management of the local business college, until the spring of 1899, when he resigned his position to establish The American Commercial School of which he is still president.

In 1895 his institution was incorporated and chartered under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania, with a capital stock of $30,000.00, which represents the cost of its equipments, and there are few schools in America that compare with it in appointments and facilities for the successful training of young men and women for business pursuits.

During the early eighties, in addition to the practical training in his father's large manufacturing plant, general store and post office, he acquired broad and valuable experience as general manager of the famous Dorney Park and Trout Hatchery which was established by his father, and which remained in the family, not only as the family homestead, but also as the most popular summer resort in eastern Pennsylvania, visited annually by several hundred thousand people including sportsmen who were attracted from all sections of the country for the angling of "speckled beauties" in season.

After his father's death the old homestead and park was sold to the Allentown & Reading Traction Company, on whose lines it is located.

Owing to his wide and practical experience as a business man and accountant, he, through his uncle, C. A. Dorney, who financed this road and who held its controlling interest, was appointed to the position of chief accountant, which afforded him an opportunity to become familiar with the details of the electric railroad business, and which soon led to the promotion to the position of general manager and which he held for a number of years. Upon the death of his uncle, however, he resigned his position with the electric railroad company to devote his entire time to the school founded by him.

With such able leadership the growth of the school was so rapid that three times it outgrew its quarters, compelling it to seek larger and better accommodations until it finally had built for its own convenience and requirements, according to the plans and specifications of its founder, an entire floor in the Y. M. C. A. building, located on the southeast corner of Centre Square, a structure costing, with its equipments, a quarter million of dollars, and where it is still located.

The object, however, of locating in the Y. M. C. A. building was three-fold:

First: To secure the needed accommodations in floor space.

Secondly: To throw around every student the highly moral and spiritual influences such as the Y. M. C. A. only could afford.

Thirdly: To conduct the educational classes of the Y. M. C. A. affording its members all the advantages and facilities of every department of the institution.

Hence, the advantages of both institutions have become affiliated, and in this connection it should be said that since President Dorney foresaw the incalculable benefits to be derived by the members of both institutions through the consolidation of interests as indicated, to him belongs the honor of effecting the first arrangement of this nature ever made in this country between any purely business educational institution and a Young Men's Christian Association.

The crowning feature of this educational institution, however, is its employment service, which, like the school is regularly incorporated and has been in successful operation since the organization of the school in 1889. Through it upwards of 12,000 young men and women have been placed into positions of responsibility and trust.

In 1895, he erected the Dorney building, the first apartment building in the city.

In this building he organized "The O. C. Dorney Co.," for the purpose of conducting a general designing, engraving and printing business. The first two floors are equipped with all the latest and best electric machinery, all of which was electrically controlled by the mere pressing of a button and was considered the most modern and up-to-date plant of its kind in America.

In 1900, Mr. Dorney was commissioned by the State Board of Examiners and chartered by the governor of the State of Pennsylvania, conferring upon him the degree of C. P. A. (Certified or Chartered Public Accountant).

For years, however, before as well as after this commission was conferred upon him, he devoted much of his time to the adjustment of partnership, manufacturing and corporation affairs, as well as doing auditing, and public accounting work of every variety, the planning and installing of office systems, preparing and supervising advertising campaigns for many of the largest concerns in this section of the country.

As an expert penman, he has also for many years been consulted by, and frequently figured in, the local courts as a witness and expert on forged or questioned hand-writing.

In 1905, he drew up his own plans for and immediately started in the building of twenty modern, three-story, nine-room houses, consisting of brick, stone and cement, in one of the most desirable sections of Allentown, involving an investment of upwards of $100,000.00, making a most valuable addition to one of the city's most important suburbs.

Mr. Dorney is an inventor. Not only of an intensely practical, but also of an inventive turn of mind, he devotes what spare hours he has at his command to the development of practical and useful devices.

He has invented and holds letters patent and copyrights on the following:

Adjustable school desks.

Adjustable school, office and typewriter chairs.

Adjustable typewriter and reading tables.

Adjustable artists' and drafting tables.

Adjustable copy-holders and devices for teaching touch typewriting.

Electric signal clock.

Adjustable neck-tie guard.

The Dorneyrian system of spelling.

The Dorneyrian card system for roll call.

The Safe Guard Check and Banking System: an entirely new, novel and effective system for indexing records for the various makes of talking machines, as well as numerous other time and labor-saving office systems and devices.

He is a prominent and active member of the following organizations: The National Commercial Teacher's Federation; the Private Commercial School Managers' Association; the Eastern Commercial Teacher's Association; the National Association of Accountants and Bookkeepers; the Bookkeepers' Literary Club; the National League of Business Educators; the National Association of Accredited Commercial School; the Allentown Chamber of Commerce. In the last named organization he has served on the committee of statistics, publication and advertising for many years.

In 1883, he was married to Jennie Clapp Reynolds Wood, daughter of a prominent contractor and builder of Providence, R. I., who has been actively engaged and deeply interested in her husband's welfare not only in the founding of The American Commercial School, but also in filling the important position of matron and instructor in moral and business ethics.

Mrs. Dorney, a woman of exceptional talent and energy, joined to a most attractive personality, is of English descent, and the great-great-granddaughter of Samuel Gorton, one of the founders of American liberties; twice president judge; one of the authors of the fine political code adopted by the first assembly of the United Colonies of the Providence, R. I., Plantation; the writer of a statute against negro slavery and the first edict adopted in America; a noted author and writer and whose writings and words have been recognized and recently commented upon by the leading newspapers and magazines of the country, notably among which The Christian Science Monitor, published in Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Dorney is a Colonial Dame and a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, on five direct lines, and her husband's success in educational, as well as in every one of his other business and professional enterprises, is largely due to her influence and indomitable efforts to be the greatest possible service to him.

The work to which Mr. Dorney has thus far devoted his life is far-reaching, the knowledge and training acquired in the institution on which he has stamped the impress of his personality being carried by his pupils to every part of our own land and to every quarter of the globe. It is also enduring, in that its influence will not cease with his own life or with the lives of those whose characters and destinies he has helped to mould. It will animate the generations of the future. His influence is always exerted on the side of reforms and good government, and no project which, in his judgment tends to further the welfare and progress of Allentown, ever lacks his co-operation and support. In politics he is a Progressive Republican.

He attended school until the age of sixteen, after which he worked on the farm for three years and learned the miller's trade, which he followed for ten years. He then became a locomotive fireman on the L. V. R. R., and after being thus employed for nearly nine years, became the first fireman of the Allentown Steam Heat & Power Company, which supplied the power to the street railway system.

He was subsequently engineer for E. J. Schneck & Sons for ten years, and for the Atlas Portland Cement Company for three years. AMANDUS DREISBACH.

Simon Driesbach followed the carpenter trade for a number of years, afterwards the butcher business. He enlisted as a soldier in the Civil War, in which he contracted sickness while in service, and after serving about two years, he came home and died shortly afterwards. He was married to Susan Lorish, with whom he had the following children: Elemina, married to Edward Sherry, of Parrysville; Alexander, born in 1849, died in March, 1912. Mr. and Mrs. Dreisbach are buried at the Towamensing church.

Amandus Dreisbach, a son of Simon and Susan (Larish) Dreisbach, was born in Carbon county, Dec. 2, 1854. The first eighteen years of his life were spent on the farm. He then began working at public works in his native county. He was employed by the Carbon Iron Company until 1876, when he moved to Hokendauqua and became an employee of the Thomas Iron Company, where he has filled various positions of trust up to the present. He is the general foreman in the furnace department since 1888. Socially he holds membership in the following organizations: Catasauqua Lodge, No. 269, I. O. O. F.; No Surrender Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.; and the David Thomas Lodge, Knights of Friendship. Mr. Dreisbach and family are members of the Reformed congregation of Mickley's church. He was a member of the school board of Hokendauqua independent district for eight years. In 1873 he was married to Belinda Silfies, a daughter of Reuben and Lucinda (Smith) Silfies, formerly from Kunkeltown, later from Hokendauqua. This union was blessed with ten children: William, a graduate of the K. S. N. S.; Robert Y., deceased; Lillie E., married to Palmer Bartholomew, of Coplay; Susan E., deceased; Helen L., married to Irwin Saeger, Hokendauqua; Mary B.; Emily R., married to Frank Steckel, Cementon; David A., deceased; Florence C., deceased; and Paul Newell, a graduate of the Hokendauqua high school.

DUBS FAMILY.

On the 30th of September, 1732, the ship "Dragon," Charles Hargrave, master, entered the port of Philadelphia. On board were one hundred and eighty-five passengers, most of whom were in fact, natives of Switzerland, from which country there was then an extensive emigration to America.

Among the passengers was a young Swiss gunsmith named Jacob Dubs. When the ship arrived at Philadelphia he was ill and could not personally appear to be qualified so that the clerks had every opportunity to play havoc with his name. In one list it is written "Tubs" and in another "Dubbs."

Jacob Dubs was born August 31, 1710, in the hamlet of Aesch, parish of Birmensdorf, Canton, of Zurich, Switzerland. His parents, Jacob Dubs and Anna Glattli, of Bachstetten, had been married in the parish church of Birmensdorf, March 24, 1705. Two older sons both successively named Hans Ulrich, had died in early infancy, and Jacob remained only surviving child.

The Dubs family had for many generations been settled at Birmensdorf and in the neighboring village of Affoltern. For a long time they had been gunsmiths, but in the earliest records they are called armorers.

Though so long resident in Switzerland, there was a tradition that the stock had been remotely of Bohemian origin. The name certainly comes from the Bohemian (Czech) word dub, which signifies an oak. More directly it is held to be derived from the name of a town near Prague, called Duba ("The Oaks"), or in German Eichen, or Aycha. In Bohemia the name is well known, though in the language of the country it is often written Dubsy. According to Merian ("Topographia Bohemia," p. 26), the families Von Eichen and Berka were originally named Dubs, the name first mentioned being a translation and the second derived from an estate. A branch of the Bohemian family, the tradition relates, became Hussites in the fifteenth century, and during the succeeding wars were compelled to flee to the Austrian province of Styria, where we find them settled in 1446. The head of the family there entered the military service, and distinguished himself in an expedition against the Swiss. He was knighted on the field of battle by the Emperor Maximilian I., who also gave him the privilege of occupying a clearing in the imperial forest. The arms granted on this occasion were carefully preserved by his descendants, and were recognized and approved by Frederick I., King of Prussia, in 1701. They appear in the "Europaische Wappensammlung," published by John Rudolph Helmers, Nuremberg, 1705, Vol. V, p. 38, and represent a silver lance with pennon on a blue shield, surmounted, as a crest, by three ostrich feathers (the Bohemian Plumes), two silver and a centre blue.

About the beginning of the protestant reformation a younger son or grandson, of the Styrian knight removed to Switzerland. The motives of his removal it might now be difficult to determine, but it may perhaps be supposed that he was influenced by Hussite family traditions to cast his lot with the rising cause of the reformation. At any rate, he became an earnest protestant, while the family in Styria has remained catholic to the present day.

Having settled some six or eight miles from the city of Zurich, the Styrian immigrant became a manufacturer of weapons. In 1531, Zurich was unexpectedly invaded by the army of the Catholic cantons, and the artisan at once became a soldier. He fought bravely in the army of defence, but lost his life, with the Reformer Zwingli, in the fatal battle of Cappel, October 11, 1531. It is recorded in the ancient chronicle of the church at Affoltern that the armorer (der Waffenschmid) Dubs, of Birmensdorf, was slain at Cappel in defence of his faith. The fact is also stated by Henry Bullinger, the successor of Zwingli, in his "Reformation Geschichte" (reprint of 1840, Vol. III, p. 153); but in this case the author has got the name twisted and makes it Jacob Dubbs.

Jacob Dubs, the subject of our sketch, became, like his father, a gunsmith. He was fairly well educated and wrote an excellent hand. Family tradition has it that in his early boyhood his mother died. His father married a second time and had another son, then he, too, passed away. By this time Jacob was of age, and after due consideration he determined to emigrate. Several of his cousins, "nearer or more remote," had already crossed the sea.

Arriving in Pennsylvania, it was but natural that he should seek the society of his countrymen; and we next find him at Great Swamp, in what was then Bucks county, where the Rev. John Henry Goetschius, of Zurich, had recently founded a congregation. On the oldest list of members his name appears.

Not far from the Great Swamp Church, in what is now Lower Milford township, Lehigh county, Jacob Dubs fixed his home. The tract had hitherto been unoccupied, and, according to the earliest draft, all the surrounding land was vacant, except that Jacob Wetzel had just taken up a piece along its southern line. The earliest survey was made for Jacob Dubs by Nicholas Scull on the 28th of September, 1734. According to this survey, the "home farm" originally included one hundred and fifty acres, "with the usual allowance of six per cent.," but it was increased by subsequent purchases. A branch of the Perkiomen ran through the tract and furnish excellent water power. One of the settler's first acts was to utilize this stream by the erection of a small forge, where he engaged in the manufacture of arms and iron implements. He was, first of all, a gunsmith, but it was said of him that he made everything "from a plough to a darning-needle." Men called him "ein Tausendkünstler," which was a rather polite way of saying that he was a "Jack of all trades." At a later date he made, in his leisure hours, a musical instrument called "ein Flugel"—a harpsichord, an instrument now superseded by the piano—which was long in possession of the descendants. Though his various enterprises were continued by his son and grandsons the fact remains that he laid the foundations of what were in their day a series of important undertakings.

In 1734, Jacob Dubs was "duly qualified and invested with all the rights of natural-born subject of Pennsylvania." A little later he was married to Veronica Welker, who was a native of the Upper Palatinate, but had relatives in America. George Welker, of Goshenhoppen, who speculated extensively in land, and whose name appears on many ancient deeds, was nearly related. She is said to have been a woman of some culture, and, when the neighborhood began to be settled, she gathered the children in her kitchen and taught them to read.

The following list of children of Jacob and Veronica Dubs is extracted, with the correction of a single date, from the records of the Great Swamp Church:

1. FELIX, born February 28, 1738, baptized by the Rev. J. H. Goetschius. Sponsors, Felix Brunner and his wife Barbara.

2. BARBARA, born April 5, 1744; baptized by the Rev. George Michael Weiss. Sponsors Jacob Wetzel and Barbara Wetzel.

3. MARGARETHA, born 1746; baptized by the Rev. G. M. Weiss. Sponsor, Anna Maria Wetzel.

4. DANIEL, born October 5, 1748; baptized by the Rev. G. M. Weiss. Sponsors, Daniel Christman and his wife Margaret.

5. ELIZABETH, born October 16, 1750; baptized by the Rev. G. M. Weiss. Sponsor, Elizabeth Huber.

That the family, like other pioneers, was exposed to dangers and privations will be readily understood. This is illustrated by a tradition related to the writer by a descendant. There were wolves in the woods near the house, and when Daniel was a little boy he often amused himself by imitating their barking. Once, while he was doing this, a wolf rushed out of the woods to attack him; but he escaped by running to the open window of the kitchen, and his mother drew him in.

Jacob Dubs was a man of peace, but when the Indians were making incursions into the Lehigh Valley, he joined a military company and followed the enemy beyond the Blue Mountains. They tracked the Indians for many miles, but there was no conflict.

In the welfare of the church the subject of this sketch was profoundly interested. He was chosen a ruling elder, and it has been mentioned as a somewhat unusual fact that in the same congregation this office was held by three generations of his descendants.

About the year 1759 the family was visited by a severe affliction. The eldest son Felix, had grown up to be a bright young man, was still unmarried. Having started for Philadelphia with a load of farm produce, he spent a night at North Wales, at the house of Matthias Schwenk, whose daughter Elizabeth was afterwards married to his brother, Daniel. Rising early in the morning, while it was dark, Felix fell into the well, which, it seems, was not properly covered, and was drowned.

The daughters were all happily married. Barbara became the wife of Jacob Boyer, a man who was highly esteemed in the community. During the revolution he sold his farm, and was paid in depreciated money. Becoming financially involved, he removed to the West, and finally settled in Tennessee, where he is said to have many descendants. After some years he revisited his old home in Pennsylvania and paid all his old debts, with interest.

Margaretha became the second wife of Jacob Dillinger, and had three children. Her descendants are numerous.

Elizabeth was married to Jacob Haak, of Berks county, and from them many of the Haaks, Sells, Gabels, and other Berks county families derive descent.

When the daughters were married, Daniel, the only surviving son of Jacob Dubs, remained with his parents at the homestead. As he had grown up to be a man of almost gigantic frame and was of good mental capacity, his father's business naturally passed into his control. In 1772 the father sold his real estate to his son for three hundred and fifty popunds.

The exact date of the death of Jacob Dubs the writer has not been able to determine. The church records are for several years incomplete, and his tombstone has crumbled so that its inscription has become illegible. The writer has the impression that he lived to the age of sixty-five, so that his death must have occurred in 1775 and this date cannot be far out of the way. His wife survived him several years. Both lie buried in the old church-yard of the congregation of which they were members, adjacent to the tomb of their son, Daniel.

It may be interesting to add that, under the care of Daniel Dubs, the industries established by his father were greatly extended. After his marriage to Elizabeth Schwenk, he built for himself a large brick house, which is still standing in excellent condition. According to undisputed tradition, it was the first brick house built within the present limits of Lehigh county.

The forge erected by his father was enlarged, and became what would now be called a machine shop. In those days they called it "die Schleifmuehle." Sickles were produced in large numbers, and screw-augers manufactured there not many years after their invention by Judge William Henry, of Lancaster. The business finally passed into the hands of his son, John, who was no less skilful than his father. At this shop a large number of muskets were made for the government during the war of 1812.

The grist mill was built about the beginning of the present century. It became especially well known for peculiarly fine buckwheat flour, which was a staple article in the Philadelphia markets.

To trace the history of the several industries established by Daniel Dubs would be impossible without access to original records, and these have apparently long since disappeared. There was, however, a tannery, as well as a sawmill, an oil-mill, and, in fact, a whole cluster of enterprises, such as in those days were not infrequently conducted by a single man. In December, 1824, Daniel Dubs disposed of his real estate by selling it to three of his sons. John took the forge, Daniel, Jr., the mill, and Jacob, the tannery. They had, in fact, been in possession of these interests at a much earlier period, and in 1815 a division was effected by written agreement, but it seems to have been discovered that a more formal act of transfer was a legal necessity.

Elizabeth Dubs, the mother of the family, passed away from life on the 20th of February, 1818. Her husband, Daniel, lived more than ten years longer, and died September 22, 1828. The following were the surviving children:

1. ANNA MARIA, born June 27, 1777. Married to Henry Eberhard. The late Michael D. Eberhard, of Allentown was her son.

2. JACOB, born June 21, 1779; died May 17, 1852. He received a part of the home farm, and built a stone house which is still (1894) occupied by the widow and daughter of his youngest son. One of his grandsons, the Rev. Jacob G. Dubbs, is a minister in Lehigh county.

3. HENRY, removed to Hamilton, Butler county, Ohio, about 1825, and has many descendants. The wife of the Rev. F. W. Berleman, D.D., pastor of Salem Church, on Fairmount avenue, near Fourth street, Philadelphia, is a granddaughter.

4. DANIEL, born April 7, 1786. In 1836 he removed to Montgomery county, Ohio. One of his sons, Daniel L., was a graduate of Heidelberg College, Ohio, and for some time a student at the Theological Seminary in Mercersburg. He became an officer in the army, and was fatally wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg.

5. JOHN, born September 5, 1788; died November 25, 1869. He lived all his life at the old homestead, which at his death passed to Aaron his only son.

6. SOLOMON, born October 10, 1794; died May 24, 1880. He resided near Allentown, Pennsylvania, and has descendants.

7. REV. JOSEPH S., born October 16, 1796; died April 14, 1877.

Joseph S. Dubbs, the first Reformed pastor of St. John's Church Mickley's, Pa., was born at the old family homestead in Upper Milford (now Lower Milford township), Lehigh county, Pa., on the 16th day of October, 1796.

In an unfinished autobiographical sketch he gives the following account of his early Christian training:

During the long winter evenings we were required to commit the Catechism and read the Psalter and New Testament. We read alternately and the elder were the teachers of the younger, and each one manifested a degree of zeal and anxiety to excel such as is rarely found in schools. On Sundays when there was no service in the church, we were required to spend the forenoon in religious study, but whenever it was possible we went to church and listened to the preaching of the gospel. After we returned from church and had taken dinner the Bible was brought and the chapter from which the text was taken read and commented upon. When this was done we were allowed to enjoy a little innocent recreation.

It was about the time of his confirmation that he felt an earnest longing to become a minister of the Gospel. He placed himself under the care of Rev. F. L. Herman, D.D., who prepared many candidates for his profession. For four years he was under the instructions of Dr. Herman. The school which he conducted was popularly known as the "Swamp College." In 1822 he was licensed to preach the gospel with special authority to administer the sacraments. He was ordained in 1823 at Kutztown. His first charge consisted of Windsor and Weiss churches. His salary from the whole charge amounted to $100 per annum. In 1824 the Epless church, and in 1826 the Haines church was added to his charge of which he remained pastor until July, 1831.

In 1831 Father Dubbs accepted a call to the charge in Lehigh county consisting of Allentown, Egypt, Union and Jordan churches.

He remained pastor of this charge from 1831 to 1861; during the latter years he was assisted by his son, Alfred, and Rev. C. R. Hessler. It was while pastor of this charge that Mickley's Church was organized, of which he became the first Reformed pastor.

In 1861 he resigned the church in Allentown and continued to preach in the other congregations until 1868, when he resigned and removed to Allentown where he lived in retirement until his death which occurred April 14, 1877.

Dr. Dubbs was married twice, the first time in 1825 to Susan Getz, the second time in 1837 to Mrs. Eleanor Murphy.

The first marriage was blessed with three children, Rev. Alfred J. G. Dubbs and two daughters were respectively married to Owen L. Schreiber and James O. Shimer.

By the second marriage he had two sons. Silas who died in childhood and Joseph H.

Rev. Joseph S. Dubbs preached over eight thousand sermons, baptized 7,076 infants and adults, officiated at 2,778 funerals; solemnized 2,176 marriages.

Alfred Joseph Getz Dubbs was the oldest son of the Rev. Joseph S. Dubbs, D.D., and his wife, Susan, whose maiden name was Getz. He was born in Windsor township (now Perry), Berks County, Pa., on June 8, in the year 1826. In the spring of 1845 he went to Mercersburg, Pa., the seat of Marshall College, where he pursued his studies until the fall of 1849, when he took charge of a select school. Up to this time he had no fixed conviction in regard to his vocation in life, but now he must settle the question. For his subsequent history it would seem that the Lord had only one path which he was at liberty to pursue, and after the most earnest and prayerful consideration he felt it his duty to prepare for the Christian ministry. With this purpose he studied theology, and in the spring of 1851 East Pennsylvania Classis examined and licensed him, at its annual session, in Plainfield, Northampton county. In the fall of the same year he was ordained to the holy ministry, in Zion's Reformed Church, Allentown, where for one year he served in the capacity of assistant pastor to his father, preaching in the English language.

In 1852 he became pastor of the South Whitehall (Mickley's) Church, of which he remained the pastor to 1860. In 1857 Rev. Mr. Dubbs was called to the charge composed of Trexler-town, Macungie, Upper Milford, Salisbury, and Frieden's congregations, which he served faithfully and successfully for fourteen years, when the charge was divided and he became the pastor of the first four named congregations, which he served until 1876.

In 1875 Salem congregation was organized and Revs. A. J. G. Dubbs, W. R. Hofford and Jared Fritzinger were appointed a committee of supply by Classis for the new Salem congregation. January 3, 1876, Rev. Mr. Dubbs was elected pastor. Two days previous (Jan. 1, 1876) he organized the Emaus Reformed congregation and continued as its pastor for a period of ten years.

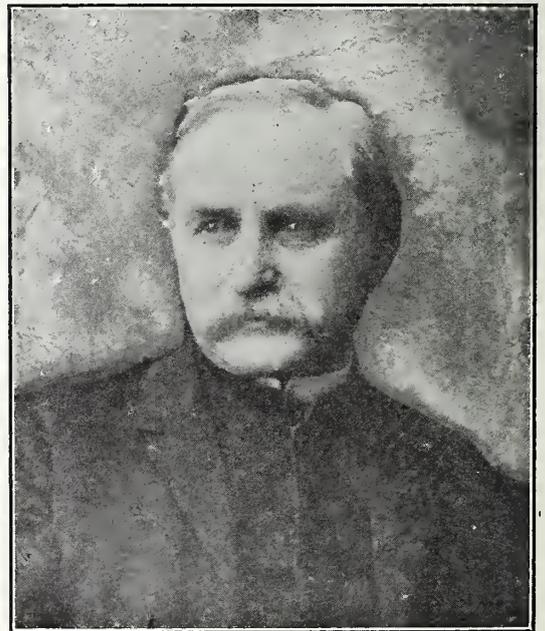

Dr. Dubbs was nearly fifty years old when he assumed the pastorate of Salem Church, and for sixteen years he brought a warm heart and living zeal to the work that made a lasting impression on the congregation. To this day the church is familiarly known as Dubb's Church. The church grew under his pastorate from 170 to twelve hundred members.

His health failing, he retired from active service January, 1892. He fell asleep in Allentown November 7, 1897.

Prof. Joseph H. Dubbs, D.D., son of Rev. Joseph and Eleanor D. Dubbs, was born in North Whitehall Oct. 5, 1838. At the early age of 14 he had completed his preparation for college and was brought by his father to the newly established Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster. He completed the course at the Mercersburg Theological Seminary in 1859, was awarded the degree of D.D. by Ursinus College in 1878 and that of LL.D. by Heidelberg University, Ohio, in 1897.

Dr. Dubbs, began his ministry in the Reformed church in Allentown in 1859. He became the pastor of South Whitehall (Mickleys) church in 1860. He vacated that position in 1863 to accept a call to Pottstown, which he filled until 1871, when he became pastor of Christ Reformed Church, Philadelphia. In 1875 he was elected to the Audenried chair of History and Archæology at Franklin and Marshall, which position he held up until the time of his death. He was frequently elected as delegate to the Assemblies of sister denominations, president of the Eastern Synod of the Reformed Church. While in Paris on a European tour in 1878, Dr. Dubbs was chosen a corresponding member of the Ethnographic Institute of France and in 1895 he was chosen as a Fellow in the Historical Society of Great Britain.

The literary work of Dr. Dubbs was both extensive and varied. From 1882 to 1886 he was editor of the "Guardian," a Reformed Publication and from 1894 to 1895 was one of the editors of the Reformed Church Messenger. He is the author of the Manual of the Reformed Church, The Reformed Church in Penn'a, History of Franklin and Marshall College, Home Ballads and Metrical Versions, Why I Am Reformed, etc., etc. He was a contributor to the Encyclopedia Britannica, Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia, America Church History Series.

Dr. Dubbs died April 1, 1910, and is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Mary L. Wilson, together with his two sons, Henry A. Dubbs, Esq., a prominent lawyer of Pueblo, Colorado, and T. Wilson Dubbs, the Lancaster jeweler and his two daughters, Mrs. Frank Nish, of Hagerstown, Md., and Mrs. Clarke Kieffer, of Frederick, Md.

William S. Dubbs, yeoman of Emaus, is a son of Harrison W. Dubbs and a grandson of Solomon Dubbs, of Whitehall township. Solomon was born October 10, 1794, and died November 25, 1880; he was a son of Daniel Dubbs (1748-1828) and a grandson of Jacob Dubbs the emigrant. To Solomon Dubbs and his wife a born Schwartz were born the following children:

Robert, who married Carolina Ludwig, of Maxatawny township, Berks county, issue, Silas Dubbs and Mrs. John Jacoby, of Allentown.

Dahlia, married to Moses Keck, of Salisbury township; issue, Newton, Alfred, Alice, Emma, Florence and Maggie.

Harrison W., the father of William Harrison. Harrison Dubbs was born November 31, 1831, and was baptized by Rev. J. S. Dubbs January 15, 1832. He was a miller by trade and for many years conducted a mill in Salisbury township on the bank of Trout Stream, known generally as Dubbs Mills. In 1870 he purchased a small farm in Upper Saucon township. He died at Emaus March 21, 1901. He was married to Catharine Schuler, a daughter of Ludwig Schuler and Anna Geisinger. Mrs. Dubbs was born April 3, 1837, and died December 27, 1874, both Mr. and Mrs. Dubbs lie buried in the Linden Street Cemetery, Allentown. EBERT FAMILY.

The earliest definite record of this old family is gleaned from the Heidelberg township tax list of 1762, which contains the names of Tobias, John, and Philip Ebert. They were assessed respectively as follows: Ten pounds, nine pounds, and Philip as a "single man." On Sept. 18, 1767, Tobias Ebert obtained a warrant for land; and on Oct. 26, 1768, John Ebert obtained a warrant for land, both tracts were located in Heidelberg township and there these pioneers continued to live to the end of their days. Philip Ebert, on May 4, 1768, obtained a warrant for a tract of land situated in Lynn township.

Family tradition, which in part, is confirmed by record, states that three brothers, Tobias, John, and Philip Ebert emigrated from Germany to Pennsylvania, soon after the first half of the eighteenth century; that all three came to Heidelberg township, where Tobias and John continued to live, and Philip settled in Lynn township.

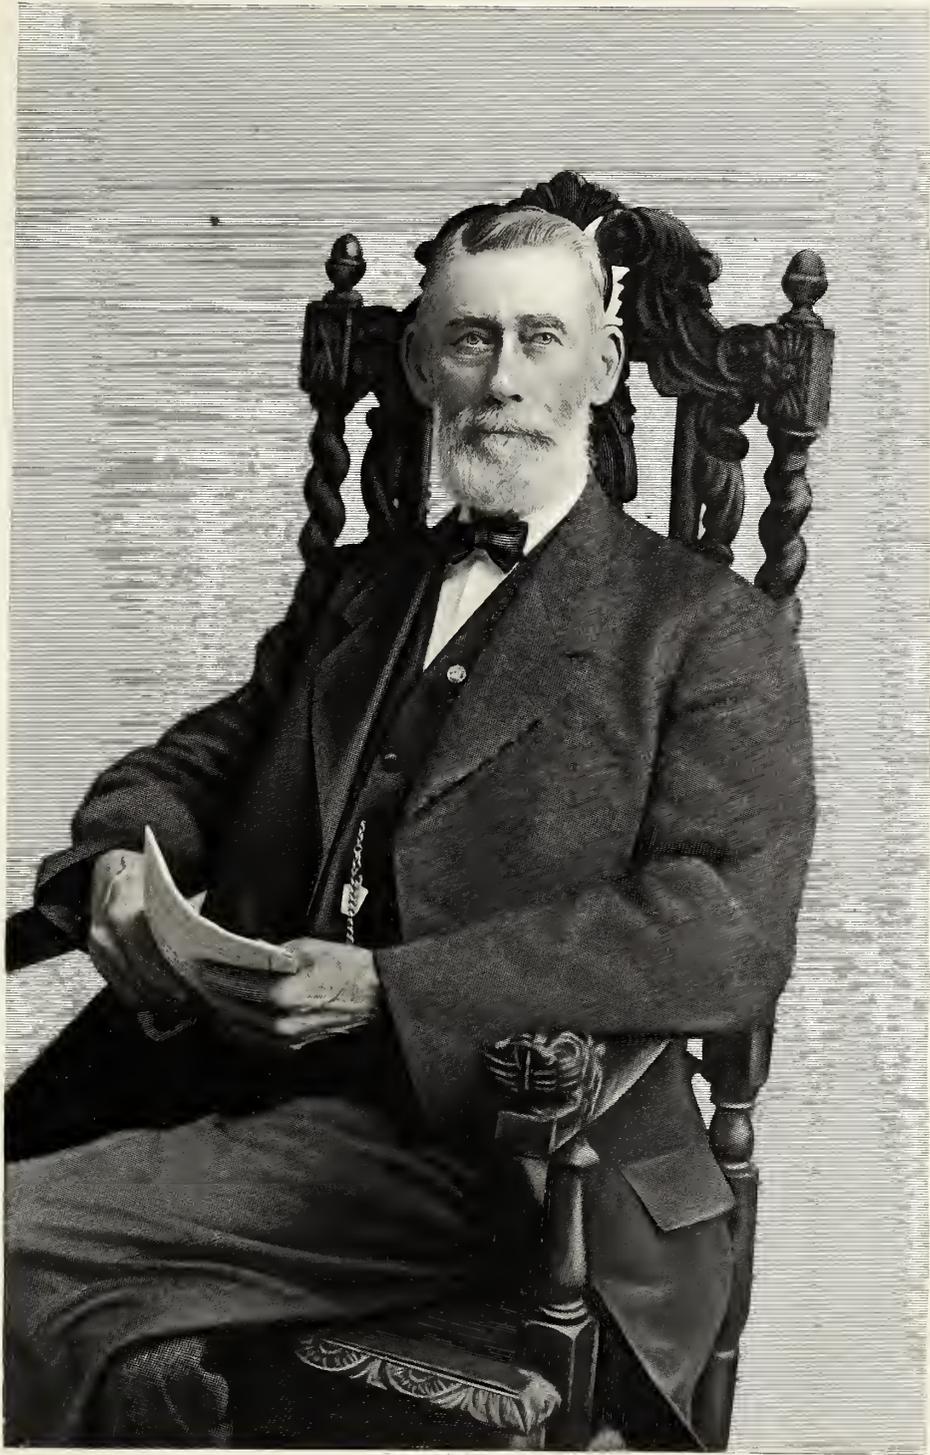

In 1781, Tobias and John Ebert are among the taxable residents of Heidelberg township; and the name of Philip Ebert appears among the taxable residents of Lynn township. From subsequent records it is evident that the three pioneers became heads of large families whose posterity is now numerous and widely scattered.

In 1812, among the taxable residents of Heidelberg were: Peter, John, Michael, Conrad, Christian, and Henry Ebert; and among the taxable residents of Lynn appear the names of Philip, Tobias, and Peter Ebert. The first group of taxables, above named, doubtless were the sons of Tobias and John, while in Lynn township, Philip, the first named, probably was the father of Tobias and Peter. Philip was the youngest of the trio who founded the family in Lehigh county.

Tobias Ebert carried on agricultural pursuits in Lynn township. His homestead situated near New Tripoli, is now the property of Alvin Schaeffer, who purchased it from T. Ayers. Before the latter purchased the farm it belonged to Joseph Gift. He had bought it from Mrs. Peter Kressley, the daughter of Tobias Ebert, whose children were: Tobias, married to Julia Harter or Herber; Henry, William, John, married to Barbara Fry, and Betsy, the wife of Peter Kressley.

John Ebert, son of Tobias, was born June 26, 1804. He was a farmer in Lynn township. On April 26, 1827, he married Maria Barbara, a daughter of Michael and Barbara Fry. She was born June 10, 1805, died May 8, 1875. He died on July 10, 1876. Both are buried on the old graveyard at the Weisenberg Union church, of which they were members of the Lutheran congregation. They had the following children:

Polly, born June 26, 1828; died in 1913; married (1) J. Reinsmith, (2) Jacob Boyer.

Ferdinand Eberhart

Levi, born Nov. 18, 1829; married Helena Reitz. John, born Sept. 13, 1831; died unmarried. Sarah, born May 27, 1833; married Christian Snyder. Nathan, born Nov. 1, 1834; married Jane Hausman. Amandes, born Jan. 6, 1837; died Nov. 8, 1880, married Sarah Moser. Lydia, born April 8, 1838; married Wm. Moser. Moses, born April 8, 1840; died unmarried. David, born Oct. 16, 1843; died in 1913; married Adeline Wert.

The above named children all lived in Lynn township.

Amandes Ebert, son of John Ebert and his wife Barbara, nee Frey, was born in Lynn township, Jan. 6, 1837. During his boyhood, he helped his father on a farm, and he obtained such education as the public schools of that day afforded. He then learned the trade of a stonemason and he carried on this trade for a number of years, erecting many stone dwelling-houses and laying the foundations for many barns, dwellings and other farm buildings in that section of the county. Upon his marriage, he located at Slatington, and after living there for some years he moved to Lynn township. He purchased his father's farm at the solicitation of his parents, and gave them a home on the place until they died. He carried on farming operations in connection with his trade until he died, on Nov. 8, 1880. He was buried on the cemetery at New Tripoli. On Oct. 13, 1866, he was married to Sarah Ann Moser, a daughter of John Moser, and they were members of the Lutheran congregation of the Ebenezer church at New Tripoli, which he served as an official for a number of years. They had the following children:

James O., born July 2, 1868; married Ellen M. Snyder. Rev. Alfred O., born Feb. 19, 1870; married Annie M. Fegley. Oscar A., born Sept. 25, 1875; died Mar. 20, 1895. Calvin M., born May 2, 1878; died Mar. 22, 1878. Angie M., born Feb. 4, 1880, married John Gildner.

JAMES O. EBERT owns and occupies the Ebert homestead situated east of New Tripoli, in Lynn township. He was married at Audenreid, Pa., on April 10, 1898, to Ellen M. Snyder. His brother, Rev. Alfred O. Ebert, performing the marriage ceremony, according to the rites of the Lutheran Church.

Oscar A., and Calvin M. Ebert are buried on the Ebert family plot, on the cemetery at New Tripoli.

REV. ALFRED O. EBERT.

Rev. Alfred Oliver Ebert, of New Tripoli, son of Amandes and Sarah A. (Moser) Ebert, was born in Lynn, February 19, 1870. His youth was spent upon the farm in Lehigh county. His early education was received in the public and select schools of his native township, and then he taught school for three terms. During this time he prepared for Muhlenberg College, which he entered in the fall of 1889, and was graduated with the class of 1893; and in the fall of 1893 he entered the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, graduating May 26, 1896, and in June 1st he was ordained to the ministry in St. John's Lutheran church, Allentown, Pa. The Audenreid-Beaver Meadow parish, of near Hazleton, Pa., had extended him a call, and this he accepted on June 7, 1896.

With enthusiasm he took charge of the field, which needed a conscientious and painstaking leader, the field being home mission territory. St. Paul's, Beaver Meadow congregation, had been temporarily organized March 16, 1896, without having a permanent church home. By God's grace and blessing, Rev. Ebert gathered a nice congregation and aided them in securing their own church. In May, 1897, they purchased a lot, laid the corner stone August 22, and dedicated their church Dec. 26, 1897. The same year they also purchased an organ, which was dedicated Oct. 18, 1897. The Salem, Audenreid congregation made marked progress during his pastorate. A debt of $800 was paid off; the floors were recarpeted, electric lights were installed, stained glass windows were inserted and other repairs were made.

His work here, whilst strenuous, was nevertheless most pleasant and successful. He ended his work in this parish to accept a call extended by the Shonersville-Rittersville parish, June 26, 1904, the same having been accepted to go into effect August 1, 1904. On September 25, 1904, his installation took place, the same being performed by Revs. W. D. C. Keiter, president of the Allentown Conference, and Rev. H. S. Fegley, his father-in-law. During his pastorate he raised exceptional large sums for benevolence and made substantial gains in membership in both churches. He resigned this parish, August 1, 1906, to accept the call of the New Tripoli parish, consisting of Ebenezer, New Tripoli; Jacob's, Jacksonville; Jerusalem, Albany township, Berks county; St. Peter's, Lynnville and St. Paul's, Seiberlingsville congregations. He is now preaching to his schoolmates, companions and neighbors of his youth who look upon him with reverence and profound respect. His present parish was served by the late and lamented Rev. H. S. Fegley, whose homestead in New Tripoli is now occupied by Rev. Ebert, his wife Annie M., and their children: Paul F., Annie M., Alfred J., Luther J., Carl A., Ruth F., and Helen S.

Peter Ebert, son of Philip, owned and occupied the farm now the property of Reuben H. Fister, near New Tripoli, Pa. He was married to Catharine Miller. They are buried at New Tripoli. Their children follow: Jonas, Peter, Joseph, Nathan, Polly, married to Joseph Huth. Of the sons, Peter, Joseph, and Nathan removed to the state of Illinois. Jonas was a farmer and a shoemaker at Hynemansville. He was born Aug. 28, 1798, died Sept. 13, 1877. He married Maria Bachman, born Nov. 27, 1798, died Sept. 6, 1887. They had the following children: Reuben, Nathan, Stephen, who lived in Weisenberg; Daniel, Juliann, born in 1825; Mary Ann, Eliza Ann, Lydia Ann, and Sarah Ann.

Stephen Ebert, son of Jonas, was born April 7, 1833. He lived in Weisenberg township. He was married to Sabina, a daughter of Jonas Reitz, of Lynn township. She was born in 1832, and died in 1879. They had a daughter, Sarah L., married to John Bailey, who died in 1907, aged 46 years. They had six children.

Henry Ebert, whose name appears among the taxable residents of Heidelberg, in 1812, owned upwards of one hundred acres of land in that township. He made his last will and testament, Sept. 13, 1814. He died between that date and the probating of the will on the 15th of the following month. He was twice married. The given name of his second wife was Barbara. He was the father of nine children, as follows: Henry, Peter, John, Jonas, Tobias, William, Elizabeth, and two other daughters.

Abraham Ebert was married and had seven sons and one daughter, namely: Samuel, Daniel, Jonas, John, Peter, Joseph, Nathaniel, and Mary.

Conrad Ebert, mentioned in the tax list of 1812, was born Aug. 16, 1764, died Aug. 25, 1842, aged 78 years, and 9 days. He married Maria Barbara Ferber, born Jan. 2, 1774, died Nov. 8, 1841, aged 67 years, 11 months, and 6 days. They are buried on the Heidelberg church cemetery.

ECKERT FAMILY.

The ancestor of this family in America was Justus Eckert or Eckhard. He was a native of Schersfeld, Oberamt Meissenheim, Zweibruecken, where he resided in 1759. He arrived in this country at the port of Philadelphia, on Nov. 10, 1764, on board the ship Boston, Matthew Carr, master, which sailed from Rotterdam, Holland and stopped at Cowes, England, with 203 passengers, natives of Germany and Switzerland. Prior to his settling in Allentown, he lived for some time in Montgomery county, where he was a schoolmaster, and in 1785 he was a resident of Allentown. In the first census return made in 1790, he is given as having three sons under 16 years of age. Justus Eckert died Oct. 9, 1811, in Allentown, and at the time of his death well up in years. His wife, Elizabeth, died March 10, 1811, in her 70th year of age. They are, no doubt, buried in the old Allentown cemetery, but no tombstone marks their last resting place. Their eldest daughter, Elizabeth Eckert, was born in 1768, and died at Philadelphia, April 16, 1826. The second child, Margaret Eckert, was born in 1770, and died March 14, 1833. JOHN W. ECKERT was born in Allentown, March 13, 1858. He attended the public schools of the city and entered Lehigh University, where he took a full course in analytical chemistry, also making a special study of engineering and graduated in 1878. Having made a study of the analysis of cement, he wrote, at the age of nineteen, an essay giving an analysis of the raw material as found in Lehigh county for the manufacture of Portland cement, (and also made Portland cement of this material), and comparing it with foreign cement, which was published in the State Geological Survey report. In this essay he also gave the analysis.

In 1877, while yet at college, he became associated as a chemist with the Coplay Cement Co., of which David O. Saylor, the pioneer Portland cement manufacturer of America, was then president. The output of the company developed from one hundred barrels a day to 125,000 barrels a year in 1885, and by 1890, to 170,000 barrels in six months.

In 1881 Mr. Eckert became superintendent of the Coplay Cement Company, which position he held until 1885, when, in company with Messrs. Frank Thompson, Alexander McGough, Dr. Filbert, R. W. Leslie, James Brand, and John W. Trinkle, he organized the American Cement Company of Pennsylvania, and located a cement plant at Egypt. The company purchased about 400 acres of land, comprising parts of the Lazarus, Kohler, Rhoads, Schadt, and Woodring farms, besides other tracts, and reached a capacity of 1,800,000 barrels of cement a year. In 1898 the plant was sold for $3,000,000. Mr. Eckert continued with the company as president until 1912.

By his efforts, Mr. Eckert secured the first state road in Lehigh county, from Allentown to Walberts, and much of the success of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society, of which he was president from 1907 to 1914, was due to his energetic efforts. He is a director of the Allentown National Bank, and a member of the Livingston Club, Allentown Lodge of Elks, Clover Club, and a charter member of the St. Leger Club. He is the owner of one of the finest farms in the county, the buildings on which are models of its kind. He is married to Miss Jennie Lisk.

Frederick Eckert was a merchant and his place of business was on North Seventh street, where the Hunsicker building now stands, adjoining the old Northampton bank, which stood where the Allentown National Bank now stands. It was a brick building located on a 60-foot lot, 230 feet deep, and numbered in the city plan No. 342. This was sold December 6, 1821, to Philip Brang for $1,660. He also owned a lot on Hamilton street, which was sold to Dr. Jacob Martin for $103.75. His estate amounted to $6,115.11.

ALEXANDER BURNS ELLSWORTH.

The original Ellsworths, from whom the families by that name in America are the descendants, trace back many centuries. In 1660, Charles II, was restored to the throne. Four years afterwards the Episcopalians, having obtained the ascendancy of power in church and state, commenced a severe and cruel persecution upon those dissenters who refused compliance to the Conformity Act or their particular form of worship, imposing fines, imprisonment, banishment and death.

In 1664, one of the Ellsworth brothers, probably the eldest, fled to Holland. He there became incorporated with the Dutch and spelled his name after the Dutch pronunciation, Elswort. After a few years he emigrated with his family to America and settled in New York. His Christian name is believed to have been Theophilus. He and his descendants professed their attachment for the Dutch Reformed Church.

Six years later, 1670, persecutions being renewed with increased severity by the same power, the second brother fled and settled in Connecticut. From his descended the family of that state who spelled their name Ellsworth. To this family belonged Oliver Ellsworth, Chief Justice of the United States, who was born at Windsor, Connecticut, April 29, 1745, died in 1807, and William Ellsworth, at one time governor of that state. The name of this brother is supposed to have been Christopher.

About 1661 the third brother fled and settled at North Kingston, Rhode Island. His name is supposed to have been Arthur. He married a Mary Brown, of Providence, Rhode Island. He spelled his name Aylesworth. The descendants of these three brothers are said to resemble each other, having sandy hair, light skin, blue eyes, and often red whiskers.

Edward F. Ellsworth was born at Madelin, Dutchess county, New York, in 1810, died at Allentown, May 27, 1892, and was buried by the side of his wife in Mt. Hope cemetery, Rochester, New York. He was reared and educated in the vicinity of his birthplace, and his first occupation was that of a blacksmith, which he relinquished in order to give his entire attention to the nursery business. He migrated to Reading, where he remained only a short period of time, and shortly after the Civil War took up his residence in Allentown, where he spent the remainder of his days. He there engaged in the nursery business, locating in the Fifth ward, on the site of the present Fifth ward school building on North Sixth street, and successfully conducted the same until his retirement from active pursuits. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He married Cassie Burns, a native of Canada, of Scotch descent, daughter of Alexander Burns. She died in 1866. Earlier in life Mr. Ellsworth was engaged in lumbering in Canada, and in this way met his future wife.

Alexander Burns Ellsworth, son of Edward F. Ellsworth, was born in Rochester, New York. When a lad of ten years he accompanied his parents to Allentown. He was educated in the public schools, the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, and Muhlenberg College. He became an assistant to his father, and in 1873 took over the floral part of the business, then located in the Fifth ward. In 1883 he removed his hot-houses to the corner of Tilghman and Fourth streets, where he has nearly two acres of land, and where he conducts a very extensive and profitable business. He erected ten residential houses on Fourth street, between Tilghman and Allen streets, also his own fine residence at the corner of Penn and Tilghman streets, all of which are equipped with every appliance for the comfort of those occupying them.

Mr. Ellsworth is a Democrat in politics. He was a member of the Common council from the Fifth ward, and later became the first select councilman of the Tenth ward. During his terms of office he served on the leading committees, and while a member of the latter body he had the honor of presenting a gavel to the retiring officer, M. P. Schantz, Esq. His presentation speech was regarded as a very able and suitable one for the occasion. In 1898 he was a candidate for mayor of Allentown; it was under the old delegate system; he was defeated for the nomination by a small vote through treachery on the part of a leader, now deceased, who was supposed to be his friend. In the year 1902, he became a member of the school board from the Tenth ward; he was twice elected by the section board. In 1911, under the new code, he was elected by the city one of the nine controllers. He was the temperance chairman of the new board, which he organized Dec. 4, 1911.

Mr. Ellsworth and his wife worship in Zion Reformed church, he serving as a member of the Consistory for some years, and also as a member of the Board of Trustees which had charge of the erection of the present beautiful edifice. Mr. Ellsworth is also prominent in musical circles of the city. He played solo alto in the Allentown Band for many years; played the violin in the Lockwood Orchestra, and assisted in singing in a number of concerts given in the Methodist Episcopal church. He has always been a contributing member of the Young Men's Christian Association, and was a director of the board for several years. Allen Cement Co., Allentown, Pa., is a descendant in the fourth generation of John Erdell, a native of Paris, France, who with his family, among whom were sons, Jacob and John, Jr., crossed the Atlantic to America, landing at Philadelphia, in 1807. His son, John Erdell, grandfather of William E. Erdell, was born February 3, 1802, and was reared in the city of Philadelphia, learned the shoemaker's trade in his youth, and on starting out in life on his own account established his home in Upper Macungie, Pennsylvania, where he followed shoemaking for some time. He afterward became connected with the operation of the limestone quarries, and with his father removed to Fogelsville, where he spent his remaining days, his death occurring in March 6, 1862: He had been reared in the Catholic faith, of which church his father was a communicant, but John Erdell, Jr., became a member of the Lutheran church. He married Christiana Stern, a daughter of Morton Stern, a native of Heidelberg township, Lehigh county. She departed this life in 1883, in her 80th year. She was the second wife of John Erdell, and unto them were born three children: Francis, Eugene C. F., and William H. The last named married Mary Geidner, and they had three children: (1) Edgar E., married, Annie Bloss, and had three children: Ralph, Leonard, and Russel, and after the death of his first wife he married a G, Third Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, and the following year he was transferred to Co. E, 188th Regt. Penna. Infantry. He participated in many important engagements, including the battle of Drury's Bluff, Va., May 16, 1864, and Cold Harbor from the 1st to the 6th of June of that year. In the last conflict he was wounded in the neck and was carried unconscious from the field by his comrades and sent to Whitehouse, Virginia, and thence to Washington, D. C., where he remained until his wound was healed. The bullet had gone entirely through the neck, and his is the only recorded case of recovery after such a wound. He was mustered out of service at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, June 20, 1865. Returning to Catasauqua he entered the employ of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railroad Co. When he had served in the repair shops for two months he was made brakeman, and in 1872 was appointed baggage master on the local passenger train, thus serving until February, 1891, when he was made conductor of that train. In the railroad service he has become widely known, and his courteous, obliging treatment of the patrons of the road has gained him many friends. Socially, he is connected with the Fuller Post, No. 378, G. A. R., of which he is a charter member, and in which he has served as quartermaster for three years.

William Edgar Erdell was born Sept. 1, 1868. He attended the public schools of Whitehall township, was afterward graduated from the Hokendauqua High School in 1886, and later attended the Allentown Business College, where he completed his education. Entering business life, he was employed at different places for about two years, and then secured a position as office boy with the American Cement Co., at Egypt, in 1888. He remained with that company for thirteen years, or until 1901, and through his close application, unfaltering energy and devotion to the interests of the house he won continued promotion and when he severed his connection therewith he was occupying the position of assistant superintendent. He resigned in 1901 and accepted a position as general superintendent with the Whitehall Portland Cement Company, at Cementon, Pa., where he had supervision over the labor of three hundred and seventy-five workmen, and the product of the plant is about three thousand barrels of Portland cement daily. In Jan. 15, 1907, he became general manager for the Penn Allen Cement Company of Allentown, and in Aug., 1910, he became president of the said company, in which concern he now holds a large interest. They employ 225 people and manufacture 750,000 barrels of cement annually. The main office of the company is at Allentown and the works are near Nazareth. The company owns 180 acres of cement and lime-stone land. Mr. Erdell is well qualified for the responsibilities of his important position, having a thorough and practical training in the business.

In social relations Mr. Erdell is connected with the Masonic fraternity and with the Livingstone Club. In his religious views he is a Lutheran, and politically, is a staunch Republican, inflexible and unfaltering in his adherence to the party.

William Edgar Erdell was married April 22, 1896, to Miss Minnie E. Peck, who was born in Jordan, N. Y. Her paternal grandparents were Bennett and Sallie (Cain) Peck. Her father, Smith Peck, was a stonemason and contractor, of Jordan, N. Y., where he conducted a prosperous business for many years. He belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Jacob Erdman (4), son of Andreas and Anna Maria (Frederick) Erdman, was born August 15, 1763; died April 30, 1819. He married Catharine Romig, born March 19, 1774, died May 15, 1856, and settled on the old Erdman homestead, and they were the parents of eight children: Jacob (1), of whom below; Isare (2); Aaron (3); John (4); Elizabeth (5); Catharine (6); Theresa (7); and Judith (8).

Isare (2) married Catharine Gangware; their daughter married Alfred J. Breinig, of Allentown; Aaron (3) married (first) Anna Breinig, and (second) Maria Weider. He resided at Macungie; John (4) married Hannah Keck, of whom elsewhere. Elizabeth (5) married Ehrhard Weaver, and was the grandmother of Victor B. Weaver, of Coopersburg, Pa., and John B. Weaver, of Center Valley; Catharine (6) married Solomon Reichard, no issue. Judith (8) married John G. Brunner.

Charles (3) and Jacob (4) died in youth; Rebecca (5) married Charles W. Cooper, of Allentown, and after her death he married her sister, Sarah (8). Eliza (6) married Henry S. Cope, of Sellersville, Maria (7) and Belinda (9) unmarried; Adaline (10) married Dr. J. A. Laros, of Coopersburg.

Enos Erdman, the eldest son of Hon. Jacob and Sarah (Hartzel) Erdman, was born April 16, 1822, in Upper Saucon township. He was one of the most representative men of the county, in all its varied interests. Industry, integrity, energy, a spirit of social, business and public enterprise, together with a large and fine physique, were the prominent characteristics by which he was known. Primarily a farmer, he took a thorough and practical interest in agriculture, holding the position of president of the Lehigh county Agricultural Society for the last twelve years of his life. He also engaged in mining and manufacturing; was a bank director, and was often selected to manage important private trusts. He was one of the projectors of the Allentown and Coopersburg turnpike, and was president of that company continuously until his death. He fostered educational institutions, public and private, and was once a trustee of Muhlenberg College. In quite early life he was captain of a cavalry company, "The Saucon Troop," in the volunteer military service.

Ardent and influential in politics, he never sought any office of emolument, but was often given places of distinction. He was a prominent Odd Fellow, Mason, and Knight Templar, and was one of the founders of F. & A. M. lodge at Coopersburg. He died March 22, 1884, at his home at Center Valley, while yet in the full prime of life and was interred under the same monument as his father, in Woodland cemetery, at St. Paul's church (Blue church), where he was a member of the Lutheran congregation, it being the same church and burial place where his ancestors had worshipped and were buried during a century and a half preceding his death.

Enos Erdman was married to Annie Keck, daughter of Solomon Keck, of Salisbury township; she survived him. They had children, viz.: Preston K. Erdman, a member of the Philadelphia bar; Dr. Frank C. Erdman, of Center Valley; and the Hon. Constantine Jacob Erdman, of whom below.

HON. CONSTANTINE JACOB ERDMAN, former member of Congress from the Berks-Lehigh district of Pennsylvania, prominent member of the Lehigh county bar, and leading citizen, was born Sept. 4, 1846, in Center Valley, Lehigh county, Pa., son of Enos and Anna (Keck) Erdman and grandson of the Hon. Jacob and Sarah (Hartzel) Erdman. He was the author of the widely quoted Erdman law for settlement of labor disputes.

His boyhood days were devoted to the mastery of the branches of learning, taught in the public schools and in a private school at Quakertown, Pa. He subsequently attended a classical school conducted by Dr. A. R. Horne, and his education was completed at the Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, Pa., from which he was graduated in 1865, with first honors, at the age of 17 years.

He studied law in the office of Robert E. Wright, Sr., and was admitted to the bar, Oct. 28, 1867. He soon won distinction in his profession and became one of the leaders of the bar, and he was a well known figure in the district and state courts, being retained on one side or the other of almost every important case.

He was at first a partner with the late Major John H. Oliver, later with Thomas F. Diefenderfer, and latterly with his only son, Max S. Erdman.

Mr. Erdman was elected District Attorney of Lehigh county in 1874 and served three years. During the same time also he was Adjutant of the Fourth Regiment, N. G., Pa., under Col. T. H. Good, and he saw service in the labor riots of July, 1877, at Reading, when rioters assaulted the soldiers in the railroad cut with stones and other missiles, fracturing his collarbone.

Mr. Erdman was also closely identified with industrial Allentown. For a number of years he was president of the Coplay Cement Company, the Allentown and Coopersburg Turnpike Company, and the Allen Mutual Fire Insurance Company, in addition to active connection with other enterprises conducive to the business development of the city.

He was at one time a member of the board of trustees of Muhlenberg College and a member of the Livingstone Club. Religiously he held to the tenets of the Lutheran faith and was identified with St. Lutheran church.

During the 80's and 90's, the great rivalry for congressional honors between Mr. Erdman and the late Congressman William H. Sowden, formed a matter of state interest. He was, in 1892, elected to congress from the Berks-Lehigh

His greatest achievement and that which gave him a national reputation, was the passage of the Erdman Arbitration Act, which is now frequently resorted to as the last act in labor disputes and which has saved many an expensive battle between labor and capital. The great importance of this act was evident when the engineers of sixty-four railroads extending from Chicago, settled their difficulties with their companies under the Erdman Act.

district, and re-elected in 1894. He became noted for two things, first his great friendship with Speaker Thomas Brackett Reed, and also for his persistent objections to private pension grabs.

A staunch Democrat, Mr. Erdman was thoroughly versed in the history of his party, and all its principles and tenets, and he could apply to any political situation the soundest logic in line with Democratic doctrine.

The Erdman Act was designed to provide a means of enabling inter-state railroads and their employees engaged in operating trains to reach amicable agreements when disputes arise between them.

It provided that in evidence of a controversy between a road doing an interstate business and its train operatives, if the dispute is likely to result in an interruption of interstate traffic, that at the suggestion of either side, the chairman of the interstate commerce commission, who was Judge Judson C. Clemens, and the Commissioner of Labor, who was Charles P. Neill, acted as mediators to bring about the agreement.

If the mediators fail in their efforts a method of arbitration is provided for whereby each side selects an arbitrator, and these two select a third, who acts as umpire.

In the event of the failure of the first two to agree upon a third within five days, the mediators are empowered to designate such person. The findings of the arbitrators are final and binding, at least morally. No penalty is provided for failure to abide by it, however. The duty of the mediators ends if they are unable to bring about an agreement direct, or when both sides agree to arbitrate the differences, excepting to appoint a third arbitrator is necessary.

The Erdman Act was advocated by President Roosevelt, soon after the settlement of the anthracite coal strike of 1902.

During his term of office a great political fight occurred in 1905, over the recognition of the First Defenders of 1861. Congressman Erdman ably championed the cause for the five Pennsylvania companies, while Col. James, of the Sixth Infantry of Massachusetts, who then served as a member of Congress, savagely contested the honor for his regiment. A violent debate ensued resulting in that Mr. Erdman almost succeeded in having the Pennsylvania companies honored as the First Defenders of the National Capitol. The House of Representatives at the request of President Cleveland, passed a resolution authorizing the award of medals of honor to both regiments.

For twenty years he was attorney for the county commissioners.

He was a Past Master of Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M.; a member of Coopersburg Lodge, No. 269, I. O. O. F., and of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity.

He died Jan. 15, 1911, from paralysis, having suffered, for some eleven years, many previous attacks of this malady. Interment was in Fairview cemetery, Allentown.

Hon. Constantine Jacob Erdman was married in 1875 to Miss Mary Schall, daughter of John Rupp and Rosie Ann (Fogel) Schall. Mr. Schall, one of the oldest merchants of Allentown, was a son of David and Mary (Rupp) Schall, and Mrs. Erdman's mother was a daughter of Benjamin and Nancy (Trexler) Fogle. The marriage was the union of two of the oldest and most influential families in Lehigh county—families that helped to make the history of the county.

Unto them were born two children, viz: Mary Constance and Max Schall Erdman, of whom below.

MAX SCHALL ERDMAN, ESQ., the present county solicitor, was born in the city of Allentown, July 20, 1876. He was educated in the public schools of the city, and had instructions from a private tutor prior to his entering Muhlenberg College, from which he was graduated with honors in 1894. During the following year his father was elected to congress and Max S. became his private secretary, attending at the same time, while in Washington, D. C., the Georgetown University, from which he graduated in 1896. He read law with his father, and was admitted to the Lehigh county bar, April 19, 1899, and afterward practiced the profession with his preceptor, under the firm name of Erdman and Erdman. After the death of his distinguished father, he came in possession of the former's large law library, also was named one of the administrators of the large estate of C. J. Erdman.

Max S. Erdman is prominently identified with the following lodges, clubs, and organizations: Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M.; Allen R. A. Chapter, No. 203; Allen Commandery K. His father attended the public schools, then engaged in the butchering business for a period of 26 years. He later tilled a 104-acre farm and in the winter dealt in horses. He is now an extensive horse dealer in Exeter township. He married Emma Quinter, daughter of Samuel and Emma (Leaser) Quinter, who died, aged 64 years. They had five children: Glancy J.; Jacob, of Reading, who married Ida Wayne; Howard F., a carpenter, of Reading; Lena, who married Charles Hinkle; and Katie, who married Wm. Hurd, of Birdsboro. The father of Henry Esterly was George, a native of Germany, who settled near Reading and became a farmer. He married Sarah Rodenbush, of near Leesport.

Glancy J. Esterly spent his boyhood days in Birdsboro, where he attended the public schools. He was first employed on a farm and as a butcher, until 1882, when he moved to Exeter. He lived later at Alburtis for nine years, where he was employed as a stone mason with A. N. Denkle. He then engaged in farming for twelve years, at Red Lion, Hensingersville, Zionsville, and Upper Macungie. In the spring of 1913 he moved to his present farm of 260 acres, owned by Mrs. Emma Fuller, located along the Little Lehigh, in Salisbury township.

He is a member of the Longswamp Reformed church. In politics he is a Democrat. He married, April 7, 1882, Matala, daughter of Wm. Denkle, of Alburtis. They have nine children: Harry, who married Emma Dunston; William, who married Mollie Brown, of Robesonia; Paul; Effie; Charles; Annie, wife of Percival Brown, of Robesonia; Bryan; Clarence; and Lillian B.

ETTINGER FAMILY.

For fully one hundred and fifty years the Ettinger family has been well known in the business, the musical, and the educational life of Lehigh county. In a list of early settlers of Weisenberg township, as given in Hungerford's "History of Lehigh and Carbon Counties," appears the name of Gottlieb Ettinger, hatter, who died about 1794, leaving a widow and six children, the oldest of whom was Jacob.

Later we find Jacob Ettinger a prosperous farmer, and also manufacturer of silk and woolen hats, who gave employment to a number of men and taught others the same trade, residing on his hundred-acre homestead in Kistler Valley, now the property of Mrs. Jonathan Wenner. A stone dwelling built by him on this farm is still standing. He was born Sept. 29, 1782, and died Jan. 31, 1829, in his forty-sixth year. He lies buried at the New Jerusalem church, of the Lutheran portion of which he was a member, and for a number of years an efficient officer. He married Philippina Schmidt, a daughter of George Schmidt, who lived in the vicinity of Rothrocksville. She was born June 17, 1781, died Nov. 22, 1864, at the ripe age of eighty-three years, five months and five days, and is buried at Lynnville.

The children of this union of Jacob Ettinger with Philippina Schmidt were:

Catharine, who married John Kistler and lived near Lenhartsville, Pa.

Polly, who married George Miller, lived in Bachman's Valley, Lynn township, and became the grandmother of Frank D. Bittner, and Dr. Albert J. Bittner, of Allentown, and Dr. William A. Seibert, of Easton.

David, who moved to Wadsworth, Ohio, married Elizabeth Brobst, a sister of Daniel Brobst, with whom he had two children: Charles D., and Maria. Charles D. Ettinger, of Chicagó, is the secretary of the Murphy Varnish Company, of which Hon. Franklin Murphy, ex-governor of New Jersey, is the president. The second wife of David Ettinger was Rachel German, who had no children.

Jonas moved to Upper Mt. Bethel township, Northampton county, Pa. Among his children were: Amos, who had the homestead; Alfred, now deceased; and Jacob.

Jesse also moved to Upper Mt. Bethel township. His children were David, Amos, Catharine, Eliza, Sarah, Emma, and Mary.

Amos married Susan Laudenschlager, a daughter of Henry and Lydia Hamman Laudenschlager; moved to Allentown and had four sons: William Jacob, born May 20, 1837, died Aug. 14, 1863, married Rebecca Ruhe, had one son, Amos, who died when a boy; Alfred Henry, born March 5, 1840, for many years musician and organist in the First Presbyterian church and St. John's Reformed church, of Allentown, still living in Allentown; Richard Carlos, born July 30, 1850, died Sept. 28, 1896, married Annie Holben and had no children; and George Taylor, born Nov. 8, 1860, married Emma C., daughter of Gustav A. Aschbach and his wife, Emelie Mayer, with whom he has one son, Amos Aschbach Ettinger, born May 24, 1901.

Lydia married Reuben Hunsicker, who lived in Heidelberg township, and became the grandmother of the late Harvey L. Keiper, a leading druggist of Allentown.

Jacob married Julia Ann Ebert, in 1845, and was the father of the following children: Sarah married Daniel Snyder and lives at Lynnville; Eliza married Charles Kistler and lives at New Tripoli; Amelia married David Case and lives in Kansas City, Mo.; Agnes is unmarried and lives at home; Reuben now lives in Elkhorn, Nebraska. William some years ago lost his life at Diehl's furniture warehouse. His widow now lives in Allentown and his son Charles W. Ettinger is a well known reporter on the staff of the Allentown Morning Call. Clinton J. still lives in the old home.

CLINTON J. ETTINGER.

Jacob Ettinger was born in Kistler's Valley, Aug. 9, 1812. Like his father, Jacob Ettinger, Sr., he also was a hatmaker and a farmer. After having been a hatmaker for about ten years, he spent the greater part of his life on the farm now owned by Henry Bachman and still later, before the Civil War began, he moved to the farm in Bachman's Dale, where his descendants still reside. He served as school director of his district, and at various times was an elder and a deacon in St. Peter's Lutheran church of Lynnville. In politics he was a Democrat. In 1845 he married Julia Ann Ebert, who was born May 7, 1825, and lived to a ripe old age. This union was blessed with seven children. Jacob Ettinger died on his farm in Bachman's Dale, Oct. 15, 1894, at the advanced age of ninety-two years, two months and six days.

Of the seven children of Jacob and Julia Ann Ebert Ettinger, Clinton J. Ettinger was the youngest. He was born in 1869 on the farm where the family has lived so many years, educated in the schools of his native district, and still tills the soil of his ancestors. He has also followed the political traditions of his forebears and has served as Democratic committeeman of his district. He has also held the office of auditor of his township. In his denominational affiliations Mr. Ettinger is a Lutheran, and in his whole life he has maintained the fine family traditions that have ever stood for industry, integrity and uprightness in the individual and the community.

PROF. GEORGE TAYLOR ETTINGER, PH.D.

The founder of the Allentown branch of the Ettinger family was Major Amos Ettinger, the son of Jacob and Philippina Schmidt Ettinger, born in Lynn township, Lehigh county, March 23, 1817. When still quite a young man he came to Allentown, where he learned the trade of a coppersmith in the establishment of Solomon Gildner, and later he began the same business for himself at the southeast corner of Hamilton and Eighth streets. Still later he enlarged the scope of his business by buying out his brother-in-law, Nathan Laudenschlager, who was engaged in the stove and tinware trade. For a long time his store was at 738 Hamilton street, until the growth of his business necessitated the purchase of the property at 732 Hamilton street, where he erected one of the largest and most commodious buildings in the city. At that time his store-room was the largest in Allentown. Through the affability and the strict attention to business on the part of its proprietor, the establishment prospered, and for many years the phrase, "Ettinger's Stove Store," was almost a household expression in Lehigh county.

Tall and dignified in appearance, Amos Ettinger was one of the most genial of men, with an unbounded fund of wit and humor. Almost endless are the witticisms and the practical jokes ascribed to him. In this respect he was a sort of Abraham Lincoln of Lehigh county. He was an excellent musician and for many years the leader of the Allentown band, the first organization of the kind started in Allentown, of which "Henry's History of the Lehigh Valley," published in 1860, says: "Although the greater part of the time is devoted by the citizens of Allentown to their various business pursuits and callings, they still find time for recreation and amusement. The Allentown Band, of which Amos Ettinger is leader, is considered one of the best in the state, and is composed entirely of the business-men of the place." There is still in the possession of the family an excellent oil portrait of the genial face of Amos Ettinger, presented to him by the members of this musical organization. He was especially prominent also in the military life of his time, and held many important positions in connection with the militia of the state. He was captain of a model volunteer company called "The Lehigh Fencibles," and for many years was brigade inspector of "the Second Brigade, Seventh Division, composed of the uniformed militia of the counties of Northampton, Lehigh and Pike." During his lifetime his fellow-citizens honored him with various positions of trust and responsibility, and at the time of his death he was president of the town council.

On Christmas Day, 1836, he married Susan, a daughter of Henry and Lydia Hamman Laudenschlager, who was born at Macungie (then known as Millerstown), Lehigh county, on Dec. 22, 1818, and died in Allentown, March 12, 1913, having survived her husband more than forty-seven years. The Laudenschlager family moved to Allentown, and for many years the father was a carpet weaver, living in a large stone house on Union street, near Seventh. To Amos and Susan Ettinger were born four sons: William Jacob, who had been in partnership with his father in the stove and tinware business, and died in 1863; Alfred Henry, who is still living; Richard Carlos, who also later had been in the stove business and still later in the service of the postal department in Allentown, and died in 1896; and George Taylor Ettinger, now dean of Muhlenberg College, Allentown. Amos Ettinger died Feb. 1, 1866, in the forty-ninth year of his age. In speaking of his death the Lecha County Patriot of Feb. 8, 1866, said: "Through his affable, sociable demeanor the deceased won for himself the affection of all that came into contact with him. He was one of the best loved, most highly esteemed and most benevolent citizens of this town." The Allentown Friedensbote of Feb. 7, 1866, summed up his life and character as follows: "He was an honorable, upright citizen, and a host of friends sincerely mourn his early demise. He was a true friend and a good neighbor, and the Spirit saith, 'he resteth from his labors and his works do follow him.'"

George Taylor Ettinger, the youngest son of Amos and Susan Ettinger, was born in Allentown, Pa., Nov. 8, 1860. He received his elementary training in the excellent private school of Miss S. V. Magruder from 1869 to 1873, and in the fall of 1873 he entered the preparatory department of Muhlenberg College, with which institution he has since that time, been in continuous connection as student and teacher. As a student he has the remarkable record of not having missed a single recitation in seven years. After three years of preparatory work he entered the Freshman class of Muhlenberg College in September, 1876. In 1879 he received the oratorical prize of twenty-five dollars for the best oration as to matter and manner delivered by a member of the junior class, the subject of his oration being "The Folly of Warfare." He was graduated with first honor and the valedictory June 24, 1880. During his college course he was a member of the Euterpean Literary Society and the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity. Immediately upon graduation in 1880 he began to teach in the preparatory department of Muhlenberg College as assistant to Rev. A. R. Horne, D.D., from 1880 to 1882, and to Rev. John Kohler, D.D., from 1882 to 1884. From 1884 to 1892 he was principal of the preparatory department in connection with Prof. E. S. Dieter, now of the Allentown high school. During these years the enrollment increased from thirteen to seventy-five students. Upon the occasion of the quarter-centennial celebration of Muhlenberg College in 1892, he was elected Professor of Pedagogy and Associate Professor of Latin. Several years later the title of the chair (which he has filled ever since) was changed to its present form of the Latin language and literature and pedagogy. In 1888 he enrolled in the graduate department of New York University, which three years later conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) for work done in pedagogy under Dr. Jerome Allen and Dr. Edgar D. Shimer, and in German under Dr. A. S. Isaacs. Upon the death of Professor Davis Garber, Ph.D., Dr. Ettinger became librarian of his alma mater, and upon the death of Professor Matthias H. Richards, D.D., he was chosen secretary of the faculty. For many years he was alumni editor of The Muhlenberg, a member of the editorial committee of the Muhlenberg College Bulletin; corresponding secretary and treasurer of the alumni association and a member of its Board of Managers. He is now president of the alumni association. In 1904 the Board of Trustees elected him dean of the faculty.

For nearly fifteen years Dr. Ettinger was a director of the public schools of Allentown, during which period he was repeatedly elected president of the Board of Control, later served as secretary of the same body, and was chosen president of the Lehigh County Directors' Association. For nine years he was connected with the Pennsylvania Chautauqua at Mt. Gretna, serving in various positions as instructor in Latin and Greek, dean of the faculty and member of the Board of Managers. He has published "Pedagogy, the Fourth Profession," an address delivered before the Lehigh County Teachers' Institute, and "The Relations and Duties of Colleges to Their Preparatory Schools," a paper read before the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools of the Middle States and Maryland, at Cornell University. In 1904-5, he was associated, as supervising editor, with John W. Jordan, LL.D., librarian of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Edgar M. Green, of Easton, Pa., in the publication of an extensive "Genealogical History of the Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania," in two handsomely illustrated volumes brought out by the Lewis Publishing Company of New York and Chicago. He is also a member of the advisory committee for Jordan's "Biographical Encyclopædia of Pennsylvania," now being published by the same house, and literary editor of the Morning Call of Allentown, with a daily circulation of over seventeen thousand copies.

When the daughters of the American Revolution dedicated the tablet commemorating the hiding of the Liberty Bell in old Zion's Reformed church, Allentown, Hon. Robert E. Wright, who had promised to deliver the principal address, found that it would be impossible to keep his engagement. As a personal favor to the Regent of Liberty Bell Chapter, Dr. Ettinger consented to serve as a substitute and, with but three days for preparation, delivered what the local press was pleased to call "a masterpiece." On Sept. 1, 1904, he delivered the opening address at Muhlenberg College on "The American College and Its Problems," which was afterwards published by the Board of Trustees. His services as a speaker and lecturer are in frequent demand, his two most popular lectures being "Life's Lottery" and "An Evening With the Dictionary." Dr. Ettinger is a member of the American Philological Society, the National Geographic Society, the American Historical Association, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Moravian Historical Society, the Philadelphia Society for the Promotion of Classical Studies, the Pennsylvania Society of New York, having served many years as chairman for Lehigh county, the National Institute of Social Science and honorary member of the Luther Burbank Society. He is secretary of the Pennsylvania-German Society, secretary of the Contemporary Club of Allentown, president of the Lehigh County Historical Society (since its organization), president of the Allentown Free Library, and a vice-president of the Allentown Chautauqua. For seventeen years he has been an officer of the Livingston Club, of Allentown, one of the largest and most representative social clubs of the Lehigh Valley. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce of Allentown, and of the John Hay Republican Club, an honorary member of the Rotary Club, of Allentown, a contributing member of the Lehigh Saengerbund, and the Allentown Oratorio Society, and a non-resident member of the Phi Gamma Delta Club, of New York City.

Although busily engaged as student and teacher, he still finds time to share in the larger life of the community and to discharge his duties as a citizen of the same. At various times he served as a delegate to city and county conventions of the Republican party, and he presided over the stormy sessions of the Lehigh county convention in the historical contest for political supremacy in the state of Pennsylvania waged between Governor Daniel H. Hastings and Senator Matthew Stanley Quay, with such tact and ability that special mention was made of it in the press of the state. In 1902, Judge Edwin Albright, although a Democrat, appointed Dr. Ettinger inspector of the Lehigh county prison, and his successor, Judge Frank M. Trexler, re-appointed him during his entire term of office. Dr. Ettinger has been secretary of the prison board for a number of years.

Since his confirmation in 1877 he has been an active member of St. John's English Lutheran congregation of Allentown, and has served at various times as teacher and officer in the Sunday school, as president of the Young People's Society of the vestry. He has frequently been a delegate to conference, Synod, and the general council of the Lutheran Church of North America. On Aug. 17, 1899, he married Emma C., the only daughter of Gustav A. and Emilie F. Aschbach, and a sister of the late Gerhard C. Aschbach, the well known music dealer of Allentown. This union has been blessed with one son, Amos Aschbach Ettinger, born May 24, 1901, and named after his paternal grandfather.

As Dr. Ettinger was but five years old when his father died, he was raised by his mother, a woman of strong mental and moral character, to whose excellent Christian training he gladly ascribes whatever measure of usefulness and success he has attained in life. She lived to the uncommon age of ninety-four years, four months and twelve days, with a mind active and able to recall and describe scenes, incidents and persons of the days when Allentown was hardly more than a large village. In the words of one of his friends: "Dr. Ettinger possesses a sympathetic nature, combined with that true modesty which causes him to carry his learning as a man carries his watch—to be kept out of sight until some one wishes to know the time. No man has less of the pedant about him. The lark needs no trumpet to herald the fact that it is a sweet singer. His advice and criticism are often sought. The one is always marked with good sense, and the other by the utmost kindness, but at the same time combined with justness and fairness. He is keen in his observations and can find 'sermons in stones, books, in running brooks, and good in everything.'"

Jenkin Evans was born at New Bridge, South Wales, April 15, 1841. He accompanied his father to America and located at Pottsville, Schuylkill county, where he worked as a breaker boy and a miner. When the Civil War broke out he was among the first volunteers, and enlisted July 22, 1861, in Co. H, 81st Penna. After serving three years as a private, he was promoted to sergeant. He participated in eleven engagements, and having been wounded in battle, received an honorable discharge.

After the war he was superintendent of a mine at Mount Carmel until 1870. He was subsequently employed as a machine salesman at Tamaqua, where he served as chief of police during the Molly Maguire troubles in 1881 and 1882. EVERETT FAMILY.

Tradition has it that John Everett, one of the early settlers of Allemängel, hailed from Dedham, Mass., the ancestral home of the noted New England Everett family, whose progenitor came from England in 1634. He is said to have come to Pennsylvania in 1740. In 1751 we find his name and that of his son Thomas on a petition. In 1756 one of the forts erected on the frontier for the protection of the settlers was called Fort Everett. John Everett, born 1701, is said to have had a number of children, among whom were four sons: Thomas, Samuel, John, Philip, and three daughters: Mrs. Brobst, Mrs. Daniel Wannamacher, and Mrs. Rev. John Roth. The latter was a schoolmaster, who at the request of the Reformed settlers of that vicinity became their pastor.

John Everett, Jr., is buried in the corner of a field, near Fort Everett. Thomas Everett, a descendant, keeps the grave in good condition. He was married to Mary Miller, (1766-1836). Their children were: John and James, both of whom settled in the Catawissa Valley; Jacob, Daniel and Stephen, migrated to Ohio; Samuel; Catharine, married James Price; Molly, married Jacob Oswald; Elizabeth, married Samuel Sittler; and Rebecca, married James Henritzy. It is supposed that the above named John Everett had two brothers, Thomas and Joseph, and that their father was John Everett, of Dedham, Mass. Samuel Everett was a justice in Allemängel in 1769. Philip Everett had three sons: Michael Heinrich, John, and Tobias. Michael Heinrich is said to have three sons: John, Tobias and Heinrich. Tobias, son of Heinrich, lived to the north of Tripoli, on the homestead later owned by Oliver Zellner. To him and his wife Esther Herber, were born two sons and two daughters. Heinrich, Jr., lived on a farm adjoining that of his brother Tobias, now in possession of Daniel Gift. He was married to a Miss Fetherolf and had one daughter, Mrs. Daniel Kistler, of Allentown. John Everett, a stone mason by trade, lived on a farm in Lynn township. He and his wife Barbara, a daughter of Peter Fry, were buried in the Weisenberg cemetery. They had the following children: Polly, married to Joseph Reinsmith; Levi, married to Helena Butz; Nathan; Sallie, married Christian Snyder; John and Moses both of whom died unmarried; Lydia, married William Moyer; and David, married Adaline Wert. Samuel Everett, son of John and Mary Miller Everett, was a life long farmer in Lynn township. He was married to Lydia Schwab. Their children were: David; Samuel; Edward; and Lydia, the wife of Owen Krum. Jacob Everett, son of John, farmer, lived on the Everett homestead near Fort Everett. To him and his wife, Susanna Schwab, were born ten children: Charles, born 1811; Martha, married David Horn; Mary, married David Kern; William, married Hannah Krum; Samuel, married Sarah Lutz; Thomas, married Lizzie Kressler; Susanna, married William Long; Daniel, married Katie Weaver; Amanda, married Isaac Oswald.

Thomas Everett, son of Jacob, was born in Lynn, in 1830. He is a carpenter and painter by trade and resides on a small farm. In 1871 he was married to Lizzie Kressler. They are members of St. Jacob's Reformed congregation. Their only son is married to Emma Rauch. They have two children: Thomas J., and Clara R.

Thomas F. Everett, farmer and owner of a part of the original Everett grant of 1735, is a son of Samuel Everett and his wife, Sariah Lutz, a daughter of Samuel Lutz. He was for many years employed as a carpenter in Allentown, and throughout the coal regions. He and his family are members of St. Jacob's Reformed congregation. To him and his first wife were born two sons: Thomas F. and Elmer. He was married a second time to Polly Kistler, a daughter of Joseph Kistler and had one son, Clement, and one daughter, Mrs. Amanda Weiss, of New Tripoli.

Samuel Everett met with a mysterious death about five years ago. A neighbor seeing the house on fire, entered and found him lying behind the door with a fractured skull. He succeeded in carrying out the body, but nothing else in the building was saved. Mrs. Polly Everett died at the home of her sister at Allentown, Dec. 28, 1911. Thomas Everett was born at Slatedale in 1861. He was educated in the public schools, after which he followed the trade of carpentering for a period of seventeen years after which he was employed for a time at one of the Allentown planing mills. In 1901 he came into possession of a tract of 68 acres of land, a part of the original Everett grant. This tract has been held in turn by John, Jacob, Daniel, Samuel and Thomas F. Everett.

WILLIAM G. H. EVERETT, a farmer at Sheidy's, North Whitehall township, is a great-grandson of Frederick Everett, a lock-tender, who lost his life in performance of his duty. He was tender of the canal lock across the river from Laury's. He was survived by his wife, four sons, John, William, Adam, and Samuel, and one daughter. He was buried at the Indian Land church. William, son of Frederick, lived at Rockdale, and for upwards of fifty years was a section foreman on the L. V. R. R. He and his wife, Rebecca, a daughter of Joseph Heiney, were members of the Miller's Reformed congregation. They had ten children: Sarah, Susan, Mary, Alben, William, Alice, Elemina, Charles, Alexander D., and Sydney. Alexander D. was born Aug. 28, 1866. He attended the public schools of his native township, the K. S. N. S., and Muhlenberg College. After teaching public school for three terms he learned the art of telegraphy. After working for various companies, he entered into the employ of Lehigh and New England R. R. Company, and is their representative at Slatington. He is a member of the K. of G. E., and M. W. of W.; a member of St. John's Reformed congregation. In politics he is a Democrat. He was married, Aug. 31, 1891, to Maggie M., a daughter of Reuben and Eliza (Keck) Scheidt. This union is blessed with four children: Harry S., a graduate of Bucknell University; Russell W., a graduate of K. S. N. S.; Mark R., and Paul A., who died in infancy.

John Everett, son of Frederick, succeeded his father as lock-tender. Subsequently bought a farm near Egypt, upon which he lived until the time of his death. He was a member of the Egypt Reformed congregation, where his ashes repose. He served three years as a soldier in the Civil War. He was married to Telilah Zellner, a daughter of Elias Zellner, of Laurel Hill. They had two sons: James, who resides at 1347 Chew street, Allentown; and William G. H.

WILLIAM G. H. was born at Egypt, Feb. 27, 1859. He attended the public schools of the district and at the age of nineteen learned the art of carpentering, which trade he followed for a period of thirty years. FARR FAMILY OF NEW ENGLAND.

This surname is believed by many to be identical with Farrar, and there is considerable reason for the supposition, as persons of both names appear simultaneously in different localities in New England. It is derived from a Latin word meaning iron, and was probably used as a place before it came into use as a family name. It was first known in England from Gualkeline (or Walkeline) de Farraris, a Norman of distinction attached to William, Duke of Normandy, before the conquest of England in 1066. From him all of the name in England and America appear to be descended. His son, Henry De Farrars, appears on the roll of the Battle Abbey, among the principal companions of the Conqueror, and as the first of the family in England. When the general survey of the realm, recorded in the Domesday Book, was made in the fourteenth year of the Conqueror's reign, Henry was one of the commissioners appointed to compile the work. He bore for his arms: Argent six horse-shoes pierced sable.

The first of the name in England was George Farr, who settled in Salem in 1629, coming with Higginson; was admitted freeman in 1635, settled finally at Lynn, Massachusetts, and left eight children. Most of the families spelling the name Farr are descended from Stephen, mentioned below. John Farr, of Stow, thought by some writers to be grandson of George Farrar, of Lynn, married, May 11, 1703, Hannah, daughter of John Applin, of Watertown. Descendants of the Farrar family are numerous in Stow, Littleton, Hardwick, Hatfield and other towns in Massachusetts. Simultaneously there appear in Lynn a Thomas Farrar, and by some writers the two families are confused.

I. Thomas Farr, the first of this line, came from England and located first at Boston, Massachusetts, where he executed a power of attorney, Feb. 2, 1645, giving authority to his brother, Henry Farr, a mariner, to lease or sell lands in England. He is said to have been a son of Thomas Farr (or Farrar) residing near Burnley in Lancashire. Thomas Farr settled in Lynn, where he died in 1694. His wife Elizabeth died Jan. 8, 1680. There is no conclusive evidence that he was related to George Farr, of Lynn, though it is natural to suppose that they were in some way related. The early records of Lynn are fragmentary and defective, so that many things remain unproved: Among these is the supposition that Stephen Farr was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Farr. Their children known were: Thomas, living in 1693; Susanna, born March 26, 1659; Mehitable, Oct. 6, 1660; Pelog, died young; there were probably others.

II. Stephen Farr, believed to be a son of Thomas Farr, of Lynn, first appears on the records at Concord, Massachusetts, where he married, May 25, 1674, Mary, daughter of William and Mary Taylor, born March 19, 1649. He served in King Philip's War from Concord, in 1675-76, as a member of Captain Davenport's company, and resided in the district now constituting the town of Stow, which lay between the towns of Concord and Lancaster. Two of his children were recorded at Concord but no record can be found of others, of whom there were probably several. Those recorded were: Ebenezer, born Nov. 10, 1676; and Stephen, mentioned below.

III. Stephen (2), son of Stephen (1) and Mary (Taylor) Farr, was born April 11, 1679, recorded at Concord, and resided in Stow. He married, Sept. 28, 1708, Sarah, daughter of Simon and Sarah (Farnsworth) Stone, of Grotton, the latter a daughter of Matthias and Mary (Farr) Farnsworth, and granddaughter of George and Elizabeth Farr, of Lynn. Mary Farr was born Jan. 6, 1644, in Lynn. Elizabeth widow of George Farr, deposed, June 2, 1684, that she lived fifty-four years in Lynn, on a tract of land given her husband by the town.

George Farr was a freeman of Lynn, admitted May 6, 1635, and had a grant of land there in 1638. A George Farr was in Ipswich in 1643, was herd keeper there in 1647 and a famous killer of foxes. Children of Stephen (2) and Sarah Farr recorded at Stow: Jemima, Nov. 29, 1713; Joseph, April 11, 1718, removed to Cummington; Susanna, Sept. 6, 1724. Records of other children have not been found, but there is no doubt that they were the parents of Stephen next mentioned.

(IV). Stephen (3), son of Stephen (2) and Sarah (Stone) Farr, was born as early as 1710 and resided in Stow, where records show that he purchased one hundred acres of land from his father. He married Sarah Bennett, and they had children recorded at Stow: Sarah, born Jan. 19, 1735; Stephen, mentioned below; Silas, Sept. 10, 1737; Olive, Jan. 11, 1745; Simeon, March 23, 1747; Elias, August 23, 1749.

(V.) Stephen (4), eldest son of Stephen (3) and Sarah (Bennett) Farr, was born about 1739-40, in Stow, and settled in the adjoining town of Acton. The lands owned by the family were on the town line. Thence he removed to Cum-mington, Hampshire county, Massachusetts, being among the first settlers of the town. He owned much land, and was one of the original members of the church organized July 7, 1771. At the proprietors' meeting held July 19, 1771, at the house of Joseph Farr, innkeeper at Cummington, Stephen Farr was moderator. He later resided near the old road from Northampton, where some authorities say he also kept a tavern. Among the families in Cummington in 1776 were those of Stephen and seven others named Farr. Simeon and Silas Farr, of this family, from Hatfield Equivalent, Township No. 5, and Hadley, respectively, were soldiers in the Revolution. After the war Stephen Farr went northward and in 1790 was shown by the United States census a resident of Washington county, New York. Before 1803 he settled in Essex county, that state, where he died June 10, 1822, and was buried at Fort Ann, Washington county. He married, March 1, 1764, at Stow, Lois, daughter of Samuel and Priscilla (Farnsworth) Randall. Their children were: Lois, born about December, 1764; Reuben, about 1767; Steven, 1779, resided in Hounsfield, New York; Joel, lived in Warren county, New York; Randall, mentioned below; Levi, lived at Schroon, New York, and moved to Ohio; Arod, lived at Sackett's Harbor, New York; Sally, married a Mr. Miller, and lived east of Whitehall, New York; a daughter, married John Parrish, and has descendants in Iowa.

(VI) Randall, son of Stephen (4) Farr, was born in Cummington, March 10, 1772, died Nov. 26, 1857. When a young man, he settled in North Hudson, Essex county, New York, where he is said to have built the first saw-mill and conducted the first hotel. He married Lucretia Andrus, born July 25, 1785, died Feb. 1, 1844, daughter of Obadiah Andrus, of Farmington, Connecticut, a soldier of the Colonial Wars and Revolution. He enlisted May 14, 1762, in Captain Timothy Northam's company, Colonel Michael Thody's regiment, New York troops, served till November 16th of the same year. He is described as a joiner by trade, twenty-one years old, five feet, ten inches in height, with dark complexion, brown eyes and dark brown hair. He enlisted Jan. 1, 1777, for three years, in Captain Champion's company, Colonel Samuel Wylly's regiment (Third Connecticut), and was discharged Dec. 24, 1779. He again enlisted Dec. 15, 1780, in the First Connecticut Regiment, under Captain Buell, Colonel Zebulon Butler, and was discharged March 18, 1783. From May to September, 1783, he was a private in Captain Lemuel Swift's company of Swift's Connecticut regiment. During his first enlistment his company was detached in many engagements, and under Washington's personal command against Stony Point. They spent the winter of 1779-80 at Morristown, New Jersey. Children of Randall Farr:

1. Harriet. 2. Lucy, married (first) a Mr. Barnes, and (second) Chauncey Whitney. 3. George Washburn, mentioned below. 4. Harry. 5. Cyrus. 6. Rufus.

VII. George Washburn, son of Randall Farr, was born at North Hudson, New York, September 12, 1807, died June 24, 1863. He became a lumber merchant at his native place at Schroon Lake, New York, and about 1853, moved to Grand Rapids, Michigan, and for several years dealt in timber lands and lumber. He moved to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1857, and followed farming in that vicinity until 1863, then returned to Grand Rapids, where he died. He was a Congregationalist in religious belief and was a deacon for many years. He married (first) in January, 1831, Perlina E. Pease, who died June 6, 1832. He married (second) in September, 1835, Miriam Day, who died April 4, 1839. He married (third) Oct. 26, 1840, Esther Day, sister of his second wife, born in Essex county, Aug. 22, 1809, daughter of Bezaleel and Celinda (Day) Day. Children by second wife: 1. L. Watson Barnes. 2. George Day, resides in Washington, D. C. Children by third wife: 3. Leroy Hull. 4. Willard Marion. 5. Freeman Seward. 6. Augustine Washington. 7. Marvin Andrus, mentioned below. Three of the sons were soldiers in the Civil War. Leroy H. died from the effects of prison life in the South; Willard M. was a captain, and George D. was the third brother who served in the Union Army.

VIII. Marvin Andrus, son of George Washburn and Esther (Day) Farr, was born at Schroon Lake, New York, Aug. 9, 1852. He attended private schools and a preparatory school at Waukesha, Wisconsin, and there prepared for college. In 1866, he entered Carroll College, at Waukesha, and was graduated in 1871. Since Dec. 2, 1872, he has resided in Chicago, where since 1892 he has been engaged in real estate business under his own name, and has become one of the foremost men there in his line of business. For some years he was manager of the West Chicago Land Company. He is a director and a member of the executive committee of the Chicago Title and Trust Company, and is a member and former president of the Chicago Real Estate Board. He is also a director of the Illinois Brick Company.

Mr. Farr comes from some of the finest New England stock, and after a careful genealogical research has been able to trace his descent as follows: Eighth in descent from John Johnson, surveyor general; Captain John Whipple, of Ipswich, Massachusetts; Hugh Calkin; Gregory and Simon Stone. Seventh from John Guild, John Gallup, Sr., Stephen Hart, Lieutenant William Hough, Captain Anthony Hawkins, George Robinson, Jr., John Whitney, Matthias Farnsworth, Hugh Rowe, Captain Whipple, of Providence, Rhode Island; John Tower; Thomas Wilmarth; George Clark. FARR FAMILY, ALLENTOWN.

George Farr, a farmer, owned and occupied a farm of more than 50 acres, situated on the Bethlehem turnpike, two miles below Sellersville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania. On this farm his wife, Barbara, died about the year 1854, and is buried at the Hilltown church, of which all the family were members of the Lutheran congregation. A daughter, Barbara, died in 1858, and is buried by the side of her mother. After the death of his wife, George Farr sold his farm and went to live with his sister, Christiana, intermarried with Joseph Stark, at Easton. There he died on May 1, 1860, at the age of fifty-eight years and is buried on the Easton cemetery. They had the following children:

1. George, Jr., born about 1831; was confirmed at the Hilltown church in 1849, enlisted in the beginning of the Civil War in the nine months' service, as a substitute, and upon returning home at the expiration of his enlistment, he died aboard ship from a contagious disease and was buried at sea about fifty miles from New York.

2. Henry.

3. Jacob L.

4. William was born June 22, 1845, and from 1859 until the close of the Civil War, he made his home with his aunt, Mrs. Joseph Stark, at Easton. He then went to Philadelphia and was engaged in the shoe business in that city until his death on July 30, 1871, aged 26 years, 1 month and 8 days. He is buried on the Stark plot in the Easton cemetery.

5. Barbara died in 1858, aged about 12 years.

Jacob Farr, shoe manufacturer, was born at Summerville, Jefferson county, Pa., in 1838. His opportunities for securing an education were very limited and at the age of 14, he secured employment as a clerk in a store in Philadelphia. After a short time he came to Allentown and acquired a thorough knowledge of the shoe business. He then opened a small store which led to the foundation of the present shoe industry of Farr Brothers.

From a small beginning the business expanded until it became one of the largest of its kind in the Lehigh Valley. He died in April, 1889, and was interred in Union cemetery. He was a member of the Reformed Church.

He was married three times, (first) to Caroline Smith. They had a son, William, who died in young manhood. He married (second) Elizabeth Haas, and they had Harvey H., and Jacob L. Farr, who succeeded to their father's business and trade under the name of Farr Brothers.

He married (third) Agnes Wittman, daughter of Joseph and Lovina (Kearns) Wittman. Mrs. Farr is a member of the Lutheran Church and is a highly respected lady. She resides at No. 825 Linden street, Allentown.

HARVEY H. FARR.

Harvey H. Farr, connected with the banking, mercantile, and manufacturing interests of Allentown, is a native of this city. He acquired his early education in the public schools of Allentown and then entered the academy at East Hampden, Massachusetts, but before the time of his graduation he was obliged to return home, owing to the death of his elder brother, William, who had been his father's assistant, and thus he was needed at home. In 1860 Jacob Farr established a shoe store and his son Harvey, upon his return in 1883, entered the store, where he remained as a salesman until 1888. In that year his father died, and he and his brother, Jacob L., joined Nathan Haas under the firm name of Farr, Haas & Co. They succeeded to the business, and the partnership was maintained until 1900, when it was dissolved by mutual consent, and the new firm became H. H. Farr, Jacob L. Farr and Edgar Wenner, taking the name of Farr Brothers & Co. This they yet conduct, and have developed a large and profitable enterprise. In 1898 Harvey H. Farr organized the Lehigh Valley Shoe Company, for the manufacture of men's and boy's shoes of Goodyear welts. The output at the present time is about one thousand pairs of shoes per day, and the demand by the large retail houses for their manufactured product is so great that they have to purchase nearly all of the goods which they carry in their store. There is nothing in the line of ladies', men's and children's shoes that cannot be supplied to their large trade from their establishment. Their store is one of the most modern shoe emporiums in the state and their sales having reached a large figure.

Harvey H. Farr is a Republican in politics. He is a member of the Reformed Church, the Masonic Fraternity, and is one of the charter members of the Lodge No. 130, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, at Allentown.

Afterward he clerked in the shoe store for two years, when he became interested in the Lehigh Valley Company. Mr. Farr became a manufacturer of shoes because Farr Brothers themselves grew to become very large distributors of footwear, not only in Allentown, but also at Easton, and at Reading they conducted large retail stores.

Socially he is a member of Allentown Lodge, No. 130, B. P. O. E., and he and family are members of Zion's Reformed church.

Fegley married, June 6, 1912, Ellen M., a daughter of John L. and Kate (Foosse) Cressman, and they have one child: Ellen Margaret, born June 30, 1913.

Nicholas Fegley lived in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, near Boyertown, Pa. He was a descendant of Bernhard Fegley, who first settled in Montgomery county and later removed to Longswamp township. His wife was Miss Gearhardt. They had the following children: Daniel G.; Samuel, unmarried, who lived about Boyertown; John, who lived at Boyertown, and was the father of Rev. H. S. Fegley; Elizabeth, who married, (first) Mr. Bupp, and (second) Jacob Strunk; Esther, married Haney Eshbach, and Mrs. Zimmerman. They lived in Union county, Pa.

John Fegley, a descendant of Bernhard Fegley, the immigrant ancestor, was a farmer at Boyertown, Berks county, and there married Maria Swinehart.

REV. HENRY S. FEGLEY, son of John and Maria (Swinehart) Fegley, was born at Boyertown, Sept. 15, 1843, and spent his early years on the homestead. During the summer months he assisted his father in the cultivation of the farm, and during the winter attended school at Boyertown. From his earliest years he was of a decidedly studious nature, and after he had attended Boyertown Academy, commenced teaching school. He continued in this occupation for some years, in the meantime continuing his studies with a view of entering the ministry. He took private lessons under Revs. Wendt and Schaeffer, then matriculated at the Lutheran Theological Seminary, in Philadelphia. At the same time he taught in the Germantown Orphans' Home. He was graduated May 19, 1869, and ordained to the ministry at Reading, Pa., May 26, of the same year. He received a call to become the pastor of the extensive parish of Lynnville, and took charge June 13, 1869. This consisted of Ebenezer church, New Tripoli; Jacob's church, Jacksonville; St. Peter's church, Lynnville; St. Paul's church, Seiberlingsville; and Jerusalem church, in Albany township. This was the first and only parish of Rev. Fegley, and he ministered there faithfully until his death, January 30, 1906. As a pastor, he knew his flock, gained their confidence, and was loved and esteemed by them. As a teacher, he neither spared time nor effort to thoroughly indoctrinate his catechumens in the word and the teachings of the Church. As a preacher, he knew how to deliver the word of God effectively. He knew his Bible and his sermons were scriptural throughout. He did not defile the pulpit with secular themes, in that he was ever deeply conscious of the awful and sacred responsibility of the minister who was called of the Lord to feed the lambs and sheep in the green pasture of God's Word. During his pastorate he had the pleasure of seeing eleven of his young men enter the ministry. He marked the advance in mode of life, education, and church activity, and liberality among the people of his parish. Many improvements were made in the churches in which he preached. He was of a somewhat retiring disposition, but this did not prevent him from taking an active interest in the Church work at large. Rev. Fegley married, September 5, 1871, Alice J., who died October 2, 1898, a daughter of Ephraim Long, and they had one daughter: Annie M., who married Rev. A. O. Ebert. While Rev. Fegley had not been in good health for some time, he had continued to minister to the needs of his people, and the end came unexpectedly. The Morning Call, the leading paper of the county, published at Allentown, in an article on his death, made in part the following comment: "The deceased was greatly esteemed by his congregations, and his sudden demise is a severe shock to his many friends. He was an able pulpit orator, and during these long years of his pastorate he studied continually and kept abreast with the times. He was a very pleasant man to meet socially and was ever ready to guide the young who needed his help. He was exceptionally successful in his long pastorate in the one charge. When one meets his people in the various congregations he served there was always the highest respect shown and the kindest words spoken for him. He lived the life of a good pastor and friend."

FEHR FAMILY.

Fehr, originally spelled Feer, is an old German and Swiss name, the name of John Fehr occurring in ancient records in Switzerland as early as 1187. Jacob Fehr, a native of the Palatinate, was born in 1704, and emigrated to America in the ship Jamaica, arriving in Philadelphia, Feb. 7, 1739. He settled in Lower Saucon township, Northampton county, near the Williams township line, where he pursued the occupations of a farmer and weaver. He died at an advanced age and was buried at the Williams township church, of which he was a member of the Lutheran branch. He had two sons: Jacob and John.

John Fehr, son of John, was born April 15, 1752, and died Jan. 24, 1839. He settled in that part of Plainfield township, now Bushkill township, where he was a prominent farmer. His wife, Eva Bowman, was born Feb. 10, 1757, and died Oct. 4, 1853, aged 96 years. His son, Michael Fehr, was born April 8, 1797, and died April 6, 1865. He received a common school education and at the age of sixteen began learning the trade of a gunsmith, in which occupation he was engaged for 45 years, having, in later years, a small factory in Bushkill township, where he employed several men in manufacturing certain parts of guns, which he sold to the Henry Gun Works. He served in the Civil War an enlistment in the 202d Pennsylvania Volunteer Regiment. He died in 1889, and was buried at Schoeneck. Mr. Fehr married Anna Caroline, daughter of John A. and Elizabeth (Haney) Edmonds. They had five children: Robert and Anson, deceased; Catharine, who married J. H.

Stofflet, of Stroudsburg; Alonzo, of South Norwalk, Conn.; and Harrison R.

HARRISON R. FEHR was born near Nazareth, Northampton county, March 20, 1863, and was educated in the Moravian schools at that place. He taught in the public schools from 1880 to 1883, when he entered the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company as a rodman in the civil engineering department, and in 1886 was promoted as transit-man in charge of the Lehigh Division, from Mauch Chunk to Easton, and in 1889 became assistant engineer in charge of that division, reporting directly to the chief engineer. His work embraced relocation of tracks, right of way surveys, maintenance of way work, construction of branch roads and the line by contract through the city of Allentown. In this year, he was also construction engineer of a system of water works for Lehigh, and prepared plans and specifications for gravity supply and storage reservoirs. In the spring of 1890 he made surveys and designed a system of water works for Annville and Palmyra. From May, 1890, to October, 1891, he was in the employ of the bridge department of the Lehigh Valley road as engineer in charge of the New Jersey, Lehigh and Wyoming divisions and coal branch roads. From October, 1891, to September, 1899, he was city engineer and commissioner of highways of the city of Easton. During a portion of this time he also acted as engineer for the Easton Board of Trade and the boroughs of South Easton and Pen Argyl, and designed and built a storage reservoir and three miles of water mains for the Stroudsburg Water Company. From 1899 to January, 1901, he was engineer for the Easton Transit Company, and from the latter date to September, 1902, was chief engineer of the Trenton & New Brunswick Railroad Company. From September, 1902, to May, 1904, he was a consulting and contracting engineer.

In May, 1904, Mr. Fehr became general manager, and in 1906 also president of the Easton Transit Company, operating about 54 miles of electric street railway in Easton, Bethlehem, South Bethlehem and Nazareth, Pa., and Phillipsburg, N. J., which office he filled until October, 1913, when he removed to Allentown, and became president and general manager of the Lehigh Valley Transit and affiliated companies, which operates 220 miles of electric railway from Phillipsburg, N. J., to Slatington, Pa., and south to Philadelphia, and also distributes electric light and power through the Lehigh Valley and as far south as North Wales.

Mr. Fehr is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and is a past president of the Pennsylvania Street Railway Association.

He is a member of Dallas Lodge, No. 396, F. & A. M.; Easton Chapter, No. 173, R. A. M.; Pomp Council, No. 20, R. & S. M. M.; Hugh DePayens Commandery, No. 19, K. T.; B. P. O. Elks; Royal Arcanum and General Judson Kilpatrick Camp, No. 233, Sons of Veterans, all of Easton; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Reading; Lehigh Country Club; Country Club of Northampton County; Livingston Club, of Allentown; Pomfret Club, of Easton; Manufacturer's Club, of Philadelphia; and the National Geographic Society.

Mr. Fehr married Miss Achshaw Walter, daughter of William Walter, of Bethlehem township, Northampton county, and had three children, one of whom, Walter Robert, died in infancy. His two sons are Willard Russell, who was educated at the Bethlehem Preparatory School, Lafayette College, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and was engaged in civil engineering until March, 1914, when he became general storekeeper for the Lehigh Valley Transit Company, and who married Margaret Worden, of Harrisburg, Pa.; and Harrison Robert, Jr., who was educated in and graduated from Nazareth Hall and the Bethlehem Preparatory School, and is now attending Lafayette College, where he is pursuing a course in electrical engineering.

Mr. Fehr, through his mother, is a direct descendant and great-great-grandson of William Edmonds, one of the most prominent men in the early history of Northampton county. William Edmonds was born Oct. 24, 1708, at Coleford, in the parish of Newland, hundred of St. Briavel's, Gloucestershire, England, and was baptized in the Anglican Church. He was the only son of William Edmonds, a merchant, by his third wife, Hannah. At the age of ten years he was confirmed by the Bishop of Gloucester. His father gave him a liberal education and he became a noted linguist, having been able to read Latin at the early age of ten years, and German as well as his own vernacular, English. He was apprenticed to a white leather tanner in Monmouth, and in 1736 emigrated to New York, where he continued his trade until 1747. There, in 1741, he became acquainted with the Moravians, attended their meetings, and in 1744 was admitted to their communion.

After the death of his first wife, in 1747, he removed to Bethlehem, and in 1748 made a voyage to Holland and England, in the "Irene," the first transport vessel built by the Moravian Church in America. On his return to Bethlehem he was employed in the tannery and then at the ferry. In 1754 he was appointed storekeeper of the Church store, which position brought him in contact with the Indian chieftains that frequently visited the town, and through his personal acquaintance and influence with them, between the years 1756 and 1758, his services were in constant demand on behalf of the Province. In January, 1756, he accompanied Franklin on his journey to the frontiers to erect a chain of forts and in July was one of the commissioners to the Indian Treaty at Easton. In 1754 he was inspector of election for Bethlehem township, and in 1755 he was elected to represent Northampton county in the assembly.

In 1763 he took charge of the store near the Rose Inn, near Nazareth, a building of unhewn logs, thirty feet square, which stood on the Minisink road. On Oct. 26, 1772, he removed the stock and fixtures to the new store building in Nazareth, where he remained until his retirement in 1773, after a service of nearly twenty years in the stores of the Moravian Church. In 1770 he was again elected to the assembly, and re-elected to the sessions of '71, '72, '73 and '74. He was one of the four delegates from Northampton county to the Provincial convention held at Philadelphia on July 15, 1774, and in 1775, was appointed a member of the Committee of Safety of the State, serving from June 30th to October 19th. His advanced age precluded him from participating in the operations of the army, but he gave his time and influence in its behalf, and was a whole-souled patriot. The last eleven years of his life were spent in retirement at Nazareth. He died Sept. 15, 1786, a son, two daughters, and three grandchildren surviving him. He was twice married. His first wife was Rebecca de Beauvoise, of Huguenot ancestry, whom he married in New York in 1739, and by her had four children, who were baptized by Rev. John C. Pylaeus. She died in 1747. His second wife, Margaret, daughter of Henry and Eva Anthony, was born in New York in 1721. She married Mr. Edmonds at Bethlehem, March 31, 1755, and died at Nazareth, Feb. 26, 1773.

His son, John Edmonds, was born in New York City, Jan. 27, 1743, and died near Schoeneck, where he is buried, April 2, 1824. His wife, Barbara Edmonds, was born Oct. 9, 1755, and died July 29, 1836. Their son, John Augustus Edmonds, married Elizabeth, daughter of Captain Haney, and had seventeen children, twelve sons, three of whom died in infancy, and five daughters. One of the daughters, Anna Caroline, married Michael M. Fehr.

HERMAN J. FELDHEGE.

Herman J. Feldhege, one of the most successful silk manufacturers of the Lehigh Valley, was born May 12, 1875, at Westphalia, in Germany. He received a thorough education in the schools of his native place and attended St. Albert's College at Vanlos, Holland, the same institution in which Monsignor Peter Masson also was a student. He pursued a special course in the study of textile machinery and emigrated to New York in 1900. After working in silk mills at New York City, Paterson, N. J., South Bethlehem, Pa., and Kingston, Pa., he filled the position of president and manager of the Central Silk Company, of Siegfrieds for four years. In 1912 he organized the Feldhege Silk Company of Egypt which employs 250 hands. In 1913 he started a silk mill at Walnutport which employs 300 hands. During the same year the mill at Siegfrieds and a second mill at Walnutport was started. Mr. Feldhege is the sole owner of the two mills at Walnutport. He understands the manufacturing of silk thoroughly in all its various details and is considered an expert in the same. He is a man of strong personality and business foresight.

He is held in high respect by his hundreds of employees and his association is with the best citizenship of the county. He resides in Allentown. He is a member of the Livingstone Club and B. P. O. E., of Allentown, and the Catasauqua Club.

Mr. Feldhege was married to Dora Palmer, daughter of Frederick and Mary (Heck) Palmer, of Union Hill, N. J., and they have one child, a son named Henry.

Henry Feldhege, his father, was a prominent public official and banker at Westphalia, and also large land-owner and farmer there, having served as mayor of that city for 38 years until his death in 1905, aged 79, and as president of a savings institution for upwards of 20 years. He was married to Bernadine Wessling and they had five children: Ferdinand; Henry, retired army officer; Anna, mother-superior of a hospital; Bernadine, m. Schulze Rieping, reserve army officer, land-owner and farmer; and Herman J.

FENSTERMACHER FAMILY.

The name Fenstermacher, as all students of German well know, is derived from a like word in that language signifying "windowmaker." By many members of the family it is spelled "Fenstermaker," and the writer of this sketch has heard of at least one instance where the still more anglicized form "Glazier" was adopted. In one of the early Berks county tax lists, the clerk who copied the record, perhaps in a spirit of humor, wrote the name "Windowmaker."

The Fenstermacher family with which we are most familiar, and whose representatives are quite numerous in this and nearby counties, has its origin in Mathias Fenstermacher, a native of the German Palatinate, who crossed the sea on the good ship "Glasgow" which landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 9, 1738. On the original list of passengers his age is given as sixty years, and he was therefore born about 1678. He was accompanied to America by his two sons, Jacob, then twenty-nine years of age, and Wilhelm, twenty-five years of age. These three were preceded to the new world by a third son, Philip, who was removed to Alburtis and there carried on a general store business until he died in 1909. Altogether he followed the life of an enterprising, successful merchant for upwards of forty years. a passenger on the good ship, Samuel, and qualified at Philadelphia, Aug. 30, 1737. He was then twenty-four years of age.

There is a tradition that the family first settled in Oley township, Berks county. The first positive record we have, however, is in the Berks county tax list of 1753, where Longswamp township is given as the residence of the father and of his two sons, Jacob and Philip. Concerning the other son, Wilhelm, who accompanied his father to the new world, nothing further is known at this time. The name of Mathias Fenstermacher appears in the early tax lists as late as 1761, at which time he probably died, being then eighty-three years old.

Jacob Fenstermacher, the eldest son of Mathias, was one of the founders of the Longswamp Reformed church. The proprietary return of 1767 shows that he was the owner of one hundred acres of land in that township, and his name appears in the federal census of 1790, indicating that he was then still living. We have no record as to the date of his death and he had no will. He was twice married, his second wife being the Widow Koehler, and we know of at least seven children: (1) William; (2) Anna Maria, b. May 16, 1740 (?), d. May 10, 1801 (wife of Michael Bieber, b. Feb. 11, 1740, d. Oct. 26, 1832); (3) Christian; (4) Joseph; (5) Jacob; (6) Anna Barbara; and (7) Johannes.

Philip Fenstermacher, the youngest son of Mathias, was born Feb. 27, 1713, and was also a member of the Longswamp Reformed church. At an early date he acquired valuable land on which in later years iron ore was found in large quantities. Some of this land is still in possession of his descendants. In 1767 the proprietary return shows him to have been the owner of 150 acres, and in 1779, 250 acres. He was also the owner of land in Lynn township, this county. He died June 15, 1790, and his will, dated July 1, 1789, was probated at the Berks court-house, on July 9, 1790. In the will provision was made for his wife, Elizabeth, and after her death for his eight sons and one daughter: (1) John and (2) Christian, who, with his wife, were the executors, were given his dwelling and plantation of 249 acres and 60 perches (3) Peter was given another plantation of 103 acres and 140 perches, whereon he then resided; (4) Jacob was given £300; (5) Abraham, £350; (6) Magdalena (wife of Christopher Eylert), £300; the remaining sons (7) Philip, (8) Michael, and (9) Daniel, were evidently provided for during the lifetime of their father. Paul Grosscup and John Borger were the witnesses to the will. Elizabeth Fenstermacher, the widow of Philip, died Oct. 1, 1791, aged 65 years and 11 months. They are both buried in the old graveyard adjoining the Longswamp church, of which they had for many years been faithful members.

William Fenstermacher, son of Jacob, was born Oct. 11, 1740, and about the year 1770 settled in Heidelberg township, this county, where he became a man of prominence. During the early days of the Revolutionary War he was a member of Capt. Conrad Roeder's Fifth Company of the Third Battalion of militia, and later served under the same captain in the fifth battalion. He operated a distillery in connection with his farm of 170 acres, and died Nov. 27, 1801, survived by his widow, Margareth Elizabeth, and five children: (1) Philip, b. Oct. 6, 1771; (2) George, b. Jan. 18, 1773; (3) William, b. March 22, 1775; (4) John; and (5) Elizabeth, b. Oct. 25, 1787, wife of Gottfried Peter. Another daughter, Anna Catharina, born in Longswamp township in 1763, probably died young, as no mention is made of her. William Fenstermacher is buried in the old Heidelberg cemetery, and doubtless also his wife, although no trace can be found of her tombstone.

Christian Fenstermacher, another son of Jacob, was born in Longswamp, June 8, 1748. At an early age he settled in Allen township, Northampton county, where he owned a farm of 140 acres. His death occurred Jan. 25, 1829. His wife, Maria Barbara, born Dec. 4, 1757, was a daughter of John Hilbert, of Rockland township, Berks county. She died Dec. 20, 1826, and with her husband is buried at Schoenersville. Christian and Maria Barbara Fenstermacher were the parents of ten children: (1) Anna Magdalena, b. Oct. 18, 1776; (2) John, b. Dec. 4, 1778; (3) Philip, b. Nov. 20, 1783; (4) Maria Magdalena, b. Dec. 6, 1785; (5) Michael, b. Aug. 4, 1793; (6) Elizabeth, b. April 18, 1795; (7) Maria, b. Feb. 18, 1798; (8) Henry, b. Feb. 16, 1800; (9) Regina, m. — Ross and had four children: John, Hannah, Lea, and Charles; and (10) Joseph.

Joseph Fenstermacher, son of Jacob, was born about the year 1750 in Longswamp, where he also acquired land, being taxed for 100 acres in 1779, and for 150 acres in 1780. His will is on record at the Berks courthouse in Vol. 4, page 363. It was made Dec. 26, 1805, and probated Aug. 4, 1806. His wife, Anna Margaret, m. n. Hoak, was the executrix, and provision was made in the will for his son, Johannes, to have the first right to the land at valuation, after her death. Her death evidently occurred prior to 1812, for on March 23d of that year the heirs of Joseph Fenstermacher gave a release deed for 180 acres to his son, Johannes. The following are the names of their eight children:

1. Johannes, b. Feb. 8, 1776.
2. Peter, b. Nov. 20, 1778.
3. Rebecca, b. March 6, 1781, (wife of John Rau).
4. Catharina, b. Oct. 13, 1782, (wife of George Kuhl).
5. Magdalena, b. Sept. 8, 1783, (wife of Jacob Leibensperger).
6. Elizabeth, b. May 24, 1788, (wife of Adam Keller).
7. Jacob, b. Sept. 11, 1789.
8. Joseph.

Peter and Jacob are not mentioned in the will, nor were they parties to the release deed, probably having died before their father.

Johannes Fenstermacher, son of Jacob, was doubtless the same as the Johannes who was the founder of a large branch of the family in Lehigh and Allen townships, Northampton county. In the former township he owned a farm of 100 acres. In the year 1782 he was enrolled as a private in Captain John Dieter's Seventh Company of the Third Battalion of Militia. By trade he was a carpenter. He died in 1815, survived by his widow, Anna Maria, and ten children:

1. Johannes, b. Aug. 20, 1781.
2. Jacob, b. April 12, 1783.
3. Solomon.
4. George, b. July 7, 1787.
5. Joseph, b. Oct. 2, 1789.
6. Elizabeth, b. March 14, 1792, m. Conrad Dreisbach.
7. Jonathan, b. Jan. 23, 1794.
8. Isaac.
9. Mary Magdalena, b. May 9, 1799, m. John Peter Bachman.
10. Catharina, b. Feb. 1802, m. Dr. Griffith J. Scholl.

Philip Fenstermacher, son of Philip, was born Feb. 10, 1746, and when quite a young man moved to Lowhill township, this county, where, on May 12, 1767, he secured a warrant for sixty-seven acres of land. He later purchased other land in the same township, and also owned a grist-mill. His wife, Maria Eva, whom he married in 1767, was born May 27, 1746, a daughter of Abraham Knerr. Soon after their marriage they joined the Lowhill church, organized in 1769, in the record of which appears the baptisms of most of their children. Philip Fenstermacher served as a private during the war of the Revolution, in 1778, in Capt. John Horner's Fourth Company of the Third Battalion, in 1780, in Capt. Andrew Dapper's Fourth Company of the Sixth Battalion, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Henry Geiger, and in 1782 in the same company and battalion commanded by Col. Henry Geiger. Philip Fenstermacher's wife died Dec. 3, 1802, and on Feb. 27, 1804, he married again the widow, Elizabeth Hartman, who survived him. His death occurred Dec. 20, 1807, his brother, Michael, and Andrew Knerr being the executors of his will which was probated Dec. 29, 1807. Philip and Maria Eva Fenstermacher were the parents of eleven children:

- (1) Maria Eva, b. April 22, 1768, m. Peter George, and had two children: Christina and Magdalena.

(11) Anna Elizabeth, wife of John George. Michael Fenstermacher, another son of Philip, Sr., was born July 2, 1749, and like others of his family left the parental roof in early manhood. He took up his residence in Lynn township, where, in October, 1773, he married Philippina Kerschner, b. Sept. 20, 1753. He built an oil mill, which was later changed into a grist-mill, on a creek near Lynnville, and also opened a store in his dwelling-house. It was formerly narrated of him that for many years his doors were without locks, bolts or bars. He was urged to fasten his doors and finally consented. The next week after he had bolted and barred his store it was broken into and some of his goods taken. Michael Fenstermacher took an active part in the struggle for independence. In 1780 and 1782 he was a sergeant in Capt. Adam Stahler's First Company of the Sixth Battalion of Militia, and in 1783 ensign in Capt. At the age of twenty-one he learned the house painting and paper hanging trade, which he followed in Catasauqua three years. He then worked two years in a furniture factory at Sellersville, Pa., and following this worked at his trade at Lansdale, Pa., where he remained about three years. He was a farmer until 1853 when he removed to Allentown, where he purchased the northwest corner of Tenth and Hamilton streets, and dealt extensively in grain and feed. Later, with his son, Levi, as a partner, they conducted a grocery store in connection with the grain business. During the Civil War the price of wheat reached the high mark in the nation's history, and the farmers in bringing wheat to the Fenstermacher mart, or in passing and asking the price, when told $2.50 per bushel, would frequently remark "uscht," meaning "only," or "is that all." They expected the price of wheat to reach $3.00 per bushel.

Elias Fenstermacher was an able business man, and enjoyed a wide acquaintance. He dealt in groceries and bought and sold grain and salt by the boat loads, his place being the principle dispensary for the county of this staple article. He was a man of enterprise. He was an active spirit during the rebellion, and in politics an uncompromising Democrat. He was a supervisor of Allentown borough. His death occurred Aug. 24, 1875. He and his family were members of the Reformed Church. His wife, Esther Kuhns, died Aug. 8, 1892. Their children, who are now all deceased, were: Levi; Eliza A., the wife of Joseph Ruhe; and Phaon A.

Levi Fenstermacher, son of Elias, was born in the village of Heinimansville, in Weisenberg township, May 22, 1833. In 1853 he came to Allentown with his parents, and was associated with his father in the grain and mercantile business. He and his brother, Phaon, succeeded their father, and for a number of years they were wholesale produce dealers in Philadelphia and Allentown. They were also the first shippers of green groceries into Allentown, at the time when the inhabitants in the borough, were accustomed to use home-grown products of their gardens and fields.

Mr. Fenstermacher had imbibed the spirit of energy and enterprise possessed by his father, and like him was a successful business man and a Democrat in politics. Early in life he was a leader of the church choir, and was one of the organizers of St. John's Reformed church, in which he held many offices.

His wife was Fianna Metzger, a daughter of Jacob and ——— (Hoch) Metzger, the former at one time a hotel-keeper in Lehigh. Levi Fenstermacher died April 30, 1907, and his wife July 28, 1904. He was born at Dubuque, Iowa, July 9, 1857, and when less than two years old his parents removed to Lehigh county, Pa. The public schools of Allentown afforded Mr. Fenstermacher his early mental training, and later this was supplemented by a course in the Allentown Business College. For three years he kept the books for Fenstermacher Brothers, wholesale produce dealers, in Philadelphia, after which he became a clerk for four years with Milton J. Kreamer, in "the old corner store," Seventh and Hamilton streets, Allentown. He was bookkeeper for Ruhe Brothers, in Allentown. This has won for him a national reputation as a pomologist and scientific agriculturist.

Mr. Fenstermacher was one of the organizers of the Merchants' National Bank, Allentown, and served as a director of that institution until the organization of the Allentown Trust Company, in which movement he likewise participated and became a member of the board of directors, a position he still holds.

FETHEROLF FAMILY.

The ship "Thistle," which arrived at Philadelphia, August 20, 1730, had among its passengers, Peter Fetterolf, son of John Jacob Fetterolf. He was a native of Wachbach, Germany, born March 20, 1699. He was married to Anna Maria Rothermel in 1729, born in Feb. 1712, the only daughter in a family of six children, of Johannes and Sabilla (Zimmerman) Rothermel, also natives of Wachbach. He and his family and his brother-in-law, Leonard Rothermel, before the organization of Berks county, in 1752, had settled in Hereford township. In the year 1759 he was the largest taxpayer in that township. He was tax collector for the district, and collected the sum of 74 pounds, 15 shillings, and 6 pence; of which amount he himself paid 18 pounds as his share. His son, Peter, Jr., then was assessed among the single men of the township.

The name Fetterolf has been corrupted into various spellings. The ancestor in his last will and testament, plainly wrote his name Peter Fetherolf. In the list of immigrants in the Pennsylvania Archives the clerk spelled it Federolph.

The tax-lists have it Fetterolf. In the old Lehigh church records it appears as Johann Peter Fetherolf. The descendants in Berks and Lehigh counties spell it Fetherolf; and the Northumberland county, Pa., descendants, as well as those in Philadelphia, including Prof. Adam H. Fetterolf, Ph.D., L.L.D., the late distinguished president of Girard College, spell it Fetterolf.

Peter Fetterolf, the pioneer, was a farmer. He owned a large acreage of land, located along the line of Berks and Lehigh counties, in three townships, Hereford and Longswamp in Berks county, and in Lower Macungie in Lehigh county. The Fetterolf homestead on which the pioneer settled, erected the first log buildings and cleared the land, lived a useful, industrious, and prosperous life, reared his family and died, is situated near the village of Seisholtzville, in Hereford township. He died Aug. 15, 1784, in the 86th year of his age. He and his wife and several children, also later descendants, are buried in a private graveyard on this farm.

The pioneer divided his large estate by a last will, which was made July 19, 1784, and probated September 15th of the same year, and is recorded in the courthouse at Reading, Pa. Its witnesses were Henry Bortz and Christopher Schultz, the latter a justice of the peace of that district. It appointed as executors, Paul Grosscup, of Rockland township (who was the ancestor of the Hon. Peter S. Grosscup, the distinguished jurist of Chicago), Jacob Fetherolf and Christopher Bittenbender. The following six children are mentioned in the will: (1) Jacob; (2) Philip, married Christiana Richards (1749-1870), on Nov. 13, 1770. Their daughter, Elizabeth married Adam Wartman; (3) John Peter; (4) Maria Magdalena, married to Christopher Bittenbender; (5) Catharine, married (first) John Siegfried; (second) to Abraham Zimmerman, and (6) Anna Barbara, married to Philip Hain (Hehn). Items of the will were: 300 acres of land to his son, Jacob; 100 acres of land to his son-in-law, Christopher Bittenbender, blacksmith; 300 pounds to each of the six children of his deceased son, Peter. The three daughters were well provided for by the will which distributed the vast estate equally among all his children.

This pioneer was a leader among the settlers of his section. His wisdom in the selection of land is shown by the fact that it remained in the Bittenbender family from the year 1784 until 1908, a period of 124 years. Valuable iron ore, in later years, was discovered and profitably mined on this long-settled homestead. "At the Bittenbender mine, the ore raised from January to August, 1880, was 3,892 tons. Until the year 1880, 118,000 tons of ore were mined with big profit." Montgomery's History of Berks county, 1886, p. 998).

Peter Fetherolf and his wife were devout Lutherans, actively identified with New Jerusalem church, of which he was an elder in 1814; and there they were buried; large and costly tombstones mark their graves, with plain and legible inscriptions. He had settled originally in that section of Allemangel, not embraced in Albany township, Berks county, at a place which is still locally known as Fetherolfsville. This village, if it may now be so called, was an important center to the colonial settlers. A block-house or place of refuge stood there; in it settlers gathered to spend the nights when Indian invasion and attacks were feared. Inhabitants came to this block-house as far north as Lynnport. Among those was Mathias Schüts and family. (See Vol. I, Lynn township.)

Jacob Fetherolf, son of Peter, was born February 16, 1742, and died April 6, 1823, aged 81 years, 1 month, and 21 days. He was married to Catharine Brobst, one of the six children of Pioneer Philip Brobst (Probst), an immigrant, who settled in Allemangel (meaning desolation or land of all wants), Lynn township, about 1739. She was born May 12, 1760, and died Jan. 10, 1849, at the advanced age of 88 years; 7 months, and 28 days.

The exact time that Jacob Fetherolf located at Allemangel is uncertain, but from documents still extant, we learn that it was about 1770. He was an extensive farmer, and his descendants are very numerous, which include a number of ministers, doctors, and successful business men, as well as prosperous farmers. They had eight children: Jacob, Philip, Peter, Daniel, Salome, who was married three times, each husband having been a Bieber; Catharine, who was twice married, her second husband having been Abraham Long; and Molly, married to Peter Siegfried.

Jacob Fetherolf, son of Jacob, was born Feb. 7, 1782. He was a farmer in Lynn and lived near Jacksonville. He built the east end of the stone house, and the barn in 1819, on the farm now owned and occupied by Harrison A. Henry. He was an expert and leading horseman, always having had blooded stock. He and his family were Lutherans, members of the Jacksonville church, which he served as deacon and elder. He died March 31, 1849, in his 68th year. He was married twice; first to Anna Nonnamaker, and second to Maria C. Kistler. His first wife was born August 1, 1780, and died Sept. 15, 1821; the second wife was born Oct. 4, 1784, and died Oct. 23, 1841. They were married 19 years, 6

David K., who was born in 1843, and died on June 17, 1865, from disease contracted while in the service of his country in Company K, 17th Regiment. He is buried at the Heidelberg church.

Reuben Fetherolf, son of Jacob, son of Jacob, was a farmer, along the Outelaunee creek in Lynn. He owned the farm now owned by Harrison A. Henry. He built the west end of the present large stone house. His wife was Susan Wanamaker. Their children were: James; Sabina (married Samuel Lutz); Elias; and John.

David Fetherolf, son of Jacob, son of Jacob, was an extensive farmer along the Outelaunee creek, in Lynn. He was a prominent man in his community. He operated a tannery on this farm until about 1867, when he abandoned it. He had partners until 1857, but from that year he had it alone. On that farm he built the present barn in 1872. He was school director and assistant assessor. In the church at Jacksonville he was deacon, elder, and treasurer. His wife was Maria (Polly) Kistler. She was born Oct. 20, 1824, and died Oct. 12, 1910, aged 86 years, less 8 days. Their children were: Mary, married Jacob N. Hartman; William K.; Lucetta, married Amos D. Trexler; and John K.

The couple settled, making farming their occupation. Even while thus engaged he did not neglect his inclination toward education. He was a constant reader and one of the well-read men of the community, as well as an authority on local history. He is survived by his widow, Mary, and the following children: Dr. William J., Steinsville; Mrs. Anna Heintzelman, Schnecksville; Martin, a student at Muhlenberg College, Allentown; Mrs. Eva Kohler, Kutztown; Mary, Allentown; Edna, Irvin, and Dewey, all at home; a brother, John, Jacksonville; and two sisters, Mrs. Jacob Hartman, Kutztown, and Mrs. A. He and his family were Lutherans, members of New Jerusalem church, which he served in its different offices many years. He and his wife, Maria (Kistler), also, who was born Nov. 7, 1806, and died March 27, 1890, in her 84th year. Daniel K. Fetherolf, the second son of Philip, was born May 18, 1829, on the homestead of his father in the Kistler Valley, which he later acquired and farmed until the year 1875; then purchased the Benjamin Brobst farm in the same valley and cultivated it until 1879, then he moved to Allentown. Dr. Fetherolf then went to Trexlertown and there read medicine until 1864, when he began practicing at Spangsville, in Berks county. His grandfather, Philip Fetherolf, purchased it in 1824, who was succeeded by Daniel, his son, and in 1893 the title passed to the present owner. A part of the present dwelling-house is a relic of the colonial period. A distillery, which stood between the house and barn, was built in 1818, and was razed in 1913, and this was the second one which stood at that place. The west end of the present barn was built in 1837 by Philip Fetherolf.

Solomon Fister, the eldest son of Peter, was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, Deember 5, 1808, and was a wheelwright by trade, which he carried on in connection with farming. He lived at Wessnersville at the time of his death in December, 1874, and was buried in the cemetery at Frieden's church at that place. He officiated as a justice of the peace of Albany township for several terms, and later until the time of his decease as the post-master of the Stony Run post office. He was a member of the Reformed congregation, and a Democrat in politics. He was married to Catharine Will, of Greenwich township; born February 14, 1812, died January 23, 1887, and buried in the ceme-tery mentioned. They had two children: Jacob and Daniel.

Jacob A. Fister, elder son of Solomon, one of the few veteran school teachers surviving, was born in Greenwich township August 3, 1836. He received his education in the local schools and prepared himself to follow the profession of teaching. He taught in the public schools of Berks county for nearly a half century, and also officiated as a justice of the peace for many years. His residence is near Eagle Point. He was mar-ried to Mary Ann Trexler and they had four-teen children: Charles E., Edwin, Elma, Annie, William T., Frank J., George E., Alice, Mary A., Robert D., Herman, James, Clara, and Mabel.

Daniel P. Fister the younger son of Solomon, is a resident of Lynn township, in Lehigh county. He was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, April 28, 1839, and reared upon a farm, having afterward carried on farming on his fa-ther's property until 1875, when he removed to Lynn township and there continued farming until he retired, having purchased in 1889 the farm where he now lives. The tract is known as the Isaac Levan homestead and embraces 66 acres. In politics he is a Democrat, and he served as supervisor of the township for a time. On April 7, 1911, he was paralyzed and since then has been an invalid.

His wife was Catharine Grim, daughter of Reuben and Sarah (Wanner) Grim, and they have eleven children: Thomas G., Alton G., Lewis P. (who died in 1903, aged 38 years), Reuben H., Samuel W., Amanda J. (who died in 1905, aged 34 years), Elmira R. (married to Edgar D. Greenawald, having become his second wife in 1907), Emma C. (married to Wil-son Bachman), Mary S. (married to Dr. W. J. Fetherolf), H. Edwin, and Maggie M. (mar-ried to Edgar D. Greenawald, having been his first wife, born May 5, 1882, and died Septem-ber 23, 1903.)

Mr. Fister and his family are members of the New Jerusalem church, near Wessnersville, and he is now serving the congregation as an elder.

THOMAS G. FISTER, the eldest son of Daniel P., school teacher of Lynn township, was born in the borough of Hamburg, Berks county, October 30, 1863. He received his education in the public schools of the township named and in the select school of Prof. Alvin Rupp at New Tripoli, and also at the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, from which he was graduated in 1885. He had, however, been licensed to teach in 1880, and began teaching when seventeen years old. His first term was at Rabert's Corner, in Lynn township, and he has continued teaching for thirty-two consecutive years. During the summer months he has been engaged at farming in the township named. He is a diligent student, has collected a fine library, and by his studious habits has become versed in literature, mathematics and pedagogics. In politics he is a Democrat, and he has served the township as one of the auditors.

REUBEN H. FISTER, the fourth son of Daniel P., is a prosperous farmer near New Tripoli in Lynn township, and recognized as one of the largest producers of superior potatoes. He was born at Stony Run, in Berks county, July 28, 1867, and when nineteen years old was placed with a tailor at Kutztown to learn the trade, but he followed it for only a short time. In 1890 he learned the creamery business and carried it on for twelve years at New Tripoli; and for one year he was in the employ of W. H. Hoffman, grain merchant at the place mentioned; then, in 1904, he purchased the Miller homestead near New Tripoli from his father-in-law, Reuben Miller, which embraces 112 acres of land some of which is superior for the cultivation of potatoes, and he plants annually from fifteen to eighteen acres in potatoes from which he has realized bountiful crops. He has also a peach orchard which contains 355 trees. In 1909 he planted 125 trees and 230 more in 1911.

This farm is an historic place, for on it in 1756 an atrocious murder was committed by the Indians by killing the wife of Abraham Sechler. A log house is still standing on the place which marks the spot where the brutal act was done. This house was probably built in 1750 by Johann Siegel, for he had obtained a warrant on August 22, 1749 for 100 acres of land, and it is believed that he went there and put up the house about that time. The western part of the house had no wood flooring until after 1800. Siegel sold the property to George Wertman, and Wertman sold it to Christian Christ who, in 1764, secured 28 more acres by patent, and in 1772 he conveyed the place to Frederick Sechler. At that time the property was bounded by lands of George Zimmerman and George Seisloff.

Mr. Fister was married in 1892 to Alvena M. Miller, and they have six children: Edwin J., Helen M., Charles R. D. (who died in infancy), Vera R., Maggie C., and Edna A. He and his family are members of the Reformed congregation of the Ebenezer church at New Tripoli, and he is serving as one of the deacons. He has become affiliated with the Junior Order United American Mechanics at New Tripoli.

H. Edwin Fister, youngest son of Daniel P., a farmer in the Kistler valley, was born August 23, 1877. In 1906 he began farming for himself as a tenant on the place where he now lives. This tract was formerly owned by David Heil, who sold it to David Kistler; then Kistler sold it to his son Henry F., who in 1892 erected a large modern barn on the place. James M. Braucher then became the owner and he sold it in 1908 to Mr. Fister, who in 1911 raised 2,500 bushels of potatoes on the farm. He was married first to Lila C., daughter of James M. Bachman, by whom he had one son, Howard J. She died April 15, 1907; then, on January 18, 1908, he married a second wife, Eva M. Gruber, and they have three children: Mary, Nevice and Paul.

George Fister, son of Durst, died about 1840. He was the proprietor of the Washington House at Kutztown for some years. His sons, John and David, both lived at Kutztown.

For some years he followed telegraphy there and later carried on the tinsmith business until he went to Alburtis, and then continued the latter until 1907, when he located at Allentown. He served as a school director at Kutztown, and also as Enumerator in the census compilation of 1880. He was married to Eliza Schaffer and they had four children: Charles D., John D., George D., and Edward J. His wife died Nov. 23, 1905, and is buried at Allentown.

trade of tailor at Alburdis. Then he worked as a journeyman for two years at Bangor, Lehigh county, and for the next fifteen years was employed as a cutter in the large clothing establishment of Koch Brothers, at Allentown.

In 1912, Mr. Fister embarked in business for himself by uniting with his brother Edwin, and under the firm name of Fister Brothers. They have since carried on a grocery store in a successful manner at 15th and Chew streets, in Allentown. He is a member of Constantine Lodge, I. O. O. F., of the J. O. U. A. M., of the Knights of Friendship, and of the Lehigh Consistory.

In 1899 Mr. Fister was married to Lillie A. Blöse, daughter of the late Dallas Blöse and his wife, Mary (nee Sterner), and they have four children: Alma, Mary, Pearl and Paul. They are members of the St. Stephan's Lutheran Evangelical congregation.

He received his education in the local schools and summer normal school at Alburdis and Lynnville, and then entered the general store of W. B. Butz at Alburdis as a clerk, where he remained two years, after which he entered the store of his cousin, David Bensing, at Tamaqua and continued with him for two years. In 1904 he located at Allentown for the purpose of carrying on a store for himself, and since then at No. 129 S. 5th street has established a grocery business, which he has made a profitable undertaking.

Socially at Allentown Mr. Fister is a member of the P. O. S. of A. and of the Knights of Malta, and politically he is a Democrat. He organized the Allentown Merchants' Ice Co., which was incorporated with a capital of $35,000 and established a fine plant at 5th street and Summer avenue, which has proven a successful enterprise. In 1912 the company established a modern electrical plant with an artesian well 318 feet deep. He was selected as one of the directors of the Board.

On April 14, 1896, Mr. Fister was married to Belle Wheeland, daughter of C. W. Wheeland and his wife Eliza (nee Schaffer) of Williamsport, Pa. They are members of the Zion Reformed congregation, of which he was elected as a deacon in 1912.

FOLLWEILER FAMILY.

Bernhardt Follweiler, a native of Switzerland, came to America before the close of the first half of the eighteenth century, settling in Allemängel, in Lynn, in what is now Lehigh county, Pennsylvania. He took out a warrant for about 100 acres of land that is now owned by Edwin Schitz. Pioneer Follweiler left two sons: Ferdinand and Daniel, also one daughter, Susanna, who first married John Brobst. He died young. She afterward married a Taylor, and they moved to Ohio.

In the tax list of 1756, of Albany township, appears the name of Henry Follweiler. The Pennsylvania archives record his name among the soldiers in a volunteer company of "Allemängel and Lynn" in 1756, which were out on the Indian frontier for thirty-nine days. The connection between Henry Follweiler and Bernhardt Follweiler is not known, but that they were related there can be no doubt. On the farm of John B. Follweiler, near Wannamakers, is a log house, that was built before the French and Indian War (1755-1758). A cut of the house is produced herewith. This farm is part of the homestead of the pioneer, and he built this house. He was an Indian fighter and the claim was made that he had a charmed ("kugelfest") life. He was a terror to the savages.

Ferdinand Follweiler, the oldest son of Bernhardt, was born Feb. 17, 1765, died April 1, 1884, in his eightieth year. He obtained the homestead farm. He served as a captain of the State Militia, and at the time of the Whisky Insurrection in 1794, he called his men together and urged them to go with him to war; they refused; then he went to Lancaster, Pa., and there joined the militia without them. The agitation at the time was intense and public opinion was quite evenly divided. Upon his return home, Ferdinand and his brother Daniel were antagonistic in politics, Federalist and Democrat, and always remained antagonistic in politics. Mrs. Follweiler was born Aug. 11, 1767, died Oct. 18, 1838. Their many children follow:

Daniel; Henry; Ferdinand; Jonas; Israel; Anna; Maria (Gruver); Catharine (Eckenrode); Magdalena, married Daniel Brobst; Susanna, married Henry Brobst; Leah (Eckenrode); Rachel, married Adam Lynn.

Daniel lived in West Penn township, Schuylkill county; Henry, Ferdinand, Jonas and Israel remained in Lynn township and died there, and are buried at Jacksonville. The daughters were married and several with their families moved to Ohio.

Daniel Follweiler, the oldest son of Ferdinand, moved across the Blue mountain into West Penn township, Schuylkill county. He was a farmer. He died in the late summer of 1865, aged about seventy years. He is buried at the West Penn church.

His wife, Rebecca Straub, died with their son John, at Jacksonville, where she was also buried. Their children were: Daniel; John; Wilson; Susan; Catharine; Reuben; Mary, married Daniel Correll; Leah, married Abraham Merkel; and Lovina Hauser.

Captain Daniel Follweiler, son of Daniel, was born Nov. 29, 1818, died in September, 1865. He is buried at New Tripoli, where the "Foll-

He was married three times, first, to Lovina Reitz. They had no issue. His second wife was Priscilla Stoyer. They had these children: James, John, William, Jonas, Maria, and Lizzie, the widow of William Berk. The third wife was Lydia Krause. Their children were: Sarah, Janetta, Charles, Tillie and Oliver F., of Slate-dale, Pa.

John Follweiler, son of Daniel, was a shoemaker in Lynn township until seventeen years before he died. He was locally known as "Shoemaker John" to distinguish him from other mem-

Daniel, was a carpenter up to the time of his marriage, after which he was an engineer on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad and lived at Catawissa, Pa., from which place he moved to Upper Macungie township in 1884. At the latter place he worked in the ore mines a short time, then moved to Albany, Berks county, and for five years he worked on the railroad on the repair crew. He moved from the latter place near to Pleasant Corner and finally to Allentown, where he died, but is buried at New Tripoli. His wife Elizabeth was a daughter of William and Sallie Shugars, of Shenandoah, Pa. Their children were: Minnie, who died aged three years; Joseph E., of Allentown; and William A.

WILLIAM A. FOLLWEILER, of Catasauqua, is a member of the firm of Hoffman & Follweiler, and of the Catasauqua Construction Company. He was born Jan. 19, 1874, at Catawissa, Pa. He learned the cabinet making trade from W. A. Reinert, at New Tripoli, and remained in his employ about six years. In 1892 he went to Allentown and was employed by the Allentown Transit Company, remaining in that city until 1897, then came to Catasauqua where he first followed painting and later clerked in the store. Mr. Follweiler formed a partnership with Alvin J. Hoffman under the firm name of Hoffman & Follweiler, and they purchased the ice business from John Hoffman and are engaged in general hauling. In 1910 they added general construction and cement work. The firm now employs from thirty to forty-five men, and uses twenty-five head of horses. The Catasauqua Construction Company made the foundation for the large high school building at Catasauqua, built in 1911, and did all the cement work at this building. They also made the foundation for the silk mill in North Catasauqua. In 1893, he married Cora A. Wertman, daughter of Lewis and Matilda (Guildner) Wertman. Mr. and Mrs. Follweiler worship in the Reformed Church. He is a member of the K. G. E. They have these five children: Lillian May, Helen Irene, Warren C., William H. C., and Evelyn Marie.

Daniel Follweiler, the second son of the pioneer Bernhardt, was born in Lynn township, Oct. 2, 1769, died Feb. 14, 1847. He was married to Maria Dorothea Leaser, born May 15, 1769, died May 25, 1828. She was a daughter of Frederick Leaser, who died in 1810. The latter hauled the Liberty Bell from Philadelphia to Allentown in 1777. Daniel Follweiler settled on the Leaser homestead, situated near Wannamaker's, and there died and left these children:

Maria, born 1789, died July 20, 1865; married John Folk.

John Follweiler, the second son of Daniel, kept a tavern, where Lloyd Kistler, now lives near Wannamaker's up to about 1830; he then tenanted the Smith farm near Lynnport until 1847, at which time he purchased the homestead of his grandfather, Bernhardt Follweiler, the pioneer, and occupied the log house of which mention has been made. He was born Dec. 21, 1799, died March, 1890, in his ninetieth year. His wife was Susan Sittler. Their children were: Charles; John S., who had part of the homestead. Abbie was married first to Peter Fenstermacher, and second to Mr. Railton. She is eighty-seven years old, and lives at Tamaqua, Pa. Susan married Samuel Creitz. David Follweiler, the third son of Daniel E., was born April 7, 1807, died Aug. 7, 1888. He was a blacksmith by trade and often told his children how their great-grandfather, Frederick Leaser, hauled the old Liberty Bell from Philadelphia to Allentown, and that his father, Daniel Follweiler, had these facts direct from the lips of Frederick Leaser. The children of David Follweiler, among whom was Dr. David W. W., of Lynnport, rolled the wheels of the historic wagon around in the barnyard. It was then out of commission, and stored in the barn, which in 1885, was destroyed by lightning with its contents. These children talked among themselves in their child-like way of the Liberty Bell, the Revolutionary War, and the ugly British soldiers.

David Follweiler and his wife Catherine Wannamaker, who died in 1864, are buried at the Jacksonville church. Their children were:

DAVID W. W. FOLLWEILER, M.D., of Lynnport, was born in Lynn township, Dec. 27, 1841. His early education was received in the public schools of Lehigh county, where he also taught school several terms. During the summer months he read medicine with Dr. D. D. S. Shade, of Steinsville; entering Bellevue Medical College, of New York City, in 1868, and graduating in 1870. He began practicing at Lynnport, and has continued in active practice until this time. Dr. Follweiler has kept in touch with the advances made in the profession and some years after he had completed his course, he again returned to Bellevue and specialized as a general practitioner. His name is known in nearly every household in Lynn township, also in a large area of Albany township. His classical appearance, benevolent face, and stately bearing impress themselves strongly upon the many people with whom the doctor comes in contact. Dr. Follweiler wears a long white beard which is also the color of the hair upon his head. His fresh healthy face further adds to his striking personality.

He owns the David Follweiler homestead of 124 acres. The large brick residence in which the doctor resides was built by David Follweiler in 1865. The doctor has always taken an interest in the folklore and history of his district, and in his boyhood days with other boys of the community helped to roll down hill the old wheels of the historic wagon upon which the famous Liberty Bell was hauled from Philadelphia to Allentown in 1777.

Doctor Follweiler served as a school director and is one of the members of Blue Mountain Lodge, No. 249, I. O. O. F. In 1894 he was the high priest of the lodge, of which his father was a charter member.

He was married, Sept. 7, 1873, to Mary J., daughter of Elias Hartman. Mrs. Follweiler died Sept. 5, 1901, aged 52 years, 7 months and 8 days. They had these children: 1. Dr. Robert D. E., who died at Allentown, Jan. 26, 1913, aged 39 years, 7 months and 10 days; his widow, Irene, nee Laubach, and a son, Alfred D., survive; and (2) Clara, married to Robert Hermany. They live at Dallas, Texas, since 1906, where Mr. Hermany is the accountant for the Kansas, Missouri & Texas Railroad.

Jesse Follweiler, son of Daniel, owned seventy-five acres of the homestead of Frederick Leaser, his grandfather. The farm since 1880, is the property of Amandus Leiby. The barn on this farm was destroyed by lightning in 1855, and with the contents of the barn the historic wagon was burned upon which the famous Liberty Bell was hauled from Philadelphia to Allentown in 1777. Jesse Follweiler served as supervisor of Lynn township.

His wife, Rebecca Wannamaker, was a twin sister of Daniel Wannamaker, and they were the children of Christian Wannamaker. Jesse Follweiler had ten children.

John S. Follweiler, son of John, was born Dec. 6, 1825. He was baptized in the same year. His sponsors were his grandparents, Daniel and Dorothea (Leaser) Follweiler. When a young man he travelled through New York, Ohio and Indiana. Upon his return to Lynn, he married Brigitta Brobst, daughter of John and Lydia (Smith) Brobst. He was a farmer and was supervisor of Lynn for twenty-four years. There were four John Follweilers living in the township at the same time. He was known as the "Supervisor John"; another was the "Shoemaker John." At the time of his death on Dec. 7, 1901, (aged 76 years and 1 day), he was the last charter member of the I. O. O. F., of Steinsville. He was active in church matters, and served all the offices in the Reformed congregation of the Jacksonville church. His wife was born March 23, 1828, and died Oct. 23, 1902, in her 75th year. They had three children: Missouri, married (first) John Fetherolf, and (second) Charles Greenawald; John B.; and Lewis A.

JOHN B. FOLLWEILER, of Lynn township, was born June 5, 1852. At the age of 16 years he learned the trade of a carpenter, and for forty consecutive years followed his trade in Lehigh and Schuylkill counties, except for nine months, during which time he worked in New York state. He built many of the houses in Lynn, usually employing from eight to nine men. In 1888, he built the William H. Reitz barn; in 1907, the Lewis J. Donat barn; in 1909, the barns of Henry F. Kistler and James A. Donat; also the Benjamin Levan and Edwin Schitz barns, besides most of the buildings in Lynn township that were erected during the last quarter of a century. His life has been an unusually busy one.

In 1886, he purchased the homestead of Bernhard Follweiler, the pioneer. The following year, 1887, he razed a log barn, eighty feet long, which had stood on this property for more than 125 years. It was the original barn on this property. This barn sheltered some twenty head of horses during the last quarter of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth centuries. Some of these horses were used to cultivate the soil, while others were used in hauling whisky and grain to Philadelphia. A distillery stood in the meadow below the present old house in which apple-jack and rye whiskey was burned, during the Colonial and the Revolutionary days.

John B. Follweiler and family are members of the Reformed congregation of Jacksonville church. He served it as deacon, elder, trustee and treasurer. Socially he is a member of the P. O. S. of A., at Steinsville. He served as a member of the school board for six years, and as treasurer of the township.

On Feb. 21, 1874, he married Mary J. Muth. They had seven children, namely: Annie E., married James W. Loy; Harvey, died aged 3 years and 20 days; Carrie E., married William Buck; Milton A., married Cora Reinhart; Florence L., married Harry Herman; Clinton R., died in his third year; and Warren, married Mabel Heintzleman.

Allen W. Follweiler, son of Jesse, was born Sept. 1, 1850. He resides on a small farm near Wannamaker's, and for twenty-two years worked on the repair crew for the Berks & Lehigh Railroad, and is still an employee of the company.

In 1870, he married Mary L., daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Winans) Braucher. They have these children: Ella V., George H., Dorothea L., Sadie R., and Samuel A.

ALEXANDER D. FOLLWEILER.

Alexander D. Follweiler was born at Tamaqua, Schuylkill county on Oct. 8, 1864. He received his education in the common schools and at an early age was placed on a farm, where he worked until he became 15 years old. Afterward he was employed for a time in a grocery store; then learned the trade of machinist in the shop of Carter & Allen Company, when he secured employment with the Lehigh Valley R. R. Company, and remained with them for upwards of twenty years at Delano, Hazelton, and Weatherly. In 1912 he entered shop No. 2 of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and since then has been employed there.

Mr. Follweiler was married to Katherine Goodbellet, daughter of Simon and Susan (Betz) Goodbellet, who was born in Saxony, Germany, and emigrated to America when nine years old. They have two children: Edward Alexander and Daniel Webster. The farmer was born in 1892 and received his education at Hazleton and Waverly, graduating from the business college in 1910. He is now passenger ticket agent for the L. V. R. R. Company at the Broad Street station in Philadelphia. Mr. Follweiler was a member and deacon for eight years of the Lutheran church at Tamaqua and is now a member of St. John's Lutheran church, Allentown. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A., and Sons of America, and is a Democrat in politics.

JAMES L. FOOTE.

James Lewis Foote, the late founder and general manager of the Slatington-Bangor Slate Syndicate, was a native of Salisbury, in Merrimack county, New Hampshire. He was born April 15, 1856, and educated in the local schools and Osford Academy until the age of sixteen years when he entered the law office of John M. Shirley, Esq., at Andover, a prominent lawyer, and then the state reporter of the Supreme Court, to take up the study of law, and after reading with him for a while, he finished his studies under Hon. E. B. S. Sanborn, at Franklin, N. H., in 1876. During this time, in 1875, he served as engrossing clerk of the State Legislature, and the same year he received the appointment of justice of the peace. In April, 1877, just after reaching his legal age, he was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the state. He then opened an office and carried on a general practice for four years, but finding it not congenial he went to New York City and engaged in the mercantile business for four years.

While so engaged, Mr. Foote learned of the great prospect in the promising slate regions of Pennsylvania in Lehigh county, and on March 1, 1887, went to Slatington. He first entered the employ of the late Henry Kuntz, Esq., proprietor of the Slatington Slate Co. as a book-keeper and sales manager, and he filled this position for six years when he became associated with certain enterprising citizens in the organization of the Slatington-Bangor Slate Syndicate for the manufacture of roofing slate and slate black-boards, and was selected to take the offices of treasurer and general manager which he has continued to serve in a faithful and successful manner until the present time. Their trade has, in the past twenty years, been developed to extend throughout the United States and foreign countries, and in securing this trade Mr. Foote came to be recognized as the best known person connected with the slate industry in the United States by reason of his well-conducted, persistent and judicious advertising.

Upon locating at Slatington, Mr. Foote showed an interest in its local government and various offices were tendered him which he was obliged to decline on account of his business engagements. However in the cause of education he accepted the office of school director and served for three years, filling the position of secretary and president. In politics he has been a staunch Republican; and in the year 1908 he was an alternate delegate from the Berks-Lehigh District to the Republican National Convention. In 1902 he co-operated in the organization of the Citizens' National Bank, and he had been one of its directors for many years, and is now president. He was also a director of the Blue Ridge Traction Co., which operates a street railway between Slatington and Danielsville. In 1911 he received the appointment of county prison inspector, and also in 1912, 1913 and 1914, and on each occasion the Board elected him to be president. He was chief Burgess of Slatington, having been nominated and elected for 4 years in November, 1913, by the three political parties, polling all the votes polled, excepting 42 cast for a Socialist.

Mr. Foote affiliated with the following societies: B. P. O. E., at Allenown; and the K. G. E. and the Knights of Malta, of Slatington. In 1899 when Christ Episcopal Church was established, he was one of its organizers and had been its chief supporter, and senior warden up to the time of his death on July 23, 1914, due to apoplexy. Thus passed away one of nature's nobelman. Mr. Foote was a splendid type of man, of the highest sense of honor, of the strictest integrity. He was eminently successful in business because he laid the foundations with clean hands and with uprightness and character and integrity as the cornerstone. That his good qualities of manhood and citizenship were appreciated is shown by the long list of honors that came to him, mostly unsought by him, and all a magnificent tribute to his managerial ability and his probity.

The funeral was held on Sunday, July 26, at 2:30 p. m., from his beautiful home at Centre and Chestnut streets, Slatington. The services were conducted by Bishop Ethelbert Talbot, of Bethlehem, assisted by Rev. James B. May, of Catasauqua. The Elks' burial service was followed at the grave in Fairview cemetery.

In 1879 Mr. Foote was married to Ara L.

Platt, a daughter of Capt. James H. and Sarah S. (Jones) Platt, of Manchester, N. H. Mrs. Foote's father was enlisted in the Civil War, and served as Captain of Co. E, in the 2nd Regt. of N. H. volunteers; and he was killed in 1864 at the battle of Drury's Bluff, in Virginia. She died in 1907 at Slatington. In 1908 Mr. Foote married as his second wife, Emma Raleigh Blanchard, a daughter of Trask W. and Almira (Gates) Reliegh, of Boscawen, N. H., a lineal descendant of Sir Walter Raleigh, the distinguished representative of Queen Elizabeth, of Great Britain, in the early discovery and settlement of Virginia, for which he was knighted.

Mr. Foote's father was Thomas Foote, a carpenter and cabinet maker, who settled at Salisbury, N. H., in 1831, and married Lydia Tabor; and Thomas was a son of Lewis, born in 1784, and enlisted in the English war of 1812-15, having been in service on the ship "Mars" which embarked from Portsmouth, N. H., with French "Letters of Marque and Reprisal," was captured by the English during the war, and afterward lost in a severe storm and never heard from; and Lewis was a son of Thomas who was born at Amsbury, Mass., in 1749.

In 1901 he succeeded his father in the ownership of the farm and became a successful poultry raiser, always having on hand a flock numbering from 400 to 500. He takes pride in the possession of an open-face watch which was owned and worn by his great-grandfather, Thomas Foster, who died in 1803. He and his unmarried sisters are occupying the homestead. They are members of the Reformed congregation of the Jacksonwald church.

FRANKENFIELD FAMILY.

Soon afterward they located in Springfield township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where they were pioneers and became original land owners. Adjoining his purchase on the north was still unsold proprietary land as well as in several other directions which later claimed his attention when he began to enlarge his boundaries. Their three sons, born in Germany, follow:

His second marriage to Elizabeth Strawsnitter resulted in the following eight children, viz: Anna Margaret, Samuel, Elizabeth, Eve, Isaac, Susanna, Christina, and Simon. By his third union there was no issue. Adam and his wives are buried at the Springfield church.

Adam Frankenfield succeeded his father, Simon, to the homestead which was located near the Springfield Church. He became a substantial and foremost citizen of his district. The original set of buildings were built by his father near an excellent spring of water. To this place they came on foot from Philadelphia, a distance of 44 miles. This was in about 1748. The place where they located was near the present Springfield Church. Tradition informs us that the pioneer carried his little son, Adam, on his back all the way. FREDERICK FAMILY.

The last will and testament of John Frederick is recorded in Will Book 10, p. 601, in the court house at Doylestown, the county seat of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. He was a pioneer and the ancestor of a representative Pennsylvania family, and may be a descendant of Henry Frederick, who had been a resident at Germantown in 1734. The Pennsylvania Archives record him, a taxable resident of Rockhill township, in 1779, and as owning in that year, 50 acres of land, 1 horse and 2 cattle. His name likewise appears in the following recorded tax lists: 1781, 1782, 1784, 1785, 1787. Beginning with 1781, he was assessed with 100 acres of land, 2 horses and 4 cattle. In 1782, as well as in later tax lists the name of Yost Frederick also appears. He is said to have been the oldest son of John Frederick, but his name does not appear in the latter's will. Tradition states that Joseph (or Yost) was only a half brother to Henry, Barbara, Michael, George, John, and Catharine Frederick.

In 1784 John Frederick, the pioneer, is recorded as being the head of a household consisting of eleven persons, 100 acres of land, and one dwelling house.

On the thirteenth day of January, 1808, John Frederick made his last will and testament. The absence of reference to his wife is conclusive proof that she died before the making of the will. That he died at a very advanced age is certain. His estate he divided into six parts, each of the following named children receiving one-sixth part: Henry; Barbara, intermarried to John Rinker; Michael; George; John, and Catharine, intermarried with Ludwick Wile. The second son, Michael, was appointed administrator of his father's estate. The will was proved Feb. 12, 1828. In Deed Book 54, p. 382, it is recorded that Michael Frederick, executor of John Frederick, late of Rockhill township sold a tract of land, April 11, 1829, to Barnet Headman, a noted potter of the Revolutionary period.

Henry Frederick, oldest son of John, was born prior to the Revolutionary War. He was a blacksmith on an adjoining tract to the homestead of his parents. He made his will in 1859 and died in February, 1863. He was survived by his wife Mary. They had no issue.

Michael Frederick, the second son of John, was born Oct. 27, 1769, died Jan. 13, 1849 in his eightieth year of age. He was married to Catharine Stump, born Jan. 15, 1764, died July 31, 1849, aged 85 years, 6 months, and 16 days. Both are buried at the Tohickon church, in Bucks county. He was a weaver by trade and a farmer by occupation. He lived in the vicinity of the Three Mile Run, in Rockhill township. His children were: John; Joseph; Thomas; Catharine, married to Casper Johnson, and Mrs. Hilbert.

John Frederick, oldest son of Michael, was born Feb. 21, 1796, died March 28, 1869. He married Mary Keller, born March 7, 1796, died Sept. 15, 1856. Both are buried at the Tohickon church. He was a farmer in Rockhill township. There was a locality in the eastern part of that township which was known as "Fredericktown," because of the large number of that name living there. John and Mary Frederick had the following children: Michael; Thomas; Katie, married to James Schock.

Michael, son of John, was born in 1821; was married to Sarah Lewis, and had these children: Peter; John; Maria, and Katie.

Thomas, son of John, was married to Eliza Hillpot. They had a son, Pearson and a daughter Mary Ann.

Joseph Frederick, the second son of Michael, was a weaver and laborer in Rockhill township. He died in 1833, when still a young man. His son Jonas, whose sketch follows, recalls his father's funeral. The lad, then five years old, sat aside of the casket which was upon the middle of a big old-fashioned wagon, around which sat the mourners on the way to the church for burial. Joseph Frederick married Mary Shipe, who survived him many years. They had the following children: Elias; James; Lydia, married to Lewis Jones; Amos; Daniel, and Jonas.

Elias Frederick, son of Joseph, married Elizabeth Hartzell, born in 1819, died in 1875. They are buried at the Rich Valley church, in Bucks county. They had a son William, who died at Richlandtown in early manhood.

James Frederick, son of Joseph, was a shoemaker. He married Mary Loux, who is now past ninety years of age. He died a number of years ago. They had James J., of Allentown; Joseph, of Bethlehem; Oliver, deceased, and Emma.

Amos Frederick, son of Joseph, lived at Tincum, Bucks county. He was a boatman, laborer and farmer. He married Miss Hilbert, a first cousin. They had sons Gideon and Newberry.

Jonas Frederick, son of Joseph, was born September 20, 1828. He was a farmer, shoemaker, and iron worker. For twenty years he was an employe of the Donaldson Iron Works, at Emaus, where he still lives, and is one of the aged and respected citizens. He is a member of the Lutheran church, but his father and grandfather were members of the Tohickon Reformed church.

On June 16, 1850, he married Mary Ann, daughter of William and Kate (Gruber) Morder (also spelled Madder), a native of Baden, Germany. They have the following children: Sarah, widow of O. S. Reinhart; William, died small; Alice, married to Jacob Brinker; Wilson C., of Allentown; Milton, of Emaus; Emma, deceased wife of Allen Dillinger; Kate, married to Obediah Miller, of Elizabeth, N. J.; Martha, married to Mahlon Antrim, of Emaus; Watson, deceased; Minnie, married to Horace Wennig, of Emaus; James, deceased; Cora, married to Charles Miller; Jonas H., whose history follows. Of the above children, Mrs. Brinker, Milton, Mrs. Antrim, Mrs. Wennig, Mrs. Miller, and Jonas H., all reside at Emaus.

JONAS H. FREDERICK, silk manufacturer and representative citizen of Emaus, Pennsylvania, was born at Limeport, Lehigh county, January 5, 1875, son of Jonas and Mary Ann (Morder) Frederick, grandson of Joseph, great-grandson of Michael, and great-great-grandson of John Frederick, the pioneer of the family in Rockhill township, Bucks county.

The early life of Jonas H. Frederick was spent upon the farm, thus in his youth the habit of industry became a part of his nature, and this essential, coupled with indomitable energy and enterprise, has placed Mr. Frederick among the front rank of manufacturers of his section. He was educated in the public schools and graduated from the American Commercial College, Allentown, in 1896. Afterward for a time he was employed with the Keystone Silk Mill as a weaver, warper, etc., learning the business thoroughly. In 1905 Mr. Frederick established the Central Silk Company at Siegfried, Pa., and in 1908 he built the silk mill on Ridge street, Emaus, which employs sixty people. In 1910 he purchased the Bath Silk Mill, and formed the Bath Silk Company, where eighty people are employed. In 1913 he, with others, bought the Keystone Silk Mills, at Emaus, which is now known and trades as the Emaus Silk Company, Inc. He is the treasurer and general manager of this company, which employs upwards of two hundred people. In 1912 a silk throwing mill was established at Perkasio, Pa., which is known as the Perkasio Silk Company, and employs about seventy-five people.

Mr. Frederick has membership in the following lodges: Jordan Lodge No. 673, F. & A. M., Allentown; Mystic Star Lodge, No. 73, I. O. O. F.; also the Emaus Encampment No. 15, and Washington Camp No. 398, P. O. S. of A., of Emaus.

In the summer of 1914 he erected his handsome residence at the southeast corner of Third and Ridge streets, Emaus. It is one of the very fine homes of Lehigh county. He is a member of the St. John's Lutheran church.

He operated Fritch's mill in Longswamp township until his removal to Norristown, Pa., where he and his brother, Jonas D., conducted what is now the "Stritzinger Mill," and earlier known as the Hubener Mill. They conducted it for four years. In 1887 he removed to Bethlehem where he formed a partnership with his brother, Dr. D. D., under the name of D. D. Fritch & Company, and they built up a large milling business. Two years later it became Fritch & Egner by the withdrawal of D. D. & N. D. Fritch, and they continued under that name until in 1904, when it was changed to T. D. Fritch & Sons. The firm are the manufacturers of a high grade spring patent flour, "Fritch's Best," "Fancy B. B.," also the famous "Diamond Rye Flour." Their daily capacity is two hundred barrels and they operate both day and night. This busy establishment in four years time has been idle but two days, which was occasioned by high water. They employ twenty-two people.

The main mill property was erected in 1886 and an elevator was added in 1892, and in 1908 another addition was built. The mill is four stories high, and 50x120 feet in dimensions. DR. DAVID DRY FRITCH, of Macungie, was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, Feb. 4, 1848, and was reared on the old Fritch homestead situated near Mertztown. After receiving his preliminary education in the township school and at Reading and Collegeville, he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania graduating in 1876. He engaged in the practice of his profession in the village of Longswamp with his brother-in-law, Dr. Peter Wertz, and continued in it for two years, but, preferring a business career, he and his brother Nathan engaged in the milling business at Macungie, Pa., which trade had been followed by the three preceding generations, the ancestor having been the first miller in his locality, having erected and operated a mill in Longswamp township in 1764 or 1765. The Fritch mill at Macungie has a daily capacity of 500 barrels, which includes spring, winter and rye flour. Mr. Fritch has the honor of manufacturing the first rye flour by the roller process. Their leading brands of flour are: "Triumph Spring Patent," "XXXX Fancy," "Eagle Star Spring," and "Keystone Rye." (See description and cut of mill under Macungie borough).

Besides directing the large and flourishing merchant flour mill at Macungie he has been engaged in extensive farming operations since 1899. He purchased a farm of 158 acres, situated partly within the western borders of the borough of Macungie. This land had been run down and was unprofitable, but by applying modern methods and intelligent management he soon realized an increase in production of wheat, clover, and potatoes, and in 1907 his crop of potatoes from forty-one acres amounted to 15,000 bushels. Naturally his remarkable success has given him a national reputation, and numerous letters have been written to him for advice in matters of agriculture. Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture in 1908, said: "Mr. Fritch, of Macungie, Pennsylvania, is the most competent person in the country to give advice on potato farming." He also has 1,500 acres of timber land in Huntingdon county, Pa.

Eng. by L. G. Williams & Bro. NY

Notwithstanding the great demands on his time in carrying on the milling business and farming operations he was prevailed upon to take part in local government and the development of local enterprises. He officiated as chief burgess of Macungie for four terms; served in the town council for two terms, and assisted in establishing the silk mill at Macungie, acting as president of this successful company from the start until the present time.

Upon locating at Macungie in 1878, Dr. Fritch became a member of the Grace Lutheran congregation, and he has always manifested a deep interest in the welfare and progress of the church and Sunday school, serving in the council of the church since 1878 and as superintendent of the Sunday school in a most efficient manner since 1888, a continuous period of twenty-six years. His activity in the church led to his prominent identification with the Theological Seminary of the Lutheran Church at Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, which he is a director since 1899, and with Muhlenberg College at Allentown, which he is serving as a trustee since 1900; also as a member of the executive committee, and of different sub-committees in the successful management of the institution.

LUTHER W. FRITCH, son of Dr. D. D. and Sarah (Weiler) Fritch, was born March 13, 1879. He was educated in the public schools and graduated from Muhlenberg College in the class of 1899. Since that time he has been associated with his father as assistant manager in the milling business. Mr. Fritch was the organizer and first president of the Macungie Fire Company, and was instrumental in securing the fire apparatus for it, and he has also membership in the Liberty Fire Company, at Allentown; and in the Lehigh Valley Motor Club.

On Oct. 17, 1901, he married Cora Hagenbuch Clauser, daughter of Alfred and Elizabeth Clauser, of Allentown. They have two children: Sara Elizabeth, and Mary Clauser Fritch.

John G. Fritch, son of John and Miss (Glessmeyer) Fritch, was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, Pa., March 21, 1847. He received his education in the public schools. About 1877 he removed to Allentown, becoming the colporteur for the American Tract Society and has been engaged in the book business ever since. Politically he is a Republican; and a member of the Royal Arcanum. FULLER FAMILY.

The ancestry of the family can be traced back in direct line to Robert Fuller, whose eldest child, Edward Fuller, was the founder of the family in America.

Edward Fuller, the eldest son of Robert Fuller, was baptized at Revenhall, Norfolk, England. About the year 1607 or 1608 he fled to Holland with his brother, who was a physician and deacon. The name of Edward Fuller appears as the twenty-first signer of the compact drawn up on board the "Mayflower," previous to the landing of her passengers at Plymouth Rock, in November, 1620. He had two children: Matthew, who died at Barnstable, Massachusetts, 1678; and Samuel.

Joseph Fuller, a great-grandson of Samuel, was married Aug. 10, 1752, to Zerviah Hill. He bought land in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, from the Indians, June 19, 1767. Later he emigrated to Pennsylvania and his will is recorded at Wilkes-Barre. To him and his wife were born nine children: Joshua, born July 11, 1754; Benajah, born June 4, 1756; Lydia, born April 23, 1758; Joseph, born Dec. 19, 1760; Jehiel, born Dec. 15, 1763; Abigail, born May 16, 1766; Ruth, born Sept. 3, 1769; Zerviah, born May 24, 1774; and Jeremiah, born Feb. 24, 1776.

Jehiel Fuller, son of Joseph and Zerviah (Hill) Fuller, was born in Sharon, Connecticut, Dec. 15, 1763. In 1769, he accompanied his parents on their removal to Stockbridge, from whence he came to Pennsylvania, settling at a place now called Centermoreland, where he died. He married Hannah Hill, who after his death went with her children to Illinois, dying at Elmira, that state, about six years later. Their children were: Chauncey Day, born June 20, 1799; Arin; Ambrose; Harry; Jehiel; Malinda; and Hannah.

Chauncey D. Fuller, the grandfather of James W. Fuller, during his later years made his home in Lehigh county and for a number of years served as justice of the peace. His death occurred Oct. 5, 1870. His wife Sara (Abbott) Fuller, bore him the following children: James W., Orlando, Charles D., George W., and Abbott.

James W. Fuller, father of James W. Fuller, 2d, was born at Forty Fort, Pennsylvania, Aug. 22, 1821, and died at Catasauqua, Nov. 22, 1872. He married Clarissa Miller, who was born in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Henry Miller, who was of German descent. Their children were: James W., Orange M., Clarissa C., Abbott F., and Clinton. During the Civil War, he became prominently identified with the political and military affairs of Pennsylvania, and was so recognized by Andrew G. Curtin, governor of the Commonwealth.

JAMES W. FULLER, 2D.

James W. Fuller, 2d, was born March 16, 1843. He attended the public schools of town and private schools at Weaversville, Norristown and Kingston, Pa. At the age of eighteen he enlisted in the Union Army as a member of Company F, 47th Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry, under the command of Captain Henry S. Harte. He was promoted to sergeant Aug. 30, 1861. On October 30th of the same year he was elevated to the rank as adjutant. After a protracted illness which overtook him during the first winter of the Civil War in Virginia, he was honorably discharged from the army and returned to his home.

In 1867 he organized the firm of McKee, Fuller & Company, proprietors of the Car Wheel & Axle Works. Beginnings of the plant had been made during the year preceding by Charles D. Fuller, an uncle, and William R. Thomas. The capacity of the shop at this time was fifteen car wheels per day. The new firm at once commenced to enlarge the plant. They bought the defunct concern of Frederick & Company, built a forge and added an axle department. Since then the firm was known as the Lehigh Car, Wheel & Axle Works, and developed an enterprise of much benefit to the business prosperity of the community.

The town of Fullerton was laid out by Mr. Fuller in 1870, and was named in his honor. So devoted was he to his charge that he made his daily trips to the works, personally superintended the mixing of irons for the casting of the wheels, and made the rounds among his men in whose individual welfare he was vitally concerned. His advice was sought in many spheres and his opinions were valued. He was president of the Catasauqua Manufacturing Company, a director in the Thomas Iron Company, the Wahnetah Silk Company, and the Ironton Railroad. At the time of his death he was vice-president of the Empire Steel and Iron Company and a director in the Lehigh Foundry Company. He had a wide acquaintance and large personal influence with prominent men in the Commonwealth. He inherited from his father personal magnetism and an alert mind, grasping a subject almost intuitively; had an excellent knowledge of men and had that peculiar ability in a great degree possessed by men of large affairs, in selecting men for positions of responsibility and trust, and attach them to him by strands of steel. From his mother he inherited a wiry constitution, love of

He was married in 1864 to Miss Kate M., daughter of Hopkin and Catharine Thomas. Five children came to grace their happy home: George Llewellyn, who died at the age of twenty-one; Maud, the wife of J. S. Elverson; Blanche, married to Dr. L. A. Salade; Mary Louise, married to H. D. McCaskey; and Lieut. Colonel James W. Fuller, 3d. He died Jan. 15, 1910, at the age of sixty-seven years, and is buried in Fairview cemetery.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JAMES W. FULLER, JR.

The subject of this sketch is the son of the late James W. Fuller, of Catasauqua, prominently identified with several industries in the Lehigh Valley. Colonel Fuller is the third of this name, and is the grandson of James W. Fuller, prominent in Pennsylvania state affairs during the Civil War. By inheritance, Col. Fuller is qualified for membership in the Loyal Legion.

Colonel Fuller was born in Catasauqua forty-one years ago; received his early education in the schools there, and then prepared for college at the old Haverford Grammar School, Haverford, Pa., prior to entering Haverford College. He left, however, the latter to assist his father in the Lehigh Car, Wheel & Axle Works, and served his apprenticeship throughout the practical departments of these works.

Some fifteen years ago, he was made general manager of the company, and served in this capacity until the death of his father in January, 1910, when he was made president of the company.

Colonel Fuller is president and director of the Lehigh Car, Wheel & Axle Works, vice-president, general manager and director of the Allentown Portland Cement Company, president and director of the Fuller Engineering Company, president and director of the Lehigh Foundry Company, director of the Empire Steel & Iron Company, Crane Iron Works and the Railway Steel Spring Company.

The grandfather of Colonel Fuller, James W. Fuller, first of this name, was a close friend of Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, and served as a private in a company recruited by him at Catasauqua, Pa., and mustered into service with the three month men prior to the battle of Gettysburg.

Another member of the family participated through the Civil War, namely, George W. Fuller. He served as lieutenant, his company being sworn in on Sept. 19, 1861. George W. Fuller died later at Dry Tortugas from injury sustained during the war. Lieutenant George W.

Fuller was a brother of James W. Fuller, first of this name, and a great uncle of Colonel Fuller.

The father of Colonel Fuller, namely, James W. Fuller, the second of this name, enlisted as a private in the Forty-seventh Pennsylvania Infantry in 1861, and was later promoted for meritorious conduct to sergeant, and a short time later was made adjutant of the regiment.

The George W. Fuller Grand Army Post is name in honor of Lieutenant George W. Fuller, above referred to, and James W. Fuller, father of Colonel Fuller, was commander of this post at the time of his death in January, 1910.

CLINTON H. FULLER.

Clinton H. Fuller, late a prominent citizen of Allentown, was born at Catasauqua, July 24, 1858, son of the late James W. Fuller, First. The subject was educated in the schools at Catasauqua, and in 1871 and 1872 he attended Muhlenberg College, at Allentown. Sometime after the completion of his education, Mr. Fuller became the proprietor of the Globe Metal Works, and the sole manufacturer of Globe bronze and the Viola and Crane Anti-Frictions Metal. In 1883 he established yards at Fullerton, erected three large buildings and engaged in the scrap iron business, buying second hand boilers and engines. In 1889 he disposed of his Fullerton plant and with his brother, Abbott, he established a successful furnace at Catasauqua. The five furnaces he operated by electric motors. In the following year he purchased his brother's interest in the works and conducted a profitable business until in 1900, when fire destroyed his entire plant. It was then that he organized the Fuller Oil and Supply Company, in Catasauqua, which proved to be a most successful enterprise under the able direction and management of Mr. Fuller. He continued to conduct this business up to the time of his death on June 19, 1909, which occurred at his fine colonial residence, at the northwest corner of Eighteenth and Turner streets, Allentown. He is buried on the Fuller plot at Catasauqua.

His widow continued the oil business in a successful manner until 1912, when she sold it to the present owner; and she continues to occupy the Fuller mansion, at Allentown, which they erected in 1904. Mr. Fuller did much to develop the West End of Allentown, which is the residential section of the city.

He was prominently identified in Masonic circles, and had membership in Porter Lodge, No. 284, F. & A. M., of Catasauqua; Catasauqua Chapter; Allen Commandery, No. 20, Knights Templar, of Allentown; Philadelphia Consistory, 320; Lulu Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.,

On Nov. 5, 1893, he was united in marriage to Miss Emma B. Bortz, daughter of David and Mary (Fegley) Bortz, of Shamrock, Pa., and granddaughter of Jacob Bortz and his wife, Susan Hiestand. Mrs. Fuller, was married, second, on Nov. 29, 1913, to Mr. Leonard G. Sefing, whose history appears elsewhere in this volume.

Peter Gable (Gabel) from Germany, came to Pennsylvania in 1702 and settled in Bucks county. His wife, Christiana, bore a number of children, one of whom was Peter. In 1836 he emigrated to the United States, and three years later established a woolen mill at Macungie, Lehigh county, Pa., where he introduced the Jacquard Loom, weaving figured goods, coverlets, quilts, flannels, etc., for the farmers of the neighborhood who supplied the wool. This mill is said to be the "great-grandfather" of all the similar industries located in this section of the state. In 1850 it was removed to Allentown, Pa., and was known as the Allentown Woolen Mill. Here the equipment was the finest procurable and the business was successfully conducted until August, 1873, when the plant was burned to the ground. Mr. Gabriel soon erected new buildings and installed new machinery, being better equipped than formerly for the successful conduct of business. At the Centennial Celebration in 1876 in Philadelphia, Pa., his goods were awarded first premium and a medal. During the early years of his manhood Mr. Gabriel cast his vote for the candidates of the Democratic party, but later became more independent in his political policies. He was at one time second lieutenant of Millerstown, now Macungie Washington Guards, a volunteer company attached to the One Hundred and Fifth Rifle Regiment of Militia. George, and John, and the business was then conducted under the style of Henry Gabriel and Sons, which continued until the death of the father in 1887. Milton S. Gabriel had charge of the retail department until his father's death, when he assumed full charge of the entire business. In 1890 George and John Gabriel withdrew, and H. W. Goundie, brother-in-law of Milton S. Gabriel, came into the firm, and the business was then conducted under the style of Henry Gabriel's Sons until 1902, when Milton S. The old firm was the pioneer in the United States in the manufacture of seamless stockings, which found a universal sale throughout the various states of the Union. The plant is finely equipped and the ground on which the mill stands was originally the property of the Allen family, for whom the town was named. It passed from them to a Mr. Frey, then to a Mr. Fink, from whom it was purchased by Henry Gabriel, father of Milton S. Gabriel. It has one of the two water powers on the Little Lehigh in the city of Allentown.

Milton S. Among the pioneer families of Weisenberg township were the Gackenbachs. The record of Ziegel Church situated in that district records that John Gackenbach was a Lutheran elder in the year 1750. Doubtless he was the same John Heinrich Gackenbach who emigrated to America on the ship "St. Andrew," which qualified (landed) at Philadelphia Oct. 7, 1743. Among the list of taxables in 1762 of Weisenberg are the names of John and Henry Gackenbach who paid federal tax of 10 and 12 pounds respectively. GANGEWERE FAMILY.

Jacob Gangewere emigrated from Germany to America on the ship "James Goodwill," which landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 27, 1727. The name has been variously spelled as Gangwehr, Gangwer, Gangawer, Gangewer, Gangaware, and Gongaware. The name of Jacob Gangwehr appears in the list of persons who qualified, thus evidencing that he was of the Reformed faith. He is said to have been a soldier before leaving Bavaria. After his arrival in Philadelphia he acquired title to a tract of several hundred acres of land situated in what was then Northampton county, now Upper Saucon township, Lehigh county. The original dwelling house was a log cabin, but later a stone house was erected, and this is still standing, a cut of which is herewith produced. The ancestor followed the occupation of farming. He was a man of unusual vitality, being fifty years of age when he arrived here in 1727, and died in 1779 at the age of one hundred and two years. The change in the form of the name is shown by the fact that he signed his name to a petition of the German immigrants in Bucks county in 1734 as Jacob Gangwer, and among the list of communicants at the Blue church in Upper Saucon in May, 1750, we find Jacob Gangewehr and son, Christopher. The name of his wife is not on record, and the names of his children may not be given in correct order, as dates of birth are not recorded. As nearly as may be ascertained they are Michael, of further mention; Andreas (or Andrew), of further mention; Christopher, of further mention; Jacob; Matthaus, of further mention; John George; Henry, although it is not quite certain whether he was a son of this Jacob or another immigrant of a similar name, of further mention; and several other children.

Michael, son of Jacob Gangwehr, was born in 1730, and died Oct. 26, 1826. He removed to Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, where his descendants still live. He married Catharine, and had children: John and Philip.

Andreas or Andrew, son of Jacob Gangwehr, was born in Upper Saucon, Sept. 15, 1747, died July 10, 1844, and was buried in the cemetery at the corner of Tenth and Linden streets, Allentown. He was a tailor by trade. He served in the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812, and drew pension. In his letter of application for pension, dated February, 1833, he states that he resided with his children at Easton, Pennsylvania, for ten years prior to that date, and gives the following history of his services: In July, 1776, he enlisted in the "Flying Camp," under Captain Henry Hagenbuch, Colonel Käckline commanding, going to South Amboy, New Jersey, while the British were occupying Staten Island. After returning from a visit to New York City and Fort Washington, he met his company on its way to Long Island, and obtained permission to return home. From January, 1777, he served two months as first lieutenant in Captain Francis Roth's Company, Majors Balliet and Young having the commands, marched to Farmers' Mills, now "Pennypacker's Mills," twelve miles north of Philadelphia, thence to Washington's headquarters at Morristown, New Jersey. In May, 1777, he was sent by Commissary Brittan, with Jasper Weaver and Jacob Gangewer, to South Carolina, to buy a drove of cattle. In October, 1777, he marched as lieutenant with Captain Mority, under Colonel Siegfried, to Flourtown and Farmers' Mills, remaining there about two months. In 1778 he was ordered by Captain Geiger to collect a guard to convey a number of Tories to Reading for trial, after which he was sent by Quartermaster Destoly to Valley Forge with articles for the use of the army, and soon after, in 1778, he was ordered by Colonel Hooper to convey money from Reading to Easton. In the latter part of July, 1782, he was ordered out as lieutenant under Colonel John Jones, and Colonel Hebner, and marched in an expedition against the Indians beyond the Blue mountains in Northampton county, and was stationed at Brinkers, a place between the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers. He married Mary Montaigne, and had children: Solomon, of further mention; Anthony; George; Abraham; Jacob.

Solomon, son of Andreas or Andrew and Mary (Montaigne) Gangewere, was born in 1779 and died in 1857. He was for many years engaged in the lumber and hotel business in Allentown, Pennsylvania. He married (first) Sarah, born in 1784, died in 1821, a daughter of Henry Gangewere; (second) Mary, a sister of his first wife. By the first marriage he had: Catharine, of further mention; Sarah, who married W. S. Young, and had a son, W. S. Young, Jr., now living in Chicago. By his second marriage he had: Charles, who never married; Matilda, who married Mifflin Hannum, and had a daughter, Mary C., who married Professor E. D. Shimer, of New York City.

Catharine, daughter of Solomon and Sarah (Gangewere) Gangewere, was born Aug. 30,

St. Clair's Second Penna. Battalion, as a fifer. The company saw service in Canada and was mustered out Nov. 25, 1776. He subsequently served two enlistments in other companies. He died March 2, 1852, aged 95 years, and is buried at Egypt. He married Christina, daughter of Valentine Clader. She was born in 1750 and died Oct. 16, 1828. WILLIAM H. GANGEWERE, son of Abraham and Susan (Schwenk) Gangewere, was born in Allentown, Oct. 10, 1858. He acquired his education in the public schools, supplemented by a course of instruction in Blackman's Business College, and at the age of sixteen years entered his father's employ and learned the trade of carpenter. Upon becoming of age, in 1879, he was admitted into partnership and the firm became Abraham Gangewere & Son. They did an extensive business in Allentown and vicinity, erecting dwellings, churches and business buildings. Among the principal buildings erected by them were the Y. M. C. A. building, Young building, American Steel and Wire Company buildings, Presbyterian church, and remodelling the German Catholic church and St. John's Lutheran church in 1888. Since the death of his father, Mr. Gangewere has conducted business under his own name. He built the Young and Ramsey residences and over twelve hundred other homes in the city, as well as many in the surrounding counties. His office is in the Allentown National Bank building. He has for many years been prominently identified with the affairs of the city, having been a councilman and a member of the water board. In politics, he is an active Republican, and stands high in the councils of the party. He is a director of the Allentown National Bank, a trustee of the Phœbe Deaconess Home, a member of Salem Reformed church, and a member of Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M.; Allen R. A. Mr. Gangewere married, in 1890, Mary Craig, daughter of William Craig. She was born in 1857 and died in 1912. Her mother died when she was but five years of age, after which she was reared by her grandfather, Jacob Geisinger. She was an active member of Zion Reformed church and possessed a kind disposition, which induced her to perform many acts of charity. They had one daughter, Irene, who resides with her father.

Christopher, son of Jacob Gangewere, is recorded as being a communicant member of the Blue church, Upper Saucon, in 1750. Sept. 23, 1778, there were appointed as administrators of his estate, Michael and Catherine Gangewere, he being mentioned as late of Salisbury township, this proving that he possessed property at the time of his death. He had children: Elizabeth, over fourteen, chose Michael Heller as her guardian; Sevilla, Daniel and David, being under fourteen years of age, had Philip Bahl appointed by the court as their guardian.

Daniel Gangewere, son of Christopher, was born in 1767 and died in 1856. He was a farmer in Hanover township, where he owned a 68-acre farm near the bend in the Lehigh river. His wife, Barbara, was born in 1773 and died in

Some of his descendants are located around Weatherly, Pennsylvania, among them being Samuel Gangewere, of that town, who is advanced in years.

Henry, in all probability a son of Jacob Gangewere, was born June 7, 1765, and died Nov. 2, 1849, and was buried in the burial ground adjoining the Friedensville church in Upper Saucon. He was a farmer on the old Gangewere homestead, which was divided during his lifetime, two of his sons, Solomon and John, each receiving a portion on which they built homes. Upon the part retained by Henry Gangewere and that of Solomon, iron ore beds were discovered, which were worked for many years by the Thomas Iron Company and the Bethlehem Iron Company. For the last ten years the Bingen Brick Company has been engaged in manufacturing brick from the dirt that had been washed from the ore. A part of the tract taken by John Gangewere has been cut up into building plots, and the village of Spring Valley (Saucona) has arisen. Numerous large and never-failing springs are located there. Henry Gangewere married Elizabeth Kale, born May 2, 1770, died May 27, 1826. Children: Jacob, of further mention; Tobias, born Aug. 16, 1794, died Jan. 11, 1848; Solomon, of further mention; John, of further mention; Philip, born Oct. 6, 1806, died March 18, 1881; David, born July 16, 1808, died Dec. 31, 1841; Samuel, born in 1810; Elizabeth, born Aug. 24, 1812, died March 11, 1839; Joseph; Catherine; Daniel.

GEHMAN FAMILY.

We know that two centuries ago Gehman families lived in the Palatinate on the Rhine, and that even now citizens of that name live in Germany and Switzerland. The first Gehmans who came to America were Christian, Benedict, and a brother. They landed at Philadelphia Aug. 11, 1732, coming to this country to obtain civil and religious liberty. They were Mennonites.

Christopher Gehman settled in Hereford township, Berks county, before 1737, and owned 300 acres of land, which tract has since been divided into three farms, all owned by descendants. In 1759 Christopher Gehman paid a federal tax of ten pounds in Hereford township.

It seems that the Gehman who located in Brecknock township (now in Berks county), was Christian Gehman. His name appears in the tax list of 1759. The same abbreviation ("Christ") was often used for Christian and Christopher; hence there has been some difficulty in determining their identity. The name Gehman, is variously spelled: Geman, Geeman, Geyman, and Gayman.

Christopher ("Christ") Gehman of Hereford township had three sons and several daughters.

Abraham Gehman, the oldest son of Christopher Gehman, owned a farm near Telford, Bucks county, occupied later by Rev. Abel Horning.

Rev. Johannes Gehman, second son of Christopher, was a Mennonite preacher. In 1767 he bought a tract of land in Hereford from Andrew Maurer. This tract later included the farms of Jacob Greiss, John B. Gehman, Jacob Gehman, and eighty-six acres of Joel M. Gehman's farm. Rev. Johannes Gehman married Anna Stauffer of Colebrookdale township. She died young. Both are buried in the Old Mennonite Cemetery, at Zionsville, Lehigh county. Their children were: David, who for many years was a merchant of Hosensack; Lydia, m. to Samuel Weinberger; Elizabeth, m. to Jacob Stauffer; Heinrich; and Johannes.

Heinrich Gehman, son of Rev. Johannes Gehman, was born in Hereford township. He was a farmer, owning an eighty-six acre tract on which his father had built a large barn in 1824. Near the present farm-house still stands a very old, small home. Heinrich Gehman married Elizabeth Bechtel. They were Mennonites and are buried in the Upper Milford cemetery of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ. Their children were Lydia, m. to Isaac Oberholtzer; John B.; Susan, m. first to Joseph Kriebel, then to Rev. Lewis Taylor; Elizabeth, m. to Rev. Joseph L. Romig; Bevy, who died small; and Catharine, m. to Abraham Musselman.

John B. Gehman, son of Heinrich, was born on his father's farm, Dec. 18, 1829, and died July 4, 1901. He was a farmer all his life except six years, during which he and his cousin, Solomon Gehman, conducted Kriebel's Mill in Hereford. He married Mary Oberholtzer in 1861. Their children are: Alvin O., a hardware merchant at Coopersburg; Charles J., a plumber of Allentown; Henry A., a carpenter, living in Allentown, m. to Rosa Wendling; Anna, who died in her second year John O., of Pennsburg; Katie, m. to Francis Hoffman, of Reading; and Franklin B., a farmer, living on the old homestead with his aged mother. The father (John B. Gehman) is buried in the Upper Milford Cemetery of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ. About 1870, shortly after he became the owner of the old homestead, valuable iron ore was discovered on the farm, and the Gehman mines, with the adjoining Bittenbender mines, near Seisholtzville, were famous for twenty years. Thousands and thousands of tons of good ore were mined, making the owners rich while they slept. For some time the ore of both mines was shipped to Red Lion on an elevated ropeway with trolleys, the filled suspended buckets going down the line on one side and the empty buckets coming up the other. This way of shipping was however, not a perfect success. It was discontinued and a railroad built, the terminus being near John B. Gehman's home, the stopping place being called Gehman's. After the mining ceased the railroad was not used much and was finally abandoned.

The most prominent of the Gehmans in Lehigh county is Rev. William Gehman, living near Vera Cruz. He is the founder of the church of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ (see history of this church). He is very old but still very well preserved for his age. His wife, Nancy, nee Musselman, died many years ago. They lived almost their whole life time on the farm where Rev. Gehman is still occupying one of the homes. They had a large family: Menno, who was killed a few years ago on a railroad crossing near Emaus; Amanda, wife of Rev. George Lambert, of Elkhart, Ind.; Henry, of Allentown, a local preacher; Sarah, deceased, who was married to Aaron Hassler; Mary, m. to David Taylor; Francis, a farmer; Hannah, m. to Horace Heist; Allen, a farmer; and William, a preacher and presiding elder in the church of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ.

Another very prominent Gehman is William M. Gehman, who for many years has been a feed, coal, and farm-implement dealer at Centerville, near Macungie. He has been one of the leading lay-members in the old Mennonite church for many years, and also the president of the Gehman family reunion since its organization. The only son, William, Jr., is a banker, in Philadelphia; one daughter is married to Rev. Wagner; another daughter, Elizabeth, was married to Rev. George Walbert, deceased; the youngest daughter is married to a native of Germany, Prof. Augstein, where they have resided for years. She has sung on many of the stages of Europe. The mother of these children was a music teacher and Mrs. Walbert and her daughter pursue this work. A few years ago both Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Gehman visited their daughter in Germany, and met native Gehman families, both in Germany and Switzerland. Other members of this well-known Lehigh county family have taken trips abroad.

GEORGE FAMILY.

The George's of Lowhill township, this county, and those of Greenwich township, Berks county were relatives. Jost Heinrich George, born about 1707, at Breidscheidt, near Herborn in Herzogthum, Nassau, Germany, was the father of Johann Heinrich George the ancestor of the Berks county family and of Heinrich George (who received his princely inheritance and lived at Harrisburg in a palatial residence, being the father of an only son), by tradition.

Yost George and George George were heads of families and property owners in Lowhill township in 1762. They paid a tax in that year of 6 and 5 pounds respectively. John George was assessed a single man in that year and doubtless was the son of one of the above named. In 1781, the tax list records Jost, George, John, Simon and Lawrence George, as residents of Lowhill. The federal census of 1790 records the following heads of families in Lowhill: Elizabeth George (2 sons, 8 females); Henry George (3 males, 2 females); Lawrence George (3 males, 4 females); George George (3 males over 16 years, and 4 females); George George, Jr., (had a wife and one daughter); Simon George (had 2 sons over 16 and 2 under 16 years of age and 4 females). Branches of the Lowhill descendants follow:

John and Elizabeth George lived in Lowhill upon a farm. They were members of the Reformed congregation of Lowhill Church. Among their children were:

He then became a bar clerk at the "Catasauqua House," at Catasauqua, Pa., of which he became proprietor in 1904. In 1907 he became proprietor of the present hotel at Breiningsville, continuing for three years. He then lived retired, at Allentown until April 1, 1912, when he became owner of the Golden Eagle Hotel, to which he made many improvements. This hotel was built in 1800, by Mr. Breinig, and it is a land mark of the township.

He holds membership in the following named orders: I. O. O. F.; B. P. O. E. Moose; and F. O. E. of Allentown. He married in Oct. 1903, Edna L. Scharadin, daughter of Henry A. and Louisa (Gernerd) Scharadin, of Allentown. Issue: Wesley S. George.

He was married to Rosina Werley (who died in 1857, aged 63 years). They had ten children, four sons, Peter, John, Jonas and Phaon, and six daughters.

Peter George, son of Peter, was born on the homestead of 100 acres in 1826, and besides farming the plantation he carried on the distilling here (as the successor of his father) for twenty years, from 1865 to 1885. He lived in retirement on the place for a number of years until his decease June 3, 1913, at the advanced age of 87 years. He was prominently identified with the Lowhill church which he served as deacon, elder and trustee. He married Julia Greenawald, daughter of Daniel of Weissenberg township, and they had five children: Sarah (m. Wilson Peter), Alice (m. E. A. Wilt), Frank, Menno (m. Sarah A. George, farmer of Lowhill, was born on the homestead in the township near Bittner Corner, June 17, 1860, where he was reared and educated until he became eighteen years old. Then he learned milling under E. A. Wilt at Cedarville near Dorney's Park and continued there three years. He was afterward engaged in baking and milling for several years when he formed a partnership with his brother, Menno, and carried on the distilling business on the homestead as successors of their father until 1900 when the enterprise (which had been operated there for many years) was discontinued. In 1885 he purchased the property of 50 acres where he now resides, a short distance south of Bittner's Corner, and he has been engaged in farming until now, having given his attention from 1885 to 1900 to the distillery. He has served as a school director of the township, and is now filling the position of road-master in the upper district. He also served as a deacon and trustee of Lowhill church, and is now acting as an elder. In politics he is a Republican and as such frequently represents the district as a delegate to a county convention.

In 1878 Mr. George was married to Elvena Everett, of Lynn township, and they have four

He was married Dec. 8, 1795, to Catharine Shoemaker (daughter of Paul, and grand-daughter of Jacob, who emigrated from Germany in 1745); and they had seven children: Peter (m. Rosina Werley); John (who is next described in this sketch), Catharine (m. John Shoemaker); Mollie (m. Nicholas Houseman); Elizabeth (m. Joseph Bachman); Lydia (m. Jonathan Zimmerman). Catherine was born October 6, 1777, and died Dec. 3, 1871. The record of William's decease could not be ascertained. It is probable that he was a grandson of Heinrich George and a son of John George who were identified with the organization of Weissenberg church in 1747, and afterward with that of Lowhill church in 1769.

John George, second son of William, was born Jan. 26, 1804, in Lowhill on the homestead and was brought up there on the farm. He moved to Weissenberg and came to possess two farms, one of 102 acres, which he sold in 1870 to his son-in-law, Franklin Clauss (now the property of Oliver P. Fisher), and the other of 173 which he sold in 1877 to his son, John. He died July, 4, 1886, and was buried at Lowhill church. He was married to Maria (Polly) Werley, daughter of Andreas (see Werley Family). She was born Jan. 8, 1809, died July 7, 1878, and was also buried at Lowhill Church. They had eight children: William (m. 1st Lydia Werley, 2nd Mary Ann Kern), John, Caroline (m. Frank Clauss), Fianna (m. Jeremiah Klotz), Penrose (m. Anna Seibert), Benneville (m. Helena Seibert), Amanda (m. Seir Smith), and Aaron (m. Maggie ———).

John George, Jr., second son of John and Maria George, was born in Weissenberg, Dec. 9, 1829, and carried on his farm of 173 acres from 1862 until his decease April 24, 1907, when it descended to his two sons. In 1861 he was married to Sallie Klotz, daughter of Joel, farmer of Lowhill, and they had two sons, James F. and Oliver J. Since his decease the widow has continued her residence in the old home, with the elder son, James.

James F. George, farmer of Weissenberg, was born Jan. 18, 1862 on the place where he now resides, and where he was brought up and educated in the township school. He assisted his father in carrying on the plantation until 1907, when, by the decease of his father, he and his brother became the joint owners, and since then they together have successfully conducted the farming operations. In 1900 he filled the position of enumerator of the township in supplying the particulars for the U. S. census.

He was married to Sarah Frey, daughter of Peter, of Lowhill.

Oliver J. George, farmer of Weissenberg, was born Dec. 12, 1869, also on the place and there brought up and educated in the township school, and like his brother James assisted his father until 1907 when he became a joint owner of the premises by the decease of his father, and since then he and his brother have cultivated the farm successfully, excepting three years when he carried on the farm of his father-in-law, Jonas Rex. He married Ellenora Rex, daughter of Jonas, and brother of Thaddeus Rex (whose sketch and ancestry appear under separate head). They have five children: Romas S. (graduated from township school in 1909, and given school as teacher in South Whitehall for 1913-14), Helen M. J., Ralph, Paul J., and Robert J.

He was put to work at the iron ore mines when ten years old and he worked at different occupations until 1891. During that time he learned to run a stationary engine and he filled positions in this employment at various mines until 1899. Then he moved to Allentown and was engineer at B. F. With this experience he secured the position of chief engineer and assistant manager at the plant of the Merchants Ice Company, with fourteen men under his charge.

GILDNER FAMILY.

The first American settler of this branch of the Gildner family was John Francis Gildner or Frantz Gildner, who emigrated from Rotterdam some time in 1738 on the ship Glasgow and landed in Philadelphia on September 9th, 1738. We know nothing of his ancestors or at what age he emigrated. The Pennsylvania Archives however show that at the age of 22 years one Frans Giltner took his oath of allegiance.

According to tradition John Francis Giltner married Catharine, or Kate Weber and that they resided in the township of Heidelberg, Northampton county, now Lehigh county. This is substantiated by 2 land warrants to Francis Gildner, the one under date of November 28, 1743, for 97 acres and a second warrant on November 21, 1766, for 109 acres. We have no record or evidence to show us when John Francis Gildner or his wife Catharine died.

There was born to John Francis Gildner or Giltner and Catharine or Kate his wife ten children, as the fruit of their marriage, namely: Bernard, Jacob, Tobias, Andrew, Francis, John George, or John Christian, Catharine, Magdalena, Margaret and another daughter who died in youth.

Andrew Gildner or Giltner, one of the sons of John Francis, also lived in Heidelberg township, on the farm owned at this writing by Charles Miller. He died some time between 1840 to 1850 and is buried in the old Heidelberg Church cemetery. He was a Lutheran in his religious faith, and a farmer by trade. With his wife, Christiana, nee Dengler, he had the following children, namely: 5 daughters, Sarah, intermarried to John Haring and after his death to John Ebert; Leah, married to one Xander; Polly, married to Jesse Schuck; Dianah, married to one Hilbert; Catharine, married to Daniel Wert, and three sons, Andrew, Jr., Peter and Stephen.

Peter Gildner the second son of Andrew, Sr., was born on Feb. 21, 1803, and died on May 25, 1856. He lived and died in Lynn township, Lehigh county, and is buried in the old New Tripoli cemetery. In his early manhood he was a shoemaker by trade but later in life a weaver of woolen and flaxen goods. He owned a small tract of land in Lynn township. In religion he was a Lutheran. He was married twice. The first time to Katie Werley on Oct. 25, 1820. With this union there were five daughters, namely: Brigitta intermarried with John A. Reitz, Catharine intermarried with Samuel Loch, Polly intermarried with Manasses Stoudt, Rebecca intermarried with Henry Allspach and Lydia intermarried with Jacob Stengley. Polly and Rebecca were twin sisters. There were also born to the first marriage four sons, namely, Jonas, John, Elias and Gideon.

On August 27, 1843, Peter Gildner married Katie Straub his second wife. This marriage resulted in the following issue, namely: Fianna, Mary married to Daniel D. Wertman, Matilda married to Lewis F. Wertman, Madina married to James Billig, Owen, David and Nathan both of whom died at the age of 6 months.

Jonas Gildner, first son of Peter Gildner was born Sept. 2, 1828, in Lynn township, 3 miles southwest of New Tripoli, on the farm now owned by Amandus Weaver. At the age of 16 Jonas learned the shoemaker's trade which trade he followed until 1872. In his time he made many new shoes and boots and taught many in the trade. He at the same time conducted his farm and huckstered to the towns of Tamaqua and Summit Hill for 20 years. In 1896 Jonas moved to New Tripoli where he now resides and is still following his boyhood trade as a cobbler at the age of 84 years. He has been a member of Ebenezer Lutheran Church of New Tripoli since confirmation and served as a member of the church council for 4 years. In politics he has been a Republican since the organization of the party and always took an active interest in politics. In 1860 when Lincoln was elected president he served as one of the election officers. The ballots were printed in German.

He was married in 1849 to Mary Ann Krassley, daughter of Peter Krassley. His wife died in September, 1895. The issue of their marriage are the following: Jonas, Elias K., James, Sarah A., Emma, Rosa and Mary A.

ELIAS K. GILDNER, a son of Jonas Gildner, was born Oct. 31, 1851, in Lynn township, Lehigh county, three miles southwest of New Tripoli. He was educated in the public school of Lynn township and during his boyhood days worked at the trade of shoemaking before and after school. This trade he followed as a livelihood from the time he left his home, at the age of twenty one years, until 1890. As a shoemaker he established himself in the village of New Tripoli with a few dollars in cash and one half side of sole leather. This trade afforded him a little more than a living and by saving was able to purchase a lot in the village in 1873 on which he erected a work shop. The following year he built the house which forms the main portion of the property he presently occupies as a home, a shoe store, a job printery and a barber shop.

In March, 1874, he was married to Mary Louisa, nee Snyder, a daughter of Jonas F. and Maria Snyder of near the village of New Tripoli. Five children were born to them, namely, two sons, Francis J. and Charles H., and three daughters, Ella J., wife of Clinton E. Leiby; Laura A., wife of Fred S. Sittler and Edna M., all of whom are living.

On January 25, 1882, Elias K. Gildner received the appointment as postmaster of New Tripoli and served in that office until October 30, 1885. This appointment came to him in recognition of his interest in Republican politics.

He has always been musically inclined, and in July, 1872, became a member of the Lynnville Brass Band which in its day was considered a good band, and remained a member thereof until 1879 when the organization disbanded. In 1880 he assisted in the organization of the New Tripoli Cornet Band and was its conductor for fifteen years. He was thus an active band man for 32 years.

In May, 1878, Mr. Gildner started his career as a shoe merchant with a stock of $300. This stock has since been increased to such an extent that to-day he has a stock such as one seldom sees in a country village of the size of New Tripoli. In 1898 he took up job printing with Hon. James A. Miller and in 1908 purchased from Mr. Miller the printing outfit and is now, with the assistance of his son, Charles H., conducting in addition to his shoe store the job printing business, as well as a barber shop which is managed and operated by his son, Charles, in the enlarged quarters on the premises where in 1873 he started as a cobbler.

In fraternal organizations Mr. Gildner has taken an active part. He is a charter member of New Tripoli Grand Council No. 204 Jr. O. U. A. M., of New Tripoli, Pa., a member of Blue Mountain Lodge No. 249 I. O. O. F., of Steinsville, Pa., and a member of Jackson Castle No. 343 K. of G. E., of Jacksonville, Pa.

In his church Mr. Gildner has always taken an active interest. He has been a member of the church choir for many years and is presently a member of the board of trustees of Ebenezer Lutheran congregation in his home town of New Tripoli.

FRANCIS J. GILDNER, a son of Elias K. Gildner, was born in the village of New Tripoli, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, on October 21, 1875. He received his boyhood education in the public schools of New Tripoli. In 1895 he started to prepare for college by receiving instruction from private teachers at his home. In the spring of 1896 he entered the Ursinus Academy at Collegeville, Penna., where he completed his preparation. In the fall of 1896 he entered the Freshman class at Ursinus College and graduated from the same institution in 1900. While at college Mr. Gildner took an active interest in all college activities and in its societies. He was a member of the Zwinglian Literary Society, the College Glee Club, the College Quartette and the College Orchestra.

After his graduation from Ursinus College he registered as a law student with the Hon. Marcus C. L. Kline and Hon. Arthur G. Dewalt. In the fall of 1900 he entered the law offices of Kline and Dewalt and continued the reading of law under Mr. Kline after the dissolution of the firm of Kline & Dewalt. In July, 1904, he passed the examination of the State Board of Law Examiners for admission to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. On September 21, 1904, he was admitted to the bar of Lehigh county and opened his law office in the city of Allentown. On December 5, 1910, he was admitted to the Superior Court of Pennsylvania, and on October 7, 1912, to the bar of Northampton county.

During the years 1906, 1907 and 1908 he served as deputy prothonotary, of Lehigh county under George G. Blumer, prothonotary. Since January 1, 1909, he has given his entire time to the practice of the law in the city of Allentown. He was one of the organizers of the Penn Counties Trust Company, of Allentown and is a director of the same institution. In politics he is a Republican and in religious faith a Lutheran.

On June 5, 1905, Mr. Gildner was married to Ida Minerva Smith, daughter of Theodore S. and Ruth A. J. Smith, of his native village, New Tripoli. Mrs. Gildner was an accomplished musician, holding a diploma from the New England Conservatory of Music, at Boston, Mass., as a violin soloist, and teacher in piano, theory of music and harmony. She was blessed with the rare gift of absolute pitch. Her musical ear was so true that she was able to name as many as twelve to fifteen keys struck on a piano at the same moment. She was able to play from memory on both the violin and piano no less than two hundred selections. In 1898 she played for Eugene Ysaye the greatest living violinist, and as a remembrance he took from his violin which he used the night before to play a recital in Boston, the E string and presented it to her.

On November 26, 1906, Lorena Olivia Smith Gildner, an only child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gildner. On May 28, 1913, Mrs. Gildner died from the result of an operation.

CHARLES H. GILDNER, the youngest son of Elias K., was born at New Tripoli, Pa., Oct. 1, 1878. He was educated in the township schools and at an early age he learned the barber trade from his father. In 1906 he engaged in the barber business for himself and conducts an up-to-date tonsorial parlor, having two chairs. Mr. Gildner is also a printer, having assisted his father in the printing establishment and in the shoe store from his youth up.

He is a Lutheran member of the Ebenezer church upon which he performed much work in its erection from its foundation up to the steeple. He was first employed to carry the water for the laboring men and worked upon it for almost two years.

Socially he is a member of Council No. 204 J. O. U. A. M.

GILLESPIE FAMILY.

David Gillespie, a native of County Derry, Ireland, was born in 1832, and came to America when but sixteen years of age, locating at Catsauqua, where he secured employment with the Crane Iron Co. Later he became foreman for Morgan Emmanuel, by whom he was employed for a number of years. In 1867 he entered the mercantile business on 2nd street in Catsauqua, which he conducted until his death. He served two terms as councilman and two terms as school director in the borough of Catsauqua. He was prominently identified with Catsauqua Lodge, I. O. O. F., having filled all the various offices of the organization. He served many years as trustee and elder in the Bridge Street Presbyterian Church. His wife was Sarah Hazelett, who was born in 1832 and died in 1904. They had the following children: Mary, married J. years, after which he learned telegraphy, which he followed for 18 years in the service of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. During this time he also served as ticket agent, baggage master and yard master. During four years of the eighteen in the employment of this company he was located at Phillipsburg as train dispatcher. He was train dispatcher when the company built its third track between Greens Bridge and Canada. In 1898 he resigned to engage in the coal and grain business, which he conducted very successfully at Coplay. For eight years Mr. Gillespie was Republican committeeman of Catsauqua. He is a member of the Catsauqua Lodge, I. O. O. F. In 1889 he was married to Annie G. Lee, daughter of Armat W. Lee, of Allentown. To them the following children were born: Harold Lee, a chemist in the employ of the Atlas Cement Company; Armat L., assisting his father; Carl L.; Robert H. and Emily Hazlet, who died in May, 1912, at the age of four years.

THOMAS OLIVER GINKINGER.

Thomas Oliver Ginkinger, an aged citizen of Allentown, and a notary public for 50 years, is of German origin, his ancestor coming to America at an early date. The family have resided in Allentown for several generations.

Christian Ginkinger, born 1760, died 1828, for some years, carried the United States mail on horse-back weekly, between Allentown and Heidelberg. He married Mary C. Bischof, born 1762, died 1838, and had sons: William, James, Thomas and Samuel.

Thomas Ginkinger, son of Christian, was born in Allentown, where he learned the trade of tinsmith, then engaged in that business on his own account, dealing in stoves and other wares in that line. He was born in 1799 and died in 1851.

He married Veronica Miller, born in Germany in 1797, died in 1867. Children: Matilda (Mrs. Joseph Nonamacher); Thomas Oliver; Annie M. (Mrs. William Leh); Tilghman; Sarah and Henry, who died young.

Thomas Oliver Ginkinger, son of Thomas and Veronica (Miller) Ginkinger, was born Sept. 14, 1823, in Allentown. He attended the subscription schools and the old Allentown Academy, which was taught by a Mr Douglass, the village schoolmaster. When his school days were over, he learned the tinsmith trade with his father and later he took over his father's business, continuing it for four years, when he disposed of the same; and assumed control of the Penn Hotel, conducting it for four years. He resumed his old trade, and was in the employ of J. H. Bush and Company, upward of 5 years. He then formed a partnership with George T. Young, and they conducted a stove and tinware business for four years, when the partnership was dissolved. In 1864 he was given a commission as notary public, by Governor Curtin, and has held the commission to the present date (1913). For nearly 70 years he has resided at No. 119 North Seventh street, in a brick dwelling, which is one of the oldest in that section. He is a well-known and respected citizen. He is called "The Grand Old Man" of Allentown, is yet hale and hearty at the ripe age of 90 years, and in full possession of all his faculties. In politics he is a Republican. His life motto has been the "Golden Rule."

THOMAS O. GINKINGER.

Thomas O. Ginkinger married May 13, 1842, Elizabeth Miller, daughter of Henry Miller, of Hanover township, Lehigh county. She died in 1897, aged 76 years, and was interred in Allentown cemetery.

There were born to them 9 children: Ellen Jane, widow of George Youse; Eliza Ann (Mrs. Edward Schlauch); Henry T., residing in Allentown; Emma F., residing with her father; Wilson T., also residing in Allentown; Harvey and Edgar, deceased; Estella B., widow of Daniel Dutt, Jennie Virginia (Mrs. Joseph Shiffert).

Estella B. has sons, Floyd and Willard Dutt. She resides with her father.

GISH FAMILY.

Among the lists of early immigrants into Pennsylvania, Matthias Gisch appears as a passenger who crossed the ocean on the ship Pennsylvania-Merchant which landed at Philadelphia on Sept. 18, 1733; but on the original list his name is recorded as "Mathias Kish." And a Jacob Giss appears as a passenger one year earlier who landed at Philadelphia from the ship Pennsylvania on Sept. 11, 1732.

There is a tradition in the family that three brothers had emigrated from the Palatinate, Abraham, Jacob and Matthias. Abraham had a son named Abraham; and Jacob also had a son by the same name who was buried in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, on a farm now owned by Jacob Stern, near Reeser's Meeting house on the road leading from Manheim to Elizabethtown.

The Abraham, son of Abraham, was a blacksmith by trade; born Feb. 4, 1775, and died Feb. 24, 1855; married to Anna Eshelman, a daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Stauffer) Eshelman; and they had eight children: Jacob, John, Abraham, Barbara, Catharine, Anna, Elizabeth and Michael,

He was married to a second wife, named Barbara Meyer (a widow, who died in 1864, aged eighty-nine years) but with whom he had no children. And the Abraham, son of Jacob, was married to Elizabeth Capp and they had five children: Christianna, John Abraham, Jacob, Anna Maria (married to Henry Bestoler), and Catharine (married to S. Brendel); all of whom lived to old age.

Abraham Gish, son of the second Abraham, was born Nov. 21, 1803, in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, and moved to Northampton county in 1827 when the Lehigh canal was being constructed. He followed a mercantile business for many years in connection with operating a farm of 120 acres, which is still owned by members of his family (William H. Gish and his sister). In 1833 he was appointed a justice of the peace by the governor; and in 1853 he established the postoffice at Berlinsville where he served as postmaster for a continuous period of twenty-seven years. He was greatly interested in school matters during the transition from the parochial or pay schools to the public-school system. He was one of the organizers of the Dime Savings Bank at Slatington and he served as a director of it until it was closed; and he operated a slate quarry for a number of years. He was married to Elizabeth Hummel and they had eight children, viz: Annie (who died unmarried, Oct. 13, 1898); Maria (married Rev.

William Yost, of Cleveland, Ohio); Ellen (married Dr. H. H. Riegel); William H.; Emma L. (married D. Z. Herr, of Cleveland, Ohio); and Martha E. (married William Craig, of Blue Springs, Nebraska). He and his family were members of the Evangelical church; and he died Jan. 10, 1880.

WILLIAM H. GISH, son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Hummel) Gish, cashier of the National Bank of Slatington, was born at Berlinsville, Northampton county, on January 9, 1839. He attended the schools of his district, also the Eastern Academy and Union Seminary at New Berlin, Pa., and in 1856 he began to teach school at Berlinsville and taught there one term and two terms at Slatington; then for a number of years he filled very credibly the position of chief bookkeeper of the Carbon Iron Co. at Parryville, and also of the Lehigh Slate Co., at Slatington.

In 1866 he located at Slatington to take charge of the Dime Savings Bank and he conducted this institution for several years in a faithful manner, acquiring thereby an intimate knowledge of banking affairs which enabled him to render valuable and efficient aid as one of the organizers of the national bank at that place in 1875 and he became the first cashier of this financial institution, and since then has filled this position most creditably, its remarkable success being to a large degree attributable to his wise and conservative management which is evidenced by its growth from total resources of less than $300,000 to total resources in April 1914, of almost $1,000,000.

During this period of almost fifty years, he manifested a constant interest in everything that related to the industrial as well as the financial welfare and development of the community. In this behalf he had the earnest co-operation and support of his father-in-law, Robert McDowell, Hon. D. D. Roper and Thomas Kern, of Slatington, Dr. H. H. Riegel, of Catasauqua, Col. John H. Craig, of Lehigh Gap; Peter Gross, of Schnecksville, and V. W. Weaver, of Millers-town (now Macungie).

In politics Mr. Gish has been a staunch Republican from the inception of the party. As such he was elected treasurer of the borough and served several terms. Mr. Gish's name was oft-times mentioned in connection with important public offices, but he had no ambition for public life.

Simple and unostentatious in his tastes and pleasures he was a man who after the cares of the day, liked best to go to his own home to rest and bring cheer to those he loved. In religious matters, he has been equally zealous. He connected himself with the United Evangelical Church and served the congregation in various ways.

In 1867 he was married to Helen McDowell, a daughter of Robert and Sarah E. (Mulholland) McDowell and they lived together in affectionate companionship for nearly fifty years.

She died July 16, 1912. They had an only daughter, Elizabeth May, a graduate of the Slatington High school, and of Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa., is at home with her father.

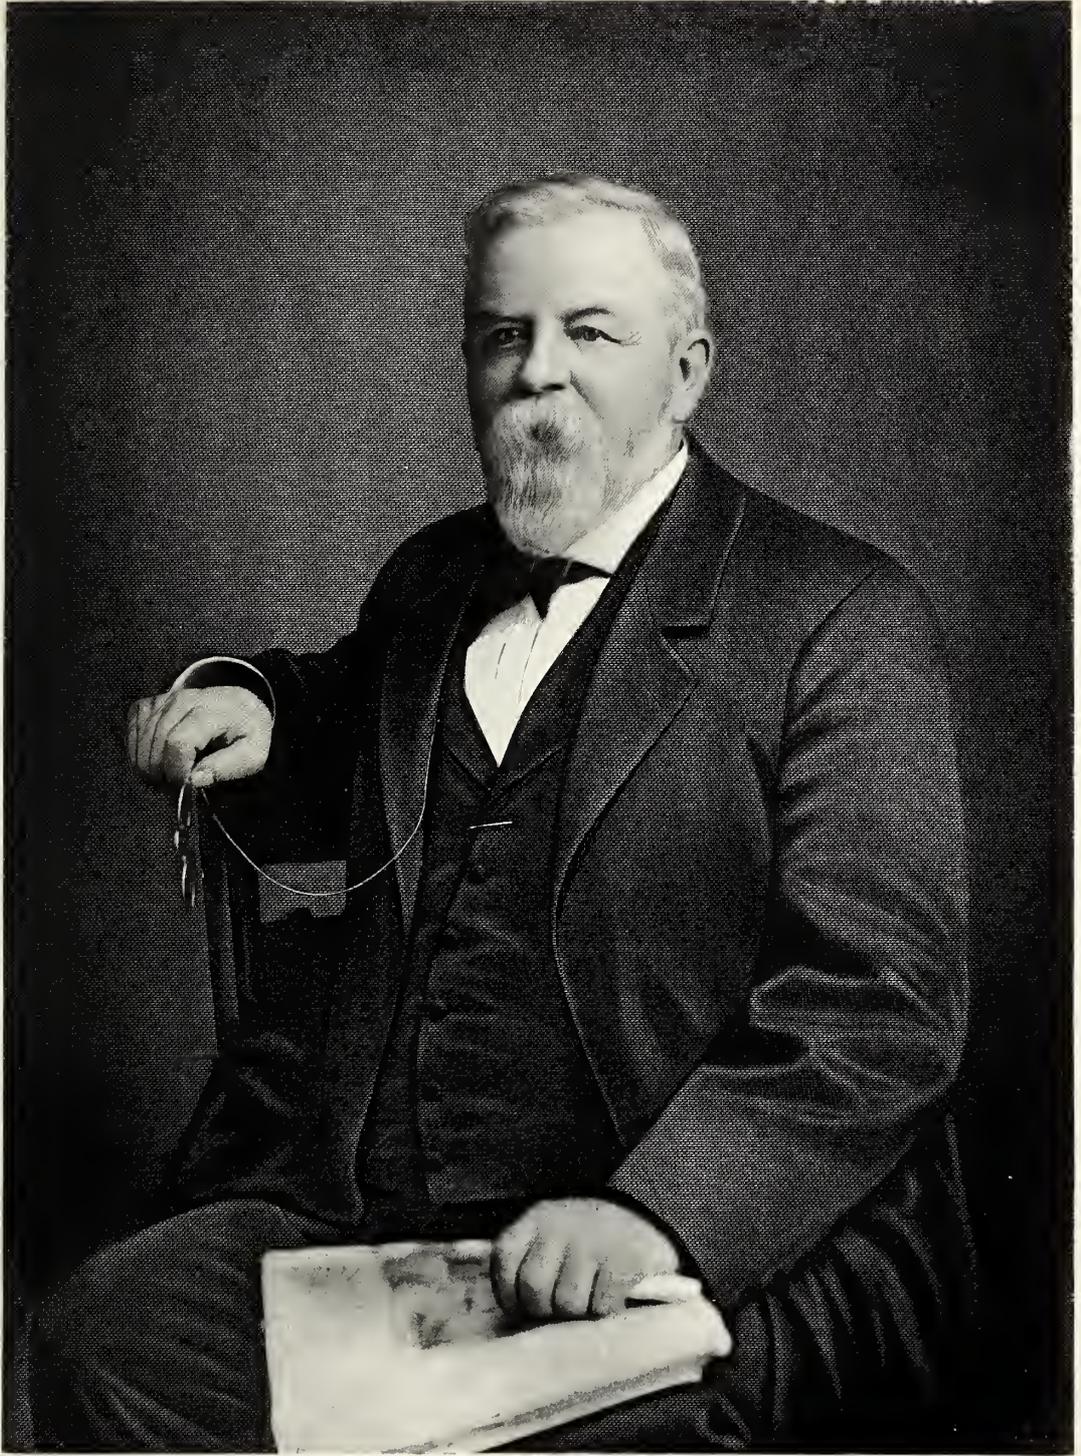

WILLIAM H. GLACE.

William H. Glace, lawyer at Catasauqua for 40 years, and a public official here for a time, was born Feb. 12, 1839, on the farm of his grandfather, John Swartz, situated along the Lehigh river, one mile north of Catasauqua, at Dry Run. He received his education in the public schools of the vicinity, and in Wyoming Seminary, at Kingston, Penna.

One year prior to the Civil War, he went to Charleston, S. C., and secured employment as entry clerk in the wholesale house of Thayer Dewing & Company. While engaged here, he saw the weekly sales of slaves in an enclosed yard adjoining Broad street, the thoroughfare of the city, and he observed the secret preparations which were made there for the "Conflict." A United States arsenal was located in this prominent place, which was being filled with munitions of war by the then Secretary of War under President Buchanan. Great numbers of open boxes with rifles were carried there and this performance at the national depository attracted much public attention.

Realizing that a conflict between the North and South was apparently imminent, Mr. Glace determined to return home while he could do so conveniently without embarrassment; and shortly afterward he enlisted as a sergeant in Co. F, 47th Penna. Vols. He continued in active service for three years, having participated with his regiment in all the battles of the Red River expedition, and also in the numerous engagements of a part of the Northern army in defending the outposts of Washington against the exciting raids by Confederates under General Early.

Upon his discharge from the military service, he became the bookkeeper and paymaster of the C. & F. R. R. Company, at Catasauqua, and he filled this position for two years. Then he studied law in the offices of John H. Oliver, Esq., at Allentown, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Lehigh county, April 13, 1868. Soon after his admission to the bar, the auditor general of Pennsylvania (General John F. Hartmanft) selected him to be the assessor of the national banks in Lehigh, Northampton, and Monroe counties, and he filled this position for two years from 1868 to 1870. During this time he had begun a preliminary practice of the law at Allentown. While there, in the fall of 1868, he was nominated for the legislature by the Republican Party, and his popularity was shown by receiving the highest vote of his party.

In the fall of 1869, he was nominated for justice of the peace at Catasauqua, and of the four candidates on the ticket he received the highest

In the practice of the law he directed his attention chiefly to the settlement of estates in Catasauqua and the surrounding township, the examination and transmission of title to real estate in these districts, and the investment of money on reliable security, in all of which he became a safe adviser and recognized authority. During the past twenty-five years, he prepared the last wills of nearly all the prominent men of the community. His practice in the respects mentioned vote. He was commissioned for five years, and at the end of his term this time was extended to the spring of 1875 by the new state constitution of 1874, and he was commissioned accordingly. He was then elected chief burgess of the borough and officiated for the year 1876. He subsequently served as auditor for six years, as borough solicitor for seven years, and as school director for three years; and he also acted as a notary public for 28 consecutive years.

became very extensive, which evidences the large volume of business transacted by him. After a continuous practice of forty years, he retired from the active duties of professional life.

While a student of law at Allentown, Mr. Glace became a member of the first post of the G. A. R. in Lehigh county, which was organized shortly after the close of the Civil War. He has been a member for many years of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

In 1870, Mr. Glace organized the Catasaqua Loan and Building Association, and notwithstanding the financial panic which extended from 1873 to 1877 and seriously affected this community, he directed its affairs in such a successful manner that it was dissolved in eleven years and all the shareholders received their money.

In 1906, Mr. Glace with other persons at Catasaqua, organized the Lehigh National Bank, which embarked in the banking business and it has since been conducted in a successful manner. He was selected as its first president and officiated two years.

Mr. Glace having been prominently identified with the history and development of the community, he published, in February, 1914, a compilation entitled "Early History and Reminiscences of Catasaqua," as an historical contribution toward the proper observance of "Old Home Week," which the citizens determined to celebrate.

In 1874, Mr. Glace was married to Mary Jennie Stark, a great grand-daughter of Aaron Stark, who fell as a sacrifice in the awful "Massacre of Wyoming," in 1778, and whose remains repose under the historic Wyoming monument.

Mr. Glace's father, Samuel Glace, was a native of Reamstown, in Lancaster county. He was born in 1805 and when two years old his parents removed to Conyngham, Luzerne county. He was educated in the English schools of the village, and when he became of age he located at Mauch Chunk, where he entered the employ of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company. Shortly afterwards he went to Lehigh Gap and was the first person to manufacture hydraulic cement in the Lehigh Valley, a special paper on this subject having been prepared by his son (the subject of this sketch) for the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. In 1830, he took up his residence at Biery's Port, upon receiving the appointment of division superintendent of the canal from the "Slate Dam" at Laury's to the "Allentown Dam," and he filled this position for ten years; and afterward he served the Crane Iron Company as mining agent for many years. He lived in retirement nearly twenty years at his residence No. 307 Bridge street, and he died in 1892, at the advanced age of 86 years. He was married to Isabella Swartz, daughter of John Swartz, and they had two children: William H., the subject of this sketch; and Amanda E., married to Dr. Daniel Yoder.

His mother's great-grandfather on the maternal side was John Jacob Mickley, a Huguenot. Upon the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, his parents with numerous other countrymen, were obliged to flee from France and locate in the Palatinate where he was born, and in 1733, he emigrated to Pennsylvania. After landing at Philadelphia, he immediately proceeded up the Delaware and Lehigh rivers and settled in the vicinity of Egypt on a tract of land four miles northwest of Catasaqua. In 1763, while three of his little children were hunting chestnuts near their home, two of them were murdered by the Indians. Other persons were also murdered during the Indian invasion. The Historical Society of Lehigh county in the fall of 1913, set up a stone "marker" in Whitehall township, about a mile from Egypt, to indicate the locality of the massacre, and the names inscribed on this "marker" include those of the two Mickley children. Three sons of this early settler were enlisted in the Revolution, and one of them brought the "Liberty Bell" from Philadelphia to Allentown, where it was secreted for a time in the cellar of Zion's Reformed church.

Her great-grandfather, on the paternal side, was Nicholas Swartz, who settled in Longswamp township, Berks county, in 1750, and in 1787 his son Christian, migrated to the Irish settlement in Northampton county, where he then built a large stone dwelling house along the Lehigh river near the outlet of Dry Run, and it was here that Mr. Glace's mother as well as he himself, was born.

The residence of Mr. Glace is at 307 Bridge street, Catasaqua, Pa., where he has resided almost continuously since 1855.

GLICK FAMILY.

Johannes Glück with his wife, Magdalena, and some children, came to this country from Hanau, Germany, on the ship, Snow Good Intent, from Amsterdam, and landed at Philadelphia, October 23, 1754. They settled near Wessnersville, in Albany township, Berks county, Pennsylvania. This pioneer was born October 29, 1715, and died March 23, 1781. Both are buried at the Frieden's Church, near Wessnersville, Berks county, Pa. Their brown sandstone tombstones are still intact and the inscriptions plainly legible. The last will and testament of Johannes Glück is on file in the Register's Office, at Reading, Pa., in and for the County of Berks, in which his widow, Magdalena, and his sons, George and Philip are appointed the executors. The will bears date November 14, 1780. Letters were granted the executors August 23, 1783. The name of Johannes Glück appears upon the tax-list of Albany township from 1758 to 1780; and different land purchases are of record to his credit. He had these sons, viz: Philip, Daniel, Frederick, Henry, Peter, George and probably David.

The federal census of 1790, records Philip,

Daniel, Henry and Peter Klick as heads of families in Albany township. Frederick Klick at that time the same authority, records as the father of four sons less than sixteen years of age and two daughters. They lived in Greenwich township, which adjoins Albany to the south of it.

George Glick was recorded in 1790 a resident of Whitehall township, in Lehigh county, Pa. After the year 1801 the name of Glick is no longer found upon the tax-list of Albany township. The names of Philip, Daniel, Frederick, Peter and Henry Glick, were spelled very often in the old records with a "K" instead of the "G," hence K-l-i-c-k.

Philip Glick is on the tax list of Albany from 1775 to 1794. He moved to the State of Ohio and there his grandson, George W. Glick was born, who in 1883 became Governor of Kansas. He is mentioned later in this history.

Daniel Glick is on the tax-list of Albany from 1778 to 1801. He moved to the state of Ohio, and probably lived in the town of Fairfield.

Peter Glick is on the tax-list of Albany from 1787 to 1792. He moved across the Albany township line to Greenwich township likewise in Berks county, Pa. There he died intestate.

Frederick Glick is on the tax-list of Greenwich township from 1780 to 1788. He was a private in Capt. Ferd. Ritter's Company, 6th Battalion, Berks county Militia, commanded by Col. Jos. Hiester, in the service of the United States from Aug. 10 to Sept. 9, 1780. (Penna. Arch.)

Henry Glick is on the tax-list of Albany from 1787 to 1801. In 1786 he was one of the affirmed jurors to value property of John Correl, deceased, of Albany township. In 1788 Henry Klick and Daniel Klick (affirmed) and Philip Klick (on oath) valued property of George Hall, deceased. On Dec. 14, 1790, Henry Klick was surety for John, son of Nicholas Strausser, deceased. Henry Glick was born December 15, 1755, and died December 19, 1804. His will in German, is of record in the courthouse at Reading. His wife, Eve Catharine, was born in 1756 and died in 1819. Both are buried in the graveyard at Wessnersville, as is their son, Daniel, born in 1790, and died in 1800, and John Friederich Glick, born in 1779 and died in 1801. The latter probably was their son also.

(John) George Glick was born Dec. 24, 1749, and about the time of the Revolutionary War he settled in what is now South Whitehall township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, near the town of Cetronia, Pa. He was a farmer and owned considerable land. He rendered his country service in the Revolutionary War, serving for 5 months and 26 days, according to the muster-roll of the 6th class of the 1st Battalion of the John Glick, son of John, married Ellen Stone, and they had five children.

Philip Glick (son of the pioneer Johannes) had a son, George, born in 1779 in Berks county, Pa. He accompanied his parents to Ohio in 1794, and in time he became the grandfather of the Hon. George W. Glick, Governor of the State of Kansas from 1883 to 1885.

Isaac Glick, son of George and father of the Governor, was born Sept. 19, 1803, in Ohio, and he died in Dec. 1878. His wife was Christina Reidenaur, who also hailed from a Pennsylvania family.

Hon. George W. Glick, the distinguished former Governor of Kansas, was born at Green Castle, Fairfield county, Ohio, July 4, 1827. In the spring of 1849 he went to Kansas. As a lawyer, as a farmer, as a legislator, as a railway builder and as a Democratic politician, George W. Glick did things that have become part of Kansas history. He had been admitted to the bar in Ohio. In Kansas, in five years time he was at the head of the Atchison Bar. He was a lawyer of rare ability, and his quitting the profession was not of his choice, but of necessity on account of throat affection. It was as a farmer and member of the State Board of Agriculture that Glick did the most for Kansas. He was one of the first advocates of alfalfa growing and one of the first if not the first to insist that farmers sow Russian hard wheat. His articles in the agricultural records, published from time to time, through a period of forty years, are to-day most valuable literature to farmers of the West. He advocated corn breeding, that is, getting good seed, and he was an expert on tame grasses, and a strong supporter of the meadow. Thoroughbred hogs and cattle interested him as far back as 1860, the year of the great drought. He was the first to urge the planting of Kaffir corn, in fact, to the agriculture of Kansas, Glick was a Thomas Jefferson. His last appearance in public was at a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture.

Everything in the nature of Glick was Democratic. It was often said of him that he was a Bourbon Democrat, in that he never changed. He belonged to the old school, and was delegate to these National Conventions: 1856, 1868, 1884 and 1892. He was first nominated for Governor in 1868, and was defeated as he expected to be. In 1882 he was again nominated at the convention which met at Emporia, which was a memorable convention. Men of force and national renown were there. He was matched with St. John, who was up for the third time. He was elected by 8,000 plurality, thus becoming the first Democratic Governor of Kansas. His administration was clean and upright, there was no graft nor scandal; and he is said to have been the best Governor Kansas ever had. In 1884 as Chairman of the Kansas delegation he was the strongest factor west of the Mississippi and was a force in bringing about the nomination of Grover Cleveland.

In his habits he followed a high standard. He didn't swear, drink nor smoke. His likes and dislikes were very pronounced; and his nature was such that he could not help but fight any measure or organization that smacked of tyranny. He had quick wit. In the Democratic Convention in Topeka, in 1894, in a powerful speech he was reasoning and arguing against low prices, when a delegate yelled out: "What about hogs?" Glick retorted: "They always squeal when they're hungry." The house broke forth in a roar. Hogs, at that time were high priced and the Cherokee County delegate wanted to make a point but failed. For thirty-five years he resided in one house in Atchison. The last twelve years of his life were divided between his Atchison and Florida homes. His iron frame and vigorous intellect had now begun to yield to the persistent demands of time.

In Florida he slipped on the stairway and broke his hip and he never recovered. His measure was filled. He outlived all of those with whom he began his race of life and with whom he engaged in early political battles. Besides an awful tragedy came into the family home. His beloved grandson, George Glick Orr, was drowned on the Pacific coast while bathing. "The crowns of old parents are their children's children." This was so beautifully exemplified in the love the governor bore for his grandson. He once said: "Life's worth living to have a boy coming on to be useful in the world." He idolized the grandson, and like the King of old, never smiled again after the Prince was drowned, so there was no more laughter in the George W. Glick home after the death of George Glick Orr, in 1909.

Governor Glick, aged, honored and respected, after being bed-fast for one year and two weeks, a patient sufferer, but with a clear and brilliant mind passed into his reward, April 11, 1911, in his eighty-fourth year.

Mrs. Glick, white-haired, handsome yet in her declining years, is at the old homestead in Atchison, where her daughter, Mrs. Orr, with affectionate and tender care administers unto her. This aged mother with Christian fortitude bears her last affliction with the many others common to every mother of the land, waiting with resignation and the Christian's unflinching hope to meet in a few brief moons the heroic soul with whom she spent fifty-four years in the sacred bonds of wifehood.

FRANKLIN GOLDSMITH.

CHARLES GOLDMAN.

Charles Goldman, superintendent of the Dery Silk Mill, of Emaus, was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1856. He is the only son of Charles Goldman and his wife, Anna Catharine Mathiasan, but enjoys the proud distinction of having twelve sisters. After attending the public schools of his native city, he spent one and a half years in Roskilde Seminary, and then studied designing in Kines art school. Upon the completion of his course he returned to his father's textile mill, and worked for him until he was called upon for military service. Finding military life disagreeable, he escaped from his post and came to America. He came to New York City in 1877. After a brief stay in New York he went to Buffalo, where he heard of a colony of Danes in Corry, Pennsylvania. He came to Corry, Pa., and found work among his fellow countrymen. From Corry he went to Pittsburgh, where he worked in a coal mine for three months, when he went to Chicago, where he opened a barber shop. Not finding this trade to his taste, he began to roam over the country, mainly through the South. He was injured in a railroad wreck on the Erie Railway in 1881, and while convalescing in the hospital, he learned of the silk industry in Paterson, N. J., and resolved to go there as soon as he was able. Upon reaching Paterson, N. J., he immediately found employment as a weaver, and was soon promoted to fixer and then foreman, and soon thereafter was made a superintendent. He now entered the firm of Benz and Goldman, ribbon manufacturers, and continued as a member of the same for four years, when the firm disbanded and he again accepted the superintendency of a silk mill. After a short time he entered the employment of D. George Dery, at Catasauqua, and in 1906, when Mr. Dery erected the mill at Emaus, Mr. Goldman was given charge of the entire plant, and under his careful management the mill has made a reputation for itself for the high grade of its work. Mr. Goldman is popular among his hands and highly respected in his community. He is a member of the Emaus Mercantile Club. In 1889 he was married to Elisabeth Sharpley, the daughter of Samuel Sharpley, a silk manufacturer in Manchester, England. This union is blessed with two children, a son, Charles, Jr., a fixer in the Emaus mill, and a daughter, Hellen, a student in the Emaus High School. They reside in their beautiful new residence on North Fifth street, Emaus, Pa.

FRANKLIN GOLDSMITH.

Franklin Goldsmith, contractor of Catasauqua, Pa., was born June 28, 1850, in Pike township, Berks county, Pennsylvania. He was a son of Christian and Maria (Herbst) Goldsmith. His father died when he was quite small and the mother with her son made their home with the grandfather, George Herbst, in Berks county, where he grew to manhood. For a number of years he worked on the farm and at the age of twenty years learned the carpenter trade. He was apprenticed to Henry Acker at Alburts for two years, and in 1872, he obtained a position in the car shops at Fullerton. After working here for two years he went to Mauch Chunk where he remained until 1886 when he returned to Catasauqua and engaged in the contracting business for himself. The large number of public buildings and private residences erected by him is sufficient evidence of his success in his line of business. Mr. Goldsmith conducts a large planing mill in which he employs averaging ten men, but he employs in his various business 40 men. In 1885, he built his fine residence at No. 817 Race street, Catasauqua, and remodeled it in 1897. He built the beautiful residence of Ogden Frederick at Catasauqua, using seven different kinds of wood in its construction. He erected about fifty houses in Coplay and nearly two hundred in Catasauqua. The following school houses were erected by Mr. Goldsmith: Fullerton school house of 10 rooms; the Egypt school house of eight rooms; the Northampton school house of ten rooms; the Catasauqua high school house of twelve rooms, which also contain an auditorium 70x90 feet in dimensions; and the Hokendauqua high school building. Among the churches erected by him are the following: St. Paul's Lutheran and Reformed churches at Catasauqua, also the English Lutheran church at the same place; the St. Mary's Catholic church and the East End chapel, also of Catasauqua; and a large rector's house and school house for St. Mary's Polish Catholic church at Reading. In 1907 he erected the East End planing mill which gives employment to 15 men. He and family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Catasauqua, in which he has always taken a keen interest. For a number of years he served Hanover township as school director.

JOHN P. GORDON.

William Gately Gordon, the great-grandfather of John Percy Gordon, the efficient general superintendent of the Post & Sheldon Corporation, an established enterprise at Slatington for the production of broad silks, was of the nobility in the north of Scotland, and with his family moved to England, where his son John won fame and fortune in the manufacture of silk goods which secured a wide market in Great Britain and the continent of Europe; and the son was married to Elizabeth Prieckard, who were the parents of seven children: William Gately, Alfred, Edward James, Henry Frederick, Walter, and Emma, and one who died in infancy. Of the five sons named, all of them excepting Alfred grew up to emigrate to America, and there became useful citizens.

William Gately Gordon, the eldest son of John, was born March 4, 1852, at Macclesfield, in England, and his preliminary education was obtained at that place. He was then inclined to direct his particular attention to mechanics and he pursued his studies in that branch of knowledge by attending the Mechanics' Institute and the School of Textile Design. With this preparation he entered the employ of his father in his silk mill and continued with him until 1879, when he went to America with a shipload of special machinery for the manufacture of silk materials and established the "William G. Gordon Silk Mills" at Paterson, in New Jersey, which new industrial enterprise he conducted for five years with great success. He then sold the plant to become the superintendent of the Nassau Silk Mills of the place named which employed 300 hands and he filled this responsible position for six years when the Cutter Silk Mills (employing 500 hands) at Newark secured him on account of his great skill and experience as the superintendent of their manufacturing department and he continued with that large establishment for eight years. During this time the proprietor, Mr. Cutter, learned to appreciate the character and worth of Mr. Gordon and associated with him in organizing and establishing the Bath Silk Manufacturing Co. at Bath, Pennsylvania, for the manufacture of broad silks and continued there six years and since then has practically lived in retirement.

Mr. Gordon was married on February 22, 1872, to Elizabeth Clarke, a native of Aberdeen, in Scotland, and daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth Maria Clarke, and they had three children: John Percy, Walter (who died in England), and Lillian Elizabeth (who died at Easton, in the 16th year of her age). They were active members of the Church of England.

John Percy Gordon, son of William G., general superintendent of the Post & Sheldon Co., which is a large manufacturer of silk goods at Slatington, was born at Macclesfield, in England, on September 8, 1873. He accompanied his parents to America when a youth five years old and acquired a general education in the public schools of Newark, N. J., but subsequently attended the Philadelphia Textile School for the purpose of securing a special knowledge relating to textile machinery and from this institution he was graduated in 1894. Immediately after his graduation, he was tendered the responsible position of superintendent of a large silk mill, employing 150 hands, at Easton, which he was encouraged to accept by reason of his special preparation, and he operated the works for the company four years, when he was selected as the assistant manager of the Lehigh Valley Silk Mills at South Bethlehem, employing 400 hands, which position he also filled successfully for four years.

A silk mill was established at Slatington in 1904 by the Post & Sheldon Corporation which organized for the production of silk goods and when it was put in operation Mr. Gordon was placed in charge as the general superintendent of the plant and he has since filled this position in a most successful manner, and the success and development of the enterprise in that community is mainly attributable to his skilful management. He is a member of Lodge No. 440, F. and A. M., at Slatington; and of the B. P. O. E., No. 130, at Allentown; and also of the Republican party, whose principles he has advocated with great zeal.

In 1903, Mr. Gordon was married to Minnie Breinig, a daughter of George and Josephine (Heim) Breinig.

JOSEPH F. GORMAN.

Joseph F. Gorman, one of Allentown's most enterprising and successful business men, a banker and financier, was born at Siegersville, in Lehigh county, on November 13, 1863. He received his early education in the local public schools, and in the Allentown High School; and when only fourteen years old began working in a rolling mill at Allentown, and he followed the laborious life of an iron-worker until he became of age. He then carried on different hotels at Allentown as proprietor for a period of eight years, but in this time began to direct his attention especially to the real estate business.

Upon ceasing to cater to the public wants as a landlord, Mr. Gorman was first employed for a year by the South Bethlehem Land Company; then, in 1902, he embarked in the business for himself at Allentown, and since that time, he has been very successful in selling thousands of building lots, thereby stimulating building operations in Allentown, and the surrounding districts and becoming publicly recognized as one of the largest and most enterprising operators in real estate transactions in Pennsylvania. He has commodious offices in the Breinig and Bachman Building and employs from ten to fifteen persons to meet the daily demands of his business.

In 1906 he purchased the base-ball park at Rittersville, opposite Central Park, and laid out the land into 300 building lots, which the public appreciated so highly that they were purchased promptly; in 1907 he secured another large tract east of Rittersville State Hospital property, which lay along the north and south sides of the turnpike leading to Bethlehem, and this he laid out into 1,500 building lots which he sold in a short time by the aid of "push" and judicious advertising; and in 1910 he secured a third tract in the same section, called "Manhattan," lying to the south of the Bethlehem turnpike, which he laid off into 200 lots and he sold all of them in ninety days, evidencing the character of his foresight and energetic spirit.

Enterprising men like him in a community are recognized as the moving spirit in building up a slow-going and slow-growing town, and it is commonly admitted in the flourishing Lehigh Valley that Mr. Gorman has put actual force and meaning in the local slogan: "Dwell here and prosper"—more than any other person in the Splendid Queen City on the Lehigh river. The conspicuous, brilliant, and attractive illuminated electric sign comes up to his idea of letting your light shine for the purpose of inspiring and encouraging public improvements.

Mr. Gorman identified himself as a young man with the Democratic party and, afterward, for fifteen years, from 1894 to 1909, served as a councilman in both branches of the city government, having officiated as president of select council for one term. He is a member of the Clover Club, and of different social organizations at Allentown; and since 1890 he has been an active and enthusiastic director of the Allentown Baseball Club, with his interest in this popular sport extending to the state and national clubs.

He was one of the charter members in organizing and establishing the Allentown Chamber of Commerce, and since then has been prominently identified with its progressive spirit in the substantial development of the city's local affairs of a monetary and industrial nature, and the enrichment of the community. He has also been connected with local finances for a number of years, being now one of the directors in the successful management of the McDermott Boiler Works, and of the Lieberman Brewing Company.

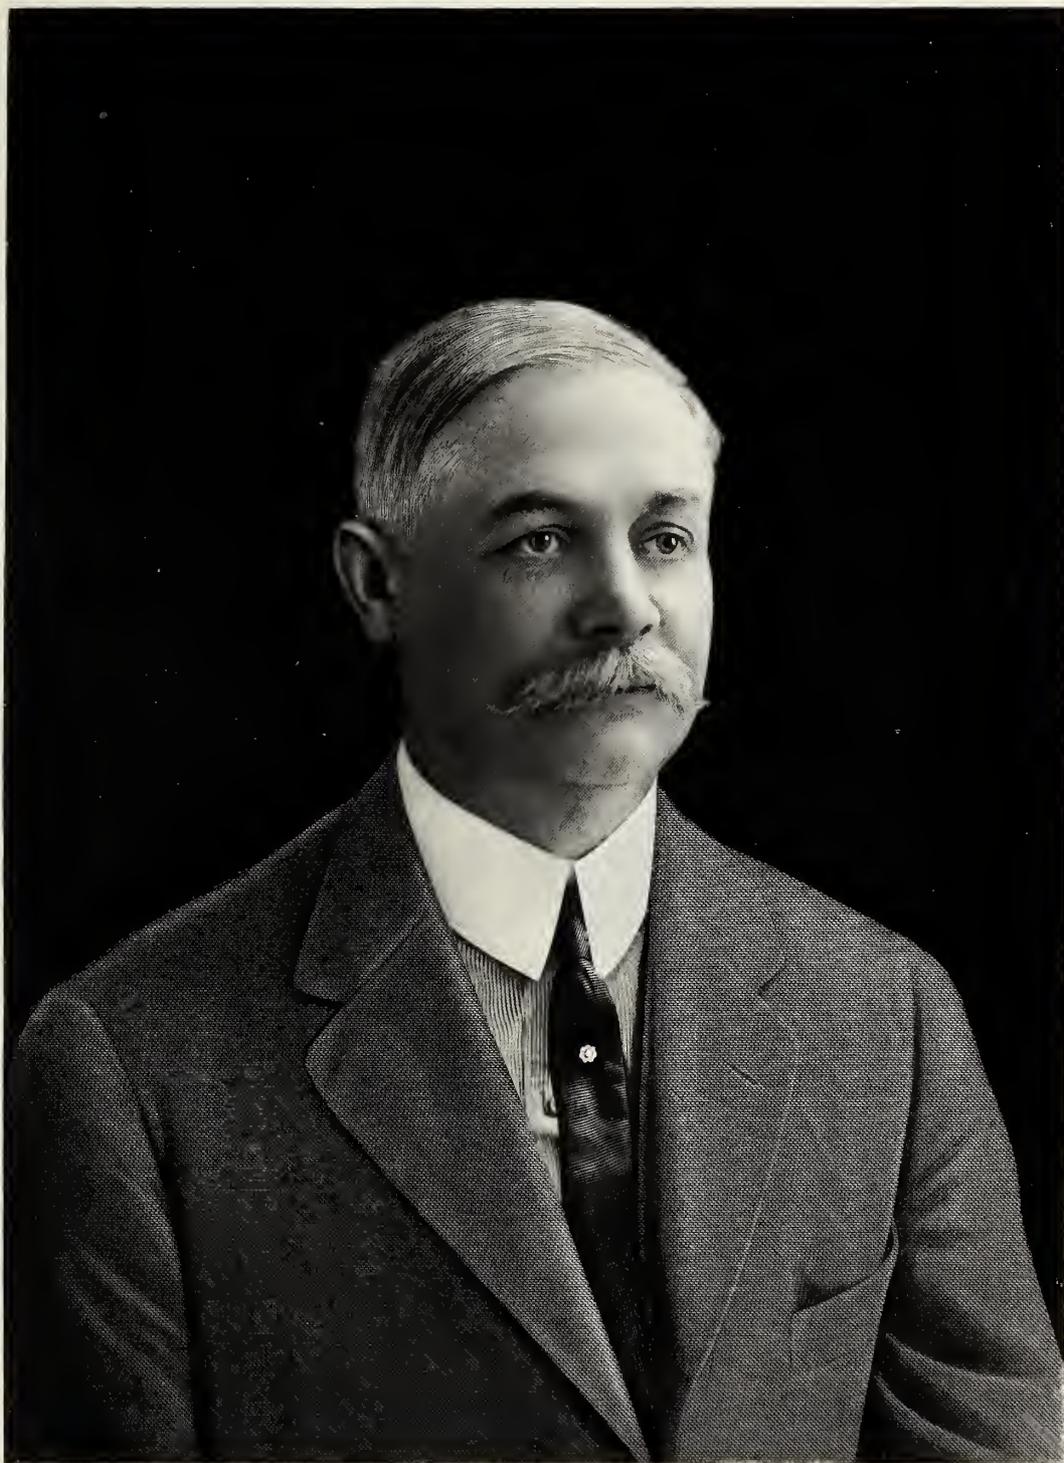

On January 26, 1893, Mr. Gorman was married to Sophia Harkins, daughter of John Harkins, and they had five children: Christopher (educated in the local schools, who died in 1911 whilst a diligent student in the St. Mary's Seminary at Emmettsburg, Md., in the 17th year of his age); Joseph, Jr.; Evelyn; Sophia; and Edward.

GRIESEMER FAMILY.

The ship "Thistle," which arrived at Philadelphia, August 29, 1730, brought the ancestor of the Griesemers to America in the person of Valentin Griesemer. The passport, in possession of Alfred Griesemer, of Allentown, gives the full name, John Valentine Griesheimer, who together with his wife and four children—Casper, John, Anna Margaret, and Jacob, according to said passport, came from Lampedheim. The passport was given at Worms, April 28, 1730, and is signed by John Adam Hoerens.

Valentin Griesemer settled in Oley and later in Hereford township, Berks county, where he died about 1759. His son, Leonhard, was born in 1732, and died Jan. 5, 1821. He married Elizabeth Lefebvre. Mary Catharine, youngest child of Valentin, was born June 6, 1736, married John Cimius, and died Sept. 5, 1816.

John Griesemer, son of Valentin, was born in 1717. He was one of the first settlers along Cedar creek, where he secured from Jacob Earthman, on May 23, 1738, a tract of 190 acres. He was a member and one of the organizers of Zion Reformed congregation in Allentown, of which he was deacon in 1765. He was naturalized Sept. 24, 1767. That he was a prominent and leading citizen of his time is shown by the following document from the Easton court records:

and assistant judges of the one part, and Anthony Kletner, Jacob Dillinger, John Spearing, Philip Behm, Caspar Bauer and Jacob Friese, inspectors, freeholders of the said county, of the other part, witnesseth:

"That according to law and the charter of the Province of Pennsylvania, we, with many others did meet on the said second day of October, at Easton, in the said county, the place by law appointed for election, and did then and there elect and chuse Jacob Morrey for Commissioner of the said county, for the ensuing year.

"In witness whereof we have hereto set our hands and seals the day and year above said."

He married (first) Matilda Mattern, who died without issue. On Sept. 18, 1874, he married Alice L. Shoemaker, born in Locust Valley, a daughter of Enos Shoemaker. They had eight children: Elisabeth C., wife of Heber Yost, of Wyomissing, Berks county, formerly secretary to George F. Baer, and who has two children, Emma Louise and Mary Elizabeth; William E., who resides in the West; Jesse Kessler, who died aged 12 years; Florence, married Lewis Bringer, of Allentown, and has a son, Charles B.; Helen L., died young; James Blaine, deceased; Robert J., a merchant of Allentown, who married Hilda La Fever, and has five children, Jesse, Elizabeth, died young, Ernest, Dorothy, and Alice; and Ida, who died, aged nine years.

Jonathan Shoemaker, the grandfather of Mrs. Grim, was a resident of East Texas, Lehigh county, where he was a farmer, stock raiser, and land owner. He married Lydia Eisenhart. Both were members of the Evangelical Church. They had one son, Enos J., who was born at East Texas, Oct. 24, 1826. The firm employs 250 people, and manufacture 2,500 pairs of shoes daily, which find ready market all over the United States. The office of this successful corporation is at No. 20 North Eighth street. The buildings extend one-half square back to Lumber street, where it occupies 17-19-21 North Lumber street. The building on North Eighth street is 30 feet front and 54 feet deep, being three stories high. The firm are members of the Chamber of Commerce.

Sheldon, daughter of Lewis Sheldon, of Allentown. They reside in their fine residence at the southwest corner of Eighth and Turner streets, which was erected by William Grim in 1857, and has always been owned by the family. The ground originally was owned by Jesse Grim, the grandfather of Henry J. Grim.

Walter J. Grim, son of Jesse, was born in Weisenberg township, May 15, 1835. He was educated in the schools of Allentown and after assisting his father on the farm, he learned the trade of tanning and finishing leather, with his brother William. In 1857 he went into business on his own account, which he conducted until 1892. Mr. Grim served as councilman and member of the board of control on the Republican ticket, and is a member of the Lutheran Church. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Diana (Fegley) Drescher, and had four children: Ida, wife of Henry Hunsicker; George, deceased, who married Emma Kressly, and had two children: John J., deceased, and Charles D. He then, for a short time, attended Rev. Aaron's boarding-school, at Norristown, Pa. He also attended Rev. John Vandever's boarding school, at Easton, following which he entered the Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, graduating in 1852. He then entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1855. He then located at Allentown, and practiced here since, with the exception of a few years while he was in the United States army. He entered as assistant surgeon in the twelfth Pennsylvania reserve regiment, was promoted as surgeon, to the fifth reserve regiment. This regiment was with the Army of the Potomac and Dr. Grim was in service between two and three years. JEREMIAH M. GRIMLEY.

The Grimley family, which was worthily represented in the present generation by the late Jeremiah Moyer Grimley, for many years one of the foremost merchants of Allentown, actively interested in various other enterprises, and prominently connected fraternally, is numbered among the old families of the state of Pennsylvania, locating in Montgomery county, in the various activities of which they have always taken a deep interest.

The very first Grimley came to America prior to 1700. Neither his nor his wife's name are on record. The original home at Branch creek stood as late as 1865. They had two children, a son named Solomon Grimley, born Oct. 4, 1730. This Solomon married Elizabeth Reimer, Dec. 20, 1759. They had a son, Solomon, who was the father of Solomon K. Grimley, a great uncle of Jeremiah M. Grimley, was a prominent teacher for forty years without missing a day, also a squire. It is through him that the family history was traced. It was after his death that the name spelled Grimlei was found in Berne, Switzerland. The family has always been prominently connected with the Reformed Church, and is probable that they originally came from Switzerland. The name is also found in England and Ireland spelled Grimley. It is thought that they are the descendants of the Protestants sent by Queen Anne to Ireland in 1709.

Frederick Grimley, son of Solomon Grimley, second, was a prominent agriculturist of Salford, Montgomery county, Pa., where he spent the greater part of his life. His wife was a Schwenk, a descendant of Hans Michael Schwenk, progenitor of the present family of descendants, was born in Germany, 1696; arrived in Philadelphia from Germany on the ship "Lydia," on Sept. 20, 1741. The children ascertained were: Jacob, George and Nicholas. He settled in Frederick township. Frederick Grimley and wife, nee Schwenk, were the parents of eight children, namely: William, Jeremiah, Amos, Mary, Mrs. Trout, Mrs. Hallman, Jesse and Albert. All of the above sons taught school.

Jeremiah Grimley, son of Frederick Grimley, was born in Upper Salford, Montgomery county, Pa. After the completion of his education he engaged in teaching which he followed for many years, first in New Hanover and later in Upper Hanover. Subsequently he settled upon a farm in Frederick township, where he died in 1867, at the age of 50, respected and honored by all. He was a member of the Old Goshenhoppen Reformed church, in which he took an active part. He married (first) Mary Ann Moyer, daughter of Jacob Moyer, of Upper Hanover township, who bore him two children: Oliver P., born April 2, 1846, cashier of the Kutztown National Bank, of which he was the organizer; Jeremiah M., of whom further. He married (second) Mrs. Louisa (Jacobs) Ziegler, who bore him one daughter, Clara J., of Philadelphia.

Jeremiah Moyer Grimley, son of Jeremiah Grimley, was born in Frederick township, Montgomery county, Pa., June 14, 1855. At the age of three years he was deprived by death of his mother, and nine years later his father also passed away, thus leaving him at the early age of twelve years, dependent upon his own resources. His first occupation was on a farm, his remuneration being five dollars a month, and during this time, although busily engaged, he found spare moments in which he improved his education. In the year 1869 he secured a position in a large Philadelphia merchandising establishment where he remained for two years, gaining a thorough business training. He returned with the intention of attending school, but his guardian refused him the privilege. He then secured employment on a farm, and in a short time saved sufficient funds to pursue a course in Ursinus College. He received a teacher's certificate at the age of 16. For a number of years thereafter he successfully taught school in Montgomery, Berks and Lehigh counties, his last position being at East Texas. He enjoyed teaching, as he loved children. In a letter of recommendation signed by prominent people of Schwenksville, they say they know him from boyhood as an honest, energetic and persevering person. His ambition of youth to become a lawyer could not be realized. He then decided to become a business man. In 1882 he came to Allentown and accepted a position as shipping clerk with C. A. Dorney & Company. On Feb. 9, 1884, he purchased the business he was conducting at the time of his decease. The business under his methods rapidly assumed large proportions, and in the year 1892 he was forced to enlarge his facilities to accommodate the ever increasing trade, and as a result he was proprietor of one of the largest and best stocked carpent stores in the Lehigh Valley. Mr. Grimley kept pace with the times, was prompt in his business transactions and accommodating to his customers. Honesty was his dominant quality and hard work his hobby. Until Jan. 1, 1910, the business was conducted solely by Mr. Grimley. On that date it was incorporated and operated under the name of J. M. Grimley Company, of which Mr. Grimley was president.

In addition to his business Mr. Grimley was actively interested in various other enterprises. He was president of the Security Building Association, one of the largest and most successful of its kind in the state, he being an active factor in building it up to its present standing; a director of the Merchants National Bank since its organization in 1903; a member of the Chamber of Commerce; an elder and deacon of Salem Reformed church for many years; assistant superintendent of the Sunday school connected therewith for thirty years; and a trustee of the Allentown College for Women. Oct. 28, 1879, he became a member of Lehigh Lodge, No. 326, Free and Accepted Masons, at Trexlertown, and recently joined Jordan Lodge, No. 673, being the second of their members to pass away. He was also a member of Allen Chapter, No. 203, Royal Arch Masons; Allen Council, No. 23, Royal and Select Masters; Allen Commandery, No. 20, Knights Templar; Rajah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and of the recently organized Penn Allen Chapter, No. 145, Order of Eastern Star, and the first of its members to pass away.

Mr. Grimley married, May 13, 1876, Caroline Elizabeth Treichler, a native of Treichlersville, Pa., daughter of David and Lucetta (Gauger) Treichler. Mr. Treichler was a prominent miller and farmer. There is a tradition in the Treichler family that their ancestors came from Holland in the early part of the eighteenth century. They settled in New Jersey, but later migrated into Bucks county, Pa., and from thence a branch moved into Hereford township, Berks county, Pa. The large stone house is over a century old, having been built in 1811 by Samuel and Madeline (Wescoc) Treichler, grandparents of Mrs. Grimley. One daughter, Sadie Treichler Grimley Kuntz, born August 6, 1877, wife of the Rev. Franklin S. Kuntz, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Apostles, of Philadelphia. They are the parents of one son, Jeremiah Franklin Kuntz born June 21, 1911.

Mr. Grimley died at his late home, northeast corner Penn and Linden streets, Allentown, Feb. 17, 1914. The erection of the handsome four-story building at 730 Hamilton street may have been partly responsible for his sudden demise. All through the building operations Mr. Grimley took an active interest in the work. The building, when completed, will stand as a monument to the business ability of Mr. Grimley, who was deprived of having his greatest wish gratified, that of being finally located in his new store. His death came as a severe shock to his many friends and acquaintances, removed from the community not only a singularly successful business man, but a most worthy and honored citizen. He exerted a great influence on the affairs of his adopted city, and this will be felt and recognized for a long period of time, although he himself has passed away.

GRINER FAMILY.

John C. Griner, Sr., a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, came to this country when still single, locating for a time at Philadelphia. In his native country he had learned the baker's trade, and this he followed in Philadelphia until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he enlisted, serving for a period of three years, during which he was confined in Andersonville prison and there endured severe hardships. After the war he followed his trade again in different cities and he came to Allentown about eight years before his death. He is buried in the Union cemetery, Allentown. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. In October, 1868, he married Mary Ebert, a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Seip) Ebert, and widow of Jonas Kehm. Mr. and Mrs. Griner had these children: Laura, married to John Yocum, a farmer of Saucon township; Anna, who is single at home; John C., Jr., and Herman, who died exactly nine years after his father, aged nine years. The widow, Mrs. Griner, resides at 816 Chew street, Allentown, where her son, William Kehm, conducts a pretzel bakery.

JOHN C. KRINER, of Hoffmansville (Stettlersville, P. O.), Lehigh county, Pa., was born at Allentown, Sept. 21, 1872. He began to work in the shoe factory when a mere boy, and he continued that work for about twenty years. In July, 1892, he located at his present place in South Whitehall township and there a little later he purchased the Jeremiah Spiegel homestead, which originally was a Sieger tract. The old house on this property—a landmark of the community, appears in the general history of the township. To this property belong five acres of land, and there Mr. Kriner lived with his family for several years and at this place he established a fancy poultry plant, which has grown steadily into one of the largest of its kind in this country. He owns about 1,500 show birds, which he had displayed at all the leading fairs and shows in this country. His route of fairs and shows in 1912 follows: Fulton, N. Y.; Portland, N. Y.; Staten Island; New York City; Chatham; New York City; New York State Fair; Syracuse, N. Y.; Afton, N. Y.; Vermont State Fair; White River Junction; Birmingham Industrial Exposition, Birmingham, N. Y.; Dundeen, N. Y.; Lancaster, Pa.; Bloomsburg, Pa.; Hagerstown, Md., which is the largest poultry show in the world; Frederick, Md.; Maryland State Fair; and at Laurel, Md. Some of Mr. Kriner's birds are worth one hundred dollars and his water fowl comprise one hundred and twenty-five varieties. He also has one of the greatest and rarest collection of pigeons in America.

Mr. Kriner has won many "Challenge Cups" and "Loving Cups" besides numerous premiums in the different sections of this country. He is one of the best known as well as one of the best informed poultrymen in America; and frequently is called upon to serve as judge at the leading shows on the continent. For three consecutive years Mr. Kriner has judged at Madison Square Garden, New York, a record never before made by any other judge in the water-fowl department; and likewise he judged at Hagerstown, Md., for seven consecutive years; at the New York State Fair for five years, and at the Baltimore show ever since its organization in 1907.

Mr. Kriner is a member of the Specialty Water Fowl Club of America, serving it as vice-president; also is the treasurer of the Crested Fowl Club of America; member of the America Game Bantam Club of America; member of the American Poultry Association, which is the largest and richest live stock poultry association in the world.

He resides with his family in the Hoffman homestead which he purchased in 1908 and remodeled it in 1912. It was for many years known as the old Orefield hotel building, locally known as Hoffman's Hotel. It will be observed that his father spelled the name Griner, beginning with the letter "G" and that the son uses the letter "K." Mr. Kriner, the younger, came to use the latter spelling through the ill-advice of a school teacher. He was married to Anna Guth in 1892. She is a daughter of Moses and Fronney (Miller) Guth. They have these children: Phronia; John C., Jr.; Lillie; Esther; Mabel; Marie; and Richard.

GROMAN FAMILY.

Samuel Groman, the grandfather of Hon. Clinton A. Groman, president-judge of the Lehigh county courts, was born in 1776 in Lower Saucon township, Northampton county, Pennsylvania, and there carried on farming until 1835 when he located in the state of New York. He continued farming for a time, then lived in retirement for a number of years, dying at an ad-

HON. CLINTON A. GROMAN, president judge of the courts of Lehigh county, the eldest son of James E., and Sophia (Sterner) Groman, was born March 23, 1861, in Salisbury township, Lehigh county. He received his education in the township schools, Millersville State Normal School, and the Allentown Preparatory School; after which he taught in the public schools for six terms in Lehigh county. While teaching he followed the prescribed course of legal studies in the law offices of Henninger & Dewalt, at Allentown, and was admitted to practice as an attorney-at-law, on Dec. 21, 1885. Shortly afterward, he went to Kansas City, Missouri, for the purpose of practicing law there, and was admitted to the bar, but he remained there about two years, when he returned to Allentown and resumed his practice which he followed successfully until he was elevated to the bench as the president judge.

In 1898, he received the nomination for district attorney of the county on the Democratic ticket, and was elected; and he served the office with distinction during the years 1899, 1900, and 1901. His term of service was recognized for his fairness to criminals, though as the public prosecutor he performed his whole duty. In the judicial election held in 1913, three candidates presented themselves to the votes of the county, each of whom was eminently fitted in character and intellect for the high office. Lawyer Groman received more than fifty-one per cent. of the total vote cast at the primary election. As judge he is administering the law without fear and without favor and he enjoys the full confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.

Judge Groman was connected with the St. Michael's Lutheran church for a number of years but withdrew from it and identified himself with Grace Episcopal church where he has since been an active and devoted member, serving as a vestryman since 1910. The judge is much devoted to his aged parents who reside on a small farm in a neat cozy home in Salisbury township. His visits to them are made regularly every week and quite often they are made on foot.

Judge Groman and his companion in life are fond of walking. Frequently they are seen traveling together in the country, both for recreation and for pleasure.

On April 15, 1890, he was married to Ida M. Gauff, daughter of George and Matilda (Giess) Gauff. They had one child, a daughter, Edith M., who died Sept. 10, 1913, aged twenty-one years. She took an active part in the religious work of Grace Episcopal church, and was prominently identified with the Sunday school in which she was an esteemed teacher for several years.

WALTER BAYARD GROSH.

Walter Bayard Grosh, son of Bayard, was born at Marietta, in Ohio, in the year 1852. He received his early education in the schools of Marietta, and afterward in Minnesota, and the Chester Military Academy of Pennsylvania. He was engaged in the machine business at Slatington for a number of years; then removed to St. Louis and carried on the roofing-slate business for eight years as the representative of slate companies at Slatington, in which he was very successful. His health failing, he went with his family to St. Augustine, Fla., and remained sixteen years, when he located at Allentown, and died there July 6, 1909. His remains were interred in the Union cemetery at Slatington. While living at Allentown, he took great interest in the welfare of the St. John's Lutheran church, and he served as a member of the building committee.

In 1876, Mr. Grosh was married to Kate Kuntz, daughter of Henry Kuntz, of Slatington, and they had three children: Florence May, Besse Marie, and Henry Bayard, all of whom died young. Mrs. Grosh has become a member of Christ Evangelical Lutheran church, and of Liberty Bell Chapter, D. A. R.

GROSS FAMILY.

Paul Gross was born in 1735 in Zweibruecken, Germany. At the age of 17 years he emigrated to America, taking passage on the ship, "Two Brothers," which landed at Philadelphia on Sept. 15, 1752. He settled in Whitehall township, then Northampton county, where in 1762 he was assessed five pounds, and in 1772 was taxed eighteen shillings, eight pence. In 1785 he was taxed seventeen shillings on 125 acres of land, two horses, and two cows. He died Feb. 19, 1791, aged 56 years.

Paul Gross married Maria Catherine Guth, and had three children: Peter; Barbara; and Daniel, born Oct. 23, 1767. Barbara married Michael Deibert.

Peter Gross, the eldest son of Paul, was born

Jan. 1, 1761, in Whitehall township. He served as a sergeant in 1781-2, in the Revolutionary War, under Capt. George Trein, in the first battalion of Northampton County Militia. He was commissioned a justice of the peace March 20, 1812, and held the office for 29 years. He died May 28, 1846, aged 88 years, and was buried in the Jordan Reformed churchyard.

Peter Gross married Barbara Troxell, daughter of Peter and Anna Maria Troxell, born Dec. 13, 1762, died June 4, 1834. Issue: (1) Joseph; (2) John; (3) Solomon; (4) Daniel; (5) Susanna; and three other daughters. Susanna (1785-1872), married Jacob Klein (1781-1857), and had four children.

Joseph Gross, son of Peter and Barbara (Troxell) Gross, was a farmer at Siegersville, North Whitehall township. His farm consisted of one hundred acres. His wife was Susan Peter and both were members of the Jordan Reformed church, where they were buried. They had four children: Sallie, wife of William Gernerd; Nathan; Reuben; and Mrs. Peter Helfrich.

Nathan Gross, son of Joseph and Susan Gross, was born Jan. 13, 1819, and died Nov. 27, 1867. He was a farmer in North Whitehall township and married Esther Rudy, a daughter of Durs Rudy and his wife, Salome Egner. They had a son, Peter Alfred Gross, who was born in North Whitehall, Jan. 21, 1849. He received his education in the local schools and at Fort Edward Academy, New York, and taught school for a time. Having inherited a love of art from his maternal grandfather, he learned engraving and travelled through Ohio and West Virginia, making bird's-eye view maps of the large cities, after which he engaged in the lithographing business at Toronto, Canada. In 1877 he went to Paris and taught the English branches in the International Institute, founded by his uncle, Charles Rudy. He soon began painting and became one of the most distinguished American artists, famous for his landscape and marine scenes. His first canvas was hung in the Paris Salon in 1883 and his most famous painting was "The First Snow at Nemours." He received high honors and hospitably entertained many Americans and also Europeans of rank at his studio. He remained in Paris for over thirty-five years, latterly at 30 Rue Bruxelles, Place Clichy. In 1889, he married Jeanne Sauvalle, who died in 1907. They had one son, Pierre Albert Gross. In 1913 he decided to visit his native land and arrived in New York on November 15th, and in Allentown on the 18th, and at both cities he received magnificent receptions. Having brought with him a large number of paintings, he left for Chicago in January to arrange for their exhibition and died in that city, after a brief illness, on Jan. 24, 1914. At his funeral at Allentown on January 30th, thousands paid tribute to his memory.

Mr. Gross presented the city of Allentown with two superb paintings and gave to the Lehigh County Historical Society an engraving of Columbus. It was his ambition to establish an art gallery and museum in Allentown and his unexpected death prevented his plans from being realized. It is to be hoped that the citizens of his native county will carry out the plans of their distinguished compatriot.

Durs Rudy, grandfather of Peter A. Gross, was a native of Switzerland, where he was born, Dec. 28, 1789. He emigrated to America and settled in North Whitehall, where he had a store and hotel, and was organist at the Unionville church. He was an artist of ability and specimens of his work are owned by descendants. He died Feb. 5, 1850. Mr. Rudy married Salome, daughter of Henry and Catharine (Schneider) Egner. She was born Nov. 15, 1798, and died Oct. 14, 1877. GROSSART FAMILY.

Phillip and Elizabeth K. Grossart, were the parents of the following: Lewis J. H. Grossart, Annie E. Grossart, Charles W. Grossart, Bertha K. Grossart, and Orlando P. Grossart, all surviving them with the exception of Orlando P., who died in 1887.

Philip Grossart was born in St. Goar, Rhine, Germany, on Jan. 22, 1838, being a son of Sebastian and Catharine Grossart.

There is no exact knowledge of the time of the death of Sebastian Grossart, but Catharine Grossart died at Coblenz, Germany, on Oct. 31, 1876. Philip Grossart had one brother, Henry Grossart, born in 1834, who died at St. Goar, on Oct. 22, 1906, and one sister, Kate Grossart, who was married to Charles Faebicky, who died at Coblenz, Germany, on April 16, 1894.

Jacob Grossart, of Trier on the Mosel, was the father of Frederic W. Grossart, born Aug. 11, 1841, died at Washington, D. C., Jan. 22, 1900, and is buried in Arlington National cemetery, and of Augustus Grossert, of Trier, and of Carl Grossart, of Mühlhausen, Alsace, and of one sister—who we believe, died, at the age of twenty years. From apparently reliable sources we learn that the family originally lived along the River Rhone, in France, and that they were all engaged in the tanning of white leather, being forced to locate along the Rhine in Germany, on account of religious disturbances.

Philip Grossart learned the trade of baker at his father's place of business in St. Goar, and after serving his time as apprentice he followed his occupation successively at Berlin, Trier, Hamburg, St. Petersburg, Paris, Liverpool, and London, emigrating into America on or about Aug. 11, 1863. He saw service in the Civil War, being attached to regimental headquarters, being wounded at City Point, Va., receiving treatment for these wounds first in the field and afterwards at the hospital at Washington, D. C. When he was cured of these wounds he had employment at the city of Washington, D. C., and later on at Egg Harbor City, N. J., where he was in business as a baker and where he married Elizabeth Kunigunde Schmidt, the mother of the family named above. He died at Allentown, Dec. 21, 1904.

Elizabeth Kunigunde Schmidt was the daughter of Joseph and Margaret Schmidt, and was born in Baltimore, Md., on March 3, 1845, her parents emigrating to America from Binggarten, Bavaria. She died July 1, 1904. She had one brother, John Schmidt, who died at Patapsco, Carroll county, Md., in 1906. Margaret Schmidt afterwards married Henry Michelman and died at Allentown, May 23, 1890, and is buried at Allentown.

Joseph Schmidt died at Baltimore on July 19, 1856.

LEWIS JOHN HENRY GROSSART, C.E., the civil engineer with offices at No. 423 Commonwealth building, Allentown, Pa., and in the post-office building at Bethlehem, Pa., was born at Egg Harbor City, N. J., Sept. 20, 1866, and has resided in the city of Allentown since 1869, when his parents took up their residence here after living at Corry, Pennsylvania.

He is the first son of the late Phillip Grossart and Elizabeth K. Grossart, nee Schmidt, one of the early families of the First ward, Allentown, but who later on built and resided in the homestead at the corner of Fourth and Liberty streets, where they spent the remainder of their days, and it is this home where this son now resides. While serving as city engineer of Allentown, Mr. Grossart married Carolin Ashley Moore, of Delano, Schuylkill county, Pa., on Sept. 7, 1893. Their union has been blessed with two children, a son, L. Phaon Grossart, born July 30, 1894, and a daughter, Katrine Louise Grossart, born Oct. 1, 1905.

Mr. Grossart attended the public schools of Allentown, graduating from the Allentown high school, June 20, 1882.

During the summer vacations he studied German in the private school conducted by Rev. G. F. Gardner, at St. Peter's Lutheran church, in the First ward. He entered Lehigh University at South Bethlehem, in September, 1882, and received the degree of civil engineer on June 24, 1886, and having maintained a rank in scholarship in the first fourth of his class during his collegiate course he was honored by an election to the Tau Beta Pi Association, Alpha Chapter.

This honorary society was founded at Lehigh University by Prof. E. H. Williams, Jr., and corresponds to the Phi Beta Kappa society, the latter being a classical society, while the Tau Beta Pi being a technical society.

Prior to his graduation from Lehigh University he spent three summer vacations by serving in various capacities on the primary triangulation of the state of Pennsylvania, the field operations being conducted by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, in Lehigh, Carbon, Schuylkill, Lebanon, and Dauphin counties.

After graduation at Lehigh University he immediately took up regular employment with the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company on the construction of the branch railroad leading from Pottsville to Hazleton, with headquarters at Delano, Pa., and when this construction was ended he spent some time on track valuation work into the collieries on the Mahanoy division of the L. V. R. R. He then was assigned to the engineer corps on the preliminary location and later on final location of the mountain cut-off from Fairview to Avoca, afterwards to location work from South Plainfield to Roselle, N. J., then on the line from Freemansburg to Philadelphia, and the line from Van Etnenville to Geneva, N. Y. Leaving the service of the Lehigh Valley he filled the position of instructor in the department of civil engineering at Lehigh University. While serving in this capacity he was elected borough engineer of Bethlehem, Pa., which office he held until April, 1891, during which time he acted as engineer for the boroughs of West Bethlehem, and of Hellertown, Pa. He was elected city engineer of Allentown, in May, 1891, and served one term until May, 1894. From September, 1894 to January, 1902, he acted as engineer of construction for the Atlas Portland Cement Co., on the construction of the cement plants at Northampton, Pa., and then as superintendent of construction for Milliken Bros., of 11 Broadway, New York City, at Tremley Point, N. J., at Plainfield, N. J., and at Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island, and since July, 1903, has resumed the practice of civil engineering at Allentown and Bethlehem, and is now serving the towns of Northampton, Catasauqua, and Hellertown, as their town engineer.

Mr. Grossart is a member of Bethlehem Lodge No. 283, F. & A. M., member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, member of the Pennsylvania German Society, the Lehigh County Historical Society, and of the American Road Builders' Association.

He has a wide experience in the construction of foundations, for bridges, buildings, and machinery, the construction of water works and sewers, the building of docks, piers, and pile driving at tide-water, and on the construction of cement plants and their equipment.

Latterly he has devoted his attention to municipal improvements of all classes and is still in active control of a large clientele and corporation work which brings him in constant touch with cases of large import.

He is a man of clean habits, high ambitions, and recognized ability. His tastes are strongly domestic, and he is extremely fond of his home and fireside.

Mrs. Grossart is a daughter of John S. Moore and the late Katharine Fritz Moore, formerly of Delano, Pa., but who have resided at No. 622 North Sixth street since 1900. She has two sisters, one Mrs. Ria H. Pursell, of 622 North Sixth street, Allentown, and Mrs. H. B. Rosenberger, of Doylestown, Pa.

At the age of 18 years he was employed for some time under A. W. Steadman, chief engineer of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., on engineering and location work through Sullivan county, Pa., on the Southern Central R. R. between Sayre and North Fairhaven, N. Y., and on the Peach Bottom & Delta R. R. between Baltimore and York, Pa. When he returned he entered the employ of Col. S. D. Lehr, as assistant engineer and remained with him eleven years, attending and assisting in every detail of the work which was of the kind that brings out every ability of a young man, namely the construction of the Allentown & Bethlehem Rapid Transit Company, from Allentown to Bethlehem, and from Allentown to Catasauqua; the Lehigh Valley Traction Company from Allentown to Catasauqua, and Northampton and to South Bethlehem; the Bethlehem & Nazareth Street Railway, and the Allentown & Kutztown Electric Railway, which included the erecting and constructing of power houses, car barns, and bridges.

In 1901, he decided to undertake the struggle for himself and with industry and hard work soon acquired position in his profession. He contracted and laid 16,000 feet of 16-inch water mains at East Orange, N. J., and completed a sanitary sewer at Plainfield, N. J.; built a $30,000 sanitarium and storm water sewer at Wilkes-Barre; built the trolley line between Walnutport and Danielsville, which included the power house and car barn, and made the preliminary surveys for the Franklin and Towamensing Street Railway Company.

He surveyed and laid the lines for the borough of North Catasauqua, made its maps and profiles and has been borough engineer since, has been borough engineer of Coplay the last seven years, and is borough engineer of Walnutport, since its creation.

He has made plans and supervised the construction of numerous dwellings, mills and fire houses, including the Keystone Textile Silk Mill, South Allentown; the A. R. GROSSCUP FAMILY.

Charles C. Grosscup was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was born in 1828, and when a young man he learned the tailor trade, settling in Bridgeton, N. J., in 1851. He was a stranger to that town, with no money and no friends, but in a comparatively short time he acquired property and distinction and was recognized as one of the leading citizens and business men. In the spring of 1855 he purchased what is now known as the Grosscup block, at the northeast corner of Commerce and Laurel streets. Progressive business men considered his purchase hazardous and foolhardy. He had the first curbing set in Bridgeton and in 1856 he put up the "Old Familiar Grosscup Corner," which is now the very heart of Bridgeton.

Mr. Grosscup has figured in some of the leading enterprises of his county, having aided materially in the construction of the West Jersey and New Jersey Southern railway entering Bridgeton; was for a number of years director and treasurer of the Cumberland County Steamboat Company, and for a score of years treasurer of the Bridgton Savings Fund and Building Association of his city. He was, moreover, prominently identified with many leading enterprises; was the heaviest contributor and backer of Pearl Street Baptist Church. He was solicited by his fellow citizens to represent them from township committeeman to a member of the U. S. Congress. In 1869 he was elected City Treasurer, being the first Democrat to be elected to the position, and in the fall of the same year he was elected a member of the State Legislature and the following term was re-elected. In 1872 he was a candidate for State Senator, and narrowly missed an election in an overwhelming Republican stronghold. In 1874 he was a member of City Council and although that body was strongly Republican he was made president of council, a position he held for three years.

Mr. Grosscup, for fifty years, was one of the very foremost business men and citizens of his city. He died in 1899, aged 71 years. His wife was Anna D. Haires. Their children are: William H. and Charles E., of New York City; Frank K., a real estate operator, Oakland, Cal.; Edward E., Frederick V., Allen H., and Barron P., of Ingott, Cal.

Edward E. Grosscup, son of Charles C., is the present Democratic chairman of the state of New Jersey and was most active before the Baltimore convention in the nomination of Governor Woodrow Wilson for president of the United States. He was born in Bridgeton, New Jersey, and for a number of years was engaged in business in that city, later he and his brother, Allen H., were engaged extensively in the real estate business. He is one of the prominent men of his state.

ALLEN H. GROSSCUP, of Allentown, Pa., is the senior member of the firm of Grosscup & Son. He was born in Bridgeton, N. J., on Feb. 26, 1869, and was educated in the public schools of his state and in the Palms Business College, Philadelphia. Being associated with his father until he was 24 years old, then entered the federal service in the post office at Bridgeton and served in that position, to the day, 11 years. In 1903 he and his brother, Edward E., engaged in the real estate business under the name—Wenoah Realty Co. They promoted a large tract at Wenoah, N. Y., also Seaside Park, N. J., and under the name of the Manhasset Realty Co., at Philadelphia, they promoted Seaside Heights, which embraced 150 acres of land. The brothers dissolved partnership in 1909 at which time Mr. Allen H. Grosscup came to Allentown, Pa., to take charge of the real estate for O. C. Dorney; and after he had closed out all the holdings for Mr. Dorney, in April of 1910, he took a piece of land in North Bethlehem known as "Moravian Terrace" and in eighteen months had closed out that tract. Mr. Grosscup had charge for four months of the Emaus Improvement Company, and in July, 1912, he and his son, Clyde E., organized the present firm, and they are established at No. 417 Hamilton St.

Mr. Allen H. Grosscup, served as chairman of the Civil Service Commission for Bridgeton, N. J., and that section of the state. He is a Democrat. On June 16, 1890, he married Ella Adams, daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Cameron) Adams, who for some years was engaged in the glass business at East Stroudsburg, Pa. They have these two children, Clyde E., who was educated in the public schools and the South Jersey Institute, at Bridgeton, N. J., and Edith M.

He was a member of the firm of Simpson, Amsden & Company, of New York, the American branch of the Holland firm of Simpson & Company, importers of wines and drugs. Mr. Groves married Mary Margaret Weiss, who now resides in Glendale, Ohio. She is a direct descendant of Mathias Weiss, one of the original settlers of Bethlehem in 1742, and the first house built in Bethlehem remained in possession of the family until it was finally torn down to make way for the Eagle Hotel.

Walter Jedediah Weiss, a son of William and Mary Margaret (Weiss) Groves, was born in Bethlehem, Northampton county, Pennsylvania, June 5, 1873. He acquired a sound practical education in the Moravian Parochial school of the same place, and attended there until he had reached the age of sixteen years. He then determined to enter at once upon a business career, and commenced this as bookkeeper for the Bethlehem Foundry & Machine Company, retaining this position for a period of six years. Removing to Allentown, Pa., in 1895, he became associated as secretary with the Midvale Foundry Company, manufacturers of soil pipe and plumbers' supplies. This business was successful, and later was absorbed by the Central Foundry Company, a combination of a number of manufacturers in that line of business. He then became secretary of the Weaver Hersh Company, who built the large plant now occupied by the Traylor Engineering Company, and the machine shops of the Mack Brothers Motor Car Company. This business proved unsuccessful, and he then became actively interested in the manufacture of hardware specialties at Slatington, Pennsylvania, and continued in this business for four years.

In May, 1906, he accepted the position of auditor of the Mack Brothers Motor Car Company, manufacturers of commercial motor cars, and then at the beginning of its remarkably successful career. Shortly thereafter he was made secretary and a director in the company, and acted as their financial man until the company was absorbed by the International Motor Company in 1911.

GUTEKUNST FAMILIES.

Michael Friedrich Gutekunst arrived in the province of Pennsylvania in 1766. He came on a ship from Amsterdam, Holland. He was probably a native of Würtemberg. He settled in Saucon township, then Northampton, now Lehigh county. His occupation was that of a miller. He afterward purchased land with a mill, now in the Twelfth ward of Allentown. The tax lists of 1785 show that he was assessed for a grist-mill, fifty acres of land, four horses, and three cows.

January 22d, 1779, Friedrich Gutekunst, of Salisbury township, bought 143 acres of Michael Glass in Moore township, Northampton county, Pa. June 1, 1783 Frederick Gutekunst (miller) and wife, Margaret, sold this land to Henry Strauss (blacksmith) for five hundred pounds lawful money of Pennsylvania. The deed was delivered April 12, 1784, in the presence of Peter Hauck, and Johannes Kress and acknowledged before Peter Rhoads, one of the justices in said county.

After signing the allegiance paper on landing at Philadelphia, he did not write his name Michael, but only Frederick Gutekunst.

The following is an extract from the Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Vol. 8.

Frederick Gutekunst (in that list of soldiers misprinted Guderunst), was in the First Company, Third Battalion, of Northampton county, Pa., infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Nicholas Kern. The captain of the company was John Ritter, the lieutenant John Reed, ensign, Jacob Erb. During the Revolutionary War every able-bodied man (under sixty) and boy (over sixteen) in Northampton county was enrolled and had to be ready to shoulder a musket and march to the front whenever called.

Michael Frederick Gutekunst was drowned some time between 1785 and the taking of the census in 1790, as his widow, Margaret, with the children was then only enumerated. At the time of his death he owned a house and lot, 60 by 230 feet, on the West side of Lehigh street, Allentown, bounded by lots of John Meyer and Jacob Mickle.

He died without leaving a will. The orphans' court records at Easton, show that he left a widow and six children, namely: John, Adam, Christina, Susanna, Frederick, and Solomon. The last two were under fourteen years old when their father's property was sold and the final settlement made in 1796 by the administrators. Jacob Newhardt, one of the administrators, petitioned the court to appoint guardians for Frederick and Solomon Gutekunst, minors. Peter Hauck was appointed guardian for Frederick and George Graff, Esq., for Solomon.

Margaret, the widow of Frederick Gutekunst, was baptized and confirmed in Zion's Reformed church, Allentown, Oct. 13, 1792. She afterward married Abraham Albert.

Whom John and Adam Gutekunst married

Scheffer, Allentown, and of the late Mrs. Rev. J. B. Fox, Slatington, Pa.

Frederick Gutekunst, Jr., married Eva Lehr (now written Lehr). He died a comparatively young man from an injury in lifting. It is inferred that he also was a miller. A daughter, Mary, was married to Joseph Kramer. Their son, Edward D. Kramer, was the father of Thomas J. Kramer, Allentown, and of Mrs. William Strauss, Fullerton, Pa.

Solomon, Joseph, and Charles, sons of Frederick Gutekunst, Jr., migrated to Northumberland county, near Milton, Pa., James, a son of Charles Gutekunst, was postmaster at Allentown, Pa. A daughter of one of those brothers, Josephine by name, married Frank Hagenbucl.

Solomon Gutekunst was a butcher by occupation and had a meat market in Allentown. He was the father of seven daughters and two sons. The sons both died before growing to manhood. The eldest of the daughters, Annette, married Samuel Finley. She lived to a good old age, and her tombstone is in Union Cemetery, Allentown. She was the mother of the late Mrs. Samuel Thompson and grandmother of Mrs. Elmer E. Edinger and Miss Nettie S. Thompson, Allentown.

Eliza married Charles Eckert and was the mother of a son and daughter. The son is the well-known and esteemed, Miles L. Eckert, of Allentown, who married Emma N., only daughter of the late Charles H. Nimson. Their son is the genial and obliging Nimson Eckert, Esq.

Louisa L. married Ephraim Bast. They are the parents of Mrs. J. W. Ackerman, Chicago, Ill. Anna was the wife of Wm. Knerr, and Mary of Joseph Reinsmith. They had five sons: Henry Reinsmith, of Allentown; Charles; Daniel; Alfred; and Solomon are dead.

Rebecca married the late Joseph Newhard, who was sheriff of Lehigh county. Matilda, the youngest daughter of Solomon Gutekunst, is the widow of Charles Keck. She is in her ninety-third year, has her home with an adopted daughter in Brooklyn, N. Y., and visits her relatives in Allentown every summer.

Susanna, one of the granddaughters of Frederick Gutekunst, Sr., which name means a good art, profession, or trade, married Jacob Weber, the father of the late Solomon Weaver, who was the father of Jacob Weaver and grandfather of Dr. J. M. Weaver, of Allentown, Pa.

ELIAS J. GUTH.

The pioneer ancestor of Elias J. Guth's family in America, was Lorentz Guth, who came to this county from the Palatinate, landing at Philadelphia, September 19, 1738. He settled in Whitehall, then Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and in the course of time purchased one thousand acres of land, which became the Guth homestead, and a considerable portion of this is still in the possession of his descendants. In 1745 he erected a substantial stone dwelling house, which is still standing, and is one of the old landmarks of the county. His descendants are numerous and are now to be found in all portions of the United States, but principally in Pennsylvania.

Elias J. Guth, great-great-grandson of the pioneer ancestor, is one of the only two living children of the late Levi and Lydia (Wenner) Guth, and a grandson of William Wenner, of Wenersville. He was born the old Guth homestead, May 15, 1853. He attended the district schools and was graduated from them, then, when eighteen years of age, became a student at the Keystone State Normal School, in Kutztown, and supplemented this training by an exhaustive course at the Allentown Business College. For a number of years he was engaged in clerical work, abandoning this in favor of teaching, a profession with which he was identified thirty-nine years. A detailed record of his professional work is as follows: One term in Weisenberg township; one term in Upper Macungie; seven terms in North Whitehall; and thirty years in his home township, South Whitehall. He has been an active worker in religious matters throughout his life, and is a member of the Jordan Reformed church, at Walbert, of which his brother, Rev. Frank A. Guth, is pastor. Elias J. Guth has done most excellent work in connection with Sunday schools. He was one of the founders of the Salem Union Sunday school of Iron Bridge, in 1874; in 1890 he was one of the organizers of the Guth's Station Union Sunday school, and has been in office as senior superintendent of this for the past twenty years. He has served as vice-president of the Lehigh County Sunday school Association, at Allentown, for one year. Liberal in all his views, he is especially so in all matters concerning the welfare and development of the community, and gives his political support to the Republican party. He served his township as assessor for a period of three years.

Mr. Guth was married, in 1876, to Elmira P., a daughter of the late David and Mary (Schadt) Troxell, and a granddaughter of Lorentz Schadt. They have had children: Olivia Grace, married John Wenner, has a son, Luther, and lives in Allentown; Rena Blanche, married Clinto Bastian, has children: Margaret and Elias—and lives in Wescosville; Roscoe Melancthon, married Birdie, a daughter of Lewis Ritter, has children, now living—Ellis, Aster, and Lila—and lives near Guth's Station; Benton David, married Ida, a daughter of Penrose Stewart, has children—Lawrence and Annie—and lives at Alsen, New York; Henry Levi, married (first) and has a child, Naomi, married (second) Clara Nadig, and lives in Chicago, Illinois; Fremont Frank, who died in early childhood; Edward Melville, is unmarried, and lives with his parents.

REV. FRANK A. GUTH, A.M., B.D.

Rev. Frank A. Guth, who lives at Mechanicsville, since 1913, is a descendant of Lorentz Guth, who settled in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, in 1738. A large stone house erected by him in 1745 is still standing, and is one of the landmarks of Lehigh county. The homestead is still in the family name and is now owned by Rev. Guth and his brother, Elias. The parents of Rev. Guth were the late Levi and Lydia (Wenner) Guth.

Rev. Frank A. Guth was born on the Lorentz Guth Homestead, July 2, 1854, and was baptized and confirmed in the Jordan Reformed church by the late Rev. Joseph Dubs, D.D. At an early age he already showed decided intellectual ability, and his preparatory training was received in the public schools and under private tuition at home. He then attended the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutzown, which was then under the principalship of Rev. N. C. Schaeffer, D.D., LL.D., and followed this by teaching for some years in the public schools of his native county. He entered the preparatory department of Muhlenberg College, at Allentown, in 1876, from that went to Ursinus College, at Collegeville, and was graduated from this institution with honors in the class of 1881. His next line of study was the theological course at Ursinus Seminary, which he completed in 1884, and was then licensed and ordained as a minister by the Lehigh classis. He received and accepted a call from Jefferson, York county, Pennsylvania, in May, 1884, was installed the following month and was a greatly beloved and successful minister there until 1900. In 1900 a weakness of the throat obliged him to tender his resignation, which was accepted with sincere and unfeigned regret; and from 1900 to 1913 he resided in Allentown. After two years of much-needed rest, Rev. Guth became a supply to the Shoenersville congregation, and also filled a vacancy in the North Bethlehem Reformed church until, by the union of Rittersville and Shoenersville congregation, East Pennsylvania Classis constructed the Shoenersville charge, when Rev. Guth became the pastor of this flock. He remained in this pastorate until April 30, 1911, then accepted a call from the Jordan Charge, composed of the Reformed congregations of Jordan, Cedarville, and Morganland, and in this he succeeded the late Rev. E. J. Fogel, D.D., of Fogelsville. This was truly the spiritual home of Rev. Guth, as in it he had been baptized and confirmed.

The descendants of Lorentz Guth, the pioneer ancestor, have become very numerous, and the Guth family reunion has become a time-honored institution. Rev. Guth has been the president of this body for many years, and was again elected to fill this office at the annual gathering of the association in 1913. He was married, May 1, 1884, to Louisa H., a daughter of the late David and Mary (Schaadt) Troxell. Two sons have come to bless the union: John L., who is now a junior in the Central Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Dayton, Ohio; Henry E., who is a student in the Medico-Chirurgical College, in Philadelphia.

Honorably discharged Nov. 5, 1864, as a brevet captain. His brother, Martin H. Hackman, served in the same company with him during the whole service.

After the war, Mr. Hackman worked at his trade in the Reading Car shops, until in December, 1866, he was transferred to their shops at Thirteenth and Callowhill streets, Philadelphia, as car inspector, serving the company faithfully for twenty years. In 1901, Mr. Hackman retired from active work; and in November of that year, settled at Allentown, and enjoys the comfort and blessings of a well-spent life. He is a member of the Odd Fellows.

He married in 1865, Amelia Weaver, a daughter of George and Miss (Beidler) Weaver. His wife died on November 2, 1904, in her sixty-ninth year. She is buried on the family plot in West End cemetery, Allentown, where the "Hackman Monument" marks the grave. They were members of the Trinity Reformed church which he served as an elder for a number of years, but is now a member of St. John's Reformed church.

Erwin S. Hackman, of Shoenersville, Pa., was born July 24, 1849, and is a son of Isaac and Sophia H. Hackman, of Northampton county. He worked as a hired man until in 1872 he began farming and continued two years. In 1876 he began farming again and has continued to this time. He has lived in Moore, East Allen and Hanover townships, in Northampton county; and since 1897 he lives at Shoenersville, where he has a tract of forty acres of valuable land, and laid stress upon dairy farming until he retired in 1913. He is one of the elders of the Reformed congregation of Christ's church, since 1906 and has also been a deacon for seven years. In 1910 he helped to write the Shoenersville church history which was published in a volume of 74 pages. He was a school-director and supervisor.

HAGENBUCH FAMILY.

The name originally was Bach Von Hagen, which finally was changed to Hagenbuch.

Among the pioneer settlers of Pennsylvania, was Andreas Hagenbuch, who with his wife, Magdalena, emigrated from Germany on the ship, "Charming Nancy," which landed at Philadelphia, Oct. 8, 1737, having aboard one hundred and five men, twenty-five boys, and one hundred and seven women and girls. That the journey was a rough and perilous one is proven by the ship's record of sickness. Where this pioneer had lived during the first years of his life in Pennsylvania's province is not known, but as early as 1743 he had already established himself in Allemängel, or Albany township, Berks county, where his name appears upon the tax lists of 1752-56-57-59. In the latter year he is recorded as having paid a federal tax of seven pounds. The tax list of 1756 records not only the name of Andreas Hagenbuch but also that of Jacob Hagenbuch, who doubtless was a son. He was assessed as a single man. It is probable that some of the oldest children of Andreas and Magdalena Hagenbuch were born in Germany and came with their parents across the ocean in 1737.

The name Allemängel was applied to a large territory of land lying south along the Blue mountain. The present township of Albany, in Berks county, and Lynn township, in Lehigh county, include the territory of Allemängel, which meant "All Wants" and was given because of the arid condition of the land.

During the French and Indian War, from 1755 to 1763 Allemängel was on the frontier and its sparsely settled inhabitants suffered indescribable cruelties from the hands of the savage Indians who killed, massacred, and carried away as captives about one hundred of its people. That Andreas Hagenbuch and family suffered anxiety and hardship cannot be doubted.

The Monthly Journal for July, 1757, of Colonel Jacob Morgan contains the following items:

July the 1st. Sent a corporal with eleven men on a scout to Allemaengel, who staid all night.

2d. The scout returned from Allemaengel and reported they had made no discovery of the enemy.

3d. Sent party to range, to Allemaengel.

4th. Our men returned to Allemaengel, and reported that some of the inhabitants that were afraid near the mountain were moving downward.

5th, 6th, 7th. Was exceeding heavy rain and water very high.

8th. Being a day of Humiliation we applied ourselves thereto.

Owing to the massacres and depredations in Albany township the Hagenbuch family withdrew from that territory. Among the sons of the pioneer were: Henry, Christian, Jacob, and John. They all served in the Revolutionary War from Northampton county. Henry Hagenbuch had settled in Northampton Town (now Allentown) as early as 1773, being licensed in that year to keep a tavern which occupied the site of the present Bowen Grocery Company, on Hamilton street. This building was known as the Hagenbuch Opera House before it was used by the grocery company. He was commissioned a lieutenant on May 22, 1775 of the Salisbury Company, with a total rank and file of one hundred men. On July 9, 1776, he was commissioned captain of a company, which was a part of the flying camp of 10,000 men commanded by Colonel Hart. On Aug. 6, 1776, Captain Hagenbuch and company were encamped at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and on August 27th, of the same year, they participated in the battle of Long Island, in which some of Captain Hagenbuch's men were wounded. He continued to be active with the associators and militia of Northampton county as late as April 23, 1783. After the Revolutionary War he continued to live in Allentown, being succeeded in the hotel business by his son, Jacob, and he by Jacob (second), whose sons, Benjamin J. and Charles H., carried on the same house, the "Cross Keys" in later years. The hotel was conducted by members of the family for nearly one hundred years. Captain Henry Hagenbuch was born Jan. 20, 1736, died April 20, 1803, at Allentown, aged sixty-seven years and four months. His wife, Susanna (Wettsein) Hagenbuch, died June 82, 1823, aged eighty years, one month and eight days. They are buried in the old Allentown cemetery.

Christian Hagenbuch, son of the ancestor, Andreas Hagenbuch, tradition states, returned to Albany township after the close of the French and Indian War and continued to reside there until after 1790, when he settled in Allen township, Northampton county, where he died between the making of his will, Jan. 16, 1812, and the probating of it, Feb. 7, 1812. In the will he provides well for his beloved wife, Susan, and appointed Andrew Hagenbuch and John Weaver as his executors. Items of this interesting document follow:

"My sons, Andrew and Joseph, shall have the plantation, all farm stock and appurtenances where I now live.

"My daughter, Polly, shall have 166 pounds.

"My daughter, Mary, married to John Coleman, shall have 166 pounds.

"My son, John, shall have 166 pounds.

"My daughter, Elizabeth, shall have 166 pounds.

"My son, Andrew, shall have the sum of 200 pounds annually."

Susan Hagenbuch, the wife, died early in 1825, in Allen township. She also had made a will, dated Dec. 29, 1824, and it was probated April 22, 1825. The executor of it was Jacob Deshler, the husband of her daughter, Elizabeth.

Jacob Hagenbuch, son of Captain Henry Hagenbuch, made his last will and testament on Nov. 17, 1810. At that time he was an inn-keeper in the town of Northampton. The will refers to land situated in Salisbury township; to his beloved wife, Margaret, whom he appoints with John Romig, "my friend and brother to my beloved wife, as executor and guardian over my children." The will further states, "my sons shall be sent to school and shall be brought up in the Lutheran Church." The will, which was probated Nov. 11, 1811, mentions the following sons: Jacob, Joseph, John, and Daniel. Jacob succeeded his father to the hotel business; married Elizabeth Geeth; children: Benjamin, Charles, George, and John. Margaret (Romig) Hagenbuch, the mother of these sons, was born May 18, 1765, died March 30, 1845, aged nearly eighty years.

Daniel Hagenbuch, son of Jacob Hagenbuch, was a farmer in Moore township and one of the most prominent men in the northern part of Northampton county, having a farm of about 300 acres. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He died, aged seventy-three years, and his remains were interred in the cemetery at Moorestown. He married Hannah Steckel, who also died, aged seventy-three years. Children: John, married Catharine Heckman; Jacob, mentioned below; Mary, married David Heckman; Peter, married Miss Hawk, of Nazareth, Pa.; Daniel, married Sophia Hoch, he died in September, 1913, survived by his wife; Stephen, was killed on the homestead while building a new barn; he married Sarah Sholl, who now resides in Moorestown.

Jacob Hagenbuch, son of Daniel Hagenbuch, was born Sept. 15, 1830, died Sept. 22, 1893, at Bethlehem, Pa. He married Elizabeth A. Loehr, born Feb. 13, 1831, daughter of John and Elizabeth A. (Bartholomew) Loehr, the former was born in Bedminster township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, Jan. 7, 1788, died Nov. 11, 1877, and the latter named born April 22, 1792, died Oct. 28, 1877, both buried at Nazareth, Pa. Dr. Allen Wesley Hagenbuch, who changed his name to Hagenbach, son of Jacob Hagenbuch, was born June 14, 1856, in Moore township, Northampton county, Pennsylvania. He attended the Rush Medical College, Chicago, and graduated with honors. He was a physician, an alienist of reputation, was for some years superintendent of the Cook County Insane Asylum of Chicago, one of the largest institutions of its kind in the West, but his successful medical career was cut short at the age of thirty-three by death. A cut in a finger while demonstrating surgery before a clinic resulted in blood poisoning which developed into lung trouble.

He went to Red Bluff, California, for his health, living there for three years with his family and died on a train near Cleveland, Tenn., in 1890, while returning home. His remains were interred in Nisky Hill cemetery, Bethlehem, Pa. He married Agnes S. Hertzog, a native of Alburtis, Lehigh county, Pa. Children: May Elizabeth, born May 1, 1879, at Chicago, Ill.; Allen Wesley, mentioned below; Rush Emery, born Aug. 12, 1885.

ALLEN WESLEY HAGENBACH, son of Dr. Allen Wesley Hagenbuch, was born in Chicago, Illinois, December 29, 1880. Following the death of his father, Allen Wesley, who was then only ten years of age, went to Alburtis, Lehigh county, Pa., and lived with his maternal grandparents for the following eight years. During that period he attended the public schools and later entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, from which institution he was graduated in 1896. After his graduation he taught school for a year. In 1898, when the Spanish-American War broke out, he enlisted in Company B, Fourth Regiment, Pa. Vol. Infantry, and took part in General Miles' Expedition to Porto Rico, enlisting from the City of Allentown, and at the end of the war received an honorable discharge. He then located at Bethlehem, Pa., where he worked for two years in the offices of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. In 1900 he entered upon the study of law in the offices of Hon. M. C. L. Kline, in Allentown, and in 1903 he was admitted to practice in the courts of Lehigh county, and since that time to the higher courts of the state. He has followed the legal profession ever since his admission to the bar.

Mr. Hagenbach received the Republican nomination for district attorney in 1911. In 1913 he became a candidate for judge on the Progressive ticket, his opponents being Judge Trexler and Hon. C. A. Groman, the latter being the successful candidate. Upon the organization of the Spanish-American War Veterans, he was chosen, in 1904, their first department adjutant general, of Pennsylvania and was re-elected in 1905.

He was one of the organizers of the Bethlehem Trust Company and has been its solicitor and trust officer since its incorporation.

He is a member of the Livingstone Club and other local organizations.

Mr. Hagenbach married, Nov. 29, 1911, Miriam L. Kleppinger, daughter of George H. Kleppinger, of Allentown, Pa. [See History of Kleppinger Family.]

Phaon Hahn was born March 21, 1831, in Bushkill township. He carried on farming there for a time, then conducted the Centre Hotel in that township, and the Clearfield Hotel (in connection with a wheelwright shop) until 1885, when he moved to Catasauqua, and conducted the American House until his decease, Dec. 16, 1887. In 1852 he married Mary Ann, daughter of Charles and Juliana (Winters) Fehr, and they had eight children: Alfred; William J.; Julia; Ella; Araminta; Granville; Emma; and Lillie, married Jeremiah F. He attended the public schools until he became nineteen years old; then worked on the railroad and in a store until 1884, when he directed his attention to the slate industry, and, after working about quarries for five years to familiarize himself with operations there, he associated with Thomas Zellner and Owen Kern in the slate business at Slatington. In 1898 he embarked in the business for himself and since then he has been successfully engaged in manufacturing blackboards and structural slate products, and giving employment to twenty men. He also identified himself with the Eureka Slate Company, a large and successful operation, and with the mercantile firm of Hahn & Griffith Brothers, at Walnutport, as the senior partner, and since 1906 with the Slatington National Bank as a director.

Mr. Hahn has been actively interested in local politics as a Democrat for many years. He served as a school director and as assessor of the township; also as county chairman for four years. He officiated as sheriff of Northampton county, from 1902 to 1905, and afterward was elected county treasurer in 1908, an exceptional honor, for, until that time, no office-holder was subsequently selected by the party to fill another county office, which evidenced the high estimation in which he was held by the electors of the county.

In 1880, Mr. Hahn was married to Mona, a daughter of Philip Andrews, and they have one child, a daughter, named Zenobia A., who was graduated from the Walnutport high school, and also the American Commercial College, at Allentown. Her husband fills the position of master mechanic of the Coplay Cement Company.

The exact time when he settled in Allemängel, in the territory now embraced in Lynn township, Lehigh county, is uncertain; but about 1761 he conveyed a deed of gift for the location of a church, which is situated at Jacksonville, this county. Among their children were: Andraes (Andrew), Daniel, Nicolas, Richard and Barbara, born in 1764, and married in 1787 to Jacob Koenig (1763-1829). The first Federal census in 1790 records him as the head of a family consisting of a wife, three sons under sixteen namely: John, Jonas, and Benjamin, and one daughter. Benjamin settled in Indiana, and during a severe winter visited his relatives in Lehigh county. [Mrs. John J. Jones a daughter of William and Hannah (Hamm) Everett, stated that she was a school girl when her uncle made the visit.]

Daniel Hamm was an associator and militia man, in 1778, from Northampton county. He was a soldier in the Sixth class, of Capt. Matthias Brobst's company in the Third Battalion.

This farm was formerly the Follweiler place, and it was afterward owned by a Mr. Glace, a Mr. Everett, and David Hamm. The present owner became the purchaser in 1888. HAMMEL FAMILY.

Johannes Hammel, of Germany, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1746, locating in what is now South Whitehall township, near Crackersport, Lehigh county. There he slept for six nights near a spring in the wilderness. After living in that locality for a time, he and his two youngest sons left that section, but the oldest son Philip Hammel tarried there. In later years one of the brothers of Philip Hammel visited the latter, but where the ancestor and the sons had settled, is not remembered.

Philip Hammel, tradition states was born in Germany before the emigration of his parents and he was a "Redemptor." He acquired several hundred acres of land near Walbert's Station in South Whitehall. His homestead which has since been divided into several farms, is now owned by his granddaughters, Mrs. Oscar Henninger and Mrs. Amanda Wisser.

Philip Hammel was a farmer, stone mason and cooper, following these trades in connection with tilling the soil. He adhered to the German Reformed faith, and was an official member of the Jordan Reformed church for many years.

He married a Steinger, daughter of Leonard Steinger, a pioneer of South Whitehall, who owned about 1,000 acres of land in the vicinity of Crackersport. They had Paul and Joseph, also five or six daughters.

Joseph Hammel, son of Philip, was a life long farmer, and lived on a part of the homestead. He was a member of the Jordan Reformed Church, which he served as an elder.

He married Sallie Guth, a daughter of Peter Guth. Their children were: James; Hannah (m. Edward Frankenfield); Polly (m. William Measmer); Owen; Phaon; and Sarah (m. John Albright). All the above are deceased, except Owen and Phaon of whom forward.

Owen Hammel, who occupies the John Schaadt homestead in Whitehall, was born March 4, 1835. He was a carpenter for ten years. In 1860 he began farming the 110 acre tract upon which he has since lived. He built the present barn, and John Schaadt built the house on this property. He is a member of the Reformed church. His wife, Sallie, is a daughter of Peter and Susanna (Shoemaker) Lineberger. Their children are: Amanda, wife of William H. Meyer, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; and Mary, wife of Calvin Lazarus, a farmer of Whitehall township.

PHAON HAMMEL, a retired farmer, resides near Crackersport, in South Whitehall. He was born Dec. 12, 1836, in the house built by his grandfather, Philip Hammel, in 1832, it being the second dwelling house on the Hammel homestead. There Mr. Hammel spent the first 30 years of his earthly career, working for his parents. On Nov. 18, 1866, he married and in 1868 he began farming on a 60 acre farm near Crackersport. There he was a tiller of the soil for 45 years. He built a house on this farm in 1874, also made a number of other improvements. In later years he purchased a 32 acre tract, also near Crackersport.

Mr. Hammel is a natural born mechanic. He is a blacksmith, carpenter, stone mason and saddler. He built for himself two wagon sheds, a bake-oven and other buildings. He sold his farm stock at public sale in the spring of 1913, and retired upon a two acre tract at Crackersport and there he built a wagon shed in 1913.

Phaon Hammel is an intelligent and good citizen, possessed of a striking personality. Notwithstanding his advanced years he is hale and of robust health, clear in mind and understanding and able to do a hard day's work.

He worships in the Faith of the Fathers and is a member of the Jordan Reformed Church, which he served as a deacon, elder and treasurer. He has been the Democratic committeeman for 13 years, and was elected to the office of school director and supervisor of his township.

HANDWERK FAMILY.

Han George Handwerck emigrated on the ship Harle and landed Sept. 1, 1736, at Philadelphia. He was then 32 years old.

Nicholas and Heinrich emigrated on the ship Loyal Judith and landed Sept. 3, 1739.

Peter emigrated on the ship Phoenix and landed Sept. 30, 1743. They were Palatinates.

John Handweck on Nov. 9, 1758, took up in Heidelberg township, on a warrant 57 acres of land; and on Aug. 12, 1766, Nicholas Handweck took up 110 acres.

The earliest tax-list found of Heidelberg township, was for the year 1762, which includes the names of John Nicholas and Peter, who are probably three of the four above named; and in the year 1764, John and Nicholas were assessed for 100 acres each and also "Widow" Handweck, who was probably the widow of Peter, showing that Peter had died between 1762 and 1764. Nicholas has been mentioned as constable of Heidelberg in 1758 and owned a pack horse. (Pa. Arch.)

In an old tax-list which bore no date but was apparently before 1764 there appears the following names: Old Peter Handwerck and young Peter; also a John and a Jacob; also a George who was identified as a shoemaker.

John (Johannes) Handwerck of Heidelberg township, when advanced in age, made his last will dated Dec. 9, 1785, in the presence of Conrad Schneider, Peter Kohler, and Jacob Stoeckel; and it was probated on Aug. 3, 1789, showing that he died in July previous. He mentions the name of his widow as Anna Maria, and three sons: Nicholas, John and Peter, (the youngest son), having devised the homestead to Peter, for which he was to pay 200 pounds in gold and silver money; and Peter was appointed as the executor of the estate.

The following inscriptions appear on tombstones in the old Heidelberg Church graveyard:

Johannes Handwerck, born Jan. 29, 1710, died 1789
Johannes Handwerck, born Apr. 1, 1742, died Sept. 13, 1813

Catharine Handwerck, born Sept. 14, 1747, died March 10, 1808

Peter Handwerck, born Sept. 18, 1744, died Feb. 27, 1826

Jacob Handwerck, born Aug. 9, 1771, died May 13, 1826, lived in wedlock with Catharine Seidler 29 years.

It appears that Nicholas Handwerck the second emigrant above named, purchased a farm from Henry Ohl, in 1761, located in Heidelberg township, and after 1764 sold it to Peter Measemer. In that locality nothing later was found relating to this Nicholas and it appears that he removed to Douglass township, Berks county, where a tombstone was found in Fritz's Burying Ground, with the following inscription:

Nicholas Handwerck, born Aug. 16, 1716, in Hettenhausen, Interlaken, died March 9, 1795, aged 78 y., 6 m., 21 d.

By the Federal census of 1790, it appears that the following Handwerk families were in Heidelberg township: Jacob, with three males over 16 years, four males under 16 years, and three females.

John, with one male over 16 years, three males under 16 years and six females.

Peter, with two males over 16 years, and three females.

Peter, Jr., with one male over 16 years, and two females.

Peter Handwerck had two daughters: Maria (?) (married Joseph Lauchnor), and Susan (married Jacob Lauchnor, brother of Joseph). Each of the daughters died and their husbands married a second time, Joseph Lauchnor having married Elizabeth Hess and Jacob having married Barbara Koons.

The above Peter Handwerck owned a large tract of land along the Blue Mountain, parts of which are now owned by James German, William German, Andrew Snyder and others.

John Handwork and Peter Handwork were enlisted in the Revolutionary War as privates in the Continental Line, it appearing that they received Depreciation Pay, in 1782; also a Robert Handwood was enlisted as a private Apr. 8, 1782, from Maryland.

John Handwerk was in the Frontier service in the Company of Captain Jacob Greenawald from May 25, 1782, to July 23, 1782.

Jacob Handwerk was in the company of Captain Roeder and Frederick Handwerk in the company of Captain Smithers in Sixth Battalion, of Northumberland county militia, in July, 1781.

Frederick Handwerk was a captain of a company of the local militia, having made a report of his company on May 6, 1816.

Peter Handwerk, one of the early pioneers of Washington township, emigrated from the Palatinate in 1743 and located about six miles from the site of Slatington, on what afterwards became the line of the Berks County Railroad. He had three sons, Abraham, Martin and Jonas, and two daughters, Mrs. Daniel Rex and Mrs. John Raber. Abraham settled on a part of the homestead and died in 1865, leaving a family of eight children, of whom Levi, John and a daughter, Mrs. Bannegar went to Indiana. Martin lived on the homestead; and Jonas died in the township.

Johannes Handwerk, Sr., was a large land owner. On November 27, 1761, he sold a tract of 400 acres of land, located in Heidelberg township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, to his son, John Handwerk, and Nicholas Handwerk, Jr., for the consideration of 300 pounds. Of this tract 130 acres were taken up by warrant from the Province by Henry Hauser, bearing date of April 25, 1744. The 400 acre tract was bounded by lands of Michael Ohl, Peter Handwerk, Bernhard Neff and John Hunsicker.

On October 26, 1786, three years before he died, Johannes Handwerk sold three more tracts to his son, John Handwerk. They contained 112, 92 and 57 acres, and were respectively taken up by warrant as follows: Henry Hauser, April 25, 1744; Rudolph Peter, January 28, 1754; Johannes Handwerk, Sr., November 9, 1758.

The price paid for the 261 acres (allowing six per cent. for roads) was 150 pounds. Another sale records the following: John Handwerk, Elder, on November 27, 1773, sold 139 acres of land to John Handwerk his son. The last two tracts were bounded by lands of Peter Handwerk, Jacob Kemmerer, John Hunsicker, Jr., Francis Measemer, Jacob Hunsicker, and Jacob Peter.

The third Johannes Handwerk (son of Johannes, Jr.) became the owner of the homestead upon which is erected the historic house, a cut of which appears in the descriptive history of Heidelberg township. After the death of his father he cultivated this land from the time of his marriage until he died. His wife was Catharine Peter. They had eight children: Catharine, (married Michael Harter), Henry (married Elizabeth Schmidt), Casper, (married Elizabeth German), Susanna, (married George Neff), Elizabeth (married Peter Benninger), Michael (married Lydia Schneck), Rebecca (married Henry Hoffman), Nathan (married Lydia Snyder).

Henry Handwerk, son of Johannes, was born on the homestead, and there spent all his life, but two months, during which time he learned the coopering trade which he followed with farming. His wife, Elizabeth Smith, bore him seven children, as follows: Joseph (who obtained the homestead), Polly (married Reuben Henry), Hettie (married Edwin Hauser), Julia (married Owen Hunsicker), Sarah, (married Aaron Hauser), Helen, (died aged seven years), Isabella, (married Joseph Jones).

Michael Handwerk, (son of Johannes), was a cooper and farmer. He lived where his son Edwin Handwerk, now lives. His children were: Casper, Franklin, Nathan, Elivina (married A. B. Mensch), Esther (married first a Kistler, and second Wesley Buck), Joel and Edwin. The last named is a grandfather and has nine children.

The Handwerk family are Lutherans, and many of them are members of the Heidelberg church, of which Johannes Handwerk was an early member. He is buried on the old graveyard, where a brown sand-stone marks his grave.

John George Handwerk and his wife, Catharine, nee Kemkel, were farming people in Heidelberg township and their children were: George; Solomon; David; Daniel; Hannah (m. Reuben Peter); Elizabeth (m. Stephen Mayer); Lydia (Prince); and Margaret (Henritz).

George Handwerk, son of John George, was born upon the homestead and became a prosperous farmer, acquiring a large acreage of land. He lived first on the John Metzger farm, now owned by Edwin Handwerk, and afterward purchased the property now owned and occupied by Nathan Handwerk, which then contained 40 acres. He married Lydia Metzger, of Heidelberg, and their children were:

Sabina, .. (married Nathan Kemmerer)
 David, (married Judith Wessner)
 Joseph, married [first] (Polly Heintzelman) and [second] (Lovina Rex)
 Catharine, (married John McDade)
 Owen, (married Mary Kistler)
 Fianna, (married Joseph Andreas)
 William, (killed in the Civil war)
 Susanna, (married Lewis Lentz)
 Nathan, (married Anna Maria Harter)
 Violetta, (married Charles Bloss)
 Edward, (married Lydia Fry)

David Handwerk, son of John George, of Heidelberg township, was the grand-father of Henry O. He carried on farming in Washington township and afterward worked in slate operations. He was married to Lydia Shissler, of Washington township, and they had six children: Aaron, Marietta (married to Francis Leiser), James, Leanna (m. John Bolton), Harry (m. Evelina Kuntz), and Sarah Ann (m. H. W. Dorward, of Camden, N. J.).

NATHAN HANDWERK, son of George, of Heidelberg, was born in that township, February 8, 1847. He attended the common schools of the district and then worked on a farm. During the Civil War when less than seventeen years of age, he persisted in serving his country and finally was allowed to enlist on June 28, 1863, in company I, 38th Regiment, Pa. Militia, for three months' service. He re-enlisted on March 7, 1864, for three years or to the end of the war, in Company K., 47th Regiment, Pa. Volunteers, joining the Regulars at Morganzia, Louisiana, in the same year. From that place he was transferred to Bermuda Hundred, where he was detailed as regimental mail carrier for six months. He was honorably discharged with his Regiment, at Charleston, S. C., on December 25, 1865.

After the war for ten years he lived at Slatington, working at the plastering and brick-laying trades. In 1876 he purchased his father's homestead and there he has lived to this time. His farm consists of 57 acres of fertile land and the large stone house upon this farm which Mr. Handwerk occupies is one of the landmarks of that community. It contains the following inscription, which is carved on a stone, 12 by 18:

House built by

At this time Allen Handwerk was learning the tanning trade at Ballietsville, and in this connection pursued his studies under Prof. Rudy, for whom he had formed a strong attachment and for whom he had the profoundest respect and esteem. He soon became popular in his community as a penman and one possessed with more than the ordinary mind. He was an apt apprentice and became a skilled finisher of calf and other skins. He was pronounced a specialist and taught the trade which he so well understood to many others. HON. EDWARD HARVEY.

The Harvey family, originally spelled Harveye, are descended from Matthias Harveye, of Northampton county, England. He settled on Long Island, 1669, and married, December 2, 1682, Margaret Horbit, of Flushing. She died without issue, June 9, 1688, when he married Sarah Harrington, of Flushing, June 2, 1689. She had three children: Matthias, born April 4, 1690, died Aug. 1742; Thomas, born Oct. 27, 1692, died August, 1758, and Benjamin, born April 11, 1695, and died March, 1730. Thomas Harvey, second son of Matthias Harvey and Sarah Harrington, married Tamar, and had issue: Joseph, born February 8, 1734; Matthias, March 7, 1739; William, August 28, 1748, and Thomas, February 13, 1750, and eight daughters. The daughters were all born in Upper Makefield, but the date of birth and the names are not known. Thomas Harvey, son of Benjamin, who was the second son of Matthias, the elder, was born May, 1749, but nothing is known of his marriage, when, where or to whom. There was also a Joshua Harvey, born to one of the sons of Matthias, the elder, who married Elizabeth Patrick, and died at St. Thomas, August 24, 1808. While Matthias Harveye, the elder, lived on Long Island he attained some prominence, among the public positions he held being that of one of the justices of King's county, to which he was appointed October 1, 1690.

There is some uncertainty when Matthias Harveye, the elder, came to Bucks county and settled in Upper Makefield. As he was living at Flushing, Long Island, November 1, 1696, he must have come to Bucks county subsequent to that time, but we can only approximate it by a real estate deed he was party to. The public records show that on the 8th of 12th month, 1698-9, William Biles, attorney for Thomas Hudson, conveyed one thousand and fifty acres in Upper Makefield to Matthias Harveye for the consideration of £275, the deed being acknowledged in open court. In the recital the purchaser is spoken of as "of Bucks county." There is no positive evidence he was then living in Upper Makefield, but doubtless he was, and the inference is equally strong that he died there. At that time, and down to 1713, Bucks county wills were admitted to probate in Philadelphia, and this was the case with that of Matthias Harveye, the elder. It was dated April 5, 1699, and probated at Philadelphia November 23, 1706, the inference being that he died shortly prior to the latter date. He devised his large landed estate to his three sons, as follows: To Matthias, his dwelling house and 400 acres; Thomas, 300 acres, and to Benjamin, 300 acres, the remaining 50 acres not being covered by and included in the bequests. It may have been sold prior to his death or otherwise disposed of. On the death of the sons of Matthias Harveye, the elder, they devised their real and personal property to their children.

In the last century the Harveye family have become much scattered, few of them remaining in Upper Makefield, although many are to be found Bucks and other counties and states. Enoch Harvey, a son of Joseph and great-grandson of Matthias, the elder, removed to Doylestown, near the close of the eighteenth century, and purchased what is now the "Fountain House," one of the most popular inns of the county seat of the past and present centuries. Here he spent his life, dying in 1831. His wife was Sarah Stewart, daughter of Charles Stewart, Warwick township, to whom he was married, March 20, 1792, the ceremony taking place in the Neshaminy Presbyterian church. Letters of more recent years speak of Mrs. Harvey, nee Stewart, in the highest terms, as a woman of great refinement, intelligence and dignity of manners.

The Stewarts were among the earliest Scotch-Irish settlers in Bucks county, Charles Stewart being probably a son of John Stewart, who first appears in Northampton, 1729, and subsequently in Plumstead. Enoch Harvey had a family of several children, among them the late Joseph Harvey, and Dr. George T. Harvey, Doylestown. A daughter married William H. Powell, Norristown, who was proprietor and editor of the Doylestown Democrat, a couple years or more, 1832-3. The Harveys have always been a patriotic family, six of the name from Bucks county serving in the armies of the Revolution, one in Captain Darrah's company, 1777.

Dr. George T. Harvey enrolled his name in a company for the Mexican War, but the quota being full from this state his military aspirations were nipped in the bud. When the Civil War, 1861-65, broke out he was one of the first in the county to enroll, serving as a lieutenant in the Doylestown Guards in the three months' campaign in the Shenandoah Valley, and subsequently three years in the One Hundred and Fourth Pennsylvania regiment. Charles Stewart, probably the father of Enoch Harvey's wife, was an ensign in the first company, fourth battalion Bucks County Militia, 1776, his commission bearing date May 6.

Hon. Edward Harvey, one of the most prominent members of the bar in eastern Pennsylvania, the only son of Dr. George T. Harvey, of Doylestown, and Mary (Kinsey) LaRue, was born in Doylestown, Bucks county, January 17, 1844. In his early boyhood days he was a pupil in the public schools of his native place and afterward attended the excellent private school conducted by Rev. S. A. Andrews, D.D. Later he attended the high school of Lawrenceville, New Jersey, near Princeton, and in 1860 he entered Princeton College, where he remained until the end of the junior year, when he abandoned his collegiate course and commenced the study of law under the preceptorship of Hon. George Lear, then the leading member of the Bucks county bar, and subsequently attorney-general of Pennsylvania. In the fall of 1865 he was admitted to practice in the courts of his native county. In November of the same year he visited Allentown, and on the 8th day of that month, on motion of Hon. S. A. Bridges, he became a member of the Lehigh county bar.

He took up his permanent residence in Allentown on January 1, 1866, and commenced the practice of his profession in the office of Hon. S. A. Bridges. It was soon evident that he prepared his cases with masterly skill and precision, and his forceful and logical presentation before court and jury soon demonstrated his ability to cope with the intricate problems of jurisprudence. He thus soon acquired a lucrative practice, which was confined not only to the limits of his county but frequently called him to adjoining counties and into the federal courts, as well as to the argument of cases in the supreme court of Pennsylvania. He was especially well qualified for the successful performance of the duties of his profession, possessing an analytical mind, a keen insight in the vital subjects involved in a subject, a pleasing presence, and superior gifts of oratory in presenting matters forcibly and eloquently. A contemporary biographer has said "In a comparatively brief period he attained to the leading position at the Lehigh county bar and has since held that place."

Mr. Harvey's study of the political questions and issues led him through conviction to give an unflinching and earnest support to the principles of the Democratic party. Political preferment had no attraction for him, however, and he was inclined to devote his energies to his professional duties. Notwithstanding this he gave his party and state the loyal support of a patriotic citizen. In 1873 he was chosen a member of the constitutional convention, representing the senatorial district comprising Lehigh and Carbon counties. In that body he served as a member of the committee on corporations, and took an active part in framing the organic law of the state. On June 14, 1878, he was appointed president judge of the thirty-first judicial district of Pennsylvania to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. A. B. Longaker. The appointment coming to him from a Republican governor, Gen. John F. Hartranft, was a compliment to his professional knowledge and personal worth. He filled the office until the first Monday in January, 1879, the close of the unexpired term. His career on the bench was in keeping with his brilliant record as a practitioner. His decisions were strictly fair and impartial, and clearly indicated a comprehensive knowledge of the law. Only six of the cases were ever appealed, and in each of these his decision was sustained.

After his retirement from the bench Judge Harvey resumed the active practice of the law, and a large clientage is indicative of the confidence reposed in his professional ability by the public. In 1878 he was solicited to become the nominee upon an independent ticket for president judge of Lehigh county, but he declined the honor, and in 1879 he also declined to accept an independent candidacy for judge of the court of common pleas of Berks county. In 1882 he was waited upon by a committee of the judicial conferees of Dauphin and Lebanon counties who wished to obtain his permission to use his name in connection with the Democratic nomination, but this he also declined. In the fall of 1903, he, however, accepted the Democratic nomination for president judge of Lehigh county, but was defeated by Frank M. Trexler. On April 9, 1884, he was chosen by the Democratic state convention to represent the tenth congressional district in the Democratic National convention held in Chicago in July of that year.

In March, 1878, when the First National Bank of Allentown was compelled to suspend through the unexpected failure of William H. Blumer & Company, bankers, Mr. Harvey was chosen its president. As the bank was in liquidation its assets needed careful handling to insure payment of the debts, and the duties of its president were responsible and delicate. The discharge of these duties called for masterly legal ability and financial skill. In his successful and satisfactory conduct of the bank's affairs he may be said to have scored one of the notable triumphs of his professional life.

At one time he was president of the Nazareth Portland Cement Company. In 1907 he became president of the Second National Bank of Allentown, and was president of the board of trustees of the Allentown Hospital Association, in which institution he took great interest. His services as an orator were sought on many popular occasions, and probably the most notable occasion of this kind was his delivery of the memorial address in Allentown upon President McKinley.

Judge Harvey possessed one of the finest law libraries in eastern Pennsylvania and also had an extensive private library of miscellaneous books. He was perfectly familiar with literature of every description and his retentive memory and power of applying what he had read to matters in hand served him admirably in presenting vividly and pleasingly any subject he discussed. His advancement depended entirely on individual merit, and his standing and reputation as a lawyer and thinker were won through earnest and honest labor. Judge Harvey died September 7, 1913, unmarried, and bequeathed a large amount of money to the Allentown Hospital.

This mill Mr. Hawk remodeled and equipped it with the latest machinery, including rollers, a 32-inch water-wheel with a 12-foot fall, cement race, etc. It now has a capacity of 35 barrels per day of the popular brand of flour known as the "Latest."

HEILMAN FAMILY.

This family has its origin in Jacob Heilman who emigrated to America on the ship Anderson, arriving at Philadelphia, Aug. 21, 1750. Tradition states that he was followed to this country by Christian Heilman, a brother. The Pennsylvania Archives record a Christian Heilman as having emigrated to America on the ship Halifax which arrived at Philadelphia, Sept. 28, 1753. The tax-list of Lowhill township, Lehigh county, in 1762, contains the names of Jacob and Christian Heilman, paying tax of four and five pounds respectively, also the name of Jacob Heilman, a single freeman. The same tax-list in 1781 contains the names of Jacob, Peter and Christian Heilman, the latter a single freeman. About the time of the Revolutionary War, the name of Christian Heilman disappears from the township before mentioned, he having taken an active part in the Revolutionary War, from Northampton county, so did Jacob, George, and Peter Heil-man. The Federal Census Report of 1790 contains the names of Jacob Heilman as the head of a family in Lowhill, having one son over sixteen, three sons under sixteen years of age, a wife and two daughters. The same report records the name of one Christian Heilman as the head of a family in Maxatawny township, Berks county, having one son, under sixteen years, a wife and two daughters. Among the taxables in Lowhill in 1812 were George, Tobias and Jacob Heilman. John Heilman a grandson of Jacob, the pioneer, was a farmer in Lowhill township. His homestead for many years after him was in possession of B. Diehl, his son-in-law. He was married to Catharine Diehl, and their children were: Samuel, John, and Mrs. Benjamin Diehl. He died young and his widow was married a second time and removed with her husband to Lehigh-ton, Pa., where she is buried. He is buried at the Jordan Lutheran church.

Samuel Heilman was born in Lowhill in 1810. He was a shoemaker and afterward a farmer in Upper Macungie, where he settled about 1830. He died in 1864, and with his wife, Anna Guth, they are buried at the Jordan Lutheran church. Their children are: Edwin, Clarissa (m. Samuel Heiberger), Malinda (m. Owen Haaf), Sarah died single, Israel (m. Minnie Mohr), and Matilda (m. Amanda Kuhns).

John Heilman was born March 29, 1811, and was a posthumous son of John Heilman, Sr. He lived with his mother until he was seven years old when he was put out among strangers. At the age of nineteen he learned the tinker trade with Emanuel Kern. He also learned something about grinding. At twenty he hired himself with George Kuhns at seven dollars per month and while there he became acquainted with Maria Guth whom he married on December 25, 1831. In April, 1832, they went to live at George Kuhn's; and both were hired there until in 1834, when in April of that year they, with others, moved to Mercer county, Pa. They travelled in wagons and were on the way out two weeks and remained there two weeks and were on the way back two weeks again. Coming home they moved into Henry Kuhns' tenant house where they remained about three years working upon his farm. He then bought a tract of 31 acres for $1,700, to which he added in 1864 and again in 1870, until he had a total of 120 acres. The original homestead was owned successively by Solomon Rabenold, David Kemmerer, John Heilman, and he was succeeded by his son, Horace.

He owned his farm from 1837 to 1872, then he moved to Crackersport, where he died on Dec. 20, 1879. His wife was born in 1808. In 1844 they built a barn upon their farm and repaired the house in 1849. In 1842 he had typhoid fever and in 1847 the whooping cough was in the family, and from it their son, Jonas, died. The mother also had the whooping cough otherwise she was never sick, except one summer she was troubled with rheumatism. Their children were:

Mannetta, married James Hammel.	Elmira (1845-1846).

At the age of seventeen years he began teaching school at Claussville in Lowhill township, and he taught thirteen more terms, as follows: Eight terms in South Whitehall; 3 terms in Upper Macungie, and again two terms in South Whitehall. Mr. Heilman's last provis-

In 1896 he and his late father-in-law, Uriah Litzenberger, purchased the John Ritter farm of 86 acres, at the Jordan Bridge and this tract Mr. Heilman has cultivated with increasing success to this time. He devotes special attention to dairy farming and is considered one of the most capable dairy farmers in the county. He manufactures a superior quality of butter, which commands a high price in the market. His father-in-law died in 1910, and since then Mr. Heilman has become the sole owner of this improved farm.

He and family are members of the Jordan Lutheran church and he has served it as a deacon.

The name of this family is found spelled in various ways, as Heimbach, Heimbaugh, Hambaugh, Himebach, Himebaugh, Himbaugh, Himeback, Heinbach, Heimbauch and Heymbach. The name is of German origin and there are two branches of the family, descended from Matthias and Peter Heimbach, brothers. Matthias Heimbach arrived at Philadelphia on September 5, 1743, on the ship Charlotte. He settled on the border line of what is now Berks and Lehigh counties, where he secured 50 acres of land on May 8, 1750. He was a member of the Lutheran congregation near Dillingersville and died about 1756, leaving a widow and four children. His widow, Susanna, sold his land on January 4, 1757, to Martin Shaffer, but as the sale was not according to law, the four children conveyed it to Conrad Shoub on April 22, 1771. The land was partly in Hereford and partly in Upper Milford townships and comprised 74 acres.

David Heimbach, his eldest son, was a wheelwright in Upper Milford, where he died in 1816. He and his wife, Gertrude, had six children: Henry, David, Wendel, Elizabeth, Catharine and Christina. David, Jr., was one of the early iron masters, and died of fever on November 6, 1834, aged 56 years, 10 mos. and 10 days. His two sons died in the same month of fever—John, aged 31 years, 7 mos. and 9 days, on November 27, and David, aged 38 years, 2 mos. and 17 days, on November 29, 1834.

Henry Heimbach, second son of Matthias, was born August 23, 1749, and died February 12, 1837. The other children of Matthias were Peter Heimbach, of Esopus, Ulster county, New York, and Elizabeth, who married, in 1772, John Gregory.

He was a weaver by occupation and removed to Lehigh township, where he died June 10, 1822, and is buried at the Indianland church. He married Catharine, daughter of Michael Gable. HEINRICH (HENRY) FAMILY.

The family name Henry has been changed from the German name of Heinrich. F. Pichler, a high authority on the etymology and meaning of family names, alleges that it was corrupted into Henerich, Heinrich, and Henry, and its meaning was a courageous man or spirited hero, probably from the Anglo-Saxon hentan, haen or hent which meant to seize, to lay hold of, to conquer, or to overcome, as haen hentan, sich einer Sache bemachtigen, ricca, ric, rich, possessing a large portion of courage.

The family in Lynn township has as its ancestor Christian Heinrich, who, on June 22, 1769, took out a warrant for 78 acres of land situated in the township; and in the year 1790 the first Federal census reports him as the head of a family which consisted of himself, wife, son over sixteen years of age, and two sons under sixteen. One of his sons was Adam Heinrich, and the genealogical particulars relating to his family are presented in the following narrative:

Adam Heinrich, son of Christian, was born January 23, 1774, and lived one-half mile north of Wanamaker, where he died March 16, 1853, in the 80th year of his age. He was buried on a private graveyard on his farm, a description of it appearing in the township history, Vol. I, of this publication.

His wife was Barbara Mink, born November 10, 1782, and died September 28, 1854, aged nearly 72 years. They had four sons and eight daughters: Adam, Joseph, Christian, David, Barbara (married first to a Reinhard, then to Samuel Loy), Polly (m. Samuel Zettlemoyer), Rebecca (m. Joseph Rauch), Magdalena (m. — Ziegler), Sallie, Susanna, Catharine (— Straub), and a married daughter whose name could not be ascertained.

Joseph Henry, second son of Adam, was born in Lynn township, December 14, 1810. He lived on a farm in the Kistler valley for some years and then purchased the farm which is now owned by his son, Benjamin. He was a successful farmer and was accidentally drowned in the Ontelaunee creek near his home on July 3, 1871.

Christian Henry had the homestead in Lynn township, and he lived upon it all his life and at his decease was succeeded by his widow and children. He erected the present barn about the year 1846. He was a Lutheran member of the Jacksonville church. His wife was Caroline Straub and they had eight children: William, Amandus, Wilson, Lovina, Mary (m. — Boyer), Sarah (m. William A. Brendle, at Bethlehem), Carolina (m. William Henry, eldest son of Christian, owned the homestead of 117 acres which was well adapted for the successful cultivation of potatoes, and there he farmed until his decease, December 9, 1909, at the age of 72 years. He was a Lutheran member of the Jacksonville church and filled the church offices. He was married to Sarah Raubenold, daughter of Jonas, a resident of Lowhill township, and they had seven children, all born on the place: Oliver F., Daniel A., George M., William A., James J., Carrie A. He was brought up to farming, and in February, 1909, he bought the place, being the fifth generation to possess the farm. The dwelling there was built by Adam Henry. Mr. Henry owns another farm of 120 acres (38 being woodland) in the township, which was the homestead of his wife's grandfather, Jacob Kerschner, and is known as an old settlement in the district.

Hans George Heintzelman, of Germany, the pioneer of a large Pennsylvania family, emigrated to America on the ship "Eastern Branch," James Nevin, Captain, which arrived at Philadelphia, October 3, 1753. Where this ancestor settled immediately after his emigration is uncertain; but in 1759 his name appears in the tax-list of Douglass township, Berks county. Tradition states that he settled in Lynn township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, about the year 1766. George and Catharine Heintzelman became the parents of a daughter on October 5, 1770. She was baptized at the Heidelberg Union church on November 9, of the same year, from which it is evident that he had settled in Lynn before the baptismal ceremony was performed.

The ancestor was a farmer and owned a large tract of land. His last will and testament is of record at Easton, dated August 24, 1794, and probated on September 30th following. In the will is the statement: "I am now sick and weak in body, etc." The witnesses to the document were: Adam Miller and Johan Diter Heintzelman, his son. No reference is made to his wife and doubtless she had preceded him in death. His estate was divided among the following eight children: Mrs. Dennis Rex, Johann Diter, Andrew, Johann George, Mrs. Adam Thomas, Mrs. Daniel Ehroh, Mrs. Andony Bock, and Mrs. Andreas Rau.

Johan Dieter Heintzelman was born August 29, 1756. He was a farmer in Lynn and there he died May 20, 1821. He and his family were members of the Lutheran congregation of the Ebenezer church at New Tripoli, where they are buried. His first wife was Maria, a daughter of Andrew and Magdalena (Seiberling) Miller, of Lynn, and their children were: Johannes (remained in Lynn); Christian (settled in Ohio and among other children had a son, Jacob); and Andreas (who also settled in Ohio). His second wife was Elizabeth ———, born February 24, 1770, and died February 13, 1863, at the advanced age of 92 years, 8 months and 19 days; and to them were born seven children: Jacob, George, Johan Dieter, Daniel, Lorentz, and Elizabeth. Jacob, the eldest son, settled at East Lewistown, Ohio, and had three children: David, Catharine, and Polly; and Elizabeth, the daughter, was born in 1816 and died in 1898. She married Stanley Greenawald and lived at North Jackson, Ohio.

George Heintzelman was born on the homestead of his father, Johan Dieter, June 30, 1797, and died on his own farm, situated along the Schochary, near Lynnport, July 4, 1889, aged 92 years and 4 days. He was a member of the Lutheran congregation at New Tripoli, where he was buried. He served as an elder of the Ebenezer church for many years. He was married to Rebecca Straub (1804-1884), a daughter of Heinrich and Molly (Miller) Straub, of Lynn, and their children were: Catharine (m. Daniel Snyder), Mary Ann (m. Nathan Snyder, a miller), Daniel G., Polly (m. John Oswald), and Caroline (m. Joseph Rauch).

Miller and they had twelve children: Joseph, Joll, Daniel, Samuel, Lucy, Sallie (m. Reuben Frantz), Rebecca, Lydia, Fianna (m. William Folck), Polly (m. Lorentz Heintzelman, son of Johan Dieter, was born January 20, 1805, and died June 20, 1873. He was buried at New Tripoli where he was a member of the Lutheran congregation, of Ebenezer church, which he served in various offices. He was a farmer and his 106-acre farm was located above Jordan Valley in Heidelberg township. It is now the property of Reuben Fenstermacher. He built the barn which is 72 feet long, doing most of the carpenter work himself. He made his own threshing apparatus and did much threshing for the farmers of that community. He also operated a distillery and sold apple-jack to Philadelphia, making monthly trips for which he received eighteen cents a gallon. This was during the decade from 1830 to 1840. Two years later, in 1889, he moved upon his own farm of 66 acres, near Lynnport. This farm was the Lorentz homestead. In 1845 his nephew, John A. The present house was built in 1853 and the barn in 1860 by his father who purchased the farm from David Mosser. Samuel Benfield owned the farm from about 1792 until 1811, when he moved to Albany township. The present house is the third building. The first was of logs and stood 150 feet from the present dwelling; the second was a stone building and stood between the first and the present one. HELLER FAMILY.

The Heller families living in Lehigh and Northampton counties, Pennsylvania, are descended from Christopher Heller, who came to America in 1738 with six sons, according to facts established by researches of William J. Heller of Easton, Pennsylvania. A summary of the evidence adduced by him was published at Easton, Pennsylvania, in 1898, which record shows conclusively the relationship of the earlier members of said family; and gives the names of the second and third generations descended from Christopher Heller, ancestors from whom the several branches of the Heller family trace their origin.

On arrival in Philadelphia, all males over sixteen years of age entering the colony were required to register their ages; and Christopher Heller was entered as aged fifty years in 1738, while Simon Heller, his son, was reported as aged seventeen. This same Christopher Heller was granted a tract of land on the 8th day of September, 1742, situated in Saucon Township, Northampton County, Pennsylvania, and he conveyed the same to his sons, Daniel and Christopher Heller by deed dated February 23rd, 1748, according to official records in the Department of Internal Affairs of Pennsylvania, at Harrisburg. The original patent bears date April 29, 1790, is recorded in Patent Book Volume XV, at page 285, and recites: "That in consideration of the monies paid by Christopher Heller unto the late proprietaries of the sum of seventy-five pounds, fifteen shillings, lawful money, now paid by Daniel Heller into the Receiver-General's office of this Commonwealth, there is granted by said Commonwealth unto the said Daniel Heller, a certain tract of land, called "Delay," situated at Saucon, in Northampton county 176 acres. Said tract was surveyed in pursuance of a warrant granted to said Christopher Heller, dated 8th day of September, 1742, who, by deed dated the 23rd day of February, 1748, conveyed the same to his sons Daniel Heller and Christopher Heller; and the said Christopher Heller, by deed, dated 28th day of October 1785, conveyed his part thereof to the said Daniel Heller in fee."

Christopher Heller, the founder of the Pennsylvania families, was born about 1688, at Petersheim, in Europe. He emigrated to America in 1738, arrived in Philadelphia, presumably with his wife, his son Simon, and other children. He was granted a tract of land in Saucon Township, Northampton county, Pennsylvania, on the 8th day of September, 1742; named his son Daniel Heller as executor of his will; died there in 1778, was buried at Hellertown, Pa.

No record of his wife's name has been handed down to posterity, nor of his children other than those mentioned below, viz:

1. John Dieter, born in 1719, died in 1800.
2. Simon Heller, of whom see below.
3. Michael Heller, born 1724, in Europe; owned land in Saucon Township, Northampton County, Pa., near Hellertown; was known as Michael Heller, the elder, in the latter years of his life; died in 1803, and was buried at Hellertown, Pa.

4. Daniel Heller, born in 1726; was one of the two sons to whom the father conveyed homestead lands in Saucon Township, Northampton county, Pa., dated February 23, 1748; died in 1803; and was buried at Hellertown, Pa. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Keiper. She was born in 1732 and died Aug. 2, 1795. They are both buried at the "Lime-Kiln Schoolhouse." His sons were: John, Jeremiah, and Michael, the potter.

5. Ludwig Heller, born 1728, died in 1807, and was buried in Hamilton Township, Monroe County, Pennsylvania.

6. Christopher Heller, born in 1731; was one of two sons to whom his father conveyed lands the 23rd day of February 1748, in Saucon Township, Northampton county, Pa.; on October 28, 1785, he conveyed his interest to Daniel Heller, his brother; died in 1805, and was buried at Upper Mount Bethel, Northampton county, Pa. He married Mary Keiper, and had sons: Joseph; Michael, who had an oil mill; Solomon; and Daniel.

Simon Heller, son of Christopher Heller, the emigrant founder of the family in America, was born in 1721, at Petersheim, in Europe; was seventeen years old when he arrived in Philadelphia with his father, 1738; and in 1763 he purchased a plantation in Plainfield Township, Northampton County, Pa., to which he moved with his entire family. The inscription on his gravestone records the fact that he had sixteen children. He died in 1783, and was buried at Plainfield Church, Northampton county, Pa.

JACOB A. HELLER, son of Aaron and Sally Ann Heller, was born Dec. 24, 1841, in Bushkill township, Northampton county. His opportunities for acquiring an education were very limited, alternating attendance in the public schools with helping his father on the farm. He remained at home until the age of twenty-one, when he rented a farm his father owned near Stockertown, Pa., eventually possessing one of his own. He continued the pursuit of agriculture in that locality for upwards of twenty years, when he sold his property and removed to the eastern shore of Maryland, locating at Ridgely, where he remained for a period of sixteen years, engaging in farming, real estate and building operations, meeting with fair financial success. He then returned to Northampton county, locating at Nazareth, where he formed a partnership with James Ritter, doing business as Heller & Ritter, manufacturing carriages and doing general repair work. At the end of three years he sold his interest in the business in 1900, and removed to Allentown. He became interested in real estate enterprises. He was engaged in building a brick house for his own occupancy, when he was taken ill and died in May, 1905, and interment was in Forks church cemetery, Northampton county. John Jacob Henninger Family.

John Jacob Henninger was born in Alsace, Germany, Feb. 1, 1739, and died Sept. 22, 1823. He emigrated to America from Germany, and settled on a three-hundred acre tract of land near Crackersport, Lehigh county, now owned by James Hammel. He came to this country probably in 1750 or soon thereafter, and was one of the soldiers who went to the relief of the Missionaries who had settled in Gnadenhütten (now Leighton). He helped to garrison Fort Allen (Weissport) in 1756. He married Catherine Kimmel, of Berks county, Pennsylvania, born August 15, 1757, died June 16, 1837. Children: Jacob, of further mention; Christian, born 1784, died 1826; Daniel, born 1788, died 1825; John George, of further mention.

All of these five sons married and raised families and occupied farms in South Whitehall township, most of them on the original tract purchased by Jacob Henninger, their father. Christian, the fourth son of Jacob Henninger, the progenitor, occupied a farm near Wenersville, South Whitehall township. He was married to a daughter of John Peter Koehler. He became blind and died as a young man, but left to survive him five sons, to wit: Daniel, John, Peter, Christian and William. All of these later on settled in the southern end of Lehigh county with the exception of William, who in 1851 went to the village of Republic, about six miles from Tiffin, Ohio. He purchased a farm there, and going there at that time was considered as going West. He has since died and of his family very little is known. Daniel, the oldest son of Christian, bought a small tract of land in Lower Macungie township, near the village of East Texas, and in connection with the cultivation of his small farm he carried on the trade of making and mending shoes. He left two sons, the oldest, Levinus, is still occupying the old homestead, and the other is Marvin D. Henninger, the prosperous merchant of South Allentown borough.

John, the second son, by trade was also a shoemaker and carried on his trade on a small farm which he purchased in Upper Milford township, midway between the boroughs of Emaus and Macungie. He had three sons: Llewellyn, John and Hiram, all of them deceased, and two daughters, one of them Tevilia Diefenderfer, who is still the owner of the old homestead. Her husband was Martin Diefenderfer, deceased, who was in his lifetime one of the best penmen in the country. The other is Hannah Lauer, of Allentown, the widow of Milton Lauer, deceased.

Peter Henninger, the third son of Christian, was, upon the death of his father, reared at what is now known as Riegel's Mill, between Emaus and East Texas, by his grandfather, Peter Koehler. He was, on the 30th day of July, 1839, married to Salome Anna Marcks, by Rev. Jeremiah Schindel. Shortly thereafter he purchased a small farm in Upper Milford township, one mile beyond Emaus, on the road to Shimersville. He had learned the blacksmith trade with David Schall, at Trexlertown, as an apprentice. In course of time he erected a blacksmith shop on the homestead and carried on that trade there all his lifetime and up to within a few years of his death. He died in 1897, aged eighty-two years. He was known far and wide by the hobo fraternity for his hospitality. No beggar was ever turned away empty-handed from his door. To him it would have been considered a sin to do otherwise than to give shelter and food to these "weary wanderers."

The wife of Peter was a granddaughter of Conrad Marcks, mentioned in connection with the Fries Rebellion against the "house tax," as it was then known, and the alien and sedition laws. Her father was Jacob Marcks, who was enlisted as a soldier and ranked as sergeant in Capt. Abraham Rinker's company in the War of 1812. She died, May 2, 1908, aged 86 years.

Peter Henninger reared a large family of whom only three are living: Martha Marcks, the wife of Edwin Marcks, foreman of the Donaldson Pipe Works at Emaus; Ambrose J., residing at Allentown, and Milton C., a practicing attorney-at-law at the bar of Lehigh county at Allentown.

About 1886 he erected a fine residence on this farm and retired from active responsibilities. He was a member of the Jordan Lutheran church, and in politics, a Democrat. His educational advantages were limited, and he was considered fortunate if he could attend free school twenty days in one term. He was, however, sent to an English school in New Jersey for two terms, and this was the limit of his schooling with the exception of what he acquired by actual experience in later years. About 1866 he became the proprietor of the hotel and fifty-acre farm at Walbert's Station, Lehigh county, and the following three years he conducted the hotel and cultivated the farm. He sold this property, and in 1869, removed to Allentown, where he now resides in a fine home at No. 241 North Seventh street, since the early seventies. He is connected with the Novelty Hosiery Company, and the Excelsior Knitting Machine Company, of Allentown, well known throughout the country. Later he was appointed clerk in the county home, a position he held twelve years, and, although he was re-elected, he declined in favor of the office of warden of the county prison, to which he had been elected at the same time. He held this office until 1890, when he purchased a farm at Warminster, Bucks county, and followed truck farming ten years. He then sold his farm and returned to his native county, where he purchased the Harmony homestead at Myersville, where he still lives. district attorney he served before three judges, Hon. A. B. Longaker, Hon. Edward Harvey and Hon. Edwin Albright. After the expiration of his term of office as district attorney in the fall of 1882 he was elected state senator of Lehigh county; in the same year Hon. Robert E. Pattison was elected governor of Pennsylvania. He was a delegate to the Democratic state convention of that year which nominated Hon. Robert E. Pattison Democratic candidate for governor. didate for congress for the Berks-Lehigh counties congressional district. He received the second highest vote of the four candidates and was defeated by the Hon. John H. Rothermel by a plurality of four hundred and two votes out of a total vote cast of 12,481 votes.

In the profession of the law among his fellow-practitioners, he is recognized as an able and safe adviser, eminently versed in the details and intricacies of the law and ethical in his conduct. Politically he has always been a consistent Democrat. His partisanship, however, never interfered with serving the people as a whole, irrespective of party affiliations, honestly and to the best of his ability and without partiality. Notwithstanding his strenuous and active career in politics and the practice of the law, he has found some spare moments in the composition of Pennsylvania German poems. One of these, "Es Fahre in der Trehn," has been numerously quoted and copied in publications in that dialect.

In 1883 he was married to Mary Hausman, daughter of Hon. Boas Hausman, deceased, who was a member of the legislature in 1873. He has five daughters: M. In 1790 Jacob Herp is recorded in the Federal census as the head of a family of seven persons, consisting of himself and wife, two sons—one above and one under sixteen years of age—and three daughters. The names of the daughters are not known, but the sons were Jacob and Abraham. Tradition says that Jacob Herp was of foreign birth, and that he and his brother Abraham came to the New World, locating in Berks county, Pa. Abraham settled in Hereford township, and died there in 1813, leaving 200 pounds in money for his wife Ann, who survived him, and a large estate in addition for his children: Peter Elizabeth, m. to Peter Hawk; Ann, m. to Henry Derr; Mary; and Sarah.

Jacob Herb, son of Jacob Herp, lived in Washington township, Berks county, and there died some years after the close of the Civil War, when nearly seventy years of age. His wife died long before him, and both are buried at Hill church. He was a laborer. His children were: Jacob, who lived in District township; Daniel, mentioned below; Abraham, who lived in District township; Samuel, who also lived in District township, and was killed in a stone quarry; and Mrs. Lewis Weiser.

Daniel Herb, son of Jacob, was a resident of Pike township. He was born Feb. 28, 1816, and died Sept. 8, 1879, and is buried at Hill church. His wife, Elizabeth Fraunheiser, was born April 2, 1817, and died Feb. 9, 1863. They had children, as follows: Daniel, deceased; Catharine, m. to Ismal Weller; John, deceased; Adam, deceased; Samuel, deceased; Henry F.; Nathan; Sarah; and Lizzie, deceased.

Adam F. Herb, son of Daniel, was born in Pike township, Berks county, May 12, 1844, and died in 1897, aged 53 years. He is buried at Hill church, of which he was a Lutheran member, serving it as deacon and elder. By trade he was a carpenter, but later farmed a 56-acre farm, now in possession of his widow. He had been elected as school director by the Republican party. His wife was Elizabeth, a daughter of Benjamin and Miss (Becker) Heydt, their issue being Sarah, married to David Heydt, of near Boyertown, Pa.; Henry H.; and Elmira, wife of Jacob Leshner, of Northampton, Pa.

DR. HENRY H. HERB, of Trexlertown, Lehigh county, is a son of Adam F., and was born in Pike township, Berks county, May 15, 1871. Long, of Lobachsville, Pa., from which marriage there is no issue.

HERBER FAMILY.

Peter Herber settled in Weisenberg prior to 1750. He took an active part in the formation of the Weisenberg congregation, and was chosen the first elder on the Reformed side. Later, when the difficulty arose between the Reformed and Lutheran elements of the congregation which led to the building of the Lowhill church by the Reformed the Herbers remained with the Weisenberg congregation.

Peter Herber had a son Jacob, who lived in the vicinity of the Weisenberg church, and served it as a deacon and elder. He was married to Dorothea Sassaman, daughter of Jost Heinrich Sassamanhausen. He was educated in the public schools; and before he was seventeen years old he attended the "Summer Normal School" at Lynnville and later at New Tripoli. Alvin Rupp (still serving as the county superintendent) prepared him with many other young men for the profession of teaching. In the fall of 1879 he began his career as a teacher in his native township—Weisenberg, at a salary of $24 per month, and the school term was then only four months. The following year he taught in the same township; the next four terms in Lowhill, and the following twenty-eight terms till now he has been an honored teacher in Heidelberg, where he has been teaching the Peter's school for twenty-six years. He has also been the superintendent of the Sunday-school at the same place for twenty years. He works upon his small farm during the summer months, being situated one mile east of Jordan, P. The eighth child died in infancy.

HENRY H. HERBST, M.D.

Dr. Henry Herbert Herbst, late of Allentown, for many years one of the best known physicians of the city and one of the very foremost citizens of the community, was a descendant of a long line of distinguished ancestors. The family for centuries past had been seated in Altenberg, Musselwitz, Saxony, Germany, where they were active and prominent, the principal factors in the growth and improvement of the sections wherein they resided.

Dr. Frederick William Herbst, grandfather of Dr. H. Herbert Herbst, and of Senator E. M. Herbst, M.D., of Oley, Berks county, Pennsylvania, was born in Altenberg, Germany, Feb. 3, 1804; died in the year 1880. He emigrated to the United States in 1826, after obtaining an excellent literary education, and located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and there under the guidance of a prominent physician, he began the study of medicine, continuing with him until his graduation from Jefferson Medical College. He located in the Oley Valley in the section now embraced in Pike township, Berks county, and there for forty years devoted himself to his profession. Not only did he become a leading physician, but he became a prominent public spirited citizen and one of the intellectual leaders of his community. The last two years of his life were spent in retirement. He was a Democrat in politics, and in 1861 was elected county treasurer. He married Catharine Schall, born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, April 20, 1799, died in 1882, daughter of David Schall. Children: 1. Captain George S., born in 1830; became the manager of the Rockland Iron Forge, and when the Civil War broke out, was one of the first to answer President Lincoln's call for men; he was mustered into service, April 23, 1861, becoming captain of Company D, Seventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; he contracted sickness while in service, and after a lingering illness passed away Dec. 26, 1865; in 1854 he married Violetta Maurer and they had one son, Dr. Edwin M., who is now serving his third term in the State Senate from Berks county. 2. William, of whom further.

Dr. William Herbst, son of Dr. Frederick William Herbst, was born in 1833, died in 1880. He was reared in Berks county, Pennsylvania, attended the schools in the neighborhood of his home, and later attended Williston Seminary in East Hampton, Massachusetts, remaining two years. At the age of eighteen years he began reading medicine with his father in Berks county, and later took a course at the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, graduating in 1855. He located at Trexlertown in the spring of 1855 and there built up a large and lucrative practice, being a foremost physician of the county until his death. He served for thirteen years as physician at the almshouse, filled the chair of botany at Muhlenberg College for upwards of seven years, and was connected with the various local medical societies, serving as the secretary of the Lehigh County Medical Society for a number of years. He was a Lutheran in religion, a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Masonic fraternity. He married Elenora Schall, daughter of David and Mary (Rupp) Schall, representatives of families the members of which were prominent in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars of this country. Children: Henry Herbert, of whom further; Caroline E.

Dr. Henry Herbert Herbst, son of Dr. William Herbst, was born in Trexlertown, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, May 22, 1858, died Sept. 23, 1911. He pursued his collegiate preparations at Williston Seminary, and was a student at Muhlenberg College, graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the class of 1878, receiving the degree of Master of Arts in due course. He then entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, was president of his class during the first year and class secretary the last year, and at his graduation in 1881 received honorable mention for a thesis upon the subject of "Alimentation." He was also one of the founders and its first president of the H. C. Wood Medical Society of the university. For a year after his graduation he was examining surgeon for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Wilmington, then returned to Allentown, where he was engaged in active practice until his death. In addition to his practice, which was both extensive and remunerative, he served as physician to the coroner; was city physician for the Poor Directors; president of the Board of Health from 1890 to 1895, and served on the United States Board of Pension Examiners from 1888 to 1897. He took an active interest in the Tuberculosis convention held in Allentown, and was largely responsible for the success of the project. He served at the Allentown Hospital, and was Professor of Physical Education at Muhlenberg College for fourteen years. He was the author of "Etiology of Diphtheria," "Physical Education," and "School Hygiene." He was a member of the American Academy of Medicine, president of the medical section of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and a first vice-president of the society when they met at Allentown, president of the Muhlenberg College Alumni Association.

Dr. Herbst was a member of the Board of Control from the Ninth ward for twenty years, and served as its president for nine years, and when he was elected first the board was Republican by two majority. He devoted considerable time to the interests of the public schools, and it can be truthfully said that he took a great pride in the upbuilding of the public schools in the city of Allentown. He was the father of medical inspection in schools, having worked for it for five years before it was instituted. He was twice a Democratic candidate for the office of mayor of Allentown. In 1893 he was defeated by Hon. H. W. Allison, and in the primary election for the same office, June 23, 1908, he won out over Colonel S. D. Lehr, receiving 2,402 votes and his opponent 1,498. In the general election following he was unfortunate again, going down to defeat, Mayor Hunsicker winning by 4,863 votes to 4,578. When Mayor Harry G. Stiles died in office, Nov. 8, 1908, the Democrats in city councils turned to Dr. Herbst as their man for mayor and he was named at a caucus on the fourth ballot by twelve votes to ten for Colonel Lehr, N. E. Worman, Hon. H. E. Crilly and H. B. Schall had received one, two and one votes respectively on earlier ballots. At a meeting of city councils, Nov. 17, 1908, Dr. Herbst was elected mayor over E. M. Young, the Republican nominee, by a vote of twenty-two to fourteen. He administered the affairs of office with signal ability and credit, winning the approbation of his colleagues and constituents. He resigned from the Board of Control, of which he was president, to assume the duties of this office, and was later returned to that body.

Dr. Herbst stood high in Masonic circles, having attained the thirty-second degree. He was also a charter member and one of the first Board of Governors of the Livingston Club, and a member of the Clover Club.

Dr. Herbst married, in 1881, Annie A. Frill, of Reading, Pennsylvania, who survives him. Children: 1. Dr. William Frederick, graduated from Allentown high school, 1903, then entered Williston Seminary, from which he graduated in 1905, then entered the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from the medical department in 1910, now a successful practitioner, assuming charge of his father's practice. 2. Henry, who was killed in 1908 by an automobile at Jefferson and Hamilton streets, Allentown.

Dr. Herbst died Sept. 23, 1911, and his funeral was attended by many of the noted citizens of Allentown, also by noted physicians from Philadelphia and other cities of the eastern part of Pennsylvania. The school board met in special session on Friday evening, Sept. 23, 1911, and adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas, Death has removed from our midst Dr. H. H. Herbst, who was a member of this board since 1891, with a slight interim, and served as president of the body for a number of years, and was intimately known by this body as a progressive school man, ever ready to give his time and attention to the interests of the schools. He was a man of conviction and principle, but ready to concede, when led to see that some other course was preferable. Before medical inspection of pupils was made compulsory, he was instrumental in having it introduced in the schools of this city, and gave his time and attention together with statistics showing the necessity of such a step.

"To his friends he was known as eminently loyal, ever ready to espouse their cause, if just, and they only can appreciate the loss sustained in the death of Dr. H. H. Herbst. Therefore, as a mark of respect, be it

"Resolved, That the members of the Board of Control attend the funeral in a body, and that the teachers of the city and friends of education be requested to meet at the Administration building and accompany them.

"Resolved, that these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of the board and published in our city papers and an engrossed copy of the same be presented to the family of the deceased."

HERMANY FAMILY.

George Hermany, a native of Hanover, Germany, emigrated to Pennsylvania with his uncle, whose name is not known, and settled in Maxatawny township, now Kutztown, Berks county, where he remained until 1749, then went to Lynn township in Lehigh county. On March 6th of that year, he took out a warrant for 50 acres of land, a part of which is still owned by his descendants. This property is situated one mile north of Jacksonville, at the foot of the Blue Mountain. He built a log house close to a large spring, and the stone foundation walls of this spring are still intact. Afterwards he bought more land lying adjacent to the original tract, until he had a total of 255 acres. This property was deeded to George Hermany, by the sons of William Penn, and it is still in the family name. The time of birth and date of death of this pioneer are not known. It is the belief that he was buried near the log house he built and where he settled in 1749.

George Hermany had two sons, George, Jr., who emigrated to Ohio, and died there.—[Lehigh County History, 1884.]; and Philip, who was born October 10, 1759, and on December 25, 1787, he married Maria Catharine, a daughter of Frederick Steigerwald and his wife, Catharine, nee Henser, who was born in Albany township, Berks county on March 6, 1769.

Philip Hermany had twelve children, six sons and six daughters, all of whom were born in Lynn township. He farmed for about three years and then established the store and hotel which he conducted upwards of 25 years, having in that time been very enterprising and successful. He built the western part of the house; also, two other dwellings in the village, besides two barns. He was a chorister of the Jacksonville church and took a leading part in its affairs for many years. He died September 9, 1863. His wife was Salome Kistler, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Bausch) Kistler, born February 17, 1810, and died January 27, 1851; and they had ten children: Didea (born 1831, m. Jonas Brobst, her husband having died), Samuel (b. 1833), Sallie (b. 1834, m. Reuben Kreitz, both deceased), Maria Anna (b. 1837, m. On Christmas Day, December 25, 1828, he married Salome, daughter of Christian Wannamaker, and his wife, Barbara Everett. She was born in West Penn township, Schuylkill county, Pa., May 24, 1807. Samuel Hermany bought his father's farm, built on it a large saw mill, which he successfully operated in connection with extensive farming in Lynn township. He was an enterprising citizen and an able mechanic. In 1853 he erected the present imposing, large double-porched brick dwelling-house on the farm now owned by Mr. Thomas G. Hermany. He also carried on a distillery on the farm now owned by L. Elmer Hermany, his grandson. He died January 9, 1868, in his 61st year. His wife, Salome, died March 2, 1881, in her 74th year. They were buried in the cemetery at Jacksonville, and their children were: Charles, Edward, Elishu W., Lewis, Alice, Samuel, Amandas, and Sarah (m. Lewis E. Klingaman); (9) Isaac Hermany, the fifth son, was born November 7, 1809, he married a Miss Seiberling, and they had five children: Willoughby, Augustus, Mary, Hannah, and ———; (10) Philip, the sixth son, died in infancy; (11) a daughter; (12) a daughter.

His wife, Maria Catharine, died September 15, 1839, aged 70 years, 6 months and 9 days. They are buried in adjoining graves on the cemetery at Jacksonville.

EDWIN HERMANY, son of John, living at Lynnport, was born on the old homestead November 11, 1838, and there he was reared and began farming for himself in 1860. He purchased a 28-acre tract at the Jacksonville station, and lived there four years, having carried on the business of a drover. He next purchased the Jacob Wannamaker farm of 90 acres and farmed it for four years; then he sold the place and moved into a frame dwelling-house which he had erected at Lynnport (now owned by John Wuchter). After living there for six years and following the business of drover and huckster, he bought a farm of 55 acres and cultivated it for two years; then he secured a farm of 72 acres near Lynnport, which he operated for upwards of 25 years. In 1904 he moved again to Lynnport where he had bought a fine home; and since then he has lived there in retirement. He is a Democrat in politics, and served the township as a school director. He is a Reformed member of the Jacobs church and served all the church offices.

Mr. Hermany was married February 27, 1860, to Amanda L. Swoyer, daughter of Ephraim and Catharine (Smith) Swoyer, who died in Lynn township, aged 90 years. They had four children: John (an official of the Chicago and Western Indiana R. R. Co., with headquarters at Chicago), Mary (m. Jonathan Smith), living in the Kistler Valley, born November 1, 1867, and died September 2, 1906, and they had six children: Edwin, Lottie, Ella M., Robert W., Charles J., George, who died in childhood, and Thomas E.), Alfred (m. Leonora Shervill, in the State of Washington, where he is the Traffic Passenger Agent of the Chicago and Rock Island R. R. Co.), and Robert (m. Clara Follweiler, he being the Auditor and Accountant for the Missouri, Kansas and Texas R. R. Co.).

CHARLES HERMANY was born in Lynn township, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, on October 9, 1830. He was the oldest son of Samuel and Salome (Wannamacher) Hermany.

He received his early education in the public schools of his home town, where he developed a decided taste for mathematics, and having determined to adopt the profession of Civil Engineering as his life work, he entered Minerva Seminary at Easton, Pennsylvania, and was graduated in two years. Financial conditions prevented him from continuing his collegiate education, and for three years he taught school, at the same time continuing his studies in mathematics and in his chosen profession with a determination which characterized all his work in later life.

In May, 1853, he went West and found employment in the City Engineer's Department of Cleveland, Ohio. Here he was engaged for four years, gradually advancing to the position of First Assistant to the City Engineer (T. R. Scowden, M. Am. Soc. C. E.). When, in 1857, Mr. Scowden, as Chief Engineer of the Louisville Water Company, took charge of the construction of the water-works system in Louisville, Kentucky, Mr. Hermany went with him as his principal assistant, and in this capacity he served during the entire construction period until the works were completed and put in operation in October, 1860. On January 1st, 1861, he was appointed Chief Engineer and Superintendent of the water-works, which position he held continuously up to the time of his death, January 18, 1908.

The growth of the city soon proved that the works, as first constructed, were entirely inadequate, and this necessitated their general enlargement. To Mr. Hermany was assigned the duty of designing and constructing a new pumping station on the river bank, which would secure an abundant supply from the river, the stages of which varied more than 40 ft. between high and low water. The treacherous condition of the ground necessitated the sinking of a pneumatic caisson, in order to secure a firm foundation for the pump-house and the pumping engine, as well as to provide for an inlet chamber. The contract was let to an experienced and responsible firm, which, however, finding the work of a hazardous nature, refused to proceed with it. This condition obliged Mr. Hermany to prosecute the work by day labor, requiring his personal supervision and utmost skill for a number of years.

In this work he was successful, as he was also in the installation of pumping machinery designed principally by himself, which, at the time of its test run, attracted general attention because its high economic efficiency exceeded all known records. In addition to a betterment of the distribution system, he designed and constructed the Crescent Hill Reservoirs. His last great work was to design and construct the filter plant, including the covered clear-water basin and the high-service pumping station, with its equipment of pumping machinery.

Being extremely careful and prudent, Mr. Hermany conducted a series of exhaustive experiments, lasting more than a year, in order to determine the best method of treating the river water in the process of proposed purification. Very particular in all matters, he practically worked out every detail of all the work which he designed and constructed, the specifications which he prepared for his large pumping engine being an evidence of the minutiae to which he carried his work. As exacting as he was in these matters, so was he in his requirement of the fulfilment of every obligation on the part of contractors. Faithful to every duty, he insisted upon the same compliance from everyone else.

As an engineer Mr. Hermany was resourceful in every emergency, which enabled him to meet successfully any contingency, as he often had occasion to demonstrate, perhaps at no time so signally as when he promptly restored the works to service by converting the remnants of a tall stand-pipe into a great air chamber, after it had been demolished by a disastrous tornado which swept over Louisville in 1890.

These qualities, as well as his skill, attained for him an eminence in his profession which resulted in his counsel and advice being sought by the water departments of many cities throughout the country. He designed the water-works at Frankfort and at Bowling Green, Kentucky, and the pumping station at Evansville, Indiana. He also served, in different capacities, the water-works of Nashville, Memphis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Providence, Chicago, and, finally, as Consulting Engineer during the construction of the new water-works of Cincinnati Ohio.

Mr. Hermany possessed administrative abilities to a very high degree, which he manifested in conducting the office of Superintendent of Water-Works for more than forty-seven years to the perfect satisfaction of the Water Board and of every water taker, the confidence and regard of all of whom he always possessed.

His reputation for honesty and integrity was ever proverbial, and though, at times, he was impatient and blunt when he suspected unfairness or deceit (for he hated all sham and sordidness) he was at heart scrupulously just, as well as kind, generous, and thoughtful. Courteous and affable to everyone, he was deeply true and loyal to those who were privileged to be enumerated among his friends. The great affection and high esteem in which he was held by the members of his profession, his fellow-citizens, and his neighbors were shown by the great number who were present at the last sad rites, by the immense number of floral tributes under which the casket was buried, and in the last words which were spoken over his remains:

"To discover one's talents, to find one's place in the economy of the world, to put one's powers to the highest use in the service of one's fellowmen, is to merit the approbation of the Judge of all. This is what Mr. Charles Hermany did. He served this community with a faithfulness and devotion to duty that it would be difficult to equal and impossible to excell."

On December 19th, 1864, Mr. Hermany married Sallie Adams, only daughter of Daniel and Sophia (Perdue) Adams. Forty-three years of happy life followed this union, during which seven children blessed their home, three of whom, Irene H. (wife of Mr. Owen Gathright, of Louisville), Emily H. (wife of Mr. James P. Donahue, of Davenport, Iowa), and Madeline (an unmarried daughter), together with his wife, survive him. During the last nine years Mr. Hermany lost his three sons and his youngest daughter, Hetty May (wife of Mr. James L. Smyser, of Louisville). These losses were severe blows to him, from the effects of which he never fully recovered.

Mr. Hermany was a remarkably self-reliant man, and always exhibited a consciousness of faith in his judgment when once he had arrived at a conclusion. He was a constant reader, and was endowed with splendid intellectual gifts, possessing a mind which was quick to discern and independent in its deductions.

Mr. Hermany never held any political office, though he was always deeply interested in questions which affected the welfare of his country, state or city, and he did not hesitate to give expression to his views. He was a loyal member of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, and, for thirty years was a member of its Board of Trustees. He was the first President of the Engineers' and Architects' Clubs of Louisville, and was re-elected for five consecutive terms.

On January 6th, 1869, Mr. Hermany was elected a Member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. In November, 1879, he was elected and served as a member of the Board of Direction and, in 1891, as Vice-President. In 1904, he was elected President of the Society, and presided at the meetings of the International Engineering Congress, held in St. Louis during the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. During this Congress he was elected an Honorary Member of the Institution of Civil Engineers of Great Britain.

Col. James T. Donahue, the husband of Emily A. Hermany, purchased a large tract of land at Colfax, Iowa, where the famous M. C. Mineral Springs are. He built a large concrete steel reinforced hotel, called the Hotel Colfax, and is developing the place as a health resort. He invested over $500,000 in the enterprise and it is destined to become, in the near future, the Carlsbad of America.

Dr. W. H. Hertz,

Hazleton, Pa.;

"DEAR COUSIN: Yours came to hand yesterday inquiring about our family and how many brothers my father had: there were four brothers and two sisters. Your grandfather, Henry; and Daniel, who lived at Ephrata, Lancaster county, a minister; my father David lived and died at Harrisburg; and Samuel, who lived at Pottsville, Schuylkill county. The two sisters were Catherine Geisewhite and Elizabeth Ettla, all have passed away. There were more brothers of our grandfather who came to this country. I often heard father talk about cousins in Berks county about forty-eight years ago. Two of them emigrated to Illinois and they stopped at my father's to rest their horses several days and came to town. I was then living in Harrisburg and they called to see me. One's name was John and the other David. They located near Chicago. They had children, boys and girls, one of them wrote to me about ten years after, that I should come out there, that there was the place to make money but I did not go and I have not heard anything from any of them since.

My love to you all, I hope this will find you all well.

"Your cousin,
DAVID HERTZ.

"HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 21, 1899.

Dr. William J. Hertz,
Allentown, Pa.:

"DEAR COUSIN: I will call you that, for I think you are. Well, I showed your letter to my wife and at her suggestion I wrote to my father's first cousin at Milton, Pa., he being the oldest living Hertz we knew, now about eighty years old. My father and mother are dead; mother died last spring. Father two years before her. I send you an exact copy of cousin David's letter, because it gives me more information than I ever knew before about my family history. He evidently made a mistake in the name, no doubt it was (John) Jacob, they evidently must be the two and the same persons for he describes their journey. I did not mention anything about the Illinois parties to him. He gave me this all from his memory. I simply told him you wanted to hunt up your family history. I will classify them as far as I can for you. My brother John lives at Easton with my two sisters at 111 South Fourth street. I hope with this information you will be able to place our history in order.

"I would be glad to see you at any time.

WM. H. HERTZ, D.D.S.

HESS FAMILY.

The Hess family played an important part in the early history and development of the country, and research shows that representatives of the family now living in our midst are descended from at least three distinct families of this name, between whom no relationship is known to have existed. These three pioneers were John Nicholas Hess, from Zweibrucken, Germany, who settled in Springfield township, Bucks county; Frederick Hess, who settled in what is now Lynn township, Lehigh county; and Conrad Hess, an early settler in Mount Bethel township, Northampton county. All three were men of prominence in their respective communities, and reared large families.

Conrad Hess was appointed one of the Justices of Northampton county under the Crown, June 9, 1752, and was Prothonotary and Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions and Oyer and Terminer from 1760 to 1771. His will was dated July 5, 1773, and at that time he was a resident of New Britain township, Bucks county. The witnesses were Jacob Ratzel (? Hartzel) and George Scholl, and the will was probated at Easton, Jan. 6, 1797. Conrad Hess had ten children: William, Christian, Jeremiah, Frederick, John, Henry Conrad, Maria, (m. Jacob Gratz, Jr.), Elizabeth, (m. Jacob Keiler), and Ann, (m. Tobias Scholl).

William Hess the eldest son of Conrad, took an active part in the struggle of the Colonies for independence. He was a resident of Mt. Bethel township, Northampton county, and in later life removed to Northumberland county, where he died. William Hess and his wife Anna Catharine had nine children: Anna, George, Andrew, Paul, Jacob, Tobias, Abraham, William H., and Elizabeth, (m. Siegel Kohl).

Abraham Hess son of William, was born April 18, 1781. The facts seem to indicate that he was the Abraham Hess who married Sarah, daughter of Isaac Reimer of Mt. Bethel township, and removed to Moore township, Northampton county. In the fall of the year 1802, Abraham Hess, then only a little over 21 years old, left on horseback to visit relatives in New York state, after making all necessary preparations for the comfort of his family during his absence, and was never heard from again. His children were: Mathias, William, and Anna Maria C., (She was born April 30, 1803, never having seen her father, and for 39 years was the wife of David Rohn of Lower Nazareth township, Northampton county).

William Hess was born May 10, 1801, and died Aug. 8, 1858. His wife, Elizabeth S., was a daughter of John Laub of Moore township, b. Sept. 13, 1805 and d. Feb. 13, 1875. He and his wife are buried at Zions Stone Church near Kreidersville. They had the following children: Stephen, John, Abraham, Samuel, William, Mary A., (m. Henry Beil), Julia Ann, (m. Levi Silfies), Rebecca, (m. Thomas Halliwell), Carolina, (m. James W. Hapter), Sarah, and Anna Eliza.

Stephen Hess was a farmer at Kreidersville, Pa. His wife, Eliza, was a daughter of Ferdinand and Maria Woodring, and although blind, she is still living. Their children are: Theodore, Frank, Amandes, Tilghman, Stephen and William, (twins), George, Levi, Thomas, and Mantana the wife of Milton Person.

Theodore Hess the oldest son of his father, was born in 1848. He was a farmer and later a mail carrier. His present home is at Siegfried, Pa. He married Sadie Lerch, a daughter of Thomas and Hannah Lerch, and their children are as follows: Frank L., Palmer A., Elmer, de-

FRANK L. HESS is a butcher at Schoenersville. He was born in Hanover township, Lehigh county, Oct. 20, 1877, and at the age of 22 learned the butchering trade. In 1906 he engaged in the business where he now lives, succeeding his father-in-law, John Seyfried. Mr. Hess is active in church and Sabbath-school work and since 1907 he is one of the deacons of the Reformed Congregation of Christ Church in his native village. On Dec. 23, 1899, he was wedded to Mary Seyfried, a daughter of John E. and Rebecca (Andrews) Seyfried, and they have two sons: Clarence S., and Allen R.

The relationship of these pioneers is not known. Tradition states that Michael Hollenbach came to this country with several sons and located in Berks county, Pennsylvania. The tax-list of 1759 records the names of Michael and George Hollenbach, the former in Albany township, and the latter in Windsor. In the year 1802, a George Hollenbach is recorded a resident of Mahantango township in Schuylkill county.

George H. Holton, late president of the Bryden Horse Shoe Company, of Catasauqua, Pa., elder son of George and Hope Mary (Counce) Holton, was born in London, England, April 24, 1868.

Having received a scientific education in schools of Norwood, Surrey, and the city of London, England, came to America in 1886, and was naturalized in the early '90's. Entered the iron and steel industry in the employ of the Pencoed Iron Works, of Philadelphia. In 1889 he became inspector for G. W. G. Ferris & Co., of Pittsburgh, in eastern territory, and had charge of the inspection and testing of the cast iron segments used in the construction of the first tunnel under the Hudson river, now known as the Hoboken tunnel, originally undertaken by Pearson & Co., of London, England. From 1892 to time of his death, he was connected with the horse shoe manufacturing branch of the industry, beginning as salesman for the Bryden Horse Shoe Company. His remarkable business ability and tact in dealing with his fellowmen gained for him rapid advancement to the offices of vice-president and sales manager, and at the death of Mr. Oliver Williams in 1904 he was elected president and treasurer of that company.

Aside from being an authority among his business associates throughout the country, Mr. Holton held a large place in the hearts of his townsmen and in the life of the community. At the time of his death on February 10, 1913, he was a member of the Catasauqua town council, a director of the National bank of Catasauqua, Pa., and for many years a director of the Cement National bank of Northampton, Pa., president and treasurer of Emanuel & Company, Catasauqua, Pa.

He was a member of the Railroad and Engineers Clubs of New York city, the Pennsylvania Society of New York, Catasauqua Club, Northampton Country Club, and vice-president of the Lehigh Country Club.

Few men in so comparatively few years have left so deep an impression upon a community and so strong a sense of helpfulness as did Mr. Holton, and to have been taken away at the age of forty-four years made the loss to the community seem almost irreparable.

Mr. Holton married Jessica, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Oliver Williams, and leaves besides his widow, three children, Oliver Williams, Kathryn, and Jessica Williams Holton.

His death occurred suddenly at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York city.

Funeral services were conducted at Catasauqua by the Rev. George L. Gongaware, of Pittsburgh, and interment was made in Fairview cemetery, Catasauqua, Pa.

He received his education in the township school and in American Business College, at Allentown. He was then engaged at farming until 1895 (excepting a short time when he followed teamstering). For four years previous to 1895 he had taken up the study of religion during his leisure moments and when he was licensed as a preacher by the Evangelical Association was appointed to the Pleasant Valley Circuit in Bucks county. He filled this position with great promise for two years but an increasing weakness of his voice obliged him to relinquish his chosen profession and he resumed his occupation of farming. After conducting the farm of his father-in-law, Wm. J. Schantz, for one year and the 500-acre farm of the Lehigh Portland Cement Co. at Ormrod for three years and soliciting insurance for the Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. from his station at Slatington for a short time, he took charge of six large farms belonging to George H. Hardner, Esq. (which cover 600 acres of land in Lowhill, N. and S. Whitehall and Upper Macungie townships), on March 28, 1906, and since then has directed their operation in a most successful manner and placed them in a superior state of cultivation.

Colonel Melchior Hay Horn, who died at Catasauqua in 1890, was a descendant of Abraham Horn, of Easton, (born in Philadelphia) who was appointed a sergeant in Captain Thomas Craig's company, Second Pennsylvania Battalion,

COL. MELCHIOR H. HORN.

Jan. 5, 1776, and served under General Arthur St. Clair in his Canadian campaign during the Revolution; he afterward served during the War of 1812, as lieutenant-colonel of First R. P. V. R. Abraham Horn, senior, married Susan Hay, a daughter of Melchior Hay, a pioneer settler of Easton, who came here in 1738. He was of Scotch descent, a son of Malcolm Hay, who emigrated to Bavaria, where he married a German woman.

Melchior Hay became a large property owner on the South Side, where South Easton is now located. During the Revolution was one of the Committee of Safety, and served in the army as a captain.

Melchior Hay Horn, first, was a son of Abraham Horn, and his wife, Susan Hay, as stated above. He served in the War of 1812. He married Isabella Traill, a daughter of Robert Traill.

who was born in Sanda, Orkney Island, April 29, 1744. He left his home and sailed for Philadelphia in October, 1763. After a passage of ten weeks he arrived in the city of Brotherly Love. He came from there to Easton; he taught school; studied law; served as sheriff of the county; was admitted to the bar of Northampton county in 1777 and became the third lawyer in Easton. He acted as clerk of the Committee of Safety, and was commissioned a major during the Revolution. His early life was spent at Easton, where he was educated at the famous Vanderveer school. A number of years he was employed in Winter & Yohe's store. He was in business for himself for a short time, but this venture not being a marked success, he worked at his profession, as a surveyor and engineer, and then entered the employ of the Farmers and Mechanics' Banks, of Easton, as teller. In 1857, when he was thirty-five years old, he was chosen as cashier of the newly organized bank of Catasauqua. Here he served as cashier until 1888, when he became president of the institution, which position he held until his death in 1890. At the breaking out of the Civil War he was on the staff of Governor Curtin, and was immediately called into service, to aid in forwarding troops to the front. In 1862 he was elected major of the Fifth Regiment (Col. H. C. Longnecker), and in 1863 he was elected colonel of the 38th Pennsylvania Militia (the Iron Regiment), and was sworn into the United States service. He took great interest in local affairs. In 1858, shortly after his arrival in Catasauqua, he was elected a school director, and as he had taken great interest in school affairs at his old home at Easton, where educational matters were more advanced, he was able to be of great benefit to the town in that capacity. He was re-elected for eighteen consecutive years, until he was unwilling to longer serve. He served one term as burgess of the borough.

He was largely instrumental in the establishment of the English Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, and was for many years superintendent of the Sunday school of that church.

Colonel Horn was one of the foremost citizens of Catasauqua, always ready to be of help to others. He was one of a group of strong men in the early days of Catasauqua who worked for the welfare of the town in a way that should be made a pattern for the men of our more selfish generation.

HUBER FAMILY.

The name of Huber is derived from an old German word "hutre," meaning the possessor or guardian of a small tract of land or a farm, which would indicate that the family is descended from a clan of Swiss farmers, as the Canton of Zurich, Switzerland, was the original home of the Hubers, many of them still residing there, with records which date back more than eight hundred years. During the civil and religious disturbances of the seventeenth century, many of the Hubers were driven from their mountain homes and fled to Germany, France, and other European countries. From these countries they ultimately came to America, the ship records at Philadelphia alone showing that nearly fifty Hubers, not including women and children, landed at that port prior to the Revolutionary War. Their descendants added to those who have come since that time, have spread the name over the United States and Canada. In the course of time the spelling of the name has been changed in various sections, so that we now have the variations of Huver, Hover, Hooper, Hoover, and Hooper.

Hans (John) Huber was one of the first immigrants to Pennsylvania, came between 1710 and 1715, and settled near the present village of New Holland, Lancaster county, then a part of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Tradition says that he was one of the many thousands of Germans who went to England at the solicitation of Queen Anne in 1709-10, and from there to America. The records at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, show that he obtained a tract of land of two hundred acres, dated November 22, 1717, and was granted a patent for same, August 8, 1735, in what is now Earl township, Lancaster county. There he died in 1750. September 21, 1745, he had deeded his land to his son, Jacob.

Jacob, son of Hans Huber, on January 10, 1754, deeded his land to his two eldest sons, John and Martin, and took up land in Southern Lancaster county, then Martie, now Providence township. He married, and had children: 1. John, married, and had: John and Martin, who remained in Lancaster county; Jacob, went to Rockingham county, Virginia, where many of his descendants still reside. 2. Martin, married, and had children: John, who settled in Franklin county, Pennsylvania; Jacob, located in Adams county, Pennsylvania; Christian, a resident of Richland county, Ohio; Joseph and David, remained in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. 3. Christian, died without issue. 4. Matthias, located in Tennessee, and had three sons—Martin, Christian, and Jacob—and eighteen grandsons, who with their descendants are numerous in middle Tennessee and Texas. 5. Jacob, lived on the homestead in Lancaster county. He had two sons, Martin and Jacob, both of whom remained in that locality. 6. Anna, married Yost Kendrick. 7. Barbara, married Philip Stetzler. 8. Maria, married Jacob Eberly. 9. Margaret, married John Winter. 10. Magdalena, married Adam Filler. 11. Catharine, married Abraham Ladshaw. The descendants of Hans Huber, now living, comprise mainly the seventh and eighth generations, and are found in almost every state in the Union. While the majority of this branch of the Hoover clan still follow the occupations of their forefathers, that of farming and kindred pursuits, many have entered the professions, and have gained distinction as college professors, lawyers, doctors, clergymen, and merchants.

Jacob Huber, now spelled Hoover, left Rotterdam, Holland, in the summer of 1732, with his brothers, Christian, Hans, and Hans Martin. One of these brothers settled in Lancaster county, Pa., one in Bedford county, Pa., and the third in the state of Georgia. Tradition has it that the last mentioned obtained great wealth, returned to Europe and became the founder of a prosperous family there. Jacob Huber settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, married, and left a number of children. One of his sons, Henry, born in 1751, removed from Bucks county to Montgomery county in 1797, and died there, April 9, 1809. He had children: Christian; Jacob; Philip; Elizabeth, married John Rile; Mary, married William Kneedler. Henry was the great-grandfather of the Hon. Hiram C. Hoover, president of the National Hoover Association, which has annual re-unions.

The Hubers have always been men of high principle, and have ever been ready to give even their lives in the defence of what they considered the right. In reference to this we may mention a few of those who lost their lives in defence of their religious or civil rights. Among the honored martyrs of this name, who suffered in the cause of religion, we find: Wolfgang Bandhuber, a minister, of Passau, in 1529; Hans Huber, of Wasserburg, Bavaria, was burned at the stake, in 1542; Wolfgang Huber, of Lutz-enburg, Germany, perished by the sword in 1559; Hans Huber, of Horgerberg, was thrown into prison in the Othenburg, Switzerland, where, with others, he was kept in chains for life, having been taken there in 1645; Ulrich Huber, was beheaded in the north of Holland, in 1797. Following is the list of Hubers from Pennsylvania, who served in the Revolutionary War: John Huber, Berks county; Albright Huber, Lancaster county; Felix Huber, Lancaster county; Henry Hoover, was discharged at Trenton, July 20, 1785, and was living in Mifflin county in 1812; Leonard, George, Brisben, Adam and Anthony Huber. In the War of 1812 we find: George, John, and Jacob Hoover, all of Lancaster county; Martin Hoover, born in Tennessee, was with General Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans.

Jacob Huber was born on South Seventh street, Allentown, and for many years conducted a saddlery business on Hamilton street. He and his wife are interred in the Union cemetery, Allentown. He married Barbara, a daughter of Peter and Hannah Nagle, and had children: Lucinda, married Samuel Wenner; William Peter, of further mention; Henry, of Newark, New Jersey; Mary; Rebecca; Francis, who went West.

William Peter, son of Jacob and Barbara (Nagle) Huber, was born in Allentown, Pa., in 1825, and his entire life was spent in that town. He was educated in the public schools and at Allentown Academy, and then established a saddlery business at No. 810 Hamilton street, was actively identified with this until his retirement in 1890. He was a member of the Zion Reformed church and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He married _____, and had children: 1. Justina. 2. Mary. 3. Arvesta. 4. Matilda, who died at the age of forty-four years. 5. Anna Maria, who married Samuel, a son of the Rev. Cornelius and Mary (Springle) Baker, of Allentown. He was a machinist by trade, and they had children: Mildred H., educated in the public schools and the Bethlehem Preparatory School, and is now secretary of the International Motor Company, of Allentown; Frank, who died in 1907, at the age of eighteen years.

Conrad Huber was born in what is now Lehigh county, but at that time was a part of Northampton county, Pennsylvania.

Peter, son of Conrad Huber, was born in what was then the village of Allentown. He was a saddler by trade, then engaged in the grain, flour, and feed business, which he carried on the greater part of his life, but had been burned out in the great fire of 1848. He married (first) Anna, who died in 1827, a daughter of Abraham Worman; they had three children as follows: Rebecca, married to W. Wagner; and Anna, who died, aged 19 years. Mr. Huber married (second) Mary Worman, a sister of his first wife. They had seven sons. He died in Allentown in 1884.

Walter Peter Huber, son of Peter and Anna (Worman) Huber, was born in Allentown, August 22, 1825. He received an excellent education, which was finished at the Allentown Academy, then commenced working in the store of his father, remaining there until he was twenty-three years of age, and also acquired experience as a clerk in the grain and feed business. In 1848 he established himself in business independently as a dealer in dry goods and groceries, but in the same year a disastrous fire destroyed his entire stock as well as a large part of the town, and he sustained a heavy loss. In 1850 he removed to Wescosville, where he was a prosperous general merchant twenty years, then sold his business and returned to Allentown. There he became the superintendent of a fire-brick plant, a position he held eleven years; then associated himself with W. J. Egge & Co., in the manufacture of building brick. Their immense plant at Tenth and Allen streets was equipped with all the most modern machinery necessary in this line of manufacture, and their output was many millions annually. Mr. Huber was an ardent supporter of Republican principles, but had no inclination for public office. The cause of education, however, had a warm friend and supporter in him and he has served as a member of the school board of Allentown for almost a quarter of a century.

Mr. Huber married (first) in 1848, Mary A., born in Rittersville, died in 1868, a daughter of Charles Ritter, and they had one daughter, who died in 1865 at the age of sixteen years. He married (second), in 1869, Anna R., a daughter of W. J. Egge, a local minister of the Evangelical Church. Mrs. Huber resides at the homestead at No. 217 North Ninth street, Allentown. Mr. Huber was a prominent church-worker and a pillar in the Bethany United Evangelical church, to which he gave with a liberal hand and this good work has been continued by Mrs. Huber since the death of her life companion.

John M. Hoover was born in Northampton county, Pa., in 1814. About 1840 he moved to Ohio, and in 1859 he settled in Hanson township, Hillsdale county, Michigan. There he died past eighty years of age. He was married in 1839 by Rev. Joshua Yeager, to Elizabeth, a daughter of George Fatzinger, who lived in Hanover township, now Lehigh county, Pa.

They had an only son, Franklin, whose sketch follows.

FRANKLIN HOOVER, of Hillsdale, Michigan, was born December 10, 1846 in the state of Ohio. He was reared to the pursuit of an agriculturist in Michigan, and he has followed farming for a number of years. On December 15, 1863, he enlisted in the 27th Michigan Volunteers Infantry, which belonged to the Ninth Army Corps until in the spring of 1864 the regiment was transferred to the Army of the Potomac and it remained with General Grant until to the end of the war. At the Battle of the Wilderness on May 5, 1864, Mr. Hoover received a flesh wound in the hand. On June 17, he returned to his regiment and when a fort was blown up in front of Petersburg, Va., on July 30, he was hit on the right arm by a piece of a shell which disabled him for two weeks. On August 9th, he was at City Point, Va., when boats on the James river were blown up and he was knocked off from a freight car that disabled him so that he was sent to a hospital again but he was enabled to participate in the battle of Weldon Rail Road on August 21, 1864; was captured with two commissioned officers and thirty-seven privates and sent to Libby Prison; was paroled about two and one-half months later, and returned to his regiment in December, 1864; was promoted to sergeant and served as such until he was mustered out of service on July 26, 1865, at the end of the war.

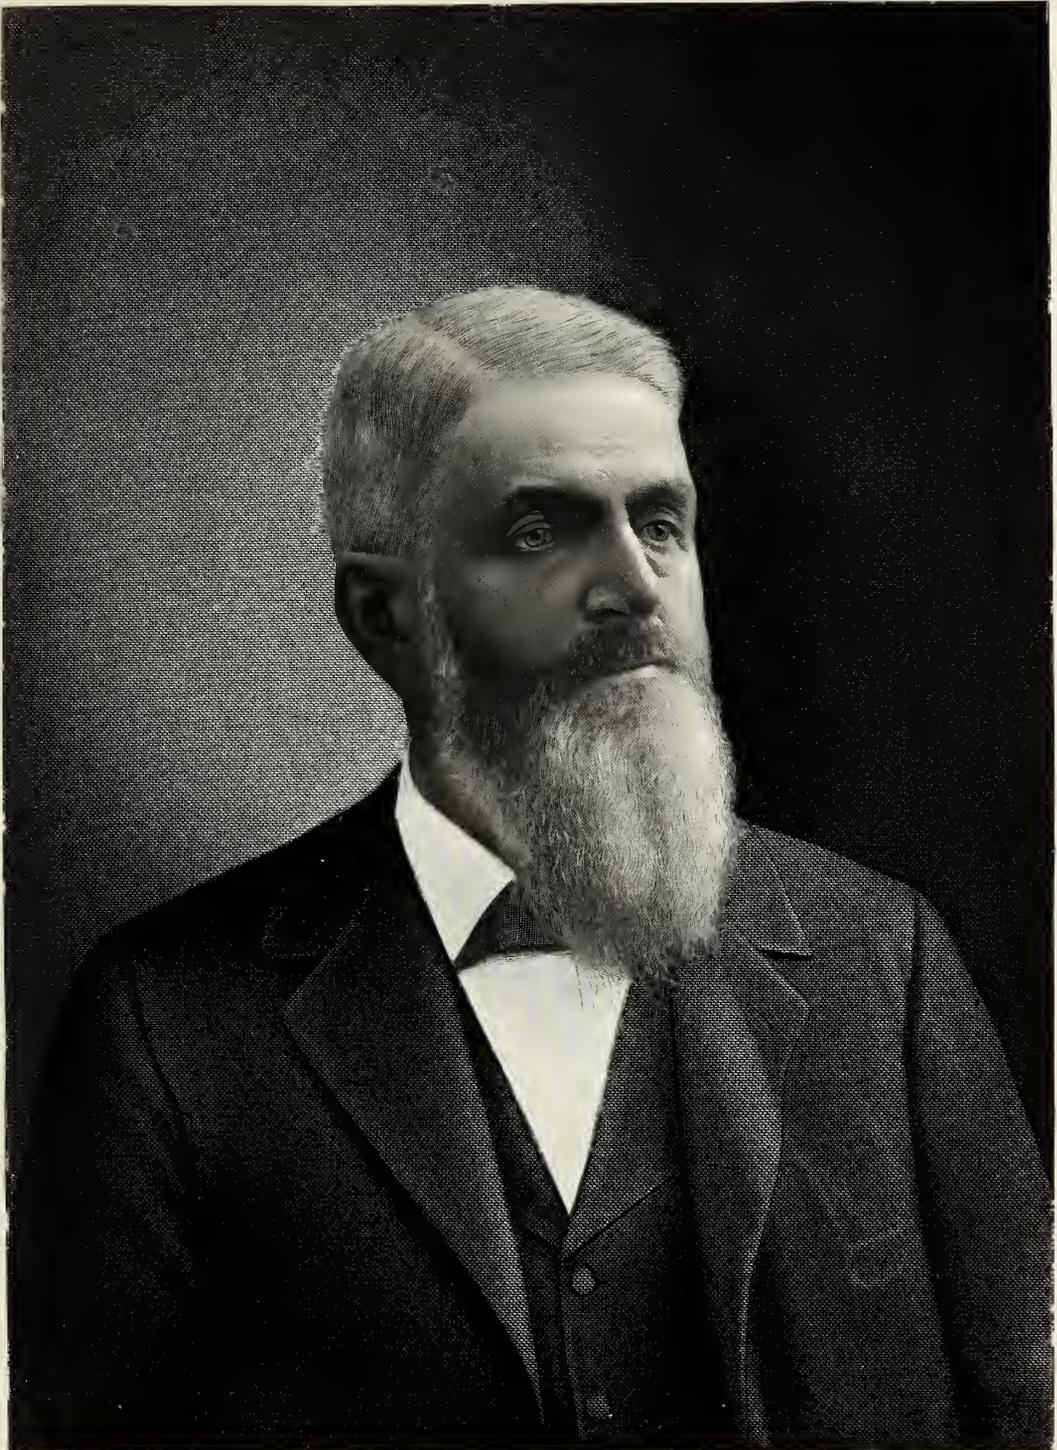

He was married to July Hart, whose people came from the state of Vermont. They had these children: Emma and Nora, both deceased; William; Gertrude; Alfred; Lizzie; Grace; Fern, and Robert R.

HUNT FAMILY.

Joseph Hunt was born in New Jersey. He died in 1859 at the Delaware Water Gap, in Pennsylvania, at an advanced age. He owned a small farm. Mary Adams, his wife, died about 1886, aged eighty-six years. She is buried at Newark, N. J. Their children were: Reuben (who lived and died at Newark); Amandes (of Newark); William; Mrs. Susan Cole; Renhennah; Mrs. Julia Cole; and Mrs. Amanda Manaid.

William A. Hunt was born at the Delaware Water Gap on June 18, 1833, and he died at Slatington on August 27, 1889, where he is buried on Fairview cemetery. He was a slater by trade, but during the Civil War he was enlisted as a Union soldier. In their religious faith they were Methodists.

Carolina Hausman, his wife, was a daughter of John Hausman. She was born Sept. 26, 1826, and died August 4, 1894. Their children were: James, John (of Ohio); Benjamin (died in infancy); Lewis (died at Slatington); Renhennah (married Aaron Leibenguth and moved to Indiana); Lucy (married Arch. Lester); and Ida (who became the wife of Samuel JAMES R. HUNT was born at Slatington, December 16, 1854. He came to Heidelberg when nine years of age; and worked upon a farm until he became eighteen when he learned the shoemaking trade, which he followed for five years. In 1881 he embarked as a tenant farmer. In 1904 he purchased his 47-acre farm in Heidelberg, and since then has developed the tract along scientific lines. He is an extensive trucker and raises much fruit, which he markets at Slatington. His farm was the Daniel Rader homestead. An old log house is still standing there which was erected long before the year 1800.

He was enlisted as a member of Co. H, 4th Reg. N. G. P., of Slatington, for nine years, serving as a corporal for three years and as orderly sergeant for four years. He was elected on the Republican ticket as township auditor and served for six years.

Mr. Hunt and family have been active in church and Sunday-school work for many years. For twelve years he sang in the church choir. When a young man he sang in the choir at Slatington. In the Sunday-school he served all the offices. They are Lutherans, and members of the Heidelberg church.

HUNSICKER FAMILY.

Johannes Hunsicker was of Swiss descent.* He settled south of the Heidelberg church, near Saegersville, in Heidelberg township, now Lehigh county, Pa. The date of his emigration is uncertain, but it is probable that he emigrated in 1748. (Pennsylvania Archives.) The earliest records of him in Heidelberg township are of 1757, at the building of the second Heidelberg church, in which he took an active part. He paid tax in 1785, and died late in 1800. His will is of record in the court house at Easton, Pa. It was made Nov. 23, 1780, and probated Dec. 17, 1800. It is recorded in Will Book 4, page 38. The witnesses to it were George Bloss, Jacob Peter, and George Horn. Items of the will follow:

The federal census of 1790 records the following as heads of families in Heidelberg township, now Lehigh county.

JAMES F. HUNSICKER.

James Franklin Hunsicker is a notable and representative scion of a family, whose American ancestry dates back a full two hundred years.

He was born at Switzer, in Lehigh county, Pa., on the 7th of November, 1852, as the second child of Owen and Sarah Hunsicker, who were descended, respectively, from Daniel Hunsicker, and Jacob Bittner. Four other children rounded out the family group in Mr. Hunsicker's paternal home: Henry W. Hunsicker, the first-born, married Ida A. Grim, and became the father of five children: Walter O.; Hessa G.; Jessie; Rhoda; and George. Francis P. Hunsicker married Ellen J. Clauser, and has three children: Katie, the wife of Joseph Knauss; Florence C., the wife of Clinton Beck; and Mamie, the wife of J. Hiram Schwartz.

Mary Alice Hunsicker was the only girl in the enlarging circle of boys. She became the wife of George Koch, and the mother of five children: Harry, the husband of Carrie E. Miller; Lula, the wife of Ambrose Kunkel; Mazie; Sallie; and Sadie. Owen S. Hunsicker married Nellie White, and has three children: Harry, the husband of Maggie Ott; Frederick, the husband of Florence Albright; and Esther. Owen S., the youngest brother of James, was the first, and so far the only one of the circle to depart this life. He died March 12, 1911.

Three distinct periods mark the career of James F. Hunsicker—a time of preparation in the beautiful country region of Lehigh county, a time of struggle in various sections, and a time of success in the thriving city of Allentown, Pa. He spent his early life in his native rural community, where hard toil and frugal ways of living toughened his physical fibre and engendered life-long habits of industry and thrift. He became deeply imbued with high moral ideals in the religious atmosphere that pervaded the humble home, and through the nurture of the church. He acquired an elementary education in the public schools at Pleasant Corner, and at Schnecks-ville. His scholastic career was cut short by the exigencies of life, but he took with him from school into the struggle of existence a mind, naturally alert, that had become imbued with a thirst of knowledge and with a love of books. In after years these traits of character proved a means of supplying that educational equipment which a lack of opportunity had denied him in his youth. At the age of thirteen, the first period of his life ended. Christian parents, a humble home, and rural life, with all its physical and moral benefits, had been the formative elements during these plastic years of preparation.

Then came the period of struggle, which figures so prominently in the lives of American men of affairs who have achieved success. For a few years the young country lad, intrepid but inexperienced, drifted on the broad ocean of life without having a definite goal. He was testing his powers and finding his natural bent. During this interval various transient occupations held his interest, in Catasauqua, Philadelphia, and Lehigh county, among others the survey of the Ironton and Steinsville Railroad, under the direction of Colonel S. D. Lehr, C. E. Afterwards he continued to accumulate valuable experience, and to develop his native business sagacity in diverse subordinate positions, as an employee in the general store of his uncle, Joseph Kressley, in Allentown; in the company store of the Allentown Iron Company; and, finally, in the dry-goods establishment of A. A. Huber. Thus, within the brief space of five years, at the age of eighteen, the subject of this sketch had found himself.

From field and farm, and from desultory occupations, he had followed the bent of his natural endowments, which led him into the commercial arena as his proper sphere. And then began the third period of his career which bears the superscription "Success," written there, not by the hand of capricious fortune, but by dint of unremitting toil and untarnished integrity.

That final period dates from the year 1870, when James F. Hunsicker formed a partnership with his brother, Henry W., and founded a general store under the firm-name of Hunsicker Brothers, at Seventh and Chew streets, Allentown, Pa. Two years later, when their uncle, Elias Bittner, joined the partnership, that name was changed to Bittner and Hunsicker Bros. Another change occurred in 1880, when Frank D. Bittner, a son of Elias Bittner, also became one of the partners. The firm traded under the name of Bittner, Hunsicker, and Company, until 1886, when their growing volume of business necessitated a radical change. In that year the original partnership was dissolved. Henry W. Hunsicker took the retail dry-goods department, while James F. Hunsicker, together with Elias and Frank D. Bittner, decided to devote themselves exclusively to the wholesale branch of the business.

This new venture, trading under the name of Bittner, Hunsicker & Co., was a success from the very beginning. Soon it outgrew its modest cradle, on Hamilton street, and became domiciled in a three-story building, on North Seventh street. In December, 1902, fire destroyed this structure completely, with all its contents. But even that disaster did not cripple, much less destroy, this flourishing enterprise. A new building, larger, and better than its predecessor, rose out of the ashes of the old. That handsome five-story structure, stands to-day as one of the solid pillars of the commercial prestige of the city of Allentown. It harbors a volume of merchandise second to none outside of metropolitan centers of trade, and it employs a large force of resident and traveling salesmen, whose loyalty and efficiency are matched by their employers' fairness and generosity.

Thus Mr. Hunsicker has risen step by step, from the humble station allotted to him by the accident of birth, to a commanding position in the economic life of his city and state. And, under Providence, his steady advancement and solid achievements were the result of his own initiative, energy, sagacity, and integrity. In the best sense of the word, he is a self-made man.

But his commercial and financial success, commanding though it is, is only the minor part of his attainments. Greater, even, than the successful wholesale merchant is the citizen, the churchman, and the husband and father. Through all the years of his busy life, Mr. Hunsicker never suffered the four walls of his business to bound his horizon. His interest and cooperation went forth in many directions, and he became an important constructive force in the higher life of his community. The bestowal upon him of numerous honors and offices marks the appreciation of his townsmen, and their public recognition of his sterling worth as a man of character and ability. He has served, at various times, as a director of the Allentown National Bank, and as a member and director of the Board of Control of the public schools of Allentown, Pa. He is a member of the board of directors of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Allentown; a charter member of the chamber of commerce, of Allentown, serving as vice-president and as a member of the executive committee since its organization; and a charter member of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association of the United States. He is also a charter member of the Allentown Hospital Association, to the promotion of whose interests he has given lavishly of his time and substance. He was a member of the building committee which planned and erected the magnificent hospital that has healed and helped thousands of sufferers since its completion. He held the position of vice-president of the hospital association for many years, until, recently, at the death of the Hon. Edward Harvey, he succeeded that accomplished gentleman in the office of president. Besides holding these numerous honorary offices, he also became identified with the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Royal Arcanum, and the Golden Eagles.

But, outside of his business interests, Mr. Hunsicker is seen at his best in the sphere of the Church and in the domestic circle. He is the spiritual heir, as well as the lineal descendant of God-fearing Swiss and Dutch ancestors, who came to this country to find freedom for their faith. He has inherited from them his sane and sincere faith in the Christian religion and his unwavering loyalty to the Reformed Church. Salem Reformed church in Allentown, the largest congregation of the Reformed Church in the United States, regards Mr. Hunsicker affectionately, as its leading member, and the whole religious community looks upon him as a typical and representative layman of the modern church, in whom creed and deed are happily blended in a full-orbed Christian manhood. He is a charter member of Salem Reformed church. At various times he has served this congregation as deacon, elder, and trustee. He has represented it, as lay delegate, at the higher judicatories of the Reformed denomination, and he has been its president for the last twenty-five years. But his most efficient religious service has been rendered in his connection with the Sunday school of Salem Reformed church, whose superintendent he has been for more than twenty years. This remarkable organization, numbering over 2,000 active members, both adults and children, owes its vigorous life and its continuous prosperity largely to the personal leadership of its devoted superintendent. Through it Mr. Hunsicker has been one of the influential factors in the moulding of the moral and religious life of multitudes of men and women in all the walks of life. The Reformed Church has recognized his talents and his devotion to the cause of religion, and it has honored him by electing him a member of the board of trustees of Bethany Orphans' Home, at Womelsdorf, Pa., and also of the board of trustees of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, at Lancaster, Pa.

In his domestic relations Mr. Hunsicker has been singularly happy. He was married to Mary Hannah Schrader on the 26th of December, 1872, and his wife became his true helpmate. She is a daughter of Charles S. Schrader and Judith, nee Fritch. There were four other children in this family: Sarah P. Schrader, the widow of J. George Snyder, who had two children: Minnie and Helen, both of whom have departed this life. William Schrader married Angeline Gackenbach, and had four children: Thomas, who married Isabella Troxell; Laura, who died in her infancy; William; and Alice, the wife of Robert Hall. Jonas Schrader married Sophia Hilbert, and had two children: Ada; and Lena, who died at the age of four. Horatio Schrader married Catharine Acker, and has one child: Edwin.

The union of James F. Hunsicker and Mary Hannah Schrader has been blessed with three sons, who are an honor to their parents and a credit to their native city. All of them have enjoyed the advantages of a higher education, and they are duplicating the enviable and honorable record of their father in their various vocations. George W. Hunsicker was born on the 27th of September, 1873. He married Eleanor Patterson, having lost his first wife, Minnie Keck, by death, and has four children: Josephine; Hannah; Virginia; and Sylvia. He is a graduate of Lehigh University, and a member of the firm trading as Dietrich Motor Car Co. Charles O. Hunsicker was born on the 18th of August, 1878. He married Lillian L. Henninger, and has three children: Mary Elisabeth; Anna Henninger, who died in her infancy; and Robert Franklin. He is a lawyer by profession, a graduate of Mercersburg Academy, of Franklin and Marshall College, and of the law department of the University of Pennsylvania. In 1909 he was elected mayor of the City of Allentown on the Republican ticket, being the youngest incumbent who has held that high office. Herbert J. Hunsicker was born on the 7th of February, 1880. He married Ruth Robbins, and has three children: Marion; James F.; and Henry R. He is a graduate of Drexel Institute, and holds a position in the office of the firm Bittner, Hunsicker & Co.

The burden of his years rests lightly on the shoulders of Mr. Hunsicker. In the Indian summer of his life he continues his work with unabated vigor, and carries the zest of youth into his manifold interests. Surrounded by his estimable wife, and by his sons, his beautiful home forms an attractive spot in the city of Allentown, where peace and joy reign supreme, and where gracious hospitality is dispensed with heart and hand. Here he finds the richest reward of his earnest, honest, industrious life in the affection of his family, the esteem of his friends, and the respect of his fellow-men.

FRANCIS P. HUNSICKER, son of Owen and grandson of Daniel, is the senior member of the firm of Hunsicker & Co., wholesale and retail cigar and tobacco dealers at Allentown. He is a native of Heidelberg township was born July 4, 1855. He was educated in the public schools and in the Weaversville Academy in Northampton county. In 1870 he came to Allentown where he learned the cigar making trade which he followed until 1876, at which time he engaged in the tobacco business where the Hersh hardware store is now located. In 1878 he moved to 731 Hamilton street, and continued enlarging his business that Hunsicker & Co., are now the largest tobacco dealers in Lehigh county. The firm employs twelve people. The concern erected Hunsicker Building at 17-19 North Seventh street, and No. 18 on North Church street. It is a modern office building, eleven stories high and one-half square in depth. Mr. Hunsicker and family are members of Salem Reformed church. He is an elder of the church since 1905. WALTER L. JONES.

Walter L. Jones, former alderman of Allentown, Pa., and native of Wales, was born March 4th, 1840. At the age of two years he came to this country with his parents. He was educated at Minersville where he had been engaged in the mercantile business for a number of years. On April 10th, 1857, came to Allentown and secured a position as clerk in the general store of Pretz-Guth & Company, leading mercantile dealers in the Lehigh Valley. He remained in their employ for several years, then entered the partnership of Burdge and Jones, located in the building now occupied by Henry E. Peters as a drug store on Hamilton street below Seventh, remaining with this firm for about nine years. He next became a railroad contractor and built eleven miles of the Dutchess and Columbia Railroad, extending from Fishkill-Landing-on-the-Hudson to Pine Planes in New York, after which he returned to Allentown and served as chief bookkeeper and financier for Hersh, Mosser & Company, for five years. In 1875 he was elected as alderman from the Third ward and he continued to serve the office until his death. Mr. Jones was known as the "Republican War Horse of Lehigh," and enjoyed the distinction of being the only man who ever defeated "Matt" Quay by his own tactics, during the campaign of 1895, commonly known as the "Quay-Hastings Campaign." In that campaign the county convention for the election of delegates to the state convention consisted of 164 delegates of which number Mr. Jones had 123 and Quay 41. This constituted the worst defeat Quay ever suffered in his career and he remarked to U. S. Senator Best of Missouri that "Alderman Jones was the keenest organizer in America." The year ensuing this defeat, Mr. Jones carried Lehigh county for Quay, which incident has not been accomplished by a political leader before or after.

Alderman Jones had been the acknowledged leader of Lehigh county for many years, but in recent years he had been less active. The first seventeen years of his incumbency he occupied rooms above the A. M. Springer & Company's store on Center Square; the next nine years he was located in the old Odd Fellows' Hall, and from 1901 to the time of his death, occupied a suite of rooms at No. 742 Hamilton street. Mr. Jones had tried between 27,000 and 28,000 cases as an alderman, which figure had not been reached by any other alderman in the country. The majority of cases which were brought before Alderman Jones were settled before him. He was in city council from 1872 to 1874.

Mr. Jones was a national delegate at Philadelphia in 1896 nominating McKinley and Roosevelt; was alternate delegate for Matthew Stanley Quay to the Chicago convention nominating Benjamin Harrison for president; was delegate to a number of state conventions and a member of the Republican state committee for many years. When he assumed the leadership of Lehigh county, the Democratic majority was nominally 3,600 and through hard labor and manipulation it was gradually decreased until finally Republicans were elected to office in this "Democratic Gibraltar of Lehigh County."

Mr. Jones was connected with the Royal Arcanum and Knights of Honor.

In 1865 he was married to Mary C. Kline, daughter of Charles and Caroline (Ludwig) Kline, and a granddaughter of the long deceased Benjamin Ludwig, a foremost citizen of Allentown and who was prominently connected with the organizing of St. Paul's Lutheran church, on South Eighth street, and prominent in business and financial circles. Mr. and Mrs. Jones had eight children, five of whom are deceased:

(1). Minnie M., widow of Jacob Bumgardner.

(2). Guy R., whose sketch follows.

He died with his son, Walter L., in 1869, at the age of 85 years, and is buried in the Union cemetery, Allentown. He was pronounced the most noted singer in the British Isles and possessed a most excellent bass voice. Mr. Jones was tendered many high offers, all of which he refused. Mr. Jones was also a skilled mechanic. His wife was Mary Lewis, who died about 1878, aged 83 years and they had children:

Two, who died in infancy; (1) A daughter, who died in early childhood; (2) David, who was killed on the railroad in 1842, soon after coming to America; (3) Edward, who died at Tamaqua, Pa.; Sarah Ann, who married Hugh Griffith and resided in Allentown until her death in 1908, at the age of 75 years; John, who died at Minersville, Pa.; William, who died at Allentown, and Walter L., before mentioned.

Guy R. Jones, was born in Allentown, Oct. 28, 1873. He was educated in the public schools and the Allentown Business College. At the age of eighteen he learned the upholstering trade which he followed three years. In 1895 he became associated with his father and had charge of the extensive insurance business of Walter L. Jones & Son. He was appointed by the governor, May 1, 1913, to succeed his deceased father in the office of alderman of the Third ward; and in the fall of 1913, he was nominated by the Republicans for that office. Socially he is a member of Jordan Lodge No. 673, F. & A. M.; B. P. O. E.; Washington Camp No. 11, P. O.

S. of A., and the Royal Arcanum. He resides with his mother at No. 103 South Eighth street.

KEIM FAMILY.

Few American families can trace their lineage through as many centuries as the Keim family of Eastern Pennsylvania. An ancient manuscript in the German language brought to America by Johannes Keim in 1706, and held as a priceless heirloom, refers to the family as belonging to one of the oldest and most noted of the German nobility and already famed in the year 1020 A. D.

The first of the family was Gottschalck Keim who was in the aforesaid year (1020) advanced to knightly and courtly position by the German King Conrad II and invested with the castle and possession of Gerolsek; not far distant from Strassburg. The cause of such preferment is unknown, the king only mentioned the aforesaid Gottschalk in the feudal record of his extraordinary love and fidelity. He married at Geroldsek, Elgith von Wartensleben and died 1075 A. D.; leaving two sons—Hinkmer and Theodabart Keim.

The ruins of Geroldsek are yet visible in the Vosges mountains at the entrance to the Taberner Senke defile of which the castle was a defense. A huge tower one-half preserved and an extensive "Rittersaal" or "Knights Hall" are still traceable. It commands a fine view of the Vosges and plain of the Rhine. The manuscript continues down to the Thirty Years' war and thirty years after when the name still survives in Speier northwest of the ancient family seat. From that same region, Ludwig Hericourt Keim served as an officer in the thirty years' war (1618-1648) in the army of Bernhard, Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, who succeeded to the command upon the death of Gustavus Adolphus and who in 1738 won a signal victory over the imperial forces at Remfelden, and the following year captured the strong fortress of Breisach.

Twelve years later the young hero Ludwig Hericourt took unto himself a bride. To her was given a "Schatzkätchen" (Jewelry case) with the following inscription: "Anno Domini MDCLX, Ludwig Hericourt and Bertha Keim, Hondgraffschaft, Elsaas" with the motto beneath,

"Ich liebe doch in aller still, Einen schatz den ich nur will."

"I love, in secret to acquire,
A treasure I alone desire."

Ludwig H. and Bertha Keim left two sons; George and Joseph, merchants residing near Speyer, in the direction of Landau. George had a son, Johannes, who in turn left a son Johannes, who after the French army had devastated the Palatinate came with his bride, Katharine De Lurch, settled in Oley, Berks county, in 1706. They brought the ancient manuscript and the trinket casket across the Atlantic and from then kin Johannes Keim to the Land of the Penn's among whom was Johannes and Maria Keim. One of their sons, Johannes, was born in Germany, July 20, 1754, and died on August 9, 1815, and was buried at Shoenersville church. Henry Keim, son of Johannes, a laborer, resided near Altenau where his remains lie buried. He had issue: Samuel; Joseph; Sara, married to Zerfass and another daughter, name unknown, they have handed down from generation to generation as a priceless heritage. The casket was recently presented by Miss Harriet V. DeBenneville Keim to the Museum of the National Society of the D. A. R., Washington, D. C. From Johannes and Katherine Keim, descended a long line of military officers, statesmen, journalists and business men.

Other members of the family followed their

The latter was a soldier in the War of 1812, and during the active years of his life followed contracting and building. Upon graduation he located in Catasauqua and practiced medicine for a period of thirty years, when he was succeeded by his son, Dr. Harry J. In addition to his large practice, Dr. Keim was deeply interested in municipal affairs. He was a member of the board of school directors for three years, of the town council for six years, during which period he presided over its meeting. In 1906 he was elected chief burgess, which office he served for three years. In 1896 he was a delegate to the Democratic state convention at Harrisburg. KERN FAMILY.

Nicholas Kern, the ancestor of the Kern family, sailed from Rotterdam, Holland, on the ship

"Adventurer," and arrived at Philadelphia on Oct. 2, 1727. The first mention of him in Lehigh region is on Sept. 23, 1734, when he and wife were sponsors to the child of Peter Troxell, baptized by Rev. John Philip Boehm. He probably lived in Whitehall township sometime before securing title to land. The first warrant for which he applied was dated Dec. 3, 1735, for 150 acres; the second, Feb. 24, 1737, for 100 acres; and the third on Oct. 28, 1737, for 50 acres. The first and third warrant for 200 acres were surveyed Nov. 7, 1737, described as situated on a branch of the Lehigh creek, in Bucks county, beginning at a marked elm tree by vacant land, south 20 degrees, west 142 perches, north 70 degrees, west 239 perches; then by land of Caspar Wistar, north 20 degrees, west 63 perches, and by vacant land north 20 degrees, west 79 perches; thence by vacant land south 70 degrees, west 239 perches to the place of beginning; containing 200 acres and 16 perches.

The warrant dated Feb. 24, 1737, was for 100 acres beginning at a small white oak; thence by vacant land south 20 degrees west, 136 perches to a post, a corner of Leonard Steininger's land; thence by the same north 70 degrees west, 160 perches to the corner of Jacob Weaver's land; thence by the same north 20 degrees east, 106 perches by vacant land south 70 degrees east, 160 perches to the place of beginning.

On Feb. 27, 1739, Nicholas Kern and wife, Maria Margaret, sold these tracts to Lawrence Guth.

The names of Nicholas Kern and his wife appeared as sponsors in the Egypt Reformed church records in 1736, 1739, 1740 and 1741. On Dec. 13, 1744, Cornelia Kern, daughter of Nicholas Kern, was a sponsor to the child of John Nicholas Schneider. June 14, 1741, Nicholas Kern and his wife Margaret, were sponsors to John Nicholas, son of John Senders, and Nov. 29, 1741, to John Nicholas, son of Ulrich Sensinger.

Lorentz Kern, son of Nicholas, was born March 5, 1741, and baptized May 7, 1741, at the Jordan Lutheran church. His sponsors were Lorentz Guth and wife, Salome. On Nov. 24, 1737, he secured a warrant for 300 acres, and on March 15, 1738, one for 200 acres of land situated along the Lehigh river, described as the west branch of the Delaware. Gottfried Knauss in 1739, secured 200 acres adjoining Kern on the south.

After 1741, we find no mention of Nicholas Kern in Whitehall, and it is probable that at that early date he removed to his 500-acre tract and began to cultivate the land. He was naturalized

April 10, 1742. At this time several of his sons were nearing manhood and with their assistance, at an early date, he erected a grist mill and a saw mill on his land, which he mentions in his will. He died in the early part of 1749 and his will was probated May 11, 1749. This will was one of the first will recorded by an inhabitant of this section and is recorded at Philadelphia in Book I, page 120. It reads as follows:

"In the Name of the Holy Trinity, Amen. I, Nicholas Kern, being afflicted by the Lord's Providence with Sickness and weakness of Body, which makes me doubtfull about my recovery, but being by God's Mercy of Sound Mind, I first of all recommend my soul into the hands of my dear Redeemer, Jesus Christ, and have declared this to be my last Will and Testament in the presence of the under-written Witnesses in manner as follows, vizt; first, it is my will and order that my wife Maria Margaretha after my decease shall hold our Plantation, Grist Mill and Saw Mill, all our cattle and implements, together with all the moveable or Household furniture until the youngest of our children, vizt; Lorentz Kern, will be of age; that is, my said wife Maria Margaretha shall, until the time above limited, have full power to manage and act with all and every of our aforesaid goods or estate of what denomination soever, for the best of herself and the children, according to Justice, and as it ought to be done and at the time our said youngest son will be of age then all our Estate above mentioned, to be justly divided according to our law of Pennsylvania, that is to say, one just and equal third part of all our Estate unto my wife Maria Margaretha and the remainder two-thirds parts unto my eight children, vizt; Henry, Frederick, Cornelia, William, Nicholas, John, George and Lorentz Kern share and share alike, and as my daughter Maria Barbara, now living in Philadelphia, never did contribute and assist us in the least about that which I and the rest of my family earned by hard labour, but on the contrary has spent the time she lived in this county for her own advantage, nevertheless, notwithstanding to withdraw my affection as a father from her or to exclude her totally from her portion, I therefore bequeath unto her 10 pounds, our lawful Pennsylvania current money, which shall be paid unto her at the time of the reparation to be made amongst my remaining children, moreover, I give and bequeath unto my last mentioned daughter Maria Barbara, one cow, which shall be given and delivered unto her the next spring. Moreover, I ordain and state my wife Maria Margaretha and Jacob Farber to be guardians of my children and executors of all my estate to the end that they have direction of my children under age for their instruction and education in the Christian Religion, as also that nothing may be wrong, administration be lost but rather increased of what I left behind me and to the end, that all which is above mentioned may be firmly and unchangeably kept and followed, I do confirm these presents with my own hand writing and seal and is attested by the under written witnesses:

Done in Bucks County, Near Lehigh, December ye 28th, 1748.

KERN FAMILY (WHITEHALL).

George Kern, a native of Switzerland, ancestor of this family, arrived at Philadelphia on the ship St. Andrew, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, with 450 passengers, among whom were the ancestors of the Newhard, Kleppinger, Erdman, Beil, Linn and Leibenguth families, on Sept. 26, 1737. On the same day he took the oath of allegiance to the King of England before Judges James Logan, Clement Plumsted, Ralph Asheton, and William Allen. He settled in Whitehall township soon after his arrival as his name is mentioned in the Egypt church records as early as 1739. He was accompanied by his wife, Catharine Elizabeth, and his eldest son, George Jacob Kern. Tradition states that a child was born on the voyage. The land which George Kern secured was warranted on October 28th, and surveyed Nov. 14, 1737, to John Reinberry, described as located on "Indian Copelin's creek, in Bucks county." It was bounded on the north by Jacob Kohler's land, and through it flowed the Coplay creek. On Feb. 1, 1743, with Frederick Newhard, he secured a warrant for a tract of 406 acres and on Nov. 30, 1744, the land was divided, each securing 203 acres. Frederick Newhard subsequently sold his land to Adam Deshler, who erected Fort Deshler in 1760.

The greater part of this land is now owned by a cement company. George Kern received a patent for his land on Aug. 7, 1750, and secured another tract of twenty-five acres. In 1752, he was one of the petitioners for the establishment of Whitehall township. He was a member of the Egypt Reformed congregation and in 1742 baptized a number of children there in the absence of a pastor. In the earlier years of its history the congregation worshipped in his house. On April 15, 1763, he deeded the greater part of his land to his son, George Jacob Kern.

George Kern and his wife, Catharine Elizabeth had, so far as is known, four children: George Jacob Kern, Catharine Elizabeth, Christopher, and Peter.

Catharine Elizabeth Kern was born in Whitehall, May 15, 1741. She was baptized July 28, 1741, when her sponsors were Peter Troxell, Roland Schmidt, Mary Barbara Newhard and Lucé Flickinger. She married, May 1, 1759, Philip Jacob Schreiber, and died Nov. 3, 1819.

George Jacob Kern, eldest son of George Kern, was born about 1725 and came to America with his parents in 1737. The earliest mention of him is on July 28, 1741, where in the Egypt Reformed church records, "Georg Jacob, son of Georg Kern," was a sponsor at the baptism of George Jacob Schneider. In 1752, the names of himself and wife appear as sponsors, showing that he was then married. His wife, Mary Margaret, was probably a Troxell.

George Jacob Kern was naturalized April 10, 1755. He added to his lands and by 1768, as the tax lists indicates, he was the owner of 300 acres of land, of which 80 acres was cultivated, four horses, four cows and six sheep. He was one of the leading farmers of Egypt and vicinity and a prominent member of the Reformed congregation. In 1767, Peter Burkhalter and George Jacob Kern were the largest contributors to the purchase of a house and six acres of land for a parsonage, each giving £4, and in 1785, George Jacob Kern contributed £22 to the new church building.

George Jacob and Mary Margaret Kern had these children: Jacob, Jr.; John; Daniel; Elizabeth; Nicholas; Magdalena; Susanna, wife of Peter Kohler; Henry; and Michael.

Jacob Kern, Jr., and his wife, Gertrude, had a son, Jonathan. Daniel Kern, born in 1758, and his wife, Magdalena, had sons: Jesse, born in 1785; and Daniel, born in 1791.

James Kern, born Oct. 5, 1798, died Feb. 3, 1860, married Maria Walbert, born March 3, 1804, died June 10, 1855. They had six sons and four daughters: Tilghman; William; Charles; James; Henry; Willoughby; Adeline, wife of Edward Laubach; Susanna, wife of Joel Snyder, Mary Ann, wife of Henry Woodring; and Eliza Ann, wife of Henry Lentz.

James Kern, Jr., was born Jan. 10, 1837, and died April 17, 1912. He was united in marriage with Matilda Miller, born at Neffs, Pa., Feb. 15, 1841, and died Feb. 19, 1896. Both are buried on the Union cemetery at Neffs, Pa. James Kern was a bricklayer by trade. For many years he had a force of bricklayers and plasterers, who built the majority of all the substantial brick buildings, dwelling-houses, school-houses, and churches which to-day stand in the upper section of Lehigh county, not including Slatington. Mr. Kern was widely known as a business man of reliable qualities. He had a family of thirteen children. Two died in infancy; four died in young manhood and womanhood; seven survive at this writing. They are as follows:

1. Milton Kern, a carpenter, is married to Sadie Shaller, and lives in West Bethlehem, Pa. No children.

Matilda Kern, wife of James Kern, was the daughter of Stephen Miller and his wife, Katie, nee Creitz. She was born at Neffs, Pa. Stephen Miller was for many years a prosperous farmer at Neffs, in North Whitehall township where he also conducted a brick manufacturing establishment for a long period of time. He had three children: Sarah, Matilda, and John. Sarah was married to Francis Ringer, of Slatington. Died June 20, 1905. Matilda, was married to James Kern, Nov. 16, 1861, and died Feb. 19, 1896. John was married to Amelia Smith and they now reside with their daughter at the Rising Sun hotel, Lehigh county, Pa., owned and conducted by their son-in-law, Harvey Rbert.

REV. ROBERT MILLER KERN.

Robert Miller Kern is the son of James Kern and his wife, Matilda, nee Miller. He was born at Neffs, Lehigh county, Pa., January 21, 1873; was baptized in his infancy by the Rev. J. S. Renninger, and confirmed in his youth by the late Rev. E. J. Fogel, D.D.

Mr. Kern is a typical Lehigh countian himself, and both parents being natives of Lehigh. But for ten years, while teaching or attending school, he has always lived in the county. He laid the foundations of his physical strength while working on Lehigh county soil. As a boy he served as a carrier at the brick yards, his summer vacations he spent on the hay and harvest fields in his home community.

His early religious training he traces back to a pious parentage, a good Christian home, however humble. As a child he was led to church and Sunday school at the Union church, where at the time the Rev. J. S. Renninger preached to the Lutheran and the late Rev. E. J. Fogel, D.D., ministered to the Reformed wing of the congregation. Here he was inspired to enter upon the calling into which the Lord subsequently led him. The desire to enter the Christian ministry he cherished in his boyhood days although he had not the slightest idea of how such a dream could become a reality in the light of the disadvantages under which a country boy labors without means. Mr. Kern looks back to the Union church with the feeling of profoundest gratitude for the spiritual uplift which she proved to be to him in his early boyhood days.

Mr. Kern laid the foundations of his educational career in the old stone school building that still stands opposite the Union church. His first teacher, Mr. E. D. Rhoads, still lives at this writing. Mr. Rhoads was an all-around handy man in the community, who besides teaching the public school, being organist, janitor, and sexton of the church, farmed the congregation's farm and often took the place of the pastor in administering comfort at the bed-side of the sick and dying. The public schools at Neff's supplemented by the private "summer school," conducted by J. P. Deibert, prepared Mr. Kern for teaching in the public schools. After teaching a year in Washington township, he continued his studies at the Keystone State Normal School, where he graduated with honors in 1892. He spent one year as teacher at Bethany Orphans' Home, under the superintendency of the late Rev. Thomas M. Yundt. Mr. Yundt proved a great inspiration and gave Mr. Kern every encouragement to enter the Christian ministry. After another year of preparation at the Keystone State Normal School he entered the Sophomore class at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., where he graduated in 1897, having taken several prizes in debates and oratorical contests. He at once entered the theological seminary, in May, 1900, representing the department of theology on the commencement program. During his senior year in the seminary, he was head librarian of the institution.

During his summer vacation of 1899 he supplied the pulpit at Hummelstown, Pa., and organized a Sunday school and congregation at Packerton, Pa. The newly-organized flock bought and paid for a lot 100 by 200 feet before Mr. Kern left the places.

Mr. Kern was licensed to preach the Gospel by Lehigh Classis of the Reformed Church, at Blandon, Pa., May 16, 1900.

He at once received a call from the newly-organized congregation, known as St. Andrew's Reformed church, Allentown, Pa. The ministers of Allentown urged him strongly to assume this important and promising work. He accepted the call and preached the first sermon to his little flock in the old academy of music Sunday, July 1, 1900. Here he has labored up to date and his history becomes one with that of his church from this time forth. In a word it is only just to say that the congregation numbered fifty-four when he came on the ground. It now is the second largest Reformed congregation in the city, numbering near 1,200. The organization was absolutely without any means, no church, no chapel, not even a lot to build on. It now worships in one of the best equipped, largest, and most substantial stone structures in the city of Allentown. Rev. Kern has infused a missionary zeal into his membership, which stands second to none in the classis when considered the financial ability of the congregation and the comparative youth of the whole organization.

Rev. Robert Miller Kern was united in marriage with Mary Alice Long on Feb. 18, 1906. The ceremony was performed by the uncle of the bride, Rev. S. A. Leinbach, D.D., of Reading, assisted by the late Rev. Ruloff, of Allentown. The wedding took place in St. Andrew's Reformed church, Allentown, on a Sunday morning in connection with the regular German service.

Mrs. Kern was the daughter of James W. Long and his wife, Alice, nee Geisinger. She was born in Bucks county, Durham, Pa., and has one brother, Howard.

Rev. Kern has not only been faithful in his own particular parish, but has manifested a wholesome interest in the general work of the Church. For years he took an active part in the county Sabbath school work, having been the president for three years.

He was one of the founders of the Phoebe Deaconess and Old Folks Home; was a member of the board of trustees and of its executive committee from the beginning to date. He devoted a great deal of time and attention to this cause.

He ever manifested a devout interest in the proceedings of classis and synod, never shirking duty whenever challenged by either.

Mr. Kern made a trip to Europe during the summer months of 1905. He visited the principal cities of Germany, Switzerland, Austria-Hungary, Italy, France, Holland, Belgium, and England.

William Kern, born Aug. 21, 1827, married Sallie Schneck, and had children: Penrose, David, Benjamin, Milton, C. Elvin, William, Keturah, Priscilla, Francis, and Joseph.

Nicholas Kern, son of George Jacob, was born Dec. 2, 1764, and died Nov. 2, 1819. He received from his father by deed of May 1, 1797, a stone house and tract of 152 acres, part of the original tract, for the sum of £950. He married, Aug. 4, 1789, Catharine Saeger, who was born Jan. 23, 1765, and died Sept. 21, 1861. Their children were:

Samuel Y. Kern, son of Samuel and Katherine (Yellis) Kern, was born April 11, 1839, near Quakertown. He attended the public schools and assisted with the farm work, and later learned the trade of carriage-making with Charles Moyer, of Coopersburg. In 1866, he formed a partnership with Jeremiah Swartz, and carried on a general blacksmith business, under the name of Swartz and Kern, in connection with the carriage-making business. The partnership continued for several years, when Mr. Kern purchased his partner's interest, and established the well known carriage works at Main street and Station avenue. He built up a fine trade in special carriages in Philadelphia and adjacent cities, and continued doing an extensive business until his death in 1903. He was the leading spirit in the movement to incorporate Coopersburg into a borough and was a member of the first town council. He was also a member of the school board for several years. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, a member of the I. O. O. F., and the Masonic Order.

The following extract is taken from the resolutions drawn up by Saucon Lodge, F. & A. M., after the death of Mr. Kern. "He was diligent in business always manifesting an active interest in the welfare of the community in which he resided; with a practical devotion to church duties, with a most tender regard for his family and their happiness, a kind-hearted man, whose every effort was exerted for the good of mankind, recognizing the brotherhood of humanity, and the heart that could say, 'I pray, thee, then, write me as one who loved his fellow man.'

He married, Dec. 8, 1860, Emma M. Ulrich, who proved a most worthy helpmeet, and who was permitted to share his joys and sorrows to the last." Their children were: Euphemia; Alice V., of whom below; Ella A.; Harvey F.; Katie E.; and Russell W. Kern.

Euphemia, educated in Coopersburg and the normal school at Quakertown, married Rev. H. J. Hillegass, now at Leacock, Pa. Kern & Son. Of late years he has largely taken up automobile work. Katie E. was educated in the schools of Coopersburg and at the Kutztown State Normal School. She is now (1913) teaching at Coopersburg. Miss Kern is a lady of culture and refinement and possesses a pleasing personality.

Early in the Eighteenth century, Henry Kern and three brothers emigrated and settled in Pennsylvania. One of them located in Chester County; one at Germantown; a third in what is now Lehigh county, and the fourth is said to have settled in the South. The name is perpetuated in Kern county, and in Lake Kern in Lower California, and in Kernstown, Va.

Henry Kern located at Germantown, Pa., and there his son, Michael, was born May 4, 1757. The latter settled in Exeter township, Berks county, and there he married Mary Boone, the only daughter of Isaac Boone (the brother of Daniel Boone, the famous hunter, Indian fighter and pioneer settler of Kentucky). Michael's wife was a Quaker and her marriage was stoutly opposed because she had gone outside of her cult. It seems that Isaac Boone had served the Crown of England, and for his services he received a section of five square miles of land, of his own selection, but Kern had fought against the Crown during the Revolutionary War.

Kern's military record is an enviable one and his four enlistments date from August 1776 to 1781, having been in a number of engagements under different captains. He was in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. In the latter he was taken a prisoner but escaped, and it is said that while jumping a fence in his escape, the rails were shot from under him. The British, seeing him fall, thought him dead. He remained motionless for a while then crawled under cover. When 87 years old he was pensioned. He died at Exeter in Berks county, February 11, 1850, and is buried at the church at Amityville. The children of Michael and Mary Boone Kern were:

Later he took the four years' conference course of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was granted a local preacher's license in 1891. He was ordained as a local deacon at the Conference at Germanstown, in 1895, by Bishop C. Foss, D.D., and was ordained as an elder by Bishop H. The exemplary and simple life of Mr. Kern has been an inspiration to many whose early training was so different from that of his own.

Mr. Kern grew up amongst his father's building operations and at a suitable age was associated with him in his business. The firm continued until his father died in 1902, when he and his brother formed a partnership under the name of Kern and Bro. The following interesting letter from U. S. Senator, Hon. John W. Kern, of Indiana, is added as a conclusion to the foregoing sketch because it embraces valuable information relating to this family.

UNITED STATES SENATE,

Washington, D. C., January 25, 1912.

MR. WM. J. DIETRICH,
Allentown, Pa.

MY DEAR SIR:—I have read with much interest your recent letter. It gives me pleasure to give you as full information as I have respecting my ancestry.

My great-grandfather was Adam Kern, who came to this country from Germany before the Revolutionary War. I assume that it was twenty or twenty-five years before that war, because my grandfather, Jacob Kern, who was one of his younger sons was born during the revolutionary period.

Adam Kern, with two brothers, first settled in Pennsylvania, but afterwards migrated to Virginia, where he laid out the little village of Kernstown four miles from Winchester. The other brothers remained in Pennsylvania. I do not know their names. My grandfather, Jacob Kern, was born at Kernstown, but my father, Jacob H. Kern, was born in Shenandoah county, Virginia, in 1813.

Adam, Nicholas, Jacob and John, were family names. Adam Kern had sons thus named, and my father's brothers—all older than he—were named Henry, Isaac, Nicholas and John. I have no doubt but that the Pennsylvania Kerns are descendants of my great-grandfather's brothers. The similarity in the family names would indicate this.

Josiah Quincy Kern, of this city (1825 F. St., N. W.), has for many years studied the genealogy of the Kern family. He is an old man, long in the government service, and corresponded for many years with my father, before the latter's death in 1900. I believe that Joseph Quincy is of Pennsylvania stock, though he came here from Ohio.

With kind regards, I am,

Yours very truly,
JNO. W. KERN.

THOMAS C. KERNAHEN.

Thomas Christie Kernahen, father of Mrs. D. D. Roper, was born in Belfast, Ireland, May 24, 1822. He emigrated to America April, 1843, and located in Philadelphia where for some years he held a position as draftsman of steam-engines.

In 1857 he removed to Allentown and opposite the Court House opened the first queensware and glassware store. The success of the new enterprise required a larger building, and he bought and occupied the site now occupied by Zollinger, Harned & Co. He retired from business in 1870, and later returned to Philadelphia, where he became interested in the real estate business. In 1879 he pursued the study of theology and was a supply minister in city missions. In 1888, ill health induced him to go to Los Angeles, California, and later to Pomona, where he invested in olive and orange groves. In 1897 he erected a sanitarium in Pomona. He died April 18, 1898.

He was married October, 1849, to Mary E. Shafer, then living in Philadelphia. They had nine children, a son and eight daughters, Mrs. D. D. Roper being the eldest.

DANIEL J. KERSCHNER, a member of the firm of Kuhns and Kerschner, and son of Charles and Julia (Weida) Kerschner, was born at Rothrocksville, Berks county, Pa., June 15, 1864. Being educated in the public schools he began to teach at the age of seventeen and taught for twelve terms in Lehigh county. In 1887, he became a clerk in Koch and Shankweiler's Clothing store. In the meantime he learned the cutting trade, assuming afterwards charge of the cutting department for eight years. After that time, he became associated with Sauerwein and Kuhns under the name of Sauerwein, Kuhns and Kerschner. This firm continued until the retirement of Mr. Sauerwein. He is a member of the K. G. E., I. O. O. F., Red Men, and J. O. U. A. M. as well as of the Lutheran Church. He was first married to Maggie, daughter of Willoughby Koch. She died in 1900, the issue having been:

KERSCHNER FAMILY.

Conrad Kerschner was a pioneer of Berks county, Pennsylvania. It appears that he had first located to the west of the Schuylkill river in Bern township, but, about the time of the organization of Berks county, in 1752, he settled in the territory east of the river, in Windsor (now Perry) township where he paid a Federal tax of sixteen pounds in 1759. The following year, in 1760, the purpose to build a church in that neighborhood was agitated, and Conrad Kerschner made a journey to Philadelphia to secure a donation of land from the Penns for church purposes. He was successful in obtaining a grant of forty acres, and on this there was built the first Zion's church in 1761. Among his children were: Peter Kerschner (born in 1749); Conrad Kerschner, Jr. (born about 1751); and Philippine Kerschner (who was born Sept. 20, 1753, and on Jan. 23, 1779, married Michael Fenstermacher of Lynn township, and died March 22, 1837, aged 83 years, 6 months and 2 days). They were married for more than 58 years and always lived in Lynn township. The sons, Peter and Conrad Kerschner also settled in Lynn. Peter died there and is buried on the old graveyard at New Tripoli, Pa. The inscription upon his tombstone follows:

PETER KERCHNER

He is said to have had a son, Conrad, who was married to Barbara Fenstermacher, and he died prior to 1831. The following shared in the distribution of the estate of Michael Fenstermacher, their grandfather: John, Elias, Gideon, Daniel, David, Mathias, Jeremiah, Salome Catharine and Asa.

Conrad Kerschner, Jr., was a resident in Lynn and he occupied the mill property west of New Tripoli, which is now owned by Sylvanus Oswald. He erected the first grist and saw mill at that place. Among his children was a son, Philip.

KICHLINE FAMILY.

The Kichline family is one of the oldest in the eastern part of the State of Pennsylvania. The name was originally written Kächline, and later generations changed the form to Kichline and Kechline, the former variation being most frequently used.

John Peter Kächline, a resident of Heidelberg, Germany, emigrated to this country, arriving Sept. 21, 1742, and settling in Bedminster, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in the same year.

Colonel Peter Kächline, son of John Peter Kächline, was born in Germany, October 8, 1722, and died on the farm of his son Peter, about two miles west of Easton, Pennsylvania. He was one of the trustees to take charge of the funds subscribed in England for the education of the poor in Pennsylvania. The first school house was built by subscription, his name being the second on the list. The building was finished in 1755, and was the first free school in Pennsylvania. Dec. 21, 1774; the Freeholders and Freemen of Northampton county, held a meeting in the court house, at which Peter Kächline was chosen one of the judges of election and also a member of the committee of safety. Jan. 9, 1775, he was elected a representative for the provincial convention to be held at Philadelphia, Jan. 23, 1775. The committee of safety met at Easton, Oct. 3, 1775, and the officers from all the townships were present. The county was divided into four districts, over seven hundred men constituting the First Battalion, and Peter Kächline was elected colonel of this. Later he was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the "Flying Camp." That this body of soldiers was engaged at the battle of Brooklyn is attested by the report of the British commander who wrote, after this engagement, "General Grant was killed by Kächline's Riflemen." Colonel Kächline was wounded and taken prisoner, while his son, Lieutenant Peter Kächline, who fought in the same company, was mustered into line, unharmed after the battle, at Elizabeth, New Jersey. In April, 1780, Colonel Peter Kächline resigned his commission in the army, and retired to civil life. From 1764 to 1772 he served as sheriff of Northampton county. He erected the first grist mills on the Bushkill. The act of incorporation was passed, Sept. 23, 1789, and section third designates Peter Kächline as chief burgess, and he died while still in this office, Nov. 27, 1789. Colonel Peter Kächline married (first) Margretta Umbehen, born Dec. 10, 1746, died Feb. 20, 1776. He married (second) ——— Dolan, born Dec. 2, 1746, died March 22, 1783. Among his children were, as we learn from his will, the following: Peter, of further mention; Andrew; Susanna; Jacob, whose descendants reside in Pennsylvania and New Jersey; Elizabeth, married Peter Ihrle, and had a son: General Peter Ihrle. Andrew Kächline, a brother of Colonel Peter Kächline, returned to Europe and became a distinguished general there.

Lieutenant Peter Kächline, son of Colonel Peter Kächline, served bravely in the War of the Revolution, as mentioned above. He built a substantial stone house in 1794, known as the Fountain House, because of a clear spring on the grounds. A huge stone near the apex has carved on it: "P. K., 1794." He served in Captain Arndt's company at the battle of Brooklyn. He was the father of: Jacob; David; Peter, of further mention; Michael; John; and Elizabeth Ackerman.

Alfred Daniel Kachline, justice of the peace for fifteen years, was born at Egypt, Whitehall township, on June 18, 1855, where he received his preliminary education. He then attended Muhlenberg College for a time, but while there, when 16 years old, his father died and he, though a boy, was obliged to leave school and carry on the tannery as manager until the business was wound up. When this was accomplished he had reached his majority and having in this time won the confidence of the community, he was nominated on the Republican ticket for the office of justice of the peace and elected, though the district was Democratic by a large majority. Upon receiving his commission, he was the youngest official in the state. While serving his term of five years, he displayed such judicial discrimination, and gave so much satisfaction to the public that he was re-elected for a second term. In connection with his official duties, he also filled the position of bookkeeper for the American Cement Company, but he was there only a year, when he was selected as general manager of a 10,000-acre farm in Clay county, Minnesota, the property of Frank Schreiber, which he conducted for a year, during Mr. Schreiber's absence from home.

In 1886, he returned to Pennsylvania to engage in the manufacture of shoes at Allentown, with Abraham Anderson, and also in the business of selling shoes at wholesale. This partnership was carried on four years when it was dissolved, and then he was engaged in selling cement, and later he was engaged as salesman by the Columbia Slate Company.

In 1900 he was selected as the enumerator of Whitehall township by the United States Census Department, and after serving this appointment he became the foreman of the Atlas Cement Company Works at Northampton. He continued there until 1906, when he was elected treasurer of Whitehall township, one of the three first-class townships in Pennsylvania, and this position he filled for one term of three years in a most creditable manner. Then he was urged to be a candidate on the Republican ticket for justice of the peace of the upper section of the progressive first-class township, and consenting, was again elected by a large majority, which evidenced the electors' appreciation of his continued fitness for the position, and this office he has filled in a most successful manner until the present time. The district is a rich and populous one and much varied business is constantly arising which receives his prompt and careful attention. Matters relating to the public welfare have received his earnest encouragement at all times, more especially the common school system of education, and the improvement of public roads. In social affairs he has affiliated with the Odd Fellows and the Knights of the Golden Eagle, having assisted as a charter member in instituting Lehigh Castle, No. 510, at Egypt.

He was born in 1810 at Allentown and there he attended the public schools until he reached the age of 17 years, when he learned the trade of tanner in the establishment of his father. Upon completing his apprenticeship, he formed a partnership with a Mr. McCoy, of New York, and they carried on a tannery in Monroe county for five years, when the partnership was dissolved and the plant sold. He afterwards conducted a tannery at Nazareth, and then at (Leisenring) Whitehall township, until 1855, when he located at Egypt, and there carried on the business until he died. While at Egypt he was prominently identified with the Reformed congregation, serving as deacon, elder and trustee. In 1830, he was married to Clara Tice, a daughter of John Tice and his wife, Mary Hackett, both of England. She was born in New York City in 1812. When ten years of age she accompanied her parents to Emaus, Lehigh county, and was there educated. They had five children: Emma M., m. William Steckel; she died in June, 1913, at Denver, Colorado, where she is buried; Ellen J., m. Henry P. K. Romich, died January, 1914. Jacob S., who died at the age of 22 years; Mary E., m. Isaac Shelly; and died at Philadelphia in December, 1896, where she is buried; and Alfred D. After Mr. Kachline's decease, his widow took up her residence with her daughter, Mrs. Romich, at Romich's Mill, where she died in 1889. Both are buried in the cemetery attached to the Union Church at Egypt, where they were members. The eldest daughter, Emma M., received a thorough education, taught a select school at Allentown for a number of years, moved to Illinois in 1876, where she also engaged in teaching, conducting a select school for upwards of twenty years.

The marriage of John Tice and Mary Hackett, the parents of Mrs. Aaron J. THOMAS H. KINNEY.

George C. Kinney, father of Thomas H. Kinney, was born in Sparta, Sussex county, N. J., where he was reared and educated, obtaining a practical education which qualified him for an active career. In due course of time he became an extensive contractor and builder of Paterson, Passaic county, N. J., where he gained a reputation as a straightforward business man, thorough in every detail of his work, and at the present time (1914) is actively engaged in the same pursuits in Allentown, Lehigh county, Pa., where he is pursuing the same policy and reaping the same reward. He married Marion Young, daughter of George W. Young and Sarah (House) Young, who has borne him four children, as follows: George W., an engineer, in the employ of the Erie Railroad company, residing at Chester, Orange county, N. Y.; William T. S., a holder of public office at Paterson, Passaic county, N. J.; Thomas H., of whom further; Blanche, wife of Joseph Titlow, resides at Allentown.

Thomas H. Kinney was born in Lafayette, Sussex county, N. J., Jan. 28, 1869. He acquired an excellent education in the common and high schools of Paterson, N. J., and since the year 1888, when nineteen years of age, has been actively identified with the silk industry, serving in various silk mills. He acted in the capacity of superintendent for the firm of Fichter and Martin, of Bethlehem, Pa., proprietors of silk mills, for a period of nine years, and in 1907 removed to Allentown, Pa., and inaugurated The Queen City Mills, under the name of The Queen City Silk Company, incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania, 1907, with a capital of $150,000, and he is now the president and general manager of the same. Their plant is located at Twenty-first and Linden streets, Allentown; the dimensions of the buildings are: 200 x 50, two-story brick—96 by 90, one-story brick—110 by 40, one-story brick; equipped with 100 looms; give employment to 175 hands; railroad facilities of the best, the Lehigh Valley Railroad running past the door, and they manufacture high grade ribbons and novelties, which are shipped to New York city, their selling agents in New York being Ferris and White, No. 357 Fourth Avenue. The first year's business amounted to $200,000 and during the intervening time the business has increased accordingly, in 1913 amounting to $700,000, which speaks well for the management of Mr. Kinney, who possesses executive ability of a high order. He is also identified with a number of manufacturing enterprises outside of Allentown. Mr. Kinney is a member of the Presbyterian church, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Country Club, and is a Republican in politics.

Mr. Kinney married, in 1902, Anna V. Sheehan, daughter of P. J. Sheehan, of South Bethlehem. Children: Marion H., Dorothy V., Eileen.

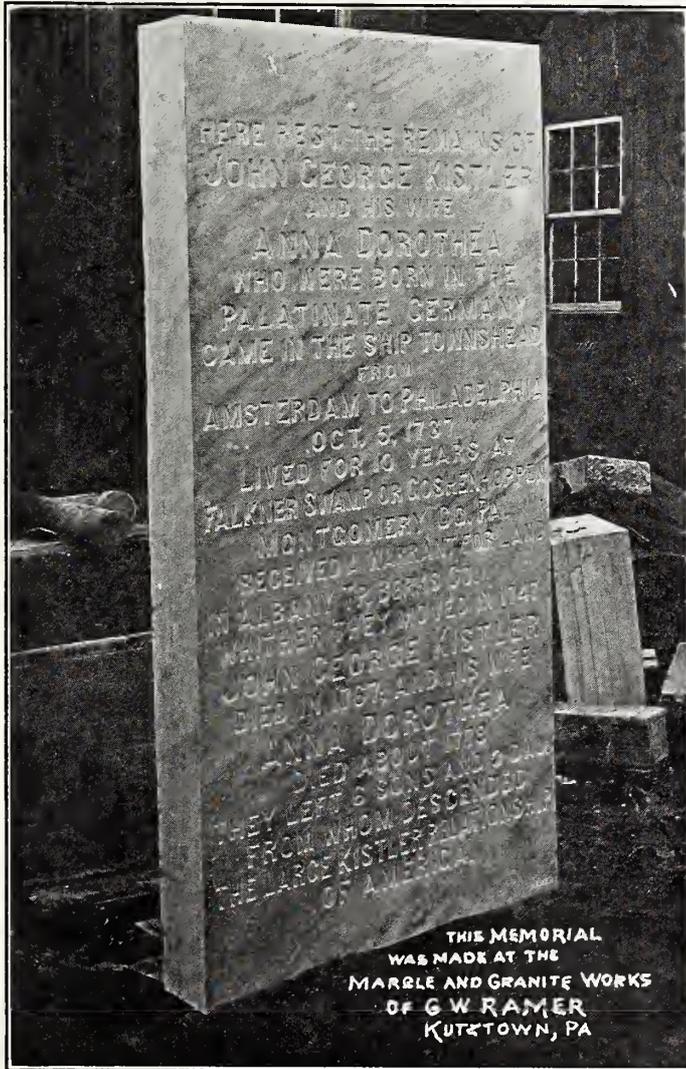

KISTLER FAMILY.

On the records of the Jerusalem church, known in the 18th century as the Allemangel church, located near the line of Berks and Lehigh counties, there are recorded hundreds of baptisms of Kistler children, while in the cemetery under the shadow of the church there are many graves marked with the same name. Near the center of the oldest part of the cemetery lies a slate stone (which is now being replaced by the descendants with a marble slab) bearing the inscription, "I. G. K. 1767." This is supposed to be the stone that marked the burial place of the progenitor of the American Kistlers, who was legally known as Johannes, but was called Joerg or George by Pastor Schmacher in his record, and Hanjoerg or John George, by his neighbors.

Johannes Kistler was a native of the Palatinate, in Germany. On Oct. 5, 1737, he came in the ship "Townshend" from Amsterdam to Philadelphia, and soon after to Falkner Swamp, or Goshenhoppen, in what is now Montgomery county, Pa. It is supposed he was accompanied by his wife, Anna Dorothea, and his oldest children. In 1747 he took out a warrant for land and moved to Albany township, Berks county, then wild and barren, where he made his permanent residence. The vicinity was named "Allemangel" or "All Want." Johannes Kistler was taxed in Albany in 1756, and was naturalized in 1761, on September 10th of which year he and his neighbor, Michael Brobst, appeared before the Supreme Court in Philadelphia, and there received the papers that made them citizens of Pennsylvania. He was a Lutheran and served as elder of the Allemangel church for a number of years, where his children were baptized and confirmed. His children were: Jacob, who left seven children: Philip, Jacob, Michael, Solomon, Daniel, Catharine, and Magdalene. Samuel Kistler Brobst, a teacher of James A. Garfield, was a grandson of Philip, and so was Michael Kistler, the tanner, whose son Stephen was at one time the most extensive tanner in eastern Pennsylvania; John, remained on the homestead after his father's death. The name John runs through at least five generations, and the trade of blacksmith follows it. John's children were: John William, born May 29, 1757; and Abraham, born Dec. 20, 1761, who is the ancestor of the Perry county Kistlers for to as George Kistler, Sr., he doubtless had a son George. The archives of Pennsylvania show that a George Kistler served in the Continental army during the Revolution. Philip, born Oct. 19, 1745, died Aug. 28, 1809. He had nine children: Jacob, John, Ferdinand, Philip, Jonathan, Bar-whom Kistler post-office has been named. A descendant, Rev. Dr. John Kistler, has for many years been professor at the oldest Lutheran Theological Seminary in America, located at Hartwick, N. Y. George remained in Berks county. In 1779 he was the owner of 248 acres of land and a grist-mill. In 1778 he was elected elder of the Allemangel church, and as he was referred bara, Maria, Catharine, and Elizabeth. Of these, Jacob was a lieutenant in the War of 1812. Michael moved to Ohio, and is the ancestor of the large Kistler settlements in Indiana. His family consisted of John, Michael, Joseph, Nathan, Monroe, Salome, and Judith. Samuel was the youngest son of his father. Barbara married (first) a Brobst, and (second) Michael Mosser, of Low-hill. Dorothea married Michael Reinhart. Elizabeth married a Mr. Keller, near Hamburg, Pennsylvania.

Samuel Kistler, son of John George, was born Sept. 20, 1754, and died April 24, 1822. He was an extensive land owner. In 1803 he built a very substantial stone mansion in Kistler's Valley, which remained his home to the time of his death, and which has until recently been the property of his descendants. He built the Kistler mill near Tripoli. For many years he was an elder of the Jerusalem church, and it was while he held that office that the present house of worship was erected, 1812-14. All these buildings erected about a century ago, stand as firmly to-day as though they had been built in recent years. Samuel Kistler was twice married. His first wife, Elizabeth Ladich, bore him three children, and his second, Catharine Brobst, twelve. These were: Barbara, married Henry Sunday, and is buried at Dunkel's church; Jacob S., father of Samuel J., who was a delegate to the national convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the presidency, is buried at the Jerusalem church; Samuel is buried at Tripoli church; John S. is buried at Jerusalem church; Michael died in Ohio; Christian is buried at Tripoli; Daniel and David both died in West Penn, Schuylkill county; Jesse died in Ohio; Levi is buried at Jacob's church, Jacksonville, Pa.; Charles is buried at Newton Falls, Trumbull county, Ohio; Maria Elizabeth, married Jacob Snyder, and died in Ohio; Catharine, married George Weida, and died in Lowhill; Salome, married Jacob Mosser, the tanner, and died in Allentown; and Magdalene, married Solomon Mosser, and is probably buried at Lynnville. The descendants of Samuel Kistler are scattered all over the United States. Many of them have become successful business and professional men. An unusually large number are physicians and ministers of the gospel.

Jacob S. Kistler, son of Samuel, and grandson of John George, was born Oct. 5, 1781, was justice of the peace, and held other offices, and died Oct. 7, 1845. He married Anna Barbara Bausch, who died Nov. 19, 1867. He left sixteen children: John J.; Jacob; Nathan; Stephen S.; David; Jonas; Charles; and Catharine, married to Reuben Buck, are all buried at the Jerusalem church; Reuben, died in Louisville, Ky.; Salome, married to John Hermany, is buried at Jacksonville, Pa.; Mary, married to Elias Wertman, died at Peoria, Ill.; Lydia, married to Daniel Long, is buried at New Ringgold, Pa.; Elizabeth, lives at Saegersville, Pa.; Anna Fena, married to Charles Lenhart, is buried at Bethel church in Albany township; Helena, second wife of Daniel Long, died in Atchison, Kan.; and Samuel J., associate judge of Lehigh county, member of the State Legislature, justice of the peace for many years, and family historian, is buried at the Heidelberg church, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

Stephen S. Kistler, son of Jacob S., was born in Kistler's Valley, Dec. 16, 1817, and died March 13, 1874. He was married to Abigail Brobst. They had eight children: Philip, William S., Mary, Albert and Jacob are buried at the Jerusalem church; Sarah, married to Harry Stine, lives at Fogelsville; Fianna, married to Emanuel Seidel, is buried at Hamburg; and Samuel, died at Seipstown.

William S. Kistler, son of Stephen S., and great-great-grandson of the emigrant, John George, was born Nov. 15, 1840, and died Sept. 19, 1887. He served nine months in the Civil War. He was married to Maria Grim, daughter of Reuben Grim, and his wife, Sarah Wanner. They bought the old Kistler homestead where their eight children were brought up. These are: Jesse, a physician at Allentown; Elmer, who was for many years a school teacher of Lynn township, and is now a justice of the peace; William U., pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church, Pennsylvania, and St. John's, Spinnertown, Pa.; Charles E., pastor of Alsace Lutheran church, Reading Pa.; Stephen O., who remained on the old homestead; Mary, married to Dr. A. F. Baver, Stony Run, Pa.; and Sallie and Kathryn, who live with the mother at Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Pa. It may seem remarkable that so many out of the family have entered professions. This is, however, nothing unusual with the Kistlers. Four sons of William B. Kistler have entered the medical profession, and three sons of Jacob Kistler have done the same.

ELMER C. KISTLER, justice of the peace, farmer, and prominent citizen of Lynn township, was born in the Kistler Valley, May 18, 1866, and obtained his education in the common schools of the district, and also in the Lynnville and New Tripoli academies. When nineteen years of age he was licensed to teach in the public schools and he taught twenty-one terms in Lynn township, one term in Weissenberg and one term in the borough of Lenhartsville, in Berks county, making altogether twenty-three terms. He has held a permanent certificate from the state superintendent for a number of years.

Having been brought up as an agriculturist, Squire Kistler has carried on farming operations where he lives since May 2, 1907, with great success and he has been recognized as one of the most enterprising farmers in the township. His place is equipped with the latest improved farming machinery, and annually he raises large crops of potatoes. His farm is generally known as the

A. L. Kistler.

"Kistler Farm." Its early owner was Samuel Kistler, who was succeeded by his son John, and John by his son, William B. A large stone dwelling on this farm was built by John Kistler in 1858. A log barn, which was built about the time of the Revolution, was destroyed by fire on Thanksgiving night, 1906. The following year, Elmer C. Kistler erected the present barn, 100x40 feet. An historic house on this property is mentioned in the descriptive history of the township.

The squire's political affiliations have been with the Republican party. In 1900 he was appointed census enumerator of the township and he served this appointment with efficiency. From the time he became of age he has helped to hold the annual elections, excepting when his own name was on the ticket for an office. In 1903 he was elected justice of the peace of the Lynnville district, and in 1908 re-elected. Naturally, since 1903, he has become recognized and called as the "Squire," or "Squire Kistler." Under the old delegate system he frequently represented his district before the county conventions; and he has served as a United States juror in the Corcuit Court at Philadelphia. He has identified himself with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Squire Kistler and his family are Lutheran members of the New Jerusalem church, which he has served as a deacon, and since 1909 has been serving as an elder.

He was married in 1888 to Annie Reinert, daughter of Adam and Amanda (Wolf) Reinert, and they have three children: George E., who died in infancy; Emma M., a graduate of the township schools, also educated under the tutelage of her father, and a public school teacher since 1908; and William A.

Squire Kistler has been secretary of the Kistler Family Re-union Association since its organization. This flourishing association was begun in 1898, by Miss Sallie Kistler, of Allentown, a sister of the Squire.

STEPHEN O. KISTLER, an enterprising and successful farmer in the Kistler Valley, was born on his father's homestead, Sept. 23, 1872, and having been reared on a farm, he has followed this vocation. He secured his farm of 182 acres in 1905. On it there is a Swiss barn which was erected in 1899, the dimensions being 40x100 feet, and the superior management of the place is reflected in its fine general appearance. The Kistler Valley is noted far and wide for its exceptional fertility of soil, abundant crops, attractive homes and well-painted barns, and its prosperous farmers, and Mr. Kistler's farm is among the best.

Mr. Kistler was married on May 11, 1899, to Mary E. Rabenold, daughter of Peter and Jane (Bortz) Rabenold, of Weissenberg township, and they have one child, a daughter, Edna J. He and the family are members of the Lutheran congregation at the New Jerusalem church, which has been the religious home of nine succeeding generations of this great and influential family; in which he has served as a deacon. In politics, Mr. Kistler is a Republican.

Daniel S. Kistler, a son of Samuel and Maria (Brobst) Kistler, was born in Kistler's Valley. After his marriage to Magdalena Mosser, he moved to West Penn township, Schuylkill county, where he conducted a large farm, which was later divided into three farms for his three sons. Mr. Kistler was an active member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. and Mrs. Kistler had these children: Charles; Daniel; John; Noah; David; Hettie; who married David Zehner, and resides near Orwigsburg, Pa.; Katie, who married Rev. B. F. Bohner, a minister of the Evangelical church of Allentown, Pa.; and the wife of Rev. Daniel Yingst, whose son, John, is a business man at Eleventh and Hamilton streets.

Charles M. Kistler, a successful business man of West Penn township, Schuylkill county, was born July 4, 1824. Up to 1869 he was engaged in the milling business, operating what is yet known as "Kistler's Mill," located on Lizard creek. He was further occupied in the operation of a saw-mill on a farm consisting of 200 acres. In 1869 he retired and moved to Allentown, where he died, May 6, 1888, aged 63 years, 9 months and 2 days.

Mr. Kistler was a man of strong Christian character and was active in the Evangelical Church, which he served in its various offices, being class-leader at the time of his death.

His wife was Elizabeth Peters, a daughter of Joseph Peters. She was born Nov. 19, 1823, and died Feb. 27, 1889. Mr. and Mrs. Kistler are buried on Union cemetery, Allentown, Pa. Their children are: James A.; Charles A.; Sarah E., who married L. H. Mertz; Henrietta, Emma S., and Mary M., who died in childhood; Carrie, wife of S. P. Swartz; S. Lizzie, wife of Rev. J. G. M. Swengel; and Dr. Abraham L., whose history follows.

DR. A. L. KISTLER.

Abraham Lincoln Kistler, M.D., an eminent homeopathic practitioner, residing at the northeast corner of Ninth and Linden streets, Allentown, Pennsylvania, is a native of Schuylkill county, Pa., was born Nov. 19, 1862, son of Charles M. and Elizabeth (Peters) Kistler.

The public schools of Allentown afforded the early intellectual training of Dr. Kistler, graduating from the city high school in 1879, at the age of seventeen, and from Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1883, with honors. After his graduation from this famous medical institution, Dr. Kistler located at Allentown, in which city he built up a very large and successful practice. He is a specialist on diphtheritic and fever cases and his success in these lines of practice has been phenomenal. As a diagnostician he ranks pre-eminent.

For a number of years Dr. Kistler has been on the non-resident consulting staff of the Women's Homeopathic Hospital, at Philadelphia, which is one of the leading hospitals of that large city. In 1914, the board of Trustees of the Rittersville State Hospital appointed him the resident consultant. He has membership in the following medical societies: Lehigh Valley Homeopathic Medical Society, Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and the American Institute of Homeopathy. His fraternal and social connections are with Jordan Lodge, No. 673, F. & A. M.; the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, No. 110; and the Livingstone Club, the leading social organization of Allentown.

Dr. Kistler married, June 21, 1893, Miss Agnes S. Huber, daughter of the late Walter P. Huber, whose full history appears elsewhere in this volume. Dr. and Mrs. Kistler are members of Bethany United Evangelical church, both are active in church work. Mrs. Kistler is one of the very active members in the missionary cause, and Dr. Kistler has been the efficient and esteemed leader of the Bethany choir since 1904. In fact, in music the doctor finds his greatest pleasure and relaxation, having been associated with the late and lamented Prof. Clement A. Marks, Musc. D., in the organization and preparation of the Enterpean Club and the Oratorio Society. Dr. Kistler had been the president of the latter organization from its birth and has taken the keenest interest in it and attended very regularly its rehearsals and all the concerts, with one exception, when sickness prevented, up to 1913, when he reluctantly resigned, owing to the death of Dr. Marks, its founder and the co-worker of Dr. Kistler. The intimacy and nearness of Dr. Marks and Dr. Kistler was like unto that of Damon and Pythias, and as a result of the death of the former, the latter withdrew his connections from all musical activities except that of the church choir.

Michael Kistler was born in 1790, resided in Lynn township. He was a tanner and farmer in Kistler's Valley. Most of his sons followed their Stephen Kistler, son of Michael and Magdalena (Brobst) Kistler, was born on the family homestead in Kistler Valley. He learned the tanning trade from his father. He removed to Lehighton and later to Stroudsburg, where he died, and is buried there on the family plot, where a large monument has been erected. Stephen owned tanneries in Lehighton, Carbon county; at Tannersville, Bartonsville, Sciota and Stroudsburg, in Monroe county; at Lock Haven, in Clinton county; and Great Bend, in Susquehanna county, Pa. He employed several hundred people. He had established a large leather store in New York. He dressed so plainly that no one suspected he was almost a millionaire. Once, when a ship load of hides from South America was to be sold at auction in New York. He started to bid on the hides. When the rich dealers noticed this they thought they would let the poor man have a few at his own price, and out of pity for him they stopped bidding. When the auctioneer asked him how many he wanted at that price, he said to the consternation of everybody there, "I take them all."

Five years after his death his sons removed the New York store to Boston, where his son Wilson now carries on an extensive business and also conducts a chain of tanneries.

The children of Stephen Kistler and his wife, Esther Mosser follow: Charles, deceased; Rufus, of St. Paul, Minn.; Elmira and Angelina, both deceased, are buried at Weissport; Wilson, of Lock Haven; Alfred; Milo, of Tannersville; and Michael, who lives in South Carolina.

He owned the homestead of 100 acres, now the property of John Rubrecht. At an early period he erected a two-story building on this farm, the first story was used for a distillery, and the second for weaving purposes. This building, about a century old, was razed in 1903. It stood about fifty feet south of the present dwelling. His son, Jacob, succeeded to the homestead, who continued apple-jack distilling for many years, often being assisted by his good wife, Polly, born May 14, 1833, who has her home with her daughter, Mrs. John Rubrecht.

At the age of twenty years he learned in detail, the trade of wagon-maker, at Claussville, and subsequently entered the employ of P. A. Semmel, of Slatington. In 1877, he settled on a farm of 90 acres located along the base of the Blue mountains, in Washington township. Here he built a commodious and modern wagon shop, and has followed the combined occupations of farmer and wagon-maker. Mr. Kistler has served as a member of the school board for six years. On Oct. 13, 1908, fire destroyed his barn, burning the entire year's crops, four horses, five cows, and a lot of poultry, which was a severe financial loss to him. The barn was rebuilt in 1909.

GEORGE A. G. KISTLER, son of Levi, is a farmer near New Tripoli, in Lynn township. He was born Sept. 27, 1868, and was reared upon the farm. He learned the carpenter trade and followed it for four years while a single man; then DAVID J. KISTLER was born in Lynn township and there carried on farming. He lived in the Kistler Valley, where he owned a farm of 117 acres; and later he purchased a farm of 140 acres situated southwest of Wanamaker, which is now owned and operated by his son, Lloyd, and on this latter place he died. After his decease, his widow continued farming until 1890 on the former place, when their son, Henry, became the owner. He was a Republican and served as township supervisor for a time.

His wife was Maria Fetherolf, daughter of Philip, and they had seven children: Ellen, married to C. A. K. Grim; Rosa, married to J. B. Levan; Lloyd P.; Jennie, married (first) to Weidelich, and then to Edwin Griesemer; Catharine, married to Charles K. Griesemer; Henry F.; and Dr. Chester K., medical practitioner at Reading. He and the family were members of the New Jerusalem church, of which he was an elder at the time of his death.

HENRY F. KISTLER, proprietor of the Kistler Roller Mill, potato farmer, and representative citizen at Wanamaker, was born in Lynn township, Aug. 12, 1866. He received his education in the public school of the township, but he afterward extended it a great deal by his own personal efforts whilst being reared on the farm at home, and this naturally developed him to become a broad-minded and well-read man and fitted him to carry on business enterprises successfully, which he afterward came to establish. After his father's death, he remained at home assisting his mother in the farming operations until he was of age, then he went to Reading and was employed there for six years. In 1890, he purchased his father's 117-acre farm and then carried it for himself. In 1892 he erected on the place a substantial barn, 42x90 feet, with an addition 30x30 feet, and he remained there until April, 1899, when he moved to Wanamaker, where he had purchased the Daniel Wanamaker homestead of 116 acres; and later he enlarged this farm by adding 36 more acres. This farm was in the Wanamaker family for four generations.

In the meantime, Mr. Kistler sold the place in the Kistler Valley, and bought the Martin Donat homestead, situated near Wanamaker, which Martin's son, Eli, then owned, the tract embracing 275 acres, 175 acres of it woodland; and in 1909 he erected a modern, substantial barn, 80x80 feet, with an addition making it L-shape, costing upwards of $3,000. All of the lands owned by him are well adapted for the successful cultivation of potatoes and for some years past he has raised annually upwards of 9,000 bushels; and this great quantity being the high mark among the many potato raisers of Lynn and the surrounding townships, he is frequently referred to as the "Potato King" of eastern Pennsylvania.

In 1903, Mr. Kistler purchased the Wanamaker mill property, including 36 acres of land and a large three-story building equipped with improved roller-process. This mill was built in 1860 and is probably the third erected at this stand. Being situated conveniently along the Schuylkill and Lehigh Railroad, Mr. Kistler also deals extensively in fertilizers, coal, lime, sand, cement, potatoes, grain, flour and feed, selling annually in the fertilizer alone upwards of one hundred tons. Six men, besides the assistance afforded by his own family, are employed constantly in the various departments of his large business.

Notwithstanding his busy life, Mr. Kistler is public spirited and ever ready to serve the best interests of his community, and education matters receiving his earnest encouragement, he was elected in 1905 as a director of the township school board and since then has filled this position.

Mr. Kistler was married February 7, 1889, to Missouri I. Donat, daughter of David and Hannah (Leaser) Donat, and they have the following children: Hannah M.; Ida J.; Howard D.; H. Wellington; Hattie M., who died in infancy; Mary M.; Carrie I.; Beulah E.; Helen E.; Ralph F.; and Edna C. He and the family are members of the Lutheran congregation of the Jacob's church at Jacksonville, and he has officiated as a deacon, elder and trustee.

JONAS J. KISTLER, son of Jacob S., lived in the Kistler Valley, where his son, Samuel J., now resides, and there he carried on farming. In 1861 he built the eastern part of the stone house on the place. He was buried at the New Jerusalem church, of which he was a member connected with the Lutheran congregation and he filled the church offices. He also served as a school director of the township.

His wife was Lovina Brobst, daughter of Jacob Brobst, and they had the following children: Polly, Owen J., Isaac, Matilda, Jonas, Lydia, Samuel J., Elvin, and Louisa.

SAMUEL J. KISTLER, son of Jonas J., and farmer on the homestead in the Kistler Valley, was born there Nov. 26, 1861, educated in the local schools and farmed all his life. He obtained title to the place in 1907, having been his father's from 1857 until that time. Before 1857 it was owned by Jacob Brobst.

In 1909 he built the large barn on the place, 40x90 feet, and an addition, L-shaped, 26x28 feet, for a straw shed.

Mr. Kistler is a Republican and served as a supervisor of the township for six years. He is a member of the Lutheran congregation at the New Jerusalem church, having filled the offices of deacon and elder. He was married, Oct. 2, 1886, to Louisa Krause, daughter of Phaon and Mary (Smith) Krause, and they had eleven children: George, married Kate Correll; Frederick, Robert, Addie, Joseph, Phaon, Mary, Henry, William, Morris, and Stella.

Owen J. Kistler, son of Jonas J. Kistler and his wife, Lovina, nee Brobst. He married Henrietta Steigerwalt. They had these children:

George J., who died in infancy.

Calvin J., who was married to Margaret

Mooney and has these children: Henrietta, Jason, Theodore, and David. They reside at Weatherly, Carbon county.

Mary E., who married Julius Oliver and has these children: Ester, Russell, Calvin, John, and Ira.

Unia A., of Weatherly.

Bertha I., a teacher; and Wilbur J., residing near Buck mountain.

Charles J. Kistler, son of Jacob and Catharine Kistler, was a clerk in a store in Albany township in "Dem Eck." During the Civil War he drove a mail coach to Hamburg and the remainder of his active life he was a farmer in the Kistler Valley. His homestead is now owned and occupied by his son, Anson C.

He married Mary A., a daughter of Solomon Donat. They had two children: Anson C., and Edwin J.

WILSON P. KISTLER, M.D.

Dr. Wilson P. Kistler, eminent physician of Allentown, lately deceased (Jan. 8, 1912), was a son of Benjamin and Rebecca (Peter) Kistler. He was born in Kistler's Valley, Lynn township, Oct. 12, 1843. He came of a notable ancestry, being a descendant of John George Kistler, the pioneer, through Samuel, born 1754; John S., born 1783, father of Benjamin. The latter, remaining on the old homestead, became a manufacturer of fine beaver hats. His son, Benjamin, father of the subject of our sketch, moved to West Penn township, Schuylkill county, where he was the proprietor of a leading hotel, and he became one of the prominent men of that section. He finally removed to Allentown after the birth of Wilson, where he subsequently lived and where the young Wilson attended the local schools and then learned the trade of harness-making from his father. The boy, ambitious for greater things, became, at the early age of fifteen, a school teacher at Kepnersville, Schuylkill county. A year later he was a pupil in Schnecks-ville Academy and thence went to the Bucks County Normal and Classical Institute, of which Rev. Dr. A. R. Horne was principal. After further preparation in the Allentown Seminary and the Allentown Academy, he became instructor in Dr. Harris' Institute. Later, he again taught in Schuylkill county and also at Lynnville, Mechanicsville, and New Tripoli. Then, while conducting a select school in the I. O. O.

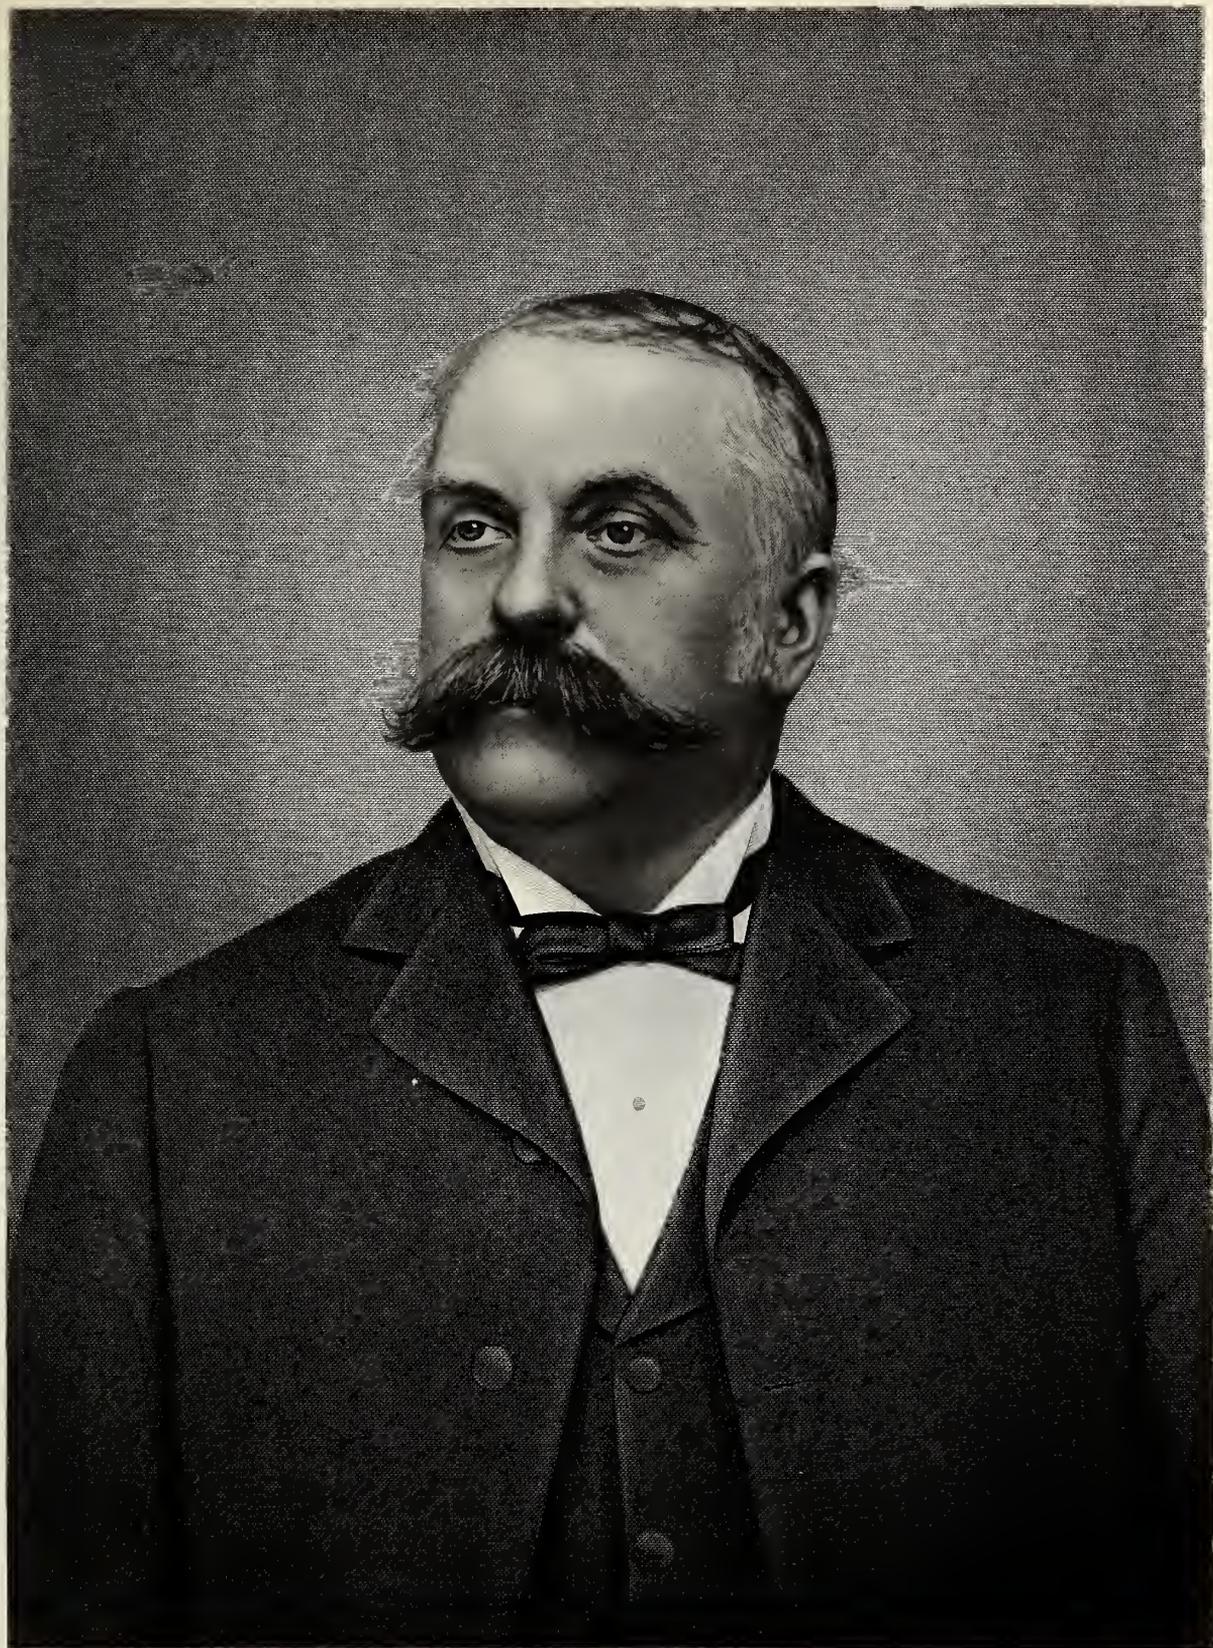

F. Hall at Steinsville, he read medicine with Dr. Shade, of that place. In 1863 he enlisted in Company E; 149th Regiment, P. V., Col. Nagle, of Schuylkill county, commanding, a body assigned to the Army of the Potomac. During a considerable part of his service he served as clerk to Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood. While in the army he sustained an injury to his eyes, resulting eventually in the loss of sight in one of them.

Honorably discharged from the army in 1864, he entered Bellevue Medical College, New York, graduating from it in 1867. His first location as practicing physician was at Germansville. After three years failing sight induced him to enter, as a patient of Dr. Noyes, the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary. On recovery he resumed practice, settling at Schnecks-ville. After a residence there of twelve years he removed to Allentown, locating at 313 North Seventh street, where he maintained an office until his death, Jan. 8, 1912.

Dr. Wilson P. Kistler was eminent in his profession, noted not only among the laity, but also among his colleagues for his attainments, medical and surgical knowledge and skill, and for his good judgment and unusual energy. His practice was, consequently, most extensive. He was an expert obstetrician and a famed specialist on disorders of the skin. With his son, Dr. Eugene M. Kistler (q. v.) he established the first private hospital in Allentown, in which, by the two physicians, many surgical operations were skillfully performed. His many duties left him little leisure for literary work, yet a volume from his pen, "Practical Medical and Surgical Family Guide in Emergencies," is a vade mecum highly prized in numerous Lehigh county households.

His interests were not confined to his profession. He was an active business man. He made successful ventures in real estate. Over one hundred dwellings in Allentown and vicinity were erected by him. He was also an enthusiastic agriculturist, acquiring a number of farms on which he had flourishing peach and apple orchards. It was as a medical man, however, that he deserves best to be remembered. He was noted as a preceptor, a trainer of young doctors. As preceptor he instructed more young men than did any other physician in Eastern Pennsylvania, and many physicians to-day have achieved success in their life work attribute the beginning of that success to the splendid training they received in the office of this master of medicine.

He was one of the founders of the Kistler Family Association, taking unusual pride in the history of his family and of his native township of Lynn. He was a member of E. B. Young

In 1865 he married Jane A. Clauss, of Pleasant Corner. With her he had three children, two daughters preceding him in death, and one surviving son, Dr. Eugene M. Kistler. Dr. W. P. Kistler's death, which occurred at his residence, 1517 Turner street, was due to pneumonia.

EUGENE M. KISTLER, M.D.

Dr. Eugene M. Kistler, physician and surgeon, of Allentown, the only son of the late eminent specialist, Dr. Wilson P. Kistler, was born at Schnecksville, Lehigh county, April 12, 1873. He attended the academy there until, at the age of ten, he accompanied his parents to their new home in Allentown, where he attended the public schools until his graduation from the high school in 1890. Determining to follow in his father's footsteps, he first studied under his father, assisting him in his extensive practice, and later took a course in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, attending Bellevue Hospital, New York City, three terms, and graduating with honors in 1893.

His formal entry upon practice of his profession was appointment, after a successful examination, to a position on the staff of Bellevue Hospital (Fourth Division). Then, after another competitive examination, out of which he emerged first among fifty-two applicants, he became house surgeon of St. Vincent Hospital, New York City (one of the largest hospitals of the metropolis), and served in this position successfully and to the utmost satisfaction of his superiors, all noted doctors, Prof. Joseph D. Bryant, Prof. Stephen Smith, Prof. J. W. S. Gouley, Prof. Charles Philips, Prof. Frederick S. Dennis, and others. After graduation from Bellevue Hospital, he took a course in obstetrics in the Broome Street Lying-in Hospital, under such instructors as J. Clifton Edgar, Dr. W. J. Markoe, Dr. D. F. W. Markoe, Edw. W. Lambert, Paul W. Lambert, William T. Lusk, W. M. Polk, H. M. M. Painter, and Antrim Flint, Jr. This course he followed with service in the Hackensack Hospital, under the eminent physician, Dr. David St. John. For nine months he served as a member of the house staff in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital. While he was serving here, information of the illness of his father led him to relinquish his plans for further service in metropolitan hospitals, and to decline a proffered and attractive association with one of the foremost surgeons of the country, Dr.

David Webster, of New York City. Immediately he returned to Allentown to relieve his father by taking from his shoulders a part of the latter's large and burdensome practice. Under father and son this practice continued to increase covering the eastern section of the state, requiring the use, first, of nine horses, and later, of three automobiles. To this practice the son succeeded on the death of the father. Success has attended the younger physician's efforts to the extent that he has been compelled to associate with himself an assistant, Dr. Leroy S. Howard.

Following the example of his father, Dr. Eugene M. Kistler has taken an active interest in social organizations, affiliating himself with the Sons of Veterans, the Independent Order of Americans, the Knights of Friendship, Jordan Lodge, No. 673, F. & A. M., Allen R. A. Chapter, No. 203, Allen Commandery, No. 20, K. T., and B. P. O. E., No. 130. He is very fond of athletics and gymnastics and has been an enthusiast in college sports. He is a member of the Lehigh Country Club, and is active in the Allentown Young Men's Christian Association.

On Feb. 25, 1901, he was united in marriage with Miss Lina S. Neuweiler, daughter of Louis Neuweiler, of Allentown.

As a result of native ability and the exhaustive and extended preparation previously referred to, the surgical work of Dr. Kistler has been extraordinarily successful. In operations for appendicitis he has reputation for remarkable skill, justified by the fact that till now every operation has resulted favorably. He is also a specialist in affections of the eye, ear, nose, and throat. The equipment of his office is unexcelled throughout the entire Lehigh Valley, and his laboratory is one of the finest possible.

KLASE FAMILY.

Through the spelling of the name it became very difficult to trace the genealogy of its early generations. Among the many varieties of spelling K-l-a-s-e, are the following: Kloesz, Klesz, Kloss, Clase, Glase, Glace, and even Kleiss, and Glosz.

"Johanas Kloss" emigrated to America on the ship Phoenix, which landed at Philadelphia, Nov. 22, 1752. His name written, as Johannes Kloess, appears in the tax list of 1773 for Bethlehem township, Northampton county, Pa. The emigration lists, however, show that Klosses emigrated as early as 1732. The family of whom Johanas Kloss was its ancestor, is accurately traced through the records at Easton, Pa. He lived and died near Bethlehem and his will is of record at Easton. He divided a large estate to the following children: Valentine; Philip; John, Jr.; Jacob; Catharine; Michael; Elizabeth, married to Michael Young; Anna Maria; and Christianna.

Valentine Klase, oldest son of the ancestor, lived in the Dry Land, near Bethlehem, Pa. There he owned a farm of 200 acres of land and the Klase private burying ground is located upon it. The farm appears in the tax as early as 1788. Valentine Klase, married Mary Eva Smitten, born Oct. 1, 1766. They had the following children: Jacob; Abraham; Michael; Valentine, Jr.; Henry; Mary Eva; and Catharine. These children were all born in Bethlehem township, Northampton county.

In 1753 Valentine Klase took out a warrant for 50 acres of land in Northampton county. In 1778 he entered the service of the Continental Army, in Captain Reeser's Fourth Company, of Militia, from Forks township, Northampton county. The company was a part of the Fifth Battalion and was ordered to March, July 30, 1778. (Pennsylvania Archives, second Series, Vol. 14, p. 594.) Valentine Klase was a farmer and he died between April 12, when he made his last will and testament, and the probating of it at Easton, on May 12, 1812.

After the Indian troubles had been settled in the northern and central sections of the state, and the land was opened for settlement Valentine Klase, with many others of Northampton county, went to Fort Augusta, at Sunbury, Pa. There, in 1811, he purchased 950 acres of land with an allowance of six-tenth per cent. for roads, making a total of 1,000 acres, which was located of the old Reading road, at Stonington. It comprised a strip, nearly one mile wide, running north to the northern boundary of Snyder-town borough. Part of this tract has been in the family to the present day. He had intended to settle upon this land but in going from it to his home in Northampton county, he met with an accident and died in 1812. By will which is of record at Easton, he bequeathed this land to his widow and children, who were to hold it for six years, after his death. Some members of the family, however, were not suited with the land and requested the sale of it, which by a special act of the state legislature, passed on March 19, 1816, gave them the right of disposal. It had to be advertised for four weeks which was done in an Easton paper. It was sold to John Smith for $11,067.67. The tract was then parceled out as following: Jacob Klase, 200 acres; Valentine Klase, Jr., 200 acres (the central portion); John Smith, 200 acres (the northern portion); Abraham Klase, 200 acres, one-half of the western portion, consisting of 200 acres, which joined that of John Smith; the balance was sold to different parties.

Jacob Klase, son of Valentine, Sr., born near Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 28, 1790, died Mar. 18, 1870, and was buried in St. John's cemetery, near Snyderstown. He built a stone house at Stonington, which is still standing, and built a saw-mill on the creek, running past the house. He married Polly Schweitzer, and had these children: Mary; Catharine; Elizabeth; Solomon; Jacob; Anna Maria; Leonard; Samuel, who lived at Catawissa, Pa., died past eighty-five years of age; and Wilhelmina.

Abraham Klase, son of Valentine, Sr., was born in 1792, died in 1850, is buried near Snyderstown. He was a miller and farmer. He married Elizabeth Smith, and they have the following children: Hannah; Frank; Matilda; Catharine; Eliza; William; Abraham, born in 1819, died in 1891, was married to Catharine Miller and they had these children: George W., Amanda, Regina C., Thomas J., Martha C., Franklin P., Mary E., Addison M., Ida R., and James B.; and the youngest of Abraham Klase's family was Solomon, born in 1831.

Henry Klase, son of Valentine, Sr., was born near Bethlehem, Pa., and in 1817 settled at Snyderstown, where he conducted a general store, hauling his merchandise by team from Reading to Philadelphia. He moved from there to Danville, Pa., where he died. He married Sallie, a daughter of John Smith, and had the following children: Jesse, Mary J., Mrs. Kesler, Henry, Jacob, and Wellington.

Michael Klase, son of Valentine, Sr., was born Sept. 4, 1794, near Bethlehem. When the other children moved to Northumberland county he concluded to stay at the old home. He married and had three children: Daniel, Joseph, and William. While visiting his brethren in Northumberland county, he took sick and died at the home of his brother, Jacob, on Feb. 22, 1852, and is buried in the Klase row, on the Snyder-town cemetery.

Daniel Klase, son of Michael, was born April 2, 1814, and died at Allentown, on April 28, 1875, aged 61 years, and 26 days. He was married to Sarah Shuman, born June 25, 1820, and died on June 7, 1886, aged 66 years, less 18 days. They are buried at Allentown. They had a son, Henry W., whose history follows:

Henry W. Klase, son of Daniel, was born in Allentown in 1843. In early life he learned the trade of stone-cutting and contracting, from his father, Daniel, at Allentown, who lived at 235 Lehigh street, the house now occupied by his son, Henry W. Klase. After the father had died, Mr. Klase and a cousin named Henry Erich, formed a partnership under the firm name of Klase and Erich, and took over the business of Daniel Klase, father of Henry W. The firm existed for many years when finally Mr. Klase purchased the interests of his partner and has continued the paving business up to the present time. He has been a life-member of the St. Paul's Lutheran church. Politically he is a Democrat.

He was married in 1871 to Kate Schuman, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Ramer) Schuman. Unto them are born ten children, as follows:

1. Harry O., whose history follows. 2. Eddie. 3. Claude, who died in infancy. 4. Robert. 5. Allie, who died in infancy. 6. Harvey. 7. Herbert. 8. Katie, married to Charles Berwick. 9. Elmer. 10. Carrie.

HARRY O. KLASE, a native citizen of Allentown, was born June 11, 1873, son of Henry W. and Kate (Schuman) Klase. He was educated in the public schools and attended the Allentown Business College. At the age of 17 years he began to work in the wire mill and continued there for two years. About 1895 he entered the employ of the Adalaide Silk Mill, and learned the silk-weaving trade, remaining in their employ of this company for one year, when he accepted a similar position with the Palace Silk Mills as a ribbon weaver and continued in their employ about two years. His next employers were the Givernaud Brothers, at Allentown, first as a weaver, then as a twister and general utility man for a continuous period of sixteen years when the firm retired from business. After working for Dougherty & Wadsworth in the same capacity for a short time, he accepted, in 1912, the general superintendency of the Catasauqua Silk Company, which position he has since filled with marked ability. In 1900, Mr. Klase took a complete course in textile designing with the International Correspondence School, at Scranton, Pa., and he has always made use of every opportunity to master the art of silk manufacturing in all its many details.

Harry O. Klase had enlisted three times as a member of Company B, Fourth Regiment, Third Brigade, National Guard of Pennsylvania. His first enlistment is dated Jan. 16, 1899; the second enlistment bears date, Jan. 16, 1902; and the third enlistment was on Feb. 13, 1906. On July 11, 1903, during his second enlistment he was promoted to a corporalship which position he served until his honorable discharge at the expiration of the last enlistment.

He and family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran church. Fraternally he has membership in Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M.; Livingston Castle, No. 258, K. G. E.; and Jordan Council, No. 746, Jr. O. U. A. M. In politics he is a Democrat. He is also an active member of the Goodwill Fire Company.

KELCHNER FAMILY.

Matthias Kelchner settled in Richmond township, Berks county. Tradition says that four brothers, George, Matthias, Michael and Henry, emigrated between 1731 and 1741. Records show that Hans George Kelchner crossed the ocean on the "Pennsylvania Merchant," landing at Philadelphia in the fall of 1731, and that he and Matthias were brothers. It is probable that Matthias was under twenty-one years of age in 1731; hence his name is not on the passenger list. On the "Pennsylvania Merchant," landing in 1733, was Michael Kelchner, whose brother Henry also came to America. These four settled in eastern Pennsylvania.

In 1759 Michael Kelchner, son of Matthias, was a taxable of Richmond township. He married Maria Eva Frey, whose tombstone bears the following inscription: "Maria Eva Frey(in), wife of Michael Kelchner, had 4 sons, 1 daughter. In 1761 she married Peter Stetzler. With him she had 5 sons. She was married first in 1752. She was born June 24, 1730, died March 14, 1807, aged 76 years, 8 mos., 10 days." She is buried at Zion's Church in Perry township. Michael Kelchner's children were: Michael, John, who had a son, Henry; Jacob, m. (first) Magdalena Wanner, and had children—Catharine, Maria Elizabeth and Daniel—and (second) Maria Wanner, and had children—Jacob, Samuel (who had an only son, Isaac), Mary, Hannah and Daniel. He made his will Feb. 26, 1761 (See Will-Book I, p. 98, Berks C. H.) and his death occurred soon afterward. He gave to his wife, Maria Eva, one-third of his large estate. His father, Matthias, and his friend, Christian Rothermel, were his executors. An item in his will is as follows: "That the three children shall be sent to church and school diligently, and that they shall be instructed in English and Dutch."

George Kelchner, of Richmond township, on Dec. 13, 1794, made his will as recorded in Will Book B, p. 356, and witnessed by Casper Merkel and John Christ, with Peter Kelchner, son of George, and the latter's wife, Agnes, as executors. Peter Kelchner received the Richmond township home. The six children were: Peter, Mrs. Jacob Yoh, Henry, John, Jacob and Esther.

John Kelchner, probably a son of George, lived in Rockland township. He made his will in October, 1836, and it was probated in November of the same year, and recorded in Will Book 7, p. 400. His son, Benjamin, and Samuel Beaver were executors. Leah Lorah, daughter of his wife, was remembered in the will.

Jacob Kelchner was born in Richmond township, July 11, 1801. He passed the greater part of his life engaged in farming about one and a half miles from Fleetwood. In 1834 he married Anna Sheirer, who was born in Maxatawny township. Thirteen children were born of this union, namely: Samuel, Mary, Joel, Edwin, Martin, Jacob, Hannah, Esther, Caroline, Isaac, Charles Augustus, Daniel F. and Wilson R. In 1790 his name appears at the head of a family in Allen township, Northampton county, Pa., as having 3 sons and two daughters. Among the number was John Peter Glopp, the progenitor of the Klob, Klop and Klupp family. From the records of the Rev. Before the house of the Tulpehocken brethren (German Seventh Day Baptists) was finished, Conrad Weiser, Hans Michael Miller, Peter Klopff, Godfried Fidler, and several single men and women went to the settlement at Ephrata. Of these, Weiser, Miller and Klopff later withdrew from the Ephrata settlement, but not so the daughter of Peter Klopff, who remained steadfast. Her monastic name was "Thecla" and is so listed on the roster of the Sisterhood. She died Oct. 6, 1748, probably at Ephrata. Peter Klopp died in 1753. Adam Cobel Klopp, son of John Peter, was born on the old homestead. At an early age he engaged in the grain, coal and lumber business at Stroudsburg and Sheraden. He was regarded one of the finest businessmen of his section. Later on he took his sons in as partners in business and the firm was known as A. C. Klopp and Sons. He was married to Sarah Loose, whose mother was also a Loose. They had the following children: Adam C., Jr., Rebecca, married Ezra Fisher and Jerome.

Jerome Klopp, son of Adam C., was born in Dec. 1844, died July 4, 1909. Like the rest of his family he was a staunch member of the Reformed church. He was married to Catharine Grow, a daughter of Josiah Grow. To them the following children were born. on the old homestead, and Anna M., died aged 9 years.

DR. HENRY I. KLOPP, son of Jeremiah and Catharine (Grow) Klopp, is a native of Lebanon county, Pa., and was born near the border line between Lebanon and Berks counties, in Jackson township, Jan. 1, 1870. Dr. Klopp laid the foundation of his education in the schools of his native township, later entering Palatinate, now Albright's College, at Meyerstown, at that time a Reformed institution. His professional training was acquired at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, from which institution he graduated in 1894. The first year after graduation was spent as resident physician at the Reading Homœopathic Hospital. In 1895 he was called to the asylum at Westboro, where he was assistant superintendent for a number of years, and also served the superintendency of the institution for ten months during the illness of the head of the asylum.

When the State Homœopathic Hospital for the insane at Rittersville was looking for a suitable superintendent for the institution the Board of Trustees received a number of recommendations concerning Dr. Klopp all of which spoke in the highest praise both of his medical and of his executive ability. His zeal and untiring efforts in the interests of the institution with which he was connected were specially noted. Dr. Klopp has introduced a few new features and methods at the Westboro asylum all of which have attained to all that was expected of them.

He was elected Superintendent Feb. 17, 1912, and entered upon his new duties March 18, 1912.

Dr. Klopp is married to Bessie L. Stump, a daughter of Henry W. Stump and wife, Emma Groff, both of Marion township, Berks county. This union was blessed with two children: Russell I. and Dorothy E.

KLOTZ FAMILY.

The ancestor of this family was Jacob Klotz, who emigrated from Utelock, Germany, to America, in 1749, accompanied by his wife, a native of Utelock. He took out a warrant for a tract of land in Lowhill, in March, 1767, and another in November of the same year, lying between the site of the Morgenlander church and the Jordan, now owned by Owen Knerr. They had two sons: John, of whom further, and Caspar.

John Klotz, son of Jacob, was born May 20, 1743, died December 28, 1795. He took out a warrant for thirty acres of land in Lowhill, in February, 1775, and in 1781 he and his brother, Caspar, were assessed on land in Lowhill township. He married Franconia Krouse, who bore him eight children: John George, of whom further; Jacob, settled in Mahoning township, Carbon county, Pennsylvania, where his death occurred; Christian, of whom further; Daniel, settled in Mahoning township, and there died, he was a twin of Christian; Barbara, Polly, Catharine, Maria.

John George Klotz, son of John and Franconia (Krouse) Klotz, was born May 10, 1777, died October 19, 1848. He took the portion of the old homestead lying near where the Morgenlander church now stands and erected a building thereon, but later moved to Penn township, now Mahoning, Carbon county. He was married and had a daughter, Esther, born in 1810, died in 1852, and George, of whom further.

George Klotz, son of John George Klotz, resided in Lowhill township, and his homestead, located near Weidasville, is now owned by Edwin Klotz, a great-grandson. About the year 1852 he opened a hotel at the old stand, which he conducted until a few years before his death, when he sold the property to his sons, Jesse and George. He was a member of the Jordan Lutheran church, his remains being interred in the graveyard of the same. He married Catherine Buchman. Children: 1. Peter. 2. Abraham, died at age of sixteen. 3. Joel Klotz, son of George Klotz, was born on the homestead in Lowhill township, 1813, died 1880, buried at the Morganland Lutheran church, of which he was an active member, serving in the capacity of deacon. He owned a farm on the road leading from Claussville to Fogelsville, where he kept a hotel for many years, and where, in early times, Balzer Fritz, and later, Andrew Shiferstine, kept a store and hotel. He married Sallie Hausman, who died in 1877, aged sixty-one years. Children: 1. Mary A., wife of Joel Peter. 2. Meno, at one time conducted the Klotz Hotel, between Claussville and Fogelsville, and later moved to his farm at Leather Corner Post; married Jemima George; children: Milton, manager of the Union Hotel, Burlington, Iowa; Leidy, of Philadelphia; Robert, of West Liberty, Iowa; Oliver, of Germantown; Mrs. Harry States, of Philadelphia. 3. Jeremiah Klotz, son of Joel Klotz, was a native of Lowhill township, where he resided for many years, following the occupations of saddler and farmer. Later he conducted the Guthsville Hotel, and subsequently moved to Allentown, where he lived retired until his death. He was buried in Union cemetery. He married (first) Fianna George; one son, Dr. Edgar Klotz, of Northampton, Pa. He married (second) Carolina Seip; Children: Minnie, married George Haines, of Allentown, and Dr. Robert B., of whom further. He married (third) Ellen Gernert; no children.

DR. ROBERT B. KLOTZ, son of Jeremiah and Carolina (Seip) Klotz, was born in South Whitehall township, Lehigh county, October 25, 1872. His early life was spent in Guthsville, and his education was received in the public schools and Muhlenberg College, after which he entered Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, in 1890, from which he graduated in 1893. He then located at Marysville, Ohio, where he was connected with the celebrated Doctors, Charles and William Hamilton. He practiced successfully for one year, when owing to ill health, his parents requested him to return to his native state. In the fall of 1894 he located at Rittersville, where he established a large practice, having been the first physician there. He served as physician of the Lehigh county almshouse for eight years.

In addition to his practice, Dr. Klotz entered the real estate field, becoming one of the promoters of Dixon Park, at Rittersville, and personally sold those lots, which are now practically all built upon. Later he purchased a number of other tracts, which he divided into lots which he readily sold. Through purchase he procured the Frank Texter farm, consisting of fifty-two acres, adjoining the Manhattan Hotel. This property he divided into lots, attended in person to the grading of the streets, and gave lots free to people who agreed to build upon them. Upon this farm was situated an old barn, which Dr. Klotz transferred to the firm of Klotz & Bregenzer, silk ribbon manufacturers, also six lots were made out in their name. This firm, of which Dr. Klotz is the senior member, commenced business with two looms, which number has now been increased to nineteen, and they give employment to thirty-two people. After the installation of seven more looms to the original two, the barn became too small for their use, and the firm built upon the south side of the pike, adjoining Central Park. In 1906, Dr. Klotz erected his residence along the pike, and the residence of his partner is situated two doors west. While Dr. Klotz was engaged in disposing of the fifty-two acre tract, he purchased different tracts of the Jacob Saeger farm in East Allentown, from time to time. This property he also cut into lots, disposing of them at a later date. The dividing of these tracts into lots was always followed by the building of a number of houses. After the lapse of a short time, Dr. Klotz and Herman Hildebrand, of East Allentown, purchased a thirty-two acre tract of land from Jacob Saeger. The land was located in East Allentown, and was also cut into building lots. In 1912 sixty houses were erected on this tract, and it was entirely through the efforts of Dr. Klotz that the silk mill at East Allentown was erected, which at the present time is the largest narrow ribbon mill in the world, and the pay roll of its employees amount to $17,000 semi-monthly. Dr. Klotz also has the Abbott Fuller farm of eighty acres, situated in Hanover township. In 1911 the firm of Klotz & Bregenzer purchased the Lewis Koch farm, of fifty-three acres, situated on Bath Road, through the center of which the Allentown & Bethlehem Boulevard has been opened.

In 1912 Dr. Klotz purchased the William Fenchel farm at Rittersville, containing thirty-four acres, which lies adjacent to a tract of land consisting of forty-one acres, which the firm of Klotz & Bregenzer, purchased in 1914, which two farms have likewise been cut up into building lots. The Allentown and Bethlehem Boule-ward passes through the middle of both farms. Early in the spring of 1914, Dr. Klotz sold five acres of the above land to Legh Meyer, of Bethlehem.

On account of failing health, and owing to his vast real estate transactions, Dr. Klotz disposed of his medical practice to Dr. V. J. Gangewere in August, 1907.

In politics Dr. Klotz is a Democrat. He was a school director and supervisor of Hanover township. During his term of office as a school director and largely through his efforts, the present modern four-room school building was erected at Rittersville, in 1907. He also succeeded in getting the Bethlehem City Water Company extended to Rittersville, and in three days he had secured subscriptions to the amount of $720.00, a sufficient amount of subscribers to warrant the company to make the extension. Late the following year the people of East Allentown requested him to secure water service for them and he succeeded in doing so. The improvements at Rittersville and East Allentown are due, in a large measure, to the extension of the Bethlehem water company mains. Dr. Klotz served as chairman of the organization and later as president of the first fire company at Rittersville, in all five years. The company was organized largely through the efforts of Dr. Klotz after the fire in 1905 when six houses were destroyed. The company now has a membership of one hundred and twenty-five. They purchased a chemical engine at a cost of $1,500, and erected an engine house. Dr. Klotz was a director of the Bethlehem Trust Company from its organization up to 1910, when he resigned to accept a similar position in the Citizens' Deposit and Trust Company of Allentown. He is a member of St. Peter's Lutheran church.

Dr. Klotz has been most active in church and Sabbath school work since 1909, at which time he was elected to the office of deacon in the church and superintendent of the Sunday school. He has filled both offices with humbleness and great efficiency ever since. He was a member of the building committee of St. Peter's Lutheran church, Rittersville, which was erected in 1913 and completed in 1914 at a total cost of approximately $35,000. Dr. Klotz and family contributed the large bell and altar in this beautiful edifice. Mrs. Klotz likewise is most active in religious work and has been the esteemed president of the Willing Workers' Society since its organization in 1906, which has raised since its organization nearly $3,500.

Dr. Klotz married in 1895 Elizabeth C. Rauch, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Schneider) Rauch, of Marysville, Ohio. Children: Eileen, died in infancy; Paul R., in whose honor his father named a street, in the Fourteenth ward, Allentown.

Christian Klotz, son of John and Franconia (Krouse) Klotz, was born in 1789, and about the year 1814, left his native township, Lowhill, and soon after settled in Mahoning township, now Carbon county, Pennsylvania. Here, in 1816, he married Elizabeth MacDaniel, daughter of Robert MacDaniel, and Elizabeth (Hicks) MacDaniel, a Quakeress. Among their children was Robert, of whom further.

Robert Klotz, second son of Christian Klotz, was born in Northampton, now Carbon county, Pa., October 27, 1819. He received a limited education, attending only during the winter months, and later spent six months at a private school in Easton. At the age of twenty-four he was elected the first register and recorder of Carbon county. In 1846 he enlisted for the Mexican War as lieutenant of Company K, Second Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was afterwards made adjutant of same regiment, under Colonel John W. Geary, serving at Vera Cruz, first and second battles of Cerro Gordo, at the National Bridge, Huamantla, and at Puebla, also in other engagements. In the engagement at the second battle of Cerro Gordo he is honorably mentioned in the war department records, No. 411, by the commanding officer in the affair, and to his experience and enthusiasm is due mainly the success, as is alleged by the officers and men, in the engagement of the National Bridge, in August, 1847.

On his return home, in 1848, he was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature, and re-elected in 1849. In 1854 he removed to Kansas by special invitation of Governor Reeder, located the town of Pawnee, and was elected president of its building association. He helped to build the first hotel in Leavenworth, the old Shawnee Hotel, in the fall of 1854, and in the following year built the first hotel in Western Kansas, at Pawnee. This house was the stopping place of both parties to the celebrated Free State discussion in Kansas in those early days. He was a member of the Topeka Constitutional Convention, being the first signer of that constitution, and after its adoption was appointed, as a Democrat, secretary of state, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the absence of Hon. Philip C. Schuyler, under Governor Robinson's administration. In 1856 he was one of the celebrated committee of safety to protect the state from invasion, and was appointed brigadier-general of the state troops at Lawrence, where he was associated with Major G. W. Dietzler, Gaius Jenkins, Governor Charles Robinson and others. He was one of the important factors in the selection of Topeka as the capital of the state, having by his personal influence carried the entire western portion of Kansas in favor of that place, and other important measures then pending. He returned to his native state in 1857, and in 1859 was elected treasurer of Carbon county.

At the breaking out of the Rebellion, in 1861, Mr. Klotz engaged in the United States service for three months under General Patterson. In 1862 he was made colonel of the Nineteenth Pennsylvania Regiment, organized September 15, and discharged September 27, of the same year, serving among other places at Chambersburg, in the emergency. One of the Mexican veterans himself, and one of the vice-presidents for Pennsylvania of the National Association of Mexican Veterans ever since its organization, he has evidenced his interest in the welfare of his old comrades by his ceaseless activity in their behalf in and out of congress. During the extra session of the forty-sixth congress he prepared and introduced a bill for pensioning surviving soldiers of the families of deceased soldiers of the Mexican War.

Mr. Klotz was ever a staunch Democrat. He was elected to the forty-sixth congress from the eleventh Pennsylvania district, and re-elected for the succeeding term. As a congressman he was bold, practical and industrious, more of a worker than a speaker, and respected for his sound, practical views. He was on the committee of mines and mining, also for four years on the committee of District of Columbia, one of the most important, and hence most laborious, committees in congress; his well known characteristics of industry, practicability, and unwavering fidelity being the inducements to his appointment thereon. He was one of the trustees of the Lehigh University, at Bethlehem, and one of the board of managers of the Laffin & Rand Powder Company, of New York.

Mr. Klotz married, in 1849, Sallie A. Lentz, daughter of Colonel John and Mary (Loeser) Lentz, of Carbon county, Pennsylvania. One child, Lentz Edmund, married Emma E. Laubach, daughter of Hon. Joseph Laubach, of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and resides in Mauch Chunk. One child, Robert Klotz.

George Klotz, a farmer, lived near the Morganland church, in Lowhill township. In connection with farming he carried on his trade of carpentering.

He had the following children: Amanda, married to Reuben Helfrich; Frank; Mary, a maiden lady; Ellemina; Anna; George; Frank; and Montgomery, who went West.

Frank Klotz, son of George, a farmer, and lived on an adjoining tract to his father's homestead. His farm is now owned by Edgar J. Klotz, his son, who resides at Guthsville since 1911. He sang in the choir, held various offices in the Morganland church, of which he was a Lutheran member and is buried.

He was married to Lucy Landis and they had these children: Edgar J.; Isador J., deceased; William; Elmer; Hattie, widow of Benjamin Grim; Cora, married to Charles Oswald; and Laura, deceased.

EDGAR J. KLOTZ, of Guthsville, was born Dec. 4, 1862, on the homestead in Lowhill, where he lived and farmed for forty-eight years. The farm is 137 acres and Mr. Klotz made a number of improvements upon it. The present house and barn were built by Frank Klotz. In 1911, he moved to Guthsville, where he bought the Henry Kern house, in which he now resides and is retired. He is a Democrat and was a school director in Lowhill for three years. He and family are Lutherans and the entire family sang in the church choir. Mr. and Mrs. Klotz sang upon the choir for more than a quarter of a century. Mrs. Klotz sings upon the choir continuously since 1872. She was one of the very first organists of the Morganland church.

On Dec. 4, 1883, he married Helena A. Bear, a daughter of Phaon and Mary A. (Buchman) Bear. They have these children: (1) Mamie L., married to R. Kemmerer, merchant of Lyon Valley. They have a daughter, Lizzie H. (2) Howard F., unmarried. (3) Thompson P., married to Helen Betz. They live in Weisenberg township.

DANIEL MILTON KNABB.

Knabb Family of Oley Township, of Berks County, Pa.

The Knabb family of Oley township, Berks county, Pa., was planted in Berks county by three brothers, Michael, John and Peter Knabb, who were born in Pfeldersheim, in the Pfalz District, Kingdom of Bavaria, Germany (which formerly belonged to France, but was restored to Bavaria in 1813). They emigrated to this country about 1737, and so far as is known are the only members of the family to have emigrated from the eastern to the western hemisphere. Michael (born April 17, 1717) settled in Oley township, on the farm now occupied by Samuel B. Knabb, near the Exeter line. The old house was destroyed by fire in the winter of 1816-1817, and the present house was erected the following summer. A family graveyard near the dwelling contains the remains of the three brothers and a number of the descendants. John died unmarried in the forty-eighth year of his age; Peter died in the seventy-fourth year of his age, and most of his descendants live in Berks county; and Michael.

Peter Knabb, son of Peter, the emigrant (and great grand-father of Peter H., who in 1907 was a poor director of Berks County), was a farmer in Oley township, and built his home in 1806. He was a member of Spies's Church. The records show he must have been prominent in public affairs, and he was a county commissioner from 1819 to 1822. He married Sarah Herbein, and their children were: William; Nathan, of Oley township, whose children were: Susan, Rebecca, Jacob, Emma (Beidler) and Amanda; and Sarah, who married Daniel Zacharias, of Muhlenberg township.

Michael Knabb married Eva Magdalena Seltzer, the only child of Jacob and Elizabeth Seltzer, on March 15, 1755. He died June 17, 1778, aged sixty-one years and two months, and is buried in the family graveyard in Oley township. They had eleven children, of whom three died in early childhood. The remaining eight all had families and their names follow: Nicholas, Peter, Jacob, Daniel, Susan, Sarah, Catharine and Mary.

Daniel Knabb (son of Nicholas), had the homestead of his father, who in 1800 built a stone house on the farm now owned by Daniel A. Knabb, his grandson. Nicholas Knabb also owned the adjoining farm which was the original stand. The old homestead house was destroyed by fire in the winter of 1816-17, when snow covered the ground to a depth of eighteen inches. The fire occurred at night and the two daughters, Susan and Maria, in their night clothes and bare feet, went to the house of their uncle Daniel who lived away about three city blocks. Daniel Knabb was married to Eleanora Weaver. They had three children, namely: Levi, who died single; Ephraim, and Lucy Ann (m. Isaac Kauffman).

Ephraim Knabb was born in 1828 and died in 1887. He was a farmer and had the homestead of his father, Daniel. He and his wife were members of the Oley Reformed Church. His wife was Deborah, daughter of Daniel and granddaughter of Abraham Knabb. Their children were: Daniel A., and Hannah (m. Mahlon Hoffmaster), who lives on an adjoining farm of Daniel A. Knabb.

Daniel A. Knabb is a retired farmer, residing at Jacksonwald, in Berks county, Pa. He was born in Oley township May 17, 1852. He owns a 117 acre farm that has been in the Knabb family for many generations. The present barn on this farm was built during the late thirties by his grandfather, Daniel Knabb. Our subject lives retired since 1902, at Jacksonwald, where he owns the residence of the late Benjamin DeTurk, a drover.

Mr. Knabb and wife are members of the Reformed congregation at Oley Church which he served as a deacon.

On October 26, 1878, he married Amanda Herbein, daughter of Benneville and Amelia (Yoder) Herbein of Oley township. They have three children, namely: Daniel Milton; Deborah (m. Nathan Sailor, who farms the homestead of his father-in-law); and Amelia, who is at home.

DANIEL MILTON KNABB, druggist, at Allentown, was born in Oley township, Berks county, Pa., September 7, 1879. He was educated in the public schools; graduated in 1896 from Brunner's Business College, Reading, Pa., became an apprentice in 1897 in Reeser's drug store, at Reading; while being employed in this position he passed the State Board in 1899, at Harrisburg as a qualified assistant pharmacist. He afterwards matriculated in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, graduating with first honors in 1902, winning the William Webb gold medal "For excellence in the science and the art of pharmacy." The medal is beautifully designed and is about the size of a double eagle. It bears the name of the owner and the date "April 11, 1902." Mr. Knabb had charge of the drug store of E. M. Boring, at Tenth and Fairmount Avenue, Philadelphia, for a period of two years. He engaged in the same business at Allentown, in 1905. In 1911 he erected a four-story building 34 x 80 in dimensions, at the corner of Hamilton and Third streets, having one of the most modern drug stores in Allentown.

His wife, Katharine Tyson, born Oct. 21, 1881, is a daughter of William H., and Caroline (Huff) Tyson of Jacksonwald, Berks Co., Pa. They have these children: William, born July 18, 1905, who died Mch. 6, 1908, in his third year; Daniel M., born Jan. 23, 1907; and George T., born Dec. 20, 1908.

KNAUSS FAMILY.

Ludwig Knauss, the progenitor of the Knauss family in Lehigh county, emigrated to America in 1723 from Titelsheim, Wetteravia, in the Palatinate, and settled at Whitemarsh, Montgomery county. He married Anna Margaret Goerlach and had a number of children, among whom were: John Henry; Sebastian Henry; Maria Catharine, born at Whitemarsh, Feb. 16, 1734, married Andrew Giering; and Sophia, born at Whitemarsh, Nov. 28, 1737, died April 9, 1813. She married, in 1756, Ludwig Andres. John George and Gottfried Knauss, of Whitehall township, were probably also sons of Ludwig, and also Ludwig Knauss, of Easton.

John Henry Knauss, eldest son of Ludwig, was born June 15, 1712, and died June 6, 1761. He married, Dec. 31, 1737, Maria Catharine Roeder, born March 24, 1720. They had four children: John, born 1738, died 1847; Adam, born 1741, died the same year; Michael; and Martin, born 1745, died 1747. Michael Knauss was born July 26, 1743, and died Feb. 3, 1820. He married (first) Sept. 10, 1765, Anna Elizabeth Romig, born March 18, 1743, died March 16, 1777, and (second), June 12, 1780, Hanna Margaret Frank, of Schoeneck, born July 10, 1740, died March 26, 1817. He had seven children in his first marriage: Catharine, born July 4, 1766, died Dec. 19, 1838, married John Adam Romig; Frederick, born 1768; John Henry, born 1769; Anna Elizabeth, born 1771; Michael, born 1773; Magdalena, born 1775; and John, born 1776. In his second marriage he had a son, Abraham, born in 1781.

Sebastian Henry Knauss, second son of Ludwig, was born in Titelsheim, Wetteravia, near Manheim, Germany, on Oct. 6, 1714, and was about nine years old when he accompanied his parents to America in 1723. On New Year's Day, 1741, he was married to Miss Anna C. Transue, who had emigrated from the same district in 1730. Soon after 1741, when the Moravian missionaries were branching out in every direction and making converts to their faith in various parts of the country, Sebastian Knauss became deeply impressed with the teachings of Count Zinzendorf. Later he left the Reformed faith and joined what was then known as the Society of Brethren. He was one of the number who organized a congregation in 1747 and founded a village which was named Emmaus, but which name was later corrupted to Emaus. With others he had walked to Bethlehem over the Indian path and there assisted in the organization of a separate church. He became steward and served in that capacity until his death in 1777. His remains were interred in the old cemetery at Emaus. He and Jacob Ehrenhard jointly donated 102 acres of land for the building thereon of a Moravian hamlet, including a site for the church and school, in adjacent grounds. The village was surveyed and laid out in 1757 and in 1761 officially received its name.

Sebastian Henry Knauss was a farmer and wheelwright. He learned the trade under the direction of Henry Antes, the pioneer layman of Frederick township, Montgomery county, through whose instrumentality he also became acquainted with the Moravian brethren and their work. Thirteen children were born to him and his wife, five of whom were daughters, and of them it is recorded that "they were of small stature, beautiful of form and exceedingly entertaining." His wife was the daughter of Abraham Trauseau and his wife Elizabeth Munster, of Mutterstadt, where she was born March 6, 1722. She died at Emaus June 26, 1799. Mr. Knauss died Feb. 26, 1777.

The children of Sebastian H. and Anna Catharine Knauss were: 1. Heinrich, born Nov. 22, 1741; married, April 22, 1766, Anna Maria Ehrenhard; they had thirteen children, of whom Jacob, born Nov. 20, 1777, and his son, Henry, born July 12, 1812, resided on the farm of his grandfather. 2. Catharine, born April 10, 1743; married Conrad Ernst, who emigrated from Wold Angelloch, in the Palatinate; in 1769 they were in possession of the first farm on the south bank of the Lehigh, leased by the Moravians; later they moved to Nazareth. 3. Anna Maria, born April 15, 1744; married Tobias Moyer, of Heidelberg township. 4. Johannes, born Nov. 6, 1748; married Catharine Romig, and settled on the home farm, near Emaus, later owned by Edwin Kline, of Allentown; J. Owen and William H. Knauss are grandsons of Johannes. 5. Joseph, born Oct. 11, 1750; was a wheelwright by occupation; married Magdalena Boekel, of Heidelberg, and emigrated to North Carolina. 6. Elizabeth, born Jan. 29, 1753; married John Frederick Romig, who was a miller near Emaus. 7. Abraham, born March 1, 1755; he was a blacksmith, and settled four miles from Bethlehem, on the Drylands. 8. Jacob, born June 26, 1757; he was a farmer; married Rosina Corr. 9. Leonard, born Jan. 8, 1745, died May 14, 1823, married, Dec. 15, 1769, Johanna Salome Miller. The descendants of these children are so numerous that it is impossible to follow them. It is sufficient to say that in every township and borough in the county the name is found, and in most cases the line of descent can be traced to this branch. At the time of the death of Anna Catharine (Transue) Knauss, on June 26, 1799, besides their thirteen children, there were ninety-one grandchildren, thirty-six great-grandchildren, seventy-three of the former and thirty-two of the latter were living at the time of her death.

John Knauss, son of John, was born May 22, 1775, and died March 14, 1861, and in his time was extensively engaged in farming, owning large tracts of land. He was also active and prominent in community interests and was elected to the office of county commissioner of his native county, when he discharged his duties with promptness and fidelity that won him high commendation and favorable regard. He married, in 1804, Maria Theresa Tool, and to them were born five sons and three daughters: Paul, William; Charles; John; Aquila; Hannah, married to Frederick T. Iobst; Anna Maria, married to Franz Philip Iobst; and Catharine, married to John W. Seip.

John Knauss, the third son of Sebastian, was born Nov. 6, 1748, near Emaus, where he was reared and carried on farming until his death, May 23, 1822. He married, March 31, 1772, Catharine, daughter of Frederick Romig, a miller near Emaus. She was born Oct. 18, 1748, and died July 3, 1816. They had eight children: John; Magdalena, married Thomas Everett; Catharine, married Henry Leibert; Anna Maria, married Henry Christ; Jacob, married Lydia Leibert; John Philip, married Magdalena Wuench; Abraham, died young; and a daughter who died in infancy.

Aquila Knauss was born in Emaus on March 6, 1819, and spent most of his life in that pioneer village, being one of its faithful and valued citizens. He was engaged in various enterprises in his time, having been justice of the peace, postmaster, station agent, the first town clerk and church organist, was a merchant, and for a time conducted the Eagle Hotel. In 1863, he became agent and weighmaster of the Allentown Iron Company, and moved to East Macungie. This position he held until the company abandoned its business. He conducted a small farm in connection and lived retired there in his declining years. He was married to Margretta Weiler, daughter of George Weiler and his wife, a born Schaeffer, members of prominent families in Berks county. Eleven children were born to them, of whom these survive: Mrs. H. J. Balliet, George F., Oliver J., Mrs. Harry Jarrett, Oscar P., and Albert W. The father died in 1896 and the mother in 1907.

OSCAR PENROSE KNAUSS, a well known citizen of Macungie, was born at Emaus, Sept. 4, 1859, and in 1863 was taken to Macungie by his parents, where he acquired his education in the public schools. He has, however, broadened his knowledge by his identification with a calling tending to that effect. In early life he became reporter for various daily newspapers and became very acceptable in that line of activity. He learned the printing trade and has followed that so far all his life. He purchased the plant from his preceptor and in 1888 founded the Macungie Progress, a weekly paper which he edited and published for twenty-three years. His business engagements in this connection are more extensively noted under the chapter devoted to industries of Macungie borough, in this history.

He followed the religious faith of his fathers and is a member of the Emaus Moravian church. He was an active member of the Lehigh Valley Editorial Association as long as it existed, belonged to the State Editorial Association, and is now a member of the Lehigh county Historical Society, Continental Castle, No. 61, K. G. E., the Macungie Beneficial Association, Friendly Lodge, No. 85, and Macungie Encampment, I. O. O. F., the Macungie Fire Company and others, in all of which he has held offices of trust and honor. He is now registrar of Vital Statistics of Lower Macungie township and Macungie borough. In national politics he votes for good Republicans that he may know of and in local affairs he supports the men, regardless of party affiliation, whom he believes are best qualified.

In 1880, Mr. Knauss was married to Sarah L., daughter of Christian and Sarah (Kidd) Kemmerer, of Hanover township, this county. They had one son, Eugene, who died when eight years old.

ALBERT W. KNAUSS, son of Aquila, is a plumber and gas fitter at Allentown. He was born at Emaus, Oct. 26, 1861. At a suitable age he learned the painting and paper hanging trade, following it for eleven years at Macungie. For four years of this time, he had associated with him as a partner, Victor Moyer, under the firm name of Knauss and Moyer. At the age of twenty-two years, he learned the trade of machinist and was employed at the Macungie furnace for a time, and later worked for the Ebbecke Hardware Company, for William Douglass and also for George Knauss, all of Allentown. He was employed for one year by the Composite Medal Company at Catasauqua. Afterward, Mr. Knauss had charge of the construction of the Griesemer Fiber Works, at Allentown, which continued for a period of one year and afforded employment to twenty men. Mr. Knauss made the first fibre bucket machine in the above establishment.

In the year 1903, he engaged in the present business in which he employs six men, doing all kinds of plumbing, gas fitting and general repair work.

He and family are members of the St. Luke's Lutheran church. Socially he is a member of these lodges: Friendly Lodge, I. O. O. F., since 1885; also of the Odd Fellows Encampment, both of Macungie; the Knights of Friendship, and the Knights of the Mystic Chain. Politically Mr. Knauss is a member of the Progressive party. In 1882 he married Tevillia Kressly, a daughter of Levi and Amanda (Sherer) Kressly. They have eight children: Millie, who died in 1900, was the wife of John Butz; Edgar W.; Ella V.; Fred G.; Lizzie I.; Claude R.; Carrie M.; and Earl E.

George F. Knauss, son of Aquila Knauss, of Topton, Berks county, married Annie Hittle, daughter of Joseph and Maria Hittle. HOWARD A. KNAUSS, son of George F. Knauss, was born at East Macungie, Lehigh county, October 14, 1876. His education was obtained in the public schools in the neighborhood of his home, which was limited, owing to the fact that he began work in early boyhood, being employed by farmers and in the iron ore mines, receiving thirty cents per day for a period of two years. Later at the age of thirteen, he accepted a clerkship in a store at East Macungie, after which he worked in the Macungie Furnace, then was engaged in office work, and subsequently learned telegraphy and chemistry, and was employed in the laboratory of the Crane Iron Works at Catasauqua, Pennsylvania, becoming chief chemist, continuing there for eight years. He was then appointed assistant superintendent and later superintendent of the same concern, holding this position for eight years. Afterwards he became superintendent of the Northern Iron Company's furnaces at Standish, Clinton county, New York, remaining seven months, and at the expiration of this period he became connected with the Empire Steel and Iron Company, of Reading, Pa. In 1909, he was appointed superintendent of the Reading Iron Company's furnace, which position he serves up to the present time. The concern employs 75 men.

In January, 1896, he was married to Addie S. Gery, daughter of Nathan S. and Elenora (Bastian) Gery. Unto them are born the following children: Howard L.; and Eleanor A. The son, Howard, is a graduate in 1912 of Nazareth Hall, M. A., at Nazareth, Pa.; is now connected with the Reading Iron Company in the laboratory at Reading.

His social connections are with Porter Lodge, No. 287, F. & A. M.; Catasauqua Chapter, No.

He was educated in the East Macungie public schools, and in July, 1898, he began learning the profession of chemistry in the laboratory of the Crane Iron Works at Catasauqua. After he had served about one year he accepted the position of chief chemist with the Allentown Rolling Mills, a position he served with marked ability when a mere lad of fifteen years, but after he had filled the latter position about three months, Leonard Peckitt, the president of the Crane Iron Works asked him to accept a similar position with his company in its laboratory at an advanced salary. He accepted the appointment and filled it satisfactorily, until he was promoted to the superintendency of the Macungie furnace, which also belongs to the Empire Steel and Iron Co. In September, 1911, the same company sent him to start up their furnace at Topton, Pa., and he continued there until December, of that year, when he was promoted to his present position, owing to the death of H. R. Hall, at Catasauqua. He has under his charge from 250 to 350 men. He is a member of the Macungie Lodge, No. 85, I. O. O. F.

The land which he secured had been war-

He followed agricultural pursuits throughout the active years of his life, first owning a tract of seventy acres, and later purchasing the David Stephen farm, all of which he cultivated and improved, bringing the land to a high state of cultivation. He erected a double brick house on the premises in 1842, and in the following year a barn and made other extensive improvements. All these were made possible through his labors and stand as monuments to his handiwork. He was an industrious man, performing thoroughly everything he undertook, enterprising and thrifty, and thus achieved a large degree of success. In 1900 he retired from active business pursuits, and removed to Allen-

They resided on a farm near Bath, which they had exchanged for a mill property in Weisenberg township. They were members of the Reformed congregation at Kreidersville (Stone Church), where their remains lie buried. Jonathan Knauss was probably a son of Daniel Knauss, one of the early settlers of Weisenberg, and apparently of the same family as the two Knauss brothers who settled near Emaus. He received his early training in the local schools and was united in holy wedlock with Amelia Yohe, a daughter of Peter Yohe (Aug. 30, 1801-Feb. 24, 1867), and his wife, Sarah, nee Smith (Nov. 6, 1806-Nov. 3, 1881). They resided on the old homestead in Upper Milford township, now owned by their son, Henry M.

In 1894 Mr. Knauss retired from farming and moved to Emaus, where he died Feb. 8, 1905, aged 77 years, 8 months, and 15 days. His remains, together with that of his wife, who was born November 28, 1829, and died June 22, 1901, in her 72d year, lie buried at the Western Salisbury church, where they were faithful and devoted members of the Reformed congregation and in which Mr. Knauss served in various capacities. On October 16, 1890 he was married to Alice Esther Diefenderfer, a daughter of Amandus John Diefenderfer and Maria Elizabeth Stahler, and a granddaughter of Henry and Anna Koehler Diefenderfer. (See Diefenderfer family). In the spring of 1893 Mr. Knauss came to Emaus and opened a grocery store at the northeast corner of Third and Main streets, and has continued in the mercantile business ever since, being eminently successful. In 1908 he erected the beautiful and spacious store room and dwelling where he now conducts his business. Politically he is a Democrat and in religion a member of the Reformed congregation of Western Salisbury, which he has served as deacon, elder, and trustee. Mrs. Knauss is a member of Solomon's Reformed congregation, Macungie. Socially both Mr. and Mrs. Knauss are popular and enjoy a large circle of friends. This union is blessed with two sons: Vermond A., and Roy A., both of whom are musicians of rare attainments. Vermond Adison was born June 10, 1892; he was educated in the public schools of Emaus, and after spending two years in the Danna School of Music, in Ohio, he studied privately under the noted Alexander Selner in New York City, and also the theory of music under the celebrated Carl Hauser of the same city. At various times he was connected with the following musical organizations: Lehigh Valley Symphony Orchestra, Walsh; Liberatta and Kilties Bands. Of the latter he was assistant conductor, conducting the second band. In October, 1912, he was married to Miss Anna Sullivan. They reside at Tuka, Oklahoma, where he is the leader of a band and orchestra.

Roy A., was born May 1, 1894. He was graduated from the Emaus high school in 1909, and in the fall of the same year entered the Warren Military Band School, at Warren, Ohio. He, like his brother, for a time was assistant conductor for the Kilties band and in 1912 was touring with the Roney concert company of the Pacific Coast, and is now studying music in Chicago.

KNAPPENBERGER FAMILY.

John Ehrhard Knappenberger from Germany, emigrated to American on the ship "Christian," which arrived at Philadelphia, Sept. 13, 1749. It appears that soon after coming to this country he settled in Northampton (now Lehigh) county, where, in 1762, his name appears among the taxable residents, of Whitehall township. Among his children were the following sons: Adam, Conrad, Henry, Philip, and George. A daughter, Margaretha Knappenberger, was born Oct. 14, 1767, died on Jan. 1, 1850. She was the wife of Jonathan Knauss. The Pennsylvania Archives reveal the remarkable record that these five sons served their country in the Revolutionary War.

Henry Knappenberger, son of the pioneer ancestor, located in Macungie township. In the year 1790 he had one son over sixteen years and two sons under sixteen, and one daughter, Katharina Knappenberger, born during the Revolutionary War period. Both were in their 84th year of age; and they, with Harrison, son of Jacob, Knappenberger, born in 1823, died in 1857, are buried at Cetronia.

Philip Knappenberger was a farmer and had a 115-acre farm, located one mile northeast of Macungie. He and family were Lutheran members of the Lehigh church, and there he and wife and some children are now buried. He was

He worked upon the farm until he was nineteen years old, then learned the painting trade, which he followed twelve years. Afterward he removed to Emaus, and engaged in the butchering business, which he followed actively for twelve years when his health began to fail. In 1897 he was appointed mercantile appraiser of the county, serving the office one year.

After his education in the local schools and the Emaus high school, he learned the butchering trade with his uncle, O. M. Knappenberger, at Macungie, and there he continued until in 1891. He afterward continued the butcher business near Emaus for two years; and on Jan. 19, 1895, he became associated with the Arbogast and Bastian Company, Allentown. In 1906 he was made the foreman of this large company and now has charge of eighty men.

He married, in 1891, Martha R. Knerr, a daughter of the late George and Sarah (Bastian) Knerr. Unto them are born three children, namely: Howard Oliver, who died, aged sixteen months; George Henry, married to Mary Deppe; and Mildred Martha. Mr. Knappenberger and his entire family are active members of Seibert United Evangelical church; and since 1904 he has been one of the stewards; and is president of the Adult Bible Class of the Sunday school since 1909. Before his removal to Allentown, in 1895, he served Riegel's Union Sunday school, in Lower Macungie, for a period of five years.

KNECHT FAMILY.

The ancestor of this family, Johann Jacob Knecht, was a native of the German Palatinate, or the Pfaltz am Rhine. He emigrated to America on the ship "Allen," which landed (qualified) at Philadelphia, on Sept. 15, 1729, having about 126 persons. The ship was commanded by James Craige from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, whence the ship sailed July 7th. (Colonial Records, III, 368). This pioneer located at what is now Durham, Bucks county, Pa., and later removed to Nazareth township, Northampton county. He is buried at Dryland church. He accompanied a German Reformed missionary to this country, and that was the religion of the Knecht family. This pioneer had four sons, viz:

Leonard, born Jan. 18, 1737, died Oct. 18, 1789.
Ulrich, born Feb. 18, 1738, died Feb. 26, 1818, aged 82 years and 8 days.
George.
Peter.

All served in the Revolutionary War. Ulrich was married twice. His first wife, Maria Catharine Schlauch, who was born Feb. 13, 1741, and died July 27, 1781. Their children were: Marguerite (Frankenfield) born June 3, 1759, and died Sept. 2, 1840. Elizabeth (Willauer); Catharine (Stocker); John; Jonas; Philip, born June 6th, 1768, and died July 9, 1850; George, born Aug. 11, 1774, and died March 3, 1843; Christian, born May 24, 1780, died Dec. 26, 1845; and Susan (Root).

His second wife was Eva Lennaschmidt with whom he had two children: Rosanna (Kindt) and Abraham, who was born March 9, 1793, died Jan. 29, 1800.

All the above are buried at Dryland church excepting Elizabeth and Catherine, who are buried at Forks Church.

Ulrich Knecht was the owner of three tracts of land. The Pennsylvania Archives show that he took out a warrant for land in Bethlehem township in 1786. In 1788 he owned a tract of 165 acres in Forks township; and on Jan. 25, 1798, he purchased from the Hon. John and Richard Penn, sons of William Penn, the proprietors of the province of Pennsylvania, a tract of 220 acres, and 155 perches situated in Nazareth township, Northampton county, for the sum of 144 pounds, 14 shillings and 8 pence, current money of Pennsylvania.

George Knecht, son of Ulrich was born Aug. 11, 1774, and died Mar. 3, 1843. He owned a part of the homestead and was a farmer. His wife was Sarah Willauer, who was born Sept. 21, 1784, and died Oct. 6, 1877, at the ripe age of 93 years and 15 days, and for some time before her end came she longed to go home and be with her Maker. Their children were:

George Knecht, son of George and Sarah (Willauer) Knecht, was an undertaker and farmer, in Whitehall township, Lehigh county to which place he moved prior to 1848. He was a "bugler" in the old state militia for many years. He is buried in the cemetery of the Egypt church, of which he was a Reformed member. His wife was Phillipina Uhler, who was born Dec. 24, 1814, and died Jan. 9, 1889, of typhoid pneumonia, aged 75 years and 15 days. She was a daughter of Valentine Uhler, of Forks township. The Allentown Democrat, after the funeral, which was conducted by the Rev. J. D. Schindle, complimented her on her pious and unselfish life and her devotion to duty. Their children were:

Of these children, Stephen and Edwin fought in the Civil War, having been enlisted in Company F, 153rd Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and both were wounded in the conflict at Gettysburg.

Peter Knecht, son of George and Phillipina (Uhler) Knecht, was born in Northampton county, June 18, 1836, and died May 16, 1913, of paralysis from which he suffered nearly a year. He was a carpenter by trade, but for 20 years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Lehigh county. For the last 15 years he was retired and lived a quiet life at his homestead, near Omrod, Pa. On February 9th, 1867, he was married to Flora Jane Wotring, who was born Nov. 12, 1843, and was a daughter of Michael and Esther (Hausman) Wotring, of North Whitehall township (Sand Spring), Lehigh county. Their children were:

Mary A.,	born	Feb. 26, 1868,	died

D. GEORGE KNECHT, D.D.S., the sixth child of Peter and Flora Jane (Wotring) Knecht, was born near the Sand Spring, in North Whitehall township, April 6, 1876. He received his early education in the public schools and after devoting four years to preparatory work in his chosen profession, he entered the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery, at Philadelphia, graduating in 1900. He is now located at No. 35 North Ninth Street, Allentown, where he enjoys a large practice.

Socially, Dr. Knecht is a member of Greenleaf Lodge No. 561, F. & A. M., and Constantine Lodge No. 1113, I. O. O. F. He and family are members of the St. Andrew's church. He was also the organizer of the Knecht Family Reunion, which held successful reunions at Waldheim Park in 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, and 1913. He is the secretary and historian of the association and has traced his family to the ancestor, Johann Jacob Knecht, who emigrated from the Palatinate in 1729. Dr. Knecht was married to Hannah E., daughter of William H., and Lizzie (Christman) Traub, and they have one daughter, Alice Agnes Knecht, born Sept. 3, 1903. At the Knecht family reunion held in 1910 at Waldheim Park, the following poem composed by Dr. D. George Knecht was read by him:

How grand it is for us to be,
 Together every year;
 As members of one family,
 Who come from far and near.
 The one main feature of it is,
 A closer tie to bind;
 So let us tie another knot,
 With kindred thought and mind.
 Perhaps some live too far away,
 To be with us when we;
 In grand reunion meet again,
 As the Knecht family.
 Though far away remember us,
 And we'll remember you;
 For we are all one family,
 You're Knecht's and we are too.

Johannes Knecht the first to leave,
 The "Palatinate of the Rhine";
 Came over to America,
 In Seventeen Twenty-nine.
 He crossed the deep Atlantic,
 To make this land his home;
 On board "THE ALLEN" a sailing boat,
 Steamships were then unknown.

 And sailed across the sea;
 They made this their adopted home,
 This land of liberty.

We know not where they all were settled
 But let this be our song;
 It would be nice for us to know,
 To which one we belong.

KNERR FAMILY.

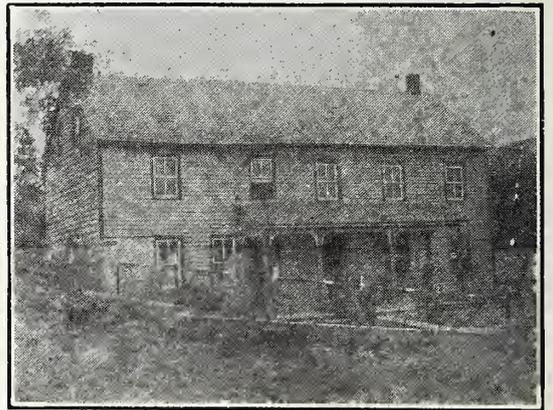

Abraham Knerr, the ancestor of this family, the name of which is also found spelled Knoer, Knörr, Knarr and Knorr, was born in Zweibruecken, Germany, in 1716. He emigrated to America in the ship Lydia, James Allen, master, sailing from Rotterdam, and arrived at Philadelphia on Sept. 29, 1741. He settled on a tract of 109 acres of land located on the line between Lowhill and Weisenberg townships, a short distance west of Claussville, which he secured by warrant dated Aug. 16, 1748, adjoining lands of Nicholas Acker, Peter Grow, John Bear, George Folk, and Christopher Kop. This tract, together with a tract warranted by Peter Grow, on Sept. 27, 1758, called Friend's Arrival, the whole amounting to 131 acres, was patented to John Knerr on June 6, 1810, upon the payment of $208.43. On May 18, 1763, Paul Boger, of Gwynedd township, Philadelphia county, Ermholder, and his wife, Christianna, sold to Abraham Knerr, for £340, three tracts of land in Lowhill township, containing 226 acres. On this tract Abraham Knerr erected about 1780, a log house, which still stands, to which an addition was built in 1812. On May 18, 1784, Abraham Knerr and his wife sold these tracts, containing respectively, 126 acres, 47 perches, 52½ acres, and 48 acres, 32 perches, to their youngest son, Andrew, for £450. One hundred acres of this land, with the old house, is now owned by George F. Knerr, of Allentown, a great-grandson of Andrew.

Andrew Knerr purchased another tract of 44 acres in Lowhill township from his father on March 6, 1784, for £100. This tract had been granted to Christopher Obel, by a warrant dated Nov. 30, 1750, who by deed of May 5, 1764, conveyed it to Andrew Eshbach, who sold on April 3, 1772, to Jacob Dorner, who on March 2, 1774, sold the tract to Abraham Knerr, Sr.

Abraham Knerr was a farmer by occupation and at the opening of the Revolution took an active part as a patriot, having been elected a member of the General Committee of Observation for Northampton county from Lowhill township, whose meeting he attended on May 30, 1776, when representatives to the Provincial Convention held in Philadelphia on June 18, 1776, were chosen, which was the first step in forming a new government. He was a contributor to the Lowhill Reformed congregation in 1769, to which on the dedication, Sept. 3, 1769, he, with Nicholas Mannebach, presented a baptismal service. In later years he became a member of the Reformed congregation at Unionville church. He died April 21, 1793, aged 79 years, and was buried at Unionville church, but unfortunately, no stone marks his last resting place. Rev. Abraham Blumer preached his funeral sermon. His wife, Mary Eva Knerr, was born Oct. 1, 1713, and died June 20, 1792, aged 78 years, 8 months and 19 days. They had ten children: Christopher, Catharine Barbara, John Jacob, John, Mary Eva, Anna Barbara, Abraham, Susanna, Dorothea, and Andrew.

Christopher Knerr, his eldest son, was born Oct. 8, 1742, and was baptized Nov. 28, 1742, at the Jordan church. His sponsors were John Christopher Ebel and Catharine Margaret Stet-tlar. He settled in Weisenberg township, where he died in 1777, leaving a widow, Mary Barbara, and four children: Andrew, born April 4, 1773; Mary Eva, born Dec. 3, 1774; Barbara and Susanna. He was one of the organizers of the Lowhill Reformed congregation Jan. 27, 1769, at which time he signed the constitution.

Catharine Barbara Knerr, eldest daughter of Abraham, Sr., was born Aug. 30, 1744, and died Feb. 17, 1803. She married Jacob Horner, justice of the peace of Lowhill township, who was born Nov. 27, 1736, and died Dec. 22, 1808. They are buried at Lowhill church. They had five sons: Jacob, Abraham, John, Michael, and Andrew, and four daughters.

John Jacob Knerr, second son of Abraham, Sr., was born about 1746. He is mentioned as a sponsor in 1772, but is not mentioned in his father's will. He probably died unmarried.

John Knerr, third son of Abraham, was born Aug. 11, 1747, and died June 12, 1825. He married Catharine Hartman, who was born Aug.

30, 1753, and died Nov. 7, 1834. They are buried at Lowhill church. John Knerr was a farmer and resided on a tract of 238 acres in Weisenberg township. He had thirteen children, viz: John, Catharine, Mary Gertrude, John Conrad, Magdalena, Abraham, John Jacob, Andrew, John Daniel, John Christian, Salome, Benjamin, and Catharine.

John was born Jan. 17, 1772. He married, May 21, 1801, Catharine Bachman, and removed to Northumberland county. His son, Rev. George Knerr, was born June 23, 1818. He married, Feb. 6, 1838, and had 10 children: Rev. Isaiah E. Knerr, born Nov. 28, 1838, married, Feb. 11, 1860, and had five children; Rev. Josiah K. Knerr, born Dec. 10, 1840, had five children; Levina, born Sept. 30, 1842; Rachel, born Oct. 1, 1844; Wm. H., born Dec. 11, 1846; Henry A., born July 5, 1848; Emma, born Sept. 3, 1852; Alice, born March 1, 1857; Jane R., born Oct. 17, 1859; Charles B., born Oct. 17, 1863. Rev. George Knerr and his sons, Isaiah E. and Josiah K., and his grandson, George, a son of Rev. Isaiah E., became ministers of the United Evangelical Church, and the Evangelical Association, and jointly served actively in the ministry for more than 140 years.

Catharine, born June 17, 1773, died May 26, 1855, married in 1798, John Durnmeyer.

Mary Gertrude, born Jan. 29, 1775, married Peter Seip.

John Conrad Knerr, born June 17, 1777, married, Aug. 14, 1803, Mary Gertrude, daughter of Rev. John Henry Helffrich. He was principally engaged, besides farming, in "blue dyeing," which he carried on extensively for many years in the homestead near Claussville. The materials were woven by weavers of the vicinity and after dyeing them he hauled them by team to Philadelphia and brought in exchange various kinds of merchandise. He took an active part in political affairs as a Democrat and filled one term from 1823 to 1826 as a county commissioner, and was prominently identified with the movement which led to the establishment of the county poor house in 1845. He died March 14, 1865, aged nearly 88 years. His wife was born July 23, 1781, and died April 20, 1841. He lived in retirement for a number of years at Claussville, where he had erected a commodious dwelling house opposite the hotel, which is still standing in a good state of preservation. He had a number of children, all of whom died young excepting Levi and Anna, who married Joseph Slough.

Levi Knerr, the only son of John Conrad, was born on the homestead June 27, 1817. He received his education in the local schools and was brought up on the farm until he became of age, when he and his brother-in-law, Joseph Slough, engaged in the mercantile business at Claussville, in the store department of the hotel building. They continued there next to the hotel for six years, when they moved into the large two-story brick building which Levi's father erected for them on the opposite side of the road; and, after establishing themselves in their new quarters, they increased their trade very much.

In 1848, Mr. Knerr purchased the interest of his brother-in-law, and afterwards was actively engaged in business there as a general country store-keeper until 1884, when he retired, having had his son, Richard, as a partner since 1865. During his early business career he purchased large quantities of produce from the surrounding store-keepers at Lyon Valley, Lentz's, Saegersville, Lynnvile, Seiberlingsville, and Hynemansville, and hauled it weekly to New York City, though the distance was gradually shortened as the railroad was extended from that place towards Easton and Allentown, and on his return he brought general merchandise of all kinds.

In 1840, Mr. Knerr married Abigail Brobst, daughter of Jacob Brobst, of South Whitehall. They had six children: Richard J., Calvin, and Levi, and three who died in infancy. Mr. Knerr died Feb. 20, 1908, aged 90 years. Mrs. Knerr was born April 7, 1822, and died Nov. 24, 1903. They were buried in the private cemetery of the family on the homestead, where a handsome granite monument has been erected, with a simple and appropriate inscription. Like his father and grandfather, he was a staunch Democrat, and upon the birth of first child, a son, he named him after Richard Johnson, a prominent Democrat of the state, whose character he very much admired.

Richard Johnson Knerr, merchant and postmaster at Claussville, in Lehigh county, for nearly fifty consecutive years, was born at Claussville, in the home erected by his grandfather on the opposite corner of the road from his store, on Sept. 21, 1842. He was brought up there and he received his preliminary education in the local schools and his higher education in the Millersville State Normal School, and in the Allentown Seminary, after which he followed teaching in the public school for three terms, having taught in Upper Macungie township, in the building near Fogelsville. He then entered the general store of his father as a clerk, and after continuing there for several years, until April 1, 1865, he became a partner in the business. KOHLER FAMILY.

The name of Kohler is found in Switzerland as early as 1476, when Nicholas Kohler is mentioned as participating in the battle of Murten. Representatives of the family have been prominent in civil life and as scholars in Switzerland since the sixteenth century. Jacob Kohler, the ancestor of the Kohler family of Whitehall, came from Muehlhausen. He was the first settler in the vicinity of Egypt, probably locating there as early as 1728 or 1730. He secured his first warrant for land on July 15, 1734, for 150 acres, which was the first warrant in the township. He secured another hundred acres by warrant of Oct. 28, 1737. In these warrants his name was spelled Colar. The entire tract of two hundred and fifty acres was patented by him on April 29, 1760. It was a rectangular tract with the Coplay creek flowing through it, and contained several fine springs. Here Jacob Kohler cultivated his land, clearing it of timber, year by year, until in 1768 he had 115 acres of cultivated land, as well as 215 acres of uncultivated land. In 1755 he built the first grist-mill in the vicinity and tradition has it that as he had a large family of daughters, he employed them in digging the mill race. He was one of the overseers of the poor in 1753, as is shown by a small scrap of paper still in existence. On April 10, 1761, he was naturalized. On Aug. 24, 1769, he deeded his land to his two sons, the elder receiving 155 acres and the mill property, and the younger receiving 193 acres. The date of his death is not known. Jacob Kohler was a man of great energy and wielded a great influence in the community. He and his wife, Mary Elizabeth, had eleven children, the eldest of whom died in infancy and was buried at Egypt.

of the leading blacksmiths of his day. Mrs. Koehler, a woman of ability, lived to the great age of ninety-two years, universally beloved and respected. They had no children, but had an adopted son, George Smull, who was the ancestor of the compiler of Smull's Handbook.

His daughter, Maria Christina, was baptized Dec. 8, 1741, at the Jordan Lutheran church. His wife, Anna Maria Koch, was born in 1701 and died in 1776. Among his children were Adam and Henry Koch. Henry Koch removed to Macungie township, where he owned a 250-acre farm and was a blacksmith as well as farmer. He was a deacon in the Jordan Lutheran congregation and married Dorothea Knedler. They had children: Henry, born 1778; John, born 1782; Solomon, born 1789; John Leonard, born 1786; and Daniel, born 1792.

Samuel Koch, son of John, was born in Upper Macungie township, Oct. 30, 1817, and died March 23, 1879, aged 61 years, 4 months and 2 days. He is buried at Jordan Lutheran church, of which he was a member. He was a farmer and had a 125-acre farm. In politics he was a Democrat and held local offices. His wife was Sarah Snyder, of South Whitehall township. She was born Sept. 26, 1819 and died Jan. 25, 1875, aged 55 years, 3 months and 29 days. Both Jeremiah and Samuel died in the spring of 1886 in a typhoid fever epidemic.

ALFRED J. KOCH, a substantial farmer of North Whitehall township, was born in Upper Macungie, Jan. 2, 1846, and lived in that district until he was twenty-six years of age. In the spring of 1876 he moved upon a farm near Wenersville and the following year he settled upon his 43-acre farm situated in the southern part of the township, where he lives to this time. This farm was the Daniel Gross homestead and was in that family about 110 years. The house still standing is one of the land-marks of that district. Mr. Koch is a director of the Lehigh Mutual Fire Insurance Company since 1886 and has served this company as its treasurer since 1899. Politically he is a Democrat and was elected assessor of Upper Macungie, and auditor of South Whitehall, serving both offices with marked ability.

On May 24, 1868, he married Annie M. Wenner, a daughter of Charles and Judith (Gaumer) Wenner. They are members of the Jordan Lutheran church, which Mr. Koch served as a deacon, elder and trustee for a number of years. They have five children: Alice, wife of Prof. E. J. Flexer, of Allentown; Edith J.; Warren E., married Cora Peters and is a post office clerk at Allentown; John G., married Goldie Biery, who live at Siegfried; and Samuel J., who was educated in the public schools and at the normal school at Kutztown, and is married to Mabel Handwerk.

George J. Koch, a retired citizen of Allentown, was born Dec. 26, 1849. He learned the milling trade, and for thirteen years followed that trade at Sieger's Mill and at Kernsville. Later he operated a farm for six years and in 1886 he came to Allentown, where he engaged in the retail shoe business, having his store at 805, 815 and 742 Hamilton street up to Dec. 1, 1909. He had a large trade and was at three places in order stated.

In 1876, he was married to Mary A. Huntzinger, daughter of Owen Huntzinger. They have five children, as follows: Harry I.; Luella, who married A. A. Kunkel, resides at Detroit, Mich., and has a son, Ambrose K.; Sadie; Sallie; and Mazie, who married Raymond Serfass. Mr. Koch and his family are members of St. Michael's Lutheran church.

HARRY I. KOCH, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and a member of the firm of Brown & Koch, insurance and real estate brokers of Allentown, was born near Siegersville, Nov. 29, 1876. When a mere lad, his parents came to Allentown, where he attended high school and was graduated in 1892. The following spring he was graduated from the American Commercial School of Allentown, and later was engaged by the Krall Furniture Company and the Yeager Furniture Company, both of Allentown, for a period of fifteen years. With the latter concern he occupied a position of an executive nature involving considerable responsibility. In 1908 he severed his relations with the Yeager Furniture Company to become associated with his present partner, Ray S. Brown, in the real estate business under the firm name of Brown & Koch. Their offices are located at No. 729 Hamilton street. The firm is of no long standing but by energy enterprise and sound business methods, together with unquestioned integrity and character, they immediately forged their way to the front amongst the insurance and real estate brokers of the city.

In the spring of 1909 the Chamber of Commerce felt the need of a secretary, one of sufficient standing in the community to properly care for the many important matters continually presenting themselves before the body. From a list of more than sixty applicants, it unanimously elected Mr. Koch, who since serves this position with merit. Through the efforts of Mr. Koch the membership has been increased and interest has been awakened. Numerous enterprises of various kinds have located here through the publicity campaign, pointing out the excellent advantages of Allentown and vicinity as a manufacturing center, among which was the Lehigh Valley Steel Co., which was started here in the spring of 1910, through the personal efforts of the secretary. This concern from a small beginning has already grown to such proportions as to necessitate the payment of $50,000 in wages per annum.

Mr. Koch is prominently identified with the Allentown Lodge of Elks, No. 130, having served in all its official capacities and being one of its most active and influential members, having been the Exalted Ruler during the years 1911 and 1912.

During 1894 and 1895 Mr. Koch was one of Lehigh county's prominent bicyclists and attained the highest speed during that year. As an amateur, he won a number of races in Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Hazelton, etc. He was also connected with the Allen Wheelmen.

He and his family are members of Christ Lutheran church, Mr. Koch having served in the vestry for several years and was one of the organizers of its Sunday school in January, 1904, since which time he served as its secretary.

On September 14, 1898, he was united in marriage to Miss Carrie E. Miller, one of the city's school teachers for several years. Their children are: George, Herbert, and J. Walter.

Thomas Koch, son of John and his wife, Elizabeth Snyder, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Schantz) Snyder, had children: Willoughby, born 1844, died 1912, a farmer at Kuhnsville, who married Elemina Guth, and had nine children: William H., of Koch & Person; Ray; Robert, of Bethlehem; Thomas, deceased; Mrs. Alvin Faust, of Ambler; Lillie E., wife of John H. Lichtenwalner, of Allentown; Mrs. John Shoemaker, of Breinigsville; Mrs. Maggie Kerschner, deceased; and Mrs. Hattie Kuhns, deceased; Horatio B., of H. Leh & Company, Allentown; Frank W., deceased; Thomas J., of Allentown; Mrs. Benj. F. Kuhns; Mrs. Samuel Ritter; and Mrs. Richard Kuhns.

FRANK W. KOCH.

Frank Walter Koch, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Snyder) Koch, was born Dec. 10, 1850, on a farm near Kuhnsville, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania. He attended the local country schools and worked on his father's farm until he was some fifteen years or more of age, and then determined to learn the tailor's trade. For that purpose he worked under a Mr. Lohrman for two or three years at Claussville, and then went to Allentown, where he secured employment with Breinig & Leh, as a garment cutter. This firm was afterward succeeded by H. M. Leh & Company. Young Koch continued in their employment until early in the year 1876; meanwhile, he became not only an expert garment cutter, but familiarized himself with the details of the entire clothing business as then conducted.

He formed a partnership with Wilson Shankweiler, March 3, 1876, and they began a retail clothing business at 618 Hamilton street, Allentown, under the name of Koch & Shankweiler. The enterprise proved to be a profitable venture, the business increased rapidly, and became permanent. In 1884 or 1885, the firm bought the old Allen House site at the corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets and erected the Hotel Allen building thereon, using the upper floors for a hotel and the first floor for a clothing store. They moved into the new quarters in the hotel building on Feb. 1, 1886, and in July following, Mr. Shankweiler died. The Shankweiler interest was soon purchased by Thomas J. Koch and Lewis Shankweiler, and later the business was conducted under the firm name of Koch Brothers. This arrangement was continued until the death of Frank W. Koch, and was uniformly successful in the years that followed; in a few years it became the largest retail clothing business in eastern Pennsylvania. The firm at different times bought adjoining lots and expanded their building until it became the most valuable piece of real estate in the city.

Frank Walter Koch married Mary Irene Heller, daughter of Peter and Anna (Hartz) Heller, the 24th day of July, 1886, at Allentown, Pennsylvania. She was born April 3, 1860, at Allentown, and is descended from the Christopher Heller family. She travelled extensively with her husband during his life-time, spends her days out of doors in recreation and in the management of the varied interests of her husband's estate and towards fostering many private charities. In 1907, she had a large memorial window erected in Christ's church, Lutheran, to her deceased husband, and still resides in the elegant home at 1208 Hamilton street, which he built during his life-time for their domicile.

They have one daughter, Anna Elizabeth Koch, who was born July 5, 1891, at Allentown, Pennsylvania; was graduated in June, 1908, from the Allentown Woman's College; and afterward attended Dana Hall, at Wellesley, Mass. She married Norton Louis Lichtenwalner, of Allentown, on Oct. 15, 1912. He was born June 1, 1889, at Allentown, and is the son of Frederick and Jennie (Seiple) Lichtenwalner, of Allentown. Mr. Lichtenwalner was engaged in the brokerage business in his native city for some years, and is now a member of the firm of J. M. Grimley Co.

Mr. Koch was the owner of much real estate in Allentown; was one of the largest stockholders and a director of the Allentown National Bank; a trustee of Muhlenberg College, and of the Allentown Hospital; also a member of the Livingstone Club; and of the Lutheran church at Allentown. He contributed generously to church and charitable enterprises and always took an active interest in such enterprises that had for their object the good and welfare of the community. He travelled extensively in America during the later years of his life, and was on his third trip to Europe when he lost his life in the great Salisbury, England, railroad disaster. He and his wife had planned the trip as a duplication of their honeymoon trip of twenty years before; and to give their daughter, Anna Elizabeth Koch, then fifteen years old, her first glimpse of foreign lands. They had sailed from New York on June 23, 1906, to join the Raymond and Whitcomb party in London on a tour through the British Isles and the continent of Europe when the fatal accident occurred. His wife was seriously injured in the same wreck, but she recovered.

Frank Walter Koch died on Sunday, July 1, 1906, at Salisbury, England. His remains were shipped to the United States aboard the steamship Minneapolis, and the body arrived in Allentown July 17, 1906, where the funeral services and interment took place. In passing, it may be added that many prominent citizens of Allentown paid tribute to the dead in both public and private eulogy.

The deceased was the city's most distinguished and successful merchant; he was always a leader in the development of every laudable public enterprise; and a citizen noted alike for his piety and benevolence. He was a member of Christ's Lutheran church, in Allentown, but had formerly attended St. John's church, of which he was a member of the vestry, and held the office of ruling elder of Christ's church at the time of his death. He was ever alert in the advancement of the Christian religion, liberal in his charities, and attained the respect of all who knew him. In his demise, the community and state lost an honored citizen, and the church a pillar of strength in the passing of a noble Christian character.

THOMAS J. KOCH.

Thomas J. Koch, leading clothing merchant, banker, and real estate owner of Allentown, was born Aug. 8, 1861, at Kuhnsville, Lehigh county, son of Thomas Koch.

In 1876, at the age of 15 years, on a cold March morning, he left his Kuhnsville home, full of vigor, with a robust constitution, a clear brain, and a determination to make his mark in the world.

He began his business career in Allentown as a clerk with his brother, Franklin W. Koch, and Wilson C. Shankweiler, who established, on March 30, 1876, a clothing store, in a humble way, at 618 Hamilton street, under the name of Koch & Shankweiler. At that time Thomas J. Koch was the only clerk in the store. From the outset the firm prospered, and in 1886, desiring to enlarge their headquarters, they erected the Hotel Allen building, where they moved, occupying the entire ground floor.

Mr. Shankweiler, the associate of Mr. F. W. Koch, died while the latter was abroad on his wedding tour, from which he returned on Aug. 15, 1886, and soon thereafter Thomas J. Koch became a member of the firm. In 1891 the firm name was changed to Koch Brothers, and the business grew with wonderful strides, until a total of 86,000 square feet of floor space was utilized.

In 1906 alterations for Hotel Allen were made at an expense of $100,000. On July 1, 1906, while these improvements were in progress, Frank W. Koch was killed in a railway accident at Salisbury, England, while on a European tour. Subsequently, Thomas J. Koch purchased his late brother's interest in the hotel and clothing business, becoming thereby the sole owner thereof.

On Jan. 1, 1907, Mr. Koch effected a reorganization of the business, admitting his two nephews, Willis E. Kuhns and Harry W. Jordan, who share in the profits of the firm. Mr. Koch appointed E. S. Shankweiler as manager of the advertising department and decorator, and inaugurated a system by means of which every employee of the establishment shares in the prosperity of the business, each according to his merits.

The Koch Brothers' store is replete with interesting features, chief among which is the lighting scheme supplied by a privately owned plant from which current is secured for a myriad of electric lights. To stop to speak of the extent, worth, exclusiveness or other characteristics of the stock with which each department of the store is supplied, has no place here. Thirty-five years of steady growth tells its own tale. In the various departments over 60 people are employed, independent of the garment makers. In 1900, Mr. Koch made 97 per cent. of all the clothing sold in the large establishment.

Mr. Koch has been vice-president of the Merchants' National Bank of Allentown since April 1, 1903, at which time he became a member of the board of directors.

Thomas J. Koch married Miss Lydia Morgan Moore, daughter of Hon. John M. Moore, of Clayton, New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Koch reside in their fine residence at No. 448 Hamilton street, Allentown.

The three Koch brothers, Frank W., Thomas J., and Horatio, have always taken an active interest in church work and they have done much in the organization and erection of the beautiful and costly edifice of the Christ Evangelical Lutheran church at Thirteenth and Hamilton streets, Allentown.

Clarkson, the secretary of war, certified to his record. [*Vol. III, Penna. He was a pioneer farmer and had settled on unclaimed land. He had two sons: Stephen, Jr., and Daniel, the latter the grandfather of Eben P. Kingsbury, of Allentown. Daniel Kingsbury remained upon his father's homestead and died there in 1912, aged 88 years. He is buried in Columbia county in the locality where he had lived so many years. KRAMLICH FAMILY.

The ship Patience which arrived at Philadelphia, Sept. 19, 1749, had among its 270 passengers, the following:

Valentine Gramlich.

Hans Adam Gramlich.

Hans Adam Gramlich, Jr.

The relationship between the first one and the two last named is not of record but tradition states that the first two were brothers. The name is one which is easily misspelled and on the old documents are found the following spellings: Kramlich, Kramley, Kramly, Cromley, Cromly and Crumley.

Valentine Kramlich came from the Duchy of Wurtemberg, Germany, and soon after his arrival at Philadelphia, he proceeded via the Schuylkill river to Oley township, Berks county, thence across the hills into Macungie, then settled in Weisenberg township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county. There he became a large property owner, and one of the organizers of a church for the community. He was a man of great prominence and influence and was a leader in his district. But in an historical record of Ziegel church written by the Rev. W. H. Helffrich, a minister of the Reformed faith, possessed of great learning and foresight, who dwelt in that section, credit for meritorious work was largely given to members of his own faith; while the work of the Lutherans of which Valentine Kramlich was a leader were barely mentioned. Kramlich was possessed of more than ordinary intelligence; was a Lutheran of strong convictions and his numerous posterity among whom are a number of ministers of the Gospel have continued to hold to that faith with remarkable zeal. The ancestor had the following children: 1. George, who moved from the district after 1790, died near Danville, Pa. 2. Paul, who died upon the homestead. 3. Daniel. 4. Anna Maria. 5. Christian, who moved to Ohio, in 1808, and soon afterward he began to spell his name Crumley and Cromley; but on his marriage certificate and official documents it was spelt K-r-a-m-l-i-c-h.

Paul Kramlich, who continued upon the homestead in Weisenberg township, in 1790, had three sons and four daughters. The sons were: Paul, Jr., Jacob, and Jonathan.

The tax-lists of Weisenberg township contain these names:

1762—Valentine Kramlich.

1781—Valentine Gramlich, Paul Gramlich

1812—Paul Kramlich, Paul Kramlich, Jr., Jacob Kramlich.

The Penna. Arch. record the names of Paul, Jacob, Christian, George, and Frank (Francis) Kramlich as having served in the Revolutionary War from Northampton county. The four first named were descendants and doubtless sons of Valentine of Weisenberg township, except Jacob who was a son of Paul Kramlich. Frank or Francis was a son of Adam Kramley, whose record follows:

In Will Book 1, Page 105, in the court house, at Easton, Pa., is the will of one Adam Kramley who died in April, 1773, in Moore township, Northampton county. He was twice married and by his first wife had five children. An item of the will says: "My son, Francis Kramley, by my present wife shall have the homestead farm upon which I now live." The will was made March 8, 1773, and was probated on May 1, of the same year. The executors of it were: M., F., I., and E. Kramley, doubtless sons of the testator. The above Adam Kramley doubtless was the same Hans Adam Gramlich, who with his son, Hans Adam, Jr., emigrated to America in 1749.

The Federal Census of 1790, records one Adam Gramlich living in the eastern district of Cumberland county, Pa., and he had three sons and four daughters. Christopher and Frederick Cromlich lived also in the same district in that year. The former had four and the latter had six children.

Three of the five children of Valentine Kramlich moved to Ohio in 1808, and settled in Fairfield county. Christian, his youngest son, was the father of the late Daniel Crumley, of Lithopolis, O., and of Conrad Crumley, of Hocking township, to whom the Crumlings of Fairfield county owe their genealogy.

Three sons of Paul Kramlich moved from Pennsylvania to Pickaway county, O., in 1815. Their names were Paul, Jacob, and Jonathan. Paul died in March, 1826, leaving four sons, viz.: Jonas, Stephen, Thomas, and William. The latter was born in Lehigh county, Pa., March 19, 1813, and died in Ohio, in May, 1888. He was the father of the Hon. T. E. Cromley, of Ashville, O. He served as a trustee of the boys' industrial school at Lancaster, and was state senator from Pickaway county.

Conrad Crumley, the immediate ancestor of the Hocking township clan, reared a large family, two of whom, (Daniel and George), served in the Union army. Conrad Crumlie was one of the grand old men of the past, one whose influence and example for good was felt in a large circle of acquaintances. He served as a trustee of the St. Peter's Lutheran church, Lancaster, O. He died in 1879, aged seventy-seven years, having enjoyed a happy married life for fifty-five years. Of his eleven children, six were still living in 1912. They were David, Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, Peter G., Joshua, Daniel, and George W.

George Kramlich was a laborer and an old line veterinary doctor. He and family for many years lived in Longswamp township, Berks county; but died while living with his son, John, at Topton, Pa., about the year 1877, aged seventy-nine or eighty years. He is buried at the Longswamp church. His wife was a Walbert and their children were: Charles; James; Sarah, who was very tall and heavy, was the wife of Levi Leibensperger; John; and Mary married to John Batdorf.

Charles Kramlich, son of George, was born in 1837. He was a butcher, and carried on the business at Monterey and later at Topton, where he died in 1874. He is buried at the Maxatawny Zions church. He was married to Sallie Ann Kuhns, born June 19, 1838, and died at Allentown in 1913. They had the following children: Frank O., who died Jan. 22, 1913, aged fifty-three years, two months, and three days; Charles F.; Alice, married to Edward Kramer; Ida, married to Dr. C. J. Otto; Hiester G.; Lizzie, deceased, was the wife of W. B. Fogelman; and Annie, who became the second wife of Edward Kramer. They reside at Reading, Pa.

HIESTER G. KRAMLICH, merchant of Allentown, was born at Topton, Pa., Aug. 26, 1866. KRAMER FAMILY.

Bernhard Kramer, the immigrant ancestor of many persons of this name in the counties of Berks and Lehigh, settled in the Allemangel district, the name of an early locality which signified "all wants" and embraced what is now Albany township in Berks county and Lynn township in Lehigh county, south of the Blue Mountains.

His wife was Susanna Catharine Lutz, or Lutz. An old baptismal certificate, which records the birth and baptism of a son, Johannes, is in the possession of Daniel F. Kramer, in Bern township, Berks county, and this states that Johannes Kramer, son of Bernhard, was born September 11, 1777, and baptized October 19th following, in the Weissenberg church, and that the sponsors were Johannes Turg Hand and his wife, Anna Margaretha.

Johannes Kramer, son of Bernhard, was born September 11, 1777, and died at the age of 89 years. His wife was Catharine Ruhl, born in 1780 and died at the age of 68 years. Both were buried in the cemetery at Epler's church in Berks county. He was a stone mason and owned a small tract of land. They had nine children: Elizabeth, born 1803 and died 88 years old; Anna Maria, b. 1804 and died 75 years old; Catharine, b. 1806 and died 82 years old; John, b. 1807 and died 93 years old; Margaret, b. 1809 and died 82 years old; Sallie, b. 1811 and died 93 years old; Daniel R., b. 1813 and died 72 years old; Susanna, b. 1816 and died 41 years old; and Jacob, b. 1819 and died 76 years old. Their children were all married. The average length of life of eight of them (excepting Susanna) was a most remarkable age of 85 years.

George Kramer, of Greenwich township, in Berks county, made his last will in July, 1778, and it was probated by the Register of Wills on October 22, 1787. It mentions George Adam and Christopher (Stoffel) as sons, and Anna Maria as the youngest daughter; but from its language it would appear that there were other children. The Federal census of 1790 would seem to confirm it, for there were ten heads of families recorded then whose name were Chris't, George (sr.) George (jr.), Geo. Adam, Fred'k, Daniel, John, Philip, William, and the widow Kremer.

John Kramer was a resident of Greenwich township, in Berks county, and there he owned a very large tract of land in the vicinity of the Schofer schoolhouse. He operated a distillery, disposing of his product (apple-jack) at Philadelphia, for it is known that he made occasional trips to that place and doubtless for that purpose. He was a man of more than ordinary popularity, prominently identified with the State Militia, in which he held a commission as captain. He was tall, with a fine physique; and he was a severe disciplinarian. On battalion days he appeared in his uniform and uttered his commands in a loud voice; and he moved about in a most dignified manner.

His wife was Sarah Shadel, and they had five children: John, Jacob, George, Mary (married William Adam), and Sarah (married William Gehret). Both of the sons-in-law were carpenters by occupation.

George Kramer, son of John, was a farmer and carpenter in Greenwich township, Berks county. His wife was Catharine Dietrich, a daughter of George Dietrich who was a prosperous miller and farmer of the same township; and they had nine children: Mary, Sarah, Hettie, Catharine, Franklin D., Carrie, Amanda, Chester U. and Rosa.

Jacob Kramer son of John, was born in Windsor township and died in Greenwich township, Berks county. He was buried at the Zion church in Perry township, where he had been a member of the Lutheran congregation. He was a farmer by occupation and owned different farms. In 1899 he purchased the William J. Dietrich homestead at West Hamburg, at a public sale and shortly afterward sold it at a profit to John S. Kline. He also had the farm now owned by his son Thomas. He was a Democrat and for a number of years served as a school director of Greenwich township, holding the office at the time of his death.

His wife was Elizabeth Mengel, a daughter of Joseph Mengel of Windsor township, who was born October 3, 1834, and now has her home with her daughter Mary. They had fourteen children: Frank, Mary Anna and Louisa, who died small; Jacob M., Thomas, Senora (married Daniel Jacoby), Salena (m. W. F. Miller), Mary (m. George Adam), Malinda (m. Morgan Sausely) Samuel, Frederick, Agnes (m. William Warmkessel), and John.

JACOB M. KRAMER, prosperous farmer in the Kistler valley, was born in Windsor township, Berks county, December 11, 1860. In 1884 he began farming as a tenant on the place where he now resides in Lynn township, and he continued there three years. Afterward he farmed in Upper Macungie, Washington, and Heidelberg townships for eleven years; and in 1897 he returned to the farm in the Kistler valley, which he operated for ten years; and in 1907 he purchased the place. Samuel Kistler had built a large stone dwelling-house there in 1803, and Daniel Kistler a Swiss born, 45 x 100 feet, in 1868. The farm contains 207 acres.

Mr. Kramer was married May 24, 1886, to Mary A. Heil, daughter of Benjamin and Catharine (Frey) Heil, of Heidelberg township, and they have seven children: Thomas A., Milton J., Maud M. H., Katie E., Robert E., John B. and Annie S. They are members of the Lutheran congregation of the St. Peter's church at Lynnville, which he has served as elder since 1907. In politics he is a Democrat.

Henry Kramer, the ancestor of this family, was a farmer in what is now Upper Nazareth township, Northampton county, prior to 1807 a part of Nazareth township and prior to 1788 a part of Bethlehem township, where he owned 150 acres of land. He was born in February, 1724, and died Feb. 2, 1795, aged 71 years, and was buried at Hecktown church. He had three sons and six daughters.

Nicholas Kramer, son of Henry, was born Nov. 13, 1767, and died Dec. 16, 1836, aged 69 years. He was a surveyor and dealer in real estate and bought and sold many farms in this section. He had his headquarters at the Sun Inn, Bethlehem, where he entertained lavishly.

He at one time owned the land on which Muhlenberg College is now located, as well as other farms in Whitehall, near Allentown. He was a member of the Lutheran Church and married Maria Catharine Vogel, who was born Nov. 14, 1771, and died Aug. 17, 1833. They had seven children: Eliza, born Nov. 20, 1791; Daniel, born June 19, 1794, who had children: Walter, Robert, and Mary, married Dr. Tilghman H. Martin; Thomas J., born Oct. 19, 1799; Charles, born Aug. 31, 1801; Susan, born Aug. 27, 1803; Hannah, born June 9, 1805; and Joseph, born May 17, 1807, whose son, Edward D., was the father of Thomas J. Kramer.

Charles Kramer was born Aug. 31, 1801, and was educated in Allentown, where, as a young man he learned tobacco spinning with John Eckert. In 1822, he became a butcher and continued in that business until his death, on April 16, 1865. His place of business was on the east side of Sixth street, between Linden and Turner streets. He was one of the committee of investigation after the failure of the old Northampton Bank, and one of the incorporators of the Agricultural Society. He married Juliana, daughter of William Miller, born Nov. 7, 1803, died Dec. 18, 1879. They had ten children: Franklin M., Maria, J. Allen, Tilghman W., Milton J., Eliza, Kate, Elemanda, George W., and John C.

It was then rebuilt, and the business continued there. In 1904, Mr. Kramer, with his brother, John T., purchased the building, and the business has so increased that the entire four floors are now occupied in the handling of the firm's large trade in the sale of high grade pianos, player pianos, victrolas, and everything in the music line. KRESSLY FAMILY.

John Adam Krassly, a German immigrant, was a pioneer in Heidelberg township, settling at a place locally known as "Die Kressly Stadt," even at this time. He is probably buried on the old graveyard at New Tripoli, and most of his many descendants are members of the Lutheran Church. He had four sons: Adam; Jacob; Bernhard, and John.

The tax-list of 1812 of Heidelberg contained these names: Adam, Bernhard, Jacob, John, and Jacob Krassly. Doubtless the second John and Jacob were grandsons of the ancestors. One of the Jacobs was recorded as a single man. In 1826 a John Krassly was the supervisor of Heidelberg and in the years 1849-50 and '55, a John Krassly was supervisor, and in 1859, '65, and '66, a Jacob Krassly was supervisor. The name is spelled so differently that the compiler has been obliged to follow the orthography used in the records and as now used by the several branches of the family.

Adam Kressly, lived in Heidelberg. In 1824 he built a stone house in "Die Kressly Stadt," which is still standing. He and his wife are buried on the old graveyard at New Tripoli. Her name was Catharine Nein, and their children were: Elizabeth, (married Johan Jacob Bachman and died in her 93rd year); Catharine, (married George Shoemaker, and her twin sister was the wife of John Snyder); Dina, (married Daniel Miller); John, Adam, and Peter.

(John) Adam Kressly, son of John and grandson of the pioneer, was born June 28, 1797, and died July 28, 1883, aged 86 years and 1 month. He was a shoemaker in Heidelberg in the settlement which bore the family name. On November 22, 1822, he married Barbara Miller, who was born Feb. 26, 1801, and died Feb. 15, 1839. They were buried on the old graveyard at New Tripoli. Their children were: Nathan, born Nov. 23, 1823; Owen, born Dec. 11, 1825; Sarah A., born Dec. 31, 1831; and William F., born March 28, 1834. He married as his second wife, Magdalena Werly, who was born April 7, 1805.

Owen Kressly, the second son, died at San Jose, Cal., on Jan. 4, 1881.

WILLIAM F. KRESSLY, the last named of the above sons, is a retired business man who resides at Allentown. He was born in Heidelberg and educated in the English school taught by George Paff, an Englishman. The same school was afterward taught by Rev. Levi Derr. Mr. Kressly was sent to Upper-Harmany in New Jersey to learn the English language. Upon his return home he taught school for two terms near New Tripoli and the "Water Pond" school one term. He had a 40 acre farm at the Schochary, which he farmed for six years. In 1865 he moved to Slatington, and there graded many of the streets during the eleven years that he lived in that borough. From that town he moved to Easton, Pa., to engage in the retail coal business and he carried it on for nineteen years; then moved to Allentown in 1904, and after carrying on the coal business there for another year, he retired. He was reared in the Lutheran faith, but later in life became a member of the Reformed Church. He served the Lowhill church as a deacon and since his removal to Allentown, has served as an elder in the Salem Reformed Church. He possesses a pleasing personality, is well read, and was a successful business man.

In 1858, Mr. Kressly was married to Sallie A. Hunsicker, daughter of Reuben Hunsicker of Heidelberg. She died August 26, 1905, aged 64 years, 10 months, and 11 days. She is buried at Easton, Pa. He was a stone-mason for more than 40 years; and his superior workmanship is reflected in the wall of north-east corner of the Heinrich Schütz stone house, built in 1825, a photograph of it appearing elsewhere in this history. He helped to build the third Ebenezer church at New Tripoli in 1824. He was a member of the Jacksonville church and served it officially.

Mr. Kressley is actively identified with the Democratic party, and takes a keen interest in its welfare. He and his wife are Reformed members of the Jacksonville congregation.

On July 16, 1906, he was married to Claire H. Ruttane, daughter of Wilmot S. and Amanda (White) Ruttane, natives of Bellville, Hastings county, Ontario, Canada. KRICK FAMILY.

Among the first settlers of Berks county, west of the Schuylkill river, were Francis Krick and his wife, Catharine, who came from the Palatinate in Germany, on the ship, Pennsylvania Merchant, landing at Philadelphia, Sept. 11, 1731. Settling near the Cacoosing creek in Cumru (now Spring) township, Berks county, he became the owner of a tract of 350 acres in five parts. Four of these tracts are still owned by his descendants. The fifth tract is a part of what is now Sinking Spring. When the city of Reading was laid out in 1749 he became one of the first lot owners, having purchased lots number 490 and 491, on King street, now Third street. He was born in 1702 and died April 21, 1784. He and wife are buried on the old Baptist burial ground near the old eight-cornered schoolhouse in the eastern part of Sinking Spring. At the family reunion in 1913 it was decided to remove their remains to the cemetery alongside of St. John's Reformed church, and erect a monument to their memory. In the list of Revolutionary soldiers recorded in the Archives of Pennsylvania, we find the names of the seven sons of Francis and Catharine Krick. Thirteen children are mentioned in his will as heirs.

Adam B. Krick, son of Daniel and Susan (Bohn) Krick, was born in Spring township, Oct. 27, 1836. He attended school at Sinking Spring, Reading, and the Hudson river institution at Claverack, N. Y. During his early manhood he followed teaching for five terms, after which he devoted himself to farming which he followed nine years. Meantime he suffered from the results of an accident which occurred in 1852, which culminated in the amputation of a limb in 1873. In this same year he moved to Sinking Spring, where he later embarked in the mercantile business, dealing in flour, feed, and grain, both wholesale and retail. He continued in this business until two years before his death, which occurred March 10, 1904. He always took a deep interest in educational matters and served twelve successive years as school director. Mr. Krick took a very active interest in church affairs, being a member of St. John's Reformed church, which he served as treasurer for a period of thirty years. He also served as township tax collector for a number of years. He was married to Lucy J. Reber, who was born April 13, 1844, daughter of Bennewell B. Reber, son of Conrad, and Sarah V. R. Thomas H.; Ida R., at home with her mother; and M. Ella, married to Prof. F. P. Miller, now deceased.

REV. THOMAS H. KRICK, son of Adam B. and

Lucy J. (Reber) Krick, was born on the old Krick homestead, near Sinking Spring, Jan. 11, 1868. He was five years old when his parents moved to Sinking Spring, where he attended the public school and later the Charter Oak Academy taught by Thomas J. Oberlin. In the spring of 1885 he entered the State Normal School at Kutztown, graduating from that institution in 1887. In 1887-88 he took the college preparatory course at the normal school and in the fall of 1888 entered Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster; graduating therefrom in 1892, and from the Eastern Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, in 1895. In 1893 he taught mathematics at the Kutztown Normal School. He received his first certificate as a public school teacher when but sixteen years old. During his college course he specialized in mathematics, taking a special course in astronomy, under Dr. Kershner. He also took an active interest in college athletics, playing on the college foot-ball team for five years against some of the leading colleges and universities of the East. On May 22, 1895, he was licensed to preach the Gospel, by Lebanon Classis of the Reformed Church, and on July 7, 1895, he was ordained to the Holy Ministry by a committee of East Pennsylvania Classis, in Jacob's Reformed church, Weissport, Pa., which congregation he served for a period of six years. During this time a church debt of $1,500 was raised, the basement of the church remodeled, the membership considerably increased, and the benevolent offerings increased three-fold. In August, 1901, he accepted a call to the Coplay charge, which consisted of the Mickleys and Coplay congregations and Fullerton as a preaching point. Since he became pastor of these congregations, they have made commendable progress. The membership of the Coplay congregation has been increased from 120 to 400 members. In 1907 the congregation erected a fine parsonage and in 1911 the church was remodeled, frescoed, and memorial windows installed. At Mickleys a new Sunday school room was erected and at Fullertown, a congregation was organized which now has a membership of 275. He has also taken a very active interest in the general work of the Church. He filled the office of president of East Pennsylvania Classis, Lehigh Classis, Lehigh Valley Ministerial Association, and secretary of the Spiritual Conference of the Reformed Church. He has been elected to represent his classis on the floor of General Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States at Tiffin, Ohio, in 1899, at York Pa., in 1908, and at Lancaster, Pa., in 1914.

For a number of years Mr. Krick has taken a deep and active interest in the history and genealogy of his own and other families. He traces his genealogy to the following families: Krick, Reber, Bohn, High, Van Reed, Hottenstein, Yost, Bright, Kershner, Stegel, Kissinger, Womern, and Spohn. He has given considerable time in research on most of these families. He is a member of the Pennsylvania German Society, Lehigh County Historical Society, and Berks County Historical Society. He has been elected historian of the Krick, High, and Overholtzer family reunions. On Nov. 21, 1895 Rev. Krick was united in marriage with Jennie P. Hain, daughter of Peter L., and Sue L. (Overholtzer) Hain, of Heidelberg township, Berks county, a descendant of George Hain (Hohn), who donated the land upon which Hains Reformed church is erected. To Mr. and Mrs. Krick two daughters have been born: Marie H., a student in the Allentown College for Women, and Ruth H.

In 1873 he took up his residence in Allentown and secured employment as brakeman with the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, and was thus employed for a period of six years. He then went to the Perkiomen District as a fireman, serving in that capacity until 1888, when he was promoted to the position of engineer on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, running between Allentown and Perkiomen Junction, and so continued until 1897, when he returned to Allentown and accepted a position with the Allentown and Reading Traction Company as their stationary engineer at Griesemersville, holding this position for six years. In April, 1906, he entered the employ of the Allentown City water works as an assistant engineer, and on August 1, 1911, was promoted to chief engineer, having full charge of the works, having under his personal supervision sixteen hands. His promotion is ample evidence of his ability and the respect in which he is held by his superiors. Mr. Kromer is a member of the Lutheran Church, and a Democrat in politics.

KRUM FAMILY.

Anthony Krum, one of the pioneer settlers of Heidelberg township, now Lehigh county, made his last will and testament, Nov. 21, 1764, and it was probated Oct. 18, 1765. The will mentions that "my son, John Henry shall have my Sermon Book." It also refers to other children, but does not mention their names. He makes ample provision for his wife, Gertrude. Other children of this pioneer were: George, Johannes, Christian, and Frantz. George Krum was one of the active men in the building of Heidelberg Church in 1744; and was one of the elders of the Reformed congregation. The names of Johannes, Christian, and Franz Krum were among the heads of families who built the second Heidelberg church in 1757. The Pennsylvania Archives record that Johannes, Christian, and Frantz Krum were soldiers in the Revolutionary War from Heidelberg township, Northampton county.

In 1790, John Krum was the head of a family in Heidelberg, consisting of six male members, five of whom were over sixteen years of age; and Christian Krum's family of five persons show two sons under the age of sixteen years. The tax list of Heidelberg in 1781 contains the names of only John and Christian Krum; that of Frantz Krum does not appear in any of these records after the Revolutionary War. The tax list of 1812 contains the names of Christian, John, John, Christian, Michael, and Peter Krum. The last two were the single men. The name K-r-u-m in the old records is spelled with a "C" and "G" instead of the "K" and quite frequently the letter "o" is used instead of the "u." During the early part of the eighteenth century a number of the members of this family removed from the township.

Christian Krum married Maria Neff. They had a daughter, Elizabeth, born on Nov. 28, 1779. Their son, Conrad, was born on Dec. 16, 1776. He married M. Elizabeth Schneider, and lived with her fifty-nine years. She was born on Sept. 18, 1784, and was a daughter of John George Schneider. Her death occurred Aug. 12, 1861, in her 77th year. He died May 28, 1860, in his 84th year. Both are buried at the Heidelberg church. They lived in the vicinity of the old Lehigh furnace. He was a wood-chopper and went to the mountains bareheaded almost daily to cut wood. Their children were: Jonas, who lived at Saegersville; Henry; Isaac; and Peter K.

PETER K. KRUM, son of Isaac, was born Nov. 18, 1846. He began farming in 1871 in Washington township. He however, lives upon that farm since 1863. He retired in 1911, and was succeeded by his son, Henry O. His farm is 80 acres. He and family are members of the Reformed congregation of the Unionville church. In 1873 he married Anna Snyder, daughter of John Snyder, late of New Tripoli. Their six children were: Amandas F., married Sophia Heintzelman; Mary A.; Emma; Frank P.; Rosa A.; and Henry O., married to Annie Peter.

Peter Krum, of the third generation, lived along the mountains in Heidelberg township. He died in West Penn township, Schuylkill county, while residing with his son, Jesse, with whom he spent his last years. He lived to the age of 82 years and is buried in West Penn township. He was a stone mason by trade and a member of the Reformed Church. His wife, Barbara Snyder, died about 1836. She is buried at Heidelberg church. Their children were: Jesse; Lovina, married Joshua Danah; Elizabeth, married John Benninghoff; Jonas; Jeremiah and Polly, both not married.

Jonas Krum, of New Tripoli, was born in 1826. At the age of sixteen years, he learned the tailoring trade and he followed it in Heidelberg township and at New Tripoli for more than twenty years. He located at the latter place in 1848 and is now its oldest resident. He was married twice: first, Polly Buchman, and they had a daughter, Ariminda J., now deceased; and after the death of his first wife, he married Caroline Ebert, and their children were William Jonathan, Lovina, and James. The last two are deceased.

H. Harrison Krum, son of Jonas, is an aged resident of Emerald, Lehigh county. He was born Jan. 18, 1841, in Washington township, and there he followed farming until 1902, having owned the 87-acre farm which is now owned by his sons, William H. and Henry A. He then moved to Franklin (Emerald P. O.) into his own home. Besides this home he owns other real estate. He built the present brick house upon the farm in 1886. This farm originally was the Conrad Wert homestead. Mr. Krum served as school director of the township; and for a number of years served Frieden's Reformed congregation as one of its deacons. He married Senia Dorward, who was born Sept. 14, 1840. Their children were: Agnes L., married H. M. Smith; Martha J., died in 1886, aged 21 years; Oliver A., accidentally killed in the slate quarry; William H., Henry A.; Henrietta E., married to Victor Dilliard; and Calvin, who died in 1893 in the 14th year of his age, within 24 days of the death of his sister, Agnes.

WILLIAM H. KRUM was born on his father's farm, March 29, 1869. He did much hauling for slate companies until in 1892, when he and his brother, Henry A., purchased the homestead farm which is valuable property for slate and farming purposes, and he then operated the place. He is active in church and Sunday school work. He has been organist of the Rextown Union Sunday school since 1901, having also played the organ in the U. E. Sunday school at Emerald for many years. He and family are members of the Reformed congregation of the Frieden's church. Socially he is a member of Camp 419, P. O. S. of A., Slatington. Politically he is a Republican. He has served as a school director of Washington township since 1906. On Oct. 18, 1902, he married Katie Hartline, daughter of Elijah Hartline, and they have two children: Hilda M., and Walter H.

Henry A. Krum was born on his father's homestead, Oct. 24, 1872. His early life was spent upon the farm, then the slate quarries, and later in hauling for slate companies. He is unmarried and has his home with his brother, William H., jointly owning the homestead farm. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and of the P. O. S. of A., both of Slatington. He is an officer in the former lodge.

JONATHAN J. KRUM, of Allentown, was born at Neffs, Lehigh county, March 17, 1871, son of Lewis Krum, a resident of Neffs, and grandson of Isaac Krum, born April 14, 1814, who resided in Whitehall township for six years and from there moved to Lowhill in the spring of 1848, where he died, Nov. 22, 1848, in the thirty-fourth year of his age. His wife, Julianna (Handwerk) Krum, bore him three children: Lewis, aforementioned as the father of Jonathan J. Krum; Sallie, who became the wife of John Hess; and Peter K.

Jonathan J. Krum attended the schools of his native place, and then learned the hardwood finishing trade, which he followed for a number of years until obliged to relinquish the same on account of impaired health. He then engaged in the produce business, continuing for two and one-half years, and in 1891 began trading in horses, from which he derived a goodly income. At different times he was the proprietor of the hotel at Levans, and at Chapman, Lehigh county, a hotel located on North Seventh street, Allentown, and the Fair Ground Hotel, which he conducted successfully for five years. After his retirement from the hotel business, he accepted the superintendency of the Eagle Cigar Box factory, but after several years' service he again was compelled to resign, owing to the condition of his health. In 1909 he turned his attention to the real estate business, and in 1912, in partnership with William P. Deibert, erected a number of houses, which they disposed of advantageously. In 1913 Mr. Krum purchased the E. N. M. Minnich bakery on Turner street, Allentown, which he conducted for a short time during 1914. For many years Mr. Krum was actively identified with the Franklin Fire Company, of Allentown. He is a member of the Peters' Defiance Council, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, at Best Station; Schnecksville Lodge, No. 192; Independent Order of Odd Fellows; Lodge No. 110, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of Allentown.

Mr. Krum married, Oct. 15, 1892, Cora E. Bachman, daughter of Amanda and Madina (Peter) Bachman. Children: Clayton L., who graduated from the Allentown high school in 1912; and Theodore A.

KUDER FAMILY.

The pioneer Kuder to come to this country was Hans Peter Kuder who arrived at Philadelphia, Oct. 8, 1737, in the ship Charming Polly, Charles Stedman, master, from Rotterdam. It is likely that he came from the province of Wurtemberg. How many children he had is unknown. However it is supposed that the John Kuder killed in the battle of Germantown, in 1777, was one of his sons, as well as Captain Valentine Kuder, who was granted by the legislature, 400 acres of land in Bucks county in remuneration for his services in the Revolutionary War.

Uncertain as the early facts may be, it is known however that the Lehigh county Kuders are descended from the John Kuder, who lost his life at Germantown. Amongst his children was a son named John, who settled in the lower end of Lehigh county during the first decade of the previous century. This John Kuder, according to the testimony of his children, during his childhood "was bound out to serve his time" with a family in New Jersey. The supposition is, that his mother, widowed by the war, felt unable to raise the family, the size of which there is no means of ascertaining now, and thus arranged for the care of this son. It is known that after he had reached majority, he returned to Pennsylvania with a wife, nee Mimm, that he had lost the sight of one eye, and that, inasmuch as neither he nor his wife could speak German, they were designated as the "Irish Kuders" by the neighbors in their new home. He died about 1848, aged 73 years.

At Trexlertown, where John Kuder located no later than 1800, were born by the first wife: Joseph, Solomon, John, Charles, William, Lydia, Mary, Hannah, Elizabeth and Sallie. In Rupp's History of Berks County his name appears on the list of taxables of 1756, as "George Kunczell." In 1759, according to Montgomery's History of Berks County (1886), his name is listed as George Kungel; in this latter year he paid a tax of £6. At the Kunkel homestead is an old grandfather's clock that bears the date of 1772. It was brought into the house at the same time the house was being built, and is the workmanship of George Miller, of Germantown. It has kept good time all these years. On the brass face appear the letters "I. G. K." Georg Kunkel lived where now resides Nathan Kunkel, near Wessnersville. This tract has been in the family name since about 1754. Georg Kunkel was a farmer, and since his time his farm has been divided and sub-divided. His land at one time included all the upper end of Stony Run. He is buried at Wessnersville. KUNTZ FAMILY.

The name Kuntz is found in Germany in the 15th century and in Switzerland in the year 1526 there lived a Peter Kuntz, who was one of the first Protestant ministers during the Reformation, and in 1536 was preacher in Berne. The name in America has come to be written in various ways, such as Kuhns, Koons, Kountz, Coons, Cuntz, and many others. The ancestor of this family was John Jacob Kuntz, who arrived at Philadelphia from Rotterdam, Holland, on the ship, Charming Nancy, on Nov. 9, 1738. He was born Feb. 19, 1692, in Niederbronn, Alsace, the son of John George Kuntz, and his wife, Anna Catharine, daughter of John Jacob Miller. John Jacob Kuntz settled in that part of Philadelphia county, which afterwards became Berks county, shortly after his arrival, and in the Journal of the Proprietary Land Office, under date of March 3, 1739, is this entry: "Hans Jacob Kuhns, rec'd in part for land in Colebrookdale, Five Pounds."

HENRY KUNTZ.

Henry Kuntz, former burgess and justice of the peace, pioneer slate operator and foremost citizen of Slatington, Pa., was born in North Whitehall township, Lehigh county, Oct. 10, 1830, son of Jacob D. and grandson of Jacob Kuntz.

Henry Kuntz was reared upon a farm in Washington township and there he attended the district schools and later an academy located near Coopersburg. After teaching school for several terms he accepted a clerkship in a general store and by careful attention to the details of the business he won the confidence of his employer who promoted him to the position of manager in 1849, being then only nineteen years of age.

Shortly afterwards he made a journey by stage to Philadelphia, this being his first visit to any city, and while there he purchased a full line of goods for a general store. Upon his return from Philadelphia he engaged in business for himself at Odenwelders, Northampton county, but this did not prove successful, owing to the undesirability of the locality. In 1850, after disposing of his stock of merchandise at a sacrifice, he moved to Slatington, where two years later he started out prospecting and opened the first slate quarry at Slatington. Two other quarries were opened soon afterward and a company was organized under the name of Kuntz, Kern & Company. The company consisted of five members, including Benjamin Kern, a brother-in-law of Mr. Kuntz. Owing to the failure of two of these two quarries, and just prior to the panic of 1854, Mr. Kuntz urged a dissolution of partnership, and after this was carried out, Mr. Kuntz retained the remaining quarry and assumed part of the liabilities. The affairs of the company were speedily adjusted and business was successfully resumed a few years later.

After these quarries were exhausted the lease of another quarry, near Slatington, was purchased. The quarry was located on land owned by Peter Wert and it was operated along successful lines until 1864, when the slate business became very extensive and in that year Mr. Kuntz admitted Philip Wotring as a partner, and they opened up a quarry called the "Eagle." In 1865, he sold his interest in the Slatedale quarry for $11,000, but eight years later he purchased his partner's interest for $10,000. In 1880 he effected a lease for twenty-five years of the Big Franklin Quarry, and this he operated successfully for ten years; but earlier for a period of ten years, Mr. Kuhns was associated in the slate business with Alexander Jacobs. They operated in a most satisfactory manner the Washington and the American No. 5. Later Mr. Kuhns alone took the lease of the Big Franklin quarry after it seemed exhausted and he continued to operate it with great profit up to the time of his death, June 8, 1905. The quarry is still operated under the name of the Slatington Slate Company, which was incorporated in 1895, when the daughters were taken into the company they continued to operate it in a successful manner to the present time. Henry Kuntz had effected the mountain quarry lease from Joseph Scheffler, back in 1889, and one year later, (1890) he leased the adjoining property of Isaac Brobst. These large holdings he operated under the title of the Slatington Slate Company which continues to be a leading industry of eastern Pennsylvania. The pay-roll of this company up to the present time amounts to many hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Kuhns' foresight, his thorough business methods, his ability of a high order, and his unquestioned integrity, had made him a benefactor to his community which reveres and respects his memory to the present day. Aside of his multitudinous business cares he served Slatington borough as a justice of the peace for twenty-six consecutive years, then declining a re-election; was elected burgess of Slatington in 1892; and also served in other minor offices. He was a Republican up to the time of the second election of General U. S. Grant, when he became a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party.

Mr. Kuhns was a charter member of the Knights of Honor; a consistent member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and a superintendent of the old Union Sunday school for a period of fifteen years. He also was a teacher of a large Bible class, and gave with a liberal heart and hand towards all local institutions which were intended for the uplift of the community of which Mr. Kuhns was an integral part.

Henry Kuntz was united in marriage in 1849 to Violetta Kern, daughter of Jonas Kern, who passed away in 1892. About three miles from the "Lehigh Gap," at a point where the famous Warrior's "Path" crossed the stream, and where is now the thriving town of Slatington, Nicholas Kern, as early as 1737, took up about 500 acres of land; he died in 1748, leaving six sons and one daughter. One of the sons, William, bought a considerable portion of this land, whereon he reared a large family of children, among them being John Kern, who was born in 1777 and lived to the good old age of seventy-three years. His eldest son, Jonas Kern, settled at the old homestead and conducted the mill, the property being located in what is now the town of Slatington; he was the father of two children, namely: Benjamin, and Violetta, aforementioned as the wife of Henry Kuntz. Mrs. Kuntz died July 20, 1863, in the thirty-first year of her age, leaving six daughters: 1. Amanda Isabella, widow of Henry A. Kline; 2. Cenia F., wife of W. W. Bowman; 3. Damietta, wife of the Rev. William H. Kuntz; 4. Catherine, wife of Walter B. Grosh; 5. Caroline V., wife of Thomas H. Drake; and after his death, she married the Rev. Charles Sandt; 6. Martha, wife of the Rev. George W. Sandt. In 1865 Henry Kuntz chose for his second wife, Elizabeth Boyer, and they became the parents of two daughters: Irene A., the wife of Dr. F. O. Ritter, of Allentown; and Lilly M., the wife of S. Benjamin Costenbader, of Slatington. Mr. Kuntz died June 8, 1905, and was buried in Union cemetery, Slatington.

the family plot in Fairview cemetery. The following tributes of respect were paid to the memory of Mr. Kohler.

Minutes adopted, Nov. 4, 1913, by Trinity Lutheran Church Council, Catasauqua, Pa., on the sudden death of its president, Richard O. Kohler:

We lift our hearts in humble reverence to the sovereign God, who is the all-wise Arbiter of our lives, thanking Him for His gracious gift to us, of that faithful soul whom He has taken away from the earth, to be forever with the Lord.

We cherish the qualities of his Christian character, which endeared him to us, and by reason of which we now miss him so sorely. We will always remember his loyalty and love for the church, which grew deeper and stronger year after year.

As we mourn the fact of his vanishing from our sight, so suddenly and unexpectedly, in the very prime of his vigorous manhood, we pray that this may make us profoundly realize the truth of Holy Writ: 'In the midst of life we are in death,' and impress us with the solemn admonition to do our work for our Master 'while it is day,' since 'the night cometh when no man can work.'

This minute of our high regard and sacred resolve is to be entered on our official record and a copy is to be sent to Mrs. R. O. Kohler with our most heartfelt condolence.

Attest: C. D. W. BOWER, Sec.

The Lutheran, the official organ of the Lutheran denomination, contains the following tribute to the memory of the late Richard O. Kohler, from the pen of Rev. Dr. Charles L. Fry.

Not only the Church of the Holy Trinity at Catasauqua, but also the Allentown conference, and the entire ministerium of Pennsylvania, mourns the unexpected death of Richard O. Kohler, who succumbed to a severe double operation in the German Hospital, Philadelphia. He was in the prime of vigorous manhood, since he had just passed the forty-first year of his age. Having been born, baptized, and confirmed in Chemintz, Germany, he came to this country as a lad of eighteen, and from the very first he became a loyal and enthusiastic American. This love of democracy was intensified by a visit to his native Fatherland last summer. So, too, his church affiliations were very ardent and devoted. Since the death of Mr. Oliver Williams, whose daughter he married, Mr. Kohler had been the standing delegate of the congregation to the meetings of the conference and synod, and was elected by the ministerium as one of its representatives at the recent general council in Toledo.

As a man of deeply spiritual nature, he was a regular and devout attendant at all the services of the sanctuary, a warm personal friend of each of his pastors, a faithful teacher in the Sunday school, the president of the church council, and chairman of the committee on pulpit supplies. His sudden death therefore makes a large gap, which it will be hard indeed to fill.

How startling is such a vivid admonition of the truth of Holy Writ, inscribed on all the face of Nature in this November season of the year, 'We all do fade even as a leaf'! Or that other declaration, which is equally solemnizing, 'In the midst of life, we are in death'!

On Aug. 24, 1911, was held the sixth annual reunion of the descendants of Johann Greenawalt. It was the first to be held in Lehigh county, the reunions on previous occasions being held at the old Greenawalt homestead in Montgomery county, in which community the family is decidedly numerous. The program began with prayer by Rev. Simon Sipple, who later baptized the son of William J. Greenawalt. A report was then made by Mrs. Finley Brader, of Philadelphia, followed with a recitation by Miss Dorothy Greenawalt, and William J. Dietrich, a local genealogist and historian, gave a history of the family, the greater portion of which appears in this review. Prizes were awarded to the persons coming the greatest distance and to those with the largest families. The oldest person present was Mary Greenawalt, widow of Anthony Bernhard, aged seventy-seven, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

NATHAN R. GRIFFITH.

Nathan R. Griffith, superintendent of the Keystone Textile Company, of South Bethlehem, is a son of John H. Griffith, who was born near Swansea, Wales, in 1834, and came to America, in 1859, landing in New York City. He located first, at Danville, Pa., and later, at Pottsville, Pa., from which place he removed to Cata-sauqua, and then to Fullerton, where he has resided for 35 years. By occupation he was a heater in the rolling mills and for a number of years he was employed by the Catasauqua Iron Co. In politics he is a Republican and is a member of the Knights of Friendship. He was married to Rachel Ann, daughter of Thomas and Rachel (Edmonds) Thomas. She died in February, 1905, aged 54 years, and is buried at Fairview cemetery, Catsauqua. To this family the following children were born: Mary, married to Foster McAdams, a roll-turner at the Bryden Horseshoe Works, in Catsauqua; Anna, married to Frederick Graver, and resides at Allentown; John, cashier of the Lehigh Coal Company, located in New York City; Philip, died, aged 18 years; William, wood-carver, with the Edison Phonograph Company, at Camden, N. J.; Samuel, silk-worker with the Keystone Textile Company, and Nathan R.

Nathan R. Griffith was born in Fullerton, Aug. 8, 1881, and at the age of thirteen years he started to work for the Allentown Spinning company as a spool boy. He was employed for one year in the polishing department of the Dent Hardware company at Fullerton, by the Wahnetah Plush Company at Catsauqua, in the weaving department, three years, and in the weaving department of the D. G. Dery silk mills, at Catsauqua, from 1908 to 1913. In October, 1913, he connected himself with the Keystone Textile Company as a weaver and loom-fixer, and on Jan. 1, 1914 he was promoted to the position of superintendent. He is a member of the Presbyterian church and a member of the Knights of Friendship in which he is a past master. On March 15, 1908, he married Mamie Searfess, daughter of William and Mary (Snyder) Searfoss. They reside in their own home at the corner of Front and Franklin streets, Fullerton, Pa.

THOMAS F. GROSS.

Thomas F. Gross, a prominent attorney at Philadelphia for nearly thirty years, was born at Schnecksville, this county, April 10, 1857, son of Joel and Diana (Fetherolf) Gross. After receiving a preliminary education in the local schools he entered Dickinson Seminary, at Williamsport, Pa., and there prepared for college and after following the prescribed course in that institution, he was admitted into Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa., where he completed his education for the study of the law and was graduated in June, 1878. With this preparation, Mr. Gross entered the law offices of R. E. Wright & Son, at Allentown, and after pursuing the prescribed course of reading for two years under their direction he was regularly admitted to practice in the several courts of Lehigh county, on January, 1881. He immediately engaged in active legal practice at Allentown and carried it on until October, 1887, when he removed to Philadelphia to engage more extensively in the professional business and on the 15th of October he was admitted to practice in the several courts of Philadelphia county. Since then he has carried on an active and successful practice in the great metropolis of the state.

In 1880, Mr. Gross identified himself with Lehigh Lodge, No. 83, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he became a Past Grand; and since May, 1902, he has been a Past Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment of Pennsylvania. In 1893, he was made a Mason in Athelstan Lodge, No. 482, F. & A. M., of Philadelphia, and of this lodge he became a Past Master; and since 1897, he has been a member of the Philadelphia Consistory.

In 1898, he was married to Adelaide J. Keck, a daughter of Charles Keck, of Lehigh county.

JOHN W. GOTTSCHALK.

John Wagner Gottschalk, manufacturer and prominent Sunday school worker at Philadelphia, Pa., for many years, was born at Reading, Pa., on May 9, 1867. When two months old his mother died and he was then taken to her parents, who resided at Macungie, in Lehigh county, and there he was brought up and educated in the public schools. After quitting school, he worked at various places in the vicinity, at times walking daily several miles to and from work, until he became eighteen years of age, such as farming, quarrying stone, mining iron ore and running a stationary engine.

With the education and experience thus acquired until that time, Mr. Gottschalk went to Philadelphia to take up the study of electric wire insulation and he pursued this branch with great industry for some time, devoting his evenings to the extra study of mechanical engineering. With this preparation he secured employment in the establishment of Albert F. Moore, who was engaged in that particular line of business, and after working there for a comparatively short time, Mr. Moore recognized his ability and appointed him as foreman of the shop, and by 1900 he became the superintendent. During this time the employes increased in number from 35 to 400, evidencing the fitness of Mr. Gottschalk for the position. He continued with Mr. Moore as superintendent until 1911, when he embarked in the same line of business for himself, establishing his plant at the northwest corner of Lehigh avenue and Mascher street, and there he has continued until the present time, carrying on the works with increasing success, in the production of insulated electric wire, telephone cord and tinsel cord of different varieties in large quantities.

While superintending the plant of Mr. Moore, Mr. Gottschalk took great pride in organizing "The Albert F. Moore Employees Mutual Association" for beneficial relief, as well as social entertainment and religious instruction of a non-sectarian character; dinners were supplied to the employees at a reduced rate; interesting lectures were delivered before them; and on Saturday afternoons, Sunday school lessons for the following Sunday were explained and illustrated. It was a very useful institution and highly appreciated.

Mr. Gottschalk has been actively engaged in Sunday school work in the Bethany tabernacle at 20th and Dauphin streets for twenty years; and since 1902 he has officiated as superintendent in a most satisfactory manner. For fifteen years he has been prominently identified with the Philadelphia County Sunday School Association, travelling about in behalf of its work and giving instructive chalk talks and object lessons to young people.

In 1904, the Gottschalk Family Reunion was organized and since then he has served the organization as president. Its annual meetings have been held at different places with a large attendance.

Mr. Gottschalk was married to Annie Swartz, of Zieglersville, in Montgomery county, a daughter of John Swartz and Elizabeth, his wife, nee Deitz, of the same place.

His father was Jacob Souder Gottschalk, born Oct. 4, 1844, at Souderton, Pa., where he was brought up and educated. He learned the trade of shoemaking and when he became of age located at Reading, where he carried on the retail shoe business for a number of years. He was also employed for a time as a locomotive engineer on East Penn Railroad. He was married to Elizabeth Wagner, daughter of John Wagner, of East Macungie, Lehigh county, and they had two children: Elmira, married to Charles H. Eberle; and John W. She died July 21, 1867, and her remains were interred at Huff's church, several miles south from Macungie. After her decease, the father married Amelia Roth, of Kutztown, and by her he had four children: Virginia May, married to Ammon Specht; and three died in infancy. He died Oct. 7, 1902.

Mr. Gottschalk's grandfather was John Hunsberger Gottschalk, born Aug. 24, 1820, near Souderton, where he was brought up as a farmer and there he died April 14, 1871. He was married to Kate Souder, of the same place, a descendant of the family from which the town takes its name, and they had twelve children, eight sons and four daughters.

His great-grandfather was William, who married Magdalena Hunsberger, and they became the parents of thirteen children, brought up along the Perkiomen creek, in the vicinity of Schwenksville, Montgomery county.

Mr. Gottschalk is a lineal descendant in the sixth generation from Rev. Jacob Gottschalk, a distinguished Mennonite preacher, who emigrated in 1702 from the Netherlands to Pennsylvania, joining his fellow-countryman, Pastorius, at Germantown, and thence he removed to the Skippack region, where he died in 1763, at an age exceeding four score years.

MILTON A. HERBER.

Milton A. Herber, proprietor of the Seipstown hotel, is the owner of the premises, including a general store, large barn with sundry buildings, and 66 acres of farming land in a high state of cultivation. He was born Nov. 7, 1887, in Weisenberg township on a farm situated a short distance north of Hynemansville, and there he was brought up and educated until he became eighteen years of age. The building is now one of the oldest in the township, having been erected long before 1812. When fifteen years old he was graduated from the township high school. He followed teaching during the season for three terms in the Gackenbach, Seipstown, and Appel school buildings from 1905 to 1908, and during the other months of the year carried on painting. He then engaged in the hotel business at Seiberlingsville in the old-established stand of his father-in-law, David Fichter, for two years. With this experience he, in 1910, purchased the hotel stand store and farm of 66 acres at Seipstown, and embarked in the business for himself, and since that time has carried on the hotel and farm in a successful manner. In 1911 he improved the barn and farm buildings, and in 1913 enlarged the hotel, at a total expense of $3,000, thereby making it one of the most attractive public places in the country districts of Lehigh county. Since 1909 he has filled the position of township assessor.

In June, 1906, he was married to Maggie L. Fichter, a daughter of David Fichter, and they have two children: Lawrence A., and Helen L.

Amos Herber, his father, engaged as stonemason and plasterer for nearly forty years, was born March 8, 1848, in Albany township, Berks county, near the Blue mountains, and when five years old his parents moved to Upper Macungie township, two miles northwest from Breinigsville, where he attended the public school until he was sixteen years of age and was brought up on a farm. He assisted his father and the neighbors at farm work until he was twenty-five years old, when he learned the trade of mason and plasterer under Louis Adam, and he has been engaged in this business until now, a period of thirty-nine years in the central section of the county and also at Allentown, Slatington, and Mauch Chunk. He has lived in Weisenberg since 1886, and served the office of school director for six years. In 1869 he was married to Sarah A. Fritz, daughter of Charles, of Weisenberg, and they have five children: Charles, married Sophia Heintzleman; Ida, married Frank Sicher; Emma, married George B. Grim; George, married Mary Yundt; and Milton, above.

The grandfather of Mr. Herber was Peter Herber, a blacksmith and farmer of Weisenberg, married to Hannah Schellhamer, daughter of George, of Weisenberg, and they had fifteen children: George, married Hannah Boyer; Edwin, married Caroline Haas; Peter, married Amanda Ross; Silas, married Matilda Kline; William, Reformed minister in Lebanon county; Samuel, married Eliza Edelman; Katie, married Frederick Wilt; Mary, single; Hannah, married William Andreas; Sarah, married Nathan Hinkel; and four died young.

GEORGE E. HOLTON.

George E. Holton was born in London, England, April 24, 1868, son of George and Hope Mary Holton, and died Feb. 10, 1913. He was educated in the schools of Norwood and London, England. He came to America in 1886 and was naturalized in the early 90's.

Mr. Holton entered the employ of the Pen-coyd Iron Works. In 1889 he became inspector for G. W. G. Ferris & Co., of Pittsburgh, in the eastern territory, and had charge of the inspection and testing of the cast iron segments used in the construction of the first tunnel under the Hudson river, now known as the Hoboken Tunnel, originally undertaken by Pearson & Co., of London, England. His abilities as an iron expert were easily recognized by the late Oliver Williams, president of the Bryden Horse Shoe Company, who employed him as a salesman for the company. Mr. Holton established sales agencies in all parts of the country and secured large orders for them. During stagnation in the American market, he secured large orders from England in competition with English manufacturers during the English-Boer War in Africa, and thus kept the local works steadily employed.

Upon the death of Mr. Williams, he succeeded him as president of that company and general manager of the works. At the time of his death, he was president and treasurer of the Bryden, president treasurer of Emanuel & Co., a director of the National Bank of Catasauqua and a director of the Cementon National Bank of Siegfried.

Mr. Holton was married to Miss Jessica Williams, youngest daughter of Oliver Williams. They have a son, Oliver, and two daughters, Catharine, Jessica.
