Of the game that used to be seen in this vicinity, a writer says: "Game was very plenty, deer, bears, etc., abounding, and wolves and snakes being profusely plenty, wolves becoming so bold as to kill stock almost in the door-yards, and carrying it off before the very eyes of the settlers. One man is related to have killed six bears in one day, although that particular feat was not very remarkable. He ran across an old she-bear and three cubs in the woods, and being successful in killing the mother at the first fire, soon dispatched the cubs, they refusing to leave the body of their parent. Then, on his way home for help to drag the carcasses to his house, he spied another bear asleep in the fork of a tree, and dropped him with another lucky bullet; while on his way back with help he killed the sixth. This incident at least shows how plentiful these animals were."

WOLF CREEK TOWNSHIP.

This township is one of the six original ones. It included all of what are now Liberty, Wolf Creek and Pine Townships until February 17, 1851, at which time the former and the last named were taken out and erected into new and distinct organizations. It forms one of the extreme eastern tier of townships that face on the Venango County line. It is bounded on the north by Worth and a portion of Jackson, on the west by Findley, and on the south by Pine Townships. Its shape is that of a trapezoid. The surface is quite well diversified, portions, especially in the southern part, affording an interesting view to the spectator. In some places there are pleasing undulations, while in others the surface is comparatively level, without particular charm. The soil is fertile, and from it good crops are produced. The township is an agricultural one, and as such ranks among the first in the eastern part of the county, thus evidencing that its soil must at least be up to the average. The drainage is good. Wolf Creek, with its many little tributaries shooting off in all directions, each of which penetrates the adjacent country and filters through its soil, furnishes the basis of a system that is, perhaps, equal to any in the county. The water facilities thus afforded are utilized in numerous ways. Hitherto we have spoken of the external wealth. It now remains to say that the internal treasures are not one whit less valuable. Rich coal measures underlie nearly all the township. From these an abundant supply of good fuel is obtained. Owing to the cheapness and general distribution of coal throughout the neighboring regions, the market for Wolf Creek's mines are, in nearly every instance, purely local. The healthfulness of the climate is beyond dispute. The township has enjoyed immunity from almost every species of contagious disease, other than those natural to all localities. Indeed, the health of the inhabitants, when no extraneous causes enter into calculation, is fully equal to that of any other portion of the county.

The lands which afterward comprised Wolf Creek Township was mostly what is known as "donation lands." That phrase, and the one "depreciation lands," originated in this way: During the Revolution the soldiers supplied by each colony were paid in continental currency, a kind of paper inflated scrip that readily depreciated in value as the exigencies of the war sank lower and lower the colonial credit, until it became almost worthless. When the contest was over, and independence won, the commonwealth of Pennsylvania determined to extend its bounty to the remaining veterans who had fought so gallantly in behalf of liberty. To do this two measures were passed by the Assembly, one giving a certain portion of the public domain as a donation for services rendered—whence arose the term "donation lands"—and the other issuing warrants for lands to all who suffered loss in the depreciation of the continental currency—whence came the phrase "depreciation lands." In the settlement of these lands much trouble arose. The survivors of the war were in many cases indisposed to encounter the perils and hardships of settling in a new country, and as their land was located in a new region, they merely retained the ownership, without endeavoring to realize any other benefits. In some few instances they settled themselves, in others they disposed of their title to intending settlers; but in the majority of cases they simply let the land lie idle and unimproved. When the influx of settlers ensued, from 1796 to 1800, as no ownership to the soil could be detected from any evidences manifest on the land itself, many new-comers usurped claims for which they had at no time any legal right. But the truth of the old adage, that "possession is nine points in law," was never more clearly demonstrated than in the region of which we speak, for when the proper owners arrived, either in person or by proxy, as in the cases where the soldiers had sold their titles to those who purposed forming settlements on the land, an inevitable conflict ensued, in which the clash of conflicting interests was audible for many years after the commencement of the land-title troubles. Indeed, much troublesome and vexatious litigation followed, causing ill-feeling and engendering much ill-blood. This, of course, was not confined to Wolf Creek Township, but extended over the entire region known as Northwestern Pennsylvania. It is mentioned here simply as explanatory of what is implied in the phrase "donation and depreciation lands."

Pioneers.—Probably the first settler in the township was Samuel Waldron, a New Jersey man, who came with his family as early as 1796, packing his provisions from Pittsburgh on horseback, and conveying his heavier utensils in an ox-cart. Waldron had been a Revolutionary soldier, and the tract upon which he settled, afterward occupied by Simeon Waldron, was a donation lot.

Thomas McCoy settled in the township in 1796 or 1797, removing thither from Harper's Ferry, Va. He had six sons that settled in the neighborhood, viz.: John, Joseph, James, Thomas, Hugh and William. All grew to manhood, leaving sons and daughters. His neighbors at that time were William Breckenridge, the nearest one; Samuel Waldron, the McKees, William McMillan, Abraham Snyder, William Smith and others. These people had their peculiar sport. One of their tricks was to pull the hair of a comrade who could not say "thump, thunder and thatch." When a German was coaxed into the party, and called out "tump, tunder and tach," he was sure to have his head well plucked. In this game poor Snyder was the sufferer among the Wolf Creek boys. Another trick was to bump the reaper in the harvest field who failed to reap clean as he went. Two of his comrades would catch him, each by a leg, lifting him up, and then run to the first handy tree, where the process would be gone through.

John Montgomery, a Scotchman by descent, whose father had immigrated to America when quite young, arrived from Allegheny County in the spring of 1797. With him came his father, William, and his five sisters and four brothers. The tract upon which the family settled was one of 200 acres, near what is now known as Montgomery's Hill. The first winter was passed back in Allegheny County, only two of the brothers remaining to look after the property. In 1801, though, the entire family returned to their Mercer County home, in which they now permanently established themselves. The sons of William, as soon as opportunity offered, cleared homes of their own, and afterward marrying, reared quite a colony of Montgomerys, which is still to be met with. Montgomery's neighbors on the south were John Perry and family, and John Sutherland, who entered in 1798, or thereabout.

In the year last mentioned, as nearly as can be ascertained, Philip Hoon, afterward a prominent man in the affairs of the township, entered the region, took up land, and effected a settlement. It was on this tract that one of the first coal banks in the county was opened. The date of the opening was 1827. The product, a fair grade of coal, was used at first merely for blacksmithing purposes, but its adaptability to other uses soon extended the scope of its usefulness, and the fuel came to be regarded a valuable factor in the township's natural resources. Another incomer of the year mentioned was Samuel Coleman, who, with his brothers, had come to the county the year previous. The latter located in Worth Township, while Samuel took up his residence near Centretown, upon a 400-acre tract of fine land, afterward occupied by E. S. Dunn.

James Craig, of Scotch and Irish descent, came about 1798 with four of his brothers, and a family of his own, into Mercer County, settling on a tract of land in what is now Wolf Creek Township. His son Francis was a soldier in the War of 1812. The descendants are still numerous.

Caleb Ball, a native of Washington County, Penn., settled in Wolf Creek Township in 1798. He served in the Revolution and War of 1812. He contracted a disease while in the latter, which caused his death. Among the later settlers were John Gealy, John Burnside, John Kelly, Jonathan Sopher and others, whose efforts, while not so prominent, were yet greatly helpful in developing the territory in which they settled. Edward Riddle settled in this township in 1804, in the neighborhood of the McMillans. He served in the whole seven years of the Revolutionary War. He subsequently removed from Cumberland County, Penn., to a place near Wheeling, Va., where there was a block house, which he occupied until he could erect a house for himself, and in which one of his sons was born. From that place he came to Mercer County. The Riddles appoint a meeting once a year for all who can attend. There were six brothers, sons of Edward, whose posterity numbers between 300 and 400. At these meetings the financial condition of each is inquired into, and where assistance is needed, those who are in good circumstances contribute. The six sons were named Alexander, James, twice at Erie in the War of 1812; Samuel, William, John B. and Washington. The daughters were Rebecca, who married Alexander McCracken; Mary Ann, who married Scott Stephenson; Eliza, who married John Emery, and Lucinda, who married William Mills.

It is not possible to say anything which can unduly impress the obligations which the present generation owes the one which has just passed away. But a single thought might be given to the perils and hardships, the deprivations and sacrifices of personal comfort and happiness, which they underwent in order to prepare the way for posterity.

There is little to be said concerning the industrial interests of the township. The first grist-mill erected in the vicinity was the one built by Samuel Waldron at what is now called Centretown, which was operated by water flowing from an adjacent spring. It did nothing beyond grinding corn. In about ten years the first saw-mill was built near the same spring. Samuel O. Waldron was the originator of the saw-mill which used to stand on the east branch of Wolf Creek. He built it in 1835. It has been replaced twice, the last time by the Williamson brothers. In the following year John Montgomery built and started in operation the grist-mill afterward conducted by James C. Montgomery. Two years later Henry Carter built the saw-mill which used to be run in the southwestern part of the township.

The only village in the township is Centretown. This is located on land formerly owned and originally settled by Samuel Waldron. Alexander Riddle was the first merchant, William Atwell the first blacksmith and Hugh Shaw the first shoemaker.

Ebenezer Reformed Presbyterian Church is the only church of its kind in the township, the denomination not being noted for its aggressiveness. It is situated about a mile or more east of Centretown. It was organized in 1855 or 1856 by Rev. David Kennedy. The house of worship is also used by other denominations.

WORTH TOWNSHIP.

The territory comprised under the above named township was formerly a part of the township of Sandy Lake, from which it was detached on the 10th day of November, 1849, and erected into a new organization, which was named in honor of the distinguished general in the Mexican War, William J. Worth. It forms one of the extreme eastern tier of townships that face on the Venango County line. Its northern boundary is Sandy Lake, from which it was taken; its southern, Wolf Creek, and its western, Jackson Township. The surface is very uneven. In places it is especially broken. Hills rise up in wild outline, and the gulch-like appearance of the sharply outlined valleys give the whole an air of rugged picturesqueness, that is quite pleasing when contrasted with the low lands lying in some of the adjacent territory. Elsewhere in the township the land falls in gentle slopes, and even becomes undulating. It is this variety of landscape that constitutes the chief charm of the scenery. There is much valuable timber yet standing. The soil is generally fertile, and from it satisfactory crops of cereals and fruits are grown.

The lands which afterward became known as Worth Township was originally under the control of the North American Land Company. In order to secure an influx of settlers into the region, and thus to increase the value of their lands, the company offered 150 acres to every man who would make a permanent settlement upon a 400-acre tract, the remaining territory to be improved for, and afterward sold by the company itself. This offer, much more liberal than any which had been previously made, was eagerly accepted.

Pioneers.—The first settlement effected in the township was that of the Hendersons. In the year 1796 five brothers, three of them named, respectively, William, Archibald and John, entered from the region lying near Pittsburgh, and, in accordance with the offer spoken of above, made settlements upon tracts of 150 acres each. After effecting a few improvements, blazing a few trees, and, in other ways securing their claims, they returned to their former homes to pass the severe winter which was just setting in. In the following year, with their families, they started on their journey to their new homes in Mercer County. Their progress was slow, and beset with many difficulties. The goods which they brought along, consisting of their provisions and necessary articles of household use—all articles not absolutely indispensable being left behind—were stowed away on the back of an old gray mare, the dilapidated saddle of which was for a long time preserved in the family as a memento of the tour. Mrs. William Henderson sat astride the animal, and it is related that while fording Slippery Rock Creek the party suddenly got in water beyond their depth, and in the struggle which ensued the horse, with all its burdens, capsized. The water flowed very rapidly, and it was by the merest accident that Mrs. Henderson, who was a large, stout woman, was saved. In the confusion a large pot hooked her under the arm and held her head above water until she was rescued. At length, however, after numerous annoyances and perils, of which the one narrated is but a specimen, the new homes were reached. The brothers had not erected any cabins as yet, and the party was forced to be without shelter, sleeping at night under the trees, on beds made of leaves, until small dwellings could be improvised. William Henderson, probably the most prominent of the brothers, succeeded in getting the first roof over his family's heads. There was but one room in the shanty. In the course of a few weeks this was decorated with rough hewn seats, and a table made of a huge log, hewn flat on the upper surface. Around this the family congregated at meal time and enjoyed their repast, which was exceedingly frugal. Game abounded, and with his trusty rifle Mr. Henderson supplied the meat used at his table. He at once began cultivating the ground, and preparing it for seed. In this task he was assisted by his wife, who was much larger and more powerful than he. The implements with which they set out to conquer the wilderness, consisted of two hoes and a mattock. In the use of the latter instrument they took turns. Henderson working with it until exhausted, and then giving place to his wife. When they came to fence in their cleared land she lifted the heavy end of the rails while he carried the opposite extreme. With them they had brought a cow and a dog. The former was almost indispensable to their existence, as it used often to supply food for the family when all other resources failed. The canine, which was a large and powerful one, was in the habit of accompanying its master upon all his expeditions into the forest in search of game. Upon one of these occasions it saw a large animal slowly moving along in the distance, and, without pausing to ascertain what kind of beast it was, the dog gave a bound and set upon it. The animal thus attacked proved to be an immense black bear, which no sooner beheld that its antagonist was a dog, than it immediately showed fight, and in a few moments had almost succeeded in killing it, when Henderson reached the scene, and with a large, keen knife which he carried, with a few dexterous strokes ended the struggle in favor of the dog, thus saving his faithful animal's life. The other four brothers settled in the township at various places, one of them, John, locating a short distance north of the present site of the village of Hendersonville.

The year following the first entrance of the Henderson exploring expedition witnessed several important arrivals. Probably the first of these accessions to the population of the county was made by the coming of Burroughs Westlake in the spring of 1797. He was originally a resident of Westmoreland County, and came with the idea of bettering his condition in life by securing a home in the Northwest, which was then, in the expressive language of to-day, being vigorously "boomed." He and his family settled near the present village of Millbrook. The old homestead is still in the possession of his descendants. Near him located the family of John Grace in the same year. The members of this family afterward achieved quite a prominence in local political circles, as will be attested by the early court records, in which the name of Grace, connected with some kind of official business, is very frequently seen.

On the east of Millbrook, settled in the same year William Carroll, claimed to be a distant relative of Charles Carroll, whose name, appended to which, in a bold hand, is the phrase "of Carrollton," stands forth as one of the signatures attached to the Declaration of Independence. Carroll was an Irishman by birth and a Catholic, and on removing to America became as strongly patriotic over his new as he had been over his former fatherland. He enlisted and served as a soldier in the Revolution. He married a Miss Wakefield, by whom he reared five children, one of whom, David, is said to have established the first iron foundry and machine shop in Worth Township, if not in the county. The parents died in the township. A third new-comer was Daniel Wolverton, whose entrance, likewise, dates back to 1797. He was according to all accounts a "mighty hunter," and, like a veritable Nimrod, he searched the forest in quest of game.

In the following year Peter Wilson, who had entered what is now Jackson Township from Allegheny County in 1797, removed with his family to Worth, locating on the farm afterward occupied by his son James. In 1799 a daughter was born to Peter, and this is said to have been the first birth in the township among the white residents.

Among the pioneer settlers of the township were William Waddle and his sister, Mrs. Sarah (Waddle) McDowell. They came from Franklin County, Penn., about 1798. He located 100 acres and she the adjoining tract of 100 acres, lying south of what is known as the St. Paul Schoolhouse. William Waddle was married to Catherine Stephenson, aunt of the late William M. Stephenson, Esq., of Mercer. They had two sons and five daughters, one of whom, Hannah Stull, is still living, over eighty years of age. William Waddle was in the War of 1812, and died at Erie of camp fever. His sons left no children to perpetuate the name.

Mrs. Sarah McDowell came to the county, as already intimated, with her brother. She had two twin boys about three years of age. Isaiah, one of them, married Elizabeth Davidson in 1820, and reared a family of twelve children, nine of whom are still living. He died in 1882, but his widow is still living at Millbrook, aged eighty-seven, with her faculties unimpaired. The names of Isaiah and Elizabeth McDowell's children are: William D., of Bradford, Penn.; John J., living in Worth Township; David, deceased; Isaiah, living in Venango County; Samuel, deceased; Mrs. Jane D. McElrath, living at Lakeville, Minn.; Mrs. Julia A. Eakin, of Millbrook; Mrs. Louisa Albin, of Centretown; Cyrus, living in Gordon, Neb.; Mrs. Sarah E. Boyles, of New Castle, and Milton R., deceased.

The year 1800 witnessed the arrival of William Perrine and family, who settled at what afterward became known as Perrine's Corners. They were originally from "Jersey," and the sons of William, of whom there were seven, subsequently became quite prominent in local affairs, Daniel being a soldier in the War of 1812, Job becoming a respected citizen of Sandy Lake Township and the others occupying at different times various posts of responsibility and honor.

One of the most distinguished families ever in the township was the Carmichael family. The first members of this to enter were John and Duncan Carmichael, who arrived in 1802 from Allegheny County. Each secured land and began clearings. After eight years' experience Duncan concluded to go further west, so in 1810 he sold out to William Henderson and removed with his family to the State of Indiana. John, however, remained on the old homestead, where his descendants yet reside. The family is of Scotch origin, and the first to immigrate to America was John Carmichael, Sr., a soldier in the British army, who served with Wolfe in his gallant assault upon Quebec. He became deaf from the tremendous din of that engagement. The present Carmichaels, like their ancestors in times past, take a deep interest in the welfare of the township and county in which they live, and are active in assisting all worthy movements which have a tendency to promote this.

There are many others who may fairly lay claim to mention in the list of Worth Township's pioneers. Among them are William Graham, the Pennys, John, William and David; William Jack, Samuel Osborne and Jonathan Cochran. Space forbids more extended notice. Their efforts are borne abundant testimony to by the many evidences of material and intellectual prosperity among the inhabitants of the territory they labored so hard to cultivate, which follow as the legitimate and logical results of their noble, and, in nearly every instance self-sacrificing, endeavors. Too much praise can scarcely be accorded them. And if, as is often, too often, indeed, the case, this was not given them while living, let it not for that reason be denied now that they are dead.

Villages.—There are three villages within the present limits of the township. The first of these, Hendersonville, located in the extreme northeastern corner, was laid out in 1834 by Robert Henderson, from whom it takes its name, and by whom the first house had been erected as early as 1828. Robert afterward became the first postmaster. A tannery was built in 1829 by Jonathan Henderson, who remained its proprietor until 1855, conducting a shoe-shop in connection therewith, at which time he sold to Frank Adamson. The last owner was James Bowlender, under whose control it languished and died. School had been opened as early as 1812, the children of the neighborhood assembling in a small log hut at that time to receive such primitive instruction and educational training as the times afforded.

A short distance southwest is Perrine's Corners, in which the first dwelling was erected by John Forrest, in 1838. The list of postmasters, given elsewhere, will show the different officials who have distributed mail in the township.

Millbrook, the third village, is situated in the southern part of the township, on land formerly belonging to Joshua and Nathaniel Coleman. At the time the place was surveyed by Benjamin Stokely, the proprietors were Wesley, William and John Hogue. The only mills of any historic interest in the region are situated here. The first was a saw-mill, erected at a very early day by Nathaniel Coleman. This subsequently came into the possession of Daniel Waldron, who enlarged and improved it in 1846, and afterward conducted it with much success. More important even than the Coleman saw-mill, which supplied a want long felt by the early residents, was the grist-mill erected in 1815 by Peter Wilson. This was, according to all accounts, a very small concern, and the method of operating it was very unsatisfactory. But its successor, built by John Wilson, did much better, while the successor to this, built by Calvin Matthews, was superior to any near, and did a good business from the outset. There was at one time a carding-mill, operated by the Hagues, and a potash factory, run by Hogue, Dunn & Co. The latter subsequently passed into the possession of Carnahan & Hill. The first hotel was conducted by J. F. Cochran, while the first rural emporium of trade was established about fifty-three years ago by Calvin Matthews.

Churches.—The Methodist Church near Millbrook is said to have been the oldest church in the township, the edifice, a rude log one, being built in 1816. The organization of the society, as the wont in those primitive days, occurred at the house of William Carroll. His residence answered as a place for meetings until the church structure was ready for occupancy. Rev. Asa Shinn, one of the pioneer preachers of the county, is said to have organized this congregation during the presiding eldership of Rev. Jacob Gruber. The preaching for this congregation was done by the pastors in charge of the circuit to which it belonged.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Hendersonville was begun about 1833, when meetings were held first by Rev. John P. Kent. Preaching first occurred at the house of Robert Henderson, and after several years they were taken to the school-house. In 1840 the society erected their present church edifice. The following is the list of pastors as found upon the proper records: R. Parker, D. W. Vorce, 1839; H. Luce, 1840–41; A. G. Miller, 1841; J. M. Plant, A. G. Miller, 1842; M. H. Bettes, J. Van Horn, 1843; W. Monks, G. F. Reeser, 1844; W. Monks, D. Pritchard, 1845; H. S. Winans, J. R. Lyon, 1846; H. S. Winans, H. M. Chamberlain, 1847; J. Abbott, T. G. McCreary, 1848; J. Abbott, P. Burroughs, 1849; P. Burroughs, D. M. Stever, 1850; E. Hull, J. G. Thompson, 1851; A. Keller, P. W. Sherwood, 1852; A. Keller, J. H. Vance, 1853; J. H. Vance, S. S. Stuntz, 1854; T. G. McCreary, A. L. Miller, 1855; J. McComb, A. L. Miller, 1856; J. W. Weldon, S. Hubbard, 1857; W. R. Johnson, 1858; R. B. Boyd, J. McComb, 1859; R. B. Boyd, E. Bennett, 1860; R. Beatty, E. Bennett, 1861; R. Beatty, S. K. Paden, 1862; J. Abbott, B. F. Wade, 1863; J. Abbott, J. Howe, 1864; C. Wilson, 1865–66; T. Graham, 1867–69; J. M. Edwards, 1870; I. Scofield, 1871; H. C. Smith, 1872–74; J. M. Foster, 1875–77; J. A. Ward, 1878; F. Fair, 1879.

The Millbrook Wesleyan Methodist Church. As early as 1838 a sentiment existed in Millbrook and vicinity in opposition to American slavery. The persons who were thus opposed to it believed with Wesley that "slavery was the sum of all villainies," and laid the sin of its existence and continuance at the doors of the political parties and churches of the United States. Animated by this spirit, and appealing to the considerate judgment of their brethren and to God for the rectitude of their intentions, they withdrew from the communion of the Methodist Episcopal Church and organized the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Millbrook. The organization was effected by Rev. Edward Smith, in September, 1843, soon after the Utica Convention, and was participated in by the following original members: Wesley Hogue, John F. Hogue, Freeman Dunn, Solomon Davis, Tobias Kimmel, David Reagle, Samuel Curt, Daniel Gildersleeve, George Westlake, Daniel Axtell, Nathaniel Coleman, Bennet Perrine, William Irwin, Thomas Lamb, Elizabeth Lamb, Rebecca Kimmel, Fanny Westlake and Mileah Lamb. A frame building was erected in 1848 for the use of the congregation, costing $1,000. Following is the succession of pastors: Revs. Joel Parker, George Jacquis, Thomas Lamb, Thomas Savage, J. A. Preston, Andrew Donaldson, J. F. Selby, William Koon, James Langdon, Daniel T. Beckwith, George Savage, Thomas Foster, A. D. Carter, Benjamin Loughhead, O. M. Sackett, James S. Albertson, D. S. Kinney, C. F. Hawley, H. S. Childs, J. E. Carroll, A. T. Wolff, S. H. Foster, and J. B. Knappenberger. The first officers were: Class leader, George Westlake; stewards, Wesley Hogue and Freeman Dunn; trustees, David Carroll, Jesse Gray and Aquilla Grace. The present officers are: Class leader, S. E. Westlake; stewards, W. T. Q. Gildersleeve and William Smith; trustees, D. G. Bagnell, S. E. Westlake and J. C. Perrine. The membership is sixty. Connected with the congregation is a Sunday-school, the officers of which are: Superintendent, W. H. Howe; assistant, J. C. Perrine; secretary, Miss Lulu Perrine; librarian, Miss Mary E. Westlake, and treasurer, Miss M. A. Gillann.

Zion Wesleyan Methodist Church was organized on the north line of the township in 1845, with some thirty members, who withdrew from the Methodist Episcopal Church on account of differences of sentiment on the question of human slavery. Rev. John Moore is said to have been the first pastor. For a number of years prior to the erection of the present frame structure, which was the first, the services were conducted in a school-house. Francis Mears, of Sandy Lake Township, was instrumental in raising funds for the church edifice, as he was subsequently useful in completing the same as a member of the building committee.

OFFICIAL CENSUS BY DECADES, SINCE 1850.

In the following table will be found the population by decades of the townships and boroughs of Mercer County from 1850 to 1880 inclusive, according to the official census reports published by the United States Government:

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THIRTY YEARS OF TOWNSHIP OFFICIALS—VALUE OF SUCH A RECORD—CHARACTER OF THE MEN CHOSEN—LIST OF FIRST JUSTICES—TOWNSHIP OFFICERS IN 1804—THE PIONEERS WHO ANNUALLY FILLED THE OFFICES IN EACH TOWNSHIP FROM 1806 TO 1831 INCLUSIVE.

GR^{EAT} interest often attaches to the inquiry, Who were the men that occupied the humbler positions in the early history of the various townships of the county? Townships are the lowest units of organization in the general economy of our government. They are to the rural regions what borough corporations are to the aggregations of population. In these governments of the people, it is possible for every elector to become acquainted with the necessary qualifications of those whom he assists in putting into position. The responsibility of the position he shares, because he has the opportunity of knowing in advance what may be expected of the candidates to be chosen.

As a rule the most competent men are chosen for township offices. An examination of the accompanying lists will indicate that the men chosen were leaders in their respective townships, and frequently chosen to fill both county and State positions. This was strictly in harmony with the maxim, that he who has been faithful over a few shall be appointed to rule over many.

It may be proper to remark that the townships are mentioned in the order in which they existed. For an account of the order of formation reference is made to other chapters of this work bearing upon that question.

List of First Justices.—First District—Cool Spring: John D. Littleford, January 2, 1802; Ebenezer Magoffin, January 2, 1804; Peter Rambo, April 1, 1806; John Creighton, July 4, 1806; Benjamin Stokely, March 29, 1808.

CHAPTER XXIX.

BIOGRAPHIES OF MERCER.

JOHN J. ALEXANDER, attorney, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, April 6, 1850, to B. W. and Mary A. (Kilby) Alexander. The father was born in this county in October, 1809, and was the son of Joseph Alexander, one of the earliest settlers of Mercer County, and who is mentioned in a former chapter of this work. Joseph Alexander was the father of the following children: B. W., Thomas, John, Margaret, William, Joseph, Samuel and James. The last of the children was buried March 3, 1886. B. W. Alexander was a master mechanic, and when a young man he settled at Cincinnati, where he followed his trade and was married. He became the father of three children: Margaret (died in Cincinnati when small), Genetta B. (died in this county at the home of her uncle Joseph) and John J. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church, and are buried at Cincinnati, Ohio. John J. Alexander was reared by his uncle, Joseph Alexander, from his sixth year, and was educated at the Mercer Union Schools and Kingsville Academy, Ash-tabula County, Ohio. He read law with Griffith & Mason, of Mercer, was admitted to the bar in 1876, and went into active practice in 1878. He married Ruth E., daughter of McLean Thorn, and with her belongs to the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He was secretary of the borough council three years, and is a Democrat.

W. C. ALEXANDER, banker, now of Grove City, was born September 10, 1843, in this county. His parents, William H. and Mary M. (McConnell) Alexander, were born, the former in this county and the latter in Ohio. The father survives his wife, and two of his four children are living: D. H., of Worth Township, and W. C. The father was elected prothonotary of Mercer County in 1863, at the time when the business now done by the county clerk was attached to the duty of the prothonotary. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and taught at the age of nineteen. He was his father's deputy prothonotary, and held the same position under A. B. McCartney. Before the latter's term expired he was chosen teller of the First National Bank of Mercer, and after twelve years in that position he was promoted to its cashiership. After three years in this department he served as deputy internal revenue collector under J. F. Walther, of Erie, for two years. He then engaged with W. B. Bard in the lime business in Butler County. He went out with the 100 day troops. He has been a member of the borough council one term, is a Republican, and is now connected with the Grove City Bank, doing business, under the firm name of Graham & Alexander.

THE AMBERSONS.—The original Amberson that came into Mercer County was William. He came from Pittsburgh, where he had lived prior to the Revolution, and where he had been engaged in conducting a small furnace and distillery. He arrived in Mercer about 1803, and located at once on the corner of East Market and Pitt Streets, now owned by Mrs. Dr. Temple and occupied as a barber shop. He built a hewed log house, a portion of which still remains. He was married to Elizabeth Smith, by whom he had ten children, nine of whom were born prior to his coming to Mercer. Their names were as follows: Elizabeth, born May 10, 1873, married to John Findley, who aided in laying out Mercer; Silas, born October 10, 1785, was a captain and recruiting officer in the War of 1812; Clarissa, born January 7, 1788, never married; Presley N., born February 5, 1791, married to Sarah Cunningham, sister of Thomas Scott Cunningham, whose sketch is found in the Bench and Bar chapter. He was the father of Alexander C. Amberson, now a resident of Mercer; Mary, born February 14, 1794, married to Robert Johnson; Nancy, born October 1, 1796, married to George Flake, of Philadelphia, died in 1884, in Mercer; William, born January 1, 1799, died in infancy; William, born December 25, 1799, lived to manhood, married Margaret Hunter; Caroline, born December 24, 1802, died in infancy; Tarleton E., born in Mercer September 4, 1804; he became a physician, and married Emaline Flake, of Philadelphia. He died at Beaver Falls, Penn. William Amberson, the progenitor of the Ambersons in Mercer County, was a colonel in the Revolutionary War, and served several years. While a resident of Mercer he drew a pension until the time of his death, which occurred January 4, 1838, in his eighty-third year. He was associate judge of Mercer County for a number of years. His house is still standing, one of the oldest in Mercer. The weather-boarding was not sawed, but riven from timber and smoothed with the drawing-knife. It was fastened by means of nails wrought by hand. It is said to be the oldest structure in the town, eighty-five years having elapsed since it was erected.

A. C. AMBERSON, retired farmer, was born May 18, 1819, in the borough of Mercer. His parents, P. N. and Sarah (Cunningham) Amberson, were natives of Pittsburgh and Washington County, Penn., respectively. They had the following children: W. Smith, late of Waynesboro, Franklin County; Alexander died small; A. C., Mary married Bartram Cook, and lives in Ohio; Clarissa married Robert E. Barnes; Elizabeth, died in 1845; Presley N., died in 1845, and Samuel C., who lives in Minneapolis. The father of the above children died April 20, 1874, and the mother March 25, 1841. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and has always followed farming. He was married February 5, 1845, to Miss Margaret Hosack, whose family history will be found elsewhere. By this union he has had the following children: Presley N., deceased; Sarah married M. L. Calvin; B. C., lives in Superior, Neb.; Rebecca married S. S. Smith; Beriah lives in Salida, Col., and is an engineer on the Rio Grande Railroad; W. S. lives in Leadville, Col., and is an engineer; Charles E. resides in Superior, Neb. Mr. Amberson sold his farm, and in 1882 came to Mercer, where he has lived a retired life since. He was first lieutenant of a military company in Mercer County in 1850. He served as a justice of the peace in Findley Township for fifteen years, and as school director for nine years. He was a Democrat until 1856, when he joined the Republican party because of the agitation of slavery. He and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

ANDERSON BROTHERS, grocers. This firm consists of A. E. and S. G. Anderson. They began business in Mercer in 1884, and by a strict attention to business they have merited a large patronage. Their line of goods consists of groceries, tobacco, cigars, tin-ware, glass-ware and queens-ware. These gentlemen are both natives of Mercer County, and are enterprising business men, deserving of the lucrative trade they enjoy. In politics they are adherents to the Republican party.

J. R. W. BAKER, attorney, was born in Findley Township, Mercer Co., Penn., November 30, 1848, to John and Susan (Walker) Baker, natives of Ireland, who immigrated to Pittsburgh in 1826, where the father engaged in the hardware business. In 1840 they removed to Mercer County, and located on a farm in what is now Findley Township. The father died in 1859, and the widow died

February 22, 1887. They were members of the Covenant Church. Their children were: S. E. W. and Thomas A. (these two brothers were educated in Rome, the former holding the degree of Ph. D. from the University of Guttin-gen; the latter was bishop of Wilmington, Del., from 1870 to 1886, when he was transferred to the See of Savannah, Ga., where he now lives. The former died in California in 1884); Joseph D. enlisted in Company F, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, in 1861, and served in all the engagements with the regiment until taken prisoner at the battle of Gettysburg, was confined in Libby, Belle Isle and Andersonville prisons, and died in the last mentioned in 1864—the family could not get the body; Lizzie married Samuel Barnes, and J. R. W. The last named was educated in the common schools until eighteen, when he entered Westminster College, New Wilmington, Lawrence Co., Penn., where he was graduated in 1871. He then taught in the Dayton Academy, Armstrong County, one year. In 1872 he began reading law with White & Jackson; was admitted to the bar in 1873, and practiced until 1877, when he was appointed deputy sheriff, which position he held until the spring of 1888. He is now giving his attention to law. He was married September 12, 1876, to Anna Pardoe, by whom he has two children: Hunter P. and Ruth. He is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church.

W. B. BARD, jeweler, was born in Butler County to John and Isabella (Cross) Bard, natives, the former of Huntington, and the latter of Butler County. The father was a merchant, and ran probably the first engine that was brought into Mercer County. He died in 1878, in Centreville, Butler County, and his wife died many years before. They had seven children: J. E. & H. E., merchants at Centreville; Margaret, Zelmira, Mrs. S. F. Thompson, whose husband is an attorney at Mercer, and W. B. The others are deceased. The father was a Democrat, and was elected prothonotary of Butler County. He was nominated for Congress in his district. He was an elector on the Greeley ticket for President, a delegate to the conventions that nominated Seymour and Tilden for President, was chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Butler County, and held his share of the minor offices where pay was not considered. He was president at the time of his death of a savings bank at Centreville, Butler County, and interested with F. H. Oliphant in the manufacture of lime in Butler County, which business his son, W. B., now conducts. He worshiped at the Episcopal Church. W. B. Bard opened up his book business in 1878, by purchasing the stock of goods of A. B. Filson. In January, 1882, he added the jewelry business, and employs two experienced workmen. Mr. Bard is the owner of a farm in Butler County, on which is a good gas well and a large vein of limestone. He has a kiln, and made the first successful attempt to burn lime by the use of natural gas. He is engaged largely in the manufacture of this necessary article under the firm name of Bard, Alexander & Co. He is a stockholder in the L. M. Ormsby Coal Company, limited, and is a director and manager of a railroad at Stoneboro. At one time Mr. Bard was a partner in the publication of the Western Press. He is a stockholder of the First National Bank of Mercer, is chairman of the Democratic Central Committee, and has often served as a delegate to State and county conventions.

D. L. BARTON, of the Mercer Dispatch and Republican, was born October 13, 1841, in West Carlisle, Coshocton County, Ohio, son of Henry and Charlotte (Harris) Barton. D. L. Barton was educated in the common schools of his native county. He began newspaper work in Coshocton, Ohio, some time prior to the breaking out of the rebellion. He subsequently worked at Cairo, Ill., Cleveland, Ohio, and for the last fifteen years he has been connected with the Mercer Dispatch, now Dispatch and Republican. He enlisted August 4, 1861, as sergeant of Company H, Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until October 17, 1864, with the Army of the Cumberland, participating in all of its battles. He was married at Carbondale, Ill., November 14, 1867, to Mary E. Dunham, daughter of L. T. and Mary Dunham. He is a member of the G. A. R., A. O. U. W. and E. A. U., is a staunch Republican, and at the present time is chairman of the Republican County Committee.

JOHN W. BELL, attorney, was born in Liberty Township, this county, April 18, 1848. His father, William Bell, was born in Mercer County, and his grandfather died in Liberty Township, and was the father of Margaret, William, Joseph C., Elizabeth, and Rev. J. R. Catharine Breckenridge, the mother of John W. Bell, is a distant relative of the Breckenridge family of Kentucky, and was one of nine children: W. W., Jane, Rebecca, James, Catharine, Sarah A., Louisa, Mary and Joseph C. William and Catharine Bell are living in York, York Co., Neb. Their children are: Mary, married C. M. Cunningham, of Grove City; John W., Harriet, married A. P. Ramsay; Elizabeth, married A. M. Craig; Robert O., James M., editor of a paper in York, Neb.; Frances, William, Edwin, clerk in a national bank in York, Neb. John W. Bell was educated in the common schools, select school at Grove City and Edinboro Normal. He began reading law in 1873, with Hon. James A. Stranahan, and recited to S. S. Mehard; was admitted to the bar in May, 1874, and after a short period with Mr. Stranahan, he went into practice for himself. He was married January 17, 1871, to Hester J. Davitt, by whom he has two children, Nellie D. and Frank B. He and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican.

JOHN A. BINGHAM was born in a two-story brick house in Mercer, adjoining the jail on the south side of the public square, in December, 1815, son of Hugh Bingham, a former resident of Adams County, who came to Mercer County in the early part of the century. He was a carpenter, and with his brother, Thomas Bingham, built the old Whistler House, which stood on the site of the present post-office and First National Bank building. Hugh held several public trusts, notably those of prothonotary and commissioner. He was regarded an industrious and worthy gentleman. John's early education was obtained in the Mercer Academy, his instructors being John Kelly and D. B. Cook. The latter was familiarly known as "Old Doby," and believed in the rote method of instruction. The text had to be memorized verbatim, and a failure to recite the exact language of the text was considered an unpardonable offense. John did not look at matters in the same light, and on one occasion was mortified to have a younger pupil called upon to recite the declension of a Latin noun, the forms of which had eluded his retentive grasp. When reminded that he ought to be ashamed to allow an urchin to surpass him, he suggested that the boy could give the language but did not comprehend it. He was good in declamation. He had mastered the great speeches of Webster, Clay and Calhoun, as well as the leading orations of the ancient orators, and rendered them with telling effect. He was an active spirit in a town debating society which embraced such young men as William Stewart, William S. Garvin, John J. Pearson, Joseph T. Smith and James Galloway, all of whom arose to distinction in legal, political or ecclesiastical circles. In this debating club he laid the foundation for the power which he subsequently exhibited as a public speaker. John had also spent considerable time and exercised a similar amount of patience in learning the art of printing. He began in the Mercer Luminary, a strong anti-Masonic sheet. During the two years thus employed he became an anti-Mason, and in him were developed those principles which subsequently made him an Abolitionist, a Whig and a radical Republican, a striking illustration of the influence of cardinal principles upon human life. Disliking the printing business, young Bingham concluded to enter the legal profession. Seeking the advice of John J. Pearson, then a prominent member of the Mercer bar, he was told that he would act wisely to increase his educational outfit. Acting upon the advice, he entered Franklin College, at New Athens, Ohio, about 1836, and spent several sessions. Returning to Mercer with his additional equipment, he entered the law office of Pearson & Stewart, and applying himself diligently to study of the law, was admitted to the bar in 1840. He was an active speaker in the ensuing political campaign, espousing thoroughly the cause of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." Soon afterward he removed to Harrison County, Ohio, where he became a prominent man. He represented his district in Congress many times, and for eleven years represented the United States at the court of Japan. He was employed as counsel in the impeachment of Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, and likewise in the prosecution of the conspirators in the assassination of President Lincoln. Mr. Bingham is still a resident of Cadiz, Ohio.

C. H. BLOCK, proprietor of a novelty and notion store, was born in Greenville, Penn. His father was a native of Germany, and immigrated to America in 1853. He settled in Warren, Ohio, where he was employed as a clerk in a clothing house for three years. In 1856 he engaged in the clothing business at Greenville, and did the leading business in that line in the place for a period of twenty years. In 1871 he started a store in Mercer, which is now the property of Frankel & Wright. He was also engaged in the same at Sheakleyville. At the present time he is a butcher at Greenville. He was married to Orrilla Stephenson, by whom he has two children: C. H. and Julia, who married D. P. Packard, an attorney of Greenville. The parents are members of the Episcopal Church. C. H. Block graduated in the union schools of Greenville, and took the junior year at Thiel College. He had early training in his father's stores, and the first business he did for himself was at Pittsburgh, where he conducted a queensware store. He traveled for the queensware and glassware store of James C. Lewis & Sons, of Pittsburgh, for four years. He also traveled for E. M. McGillin & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, general dry goods merchants. In 1885 he opened a notion and novelty store at Mercer. He began with $300, and by strict attention to business he has established himself thoroughly among the people of Mercer and the surrounding country as a square man to deal with, who believes in "live and let live." He carries a stock of over $4,000, of which he is the owner. He was married in November, 1884, to Miss Ella M. Dickey, of Pittsburgh, by whom he has two children: Claire and an infant. He is a member of Argeronia Lodge No. 289, I. O. O. F., of Pittsburgh. In politics he is a Republican.

H. B. BOWSER, attorney, was born November 16, 1854, in Clarion County, Penn., son of William and Nancy E. (Brandon) Bowser. The father was a native of Armstrong County, Penn., and became an early resident of Clarion County. He was educated at Princeton, N. J., and Jefferson Medical College, and practiced medicine for many years. His children were six: Emma, married Samuel Shield, and resides in Iowa; Anna married G. M. Clugh, and lives in Iowa; Mary is a maiden lady; H. B., Ella, deceased wife of D. A. Moore, of Dunlap, Iowa, and Alice, a maiden lady. Mrs. Bowser was born in Pine Township, and the mothers of Q. A. Gordon, A. H. McElrath and W. B. Rose, deputy prothonotary, are her sisters. William Bowser was a strong Abolitionist, one of the first advocates of Republicanism in Clarion County, and was for many years an elder in the Lutheran Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools and academy at Callensburg, Clarion County, also Westminster College, New Wilmington, Lawrence County. He began reading law with Griffith & Mason in 1875, was admitted to the bar in 1876, and soon afterward formed a partnership with H. H. Zeigler, and two years later the firm changed to Mason, Zeigler & Bowser, and in 1884 he formed his present partnership with James A. Stranahan. He was married in January, 1882, to Mary Mason, daughter of Hon. S. R. Mason, and has two children: Janet and Helen. Mr. Bowser was elected burgess of Mercer in 1886. He has been a member of the borough council, and chairman of the Republican county committee, also the State committee.

AUTSIN S. BURWELL was born February 3, 1814, in Connecticut, and came to this county in 1848. He at once engaged in a general store. His place of business was in the block where C. H. Block is now located. He was one of the leading merchants of Mercer for over twenty-five years, and was succeeded by his sons, A. P. and A. S. He was engaged extensively in the wool business for many years. He removed to Seattle, Wash. Ter., in 1885, where he retired from active business. He married Susan M. Peck, of Connecticut, by whom he had the following children: Ellen S., A. P. and Anson S., who are engaged in the general hardware business in Seattle; Charles S., Harvey, who died small; Edward B., also with his brothers in Seattle; Ida M. and Minnie A. The mother of the above children died in 1888. The subject of this memoir was burgess of Mercer, and joined the Republican party at the time of its organization. While here he was one of the most active and enterprising citizens of the place, always lending his aid to everything that had a tendency to elevate society and build up the town or surrounding country. He was one of the organizers of the Mercer Woolen Mills, was for fourteen years a director of the First National Bank of Mercer, and obtained his start in the world by selling clocks over the country for four years. Charles S., another son, was born April 2, 1853, and was educated in the Mercer schools and at Oberlin College for three years, in which institution all of his brothers and sisters, except Minnie, graduated. After completing his collegiate course, Charles S. was employed as a clerk in the First National Bank of Mercer for seven years. He was teller for the following three years in the same bank, and in 1883 was promoted to the position of cashier. This important position he held until the spring of 1888, when he took a place in the City National Bank at Denver, Col. He was an elder of the Second Presbyterian Church at the time of leaving Mercer.

J. H. CHANDLER, recorder of Mercer County, was born April 28, 1848, in New Castle, Penn. He is a son of Henry B., born December 5, 1810, in Plympton, Mass., and Harriet Shurtleff, born in Middleboro, Mass., January 20, 1812. The parents were married in their native country, and after three of their children, Harriet M., Emma J., and Martha M., were born, they, in 1845, came to New Castle, where the father followed coopering, which avocation he pursued for fifty-two years. In 1857 the family moved to Youngstown, Ohio, in 1860 to Niles, the same State, and in 1862 to Sharon, where the father died November 11, 1878, and his wife July 6, 1868. To them were born three children while at New Castle, viz.: J. H., D. W., a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Kate L. The latter died in 1868, and Harriet M. died in 1858. Of the older children, Martha married T. M. Sweeney, manager of Kimberley's mills at New Castle, and Emma J. is a teacher in the Soldiers' Orphan School of Mercer. Henry B. Chandler was a member of the Christian Church and his wife of the Presbyterian organization. Our subject attended school at New Castle and Sharon in Pennsylvania, and at Youngstown and Niles in Ohio. He learned the cooper's trade with his father, and they made all the kegs and barrels that were manufactured in Sharon for a period of twenty-five years. He was married in 1870 to Flora B. Williamson, daughter of T. W. Williamson, late associate judge of Lawrence County. By her he has two children, Henry B. and Stanley W. Mr. Chandler was burgess of Sharon in 1882, 1883 and 1884, and was elected recorder of the county in 1887. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and his wife is a Presbyterian. He is a Republican.

His brother, D. W., was educated at the Michigan Law University at Ann Arbor. He studied theology there, and began preaching at Deerfield, Portage Co., Ohio, and subsequently was in charge of a congregation at Windham, the same county. He was then sent to China as a missionary for eight years. He finally came home on account of declining health, and in about two years he began his ministerial labors at Kinsman, Ohio, where he continued for three years, and then located at Niles, where he is in charge of a church. He was married to Mary E. Stanley, of Ann Arbor.

CHARLES CLAWSON, butcher, was born December 24, 1844, in this county. His parents, W. H. and Melinda (Humason) Clawson, are mentioned in the notice of his brother, W. H. Clawson, of Sandy Lake. Charles was educated in the common schools of Mercer County, and when only sixteen years old he succeeded in getting into the army in the defense of his country. His enlistment was in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, with which he remained nearly four years, and was mustered out as an orderly sergeant. He participated in the battles of Port Royal, S. C., James' Island, Second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, siege of Vicksburg, Jackson, Miss., Blue Springs, Tenn., Candle Station, Tenn., siege of Knoxville, White Ford, Tenn., Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna River, Bethesda Church, Va., Cold Harbor, Poplar Grove Church and Fort Steadman. At Cold Harbor he was wounded in the foot by a minie-ball, which he has in his possession. He was also wounded by a minie-ball in the left shoulder at the battle of South Mountain, September 14, 1862. On his return from the war he engaged in farming for three years, and then for the next four years he was in the oil business. Following that he was engaged for four years in a grocery in Mercer, having for a partner his brother, A. M. Clawson. In 1879 he started his present meat market, and has done the leading business in that line ever since. He was married November 22, 1871, to Melinda Truesdell, a daughter of Joel and Jerusha Truesdell, of Trumbull County, Ohio. By her he has three living children: Kate, Mary and Anna. He belongs to the G. A. R., is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Second Presbyterian Church.

T. A. COURTNEY, manager of the Mercer Woodenware Works, was born June 9, 1848. His father, Thomas Courtney, is noted in another part of this volume. T. A. Courtney was educated in the common schools, the Mercer graded schools, and went to the Edinboro Normal, Erie County, for three terms. He taught, in all, twenty-three months in this and Venango Counties, and in Fulton County, Ill. In 1873 he opened a mercantile store at Balm, Springfield Township, in company with J. A. Painter. Two years later he sold out to Mr. Painter, and in 1875 was elected county auditor, and served two terms. He then resided on his farm until 1887, when he was employed as manager of the Mercer Woodenware Works, which position he now occupies. He was married in 1876 to Miss Laura M. Ketler, sister of Rev. I. C. Ketler, president of the Grove City College. By her he has two living children, Nellie and May. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, is a Republican, and owns a farm in Wilmington Township of 126 acres. His wife is a member of the Second Presbyterian Church, having been prior to their removal to Mercer a member of the Neshannock congregation.

HUGH DONALDSON CRAWFORD, one of the oldest sons in a family of fourteen children, was born of Scotch-Irish parentage, in Allegheny County, Penn., November 27, 1807. Grown to manhood before the free school system of Pennsylvania was adopted in 1834, he enjoyed but three months' schooling in his life. He married Matilda Reed, a most worthy helpmate, March 28, 1832, with whom he manfully met the trials of life more than forty-two years, until her death at Mercer May 4, 1874. Of their eight children one son, Rev. L. I. Crawford, of Sandy Lake; Miss M. M. Crawford, of Mercer; Mrs. S. J. Reed, of Springfield Township, and Mrs. E. A. Amberson still survive. Having purchased a 200-acre farm in Springfield Township, now owned and occupied by his son-in-law, Thomas Reed, the family removed from Allegheny County to this farm in March, 1835, where Mr. Crawford resided till the spring of 1866, when he located in Mercer, where he still lives. Nearly all his first neighbors in Springfield Township are dead. Shortly after coming to Mercer County he, with his wife, joined the Associated Reformed, now Second United Presbyterian Church, of Mercer, of which he was chosen a ruling elder in 1855. The duties of this office he faithfully fulfilled till the infirmities of age have retired him from active service. Distinguished for his life-long integrity, industry and temperance, generosity to the poor and sympathy with the unfortunate, a cheerful, hopeful disposition has made him everybody's friend, and retained for him the confidence of a large circle of friends and neighbors. At the age of eighty-one years this pioneer hopefully waits the reunion of wife and children and Christian friends gone before to the better country.

S. S. DAVIDSON, physician and surgeon, was born November 23, 1858, in Lawrence County, Penn. His father, W. M. Davidson, was a native of Lawrence County, and married Matilda Mehard, a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Lawrence County at an early period of her life. Her union with W. M. Davidson gave her six children: Alice married Philo Cunningham, a son of Judge Cunningham, once of Lawrence County; Christie married W. H. Witherspoon, of Lawrence County; Robert, a resident of Canton, Ohio; James and Joseph, of Lawrence County, and S. S. Dr. Davidson received his literary education in the Mercer high schools and Western University of Pennsylvania at Pittsburgh. He began the study of medicine in 1879 with Drs. J. W. and S. S. Mehard, father and brother of Judge S. S. Mehard. He attended Jefferson Medical College, where he was graduated in 1882. In August of that year he went to Europe and made a study of general medicine and surgery, including the eye and ear, with the leading physicians and surgeons of London, Berlin and Vienna, for a period of two years. He then returned to America, and soon after began practicing at Mercer, where he is rapidly establishing himself as a first-class physician and surgeon.

JONATHAN DEAN, ex-recorder of Mercer County, was born July 24, 1844, in Fairview Township, this county. His father, Aaron Dean, was a native of Butler County, Penn., and came to Mercer County while single. He married Ellen Dean, a native of Butler County, and who died in 1845, leaving four children: Enoch, Leah J., married Peter Clemens; John, enlisted in a company from Missouri, was confined in Andersonville and Libby prisons, and after having been exchanged and discharged, he re-enlisted and was killed at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., and Jonathan, the youngest, was reared principally by his aunt, Leah (Dean) Wentz. He began for himself on a farm. At the age of seventeen he succeeded in enlisting in Company F, Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, early in 1861, and served about three years. He was with the Army of the Potomac. At the time of the battle of Gettysburg he was confined in a hospital. On his return from the war he resumed farming, and in 1884 he was elected recorder of Mercer County by the Republicans. He was married in 1864 to Susie Rea, of Fairview Township, and daughter of Robert Rea. She was a native of Clarion County, and came here when two years old. By her he has five children: H. G., Alice S., the wife of A. H. Chew; Mary E. L., Jennie R. and Christalena. He is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the Sabbath-school of which he is a teacher. His son, Hollis G., attended an academy at Sheakleyville for two years, and McElwain Institute at New Lebanon. He was his father's deputy recorder for two years. He, in partnership with S. K. Cochran, purchased, in 1887, a stock of furniture, and continued to conduct the business under the firm name of Cochran & Dean until December, 1887, when Mr. Dean became sole proprietor. This is one of the oldest institutions of the kind in Mercer County, having been established about the year 1827, by Samuel Giebner, who followed the business continually until 1883. Hollis G. Dean was married on January 11, 1888, to Miss Fannie McKean, a daughter of Archie J. McKean. He is an enterprising young business man.

CHARLES M. DERICKSON, merchant, was born in Meadville, Penn., a son of David V. and Mary (McDonald) Derickson, who were also born in Crawford County, where his father survives. Charles was educated in the public schools of Meadville. In August, 1882, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Fiftieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, which company was commanded by his father. He served till the end of the war, and on his return from the army in 1866, was appointed assistant internal revenue assessor. In 1867 he was appointed mail route agent on the Atlantic & Great Western Railway, between Salamanca, N. Y., and Akron, Ohio. In 1870 he was appointed assistant postmaster at Meadville, in which capacity he served till 1873, when he removed to Pardoe, this county, to engage in the mercantile business. He was appointed postmaster at Pardoe the same year, and in 1876 formed a partnership with W. D. Keck, of Mercer, in the general dry goods business, which is still continued. In the same year, 1876, he was married to Kate S. Carter, of Mercer, who, as well as himself, is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a Republican in politics, and has served in the postal service continuously for twenty-one years.

J. N. DONALDSON, merchant, was born December 8, 1830, in Mercer County, to William and Jane (Linn) Donaldson, natives of this county. The father was born in 1804 to James and Elizabeth Donaldson, of Scotch-Irish extraction, and the parents of the following children: Smith, Perry, Samuel, Phoebe, Sarah, Elizabeth and Callie. Phoebe married William Woods and died in this county; Sarah married William Thompson and lives in Clarks-ville; Elizabeth married John Fidler and he is dead; Callie married a Mr. Bixby. James Donaldson held during his life advanced grounds on every subject of reform, especially on temperance, slavery, politics and tobacco. He and his wife were active members of the Presbyterian Church. The Linn family is mentioned in another part of this work. William Donaldson was educated in the log cabin schools, and began for himself on a farm with a yoke of oxen and a few farm implements. He and his wife died in 1852, she in the evening and he in the morning of the next day. Their children were J. N., Susan, married Andrew Thompson, who died in 1865; Wilson, died while confined in Andersonville prison, as a prisoner from the Union ranks; and Elizabeth, married Thomas Limber and she is dead. The parents of our subject were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church. J. N. Donaldson was educated in the common schools and the old Mercer Academy. He began teaching when eighteen years of age at $12 per month and the patrons to board him. He followed this for five terms. The death of his father changed materially his plans of going to college. He therefore engaged in farming, which he continued until 1859, when he was employed as a clerk in the store of G. W. Mustard for over one year, and was then engaged by Burwell & Thompson, general merchants at Mercer, later A. P. Burwell & Bro., with whom he remained until 1885, when he was retained by F. P. James & Co., the successors of A. P. Burwell & Bro., and when D. V. Stranahan bought this enterprise he remained with him until in 1887, when the stock of goods was burned. He soon after formed a partnership with R. J. Zahniser in the general dry-goods business, which he continues, and enjoys a large patronage of the people whose confidence he obtained while laboring for the success of his various employers. The firm of Donaldson, Zahniser & Co. is located in the new Miller & Gordon Block with a large stock of goods. Mr. Donaldson was married in 1869 to Amanda Fleming, a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Kerr) Fleming, natives of what is now Westmoreland County, Penn. Mrs. Donaldson was one of twelve children: Aaron, Alexander, Susan, Amanda, Joseph, Harvey, Elizabeth, Phœbe, Hampton, Frank and two who died young. Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson have no children and are active members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Republican.

JOHN M. DOUDS, physician and surgeon, was born in Beaver County, Penn., December 17, 1847, to E. H. and Catharine M. (Fronk) Douds, natives of the same county, where they still reside. They are the parents of seven children: Rebecca M. (deceased wife of Amos Keeler, of Salem, Ohio), John M., Mary (married William Holmes of Beaver County), Elizabeth (married James Irons, of Beaver County), George F. (married Nannie Werghant), Minnie M. (deceased), and Aggie (single, at home). Dr. John M. Douds was educated in the common schools of New Sheffield, Beaver County, Edinboro Normal, Erie County, and finished at Mount Union, Ohio. He taught school ten years in Beaver County. He read medicine with J. S. Boyd, of New Sheffield, now of New Brighton, and attended the Homeopathic Medical College of Cleveland, Ohio, for three years, graduating at the same in 1881. He began his practice at Mercer that year, and has built up a lucrative business. He was married June 26, 1879, to Sarah E. Jackson, daughter of Thomas Jackson, of Beaver County. By her he has two children: Thomas C. and Edward H. He is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

THE DOUDS FAMILY: John and Mary Douds had the following children: Agnes, Robert, James H., John, Benoni, Eliza, Mary, William W., Edward H., Margaret and Mahlon; Agnes married M. T. Stokes, by whom she had Elizabeth, John D., Mary A., William H., Joseph R., James H., Mahlon S. and Agnes A.; Robert died when small; James H. was born in 1805, married Margaret Caldwell and had Samuel C., John, Eliza, James H., Mary and Edward H. Mahlon T. and Agnes H. Stokes had Eliza, born in 1814, married William Lehmer and had Alice, Mary H., George, Emma, Laura, Jane and Joseph S.; John D. married Eliza B. Irvine and had James, Mahlon, Mary, Elizabeth, Emma T. and Harriet A.; Mary A. married Rev. W. Y. Brown and had William; William H., born in 1827, married Sarah J. Spear and had Lizzie and Alfred; Joseph was born in 1830; James H., born in 1831, married Anna McDowell; Mahlon T., born in 1834 and married Hattie A. Criswell; Agnes was born in 1837. Children of James H. and Margaret Douds: Samuel C., married Caroline A. Moore and had Edward H.; James H., was married twice, the second wife being Rachel C. Bryan, by whom he had Clara B.; John M., married Elizabeth Lebring and had Margaret and Jane; Eliza, married S. Moore and had Margaret. Children of Benoni D. and Mary Douds: Mary, married James Orr and had no children.

J. G. ELLIOTT, attorney, was born March 11, 1838, to B. F. and Mary (George) Elliott of Worth Township, Butler Co., Penn. He was educated in the common schools and at Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, where he was graduated in 1859. He taught school from then until 1863, when he began the study of law with Hon. John McMichael at New Castle. He was admitted to the bar of Lawrence County May 15, 1865, and began practice at Petroleum Center, Venango Co., Penn. He was in partnership with W. W. Marshall, and in one year the firm opened an office at Franklin, where Mr. Elliott prosecuted his profession until 1869, when he had an offer to form a partnership with Hon. David Craig at New Castle, Penn., with whom he practiced one year, and then located in Sharon, December 6, 1870. There he remained until 1878, when he came to Mercer and has continued in the work of his profession since. He was married July 7, 1870, to Eva Pearson, daughter of Johnson Pearson, by whom he has four children: George P., Charles T., Agnes M. and Frank P. Mr. Elliott is a member of the F. & A. M., is a Republican, and with his wife belongs to the Second Presbyterian Church.

HON. JOHN FINDLEY.—One of the prominent early settlers of Mercer County, whose impress has been left upon its institutions, was he whose name stands at the head of this sketch. We take great pleasure in appending an editorial sketch of this pioneer published in the Mercer Whig of December 20, 1855: "We mourn while we chronicle the decease of Hon. John Findley. He died at his residence in Findley Township in this county on Sunday, the 9th inst., at the advanced age of eighty-two years, leaving behind him a large circle of relatives and friends to lament their irreparable loss. Mr. Findley was a son of Hon. William Findley, of Westmoreland County, who had been so long a member of Congress from this State that in 1815 he was called the "Father of the House," and who was subsequently elected and served one term as governor of Pennsylvania. The subject of our notice was one of the first settlers of this county, having removed to the farm upon which he lived and is now buried in the year 1796, and during his long life felt and manifested a deep interest in the improvement and in the developing of the resources of the county. At that time our county was an almost unbroken wilderness, with only here and there, at the distance of several miles, small clearings commenced and rough log cabins erected by the daring and hardy pioneers, a wilderness through which the wild beasts and the remnants of those tribes of Indians who, a few years before, had made the country surrounding Pittsburgh their battle-ground, prowled and roamed, and satiated their brutal instincts and the revenge of their savage minds; and even the place where Mercer was located and now stands was covered with the forest. But he has lived to behold vast changes in our country; he has seen the wilderness "to blossom as the rose," the dense forests have been felled and their places occupied by highly cultivated farms, the farm-houses and the mansions of our citizens have taken the place of the rough log huts of the first settlers, and the county, which then had only a few scattered inhabitants, is now among the most populous and wealthy in Northwestern Pennsylvania, and he has at length, in ripe old age, been "gathered to his fathers." Judge Findley was appointed in 1803 by Gov. McKean prothonotary and clerk of the several courts, and register and recorder of Mercer County, the first appointment made in the county, the duties of which offices he discharged until 1808. He again discharged the duties of the same offices, under appointment from Gov. Heister, from 1821 to 1824. He served for one term as one of the associate judges of this county, by appointment from Gov. Porter. He also, at different times, held the offices of deputy surveyor general and county surveyor for this county, of deputy United States marshal, appraiser of canal damages, etc. The unflinching integrity with which he discharged his official duties were in accordance with the correct principles and virtues of his private life. His services as surveyor and his iron recollection have been of incalculable value to our citizens in settling disputes in regard to land boundaries, which can never be replaced. Mr. Findley was during nearly his whole life a professor of Christianity, being a member of the Associate Reformed Church—the church of his fathers—and in the faith of Christ he lived and in that faith he died." John Findley was married to Elizabeth Amberson, daughter of William Amberson. His children were: William, who became a minister and died at New Castle a few years ago; David, who lived and died in Tarentum; John Junkin, died at Waynesboro, Franklin County, during the war. Besides, there were two daughters who died in infancy.

JUDGE DAVID FINDLEY.—In 1796 or 1797 David Findley removed from Westmoreland County to Cool Spring Township, Mercer County, where he married Miss Nancy Rambo. He removed subsequently to Mercer. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and died at Fort Adams, Miss. His children were: Mary, never married; Nancy, married to Judge David T. Porter; John, went to California in 1849, but returned to Mercer, where he died; William, learned the hatter's trade with Michael Yeager, leaving home suddenly, never returned; David W., known as Judge Findley, was born in Mercer, January 3, 1810, and died at his home, same place, December 30, 1887, nearly seventy-eight years old. He was engaged for many years in merchandising, was prothonotary and clerk twice, and held the position of associate judge one term. He was also justice of the peace for a number of years, and finally, by common consent, was admitted to the Mercer County bar. He practiced law until his impaired physical condition compelled him to cease. He was a useful public man, thoroughly alive to questions that concerned the welfare of the people. For more than fifty years he was an exemplary member of the Presbyterian Church. During his earlier years he was a Whig, and then a Republican, but the closing years of his life were identified with the Democratic party. His name is held in great veneration in the community where his widow and children still reside.

R. T. FINDLEY, ex-county commissioner, was born February 3, 1829, in Sandy Creek Township, on the farm which he now owns. His father, Robert Findley, was born in Ireland, and emigrated, with his father, two brothers and two sisters, to America, and settled in Crawford County, Penn. Robert subsequently located in what is now French Creek Township, this county, and served in the War of 1812. He married Ann McCracken, and died in 1849, leaving four children: John, a resident of Perry Township; R. T., Mary, married James Brush and lives in Sheakleyville, and James, who died in the Civil War. The father was a Whig at the time of his death, also a member of the United Presbyterian Church. Our subject attended the common schools until he was sixteen years old. He afterward engaged in the stock business, which he never abandoned. He was the owner at an early day of a saw-mill, with water power, manufactured lumber and shipped it down the streams to Pittsburgh, where he sold it. He engaged in the mercantile business in Sheakleyville in 1874, and after several years of successful operation, he sold out and took an interest in the planing mill of Thorn, Byers & Co., at Mercer. He was elected county commissioner in 1884 by the Democratic party and served with entire satisfaction to all. He was married in 1851 to Maria daughter of James and Maria (Thompson) Dunn, early settlers of the county. By this union he has three children: Emma, Mrs. Herringer, of Chicago; Frank W. and Hattie M., the wife of A. M. Imbrie, an attorney of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Findley died in 1861, a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was again married in 1862 to Almira Byers, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Piper) Byers. James Byers was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Ramsey) Byers. Samuel Byers was born in 1762, in Maryland, and was the father of the following children: Agnes, Andrew, William, Samuel, John, Daniel, James, Ebenezer, Betsey. Samuel Byers settled in Mercer County in 1796 (now Lawrence County) and died in 1836, and his widow died in 1847. James Byers was born in 1800 on the old homestead near Pulaski, Lawrence County. At the age of twenty-eight he settled in Lake Township, and eight years later he located in Pulaski, where for ten years he kept hotel. He then purchased a farm in Venango County, where he lived for twenty-one years, and then purchased what was known as the "Half-way House," in Fairview Township, and kept hotel for a number of years. He was married December 22, 1825, to Elizabeth Piper, by whom he had fourteen children, ten of whom grew up: Mahala, John, Zela, Rosetta, Almira, William R., James W., Meldo, Frances E. and Belle. He resides in Fairview Township and with his wife belongs to the Presbyterian Church of Fredonia. Mr. Findley is an officer of the Stoneboro Agricultural Society, is a Democrat, and one of the enterprising citizens of Mercer County.

A. B. FILSON, lumber dealer, was born February 28, 1841, in Frederick County, Md. His parents, William and Susan (Favorite) Filson, were natives of the same State, and came to this county in 1848, the trip being made by wagon. The father was appointed court crier in 1856, and continued until 1883. His wife died in 1863, the mother of eight children: Sarah, A. B., F. A., Clara, Laura, W. S., Margaret and John R., who died young. The father was again married to Elizabeth Maddeu, by whom he has one child, Onie. The father lives in Cool Spring Township, and belongs to the Methodist Church. A. B. Filson was educated by his father and in the common schools of Cool Spring Township. He also attended the Mercer High Schools when they were taught by Congressman A. J. Warner, of Ohio. He enlisted in the Mercer Rifle Company, known as Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He served until February, 1863, when he was taken with pneumonia, and after a period of treatment at the Odd Fellows' Hall in Washington City he was discharged and returned home. In July of that year he went out with the militia to check Morgan on his raid through Ohio. He was first lieutenant of Company F, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia. He re-enlisted in Capt. Tanner's Company. He was in the Seven Days' Fight, and the second battle of Bull Run and Antietam. He was married to Emma J., daughter of Alexander Flowers, of Pittsburgh. By this union he has two children: Anna E. and William A. He was elected county auditor in 1869; was appointed postmaster of Mercer in 1876 by Hayes and re-appointed by Arthur, and by holding a short time under Cleveland he thus served under four Presidents—Hayes, Garfield, Arthur and Cleveland. Since leaving the post-office he has been devoting his time principally to political work. He is a member of the G. A. R., and at present the post commander of Mercer Post, 169, also F. & A. M.; is a Republican, and he and wife belong to the Second United Presbyterian Church. David Filson, the grandfather of our subject, was for some time engaged in running a transportation wagon from Baltimore to Erie City. He enlisted at Erie and served in the War of 1812. He came to Mercer County to live in 1861, and died in 1863. In 1888 our subject, in partnership with M. C. Zahniser, engaged in the general purchase and sale of lumber.

HERMAN FRANKEL, clothing merchant, was born in Germany July 22, 1844, and immigrated to America in March, 1868. He came to Greenville and was employed in the clothing house of Nathan Block. In 1871 he opened up a clothing house in Mercer under his own name, and in 1874 he took in R. R. Wright, which partnership still exists. He was married in 1882 to Miss Mary Zahniser, daughter of Rev. George W. Zahniser. He is interested in the L. M. Ormsby Coal Company of Jackson Township, and the Soldiers' Orphan School, being treasurer and secretary of the former. He is a stockholder in the First National Bank of Mercer; has been a member of the town council, and is a Republican.

HUGH A. GAMBLE, clerk to the county commissioners, was born January 6, 1845, in this county, to John and Isabella (Alexander) Gamble, natives, the former of Lancashire, England, and the latter of County Armagh, Ireland. They immigrated to America about the years 1830 and 1831, respectively, and the father settled in Delaware, and the mother in West Salem Townships, this county. Their union gave them ten children: Hugh A., C. J., G. W., P. R., R. H., M. A., J. E., William, D. A. and Ida B. G. W. is deputy clerk of Rock Island County, Ill.; M. A. married A. R. Schadt; J. E. married W. A. Cubbison; William is bill clerk for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. R., at Moline, Ill.; Ida B. married W. W. Hancox. The mother of the above named children is living. The father died in 1875, and was Past Grand of the I. O. O. F. at the time of his death. He served as poor director two years. Hugh A. Gamble was educated in the common schools of Mercer County, enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served about eighteen months. He was wounded twice, the first time at the battle of the Wilderness. His life was spared then by a small ambratype of his parents enclosed in a wooden case and lined with brass, which reached him on the evening before he received the wound. He had placed this much cherished treasure from his loved ones at home in the inside vest pocket just over his heart, and while on his knees in the act of loading his musket, he was struck with a rebel bullet which took effect in the picture, completely burying itself therein. He was knocked flat on his back and escaped with two ribs being broken. He at once returned the picture to his parents, together with the bullet, accompanied by a full explanation. He has no treasure on earth which he values more than that little historic ambrotype with its rebel bullet. His second wound was received at Petersburg. This time he lost one of his little fingers. On his return from the war he engaged in farming until 1872, when he was selected by the board of county commissioners as their clerk. He afterward served two years as deputy prothonotary and three years as deputy register and clerk of courts. In 1882 he was again called by the commissioners to assist them, and has held that position continually ever since. He was married October 20, 1870, to Rebecca J. Lundy, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Wilson) Lundy. She died October 24, 1884, leaving the following children: Ida M., Mamie Eva (deceased), Jennie B. and Luella May. He was again married in November, 1887, to Mrs. Jennie S. Ecker, the widow of Dr. S. N. Ecker, late of Jacksonville, Cumberland Co., Penn. Mr. Gamble is a member of the A. O. U. W., I. O. O. F., S. K., and is an earnest Republican.

HON. WILLIAM SWAN GARVIN, the veteran editor of the Western Press for so many years, was born in Mercer, Penn., June 25, 1806, his parents being John and Agnes Garvin, who had removed from Cumberland County to Mercer, and occupied a tract of land along Garvin's Run, immediately north of Mercer, their house standing near what is now known as Griffith's Spring. John Garvin, the paternal grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was of Scotch-Irish descent, migrating from the north of Ireland to this country prior to the Revolutionary War, and taking the oath of allegiance to Pennsylvania October 14, 1777, in Cumberland County. William's scholastic advantages were limited to a few months' attendance in the village school at Mercer, and yet his life-long work was a school. Though he knew not a noun from an adjective, he wrote the most vigorous and accurate English. At the age of fourteen he entered the Western Press office, then owned by Jacob Herrington, as an apprentice, and served faithfully nearly six years. Following this, he went to New York, and thence to New Orleans as a printer. Returning to New York he accepted the foremanship of the New York Albion, where he remained until his return to Mercer in 1830 to take charge of the Western Press, which he had meanwhile purchased from John Hoge and others. While in New York City Mr. Garvin was married to Miss Annie Hoyt Lockwood. From this union the following children were born: Annie Hoyt, afterward Mrs. James Hazelton; Agnes Swan, subsequently Mrs. Judge John Trunkey, wife of the late associate justice of the State of Pennsylvania, whose biographical sketch will be found elsewhere; Sarah Lockwood, afterward Mrs. Nesbitt, John G., Edwin Laughlin Garvin, now living near Oberlin, Ohio; Julia Olmstead, William Swan and David Wilmot. Of this number the only ones living are Mrs. Judge John Trunkey, Edwin L. and David Wilmot, of Florida. Mr. Garvin's power was shown in his career as editor of the Western Press, which he owned and managed, with brief interruptions, for more than half a century. For the particulars as to the changes through which it passed, the reader is referred to the chapter on "The Press." As a political writer he was vigorous, fearless and incisive, ever maintaining to the utmost of his ability the principles of the Democratic party, with which he was identified throughout his long life. His power was felt as a journalistic leader of his party, not only in the politics of the county but of the State. A strict adherent of the principles of Jeffersonianism, he did not hesitate to proclaim his faith everywhere and under most trying circumstances. He never retreated from his foe, but fought the battle vigorously until it was properly ended. He was a student of the constitution, and practically accepted and defended the political doctrine of State's rights as constitutional. In 1845 he was the Democratic candidate for Congress, his opponent being the Hon. John J. Pearson. Though the district was largely Whig, it was carried by Mr. Garvin by a small majority. He represented his district with ability and credit both to himself and his constituents. He was twice postmaster of Mercer, first in 1837 during the administration of Van Buren, and next during the administration of Andrew Johnson, 1865-69. He was also flour inspector of Pittsburgh under Gov. Packer. Mr. Garvin was the close and intimate friend of Gen. Simon Cameron, Hon. Benjamin H. Brewster and Judge Wilmot. Though separated politically in later years from Cameron and Brewster by reason of their affiliation with the Republican party, no interruption of personal friendship ever ensued. He was conspicuous in Pennsylvania as an opponent of James Buchanan's nomination for the Presidency, and more than once was instrumental in preventing it by withholding a portion of the State delegation from Buchanan's support. Personally Mr. Garvin was a kind man, though at times he appeared to some gruff and unsociable. Afflicted for years with disease that impaired his health and soured his disposition, he was most kindly and lovingly appreciated by those who best knew his natural kindness of heart and temper. As an infant he was taken into the membership of the United Presbyterian Church, or its antecedent, the Associate Reformed, but at the time of his death he was identified with the Protestant Episcopal Church. His death occurred on the 20th of February, 1883, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. His remains rest quietly in the Mercer cemetery.

JOHN I. GORDON, of Mercer, was born in Mill Creek Township, this county, March 3, 1845, and lived on the same farm, attending district school and the New Lebanon Academy three terms prior to August, 1862, when he enlisted as a private in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was discharged from the United States service in December, 1864, on account of a gun-shot wound received in the battle of the Wilderness, Virginia. On returning from the army, after his health had sufficiently recovered, he attended the State Normal School at Edinboro, alternating with teaching until in the spring of 1868, when he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Giebner, of Sandy Lake. In 1869 he was elected recorder of deeds of this county, and assumed his official duties the first Monday of December of that year; following this he served three years as prothonotary's clerk, and on January 1, 1876, he assumed the management and control of the Mercer Dispatch newspaper and is still connected with that business, although doing but little in the office since January, 1881. In 1880 he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Chicago. The past seven years he has been engaged principally in farming. He is interested in the Soldiers' Orphan School at Mercer, is a Republican, a member of the Second United Presbyterian Church and is superintendent of its Sabbath-schools.

THOMAS GRAHAM died in Mercer on the 4th of April, 1833, in his sixty-third year. His remains lie in the old graveyard back of the First Presbyterian Church. He was born in Ireland, and married Margaret Irwin, of Carlisle, Penn. His children, Isabella (now Mrs. Forker, of Mercer, aged eighty-seven); Susan, wife of Charles Whistler, deceased; Margaret (Mowry) and Thompson.

MAJ. THOMAS GRAHAM, son of Thomas Graham, hotel keeper, was a practical joker—a man of the world. He was a resident of Mercer for fifty-four years, and was, at the time of his death, which occurred on the 3d of January, 1871, sixty-three years of age. In the language of Mr. Garvin, a warm personal friend, he was "possessed of a vigorous mind, ready and pungent wit and general good sense. He was a recognized leader of the Democracy of Mercer County, firm and reliable in prosperity and adversity."

C. J. GREGORY, operator of the United Line of Telegraph, was born November 4, 1850, in Warren County, Penn. He was educated in the common schools and at Sugar Grove. He spent his younger days on his father's farm. He began to support himself at the age of fifteen years by hiring out to labor on a farm. He subsequently clerked in a dry goods store. At the age of twenty-one years he entered the Iron City Business College, where he was graduated. Soon after he purchased a saw-mill in Warren County, Penn., and operated it with good results for four years. He was married in 1874 to Miss Eleanora Davis, who died in 1882. He sold his saw-mill in 1880, and in 1883 he began the study of telegraphy at Sugar Grove, on the line he is now engaged with. In a very short time he had mastered the art sufficiently to warrant the company to give him charge of an office at Frewsburg, N. Y. After a period of success there he was transferred to Sugar Grove, where he remained until 1885, when he came to Mercer and fills the position entrusted to him with satisfaction to all concerned. He was again married in 1887 to Miss Sadie Wright, a niece of the Hon. George W. Wright. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and is a Republican. His estimable wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

SAMUEL GRIFFITH, attorney, was born in Merther Tydvil, in South Wales, February 14, 1816, the son of Lewis and Jane (Parry) Griffith, and the grandson of Samuel Griffith. His ancestry, as will be seen, is genuine Welsh. In 1818 his parents came to America with their two children, Philip and Samuel, and located in Butler County, where they resided until 1827, when they removed to a farm, one and one-half miles west of Mercer. For five years Samuel lived on the farm with his parents, assisting his father in digging coal and hauling it to Mercer. During one of those winters he attended a country school on "Yankee Ridge," the teacher being Theodore Newcomb. In the spring of 1836, at the age of twenty, he left home and devoted six years to acquiring an education, relying solely upon his own efforts for the requisite means. He attended Allegheny College three sessions during 1836-37. He then taught school in New Castle in the winter of 1837, and in the spring of 1838, became acquainted with Rev. John Gamble, the distinguished linguist of his day, with whom he spent four years, two in Greenville and two in Franklin, a part of the time as an assistant instructor. Mr. Griffith had the reputation of being one of the best linguists Dr. Gamble ever trained. In the fall of 1842, he took charge of the Mercer Academy, and continued in that capacity for two years, the attendance ranging from sixty to eighty pupils, mainly in the classics. In the autumn of 1844, he made a trip West and South, visiting the principal cities along the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. The winter he spent in teaching a classical school in Jackson, Miss. The following year he returned, resumed his legal studies under William Stewart and R. C. Rankin, and was admitted to the bar in 1846. He began his legal practice in Mercer, and has continued a member of its bar to the present time. He has been the Gamaliel of the Mercer bar, many of its younger attorneys having prosecuted the study of law under his directions. He himself has stood one of the leaders of the bar, his practice being an extensive one. He has devoted himself assiduously to his profession, having been no aspirant for the petty offices that often tempt waiting attorneys. Mr. Griffith was, on August 7, 1849, married to Miss Caroline M. Foster, daughter of Samuel B. Foster, Esq., whose sketch is given in the "Bench and Bar" chapter. From this union sprang the following children, still living: Samuel B., a practicing attorney in Mercer, being at present associated with his father in business; William Harry, at present residing at Denver, Col., practicing law, and acting as business manager of the Times Publishing Company, a Republican institution; and Caroline Foster, single, still residing at home. Mr. Griffith was elected to Congress in 1870, by a majority of over 900 in a strong Republican district. He served one term. He was also an elector on the Hancock ticket in 1880. At present his affiliation is with the Democratic party and the Methodist Episcopal Church. His step is firm and elastic, and his natural force unabated.

HON. HENRY HALL, editor of the Mercer Dispatch and Republican, and attorney, was born in England, and immigrated to this county with his parents in 1858. He read law with the firm of Miller & Gordon, of Mercer, and was admitted to the Mercer bar in 1886. In 1878 he was elected recorder of this county, and served one term. Since 1881 he has been editor in charge of the Mercer Dispatch and Republican, and part owner of the same. In 1886 he was chosen by the Republicans as their representative to the State Legislature, and re-elected by them to the same position in 1888. He is an enthusiastic Republican, and one of the self-made, talented young men of Mercer County.

L. HEFLING, retired bank cashier, was born October 23, 1830, in Harrison County, Ohio, son of Fielding and Sarah (Billingsley) Hefling, the parents of seven children. Our subject remained at home until twenty years of age. He was engaged in carpentering and cabinet-making for a few years. In 1855 he attended a mercantile college of Pittsburgh and was book-keeper at Cadiz, Ohio, for seven years. He was married in 1860 to Mary Kennedy and has four children: Maude I., Lula M., Cora G. and Marcy K. Mr. Hefling came to Mercer in 1864 and was employed as book-keeper in the First National Bank for two years, and the following four years held the same position in the private banking firm of Zahniser & Co.; formed a partnership in the Sharon Banking Company for three years; was cashier of the Sharpsville Iron Banking Company the following two years, and at the establishing of the Farmers and Mechanics' National Bank of Mercer, he became its first cashier, which position he held until 1884, when he was succeeded by John Robinson.

JACOB HERRINGTON.—The subject of this memoir came from Meadville to Mercer County in the early part of 1811, bringing with him the materials with which the Western Press newspaper was first printed, portions of which yet stand in its present printing office. The War of 1812 soon following, this paper, less than a fourth the size of the present sheet, was comparatively prosperous in obtaining a subscription list, but paying advertisements were few and far between, and as to job printing, with the exception of a few horse bills in the spring season, there was almost none. For the first few years Mr. Herrington annually printed an almanac, calculated for the meridian of Pittsburgh (by the Rev. John Taylor, who is recollected as residing alternately in Pittsburgh and in Mercer County, where he met his death, in 1838, in Salem Township, from lightning, being killed by it while in his bed at night), and also several editions of a little primer, ornamented with the engravings that were explained in side notes, such as: "In Adam's fall, we sinned all," "Xerxes the Great did die, and so must you and I," and the always interesting representation of the burning of John Rogers, with his wife and nine children as spectators, and containing the Westminster Shorter Catechism. These publications were principally traded for rags, that were turned over to the paper maker. At that time there were but two newspapers in this part of the State, the Crawford Messenger, published by Thomas Atkinson in Meadville, and the Western Press, by Jacob Herrington in Mercer. In looking over the files of the Press, between 1811 and 1816, we find the Franklin lists of letters, proclamations of elections in Venango County, and the treasurer's sales in the counties of Venango and Warren were advertised in Mr. Herrington's paper, and where public meetings were held in Erie that the Messenger and Press were alike furnished with copies of proceedings and requested to publish them. In 1813 Mr. Herrington was elected to the House of Assembly. He was re-elected in 1814, 1815 and 1816, and again in 1818 and in 1820, and lastly in 1834; in all he served seven times as representative in the House. In 1821 he was elected to the State Senate, and re-elected in 1823, making thirteen years that he represented the people of Mercer County in a legislative capacity, a longer period than that of any other citizen before or since that time. In those days, when the people needed assistance in opening roads, building bridges, etc., the representative that could get the most money appropriated out of the State treasury for their benefit was, by far, the most popular man. In this, Mr. Herrington was peculiarly fortunate. He succeeded Mr. James Montgomery in the House, who had failed to secure a $3,000 appropriation to help build the Mercer Academy, which had been asked for, and was successful in his effort to obtain it. He afterward obtained State assistance in opening several roads, more particularly a subscription of $20,000 to the stock of the Mercer and Meadville Turnpike, and afterward to a similar amount in the stock of the Butler and Mercer Turnpike Company. These public services, along with his social qualities and kind and obliging disposition, contributed to give him great power with the people, by whom, for a number of years, he was almost idolized. He was enterprising, and was the first citizen of the county that entered largely into the driving of cattle to the eastern market; kept a very large store and gave credit to every one that asked for it. As he never enforced collection by law, the result in the end, about 1826, was a failure in business, when the newspaper went out of his hand into that of John Hoge, Esq. For some years afterward he busied himself in various ways to wring from the world a support for himself and family, when in 1834, his party again placed him in nomination for the Legislature. The Democrats were then in a minority, the anti-Masons holding a decided majority of the popular vote, yet a sympathetic feeling for Mr. Herrington, although a member of the lodge, enabled him to get a majority of six votes over his competitor, Mr. William S. Rankin.

R. M. HOPE, physician and surgeon, was born March 27, 1849, son of Hugh and Sarah (McGeehan) Hope, natives of Lawrence County, where the Doctor was also born. James Hope, the grandfather of our subject, was one of the pioneers of Lawrence County, having located there in 1800. R. M. Hope was educated in the common schools, Jackson Academy and Westminster College, began reading medicine in 1871 with Dr. Brough, of New Wilmington, and attended Cleveland Medical College one term, and graduated at the Cincinnati Medical College in 1874. He began practice at North Liberty, this county, and in 1879 left there for Mercer, where he has since remained. He was married to Sarah J. Kirkpatrick, and has two children, Paul and Eveline.

J. P. HOSACK, physician and surgeon, was born February 10, 1822, in the borough of Mercer, and in the house where he now resides. His father, Henry Hosack, was a native of Adams County, Penn., whence he came to what is now Findley Township, this county, in 1799. He subsequently came to Mercer, and learned the shoemaker's trade with Henry Anderson, and followed that business until his death, which occurred April 23, 1861. He married Elizabeth Paxton, by whom he had the following children: John D., born April 12, 1813, fell from a hickory tree when eight years of age, and died three days later; Martha, born March 14, 1815, married George Lindsey, and died March 20, 1853; James, born January 8, 1818, and died August 16, 1824; Sarah, born June 3, 1820, married John R. Lindley, now resides in Springfield, Mo., a widow; John P. and William C. (twins), the latter of whom died August 12, 1824; Jane E., born July 9, 1824, married John L. Sheriff, and died July 9, 1848; Gwinthlain, born February 8, 1827, and died March 7, 1827; and Elizabeth, the mother of Dr. Hosack, died December 3, 1858. The parents were members of what is now the United Presbyterian Church. Our subject attended a pay-school until he was twelve years of age, when he entered the store of Judge D. T. Porter, of Mercer, as a clerk, where he continued for some time. He was very attentive to his books at nights, and studied Latin under instruction of William H. Scott, then an attorney at Mercer. He subsequently studied under D. H. A. McLean, and Greek, Latin and French under Hon. Samuel Griffith. After a period at Cannonsburg, prosecuting his studies in Jefferson College, he began the study of medicine in 1843 with Dr. James Magoffin, of Mercer, and attended the Cleveland Medical College, making the trip to that city by stage in 1845, and returning home in March, 1846, by means of a sled. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession in Harrisville, Butler County, and in 1848 attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. He then came to Mercer, where he has since remained, and has done much to help build up the town and surrounding country, having been instrumental in helping to establish the public schools of Mercer and to get the railroads to the county seat. After passing a satisfactory examination at Harrisburg, under Prof. H. H. Smith, surgeon general of Pennsylvania, he responded to the call of his country, and went out as a surgeon in the One Hundred and First Pennsylvania Volunteers. In November, 1861, he went with Hartranft in the Fifty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers, with the promise that he would be sent back to the One Hundred and First Regiment, but stayed with the Fifty-first until after the surrender of Vicksburg, when he resigned, thinking that the war was virtually ended, and came home. He was married to Margaret G. Forker, daughter of Gen. John Forker, and by her had the following children: John F., born September 7, 1847, superintendent of Scott's Coal Mines, of Scott Haven, Westmoreland County; Henry, born February 28, 1850, died February 22, 1851; Jane, born January 22, 1852, now principal of the preparatory department of the female college at Bellevue, Neb., near Omaha; Mary, born August 16, 1856; George, born July 8, 1858; Isabella, born July 4, 1864, was graduated at Mount Holyoke Seminary in 1887, and is teaching at Thyne Institute, in Virginia. The Doctor and his wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He was a Democrat at the breaking out of the war, when he became a strong Republican, to which party he still lends his influence. He was one of the early members of the Mercer County Medical Society.

A. I. Hoon, physician and surgeon, was born May 17, 1856, in Butler County, Penn., to Anthony and Mary A. (Beatty) Hoon. His father was born in Lewistown, on the Susquehanna River, in August, 1817, and his parents moved with him to Butler County when he was thirteen months old. On that same farm he has lived for more than seventy years, and has filled various civil offices. His marriages gave him twelve children, seven of whom, with his second wife, are living. The Doctor's grandfather, Henry Hoon, was of Pennsylvania Dutch descent, and was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Our subject remained at home until the age of seventeen, after which he attended school successively in Butler, Pittsburgh and Allegheny City. He then taught school two years in Chartiers, when he decided to study a profession. He pursued his classical training at Westminster College. He then read medicine in the office of Drs. Dickson, the noted surgeons of Pittsburgh; attended his first course of lectures in the medical department of Michigan University, and his second course in the medical department of the University of the City of New York, where he was graduated with honorable mention as to rank. He was also for one year resident physician in the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, Penn. He began private practice in Wilmington, Vt., where he remained over two years, and removed to Mercer in 1883, where he has already secured a large patronage. He was married November 30, 1882, to Miss Nettie M. Wilson, of Allegheny City. He and his wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

SAMUEL HOSACK, livery, was born November 14, 1849, in this county, and his parents, James and Mary (Crill) Hosack, are mentioned in another part of this work. Samuel was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm. He engaged in the livery business, in Mercer in 1881, and is doing a good business.

JOHN HUTCHINSON, retired farmer, was born in this county. His father, John Hutchinson, emigrated from Ireland, his native country, and settled in East Lackawannock Township, Mercer County, in 1824. He was married in his native country to Margaret McKelvy, who blessed him with three children before coming to America: Jane, the wife of James Forsythe, of Jefferson Township, whose sketch appears elsewhere; Alexander and Andrew. Alexander went to California from this county in 1849, and subsequently to the Sandwich Islands, where he established a large sugar plantation, and there died. Andrew settled for awhile in California and is now a resident of Oregon. After settling in this county there were born to John and Margaret Hutchinson the following children: Richard lives in Oregon, and deals in cattle; John, born May 1, 1827; William lives in East Lackawannock Township, and James, who died small. John Hutchinson was an enterprising farmer in good circumstances at the time of his death, which occurred in September, 1880. His wife died many years before him. They were members of the Presbyterian Church of Ireland. John whose name heads this sketch, was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm. He was married in 1877 to Susan, daughter of Samuel Shannon, one of the early settlers of what is now East Lackawannock Township. He remained on the old homestead until 1884, when he bought his present elegant residence and removed to Mercer, where he lives a somewhat retired life. He has always been an ardent Democrat, and is a strict temperance man. He and his wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Further mention of the family will be found in connection with a sketch of William Hutchinson, of East Lackawannock Township.

W. B. ISENBERG, dentist, was born in Huntingdon County, Penn. He was educated in Alexandria, that county, and began the study of dentistry with Dr. E. P. Stewart, of Sharon, with whom he remained for nine years. In 1878 he located in Mercer, and at once took the lead in his profession. By strict attention to his business he has built up a large patronage. He was married in 1875 to Miss Ella McGoun, a native of Sharon, and a daughter of Nicholas McGoun, deceased. The Doctor is a member of the A. O. U. W. and the R. T. of T. He is a Democrat in politics, and is one of the progressive young men of Mercer County. He and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

WILLIAM JACK, merchant tailor and ex-county clerk, was born in Washington County, Penn., February 8, 1833. His father, Robert Jack, was a native of the same county, and was of Irish extraction. Mary Arthur, the mother of William Jack, came to this county with her parents in 1838. They settled in Worth Township. Here his mother died in 1865, her husband having died in Youngstown in 1873. Their children were: Hannah (married F. A. Filson), Francis (died small), Jane (deceased), Robert (deceased), Mary A. (widow of Thomas Black), Nancy (married William M. Gibson), Eliza (married James Such, of Youngstown, Ohio), and William. The mother was a member of the Second United Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools and the Mercer Academy. His teachers in the academy were: Anna Babcock, Catharine Hunter, Nellie Devitt, a Miss Howard and George W. Zahniser. He began to learn the tailor's trade when thirteen years of age, with his brother-in-law, James Such, and finally finished his trade with A. J. Greer. He then bought the business of A. J. Greer, and continued to conduct it until the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the Sixth Corps for about three years. He participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Antietam, Cold Harbor, Spottsylvania and the Wilderness. On his return from the war he resumed his trade, having his shop at his residence. He was afterward employed by John Braden and Thomas Conley as a cutter. He continued to hold this position with the change of the business from these men to George Gillett. He finally bought out the last named gentleman, and in two years purchased the interest of Byers & Miller, with whom he had been engaged in partnership. He was elected county clerk in 1885. He has been a member of the town council and school director. He had always taken a deep interest in the Republican party, having cast his first presidential vote for Fremont. He was married October 13, 1859, to Margaret I. Moore, daughter of Ex-Sheriff John Moore, and has by her the following children: Belle A., Helen M. and one deceased. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and with his wife and children belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

W. D. KECK, merchant, was born January 7, 1850, in Greenville, son of John Keck, mentioned in the biographical chapter of Greenville. Our subject was educated in the Greenville schools and brought up in his father's store. He attended a commercial college at Mount Union, Ohio, beginning at the age of fifteen years, from which institution he was graduated. After clerking a while for his father, he was employed by Lawton, Burnett & Co., coal operators, and subsequently was employed in the office of Gen. McKibben, then superintendent of the Shenango & Allegheny Railroad, where he remained two years. He was then engaged as agent for a railroad at Mercer, and three years later he severed this connection, entered his present partnership, and has built up an extensive business. He was married to Miss Eva Stewart, daughter of James Stewart, by whom he has two children: James M. and Louese. He has been a member of the borough council of Mercer, is chief of the fire department, is a member of the Masonic Lodge of Greenville, is a staunch Republican, and one of the enterprising business men of Mercer.

WILLIAM KILE, hardware dealer, was born September 29, 1837, in what is now Lawrence County. His father, Robert Kile, was born in Ireland, and immigrated to Lawrence County in 1817 with his parents, William and Nancy Kile. Here the family settled, and the old homestead is in the possession of John Kile, the youngest son of William Kile, who, together with his wife, died thereon. He married Ann Reed, a native of Ireland, who came to America with her parents, John and Jane Reed, and settled in North Beaver Township, Lawrence Co., Penn., about the year 1810. Her parents located about two miles from the Kiles, and in 1843 the parents of our subject removed to what is now Jefferson Township, this county. Here Robert established himself among his neighbors, as one of the most enterprising and worthy citizens of the community in which he dwelt. He served as a justice of the peace for twenty years, was deeply interested in the schools of his day, and was school director. He was identified with the Whig party, and later united with the Democrats. He died in 1884, a member of the United Presbyterian Church. His widow survives on the old farm, and is a member of the same church. William Kile was educated in the common schools and Westminster College, at New Wilmington, Lawrence Co., Penn. His early life was spent on a farm. He was married in 1861 to Harriet, a daughter of Robert Fruit, whose sketch appears in this volume. The result of this union has been one son, R. M., who is engaged in the store with his father. When starting out for himself Mr. Kile engaged in farming. In 1862 he enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the defense of his country for nine months. On his return from the war he resumed farming. In 1879 he formed a partnership with J. C. Logan in the general hardware business in Mercer. In this he has been very successful. In 1885 they erected a large building, in which they are now located. In 1881 he was called on by the Republicans to serve as sheriff of Mercer County, to which he responded, and filled the position with credit. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention, held at Chicago in 1888, which nominated Gen. Benjamin Harrison for President of the United States. He and his wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

GEORGE KING, furniture dealer and undertaker, was born in 1845 in Mercer County, to Robert and Hannah (Forker) King, natives, the father of England and the mother of Mercer County. The father immigrated to this county at the age of eighteen years. He died in 1877, and his wife died in 1876. They had nine children: Mary married Thomas Masford; John is dead; George, Newark, Hannah, Henry, Robert, Kate married John Runkle; Samuel and one deceased. Our subject attended the common schools, and was brought up at farm labor. In 1869 he and his brother, Newark, engaged in his present business, and six years later Newark withdrew, and George has conducted the business ever since. He gives his entire attention to his enterprise, and consequently is successful. He was married August 10, 1880, to Lidia Motheral, by whom he has three children: Lula, Walter and Paul. Mr. King is a Democrat, and he and his wife belong to the First Presbyterian Church. He is one of the enterprising citizens of Mercer, and merits the large patronage accorded him.

COL. WILLIAM A. KREPS, sheriff of Mercer County, was born in Franklin County, Penn., March 27, 1846, and is a son of Jacob F. and Eliza (Turney) Kreps, the former a native of Greencastle, Franklin Co., Penn., and the latter of Greensburg, Westmoreland Co., the same State. Jacob F. grew to manhood in his native county, thence moved to Westmoreland County, where he met and married Miss Eliza Turney, daughter of Adam and Hannah (Weber) Turney, pioneers of Westmoreland County. The father of Elizabeth Weber was the founder of the Reformed Church in Westmoreland County, Penn., when that county comprised a large portion of the western part of the State. Among the many churches which he assisted is a prominent one on Smithfield Street, Pittsburgh. Col. Kreps' father, Jacob F. Kreps, soon after marriage returned to Greencastle, where he was in the mercantile business for many years, and was also postmaster of the town. He reared eight children: Catharine, wife of Dr. J. Q. Robinson, of West Newton, Penn.; George R., of Greenville; Hannah, wife of A. E. Dravo, of Allegheny County, Penn.; John W., of Allegheny City; Francis A. M., a deceased business man of Allegheny City; Adam T., of the firm of Hamblin Sons & Co., Greenville; David D., of Greenville; William A.; two others were deceased in early life. In 1849 the family removed to West Newton, where Mr. Kreps went into the foundry business, and subsequently the mercantile trade. During the war Mr. Kreps retired from active business. His wife died in West Newton, Penn., March 3, 1887, where he died in May, 1888, aged eighty-two years. He represented the Republican party in the Legislature one term, and was one of the leading men of his county throughout his active life. Col. Kreps grew up in Westmoreland County, and in September, 1864, when in his eighteenth year, he enlisted in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served until the close of the war, being mustered out July, 1865. In 1869 he located in Greenville, where he had become interested in the lumber business with his brother two years prior to his coming. The firm of Kreps Bros. carried on the leading planing-mills and lumber yard in Greenville, up to its destruction by fire, April 1, 1887. Col. Kreps was married to Lucetta Taylor September 22, 1875. She is a daughter of William G. Taylor, one of the deceased business men of the town. Of this union five children have been born: George R., Corrinne S., Ida B., William Gregg and Thomas A. The family belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically Col. Kreps is a staunch Republican, and November 8, 1887, was elected sheriff of Mercer County. May 29, 1875, Col. Kreps organized Company K, Fifteenth Regiment Pennsylvania National Guards, of which he was elected captain, re-elected in 1880, elected major in 1883, and colonel in July, 1884, which position he is now filling. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., and is one of the enterprising citizens of Mercer County.

JOHN LOGAN, deceased: A Mercer paper said the following: "After a few days of illness a life of usefulness suddenly terminated. We regret deeply that we are called upon to chronicle the death of the subject of this memoir, which occurred at his residence on West Market Street, February 10, 1883, at 5:30 P. M. As previous mention has been made, his sufferings were from pneumonia, he having been sick about two weeks. During last week his condition seemed a little more hopeful, but he had become very weak and his system proved unable to rally. Hope faded on Friday and Saturday until the end came as stated, while surrounded by many who watched with sorrow as the sufferer slowly yielded his life, and the spirit passed to the great unknown. Mr. Logan was born in 1825 in Pittsburgh, and was therefore in his fifty-eighth year. He was reared in Allegheny County, where he lived until 1858, when he came to this county and joined his brother William, who survives, and who had preceded him to this locality, in the improvement of a tract of land about two miles north of Mercer, in Cool Spring Township, owned by James McCully, of Pittsburgh, an uncle of the deceased. In 1858 he was married to Miss Anna Howard of this place, who with her two children survives him. In company with his good wife they industriously conducted the farm until 1873, when, by the death of Mr. McCully, Mr. Logan inherited a competency, consisting of the farm upon which he lived and a large quantity of property in the city of Pittsburgh. Soon following this he purchased his late residence and moved to Mercer, giving himself up to retirement. In early life he connected himself with the United Presbyterian Church, and for many years was an active member and officer of the same. At the time of his death he was superintendent of the Sabbath-schools connected therewith. He was also a member of our borough school board, and proved a very valuable and efficient officer. His early demise is greatly mourned, and his substantial worth will be missed in every arena in which he moved. The genuineness of his character was shown by the manner in which he received his sudden rise to affluence, the same kind, genial spirit being found regardless of his circumstances. The funeral was largely attended, the schools dismissing in his honor, and the Sabbath-schools, of which he had been a leader, attended in a body to perform the last sad rites of friends." His widow's parents, William and Mary (Glasgow) Howard, emigrated from Ireland to this county about 1829. They had eleven children: Adam, William, Rosannah, James A., David, Samuel, Eliza J., John A., Silas S., Anna M. and Robert W. The father was born February 27, 1781, in County Antrim, Ireland. He died at Mercer in his ninety-third year. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, and on his arrival in this country united with the United Presbyterian Church, of which he was an upright and consistent member. Mary, his wife, died in her eighty-sixth year, and was also an earnest worshiper at the United Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM LOGAN, retired farmer, was born April 1, 1819, in Pittsburgh, to John and Jane (McCully) Logan, natives of County Antrim, Ireland, who immigrated to America in 1818. They settled at Pittsburgh, and in 1823 or 1824 settled on a farm in Allegheny County, where they died. They had five children, two of whom are living: William and Samuel. The parents were connected with the Reformed Presbyterian Church. William Logan was educated in the country schools, walking a long distance through the woods. He began for himself at the age of twenty-four years. In 1845 he came to Mercer County, and located on a farm in Cool Spring Township, where he remained for nearly twenty-eight years. In 1877 he moved to Mercer, where he has lived a somewhat retired life ever since. He was elected president of the First National Bank of Mercer in 1877, and has held the position since. He was married in 1843 to Eliza J. Wilbe, daughter of Andrew Wilbe, of Allegheny County, Penn. By her he had nine children, eight of whom are living: John C., married Sarah Roberts; William H., married Mary Cornell; Andrew; Mary J.; Samuel, a jeweler of Mercer; Sarah, married P. C. Emery; Martha, and Armina. Mr. and Mrs. Logan are consistent members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Mr. Logan is a Democrat with prohibition proclivities.

R. G. MADGE, Burgess of Mercer, was born September 3, 1843, in Lackawannock Township, Mercer County, to Robert and Sarah (Gilky) Madge, the former of whom was a native of England, who came, when twelve years old, with his father to Northumberland County, where they stayed four years and then moved to Mercer County. Robert's history will be found in Lackawannock Township. Our subject spent his early boyhood on the farm, attending the country schools of that time. In 1862 he enlisted in Company C, Fifty-Seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war, doing most gallant and effective service. He was in the Army of the Potomac in the battles of Fredericksburg, Gettysburg and Second Bull Run, and carried the regimental colors at the battle of the Wilderness. Twice in that fierce and bloody fight were the colors shot from him, but each time only to be raised again by the brave and dauntless hand that carried them. He was taken prisoner at Richmond and confined for seventy-six days in the following prisons: Castle Thunder, Libby and Belle Isle. Capt. Houser, of Chambersburg, was his captain for over one year. Returning home, he settled on his father's farm, where he remained until 1876. One year was spent in selling fruit trees through the county. In 1870 he took the census of East and West Lackawannock, Wilmington, Jefferson and Shenango Townships and West Middlesex Borough, and the remainder of the time he was engaged in farming. January 1, 1876, he began his duties as clerk for the county commissioners, which position he filled very acceptably for six years, when he resigned to accept the office of county clerk, to which he had been elected in 1881. Having served his term of three years he was retained by his successor as deputy, which position he has continued to hold until the present time, indisputable evidence of his ability and popularity. In 1866 he was married to Rebecca L. Gault, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Banks) Gault. Her parents having died when she was quite young, she was brought up by her aunt, Mrs. A. J. Burgess. By this union there were six children: A. W., Laura M., Rebecca A., Sarah E., Fannie M. and R. F. He and his wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is superintendent of the Sabbath-school. He is a member of the K. of H., and a strong Republican, by which party he was elected burgess of Mercer in 1888. His brother, J. G., is pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Dalton, Ohio.

DRS. JAMES AND BERIAH MAGOFFIN.—The subjects of this sketch were of Scotch-Irish ancestry. Their father, Dr. James Magoffin, Sr., was a graduate of medicine from the University of Edinboro, Scotland, and in his early professional life was a surgeon in the British navy. After some years of this service he engaged in private practice in the city of Newry, Ireland, and later in life emigrated with his whole family to the United States. His wife, whose maiden name was Anne Moore, was of the same stock as the British general, Sir John Moore, who fell at Corunna, Spain, and whose memory is so beautifully embalmed in Wolfe's poem, entitled "Burial of Sir John Moore."

Dr. James Magoffin, Jr., their eldest son, was born in the city of Newry in March, 1798. He received a classical education in his native city, studied medicine under the direction of his father, and graduated as a doctor of medicine in 1820 from the University of Glasgow, Scotland. He immigrated to the United States in company with his father's family in 1821, coming over as surgeon of the vessel in which they sailed, intending, however, to go to the British West Indies to practice his profession. After landing at Quebec the family took passage up the St. Lawrence and across Lake Ontario, visiting on their way the falls of Niagara, and reached Mercer in July of the same year. Their purpose in coming to Mercer was to visit Ebenezer Magoffin, Esq., an elder brother of Dr. James Magoffin, Sr., who had immigrated to America near the close of the last century. The uncle persuaded the young doctor to abandon his idea of going to the West Indies and to locate in Mercer, painting to him in glowing colors the wonderful future that was about to open to the town and county. Seduced from his original intention by the eloquence of his uncle, the young doctor located in Mercer, and immediately succeeded in acquiring a large practice. After a short stay in Mercer the rest of the family resumed their journey to Kentucky to visit the twin brother of the elder doctor, Beriah Magoffin, Esq., who had immigrated to this country and settled in Kentucky about the time his brother Ebenezer settled in Mercer. Dr. James Magoffin, Jr., had diligently practiced his profession in Mercer for about five years, when he married Miss Grace Elizabeth Mitcheltree, only daughter of Dr. William Mitcheltree, late of Dublin, Ireland. The children of this union were: W. J., now deceased; Elizabeth Anne, also deceased, wife of Rev. W. H. French, who is now pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, of Cincinnati; John M., a resident of Mercer; Sarah J., a maiden lady of Mercer; Matilda Grace, deceased, wife of the late Rev. W. C. Jackson, who at the time of his death was pastor of the Fourth United Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia; Beriah, an attorney of Mercer; Montrose M., a physician and surgeon practicing in Mercer; Maria, a maiden lady of Mercer; Amanda, deceased, and H. M., the youngest, who is a farmer in Findley Township. Dr. James Magoffin practiced his profession with great energy and skill, and gave his attention strictly to his vocation, attending all classes, the rich and the poor alike. He never failed when any of his patients were unable to procure necessary medicines, or were liable to suffer from lack of nourishing food, to supply their wants. No physician in this part of the country ever practiced over the extent of territory he did. It was no uncommon occurrence for him to be called into all the surrounding counties, and even into the State of Ohio, and if he had not been blessed with a fine physique, indomitable will and nerve, he never could have stood the long rides on horseback he frequently had to undergo. He was likewise a public-spirited citizen, and always responded liberally to every enterprise calculated to benefit the town or community. He established the first drug store of any consequence in Mercer, and perhaps the first in Mercer County. The three-story brick building at the northeast corner of the public square, known as the Magoffin Drug Store Block, he built in 1839, which was the first building of the kind erected in Mercer, and at the time was regarded as quite an imposing edifice. He donated the ground and furnished much of the means to build the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, of which congregation he and his wife were long communicants. He practiced medicine for nearly fifty years, and died November 25, 1879, at the advanced age of eighty-two, honored and respected by the whole community in which he had so long lived. His wife, who was a lady of great refinement and adorned with all the virtues that define the true woman, had preceded him to the grave, having died March 2, 1873.

Dr. Beriah Magoffin was also born in the city of Newry, Ireland, about the year 1800. He came with his father's family to this country, as already stated, in the year 1821, and settled first in the State of Kentucky. There he studied medicine, graduating from the Transylvania University, located at Lexington, when that institution had on the roll of its professors the names of such eminent physicians and surgeons as Daniel Drake and Benjamin Winslow Dudley. After receiving his degree he came to the State of Pennsylvania, and located for the practice of his profession in the town of Harmony, Butler County. He then succeeded in building up a large and lucrative practice, and established a fine reputation as a physician. In 1840 he was united in marriage to Miss Amanda Patterson, daughter of Robert Patterson, Esq., of Mercer, and shortly after removed from Harmony to Mercer, where he continued to live until the time of his death in August, 1877. Several children were born to him and his wife, but only one, James, lived to attain manhood. His wife Amanda died in 186-, and in 1867 he was again married, to Miss Maria Mitcheltree, of Pittsburgh, who survives him. His son James, in whom he had centered such high hopes, died in the fall of 1876. Dr. Beriah Magoffin did not practice his profession with any great energy after he came to Mercer to live. For the first ten or twelve years he took charge of his brother's drug store, preferring that kind of practice to the hardships incident to horseback riding through the country. He was a man of generous impulses, and although not possessed of the same positive, robust qualities as his brother James, he always commanded the respect of the community as a man of sterling character.

The lives of both the Dr. Magoffins, James and Beriah, did honor to our common humanity, and they died leaving behind them memories which their friends will never cease to treasure as precious legacies.

HON. S. R. MASON, attorney, was born March 1, 1827, in the portion of Mercer County that is now included in Lawrence County, son of Robert and Matilda (McKinley) Mason, natives of Ireland and Washington County, Penn., respectively, and were the parents of seven children, two of whom survive: S. R. and William W. Our subject was educated in the country schools, private instructions by David Martin, a minister of the United Presbyterian Church, and in Allegheny College, at Meadville, graduating from that institution in 1849. He read law with Hon. John Hoge, of Mercer, was admitted to the bar in 1852, and subsequently formed a partnership with Hon. Samuel Griffith, which firm became one of the best known in Western Pennsylvania. He was married in 1853 to Miss Sarah J. Smith, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Smith, one of the pioneer families of Mercer. Mr. Mason's union gave him seven children: Lizzie, Robert, Mary M., Joseph, Samuel R., W. C. and Jennie A. Mr. Mason was elected district attorney for Mercer County in 1854, and was one of the commissioners who built the union schools of Mercer. In 1878 he was nominated and made the race for governor of Pennsylvania on the Greenback ticket. Since then he has thrown his influence with the Republicans. He is one of the trustees of the insane asylum of Warren, was a director of the New Castle & Franklin Railroad, and is now the attorney for the B., N. Y. & P. and Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroads. He and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

G. W. McBRIDE, the present district attorney of Mercer County, was born May 15, 1849. His parents were David and Margaret (McCandless) McBride. His father was born in Ireland, and immigrated to this country when a boy, and was married to Margaret McCandless in 1842. After their marriage the parents settled on a farm in Pine Township, this county, where they died some years since. The subject of this sketch was one of eleven children, of whom eight are still living. He was educated in the common schools of the neighborhood where he resided, and also in Grove City Academy and Westminster College. He taught school successfully for a number of years in Mercer and Lawrence Counties, and, after reading law in the office of Hon. S. H. Miller, was admitted to the Mercer County bar in 1882. He was nominated and elected district attorney of this county, by the Republican party, in 1887. He married Maggie J., a daughter of W. H. and N. J. McCoy, of Grove City, by whom he has two children: Quincy A. and Paul A. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., of Mercer Lodge, and has been a member of the borough council. He is a representative of a self-made man, having worked himself up from the position of a country school-teacher to the honorable and useful position which he now occupies.

THOMAS MCBURNEY, stock dealer, was born March 25, 1819, in Ireland, son of John and Mary (Frances) McBurney, natives of Ireland, and who immigrated to Mercer County in 1828. James McBurney, a brother of John, opened up a mercantile store in Mercer in a smoke-house which stood on the site of John M. Magoffin's present residence. This smoke-house was the property of an Irishman named Samuel Thompson, who at that time was conducting a hotel near by, known as the Thompson House. He retired from the business about 1848, and died in 1855 or 1856. He was the father of the following children: Mary J., married Frank Baskin; Celia, married Thomas R. Sheriff; Sarah A., married Rev. John Armstrong; Matilda, married David Mourer; Rebecca, married W. J. McKean. John McBurney engaged in farming when locating in the county. He followed that business in Springfield, Lackawannock and Jackson Townships until 1867, when he died, his wife having preceded him to the grave about two weeks. He was the father of eight children: Ann, died in Erie while the family was on their way to this county; Celia, married Joseph Taylor; Mary, married Rev. Miller Wallace; Sarah, married Theopolus McDowell; Jane, married David Proudfit; Thomas, James and John. Our subject began for himself on reaching his majority upon a rented farm, and later became the owner of land and an extensive dealer in cattle and sheep, buying them in Mercer County, driving and selling them in the eastern markets. He was married in 1841 to Rosannah, daughter of Hugh McKean, and was blessed with four children: Nancy, married B. A. Ride; John F., married Sarah Maskry; Mary, married Fred Squires, and William T. Mrs. McBurney died December 29, 1873, and he was again married, to Sarah Moore, daughter of John and Isabella Moore. Mr. McBurney was nominated by the Democrats for sheriff of Mercer County in 1866, and was defeated by a small majority.

THOMAS W. McCLAIN, foreman of the Western Press, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., November 27, 1854. His father, David McClain, was born in County Downe, Ireland, in 1826, was a shoemaker by trade, and died August 6, 1877, the father of six children. His mother, Sarah (McKeown) McClain, was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1828, and is still living in Sharon. Our subject was educated in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Sharon. He began the printer's trade in the office of the Sharon Times in 1868. He was the editor of this paper at the time of its suspension in 1880. He also published a small paper in Sharon for a few months, and was editor of the Vindicator, of Hubbard, Ohio, for nearly one year. In 1880 he joined Capt. George R. Guss in the publication of the Chester County Democrat at West Chester, Penn. In 1882, a few months prior to the death of Hon. William S. Garvin, he came to Mercer to take charge of the Western Press, which in the fall of that year passed into other hands. He has been since then connected with that paper. He was married in Sharon July 5, 1877, to Mary A. Zahniser, born in 1857 in Hickory Township, this county, daughter of John and Ann Zahniser. By this union he has six children: Alice, Mary, John, Lidia, Thomas and Robert. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P., and E. A. U., and is a Democrat.

S. H. McCLEERY, county superintendent of schools, was born July 20, 1856, to James and Lucinda (Snyder) McCleery. The father was born in Mercer County in 1834, and his father, Samuel, was a native of Ireland, and immigrated to America, with his parents and brothers and sisters, at the age of eighteen years. Samuel settled near Sheakleyville, where James now resides, and is the father of the following children: S. H.; J. S., a dentist at Beatrice, Neb., who taught school a number of years, read dentistry in Greenville, practiced at Burg Hill and Hubbard, Ohio, married Joanna Calvin and in 1885 went to Beatrice; William E.; Catharine; Martha; Mary E., married Newton Vanneter; Frank A., Hugh N., John E. and Emma. S. H. McCleery attended the common schools, academy of New Lebanon, Sheakleyville, Grove City College and Edinboro Normal, Erie County, Penn. He graduated at the last named in 1882. He began teaching at the age of nineteen, and followed that vocation for six winters in country schools, one year in Utica, Venango Co., Penn., and one year at Sheakleyville. He was elected county superintendent of Mercer County in 1884, and re-elected in 1887. He was married to Silvia J., daughter of Joseph and Mary Infield, of New Vernon Township. By her he has one daughter, Mary E. He is a member of the Baptist organization of Sheakleyville. Mr. McCleery has worked himself up to the high position he now holds by his own efforts. His father was wounded in the war while serving in Company G, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was always in limited circumstances. Consequently our subject was compelled to make his own way through his educational studies. He usually spent his vacation during the summer months in the harvest fields, cradling wheat and pitching hay. In politics he is a Republican.

J. W. McCULLOUGH, farmer, was born March 17, 1821, one mile north of Mercer. William McCullough, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of the north of Scotland, and immigrated to Washington County, Penn., in 1784, where he remained until the spring of 1794, at which time he, in company with his two eldest sons, came to Mercer County and located on land now in East Lackawannock Township, to where he, in the year 1796, brought his entire family. In July, 1833, he died. His children were: William, John, Alexander, Mary, Jane, Nancy and Elizabeth. John, the father of our subject, was married to Mary Wright, who came from Cumberland County, Penn., and his children were: Margaret, William, Mary, George, John W. and Samuel. The father died in August, 1854, and his wife died in January, 1842. Both were original members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. John W. McCullough was educated principally in the old Mercer Academy, his teacher being D. B. Cook. He was reared on a farm, and at the age of eighteen years he began clerking in a store. He was married in 1848 to Mary Patterson, by whom he had two children: William W., married Miss E. P. Horne, and has one child, John; the other died in infancy. Mr. McCullough was elected a justice of the peace eight terms, was county poor director in 1860, and was one term burgess of Mercer. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Republican.

ARCUS McDERMITT, deceased, was born in what is now Findley Township, Mercer Co., Penn. His father died when he was very young, and his early life was spent on the farm where he was born, attending the country schools and the old famous Mercer Academy. Later he became a student at Columbia College, Tennessee, in which State he also taught school. Returning to Butler County, his family's home, he read law with Charles Sullivan, a prominent attorney of Butler, and was admitted to the bar of Butler County in 1849. He was admitted to the bar of his native county September 1, 1851, and in 1852 he was elected county treasurer, and served with credit for a term of two years. From this time until he was chosen president judge he continued to prosecute his chosen profession with much energy and success. He formed a partnership with S. H. Miller in 1872, which continued until 1874, when he was elected to the office of president judge. The Mercer Western Press of January 1, 1884, says: "In 1882 he was a prominent candidate before the Democratic State Convention for the nomination for judge of the supreme court. The excellent record which he had made as one of the best common pleas judges in the State was known all over the commonwealth, and it was generally thought by the most careful politicians that he would secure the nomination. He would have done so without a doubt had not the complications arising from nominating Robert E. Pattison for governor worked against his interests. He, however, stood next in the list to Judge Clark, who received the nomination." He was married September 28, 1865, to Miss Elizabeth Hoge, daughter of John and Rebecca (Smith) Hoge. John Hoge, whose father and childless uncle, John Hoge, presented to Mercer the land upon which it is built, was born in Washington, Penn.; graduated from Washington College; began practicing law in Mercer, and married Rebecca, daughter of Joseph Smith, in 1835. His fine scholarly attainments and brilliant mental endowment made him a man of mark, and it is the pleasure of such men as Simon Cameron, Charles R. Buckalew, George Plumer Smith and others to relate anecdotes of his wit and genius. He died suddenly of apoplexy in 1854, and was the father of the following children: Elizabeth (who became the wife of A. McDermitt), David L. (who resides in Illinois), Annie (who married A. B. McCartney), and three others who are deceased. The judge's union blessed him with one daughter, Jane Hoge McDermitt. He was stricken with sudden illness on Monday, November 19, brought on by too close application to study and the duties of his profession and position, and died November 30, 1883. His funeral took place the following Sunday, and was the largest ever seen in Mercer, the number present being estimated at from 3,000 to 4,000 persons. The Mercer bar passed the following memorial, which was read by Quincy A. Gordon at the funeral ceremonies: "The members of the bar of Mercer County, called together by the sudden death of the Hon. Arcus McDermitt, president judge of our courts, deem it a proper occasion to pay a suitable and truthful tribute to the memory of our late professional and official chief. Judge McDermitt's life was devoted to his profession. Endowed with generous and varied gifts, he was above all things a lawyer. He was original in his cast of mind. Everything he said and everything he wrote was full of the individuality of the man. He was never commonplace. To those qualities he added the fruits of industry, unremitting and life-long labor. His capacity for work seemed to be without limit, and continued until his life went out. "His eye was not dim nor his natural force abated" until the shadow of the death angel literally fell upon him. So accustomed were we to see him vigorous and strong, grasping the duties of life with a firm hand and a keen zest, that we were startled and shocked when we realize that he is dead, and that it is less than a fortnight since he occupied his place on the bench. On this sad occasion it is pleasure to be able to say that in addition to mental gifts, such as are rarely bestowed and still more rarely improved, Judge McDermitt possessed qualities of heart which endeared him to a large circle of personal acquaintances. He was sternly and scrupulously honest. No one ever suggested or suspected that he had ever touched a dollar that was not honestly his own. He was sympathetic; he was the friend of the unfortunate, and always resolved all doubts in favor of the largest liberty of the citizen. It is not panegyric, it is simple justice, to say that an able jurist, a just judge and an honest man has fallen this day. And while thus giving expression to our appreciation of the high character and worth of Judge McDermitt as a lawyer, judge and man, we desire to tender our sympathy to his family in their sore bereavement. We would further recommend that this tribute to the memory of our departed chief be spread upon the minutes of the court, that they may be read at the funeral services, that a copy be presented to his bereaved family, and be furnished the press of Mercer County for publication." Signed by S. Griffith, B. Magoffin, Edwin W. Jackson, Thomas Tanner and A. F. Henlein. On the same occasion the Hon. John Trunkey, late of the supreme court, delivered an eloquent and heartfelt tribute to the deceased, whom he knew so well from a long and intimate relation. He said: "I never heard while practicing beside him, or when presiding in the courts of this county, where he was engaged during my administration, on one side of almost every important case that was tried, that he ever exacted an exorbitant fee, but I frequently knew that he was ready to lend his best service for the defense of him who was poor and unable to pay a farthing; that no poor man, as far as I knew, ever resorted to him for counsel and assistance and was denied. I knew him to have been a true friend, a friend without deceit, for if he ceased to be your friend you knew it, for that was the nature of the man. I never knew of his attempting to despoil anybody in a business transaction; I don't think he was ever known by the brethren of the profession to resort to a trick. Earnest as he was in behalf of his client, making the case his own, he sought to win upon its merits. He sympathized with the poor, the widow and the orphan, the weak in their contests with the strong; neither money nor power, nor personal feeling, rested his judgment; he was a terror of evil doers, and the hope of the innocent; with all his mind and heart he administered justice according to the law of the land."

WILLIAM McELHENY (deceased).—William McElheny was born in Shavers Creek, Huntingdon County, Penn., about the year 1801. He came to Mercer County in 1831, and bought a farm in Cool Spring Township from Aaron Hackney, who was the builder of the old Whistler Hotel. After four years at farm life Mr. McElheny, in company with Thomas Fairman, opened up a small store in a building on the present site of the F. & M. N. Bank. Two years later our subject bought the stock of goods and moved them to a room where now stands Montgomery's drug store. Three years later he removed to the corner where the Western Press was issued for many years. In four years he sold out and bought a lot, with an orchard and a small frame hut, on the site of which is the Magoffin drug store corner. On this lot is to be found a well sixty feet deep, the last thirty feet having been cut through solid stone. It is not exactly known who planted the orchard or dug the well. It is thought, however, that a Mr. Sample was the man. Mr. McElheny helped to build the brick block that now stands on the old orchard spot, where he lived until his death, which occurred in 1865. He married Mary Smartt, of Huntingdon County, and brought her to this county by team. He and Andrew Patterson used to go to Philadelphia on horseback for goods. His union gave him seven children: Letitia, a maiden lady of Mercer; William C., was a minister of the Union Presbyterian Church; John S., was a farmer; Elizabeth, Mary, Margaret and Frances, died when young. William C. married Alice Walsh, a native of Ireland, and who came to America when twenty years old. By her he had two children: Mary F. (married John B. Morrow) and William G. (died December 9, 1879). Mr. McElheny served as justice of the peace, and was interested in the schools of the county. He helped to build a church where the water-works tank now stands. He was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and died in the faith of that organization. His only daughter, Letitia, is a resident of Mercer, and a worthy Christian lady.

A. H. McELRATH, ex-prothonotary and attorney, was born in Beaver County, Penn. His father, Dr. John McElrath, was a native of Ireland, and immigrated to Beaver County, Penn., in 1822, with his father, Archibald. John and his father came to Mercer County, and John subsequently returned to Beaver County. In 1852 the Doctor settled in Jackson Township, where he died, February 24, 1872. He married Jane Brandon, a native of Pine Township, this county, by whom he had the following children: James B. (a physician at Jackson Center), Archibald H., Mary E., Ida N. (who married A. M. Clawson). The father took his medical course at Cleveland and Jefferson Medical Colleges, and practiced successfully for many years. Archibald H. attended the common schools, Mercer Union School, Beaver Academy and Alleghany College, at Meadville, Penn. After teaching a number of terms, including two years in the Freeland Seminary, Montgomery County, Penn., and one year as principal of the public schools at Washington, N. J., he, in 1870, began reading law, and was admitted to the Mercer County bar in 1873, and practiced, except when employed as clerk in public offices, until elected prothonotary of Mercer County, which position he filled with credit. He was deputy under Sheriff McClure, and clerk in the prothonotary office from 1879 to 1882. He enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, and served until the regiment was mustered out. He was married to Miss Mary, daughter of Josiah McJunkin, of Mercer, by whom he has one son, Archibald H. He is a Republican, and he and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

JAMES MCKEAN (deceased).—James McKean was born in Ireland in 1794, and immigrated to America in 1818. He settled for a time in Cumberland County, and in 1820 came to Mercer, bought property and went back for his family, consisting of his mother, brothers and sisters, whose names were: Catharine, married Henry Snowden, of Pittsburgh; Margaret, married James McClure; Jane; William, who studied law with Hon. John Banks, was associate judge one term, justice of the peace five years, started the independent Democratic paper mentioned elsewhere, and died in Meadville; Samuel, who went to Ohio soon after 1821, and there died, and John, the youngest, died recently in Mercer. Archibald and Sarah McKean, the parents of the above named children, are dead, the former passing away at Newville, Cumberland County, and the latter in this county. They were Presbyterians and of Scotch-Irish extraction. James, whose name heads this memoir, when he located in this borough engaged in the manufacture of spinning-wheels, which he discontinued in 1836, and took contracts on the construction of the Erie & Pennsylvania Canal. He built the dam that raised Conneaut Lake and constructed many aqueducts and locks. In 1843 he was elected treasurer of Mercer County, and in 1848 was chosen sheriff, and served in these important offices with credit. He was appointed postmaster of Mercer by President Grant, and served eight years. He married Elizabeth Simpson, daughter of James Simpson, who settled about the year 1796 on the farm in Cool Spring Township now owned by S. H. Miller. By this union he had seven children: Prudence, married George Lyon, and died in California, whither she moved in 1850; A. J., Catharine, married John P. Sheriff, and died in 1887; Rebecca J., married James R. Reed, a jeweler of Pittsburgh; The others died in infancy. He associated himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church in Ireland and was a member sixty-five years. He died in 1884. His wife, Elizabeth, was received into the United Presbyterian Church by Rev. Dinwiddie. He was married a second time, to Eleanor Canon, of Columbiana County, Ohio. By her he had three children: James, Caroline and Ella. James was first lieutenant of Company G, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was killed at Cedar Creek on the day of Sheridan's famous ride; Caroline married A. C. Ray, of the editorial staff of the Dispatch and Republican; Ella married Thomas Moore, and died in Colorado.

W. J. MCKEAN, insurance agent, was born September 3, 1834, in Lawrence County, Penn. His father, William McKean, was a native of the same county, and was a son of Hugh McKean, who was born in Ireland and immigrated to what is now Lawrence County, then Mercer County, about the year 1774, and died in his ninety-eighth year. Patrick Rice, the father of Anna Rice, the mother of W. J. McKean, emigrated from Scotland and settled in what is now Findley Township, this county, in 1785. He was a cabinet-maker and died a farmer. William McKean was one of nine children: James, John, Hugh, Fergusson, Elizabeth, Muncey, Jean, Jane and William. Patrick Rice was the father of the following children: Robert, John, Templeton, Samuel, Anna, Rebecca, Margaret, Maria, Esther, Eliza and Mary. William and Anna McKean were the parents of: Hugh, a farmer in Iowa; Esther, married Parker Simison, lives in Lawrence County, and W. J. The mother of our subject is living in her eightieth year. W. J. McKean was educated in the common schools, and at the age of twenty-five began the mercantile business at Mercer. Prior to his embarking in the mercantile business he was employed as a clerk by Burwell, Beach & Co. for eight years. This prepared him well for taking the responsibility of managing an enterprise for himself. He did business under the firm name of McKean & Porter for six years, when he withdrew and entered into the woolen factory then in Mercer. Later he was engaged in the lumber trade, after which he was again interested in the mercantile business with a Mr. McKinney for about eighteen months. In 1870 he entered into his present business, that of real estate and fire insurance, which he has continued and is doing a large amount of business. He was married October 11, 1859, to Miss Rebecca McBurney, a daughter of James and Mary A. McBurney, by whom he has four children: Benjamin S., Eva C., Jennie and Matilda. He has been school director, a member of the borough council, burgess one term, and is serving his ninth year as assessor of Mercer. He has been secretary of the Mercer Central Agricultural Society. He enlisted in Company F, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers in June, 1863, and served sixty days. He is a member of the Royal Templars and E. A. U., is a Republican, and, with his wife, belongs to the Second United Presbyterian Church.

J. S. McKEAN, postmaster, was born in Cool Spring Township, September 28, 1840, to John and Nancy McKean. The father was born in Ireland, and immigrated to America with his parents in 1818, and first settled in Cumberland County. Archibald, the father of John, had the following children: James, William, Samuel, Margaret, Catharine and Jane. John McKean came to Mercer in 1820, and after learning the brick mason's trade built the house where Mrs. Armstrong's boarding house is conducted. He also built many others, and followed that business until 1869, when he retired, principally because of ill health. He was a sufferer for many years, but was finally relieved by death on June 9, 1888. His widow survives, and blessed him with the following children: Archie, Anna, married David Farrell; J. S., William T., John H., Sarah, married M. M. Veach; Agnes, married John Asper; Margaret, married J. W. Baird; H. N. and Kate S. The parents worshiped at the Second United Presbyterian Church. J. S. McKean was educated in the common schools, and from the age of fifteen to twenty-two was a clerk for A. J. McKean in his drug store. He then enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirtyninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was discharged in June, 1865. On his return he resumed clerking until 1868, when he engaged in the grocery business. He was appointed postmaster by President Cleveland in 1886. He married Nancy J. Lindsey in 1869, by whom he has, Alice, his assistant postmaster, Irene and Robert L. He has been a member of the town council, is a Democrat, and with his wife belongs to the Second United Presbyterian Church.

ROBERT McKEE, lumber dealer, was born January 6, 1822, in Butler County, Penn. His parents, James and Jane McKee, were natives, the father of Ireland and the mother of Juniata County, Penn. The father immigrated to Mercer County in 1798, and settled in what is now Liberty Township, on land that is now owned by the Ubers. He removed to Butler County before the War of 1812, where he was subsequently appointed a justice of the peace by the governor, and became thoroughly identified with the development of that county. His death occurred in 1847, and that of his widow in 1863. Their children were: Thomas, John, James, Hugh, David, Robert, Hiram, Nancy, Martha, Jane and Letitia. The parents were members of the Seceder Church. Robert was educated in the log-cabin schools of Mercer and Butler Counties. He began to learn the carpenter's trade in 1840 with Johnson Smith, an old settler of Liberty Township, with whom he worked for three years. He followed his trade for several years. He was married in 1848 to Caroline V., a daughter of James Robinson, of Berkley County, Va. By her he has four children: Amanda J., E. L., S. E. and Mary. He settled in Liberty Township in 1849, and engaged in the mercantile business until 1856, when he moved to what was then Irishtown, now Pardoe, where he continued in the same business until the commencement of the late war, when he moved to a farm and kept the post-office, then known as Irishtown, for three years. In connection with his other business he dealt extensively in cattle for about twenty years. In 1881 he engaged in the lumber business, and in 1883 moved to Mercer, where he still continues in the same business. While on the farm he served a term as justice of the peace. He has been a member of the State Board of Agriculture for eight years, and was one of the organizers of the Mercer Central Agricultural Society, of which he has been both president and director. For ten years he has served as a director of the Pymatuning Fire Insurance Company, and is now its treasurer. He has always been a strong Republican.

DR. S. S. MEHARD (deceased).—The following appeared in the Mercer Republican a few days after the death of Dr. Mehard: "On last Sunday morning about half-past one o'clock Dr. S. S. Mehard, tired of the struggle of life, calmly heard and answered the summons that called him from its battle. The family were astir, but he knew the significance of the hour better than they. As his son entered the room and raised his father from the couch, the latter extended his hand and quietly whispered, 'My son, this is death.' As soon as his sister was called he appeared contented, relapsing into a slumber so soft and natural that the watchers did not know whether it was the repose of sleep or repose of death until the breathing ceased. Dr. Mehard had been gradually declining for years. A bronchial affection induced him to lay aside the practice of his profession a decade ago, but such was his vigor that he daily sat in his office and refused to become an invalid. A week ago, on Monday last, he parted from his son James, and the news of his death that followed Tuesday evening was a greater shock than his weakness could support. He retired to rest on Tuesday night never to rise again. Dr. S. S. Mehard was a public man, and as such occupies a place in our local history. He was the son of James Mehard, who emigrated from Larne, County of Antrim, Ireland, to this State, in 1818. He was a millwright by trade, and although his education was such as he gave himself, he had cultivated a mind that was naturally strong and sound, to a degree that enabled him to exert a wide influence. His son, Samuel S., was born in Harmony, Butler County, in 1822. He received an exceptional education in those days at the old Darlington Academy, and the Western University at Pittsburgh. Studious in his habits and ambitious, he began the study of medicine with Dr. Mowry, of Allegheny. Thence he went to the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, where he was graduated in 1847. Coming back to Butler County he practiced at Sunbury for five years, and then again returned to take an extra course in Philadelphia. In 1853, on the decease of Dr. Baskin, Dr. Mehard came to this county. Thoroughly grounded in the science of his profession he gained and held a large practice. He was a true lover of his art, kept abreast of the times and enjoyed a superior reputation as a physician. Having secured a competence, however, he was content to establish his son James in his position, and gradually shifted the burden of his practice to the latter's able shoulders, until he at length retired from practice altogether. His is the oft repeated tale of human existence. He lived a busy, useful life, and made himself a name. To-day he sleeps with his fathers. Glad to sleep, for he sleeps the sleep 'He giveth His beloved.' "

JAMES WALKER MEHARD, M. D., deceased, was born in Allegheny City, Penn., April 17, 1848, and was the eldest son of Dr. Samuel S. Mehard, who is mentioned elsewhere. In 1853 he came with his father's family to Mercer. He attended the Mercer public schools until 1865, when he entered Westminster College, from which institution he graduated in 1869. He began the study of medicine under the direction of his father, and was graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1872. He entered upon the practice of his profession with his father, and continued to practice medicine until the time of his death, which occurred September 25, 1883. He left a wife and three children. The Mercer Republican of September 27, 1883, contained the following in referring to his death. "Thoroughly trained, keen of perception, sound in judgment, fertile in resource, bold in action, he knew the course to follow and had confidence to follow it. Success attended him in all his operations, and to-day, though only thirty-five, he leaves vacant the presidential chairs of board of pension and medical association of the county. High strung, at times almost imperious, he had a sensitive nature and a warm heart. He had his faults; who has not? But he had virtues that made him tenderly beloved by those who learned to know him, and abilities that snatched his memory from oblivion. In this short and incomplete career he has wrought a work that will live after him. It shows the design of a master mind, and, half done, the ruin speaks eloquently of man's soaring ambition and the vanity of human aims. Neither in remembrance nor spirit will he be buried." "For now he lives in fame though not in life."

S. S. MEHARD, president judge of Mercer County, was born December 18, 1849, in Sunbury, Butler Co., Penn. His father, Dr. S. S. Mehard, is mentioned elsewhere. The judge received his literary education in the Mercer schools and Westminster College, entering that institution in 1866, from which he graduated in 1869. He then registered as a law student under Hon. John Trunkey, late of the supreme bench of Pennsylvania. He was under Judge Trunkey's tuition until September, 1872, when he was admitted to the bar, and associated himself with Hon. James A. Stranahan, and remained in that connection until he sailed on a tour through England, Ireland, Scotland and Germany in May, 1874. He spent some time as a student of jurisprudence at the University of Heidelberg, Germany, after which he continued his tour of the Continent, and returned home in the summer of 1875. He resumed his law practice with Mr. Stranahan until December 8, 1883, when he was appointed by Gov. Pattison president judge of Mercer County, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge A. McDermitt. He held this position until January, 1885, when he took the oath of office by virtue of his election to the same position. He was married July 1, 1880, to Ida Augusta Brown, daughter of the late Judge George H. Brown, of Somerville, N. J. Mrs. Mehard died May 29, 1883, leaving one son, Churchill Brown Mehard. The Judge is a Democrat and a member of the Second United Presbyterian Church, and one of Mercer County's most worthy citizens.

HON. S. H. MILLER, attorney, was born in Cool Spring Township, Mercer Co., Penn., and is a son of William Miller, one of the pioneers of this county. He attended the common schools of his native township until he was twelve years of age, when he entered Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn., from which institution he was graduated in 1860. He became the owner of the Mercer Dispatch in 1862, and edited and published that journal until 1870.

He read law with Hon. Samuel Griffith, and was admitted to the Mercer bar in the fall of 1870. He at once entered upon the practice of his chosen profession, and to-day ranks among the leading attorneys in Northwestern Pennsylvania. He was elected in 1880 as Congressman for the Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania District, composed of Mercer, Butler and Crawford Counties, and served in the Forty-seventh and Forty-eight Congresses, from 1881 to March 4, 1885, with credit and ability.

J. C. MILLER, attorney, was born October 27, 1855, in Wolf Creek Township, this county. His parents, James and Lodusky (Baker) Miller, were born, the former in Findley Township and the latter in Venango County, Penn. The father died in January, 1888. Our subject attended the common schools until he was fourteen years of age, when he went to a select school at Grove City. He taught in the common schools for eleven years, beginning at the age of fifteen. In 1874 he entered Westminster College at New Wilmington, Lawrence Co., Penn. He began reading law with James A. Stranahan in 1878. Judge Mehard was also one of his instructors in the study of his chosen profession. In 1882 he was employed by County Prothonotary S. C. Simon-ton, Jr., where he remained until May 1, 1885. February 14, 1884, he was admitted to the bar of Mercer County, and has practiced ever since. During William Jack's term as county clerk Mr. Miller acted as second deputy clerk. He was the Democratic nominee for the office of prothonotary of Mercer County in 1888. He has always taken a deep interest in politics, having been chairman and secretary of the Democratic county committee. He is serving as a member of the school board.

WILLIAM R. MONTGOMERY, druggist, a son of Charles and Elizabeth (Cus-tard) Montgomery, was born in 1836 in Mercer County, and was reared and educated at Sheakleyville, Penn. Early in life he entered the employ of T. G. Van Lew, a merchant of Sheakleyville. In 1862 he was appointed county commissioner's clerk, filling the position for some six years. He then engaged in his present business. He was elected in 1880 a member of the State Legis-lature. He has also filled the office of councilman of Mercer. He married in 1858 Miss M. E. Powell, of Crawford County, Penn., who died in 1876, leaving three children: Alexander L. R., Charles L. and Minnie A. He mar-ried for his second wife Miss Rebecca Nelson, and by this marriage they have one child, Nellie. Mr. Montgomery is a Republican.

A. B. Moon, hotel keeper, was born in Mercer County, January 25, 1842, to George and Catharine (Crills) Moon, of German extraction. The father was a stone cutter the greater part of his active life. He helped to build the old stone jail at Mercer, and also the stone house where the Robinson family now reside. The parents had nine children: Elizabeth, married Samuel Boston; Lewis, married Mary Hosack; George W., married Mary Paxson; David, mar-ried Miss Sarah Jane Black; Nancy, married William Ringer; Sarah Jane, married Hugh Gordon; A. B., John, married Emma C. Webb; Cyrus, mar-ried Sarah Bestwick. The parents were Presbyterians, and the father was a Whig. A. B. Moon attended the country schools until he was thirteen years of age. He then began to learn the carpenter's trade with his brother, George, going to school each winter until twenty-one years of age. He followed his trade for twenty-seven years. In 1876 he built his present elegant residence and hotel. He was married in 1867 to Catharine J. Smith, of Butler County, by whom he has one son, S. B. Moon, who was educated at the Mercer graded or high schools, read medicine, and is now at the Homœopathic College of Chicago. Mr. Moon has been a member of the town council, and is a Demo-cratic. He and wife and son belong to the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

GEORGE A. MORRIS, miller for William Houston, was born November 6, 1841, in Mercer County, Penn. His parents, George and Harriet (Winton) Morris, are mentioned in another part of this work. Mr. Morris was educated in the common schools, and worked while a boy with his father in a mill. In 1874 he bought a half interest in a mill then owned by his father. This he operated until 1882, when he was employed by Mr. Houston, and two years later he was made the head miller, which position he now holds. He was married to Mary M. Hosack, whose family history is written in another part of this work. By his union he has one daughter, Anna M. He is a Republican, and he, wife and daughter are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

J. B. MOWRY, boot and shoe dealer, was born August 23, 1851, in Mercer, to Thomas and Ellen H. (Beatty) Mowry, natives of this county. The father was born in 1824, and was a son of John B. Mowry. Thomas Mowry had two children, J. B. and Mary, married W. P. Ealy. Thomas was a merchant of Mercer for some years. J. B. Mowry was educated in the Mercer schools, and at the age of seventeen he entered the drug store of P. E. Shipler & Co. as a clerk. In 1871 he engaged in the boot and shoe business in Mercer, under the firm name of J. W. Bell & Co., and in the spring of 1872 R. R. Wright became his partner, who sold to Mr. Mowry in 1874. Since then he has done business in his own name, and conducts one of the largest boot and shoe houses in Mercer. He was married to Elda E., a daughter of Robert Logan, by whom he has two children, Mintie and John L. He has served in the borough council and is a director of the Mercer schools. He is also a director of the First National Bank of Mercer, and together with his wife belongs to the First Presbyterian Church.

DANIEL NELSON, retired farmer, was born October 1, 1815, in Huntingdon County, Penn., to John and Margaret (Graff) Nelson, natives of the same county. The former was of Irish extraction and the latter of German. The parents came to Mercer County in the spring of 1837, and settled in what is now Springfield Township. Here they bought land, on which they died. Daniel attended the country schools of his boyhood days. At the age of twenty-three years he was married to Mary, a daughter of George Webb, an early settler of his county. He took his bride to a farm of 140 acres given him by his father. After having improved his farm he, in 1860, sold and came to Mercer, and bought a building which stood on the present site of the Whistler House, and there kept hotel for five years. While thus engaged five of his children died within thirty days with diphtheria. Their names were Nancy, Mary A., Harriet, Charles and Frank, and they are buried side by side in the cemetery with their graves marked with marble slabs. The remainder of Mr. Nelson's children were: Margaret, married William F. Thomas; Melissa, Catharine, George, Caroline and Rebecca. He bought and improved property in Rochester, Beaver County, where he lived for two years. He was engaged in the dry goods business at West Middlesex with a Mr. Rossler, the stock of goods having been removed by him from Rochester, where he had been engaged in business for one year. In one year Mr. Nelson bought the stock and removed it to Prime's Corners, and after one year there he bought the store of Adam Ketler, at London, Springfield Township, where he remained for two years. He gave the business to his daughter Catharine, and came again to Mercer in 1873, and bought his present residence, where he lives a somewhat retired life. His wife is a member of the First Presbyterian Church and he is a Republican.

JOHN W. NICKUM, liveryman, was born September 3, 1854, in Mercer. His father, Thomas J. Nickum, was born in Emmitsburg, Frederick County, Md., and his parents, John and Elizabeth (Weaver) Nickum, were natives of Maryland, Elizabeth having been born in Emmitsburg, Md.; their children were: Margaret, the wife of J. G. Kline, of Mercer, Penn.; T. J., of Mercer; Lewis S., of New Castle, Penn., and Joseph B., of Mercer. John died in Emmitsburg. Thomas J., the father of our subject, came to Mercer in 1842 with his uncle, Lewis Weaver, for whom he clerked in a store until 1847, when he began to learn the printer's trade in the office of the Mercer County Whig. In 1851 he went back to his native town, and soon after brought his mother and family to this place. Here his mother died September 30, 1888, at the age of eighty-nine years. Mr. T. J. Nickum, with Hon. J. H. Robinson, bought the Mercer County Whig, December 11, 1854, and published the paper until December, 1866, and sold to Thomas Irwin. During the war Mr. N. was appointed United States Assessor for Division No. 5, of the Twentieth District, and served four years. In November, 1885, he was elected jury commissioner for three years, and in February, 1886, was elected constable for Mercer, and is serving in both offices. He was married December 25, 1851, to Hannah M., daughter of Thomas Rogers, by whom he reared nine children: Ella, John W., Thomas, Eva, Jessie, Charles F., Minnie, George M. and Flora. He served as deputy sheriff under Flem Smith and Penrose Leech. John W. Nickum was educated in the Mercer schools. He began for himself in running a milk wagon in company with Pack Kerr, who lived on the farm now owned and occupied by B. A. Williams. In 1871 he sold his interest, and with two horses and two buggies he began a career of a liveryman and stock dealer, which has grown until he is known all over Northwestern Pennsylvania as the possessor of an extensive business, second to none in the country. Some time after he entered business he erected a fine stable at a cost of $7,075, which was later destroyed by fire. He subsequently rebuilt at a cost of $6,500. He married Ida M. Brown, daughter of D. J. Brown, the present proprietor of the St. Cloud Hotel, of Mercer. By her he has the following children: Katie B. and Nellie. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and K. of H., and has served as burgess and councilman of Mercer two terms each. He is a Republican, as is also his father. His wife is a member of the Episcopal Church.

JAMES ORR, lumber dealer and contractor, was born August 24, 1843, in Jackson Township, Mercer County, son of William and Nancy (McCafferty) Orr, natives of Ireland. The parents settled in Jackson Township in 1843, where they still reside. Their children are: John, James, William, Jane, Hannah, Nancy (deceased), Eliza, Reed (deceased), Belle (deceased), Caroline (deceased), Reed (deceased), Mamie. Our subject was educated in the country schools of Jackson Township. He began for himself in a coal bank at small wages. During the years 1864-65 he was employed on a farm in California. He returned in the spring of 1866, and engaged at the carpenter's trade with A. B. Moon, with whom he remained for eight years. In 1872 he was operating a store at Bethel, this county. One year later he began dealing in lumber and contracting. In 1882 he established his extensive lumber yard at Mercer. Since 1873 he has given his entire time to his present business, and has built many excellent buildings in Mercer County, prominent among which are the Grove City College and Orr's Opera House at Mercer. He was married in 1871 to Miss Alice, daughter of William Thompson, of Sheakleyville. By this union he has two children, Harry W. and Nina M. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., K. of H., and, with his wife, belongs to the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a Democrat and one of the prosperous and enterprising citizens of Mercer County.

ROBERT ORR, boot and shoe dealer, was born in this county to Elias and Margaret (Holliday) Orr, natives, the father of Springfield Township, Mercer County, and the mother of what is now Lawrence County. The mother died in Fairview Township January 1, 1886, after having blessed her husband with eight children: Mary (married Alexander Black, of Springfield Township), Robert, Beriah (lives in Fairview Township), Sarah (a maiden lady), James W., Samuel H., John M. and Margaret, all of whom live in Mercer County. Robert, our subject, was educated in the common schools and was taught how to farm. Early in the beginning of the war he responded to the call for defenders of the Union, enlisting in Company K, Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nearly four years. He was slightly wounded at the battle of Bull Run, and participated in the battle of Gettysburg and many others with the Army of the Potomac. He was married to Mary Paden, one of six living children of John Paden, of Delaware Township: Eliza (the wife of D. W. Webster, of California), Margaret (the wife of Gilbert Johnson, of Wolf Creek Township), William (a merchant of Greenville), Rebecca (the wife of George E. Tanner, of Mercer), and Maria (married C. W. Gamble, a merchant of Fairview). Further mention will be found elsewhere. Mr. and Mrs. Orr have five living children: L. W., John P., Samuel J., Olive and Robert M. Mr. Orr was elected county treasurer in 1881 and served one term. In 1885 he purchased a stock of boots and shoes of W. W. Thorn and removed them to his present room, where he carries on a prosperous business. He gives his own personal attention to his business, and like all who love their vocation is successful. He is assisted in an efficient way by his sons. He and his wife belong to the Second Presbyterian Church, and he is a staunch Republican.

ANDREW J. PALM, editor and proprietor of the Mercer Western Press, was born in Sandy Creek Township, Mercer County, June 21, 1848. His father, William Palm, is mentioned elsewhere. Our subject was educated at the New Lebanon Academy, Jamestown Seminary and at the Edinboro Normal, Erie County, Penn., graduating at the last named in 1871. He taught school a number of terms, and from 1878 to 1884 was county superintendent of schools for Mercer County. He began the publication of the Teachers' Advocate in Mercer in 1879, which was afterward consolidated with the Allegheny Teacher of Allegheny City and the Educational Voice of Pittsburgh, and a new monthly issued in their stead called the Educational Review. This afterward passed into the ownership of Mr. Palm, who changed it to the name of Pennsylvania Teacher. It was sold in 1884. In the last mentioned year Mr. Palm took charge of the Western Press, of which he is the owner of seven-eighths. He was married in 1875 to Lena Counselman, who was born in French Creek Township, this county, in 1857. Her father, Joel Counselman, was born in Dauphin County, Penn., in 1820, and her mother, Sarah (Clinger) Counselman, was born in Venango County, Penn., in 1824. By his union Mr. Palm has four children: Charles O., Bessie, Ida B. and Lorena. In politics he is a Democrat.

ANDREW PATTERSON, deceased, was born in Cumberland County, Penn., November 15, 1792. He was one of three children: Elizabeth, Andrew and Robert. The three came to Mercer. One Samuel Patterson came to Mercer about the year 1800, and engaged in the tannery business near where the North Western Hotel now stands, and when Andrew came he joined Samuel in this tannery. The first money Andrew Patterson made in Mercer County was $5 for tanning a bear-skin. He afterward engaged in the mercantile business, beginning about the year 1811, in a building where is now located Meyer's restaurant. It was a log structure, and, although somewhat demolished, is still standing. His principal trade was with the numerous Indians, exchanging with them gunpowder for lead, which was to him a great wonder as to where these red men obtained this lead. He continued in the mercantile business in Mercer for about fifty-eight years, and was married in 1818 to Eliza Brown, daughter of Alexander Brown, who was captured by the Indians near Pittsburgh. Mr. Patterson settled at marriage in a frame building just west of where the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank now stands. This building is standing and in the possession of the family. He soon after transferred his stock of goods to a portion of his dwelling, and there did business until a few years prior to his death, which occurred in August, 1869. His first wife died in 1840, having blessed him with the following children: Mary, died young; Elizabeth, married Dr. D. H. A. McLean; Imelda, married James McGill; Eveline, married Dr. G. W. Baskin; Robert, lives in Beaver County; Helen and Emma, both died young. He was again married on October 15, 1850, to Margaret Martin, daughter of John Martin, of Cumberland County. By her he had one son, John A. B. His widow is living in Mercer, and is an excellent Christian lady. Andrew Patterson, Sr., the father of our subject, married Elizabeth Dixon April 10, 1771. Samuel, his son, was born August 14, 1775, and Nathan, another son, was born September 15, 1773. Andrew, Sr., was married a second time, that event being March 6, 1788, to Mary Wilson. By this union he had three children, Elizabeth, Robert and Andrew, mentioned above. Elizabeth was born March 14, 1798; Robert, born December 19, 1790, and Andrew, birth given above. Andrew Patterson, our subject, bought from the settlers around Mercer large quantities of home-made linen, with which he purchased seven acres of land, on a portion of which the residence of James A. Stranahan now stands. The Pattersons were strong Presbyterians, and Andrew gave his assistance to everything that had a tendency to build up Mercer or the surrounding country.

GEORGE E. PATTERSON, deceased, was born January 21, 1851, in Wolf Creek Township, this county, where his father settled in 1845. His father died several years ago, but his mother still lives on the old homestead. Besides George there were of the family three sons and one daughter, all of whom are living. After attending the common schools George went to the academy at Grove City, then taught by Rev. Dickson and wife. He taught a number of terms in Venango and Mercer Counties, and then entered the university at Wooster, Ohio, where he graduated in 1876. After this he was principal of Sandy Lake schools for a year, and the two years following conducted an academy at Wurtemburg, Lawrence County. While there he registered as a law student with D. S. Morris, Esq., of New Castle, and was admitted to the bar in 1880. Soon afterward he presented himself for admission to the Mercer bar, and after passing a highly creditable examination was admitted. He was elected district attorney in 1884. In July, 1886, he was married to Miss Susan Given, of Wooster, Ohio, whose father, Hon. William Given, resigned his position as judge of Wayne County, Ohio, to enter the Union army. The Mercer Western Press said the following editorially in giving an account of his death, which occurred December 9, 1887: "District Attorney George E. Patterson, whose death was hourly expected when we went to press last week, died at 3 o'clock on Friday morning. Not since the death of Judge McDermitt has the decease of any man in the county caused so profound and general a feeling of regret. For almost three years he had served the county faithfully and ably as public prosecutor, and the people felt that their interests were faithfully guarded by one whose hands were never stained with a bribe. While he was not disposed to be severe against the wrong-doer who was more unfortunate than wicked, yet no criminal ever came before Mr. Patterson hoping to escape the penalty of the law by compromising his case to the personal advantage of the district attorney. Considered in every respect, he was, perhaps, the most promising young lawyer at our bar. Though he had been admitted but seven years, it has been more than once remarked in our hearing that, if he kept his health and habits of mind and body, he would be the next Republican nominee for judge of Mercer County. He was a diligent student, and had a mind trained to habits of study. He was clear and logical, and the theory of his case as presented before the court was always reasonable and consistent. In addition to his being a close student and a good reasoner, he was a fluent speaker, using clear, strong and correct language. Socially, he was an agreeable, courteous gentleman. While not much given to those light pleasantries, by which too many are inclined to judge a man's social qualities, he was a good conversationalist, and one with whom it was a pleasure to converse. Morally, he was one whose example was worthy of imitation."

BEVAN PEARSON, one of the prominent citizens of Mercer County, was the fourth son of John and Anna Pearson. He was born in Darby, Delaware Co., Penn., on the 26th of December, 1773. His brothers and sisters were Charles, Benjamin, Thomas and Anna B. His father having married a second time to a Miss Johnson, he had four step-brothers and sisters, viz.: George, Hannah, John B. and Margaret. Of these brothers and sisters Thomas, Anna B. (Garrett), George and Margaret all removed to Mercer County and became the progenitors of all the Pearsons living now in Mercer or Lawrence Counties. Bevan Pearson enjoyed all the advantages afforded in his early days by the schools of Eastern Pennsylvania. At the age of twenty-two he married, in 1795, Miss Anna Warner, by whom he had the following children: William Warner, deceased; Henry, deceased; John J., late of Harrisburg, Penn. (see sketch in Bench and Bar chapter); Sarah W., born August 14, 1803, still living in Mercer; Thomas W., died young; Benjamin B., deceased; Thomas W., second child by that name, deceased; Anna B., still living at Meadville, the wife of Judge Gaylord Church. Mr. Pearson removed to Neshannock Township, Mercer County, in 1805, and remained there till 1809, when he became a resident of Mercer. In 1808 he was elected a member of the Legislature, and in the following year was appointed to the various offices connected with the court. He was Burgess of Mercer for many years, and was identified with the growth of the Mercer Academy.

JOHNSON PEARSON, attorney, was born in what is now Lawrence County (then Mercer), January 10, 1819, to George and Sarah (Reynolds) Pearson. The father was born in Delaware County, Penn., where he learned the tanner and currier's trade. He came to this county in 1803, and in 1806 he went down the Ohio River, working at his trade, as far as New Orleans. Thence to Charleston, S. C., and there followed his trade for some time; returned to his native county, and in 1810 he located on a farm in what is now Lawrence County. He married Sarah Reynolds, daughter of James Reynolds, who was connected with an old forge situated in the present limits of Lawrence County, which was one of the first forges west of Pittsburgh. In 1854 the father of Johnson Pearson removed with his family to New Castle, where he principally retired from labor. He was reared in the Quaker faith, and was one of the earliest advocates of the Whig party. When eighty years old he marched on double-quick with a militia company, organized as home guards during the Rebellion, much to the amusement and delight of the by-standers. He was the father of eight children: James, died in 1857; Thomas, Charles, George, Hannah R., married to James R. Shaw; Johnson, John and another, of whom the last two died in infancy. The original Pearsons immigrated to America from the west of England with William Penn. Johnson Pearson was educated in the log cabin schools and acquired the knowledge of geography and English grammar by his own efforts, his early teachers being unqualified to teach those branches. His boyhood days were spent on a farm, and at the age of eighteen years he entered Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., where he graduated in 1840 with the degree of A. B., followed by the degree of A. M. a few years afterward. September 4, 1840, he came to Mercer and began reading law with the firm of Pearson & Stewart, and was admitted to the bar in 1843. He has practiced at Mercer ever since. He was married March 2, 1846, to Miss Sarah J. Templeton, daughter of Thomas and Nancy (Hezlep) Templeton, of Scotch and Irish extraction, respectively. Mrs. Pearson died in 1860, leaving four children: George, graduated at Harvard University, read law with his father, and was admitted to the bar in 1872, elected clerk of the Pennsylvania Senate, and later recording clerk in the Pennsylvania House, afterward elected chief clerk of the same, and is now private secretary to Gov. James A. Beaver; James, is a miner in Colorado; Eva, married J. G. Elliott, an attorney of Mercer, and Charles, engaged in the hardware firm of Fruit, Ohl & Co., Sharon. Johnson Pearson was appointed deputy attorney-general of Pennsylvania by Gov. Johnston, and served two years. When the office of district attorney was established he was elected to that position, and served for three years. He was at one time the regular nominee by the Republicans for president judge of Mercer County, or rather the Mercer district, and was defeated because of an independent ticket being put in the field. As Mr. Pearson figures largely in the historical chapters of Mercer County, it is unnecessary to repeat it here.

ALBERT C. RAY, local editor of the Mercer Dispatch and Republican, was born in Clarion County, Penn., February 6, 1847. He was reared on the farm and received a good education. He began teaching school at the age of seventeen years. He began learning the printer's trade in 1869 under the direction of Ray & Morrison, of Sharon, serving three years. He served as clerk in the Mercer post-office for four years, and held the same position at Sharon post-office three years. Since June, 1882, he has been engaged in editorial work, a year and a half as editor and proprietor of the Grove City Telephone, and the remainder of the time has been with the Mercer Republican and Dispatch and Republican. He married Miss Caroline G. McKean, of Mercer. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is a Republican.

JAMES HENRY ROBINSON, deceased attorney, was born in Hubbard, Trumbull Co., Ohio, May 29, 1826. His father, Thomas Robinson, was born in Ireland, and died in Perry Township, Mercer County, in 1851, and his mother, Mary (Mayers) Robinson, was also a native of Ireland, and died in Findley Township, this county, in 1870, the mother of seven sons. Our subject was educated in the old Mercer Academy, and was graduated from Washington College in 1849 with high honors. He taught school during his early days and clerked in a store. He studied law under instructions of Hon. William Stewart, and was admitted to the bar in 1852. He served as district attorney two terms, and was State senator from 1859 to 1863. He was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, a Whig and Republican. A further mention is made of his business career, official positions and abilities in the chapter on the Mercer Bar. He was married July 5, 1853, to Miss Eliza Mills, born in County Tyrone, Ireland, July 12, 1827, daughter of Robert and Mary (Moon) Mills, both natives of Ireland. By this union the deceased was blessed with the following children: John, Mary, Robert, Henry and William J.

WILLIAM G. ROSE.—The subject of this sketch was born in Mercer County, September 23, 1829, the youngest of eleven children. His parents were James and Martha (McKinley) Rose, the former of English and the latter of Scotch-Irish descent. The family has been a patriotic one, the father and four of his brothers serving in the War of 1812, while ten of his grandsons aided in suppressing the rebellion of 1861-65. The subject of our sketch served three months as a private in West Virginia. His early education was secured in the country school, he working on the farm in summer and attending school in winter. At the age of seventeen he taught his first school, and continued the occupation for several years, meantime attending an academy, where he enlarged his educational outfit by mastering the rudiments of English and giving some attention to Latin, Greek and the higher mathematics. At the age of twenty-three he was able to accomplish his cherished purpose of entering upon the study of the law. Entering the office of Hon. William Stewart, of Mercer, he prosecuted his studies vigorously, and was admitted to the bar April 7, 1855. He entered upon practice in Mercer, but soon became interested as one of the editors and proprietors of the Independent Democrat. He was soon led into the Republican party, which elected him for two terms to the State Legislature, commencing in 1857. In 1860 he was chosen a delegate to the National Republican Convention, which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the presidency. In 1865 he removed to Cleveland, and gave his attention to the purchase and sale of real estate. He made friends rapidly. In 1877 he was elected mayor of the city, the duties of which he performed with great efficiency and acceptance for two years. In 1883 he was unanimously nominated as lieutenant-governor of Ohio on the ticket with Judge J. B. Foraker, the present governor. Owing to the complications growing out of prohibitory and license amendments the ticket was defeated by 13,000 votes, but he came nigh being elected. In Cuyahoga County his vote exceeded that of the party by 3,000 votes. He is a courageous, conscientious, public-spirited citizen, loved and respected by all.

THOMAS R. SHERIFF, clothing merchant, was born June 17, 1825. His father, James Sheriff, was born April 3, 1800, in Allegheny County, Penn. He married Christina M. Rodgers, born July 29, 1803, to Thomas and Christina (Morrison) Rodgers. The Morrisons were natives of Scotland, and while Thomas Rodgers, who was born in Pennsylvania, was in Scotland settling some estate he became acquainted with his future wife, whom he brought back with him, and settled in Virginia, and when Ohio became a State they located in Galia County, that State. They were the parents of nine children: Christina; James R.; Elizabeth, married Samuel Maxon; John A.; Margaret, married Thomas Pearson; Mary Jane, Romaine and Isabella. Thomas Rodgers served as associate judge of Galia County, Ohio, for over thirty years, and with his consort was connected with the Presbyterian Church. James Sheriff was married June 18, 1824, in Gallipolis, Ohio, and came to Mercer July 15, 1825, and with his brother, John Sheriff, opened up a store in the old Amberson corner, and soon after moved to a building where the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank now stands. About the year 1827 they located their store on the site of Thomas R. Sheriff's clothing house, where he remained, engaged in business for many years. He died August 16, 1870. His widow survives, and blessed her husband with three children: Thomas R., infant, died unnamed, and John J., died at the age of two years. James Sheriff was a tinner and coppersmith, and many of the old distillery "tills" that were used in this county were made by him. He made the last one in 1840, and gave his son, Thomas R., $10 to defray his expenses to Erie City to attend the convention that nominated William Henry Harrison for President. This was the beginning of the quiet political career of Thomas R. Sheriff. Thomas was educated in the old Mercer Academy, and worked in his father's store, and at the age of seventeen years he entered business for himself, it being a grocery and bakery stand, located near Dr. Yeager's present office. He then, after selling that business, located where his present clothing house stands, and for years was engaged in the general dry goods business, from which he drifted into the clothing trade. From 1861 to 1865 he had James W. Braden, now deceased, as a partner. He was married May 28, 1846, to Celia M. McBurney, daughter of James McBurney, by whom he has three children: Christina, married John K. Lindsey; Mary, married William M. Burwell, and Eva C. He is one of the original directors of the First National Bank of Mercer, is a Republican, and he and family belong to the Second United Presbyterian Church.

CAPT. P. E. SHIPLER was born December 7, 1840, in Mercer, son of Joseph and Mary (Stewart) Shipler, natives of Westmoreland and Mercer Counties, respectively, and the parents of two children who grew up: P. E. and H. N.; the latter became the wife of William M. Dight. Our subject was educated in the Mercer Academy and Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. He enlisted in Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, as a private, and was soon promoted to captain, and served as such for three years with the Army of the Potomac. On his return from the war he engaged in the drug business under the firm name of P. E. Shipler & Co. This he sold to W. R. Montgomery & Sons, and for awhile engaged in the coal business. In 1884 he was elected justice of the peace by the citizens of Mercer. He was married in 1861 to Mary Hirst, by whom he has two children: W. H. and Joseph S. Capt. Shipler is a Republican, a member of the F. & A. M. and the G. A. R., and, with his wife, belongs to the Presbyterian Church.

REV. EDWARD SMALL (deceased) was born December 24, 1811, in Washington County, N. Y. He was one of seven, the children of George and Jennet (Lourie) Small. Edward attended the common schools, academies at Salem and Cambridge, in his native county, and graduated at Union College, Schenectady, in 1833. During the four years following he attended the Associate Theological Seminary at Canonsburg, Penn. In 1837 he was licensed to preach, and in June of that year started on a missionary tour through the West on horseback. He held meetings at Mohegan, Mansfield, Bucyrus, Renoldsburg, Columbus, Massier's Creek, all in Ohio; Bloomington, Princeton, Burnett's Creek, all in Indiana, and on his return trip at Massier's Creek, Kenton, Zanesville, Cambridge, in Ohio, and thence to Pittsburgh. He left his horse at Carlisle, Penn., and subsequently preached at Newark, N. J., various places in Upper and Lower Canada and Philadelphia. In October, 1838, he came to Mercer County, and in January, 1839, accepted calls to the pastorate of Springfield and Rocky Springs congregations; these he resigned April 3, 1861, and retired, after which time he did no ministerial work except to preach occasional sermons and conduct funerals. Mr. Small was a man of strong convictions, and earnest in the support of his views. Religiously he was educated in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church, and was exceedingly strict in adherence to his teaching. Though somewhat characteristic in manner, yet he was a citizen of high esteem, strictly honest and upright in all his transactions. He lived full of faith, and his death is but a passing to a realization of that which it was his life work to teach. He was married in 1839 to Miss Mary A. Hanna, of Cadiz, Ohio, who survives him, with four children, viz.: Mary, the wife of W. H. Adams, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. E. H.; Nellie, the wife of John Robinson, Esq., cashier of the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank, and Emma, the wife of John F. Davitt, of McKeesport.

GEORGE KLINE SMITH, merchant, was born in Mercer, February 10, 1841. He and his son are the only male descendants of Col. James Smith, one of the early Indian pioneers, whose history may be found in "The Indian Wars of the United States," by John Frost, LL. D., published by Derby & Miller, and also in No. 5, Ohio Valley Historical Series, by William Darlington, of Pittsburgh, published by Robert Clark & Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio. James was George K. Smith's great-grandfather. Jonathan Smith was his grandfather and William M. Smith, the father of G. K. Smith, born September 29, 1806, was the first child born in Mercer. William M. Smith married Catharine Kline, who was born in Washington County, and brought to Mercer County by her father, George Kline, in 1828. By her he had five children: Harriet Patterson Smith (deceased, married William Forrest), Elizabeth Pettitt, Jonathan Parker (who was captain of Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and led his company through the seven days' fighting before Richmond, Sharpsburg, South Mountain, and the regiment at Antietam [see Bates' History, Volume I], was mortally wounded at the second battle of Fredericksburg, January 6, 1863, and died at Seminary Hospital, Georgetown); George K. and Theodore W. (deceased). The father was a tanner, followed that business for thirty years, and then opened the first leather store in Mercer. G. K. Smith was educated in the Mercer Academy and public schools. He learned the trade of a tanner, and was a clerk for three years in the store of Maj. T. Graham, in Mercer. In 1863 he went to California, and mined in that State and Arizona Territory until 1865, when he returned home, and, after serving one year as constable, clerked until 1869, when he entered the general dry goods business, which he still continues. He married Emma F., a daughter of Irwin Sampson, of Wilmington, Penn. By her he has two children, Helen E. and George Irwin. He is interested in the gas and water works companies and the Mercer Creamery. In 1887 he was a candidate for county treasurer on the Prohibition ticket. He and his wife are members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

JOHN E. SMITH, agricultural implement dealer, was born in 1864, in Lawrence County, Penn. His parents, H. P. and Harriet (McDowell) Smith, were natives, the former of Lawrence and the latter of Mercer County. The parents had three children: Alva (married Miss Clara Whitney), John E. (unmarried) and Laura (married Albert Peters). The parents are living in West Middlesex. Our subject came to Mercer County when eighteen years of age, engaged in the implement business for W. R. Packard, and in 1885 formed a partnership with W. G. Jones in the general agricultural and farm implement business. Jones died in 1887, and Mr. Smith has conducted the business ever since. He began to learn his trade at the age of thirteen years with Davidson Bros. at West Middlesex. He worked awhile with W. O. Leslie at Sharon. It will thus be seen that Mr. Smith thoroughly understands his business. He is engaged in the manufacture of bed springs, is a first-class tinner, a good telegraph operator, follows plumbing, gas fitting, manufactures tin-ware, and sells all kinds of implements, general hardware, buggies, robes, harness, etc. He is a member of the Second United Presbyterian Church, is a Republican, and a thorough-going business man who attends strictly to his business, and, like all who love their vocation, is successful.

JOSEPH SYKES, manufacturer of wagons, was born March 28, 1807, in England, to Joseph Sykes. Our subject came to Mercer in 1829. He learned his trade in his native country, and upon locating here opened up a shop on the very lot where his shop now stands. He has continued at the same business all this time. Silvanus Perkins, of Meadville, was in partnership with him from 1835 to 1837. Many of the old wagons used in hauling goods from eastern cities to this part of the State were manufactured by him. He was married in 1831 to Mary A. McCullough, daughter of John and Mary (Wright) McCullough, who lived in what is now Cool Spring Township. Mr. and Mrs. Sykes had the following children: John, died at the age of five years; Thomas B., machinist, married Elizabeth Spearman; Mary, single; Jane, married John Wigstaff; Caroline, married Marion J. Rich, lives in the State of New York; Florence, married Rev. W. H. Wilson, who died in 1886, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Gerrett S., married Anna Gooding, of Massachusetts, and is conducting a preparatory school in Cincinnati, Ohio, having been graduated from Harvard College in 1877, and George T., learned the trade of his father, enlisted in Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served three years, married Sarah E. Shipler, a daughter of Peter Shipler, a native of Westmoreland County, who came to this county in 1820, is now engaged with his father in the manufacture of wagons, and is also engaged in the undertaking business. Joseph Sykes, whose name heads this brief notice, is one of the most respected citizens of Mercer, and is an earnest Christian.

R. A. STEWART, attorney, was born December 30, 1852. His father, Hon. William Stewart, was born in Mercer County in 1810. Robert Stewart, the father of William, was a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and came to this county at an early day, and here died, the father of ten children: Elizabeth, married James Kilgore; William, Mary, married Joseph Shipler; John, Jane, married John Wright; Hannah, married Dr. Henderson; Robert, Margaret, married Maj. A. H. Snyder; Sarah, married Joseph Barnum, and Benjamin. The last named was a class-mate with the Hon. James G. Blaine, at Washington and Jefferson College, and after studying law died in the West. Hon. William Stewart experienced many of the hardships that fell on the early settlers, such as hauling goods from Pittsburgh by team for his father, who was an early merchant at Mercer. He entered Washington and Jefferson College before reaching his majority, and walked many times from that institution to Rochester, where he was met by his brother, John, with a horse on which to ride the remainder of the way home. He was admitted to the bar of Mercer County, the date of which is mentioned in another part of this work, but it was about the time he was twenty-one years of age. He began the practice of his chosen profession in Warren, Penn., where he remained for two years. One day, after having paid all of his little debts, and with $40 left, he made up his mind, just as the hack was leaving for Franklin, to try his fortune in another field. He accordingly took the hack and was soon located in an office at Franklin, where he succeeded in doing considerable business for two years. He then came to Mercer and formed a partnership with Judge John J. Pearson, late of Harrisburg, which continued until Pearson was appointed to the position of judge at the capital of the State. He subsequently had Robert C. Rankin, a Mr. Snyder and J. H. Robinson as respective partners. At the time of his death, which occurred October 17, 1876, he had no partner. He served two terms in the State Senate and two terms in Congress immediately preceding the breaking out of the Rebellion. He stumped the State of Pennsylvania, or rather the western portion, during his latter years, in the interest of the organization of the Republican party. He was somewhat independent in his politics during a few years prior to his demise, because of the natural jobbery complications that will be worked into any party with a large majority in a county or district. He was one of the two candidates on the Republican ticket for president judge of his judicial district when John Trunkey, the regular Democratic nominee, was elected. In 1874 John Pearson was the regular nominee of the Republican party, and Mr. Stewart was brought out as an independent candidate, and A. McDermit, another Democrat, was elected. He was a member of the F. & A. M., and was instrumental in the organization of the Know-nothing party in this section of the State. He married Alletta G. Gaston, born in New Jersey, July 3, 1826, who survives, and by whom he had the following children: Evelina, married A. S. Gillette; Mary, married D. T. Gilman; R. A., William G., deceased; Ida M., deceased; Alletta Y. and George B.

His son Robert was educated in the Mercer schools, and spent one year at Elizabeth, N. J. He then took instructions under an Episcopal minister at Conneautville, and in 1871 he entered the freshman class in Princeton College, where he remained nearly two years, and at the request of his father he left and entered Lafayette College, at Easton, Penn. There he graduated in the classical department in 1874. He at once began reading law with his father and in the office of the Hon. Samuel Griffith and S. R. Mason. He was admitted to the Mercer County bar in 1876, and has since practiced. He married, November 22, 1882, Alice I. Bogle, of Philadelphia, and has three children: Alletta B., Elizabeth H. and William G. He was the projector of the Mercer Republican, which was merged into the Dispatch and Republican. He and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church, and he is a staunch Republican.

HON. JAMES A. STRANAHAN, attorney, was born in Philadelphia, March 7, 1839. His father, Andrew Stranahan, was born in County Down, Ireland. Our subject was educated in the Mercer Union Schools and Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn. His early life was spent on a farm. He was admitted to the Mercer bar in April, 1864, and has continued to practice his chosen profession since. He entered the service of his country as first lieutenant of Company B, United States Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served six months, and was detailed as post adjutant at Cumberland, Md. He was a member of the State Legislature during the winter of 1883-84. He is a Democrat and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

MRS. MARY TEMPLETON, at this time (November, 1888) a resident of Mercer, is the second oldest person in the county. She was born January 1, 1794, at Redstone Fort, on the Monongahela, now called Brownsville, Fayette Co., Penn., the daughter of James Hezlep and Sarah (Bell) Hezlep. She is of Scotch-Irish descent, her ancestors having come from Belfast. In 1796 she came with her parents to what is now New Wilmington, Lawrence (then Mercer) County, where, on June 10, 1819, she married James Williamson. Three children blessed this marriage: Hezlep, George and Sarah. Mr. Williamson dying, she was married a second time, on December 15, 1826, to Thomas Templeton, by whom she had two daughters: Sarah, afterward Mrs. Johnson Pearson, and Mary, at present engaged in millinery business in Mercer. Mrs. Templeton's second husband, Thomas Templeton, was a merchant in Mercer, a justice of the peace at the time of his death, and at one time a candidate for the Legislature. He died comparatively a young man, the date being September 21, 1829, at which time he was but forty-four years of age. Mrs. Templeton and her family have all been identified with the Presbyterian Church.

A. B. THOMPSON, attorney, was born in Lackawannock Township August 27, 1845, and was educated in the common schools and at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn., being graduated in 1870. He taught school in Shenango and Lackawannock Townships and Greenville; began reading law with Johnson Pearson in 1871; was admitted to the bar February 17, 1873, and has practiced ever since. He was elected district attorney in 1875, and served one term. He was married June 15, 1875, to Eliza M., daughter of Alvin Martin, of Sugar Grove, Warren Co., Penn., and by her has had four children: Grace, Leigh (deceased), Loyd and Harold. He is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. His father, Alexander Thompson, was born near Steubenville, Ohio, in 1806, and he, with his parents, Alexander Thompson, Sr., and Margaret (Stett, nee Burgess) Thompson, settled on a farm in Lackawannock Township in 1812, on which both died, senior in 1851 and junior in 1865, and which is still in the possession of the Thompson heirs. The senior Alexander was a native of Ireland and emigrated from County Antrim about 1790, living one year near Philadelphia and in Washington County, Penn., and the balance of the time near Steubenville, Ohio, until he came to this county as stated. He was the father of the following children: James, Elizabeth McMaster, Margaret McNair, Joseph, John, Jane (married John Thompson), Alexander, Jr., and Mary A. Brooks. Alexander Thompson, Jr., and Ann (Love) Thompson were married in 1831, and were blessed with fourteen children; four died in childhood, and those growing up are: Thomas (deceased), Mary A. (married R. W. Clarke), Alex. L. (died in 1872 of disease contracted in army as a member of Company H, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers), Sarah (on homestead), James W. (killed at battle of Gettysburg while serving as sergeant major of the Fifty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers), A. B., Gordon E. (stock and real estate dealer, Big Springs, Neb.), Nancy (a teacher in Union Schools of Mercer), Robert S. (a dealer in coal and farm implements, Atlantic, Iowa), and Samuel J. (on the old homestead). The parents were members of the Lebanon United Presbyterian Church, with which the surviving widow is still connected. Ann Love was born in 1811. Her parents were Thomas Love and Margaret (Gilkey) Love, natives, the former of County Derry, Ireland, settled in Pine Township in 1796, and the latter of Franklin County, Penn. Margaret was reared principally by an uncle in Virginia, who lived at the forks of the James River, and came to Mercer County in 1804 to visit her brothers, James and John Gilkey, and other relatives, and married Thomas Love in 1805. Their children were: Rebecca (married Robert Miller, now a widow in Venango County), Ann, Margaret (married John Dawson, and after his death Joseph Douglass, now deceased), Nancy (married Samuel Lusk), Sarah (a maiden lady) and Matthew. Thomas Love died in August, 1825, and Margaret (Gilkey) Love in June, 1864. John Gilkey was the originator of the Neshannock Irish potatoes, and died near Leesburg, in this county. James Gilkey reared a large family and died in Shenango Township.

J. C. WEIDMAN, physician and surgeon, was born in Juniata County, Penn. He was educated in the common schools, Randolph, N. Y., and Kishouquillis Seminary, Mifflin County, Penn., and read medicine under Dr. H. A. Fisher, of McAllisterville, Juniata County, attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College, and, after five years' practice at McAllisterville, he came to Mercer, where he is building up a good practice. He married Mary, a daughter of the late John Logan, of Mercer.

GEORGE WHARTON, deceased, was born in Philadelphia, and came to this county about 1816. He married in his native city Hannah Jones, daughter of Cadwalader Jones, who came to Mercer County at an early day and settled in what is now Jackson Township. Mr. Jones had the following children: John, Jacob, David, Charles, George, Mary, Rachel, Deborah, Hannah, Elizabeth, Susan, Rebecca and Margaret. George Wharton settled in Jackson Township on land that is in now in possession of some of his heirs. He died July 4, 1852, and his widow died October 17, 1868. Their children were: Robert, died small; John, died October 17, 1882; Mary, married Jacob Mower; Deborah, married Nicholas Mourer; Jacob, married Dora Boyd; Rebecca; Margaret, married Peter Shipler; Hannah, George, married Catherine Hunter, and Susan, married Thomas Vernon. Miss Hannah Wharton began the millinery business in Mercer in 1857 in a small room on Pitt Street. In 1858 she located near where she now carries on an extensive business. She has been very successful, and in 1882 she erected a fine brick block. Her father was a Democrat.

J. G. WHITE, attorney, was born July 15, 1841, in what is now Grove City, to Hiram C. and Martha (Alexander) White, natives of Pine and Wolf Creek Townships, Mercer County, respectively. His mother was a daughter of James Alexander, who came from Scotland at a very early date and located on a farm in Pine Township, where he died. The children of James Alexander were: Mary, single, and now nearly ninety years old; Rebecca, married Archie McCormick, both of whom are dead; Susan, died when seventy-four years old; Margaret, married Luke Voghan; Elizabeth, married Cornelius Graham; Martha, Sarah, died young; Hamilton, died on the old place; Isabella, married William Morrison, and after his death G. W. Brandon. The father of James Alexander was in the War of 1812, and was a Democrat. John White, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Washington County, Penn., and came to this county about 1800, where he settled in Pine Township on the farm where he afterward died. His children were John, James, Samuel, George Washington, Hiram C., Henderson, Rachel, Jane and Elizabeth, all of whom are deceased except Hiram. Grandfather White was in the War of 1812, and had three brothers and one sister: Alexander, Samuel, James (a preacher in the Seceder Church) and Hannah. Our subject was educated in the common schools, at Westminster College and at Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn. He enlisted in Company I, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, in April, 1861, was mustered into service in June, and served a short time. Returning from the war he resumed teaching, taught at Harlansburg, Lawrence County, one year, and then served as principal of the Union schools at Mercer for two years. In 1865 he married Nancy A. McKinney, daughter of John M. McKinney, ex-sheriff of this county, and went to St. Louis, where he engaged in the real estate business for two years, 1865-66. Returning to Mercer early in 1867 he engaged in starting the Soldiers' Orphan School, putting $70,000 into the institution. This he sold in 1874 to S. F. Thompson, J. I. Gordon, G. W. Wright and R. R. Wright. He read law with the late Judge McDermitt, and was admitted to the bar in February, 1870. From 1870 to 1875 he practiced here with E. W. Jackson, now of Harrisburg, under the firm name of White & Jackson. From 1877 to 1879 or 1880 he was associated with B. Magoffin. Since then he has practiced by himself. He has three living children: Bertha B., Grace and John A. He is a member of the A. Y. M. and I. O. O. F., and has frequently been connected with the schools. In 1874 he was a candidate for Congress from this district, and was defeated by seventy votes. He was a member of the convention of the U. L. P. at Cincinnati in January, 1887, and helped to form that party. He was one of Democratic candidates for the Assembly in 1888.

GEORGE M. WILLIAMS, livery, was born in Owego, Tioga County, N. Y., and came to Mercer County in 1874. He married Maria, a daughter of Joseph Cubbison, who settled in a log cabin in Fairview Township, where he lived for over fifty years. Mr. Williams, after marriage, went to Talbot County, Md., and farmed for two years. He then returned to this county, bought a farm, which he sold in one year, and went into the oil business in Venango, Warren, Butler, Armstrong and Clarion Counties for three years. He then bought a farm in Fairview Township, and after farming two years sold and bought another in Jefferson Township, where he remained until April 1, 1887, when he engaged in the livery business at Mercer. He is a member of the present town council, is a Republican, and with his wife belongs to the Second Presbyterian Church. Their children are: Mary, Harry, Edwin, Edna and Ida. He served as school director while in Jefferson Township.

HON. GEORGE W. WRIGHT, superintendent of the Soldiers' Orphan School, was born in Worth Township, Mercer County, July 19, 1841. His parents, Thomas and Sarah (Fowler) Wright, were natives of England, and immigrated to America while single. The father died, a farmer, in Worth Township, in 1851, and his widow died in 1883. They were the parents of the following children: Mary, married William Trivett; Alexander, a resident of Venango County; G. W., Richard R., John S., a merchant at Hendersonville, and Thomas J., resides on the old homestead. The parents were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. George W. Wright was educated in the common schools, Mercer Academy and Thickson Academy, of Meadville, Penn. He began teaching at the age of sixteen years, by which he obtained the means to defray his expenses in the academies. He taught in Tennessee and Kentucky in 1859 and 1860, thus being in the South when John Brown made his famous raid at Harper's Ferry. He enlisted in Company I, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and remained in service for two years. On his return from the war he engaged in the oil business at Petroleum Center, Venango County. He then helped to establish the Sandy Lake Car Manufacturing Company. While there he was appointed clerk to the county commissioners, and held that position until 1873, when he was elected county recorder. While in that office he was appointed superintendent of the Mercer Soldiers' Orphan School. He was elected to the State Senate in 1876, and served one term. In 1877 he was appointed superintendent of the Mount Joy, Penn., Soldiers' Orphan School, and in 1883 was chosen superintendent of the Soldiers' Orphan School at both McAllisterville and Chester Springs. He was married in 1864 to Rozetta M. Carroll, and are rearing Mamie McKnight, a niece of Mrs. Wright. They are Methodists, and he is a Republican.

GEORGE W. YEAGER, physician and surgeon, was born in 1824, in the borough of Mercer. His father, Michael Yeager, was a native of Montgomery County, Penn., and came to this county in time to serve in the War of 1812, under Capt. Clark. Cynthia Fell, the mother of Dr. Yeager, came to Mercer County when a child with her father, Nathan Fell, who is mentioned in the history of West Salem Township. She was a native of Bucks County, Penn. By her union with Michael Yeager she had the following children: Mary A. (married Dunlap McLaughlin), Elizabeth (married B. F. Baskin, Esq.), George W., Emeline (married James C. Eyster, of Chambersburg), Imelda (married Josiah McJunkin); Jane A. and Agnes are dead. Michael Yeager was once a trustee of the old Mercer Academy, and was appointed a marshal to take the census of 1850. He was identified with the Whig party during its existence, and drifted into the Republican party. During his latter days he and his wife worshiped at the Methodist Church, of which he was for many years a trustee. Our subject was educated in the Mercer Academy, under the instructions of D. B. Cook, William Stephenson, D. H. A. McLean, Samuel Griffith and others. He was employed, for many years, as a clerk for his father and others in Mercer. He began the study of medicine in 1847, with Drs. James and Beriah Magoffin, and attended a course of medical lectures at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1848. In 1849 he went to California, and two years later returned and resumed his studies, and in 1852 he graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia. He at once began the practice of his chosen profession at Mercer, which he has continued ever since. He was appointed the first physician to the county poor-house. He was married to Miss Sarah E. Amberson, daughter of Dr. T. B. Amberson, who practiced here for many years. She was a native of Butler County, Penn. By her he has been blessed with eight children: Cynthia (married Dr. F. M. Temple), Emeline (married William V. Galbraith), Margaret (married James Miller), Mary A. S. (married R. Robinson), Sadie (died in infancy), Caroline and Nancy F. (twins) and Michael George. Dr. Yeager was early identified with the medical society of Mercer County. He was a surgeon, in 1864, in the Union army, being located at the Soldiers' Rest Hospital, at Alexandria, Va., and the King Street Hospital, at the same city. He afterward had charge at Forts Whipple, Cass and Tillinghast, of the defenses of Washington.

REV. GEORGE W. ZAHNISER was born March 19, 1823, in the borough of Mercer. His parents were Jacob and Catharine (Wright) Zahniser. The father was reared on a farm, and at an early period in his life was employed as a clerk in a store. He operated a mercantile store in Mercer for some time, and died in 1852. He was superintendent of the Sabbath-school of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer for over thirty-five years, and was an elder. He was the father of the following children: Margaret, William, George W., Mary (died when small), Jacob and Michael. The mother of the above children died in 1860, and was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. A very complete sketch of the Zahniser family appears in connection with that of Jacob Zahniser, of Jackson Township. Our subject was educated in the old Mercer Academy and Washington and Jefferson College, graduating at the latter in 1846. The year following he was a tutor in that institution. At that time Dr. R. J. Breckenridge was president of this college, and finally resigned to accept the pastorate of a Presbyterian Church of Lexington, Ky. It was through Mr. Breckenridge's influence that Mr. Zahniser was induced to take charge of a classical school at Lexington, which grew so rapidly under his efficient management that he induced Judge Lawrence, the now famous blind orator of Bellefontaine, Ohio, to associate himself with him in this institution, which connection lasted for about one year. After closing his term in Lexington he entered a theological seminary at Princeton, N. J., where he remained for two years, and then came to his home; was soon afterward licensed by the Erie Presbytery, and began his ministerial labors at Conneautville, Crawford Co., Penn. Here he continued with good results for eight years. He was then called to Huntingdon County, and preached in Huntingdon City from 1859 to 1876. At the latter date he returned to Conneautville and had charge of that congregation for one more year, when he withdrew from regular pastorates, and has since been a supply minister for various congregations of his faith. He began the career of a school teacher when sixteen years of age, teaching his first term in the Cranberry District, in the neighborhood of what is now Grove City. Later he taught in the public schools of Mercer, and still later he was associated with Rev. Vincent and James L. Rodgers, respectively, giving instructions in the old Mercer Academy. He also taught for two years in Conneautville, while in charge of his Presbyterian congregation at that place. He was married in 1854 to Jane Forker, by whom he had one daughter, Mary, the wife of Herman Frankel.

Mrs. Zahniser died in 1859, and in 1864 he was again married, to Miss Kate Gaston, of New Jersey, who died soon after marriage, and he selected a third wife in the person of Mrs. Lizzie McGill, this marriage occurring in 1866. She was born in Somerville, N. J., and by her he had the following children: George (now a student at a college in Bethlehem, Penn.), Kate G. and Albert. Rev. Zahniser is a Republican, and one of the most respected and worthy citizens of Mercer County.

R. J. ZAHNISER, of the firm of Donaldson, Zahniser & Co., general merchants, was born April 14, 1854, in Jackson Township, and is a son of John L. Zahniser, whose family sketch appears in connection with the Zahniser family history, as furnished by Jacob Zahniser, of Jackson Township. Our subject was educated in the common schools of Jackson Township and was brought up at farm labor. He attended and was graduated from the Iron City Business College in 1872; from 1872 to 1879 he clerked for Zahniser, Bell & Co., Mercer, Penn., and from 1879 to 1882 was book-keeper for the Pinkerton Lumber Company in Somerset County, Penn. In 1882 he was elected recorder of Mercer County by the Democrats against a large Republican majority. He engaged in the grocery business in 1886, which he continued until 1887, when he formed a partnership with J. N. Donaldson in the general mercantile business, further mention of which is made in connection with the sketch of Mr. Donaldson.

H. H. ZEIGLER, attorney, was born August 17, 1849, son of J. R. and Margaret A. (Bell) Zeigler, natives of Montgomery and Mercer Counties, respectively, and the parents of four children: Emma A., H. H., Frances E. and one who died before maturity. Our subject was educated in the common schools, Grove City Academy, New Wilmington College and Edinboro Normal; began reading law in 1870 with James A. Stranahan, and was admitted to the bar in 1873, and has since continued practice. He was married in 1874 to Lizzie Mason and has three children: Samuel, Jesse and Lizzie. He was appointed United States commissioner in 1878 and still serves. He and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church and he is a Republican.

CHAPTER XXX.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SHARON

AUGUSTUS ALDERMAN, tobacco merchant and coal operator, was born in Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, September 19, 1831. He is a son of Aruna and Eunice (Munson) Alderman, natives of Hartford, Conn., and who removed to Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, with their respective parents in 1805. Both spent the remainder of their lives in that part of Ohio. Augustus grew to manhood in his native township, and in 1852 went to California via Cape Horn, where he worked in the mines nearly three years. Returning to his home he lived in Brookfield Township till 1859. He subsequently spent one year each in Missouri and Michigan. About 1870 he located in Hickory Township, this county, and since 1877 he has resided in Sharon and carried on his business. He was married June 10, 1857, to Miss Elizabeth Hassan, daughter of Robert and Sarah (Lysle) Hassan, of Hubbard, Ohio, and natives of Pennsylvania. She bore him one son, Fred H., who has charge of the store. Mrs. Alderman died in 1888, after a lingering illness. Mr. Alderman is a Democrat, and in 1886 was elected a member of the borough council, which position he is now filling.

ABNER APPLGATE, notary public, was born in Hubbard Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, October 26, 1826, and is a son of William and Mary (Huff) Applegate, the former a native of New Jersey, born October 25, 1767, and the latter of Bath, Va., born September 7, 1787. William Applegate and family settled in Hubbard Township, Ohio, June 8, 1808, where he spent his life, dying June 14, 1839. Abner grew up in his native township, and on the 18th of May, 1841, located in Sharon. He clerked for some years, and on May 1, 1856, he began merchandising, in which he was engaged till August, 1878. He was married February 12, 1854, to Miss Marilla Hibler, of Hubbard Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. They have three children: Mary E., wife of H. F. Dickson; William C. and Jennie, wife of G. W. Lycett, of Tiltonville, Ohio. He and his wife are Disciples. Politically he has been a life-long Democrat, and has been justice of the peace twenty years, postmaster of Sharon six and one-half years under Pierce and Buchanan, and notary public since April 17, 1881. He was once the Democratic candidate for associate judge, and also the General Assembly, and in both instances he ran ahead of his ticket.

FREDERICK T. ASCHMAN, chemist, was born in Hudson City (now Jersey City Heights), N. J., September 26, 1858, and is a son of Frederick T. and Martha E. (Davis) Aschman. The former was a native of Switzerland, who immigrated to New York, where he met and married Martha E. Davis, of Ann Arbor, Mich., a daughter of Gen. Martin Davis, one of the pioneers of Ann Arbor. Mr. Aschman, Sr., was head of the silk importing house of F. T. Aschman & Co., of New York, and died at Hudson City, September 4, 1867, leaving four children, Frederick T. being the eldest of the family. On his death-bed Mr. Aschman requested his wife to educate the children in Europe, and in the spring of 1868 she crossed the Atlantic with her family, and our subject spent eight years in the schools of France and German Switzerland. He returned to New York in 1876 with the intention of entering his father's old firm. His mind, however, had a scientific bent, and in the fall of 1877 he entered the School of Mines of Columbia College, and graduated in May, 1881. In the meantime he had made a trip to Europe, in 1880, where the balance of the family still were. He worked in New York during the summer of 1881, and the following autumn accepted the position of chemist for the Wheeler Iron Company, at West Middlesex, Penn. In the spring of 1882 he made a second trip to Europe, and there married Marie Zolikofer, of St. Gall, Switzerland, and returned with his wife to West Middlesex, where she died June 17, 1883. He remained in West Middlesex till the spring of 1884, when he came to Sharon and opened an office as general analytical chemist, and has since done a large and successful business, being the only general chemist in the Shenango Valley. Mr. Aschman was again married, April 15, 1866, to Mary D., daughter of William C. Bell, one of the pioneers of Sharon. A daughter, Dorothy B., is the issue of this union. Mr. Aschman and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church of Sharon, in which body he fills the office of deacon. He is a Republican in politics, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity.

JOHN ASHTON, retired manufacturer and merchant, was born in Staffordshire, England, January 13, 1811, and is a son of Richard and Esther (Skidmore) Ashton, both of whom lived and died in England. John there grew to manhood, and attended a select school of his neighborhood. He afterward worked in a rolling-mill, and in June, 1832, immigrated to the United States, and found employment in an iron-mill in New Jersey about two years. He then removed to Pittsburgh, Penn., and continued to work at the iron business there until the fall of 1850, when he came to Sharon with a number of other mill-men to form a stock company with Joel B. Curtis, George Boyce, Peter Shoenberger and David Agnew, under the name of the Sharon Iron Company. This company built the first plant, and Mr. Ashton was connected with it till the mill shut down. He subsequently followed farming a few years, and then worked for the Westernman Iron Company. Mr. Ashton was one of the company who erected and put in operation the Atlantic Iron Mills, the firm being Alexander, Ashton & Co. P. L. Kimberly subsequently bought Alexander's interest, and the firm became Kimberly, Ashton & Co. In 1871 Mr. Ashton sold out to Col. James Carnes, whose name succeeded his in the firm. He next went into the grocery business, and soon afterward engaged in developing the coal fields of Trumbull County, Ohio. For the past seventeen years Mr. Ashton has not been engaged in active business, except looking after his real estate and other property. He was married May 28, 1835, to Miss Frances, daughter of Stephen and Rebecca Manfull, natives of England, where Mrs. Ashton was born. Ten sons and three daughters were the fruits of this union: Richard (deceased), Mary Esther (deceased), William A. (deceased), Joseph, Stephen M., John, C. A., David (deceased), Frank, James (deceased), George W. (deceased) and Alice (deceased); five sons and one daughter surviving. Mrs. Ashton died February 16, 1881, a member of the Christian Church, to which denomination most of her children adhere. Politically Mr. Ashton is a Republican, has served in the borough council several terms, and one term as burgess. Coming to the United States comparatively a poor man, he has accumulated through the passing years a large estate, and is not only recognized as one of the wealthiest retired business men of Sharon, but also one of its honest, enterprising and respected citizens.

C. A. ASHTON, grocery dealer, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., April 24, 1849, and is a son of John Ashton, one of the retired manufacturers and merchants of the borough. In 1850 Mr. Ashton's parents came to Sharon, where he grew to manhood, receiving his primary education in the public schools, subsequently taking a commercial course in Iron City College, Pittsburgh, Penn. He clerked for several years, and in 1870 purchased the grocery house of C. N. Prindle & Son, which he has since carried on, and is to-day one of the leading grocers of Sharon. Mr. Ashton was married May 21, 1871, to Miss Emma E. Bown, of Sharon, who bore him two daughters, Lizzie and Lucy. Mrs. Ashton died June 17, 1878, and March 23, 1882, he was again married, to Miss Mary Morrison, of Sharon. Mr. Ashton is a Republican, a member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F., K. of P., and K. of G. E. He is agent for the Erie Express Company at Sharon, and is one of the progressive, enterprising young business men of the town.

REV. JOHN A. BAILEY, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church of Sharon, was born in Washington County, Penn., May 22, 1835, and is a son of Matthew and Ann Bailey, natives of the same county, and of Scotch ancestry. Mr. Bailey was reared on the old homestead in Washington County, and received his primary education in the district schools. At the age of nineteen he attended Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn., and was graduated July 7, 1859. In the fall of the same year he entered the Allegheny Seminary of the United Presbyterian Church, at Allegheny, Penn., where he took a full theological course of four years, and was licensed to preach the gospel September 3, 1862, by Lake Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church.

He was ordained and installed pastor of the united charge of Sheakleyville, Penn., and New Vernon, Penn., June 23, 1863, which position he filled for six years. For the next thirteen years he was pastor of churches in Sidney, Shelby County, and Wellsville, Columbiana Co., Ohio. On January 1, 1883, he became pastor of the United Presbyterian Church of Sharon, which has since doubled its membership. Mr. Bailey was married October 19, 1860, to Miss Bella, daughter of John M. and Isabella Porter, of Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn. She is a native of Lowellville, Ohio, but removed to Mercer County with her parents in girlhood. Mr. Bailey was originally an Abolitionist, and on the formation of the Republican party he enlisted in its ranks, and remained therein till 1879, when he became a Prohibitionist. He has since worked in harmony with the Prohibition party, and done all in his power against the liquor traffic.

JOSEPH BARBER, retired machinist, was born in Derbyshire, England, January 15, 1821, and is a son of John and Sarah (Morrel) Barber, both of whom lived and died in England. Mr. Barber grew to manhood in his native country, and there learned the carpenter trade. In the fall of 1845 he immigrated to Allegheny, Penn., where he worked in the iron mill till the fall of 1850. He then came to Sharon as a stockholder of the Sharon Iron Company, with which he was connected until 1855, when the works closed. Since then he has worked most of the time for the successors of the same mill, though now comparatively retired from active life. He was married in England, June 22, 1845, to Sarah Wigley, by whom he has had three children: Martha A. (widow of Frederick Overfield), Anna (wife of Frederick Myers) and Elizabeth (wife of John W. Mason), all of the vicinity of Sharon. Politically Mr. Barber is a Republican, and has served as councilman and school director. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and has always tried to do his share toward the moral and material development of the town.

ADDISON L. BECK, druggist, was born near Curlsville, Clarion Co., Penn., February 5, 1859, and is a son of Dr. J. N. and Ella (Boyles) Beck, the former a native of Centre County, and his wife of Clarion County, Penn. Dr. Beck practiced medicine in Curlsville till 1873, when he removed to Sligo in the same county, where he continued practice until 1881, being actively engaged in his profession for a period of twenty-two years. In December, 1874, Addison L. went into the drug business in Sligo and carried on the same until 1882, when he sold out and came to Sharon in August of that year. He purchased his present store and has since done a successful business, devoting a portion of his time to chemical analysis. His parents joined him in the spring of 1884, his father assisting in the drug store until his death in June, 1888. In 1885-86 our subject attended the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, taking a special course in chemistry, in addition to the regular studies, and was graduated in the class of 1886-87. In a class numbering 148 Mr. Beck was awarded three of nine prizes given for merit, and was named as distinguished in the contest for the Proctor prize of a gold medal. He was awarded half of the H. C. Lea prize of $100 for the best thesis; the chemistry prize of an analytical balance for original quantitative analysis; and the theoretical pharmacy prize of a fine prescription balance and certificate for the best examination in theoretical pharmacy. Mr. Beck was married January 30, 1884, to Miss Julia E. Lowe, of Sligo, Penn., of which union one son, Harold, has been born. Mr. Beck is a Republican, a member of the P. H. C. and N. U., and with his wife belongs to the Presbyterian Church.

THOMAS B. BEIL, insurance agent, was born in Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., October 27, 1843. His father, Peter Beil, was a native of Northampton County, Penn., and located in Delaware Township early in the thirties, where he married Fannie, daughter of Peter Rickard, who came to the township about the same time as the Beil family. Six sons and four daughters were born of this union, all of whom grew to maturity, and nine of whom are yet living and heads of families. Peter Beil died August 29, 1885, in the Lutheran faith, to which church his widow belongs. She resides on the old homestead in Delaware Township. Mr. Beil was a quiet, unassuming, practical farmer, and by judicious investments in real estate became quite well off. Our subject was the eldest son, and grew up in his native township. In February, 1862, he enlisted in Company K, Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years, and was discharged from the service in March, 1865. For a year and a half afterward he was engaged in merchandising at Hamburg, and for the next five years was in the employ of James Pierce, Son & Co., of Sharpsville, in general merchandising. He then carried on a store in Sharpsville for about two years, spent a year in the west, and in November, 1874, located in Sharon, where he has since been engaged in the general insurance business. He has built up a large trade, and ranks to-day among the leading insurance men of the county. Mr. Beil was married March 13, 1875, to Miss Flora V. Guthrie, of Hempfield Township. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Beil belongs to the Masonic order and K. of P. Politically he is a Republican, has served one term in the borough council, and for the past six years has been secretary of the board.

WILLIAM C. BELL, retired merchant, was born in Washington County, Penn., January 20, 1812, and there grew to manhood. On the 4th of November, 1840, he was married in Pittsburgh to Susan Evans, a native of Worcester-shire, England, born October 12, 1812. They came to Greenville, Penn., in November, 1840, where William C. spent a year and a half in mercantile business, thence removed to Clarksville, and in August, 1844, located in Sharon. He carried on the mercantile business till 1860, and in 1866 went into the coal business, from which he retired in 1870, after several years successful operations. He was afterward interested with his sons, Richard E. and Robert A., for a few years in the hardware business. To William C. and Susan Bell have been born eight children: W. Dwight, assistant cashier of the People's National Bank, Pittsburgh; Richard E., deceased; Alice A., Emma I., William B., of Leadville, Colo.; Robert A., of Youngstown, Ohio; Mary B., wife of F. T. Aschman, of Sharon, and Henderson D., of Sharon. Politically Mr. Bell was an anti-slavery man, then a Republican, and is now a Prohibitionist, and has served as burgess of Sharon one term. Both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Bell is one of the oldest surviving retired business men of Sharon, and has seen the town grow from a village of a few stores to its present flourishing prosperity.

JAMES BENTLEY, P. O. Sharon, Penn., son of Benjamin and Mary (Baldwin) Bentley, was born May 23, 1798, upon the site of Sharon, and was the first white child born within the borough limits. The father of our subject made his claim for his property in 1795, and made his permanent settlement in 1796. In 1806 he sold his farm to Samuel Quinby and moved across the line into Ohio, where both he and wife died. The family of Mr. Bentley consisted of the following children: Robert, Adamson, George, Benjamin, Elizabeth, James, Martin, Sheshbazar, Mary and Aholiab. James and Aholiab are the only survivors. Our subject was married in 1822 to Miss Temperance Butties, and by this marriage they had seven children: Amos B., Anson, Caroline (wife of Samuel Woodbridge, of Iowa), Evaline (who married C. F. De Voll), Martin, Joel and B. F. The mother died July 25, 1887. Mr. Bentley was for many years connected with the Ohio State Militia with the rank of captain. In 1845 he was elected justice of the peace, which office he held for two terms. In 1840 he was appointed United States marshal, and filled that position for a number of years. He is a member of the Masonic order, having been initiated in 1819, and in politics he is a Democrat. Mr. Bentley has lived in Trumbull County, Ohio, for over eighty years, and is one of its oldest and most respected citizens.

CORNELIUS BOWDEN was born in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., December, 12, 1826, and is a son of Daniel and Mary (Wasey) Bowden. The former was a native of Bucks County, Penn., of English parentage. His wife was of Scotch parentage. They were married in Bucks County, and with three children moved to Gustavus, Ohio. About 1822 they settled in Hickory Township, Mercer County, where five children were born, making a family of four daughters and four sons. The youngest son, James G., was killed at the battle of Fort Wagner. In 1835 the family removed to Mercer, where they resided about twenty years and then located in Sharon, where the parents spent the balance of their days, the mother dying January 22, 1866, and the father July 12, 1872, both being members of the Baptist Church. Cornelius began business in Sharon in 1846, and afterward moved to Orangeville, Penn., where he remained for nearly two years. He then returned to Sharon, where he has ever since been in business, having a large carriage and wagon factory, which a few years ago was destroyed by fire. Mr. Bowden was married June 1, 1850, to Abigail Ray, of Brookfield, Trumbull Co., Ohio, daughter of David and Abigail Ray, pioneers of that county. Four daughters have been born to them. Politically Mr. Bowden is a Prohibitionist, and he and his family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

GEORGE BOYCE (deceased) was born in England in May, 1805, and after reaching manhood immigrated to London, Ontario, Canada. He received a thorough classical and scientific education in Paris, France, and learned the civil engineer's profession in his native land. Soon after coming to Canada he removed to Beaver, Penn., where he became one of the engineers in the survey of the Beaver & Erie Canal. He was connected with this enterprise till its completion, and in 1837 took up his residence in Sharon. In 1839 he was there married to Miss Satira A., daughter of Linus and Margaret Curtis, and sister of Gen. Joel B. Curtis, a prominent citizen of Sharon. Mrs. Boyce was born in Charlestown Township, Portage Co., Ohio, February 20, 1815. After his marriage Mr. Boyce went to St. Catharines, Ontario, and was a contractor in the construction of the Welland Canal, on which enterprise he was engaged about four years. Returning to Sharon he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr. Curtis, in the development of the coal fields adjacent to Sharon, in which business he was engaged for many years, and accumulated a large fortune. Soon after forming the partnership with Mr. Curtis our subject removed to Erie, Penn., to look after the interest of their business at that point, where he resided until after the death of Gen. Curtis, in 1862, when he returned to Sharon and continued in the coal business until the mines would no longer pay for working. He was a leading member of the firm of Boyce, Rawle & Co., which operated the furnace between Sharon and Sharpsville for many years, and he was also interested in the iron business at West Middlesex. Mr. Boyce took a prominent and active interest in having the Sharon Railroad built from Sharon to Sharon Junction, and from Sharon to West Middlesex. He was also largely interested in the Emmet Mining Company, in its iron ore lands in Michigan. For several years preceding his death he was a director of the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad, and vice-president of the Sharon National Bank. Politically a Whig in early life, on the dissolution of that party he became a Democrat, and was ever afterward a staunch advocate of the principles of that party. He died December 28, 1885, at the ripe old age of nearly eighty-one years. He was a life-long member of the Episcopal Church. Throughout his career he commanded the respect and confidence of the best citizens of the Shenango Valley, wherein he had spent the greater portion of his life. Of wide information, sterling integrity and scrupulous honesty in all his dealings, his death was recognized as a deep loss to the social and material interests of Sharon, where his memory will long be held in kindly remembrance. His widow resides in the beautiful home, on the west hill, which he erected and beautified.

JOHN J. BOYLE, general grocer, was born in the County Mayo, Ireland, November 27, 1853, and is a son of John and Bridget (Thornton) Boyle, natives of Ireland, and who immigrated to the Sharon Furnace in Hickory Township in the fall of 1865. The father died in Sharon in November, 1884, and the widow still resides in this town. John began working in the Sharon Iron Works, and continued till 1879, as a roller, and in the fall of that year opened his present grocery store and has since done a highly successful trade. He was married May 13, 1885, to Miss Ann Fitzmaurice of Sharpsville, but a native of New York State, and daughter of Thomas and Ann Fitzmaurice, natives of Ireland. Of this union two children have been born, Thomas and Florence. The family are Catholics, and politically Mr. Boyle is an independent Republican.

PATRICK BRADY, jeweler, was born in Dublin, Ireland, March 17, 1837, and is a son of Paul and Martha (Hamilton) Brady, natives of Ireland. Patrick learned the jeweler's trade in Dublin, and subsequently took a full course of instructions in the manufacture of watches in Liverpool, England. He then returned to Dublin, where he became foreman of one of the leading jewelry houses of that city. During the war he immigrated to Sharon and opened a jewelry store, which has grown to be the foremost house in its line in that borough. Mr. Brady married Ellen Cooke, a native of Ireland. Of this union seven children survive: Martha, Ella, Lucy, Lillie, Emma, Alice and Albert. Politically he is a Republican, and the family belong to the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and the A. O. U. W. Beginning on a small capital he has, by close attention to his business, accumulated considerable property, and is one of the oldest business men of Sharon.

PHOEBE BROOKS, physician and surgeon, was born in Crawford County, Penn. She received her primary education in the district public schools, afterward attending and graduating at the State Normal School at Edinboro, Penn. She taught for several years, devoting her spare moments to the study of medicine. In 1876 she entered the medical department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and graduated in June, 1878. She afterward spent one year at the New England Hospital for women and children, Boston, Mass. In December, 1879, Dr. Brooks opened an office in Sharon, and has since built up a good practice. She belongs to the Presbyterian Church, and is one of the well-known physicians of the borough.

LOUIS BUCHHOLZ, general clothier, was born in Prussia, Germany, December 29, 1837, and is a son of Joseph and Rebecca (Loewenstein) Buchholz, natives of Germany. The former died there in 1867, and his widow is a resident of Berlin. Louis was educated in his native land, and in the fall of 1856 immigrated to Warren, Ohio, where he clerked three years. In the autumn of 1859 he started in the clothing business in Ravenna, Ohio, in partnership with the late Jacob Goldstein. In the spring of 1863 he located in Sharon, and has since been one of the leading business men of the borough. Jacob Goldstein continued in partnership with him up to his death, in August, 1882, at which time Mr. Buchholz became sole owner of the business, though still retaining the old firm name of J. Goldstein & Co. Mr. Buchholz was married, July 7, 1864, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of the late William McGilvray, of Sharon. Three children were born of this union: William, Joseph and Edward. His wife died May 14, 1877, and he was again married, June 25, 1884, to Miss Mary, daughter of the late Thomas Clark, one of the early settlers of the valley, whose widow, Mrs. Nancy Clark, resides on the old homestead near Sharon. Politically Mr. Buchholz is an unswerving Democrat, and one of the well-known enterprising citizens of the borough, where he has lived twenty-five years.

THE BUDD FAMILY.—In 1796 William Budd, a native of New Jersey, born October 19, 1773, whence he had removed to Washington County, Penn., was sent out to the Shenango Valley by his father, William, for the purpose of selecting lands for settlement. After exploring the country embraced in Mercer County he selected a tract lying on each side of the Shenango River, built a cabin, and passed the winter of 1796-97 in hunting and trapping, and the following year in the same way. In 1798 he returned to Washington County, Penn., where he married Drucilla Hulse, and again came out to his settlement on the Shenango. He was afterward joined by his parents, William and Sichy Budd, brothers, Daniel and John, and sisters, Patience, Nancy, Sallie, Elizabeth and Mary. He built a cabin for his parents not far from his own, where both died at an early day. To William and Drucilla Budd were born the following children, all upon the site of Sharon: Joseph, March 1, 1801; Elizabeth, January 7, 1803; Sichy and William (twins), September 26, 1807; Edward Scofield, February 1, 1809; Henry H., January 30, 1811, and Daniel Upson, March 2, 1813, the last mentioned, now a resident of Sharon, being the only survivor of the family. The mother died at Sharon June 10, 1815, aged thirty-three, and he was again married October 11, 1821, to Hannah Riggs, born in New Jersey September 5, 1779, whom he survived. He died May 23, 1849. He laid out the original town of Sharon on his land, and lived to see it quite a flourishing place. He was a justice of the peace about thirty years.

Daniel Budd was born in New Jersey in 1775, and inherited fifty acres of the land entered by his brother William. He subsequently bought his brother John's fifty acres, and the farm is still owned by his descendants. He afterward purchased land east of the Shenango and laid it out into town lots. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Achsah Quinby, pioneers of the valley. Daniel reared a family of four children: William, Sarah, Emily and Lafayette. Sarah (the widow of W. C. Malin) and Lafayette survive and reside in Sharon. Mr. Budd built one of the first frame houses in the village. In early life Mr. Budd was a Democrat, but afterward joined the Whig party, and both he and wife were members of the Baptist Church. Daniel died October 8, 1841, his widow surviving him till February 22, 1880, dying in the ninety-third year of her age.

John Budd, youngest son of William, Sr., married Unice Riggs, and lived in Hickory Township till his removal to the west many years ago.

Of the daughters of William Budd, Sr., Patience married a Mr. McMullen, and moved to Ohio; Nancy married Amos Hazen, and went west; Sallie married Nathaniel Hazen, and both died near Sheakleyville; Elizabeth married Thomas McMurren, and removed to Brookfield, Ohio, where they died, and Mary married Edward Scofield, a civil engineer sent out to survey the Western Reserve, who afterward served in the War of 1812, and was a member of the Legislature from Trumbull County, Ohio.

WILLIAM BUDD (deceased) was born in Sharon, Penn., September 26, 1807, was a son of William and Drucilla Budd previously spoken of, and spent his whole life in the vicinity of Sharon. He was married, October 26, 1829, to Miss Catharine, daughter of John and Patience (Elliott) Hull, who was born immediately north of Sharon September 19, 1812. Mr. Budd was a carpenter by trade, and followed that business many years. Politically he was a Democrat, and a life long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died November 9, 1867. He was recognized as an upright, honest man and a good Christian citizen. His widow resides in Greenville, enjoying the competence which his industry and judicious management accumulated.

EDWARD SCOFIELD BUDD (deceased) was born in Sharon February 1, 1809, and was a son of William and Drucilla Budd. He grew up and married, December 29, 1829, Mary Willson, a native of Brookfield, Ohio, born December 3, 1814. Soon after marriage they removed to Hickory Township, and in 1841 to Brookfield, Ohio. In 1857 they went to Edina, Knox Co., Mo., returning to Sharon in 1863. On the breaking out of the Rebellion Mr. Budd raised an independent regiment of volunteer cavalry for service as militia in the State of Missouri, which he commanded until early in 1863, when sickness compelled him to retire from active duty. After his return to Sharon he remained there until his death, which occurred October 21, 1886. His widow is still a resident of the borough. While living in Trumbull County, Ohio, Mr. Budd served as justice of the peace nine years, and one term as sheriff. He also served as justice of the peace in Sharon one term. Politically he was a Republican, and a member of the Baptist Church, to which denomination his widow also belongs. They were the parents of the following children: James D., William, Jane (deceased), Mary A. (deceased), Edward W., Eliza (deceased), Samuel (deceased), Warren (deceased), John, Sarah E. and Benjamin F.

DANIEL UPSON BUDD, retired farmer, was born March 2, 1813, and is the youngest son of William and Drucilla Budd. He has spent his whole life in Sharon, and resides on a part of the land entered by his father. He has been twice married, first to Lucy Ann Hull, of Trumbull County, Ohio, December 29, 1836. Two daughters were born of this marriage: Sarah E. (wife of William Matthews, of Kansas City, Mo.), and Emma V., wife of A. S. Service, of Sharon. Mrs. Budd died January 19, 1883, and he was again married, October 8, 1886, to Mrs. Sophronia Waldorf, daughter of William and Lucretia Chew, of Brookfield, Ohio. Mr. Budd has followed farming all his life, and is the oldest continuous resident of Sharon, which borough he has seen grow from a small hamlet to its present flourishing dimensions. Since attaining his majority he has never missed casting his vote for the national nominee of the Democratic party.

LAFAYETTE BUDD, farmer and real estate dealer, was born in that town April 21, 1824, and is a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Budd previously spoken of. He grew to manhood in Sharon and obtained his education in the village schools of the borough. In February, 1850, he went to California, where he spent twenty years in the gold regions. He returned to his early home in 1870, and has since been engaged in farming and dealing in real estate. Mr. Budd was married December 18, 1871, to Mrs. May Strawbridge, daughter of Roswell and Mary (Scotfield) Abell, pioneers of Trumbull County, Ohio. Mrs. Budd is a member of the Episcopal Church. Our subject is a Democrat in politics, and a member of one of the oldest families of this section of the State.

FRANK H. BUHL, manager of the Sharon Iron Works, now the property of Buhl, Sons & Co., is a native of Detroit, Mich., in which city his parents reside. He received a first-class education and is a graduate of Yale College. In 1869 Mr. Buhl located in Sharon, and in 1874 became manager of the extensive iron works previously spoken of. He filled that position four years and then returned to Detroit. In August, 1887, he again took charge of the works, and has since remained in that capacity. Mr. Buhl was married February 8, 1888, to Miss Julia Forker, daughter of the late Henry Forker and granddaughter of the venerable T. J. Porter, Esq., of Sharon. He is a Republican in politics, and one of the most prominent iron manufacturers of Pennsylvania.

CHARLES E. BUNDEL, druggist, was born in Lancaster, Penn., November 14, 1844, and is a son of Michael and Charlotte (Spurier) Bundel, the former a native of Lancaster, Penn., and the latter of England, both of whom died in Lancaster many years ago. Our subject grew to manhood and received his education in his native town. He there learned the drug business, came to Cleveland, Ohio, in the fall of 1867, and in the spring of 1869 located in Sharon, where he began clerking for Viall & Carnes. In 1870 he succeeded Mr. Carnes, and the firm of Viall & Bundel was organized. In 1874 Mr. Bundel withdrew from the firm and opened his present drug store, where he has since conducted a successful business. In June, 1864, he enlisted in the Seventy-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served till the close of the war, participating in the Atlanta campaign and Sherman's march to the sea. He was married October 20, 1870, to Miss Sarah E. Murphy, of Lancaster, Penn., who has borne him four children: Mary C., Grace, Charles M. and Kate H. Politically he is a Republican, and has been a member of the borough council one term. Mr. Bundel was one of the organizers of the Sharon Engine and Hose Co., now the Sharon Fire Department, has been chief of the department since 1881, and has done a great deal toward building up that institution to its present high state of efficiency.

GEORGE W. BURNETT, proprietor of livery stables, was born in Brookfield, Ohio, November 14, 1843, and is a son of David C. and Rhoda (French) Burnett, the former a native of Trumbull County, Ohio, and the latter of Georgia. They were married in Texas, and afterward settled in Brookfield, Ohio, where David C. engaged in the manufacture of machinery, engines, stoves, etc., which he followed up to his death in 1869. His wife having died September 24, 1854, he married again, and reared four children by his second marriage. By his first marriage he reared five sons and four daughters, all of whom are living except one son, who died while serving in the late war. George W. grew up in Brookfield, and in January, 1862, enlisted in the Third Ohio Independent Battery, raised at Canton, Ohio, and served till the close of the war. Before the war he learned the engineer's trade, and at its close resumed that business. In the fall of 1871 he came to Sharon and ran the locomotive engine for the Stewart Iron Co. about ten years. Shortly before quitting this position he bought an interest in a livery stable, which business he has since followed, locating in his present stand in 1881. Mr. Burnett was married May 9, 1866, to Felicia E., daughter of James and Mary J. Cope, of Youngstown, Ohio, and natives of England. One son, David C., is the fruit of this marriage. In politics he is a Republican, is a member of the Masonic fraternity, K. of P., K. of L. and G. A. R. societies.

JOHN W. CANON, superintendent of the Sharon public schools, was born in Mill Creek Township, Mercer Co., Penn., February 11, 1844, and is a son of Robert and Catharine (Steele) Canon, of that township. His grandfather, John Canon, was born near Canonsburgh, Penn., and married Jane McFarland, whose home was near Orangeville, Ohio. They settled in Shenango Township, near Middlesex, in the last decade of the eighteenth century, where both spent the remaining years of their lives, dying on their farm near West Middlesex. They left a family of four sons and two daughters, all of whom grew to maturity in this county, Robert, of Mill Creek Township, and Mrs. Joseph Clark, of Russell County, Kas., being the only survivors. Our subject grew up in Mill Creek Township, obtaining his primary education in the public schools, subsequently attended New Lebanon Academy, and in 1866 entered the Edinboro Normal School, where he graduated in November, 1868. He, however, had begun teaching in the winter of 1864-65, and thus obtained the means to prosecute his studies till graduation. He then taught in Cambridgeborough two years, and in 1870 became a member of the faculty of the Edinboro Normal School, where he taught seven years, mainly the departments of mathematics and United States history. While teaching in the Edinboro school he pursued a regular course of study, adding much to the normal course. In 1877 he resigned his position and accepted the principalship of the Franklin High-school, where he taught two years. In August, 1879, he was elected principal of the Sharon public schools, and in 1882 was elected superintendent, under the law of 1881 allowing boroughs of 5,000 inhabitants to elect a superintendent with the same powers and duties in the borough as the county superintendent has in the balance of the county. Mr. Canon has since filled the position of superintendent of the Sharon schools, and is one of the best known educators in the Shenango Valley. He was married March 10, 1875, to Mrs. Lizzie Reeder, nee McClaughrey, of Edinboro, Erie Co., Penn., of which union one son, Robert, has been born to them. Our subject grew to manhood in his native county, and in the fall of 1865 came to Youngstown, Ohio, locating in Sharon the following year. He learned the carpenter's trade after coming to Sharon, and in company with Jacob Faas, William Wallis and A. Kanengeiser, under the firm name of Faas, Kanengeiser & Co., began contracting and building, Faas and Kanengeiser retiring from the firm in 1876. In March, 1876, Wallis & Carley purchased the Carver & Trout planing mill and lumber yard, which was burned down the following October. They soon afterward built their present mill, which they have since operated. The firm of Wallis & Carley have built up an extensive trade and operate one of the largest institutions of its kind in the Shenango Valley, which they carry on with their usual energy and business sagacity. Mr. Carley was married in 1873 to Miss Maggie Armstrong, of Guelph, Ontario, of which union two children have been born to them: Ethel and Glenn. Politically he is a Prohibitionist, and a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. societies. He is one of the most progressive and enterprising citizens of the valley.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, baker and confectioner, was born in Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, England, January 8, 1826, and is a son of Joseph and Mary (Cleveley) Chamberlain, both of whom spent their lives in England. Joseph learned his trade in his native land, and in 1850 immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., where he soon afterward started a bakery and confectionery, which he conducted seven years. About 1858 he purchased a farm north of Sharon, upon which he settled and lived a few years. In 1863-64 he erected the building at present occupied by the Herald office, where he established a bakery, confectionery and grocery business. This was the pioneer institution, in that line, in Sharon. Several years afterward Mr. Chamberlain erected another bakery and steam cracker factory on Silver Street, where he manufactured his goods, though still conducting his store, and also ran peddling wagons. He subsequently removed to the corner of State and Shenango Streets, and in 1883 he erected his present store-room, where he has since carried on his business. Mr. Chamberlain was married in England in 1847, to Miss Elizabeth Morris, and both he and wife belong to the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and politically is a Republican.

ALBERT W. CHASE, general grocer, was born in Jefferson Township, Mercer Co., Penn., May 24, 1858, and is a son of John and Ellen (Luce) Chase, the former a native of Potter County, Penn., and the latter of Vermont. John Chase came here when a child, with his parents, Chester and Esther Chase. The father died in Jefferson Township, and his widow still resides there. John grew to manhood in Jefferson Township, and married Ellen Luce, whose parents emigrated from Vermont to this county when she was a child. John Chase and wife have been residents of Sharon for twenty-five years. Albert H. has spent his whole life in this county, and twenty-five years of it in Sharon. He was in the livery business seven years, and in September, 1885, he opened his present store, and has since done a good business. Mr. Chase was married January 10, 1882, to Miss Anna M. Donlin, of Sharon. Politically Mr. Chase is a Prohibitionist, and a member of the Protected Home Circle.

SAMUEL CLARK, deceased, a soldier of the War of 1812, was born in Sussex County, N. J., August 13, 1796, and in 1804 his parents, Samuel and Mary Clark, settled in Pymatuning Township. They were natives of Northampton County, Penn. Samuel grew up in this county, and learned the carpenter and millwright trade. He was twice married, first to Mary McDowell, of Pymatuning Township, who bore him three children: John, deceased; Mary, deceased, and Samuel B., a resident of Sharon; all born on the farm at Clarksville. The mother died there in 1841, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Clark was again married in 1844, to Mrs. Susan Reno, nee Patterson, of Sharon, widow of Joseph Reno, and daughter of Isaac and Margaret Patterson, natives of Adams County, Penn., who settled on the site of Sharon about 1803, moving across the line into Ohio in 1814 or 1815. Mrs. Clark was born on the site of Sharon October 7, 1811, and had three children by her first marriage: Isaac, of Sharon; Malissa, deceased, and Jane, deceased. Three children were born of her marriage to Samuel Clark: James, Jennette and Corinthia V., all residents of Sharon. Mr. Clark and wife removed to Sharon from Clarksville about two years after their marriage, and he spent the balance of his life in this town, dying October 6, 1878. He was a contractor on the Sandy & Beaver Canal, was one of the pioneer boatmen on the Beaver & Erie Canal, and is said to have brought the first load of Lake Superior ore to Sharpsville. Mr. Clark was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In early life he was a Whig and afterward a Republican. He was one of the well-known pioneers of the Shenango Valley. His widow resides on the old homestead in Sharon, at the ripe old age of seventy-seven years.

FRANK H. CLARK, general grocer, was born in Delaware Township, Mercer County, Penn., January 29, 1846, and is a son of Daniel G. and Susan (Biggart) Clark. The former was born near Lancaster, Penn., of German parentage, while the latter was a native of this State, of Irish ancestry. John Clark, wife Rosanna and family settled in Delaware Township when Daniel

G. was a boy, and both he and wife died in that part of the county. On the maternal side John Biggart, wife Eliza and family located near Sheakleyville, Penn., when Susan was quite small, and both died in that township. Daniel G. Clark and Susan Biggart grew to maturity in Mercer County, and were here married. Daniel learned the blacksmith's trade, and opened a shop in Delaware Township, subsequently removing to Jamestown, Penn., and thence to Clarion County, where he died, and where his widow now resides. Our subject grew up in this county, and began clerking in Jamestown, Penn. In 1868 he came to Sharon and followed clerking, principally, till opening his present grocery house, April 1, 1887. Mr. Clark was married May 6, 1869, to Miss Maggie Allbright, of Jamestown, Penn., of which union two children have been born, Jennie C. and Charles A. Politically Mr. Clark is a Republican, a member of the E. A. U., and the family belong to the Baptist Church.

MARK COHEN, deceased merchant, was born in London, England, July 9, 1843, and was a son of Henry Cohen, who died when Mark was nine years old, throwing our subject upon his own resources. At the age of sixteen he crossed the Atlantic to Wilmington, Del., where he followed clerking in that city, and afterward in Philadelphia. He then opened a clothing store in Wilmington, Del., which he conducted until the spring of 1867, when he located in Sharon, in the clothing business. He was married January 6, 1867, to Miss Julia Weinburg, of Philadelphia, who bore him six children: Henry M., Reuben W., Emanuel, Julia, Rose and Marquis, deceased. Mr. Cohen was a Republican in politics, a member of the Jewish faith, and belonged to the Masonic fraternity. He served two years as vice-president of the fire department, and held that position at the time of his death, which occurred May 12, 1878. He was also a member of the I. O. O. F. and I. O. R. M., of Wilmington, Del. He was a man of strict integrity and generous principles, and took a deep interest in the growth and prosperity of Sharon, and was one of its progressing and enterprising citizens. Soon after his death his widow took charge of the business, established a cloak and millinery department, has made Sharon the leading cloak market between Cleveland and Pittsburgh, and has one of the largest retail trades in the Shenango Valley.

ISAAC D. COLE, retired farmer, was born in Washington County, Penn., June 10, 1813, and is a son of Moses Cole, a soldier of the Revolution, and Judah (Vanness) Cole, natives of New Jersey, of Dutch ancestry. They removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, late in the eighteenth century, where they lived several years, thence removed to Washington County, Penn., and there died in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. Isaac D. grew to manhood in Washington County, and attended school in the primitive log school-house of the pioneer days. In 1831 he was married to Elizabeth Taylor, of Washington County, who bore him eleven children, eight of whom are living: John, of Perry Township; Sarah A., Mary C., wife of Sylvester Cook, of Shenango Township; Hannah L., deceased wife of Hugh Robison, of Hartford, Ohio; Nancy J., deceased; Martin V., of Perry Township; Judah, wife of Gibson Minner, of Jackson Township; Isaac, deceased; Caroline, wife of William Minner, of Hickory Township; Samuel, of Hickory Township; and Franklin P., deceased. In 1834 Mr. Cole settled in Shenango Township, with his wife and three eldest children, and all the balance were born upon the old homestead. Mrs. Cole died in 1863, and he was again married August 12, 1865, to Mrs. Catharine Hughes, a native of England and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Cole is a Democrat, and was closely identified with the school interests of Shenango Township during his residence therein. Coming to Mercer County a poor man, he has accumulated through the passing years a large estate. He has always been energetic and economical in his habits, and upright and honest in his business affairs.

JOHN COOK, contractor and builder, was born in Allegheny County, Penn., September 14, 1844, and is a son of Conrad and Elizabeth (Benter) Cook, both natives of Germany. They removed from Allegheny County to Deer Creek Township, Mercer Co., Penn., about 1850, where the mother died in 1853. The family afterward removed to Michigan, where the father died in 1886. After his mother's death John returned to Allegheny County, where he learned the carpenter's trade. He worked in the oil region about one year, and located in Sharon in July, 1866, where he has since resided. For the past sixteen years he has been engaged in contracting and building. Mr. Cook was married September 21, 1868, to Miss Clara Lawhead, of Sharon, who has borne him three children: Ida M., Harry B. and Mattie R. In politics Mr. Cook is a Democrat.

ERNEST COPE, proprietor of livery stables, was born in Staffordshire, England, September 18, 1833, and is a son of James and Mary (Fryer) Cope, both of whom lived and died in England. Ernest grew to manhood in his native land, and there followed coal mining. In 1856 he immigrated to Lowellville, Ohio, where he lived two years. He then spent a short time in the West, whence he returned to Youngstown, Ohio, where he followed mining, and subsequently engaged in the same business in Brookfield, Ohio. In 1870 he went into the mercantile business in Brookfield, but soon sold out and engaged in shipping coal. In March, 1873, he came to Sharon, and formed a partnership with W. E. Hall, under the firm name of Hall & Cope, in the livery business, which they have since carried on successfully. Mr. Cope was married July 5, 1861, to Mary E. Groezinger, of Warren, Ohio, who has borne him four children, all of whom died in infancy. He is a Republican in politics, belongs to the Masonic order, A. O. U. W. and P. H. C., and both he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM H. COVER, undertaker, was born near Edinburgh, Lawrence Co., Penn., November 18, 1848, and is a son of Jacob and Lydia (Robb) Cover, the former a native of Eastern Pennsylvania and the latter of Indiana, and early settlers of Lawrence County, Penn. They reared a family of fourteen children, nine sons and five daughters, all of whom grew to maturity, and seven are now living. Four of the sons served in the Union army during the late war. In 1868 the parents removed to Poland, Ohio, where the father died in the Methodist Episcopal faith, in January, 1881. The widow is still a resident of Poland in her eighty-second year, and is an ardent Methodist. Our subject grew to manhood in Lawrence County, attended the public schools of his neighborhood, and when his parents removed to Poland, Ohio, entered the seminary in that town, where he spent three years. In 1871 he came to Sharon and learned the cabinet and undertaker's trade, which he followed for several years. In the spring of 1876 he opened a furniture and undertaking store in Bedford, which he conducted two years. He then returned to Sharon, where he carried on a picture framing and sewing machine business till August, 1885, when he opened his present undertaking establishment, and has since built up a large trade. Mr. Cover was married July 6, 1875, to Miss Emma V., daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Hanson, natives of England. Mr. Hanson immigrated with his family to Sharon in 1850, and was one of the leading carpenters and builders of the town for many years. He erected and owned the Carver House and many other buildings, and resided here till his death. His widow lives in Sharon, where they reared two sons and five daughters, one of the sons dying in Libby Prison during the war. One son and four daughters survive. Politically Mr. Cover is one of the leading Prohibitionists of this section of the State, and both he and wife are members of the Sharon Methodist Episcopal Church, where he has been teacher of the young men's bible class in the Sabbath-school for ten years. He belongs to the R. T. of T. and the P. H. C., and is grand councilor of the R. T. of T. of Pennsylvania, the highest office in the order in the State.

HENRY CROSTHWAITE, deceased cigar manufacturer, was born in the County Kildare, Ireland, and immigrated to the United States when a boy of thirteen, subsequently locating in Pittsburgh, where he learned his trade, afterward working in Blairsville, Penn. In 1851 he came to Sharon, where he followed cigar making up to his death, March 17, 1881. He was married March 9, 1863, by Rev. J. J. Gallagher, to Miss Ellen, daughter of Patrick and Catharine Griffin, a pioneer family of the Catholic settlement near Mercer. Mrs. Crosthwaite was born in Iowa, and the whole family belong to the Catholic Church. Politically Mr. Crosthwaite was a Democrat, and served in the borough council. He was one of the oldest and best known business men of the town, was upright and honest in his dealings, and was thoroughly respected by all who knew him. Since her husband's death Mrs. Crosthwaite has carried on the business quite successfully.

GEN. JOEL BAKER CURTIS, deceased, was born in Granville, Mass., June 21, 1797, and was a son of Linus and Margaret (Peck) Curtis, the former a native of Granville, Mass., and the latter of Lyme, Conn. In 1809 a company was formed of citizens of Granville and Blanford, Mass., to settle the lands now embraced in Charlestown Township, Portage Co., Ohio, then owned by Samuel Hinckley, of Northampton, Mass. Linus and Charles Curtis were members of this company, and in the summer of 1810 the former came west with his family and settled in that township, whither he was followed the next summer by his brother, who settled on an adjoining tract. The township was named Charlestown in honor of his brother, Charles. To Linus and Margaret Curtis were born the following children: Olive, Joel B., Malissa, Harris P., Prudence, Saxton, Satira and Charles. Satira married the late George Boyce, Esq., of Sharon, Penn., and is the only survivor of the family. The parents died on the old homestead in Charlestown, Ohio. Joel B. was a boy of fourteen when the family removed to that State, and received his education in Granville, Mass., and Charlestown, Ohio, being one of the pupils in the first school opened, in 1811, in Charlestown. He married Miss Clarissa, daughter of Ozias Norton, also an early settler of Portage County, and one of the first township officers in the organization of Charlestown Township in 1814. Mrs. Curtis was born in Durham, Conn., August 15, 1794. Mr. Curtis came to Mercer prior to his marriage, and engaged in merchandising. He was afterward connected with a stage line between Erie and Pittsburgh for several years, whence he came to Sharon in 1836. Mr. Curtis and wife were the parents of several children, all born in Mercer, but only two of whom grew to maturity, Alfred Norton and Frederick. The latter died before his father, but Alfred survived his parents, and succeeded his father in the management of the large business interests built up by the latter, which he skillfully controlled up to his death. Gen. Curtis, in partnership with his brother-in-law, George Boyce, was early interested in the development of the coal fields in the vicinity of Sharon, in which business he was engaged for many years. In 1850 he was the leading spirit in the organization of a stock company which built the original plant of the Sharon Iron Works, and was president of the company, and its principal financial support from 1850 until 1855, when the mill was closed. In 1856 it was fitted up by another company to manufacture steel from raw ore, but that experiment finally proved a failure, and in the fall of 1857 the mill was again shut down. It remained idle until 1861, when the plant was sold, and bid in by Gen. Curtis, who then sold it to William Coleman, James Westerman, C. B. Wick and P. W. Keller, who again opened it as an iron mill. Gen. Curtis was prominently identified with the leading interests of the Shenango Valley up to his sudden death at Mecca, Ohio, August 27, 1862, at which point he was then engaged in developing the oil fields. Throughout his long residence in Sharon no man of his day did so much toward building up that town, and to him is largely due its present prosperity. He was one of the leading Democrats of this portion of the State, and was as firm as a rock in upholding the principles of his party. His widow survived him until May 20, 1875. Gen. Curtis was a man of unbounded energy and enterprise, and was well known and highly respected throughout the Shenango Valley. Possessing fine social qualities and an affable disposition, he was nevertheless a man of dignified manners, broad views and great natural endowments.

ALFRED NORTON CURTIS was a son of Gen. Joel B. Curtis, who was intimately connected with the early prosperity of Sharon. He was born in Mercer on the 30th of September, 1827, and came with his parents to Sharon in 1836, and resided here from that time up to his death, December 28, 1884. Acquiring a good education in his boyhood days he afterward entered the mercantile business in which his father was interested, and of which he gradually assumed entire and successful direction. On the death of Gen. Curtis, in 1862, the control of the large and valuable estate, of coal and other interests, devolved upon him, and largely increased in size and value under his correct and careful business management and judicious investments. His charity, his generosity, his benevolence, were his distinguishing characteristics, however. Hunger and wretchedness never appealed to him in vain, and his Christian charities and beneficent deeds were without number. His tender heart was constantly devising means of promoting the happiness of those around him, and he has left a name fragrant with tenderest affection for those to whom he was attached by the bonds of friendship or the ties of blood. The following tributes to his memory from two of his old friends illustrate the deep esteem in which he was held:

“Mr. Curtis died just at the holiday season of the year, a time when he especially devoted himself to making all those around and in any way connected with him to feel happy and thankful for Christmas. No poor person, however obscure, in the neighborhood who could not claim him for a friend, and the well-to-do were the better for having him as a neighbor. Blessed with abundant wealth he had the rare gift of bestowing it liberally—in a way that the recipient was thankful without feeling it was given in charity. His name and memory will long be held in grateful remembrance by his friends everywhere, and especially by his friends in Sharon.”

“If the good which men do live after them—and there can be no doubt of that fact—then this community has reason to be thankful, not only that Alfred Norton Curtis has lived amongst them, but that his bright and beautiful example will continue to be an incentive for others to follow. Who is it that knew him that was not benefitted by that acquaintance, by being made better men, women and children? Honored and respected by the people amongst whom he has lived almost his whole life, his death is most sincerely regretted, whilst to very many, outside of his home ties, his practical advice, good judgment and kind words, were of no ordinary value. May the sod rest lightly on his pillow, and the cold embrace of death transfer him to another and a better world."

CONRAD GANSEFORT CARVER, deceased merchant, was born in Richfield, Otsego County, N. Y., March 31, 1800, and was a son of Joseph and Abigail (Rounds) Carver. The former was born in Otsego County, N. Y., April 16, 1769, and married Abigail Rounds, October 5, 1788. She was born in Maine, July 4, 1768, and reared a family of several children. They died, respectively, June 8, 1815, and August 1, 1847. Conrad G. grew to manhood in his native county, came to Sharon in 1829 and began merchandising and milling, and subsequently followed contracting on the canal. He was one of the pioneers in the development of the coal fields of the Shenango Valley, being a contemporary of Gen. Curtis and George Boyce in that business, and was among the first to ship coal by canal to Erie. He was also engaged for a time in manufacturing, and continued in the coal business until a few years prior to his death, which occurred September 2, 1874. He was the third post-master of Sharon, and served from 1841 to 1845. He was married in Sharon, August 6, 1833, to Miss Terressa, daughter of Samuel Quinby, one of the pioneers of Sharon. Mrs. Carver was born in Warren, Ohio, April 7, 1808, and is the mother of two children, Joseph L. and Conrad Q., both residents of Sharon. Politically Mr. Carver was an old line Whig, and afterward a Republican. He was one of the most enterprising citizens of the town, and did a great deal toward its growth and prosperity. He laid out Carver's Addition to Sharon on the East Hill, and was known and recognized as an energetic, pushing business man. He came to Sharon when it was in its infancy and lived to see it developed into one of the most flourishing towns of the valley. He was a man of undoubted integrity, straightforward principles and unsullied reputation, and none stood higher in the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens.

CONRAD Q. CARVER, the youngest son, was born in Sharon, December 17, 1836, was educated in the public schools of the borough, and subsequently attended Hiram Institute, Portage County, Ohio, and the academy at Fredonia, N. Y. From early manhood until within a few years ago he was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Sharon, from which he retired and entered the coal business, which he yet follows. He was married December 17, 1868, to Miss Mary, daughter of the late James Westerman, for many years one of the leading manufacturers of the Shenango Valley. Three children are the fruits of this union: Mary, James and Conrad. Politically Mr. Carver is a Democrat, and one of the well-known citizens of the borough.

LUDWIG DACH, proprietor of meat market, was born in Bavaria, Germany, November 24, 1843, and is a son of Clemens and Elizabeth (Hengle) Dach, who immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1847. In 1852 they came to Mercer County and settled at Hickory Corners, two miles east of Sharon, where the father carried on the butcher's trade. He there donated the ground for a Catholic church and cemetery. Several years later he removed to Sharpsville, where his wife died, December 26, 1883, and where he still lives. Ludwig lived with his parents until twenty-two years old and learned the butcher's trade with his father. He then opened a shop in West Middlesex, but after one year returned to Hickory Corners and succeeded to his father's business, the latter going to Sharpsville. In October, 1883, he opened a shop in Sharon, where he has since carried on business, besides conducting the old shop at Hickory Corners, where he resides. He was married September 26, 1876, to Miss Margaret Sigler, of Hickory Corners, a native of Germany and daughter of Franz and Margaret Sigler, who both died at Hickory Corners in the Catholic faith. Eight children have been born to them: Elizabeth, Mary, Clemens, Annie, Franz, Catherine, Margaret and Theresa. Mr. Dach is a Democrat, and the family belong to the Catholic Church. He is a member of St. Peter's Society and the C. M. B. A.

CHARLES DAHRINGER, proprietor of meat market, was born in Lowellville, Mahoning County, Ohio, February 22, 1850, and is a son of Ignatz and Lucy (Roup) Dahringer, natives of Germany, who immigrated to New Castle, Penn., in 1848. They subsequently removed to Lowellville, Ohio, where the mother died, leaving a family of five children: Louisa (wife of Jacob Hoelzle), Frank (deceased), Frederick, Charles and Lizzie (wife of N. Knapp, of Sharon). The father married again and is now living in Sharon. Our subject came to Sharon in 1866, and learned his trade with Jacob Hoelzle. In April, 1879, he went into business for himself, and has since been quite successful. He was married May 27, 1873, to Miss Josephine, daughter of Matthias and Susan Steiner, of Sharon, but natives of Germany. Mrs. Dahringer was born in New York State, and came to Sharon with her parents when quite small. Six children have been born of this union: Lizzie, Charles, Henry, Edward, Emmett (deceased) and Ada. The family belong to the Methodist Church, and in politics Mr. Dahringer is a Democrat, and a member of the A. O. F.

PHILIP F. DAVIS, proprietor of the Carver House, was born in Warren County, Penn., December 24, 1825, and is a son of Abraham and Ruth (Mead) Davis, both natives of Pennsylvania. Philip F. grew to maturity in his native county, and in 1849 removed to Muncie, Ind., and the following year went overland to California, where he remained about two years. Returning to Muncie, Ind., he resided in that State till the fall of 1882, when he located in the hotel business in Warren, Penn. In May, 1883, he took charge of the Carver House, and has since built up its trade till it is regarded as one of the leading hotels in the Shenango Valley. While in Indiana he was principally engaged in the hotel, livery and mail route business. Mr. Davis was married May 1, 1855, to Elmira Davis, of Muncie, Ind., who was the mother of four children: May (wife of Prof. F. R. Webb, of Staunton, Va.), Fred. W. (of San Diego, Cal.), Lucy A. (wife of Charles Bowers, of Indianapolis) and John F. (of Erie, Penn.). Mrs. Davis died August 1, 1872, and he was again married June 16, 1879, to Mrs. Mary C. Davis, nee Webber, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who is the mother of one son, Horace W. Politically Mr. Davis is a Republican, and a K. T. in the Masonic fraternity.

SOLOMON DILLINGER (deceased) was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., December 14, 1805, and was a son of Jacob and Catharine Dillinger. The former immigrated from Germany with his parents to Westmoreland County, Penn., when a small boy, where he grew up and married. About 1807, they removed to Jefferson Township, Mercer Co., Penn., with a large family, of whom six sons and one daughter grew to maturity: John, Jacob, George, William, Henry, Solomon and Elizabeth. Henry, who resides on the old homestead in Jefferson Township, is the only survivor. Jacob, Sr., was a soldier in the War of 1812, and both he and wife died on the old homestead, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. Our subject grew to manhood on the home farm, and about 1831 came to Sharon and entered the employ of Elias Jones, who then owned all of the lands now included in the northwest portion of the borough. On January 7, 1833, he was married to Miss Jane, daughter of Elias and Jane (Smith) Jones, the former a native of Wales, and the latter of Virginia. They were married in that State, and in 1803-04 came from Winchester, Va., to Hickory Township, Mercer County, and settled on the M. C. Trout farm, where Mrs. Dillinger was born, December 10, 1807. There were six children in the family of Elias Jones: Betsy, Smith, Sarah, Hannah, Jane and Elias, the two last mentioned being twins. Mrs. Dillinger is the only survivor. Mr. Jones removed with his family to the site of Sharon a few years after the birth of Mrs. Dillinger, where he kept hotel, and was also the first postmaster of the village, as well as its first merchant. Both he and wife died in Sharon. One child, Elizabeth J. (wife of Septimus Marsden, of Sharon), was born to Solomon and Jane Dillinger. Mr. Dillinger was a Democrat, and followed farming up to his death, which occurred October 10, 1853. His widow now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Marsden.

GEORGE DRESCH, wholesale liquor dealer, was born in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., June 5, 1857, and is a son of Jacob and Margaret (Hossel) Dresch, natives of Breidenbach, Rhine Pfaltz, Bavaria, Germany, born December 2, 1828, and January 13, 1839, respectively. Jacob Dresch immigrated to Sharon in December, 1853, and was here married April 10, 1855, to Miss Margaret Hossel, of Hickory Township. He first followed coal mining, but subsequently engaged in the saloon business, and in 1863-64 went into the clothing and dry goods trade, which, after three or four years, he sold out and established the first exclusive wholesale liquor store in Sharon, which he conducted successfully up to his death, November 16, 1883. Politically he was a Republican, a member of the I. O. O. F., and the German Reformed Church. The widow still resides in the town, and is the mother of the following children: George, Caroline (widow of Rev. F. P. Hartmetz, late Reformed minister of Archibald, Ohio), Annie (wife of Fred P. Miller, of Sharon), Catherine, Charles F., Jacob (deceased), Emma S., Alice, Clara, Francis and Lida. George grew to manhood in Sharon and attended the public schools, subsequently spending one year at Calvin Institute, Cleveland, Ohio, and one year at Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio, which completed his education. He was a commercial traveler two years, and also followed clerking up to his father's death, when he took charge of the store and has conducted the business ever since. JOHN H. ELLIOTT, attorney at law, was born in Worth Township, Butler Co., Penn., February 4, 1847, and is a son of Benjamin F. and Mary (George) Elliott. The former was born and reared in Lawrence County, Penn., and, January 5, 1836, married Miss Mary George, a native of Liberty Township, Mercer County, whose family were pioneers of that township. Immediately after marriage they settled in Butler County, on the farm where Mrs. Elliott died in September, 1886, and her husband July 23, 1888. They reared eleven children, seven of whom are living. Mr. Elliott's mother belonged to the Perry family, the same which produced the celebrated commodore of that name. Our subject was the fourth son, and, after receiving a good education in the schools of his district, taught two terms, and then spent one session at the Edinboro Normal, and one year at Grove City College. He afterward finished his education at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn. He commenced reading law in the spring of 1874, at Sharon, and was admitted to the bar at Mercer in January, 1877. After a short visit to his old home he formed a partnership with his brother, James G., at Sharon, which continued until the spring of 1878, when the latter removed to Mercer, and John H. has since continued practice alone. Mr. Elliott was married June 19, 1879, to Miss Jennie S. Bell, of Sharon, of which union one child, Sarah F., survives. Politically he is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity.

MALIN EWING, dealer in dry goods, notions and millinery, is a native of New Lisbon, Ohio, born April 13, 1843, and is a son of Jacob and Sarah A. (Malin) Ewing of that town. The grandfather was a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Ohio, where Jacob was born and reared. Jacob married Sarah

A. Malin, a native of Pennsylvania, whose paternal ancestors were of Puritan stock, and, on the maternal side, of Quaker origin. In the fall of 1847 they removed to Georgetown, Beaver Co., Penn., where our subject was reared and educated. In July, 1861, he enlisted in Company L, Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until April, 1865, when he was discharged with the rank of second lieutenant. This regiment was afterward divided, Company L, Twenty-eighth, then becoming Company A, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers. He participated in the many battles and campaigns of his regiment, and was wounded at Lost Mountain, in the Atlanta campaign, but recovered sufficiently to serve in Sherman's march to the sea. He was in command of his company from May, 1863, until discharged, except the interval while wounded. He followed steamboating on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers till 1870, when he came to Sharon, and clerked until 1883, in which year he and B. R. Williams succeeded to the old established house of Mrs. L. Williams. He subsequently purchased his partner's interest, and has since continued alone. His parents came to Sharon about eight years ago, where they died in 1881 and 1882, respectively, in the faith of the Disciple Church. Mr. Ewing was married October 1, 1868, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Reese and Leah Williams (deceased), one of the old families of Sharon. Of this union four sons survive: Charles S., Benjamin S., Malin R. and Ralph W. Mr. Ewing is a trustee and stockholder in the Hall Institute, a member of the G. A. R., and the family belong to the Baptist Church.

ENOCH FILER, coal dealer and operator, was born in England January 15, 1833, and is a son of Thomas and Ann (Barber) Filer, who lived and died in England. Enoch came from England to Mercer County, Penn., in March, 1852, and began working at the coal business, which he had followed in his native land. In 1859 he sank the first large shaft on the farm of John Hofius, Hickory Township, this being the introduction of that class of mining in Mercer County, and the first in which machinery was used for hoisting the coal. He subsequently sank a shaft for Kimberly, Forker & Co., and also one for Pierce, Scott & Allen. He afterward spent a couple of years in the oil region, where he was engaged in the coal business for himself. In 1866 he returned to Mercer County, purchased an interest in the original shaft on the Hofius farm, and soon after went into partnership with Samuel Kimberly, as Kimberly & Filer. He was afterward connected in the coal business with James Westerman, whose estate is still a part of the company. Mr. Filer is, to-day, the oldest and most prominent coal operator in Mercer County, and has been very successful in business. He was married May 21, 1853, to Elizabeth Lawton, a native of England, by whom he has five sons and one daughter: John F., Enoch L., Frank P., Henry J., Walter G. and Clara. He is a Democrat, a K. T. of the Masonic fraternity, and is one of the enterprising, progressive business men of the Shenango Valley. The family belongs to the Episcopal Church.

HENRY FORKER (deceased) was born in Mercer, Penn., in August, 1823, and was a son of Gen. John and Isabella (Graham) Forker, of that borough. He grew up and received his education in Mercer, and there carried on the mercantile business up to 1857, when he sold his interest to his brother Joseph and Mr. Zahniser, and removed to Sharon, where he entered the coal business in partnership with his father-in-law, T. J. Porter, Esq. In company with Samuel Kimberly, under the firm name of Kimberly & Forker, he opened Keel Ridge coal mine in 1863. He was successfully engaged in coal operations until his sudden death by a railroad accident at Altoona, Penn., May 20, 1865.

He was married February 22, 1849, to Miss Salina J., daughter of the venerable T. J. Porter, Esq., of Sharon. Of this union three sons and two daughters survive: John, teller of the Sharon National Bank; Thomas J., dry goods merchant of Sharon; Harry P., Julia A., wife of Frank H. Buhl, of Sharon, and Bella G. Mr. Forker was a staunch Republican, but took no active interest in political affairs. He was deputy sheriff under his father one term. He was a regular attendant at the United Presbyterian Church, and did a great deal toward building up that denomination in Sharon.

THOMAS J. FORKER, dry goods merchant, was born in Mercer, May 27, 1856, and was the second son of Henry Forker. He was educated in the public schools of Sharon, clerked two years, and in 1877 formed a partnership with C. S. Quinby, under the firm name of Forker & Quinby. They began business in the old room previously occupied by Porter & Forker, and have increased their business annually till they are now one of the leading dry goods houses of the town. Politically Mr. Forker is a Democrat, but devotes his attention solely to his business affairs.

JOSEPH FORKER, president of the Sharon National Bank, was born in Mercer, Penn., June 6, 1829, and is a son of Gen. John and Isabella (Graham) Forker, the latter of whom is still a resident of Mercer. Adam Forker, grandfather of our subject, with his wife and family, located in Cool Spring Township early in the present century, afterward removing to Mercer, where Adam and wife died. Gen. Forker was a gunsmith by trade, and in the War of 1812 followed that business for the army at Erie, Penn. He was afterward prominently identified with the militia of the county, holding therein the rank of brigadier-general. He was an ardent Democrat, served one term as sheriff of Mercer County, and was one of the leading men of his day. He died in 1865, in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church, and his widow still survives him. They reared five children, three of whom are living. Joseph was the third eldest in the family, and grew to manhood in Mercer. At the age of sixteen he began learning the gunsmith's trade in his father's shop, at which business he spent five years. In 1853 he began clerking in his brother Henry's drug store, and in 1857 formed a partnership with R. M. J. Zahniser and C. W. Whistler, under the firm of Forker, Zahniser & Co., and bought out his brother's store. In 1864 Mr. Forker sold out to his partners, and went into the coal business in Hickory Township, and for the past twenty-four years has been actively identified with the development of the Mercer County coal fields. In 1868 he became interested in the furnace of Henderson, Allen & Co., and since 1872 has been connected with the Spearman Iron Company. Mr. Forker was one of the organizers of the Sharon National Bank, in 1875, and was chosen its first president. He served until 1878, and was succeeded by James Westerman, who served until his death, July 20, 1884, when Mr. Forker was again chosen president, and still occupies that position. He was married in 1857 to Miss Mary Mathews, who died in 1861, leaving two children: Frances (wife of Victor Delamater, of Meadville, Penn.) and David M. (of Birmingham, Ala.). Mr. Forker was again married in 1877, to Mrs. Ruth Harrington, of Sharon. He is a Republican in politics, and the family belong to the Episcopal Church.

JAMES SATTERFIELD FRUIT, hardware merchant, is a native of Jefferson Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where he was born October 17, 1849. His parents were Thomas and Anna (Campbell) Fruit, the former a native of Eastern Pennsylvania, and the latter of Mercer County, and a member of a pioneer family of Hickory Township. Both died in this county, the mother January 26, 1888, surviving her husband many years. Our subject left home at the age of fourteen, and entered a store in Clarksville, Penn. At the age of sixteen he attended the Edinboro Normal School, where he spent three terms. He subsequently clerked in Wheatland, and thence removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, where he conducted a general store for about eleven years. In January, 1879, Mr. Fruit formed a partnership with J. J. Spearman, and as J. S. Fruit & Co. purchased the hardware store of A. E. Carter & Co. The following month they bought out Ohl, Vile & Co., and the firm of Fruit, Ohl & Co. was then organized. For the past nine years this firm has conducted one of the leading hardware houses of the Shenango Valley. Mr. Fruit was married December 4, 1884, to Miss Callie Semple, of Hermitage, and a native of Mercer County, of which union one son, Fred, has been born. Mr. Fruit was a delegate to the Republican State Convention in 1884, and was a member of the State Committee in 1885. In 1886 he was elected to the Legislature from Mercer County, and served in the session of 1887. In the spring of 1888 he was renominated at the convention held at Mercer, and re-elected in November. Mr. Fruit is a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities, and is one of the best known citizens of his native county.

THOMAS J. GILLESPIE, leather merchant, was born in Clarksville, Mercer Co., Penn., July 14, 1840, and is a son of John and Sarah (Clark) Gillespie. The former was born in Fayette County, Penn., July 19, 1806, and was a son of Samuel and Martha (Luckey) Gillespie, natives of Pennsylvania, of Irish ancestry. They were married in Fayette County, Penn., and removed to Pymatuning Township, Mercer County, where both spent the balance of their lives, dying March 7, 1850, and August 9, 1855, respectively. They reared the following children: John, Mary (who married John Duncan), Harriet (who married John Fell), Anna (who became the wife of a Mr. McDowell, and afterward of a Mr. Rutledge), James, Sarah J. (who married John Woods), David and Samuel L., all of whom became the heads of families, and only one, Mrs. Sarah J. Woods, of Iowa, survives. John, the father of our subject, married Sarah, daughter of Samuel Clark, a pioneer of Clarksville. He was a cabinet-maker by trade, and carried on the manufacture of furniture in Clarksville until his death, September 25, 1846, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. John and Sarah Gillespie reared the following children: Samuel (deceased), Martha (deceased), William, James D. (deceased), John, Jacob, Thomas J. and Mary (deceased). The mother died in Clarksville, January 26, 1883, in her eighty-second year, and throughout her life she was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject grew up in Clarksville, and at the age of seventeen went west, where he spent two years. He then returned home and learned the blacksmith's trade, at which he worked a few years. In June, 1867, Mr. Gillespie opened a boot and shoe store in Sharon, which he gradually gave up for the more successful business of a dealer in hides, leather, etc., in which he has built up a large and lucrative trade. He was married May 27, 1867, to Miss Almira, eldest daughter of Henry and Zula Clark, pioneers of Pymatuning Township. Mr. Gillespie enlisted in Company B, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, to repel Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania. His brother, John, was captain of Company B, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years. Jacob served three years in an Illinois regiment. William went South in 1852 and served in the Twentieth Mississippi, was captured at Fort Donelson, and subsequently exchanged and returned to his home. Mr. Gillespie is a Republican, and has served two terms in the council and two years as burgess of Sharon. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F. and N. U.

ELISHA GRISWOLD, physician and surgeon, was born in Chester, Penn.,

March 14, 1828, and is a son of Jesse and Susanna (Mancill) Griswold, the former a native of Chester County, and the latter of Delaware County, Penn. In 1833 the family removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, where the mother died in 1846. The father again married, and, on the death of his second wife, removed to Gardner, Ill., and died there in 1873. His first wife bore him seven children and the second three; eight of the ten are living. Our subject was the eldest of the family, received his primary education in the public schools of Trumbull County, Ohio, and then attended a private school of higher grade, afterward teaching in that county. In 1848 he returned to his early home in Eastern Pennsylvania, where, under private tutors, he spent three years in improving his education. Before returning to the east he had spent two years in studying medicine, but not being satisfied with his preparatory education, he concluded to improve it by a more thorough course of study. After having done so he resumed his medical studies, and graduated at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, March 9, 1853. Having met Dr. S. S. Mehard, late of Mercer, who was attending some special studies at Jefferson College, he learned of a desirable field in Mercer County for qualified young physicians, and soon afterward located at Sheakleyville. In the spring of 1854, having formed a partnership with Dr. John M. Irvine, of Sharon, he moved to that place. Dr. Irvine retired two years afterward and left Dr. Griswold the field. In October, 1861, the Doctor was appointed by Gov. Curtin surgeon of the One Hundred and Twelfth Pennsylvania Volunteers, but was soon made acting brigade and afterward acting division surgeon, which positions he occupied up to July 30, 1864, when he resigned his position as surgeon of the regiment for the purpose of accepting an appointment by President Lincoln in the corps of United States surgeons. This appointment was accepted while on the Petersburg front, and he was ordered to Washington and placed in charge of the Giesboro United States Army General Hospital, having a capacity of 500 beds. He filled this position till December 14, 1864, when the hospital was closed, and Dr. Griswold was transferred to the charge of Judiciary Square Hospital, of like capacity, which occupied the grounds whereon the pension office now stands, Washington, D. C. He remained in charge of the same until it was closed, July 8, 1865, after which he was engaged for a few weeks on a medical board for examining candidates for the United States colored regiments. He was then sent to New Orleans as chief medical officer for the Freedman's Bureau for the State of Louisiana, in which capacity he served till March 15, 1867, when, having resigned, and received commissions as lieutenant-colonel and colonel by brevet for long and faithful services, from the President, he finally returned to Sharon, where he has since continued in the active duties of his profession. Dr. Griswold was married in 1856 to Miss Mary A. Cook, of Vermont, who died without issue April 22, 1871. He was again married April 8, 1874, to Miss Nannie Green Heywood, of Wooster, Mass., of which union five children have been born, two of whom survive: Arthur H. and Ralph M. Politically the Doctor is a Republican, and a member of the three bodies of the Masonic fraternity, viz.: The blue lodge, the chapter and the commandery. He is a member of the Mercer County Medical Society, of the Trumbull County Medical Society, of Ohio, of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and of the American Medical Association. He was a member and officer of Section 3, of the Ninth International Medical Congress, which met at Washington, D. C., in September, 1887, and is also a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States Commandery of Pennsylvania.

WALTER E. HALL, proprietor of livery stables, was born in Brookfield, Ohio, June 7, 1846, and is a son of Ira D. and Laura M. (Griffin) Hall, he a native of Connecticut and she of Ohio. They were married in the latter State, and were the parents of two children: Walter E. and Florence, deceased. The mother died January 21, 1884, and the father is still a resident of Brookfield. Our subject grew to manhood in Trumbull County, and was educated in the Johnston public schools. He learned the blacksmith trade in Vienna, Ohio, and in 1866 came to Sharon. In 1870 he started a general blacksmith and wagon shop, which he carried on five years. In the meantime he purchased, in 1871, a half interest in the livery stable of Emanuel Struble, and in March, 1873, his present partner, Ernest Cope, bought out Mr. Struble, and the firm of Hall & Cope was formed. This firm has since been engaged in the same business, and is the oldest livery firm of the borough. Mr. Hall was married, December 24, 1868, to Miss Flora A. Hazleton, of Sharon, of which union seven children have been born: Maud D., Edward H., Bertha M., Edith L., Aurie D., Bessie G. and Charles H. The family belong to the Disciples' Church, and Mr. Hall is independent in politics, and a member of the P. H. C. and E. A. U.

REV. HORACE CHANDLER HALL, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Sharon, was born in Courtland County, N. Y., March 24, 1853, and is a son of Joseph B. Hall, a native of Susquehanna County, Penn. Our subject grew to maturity in his native county, and received his primary education in the public schools of that county and Crawford County, Penn. He prepared for his collegiate course at Reid Institute, Reidsburg, Penn., entered Bucknell University at Lewisburg, Penn., in the fall of 1878, and was graduated June 28, 1882. Before his graduation he received a call from the First Baptist Church of Sharon, assumed charge of that church in July, 1882, and was ordained August 3 of that year. Since coming to Sharon the membership of his church has doubled, while the handsome church edifice and pastoral residence have both been erected under his administration. Rev. Hall was married, August 26, 1872, to Miss Dora E. Post, of Centreville, Crawford Co., Penn., of which union two children, Lola E. and Leroy H., have been born. Politically Mr. Hall is independent. He is the originator of the P. H. C., and has been its supreme president since its organization. He is also a member of the E. A. U. Mr. Hall has recently established a preparatory institute in Sharon, which bears his name. The building is erected and equipped, and school was opened September 18, 1888, with nearly 100 students in attendance, and is daily increasing in numbers and popularity.

JACOB B. HANN, farmer, was born in Sussex County, N. J., July 24, 1822, and is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Roof) Hann, natives of New Jersey, born in 1783 and 1782, respectively. They were married in August, 1810, and in 1827 removed with a family of six children to Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. In 1830 they settled on the old Hann homestead in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where the remaining years of their lives were spent. The father died October 8 and the mother October 24, 1874, each being in their ninety-second year. They were life-long members of the Baptist Church, and in the August preceding their death celebrated the sixty-fourth anniversary of their marriage. They reared the following children: Sarah A. (deceased wife of William Applegate), Christopher (deceased), Mary (deceased wife of Henry Shilling, deceased), James, Jacob B. and Elizabeth J. (widow of Lemuel Troutman). Our subject grew to manhood on the old homestead, where he resided up to the spring of 1884, when he removed to Sharon. He was married, in October, 1854, to Miss Nancy, daughter of William Titus, of Hickory Township. She died in the Baptist faith in September, 1863. He was again married, January 30, 1868, to Miss Jennie, daughter of John and Kate (Groves) Cauffield, of Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. Her parents were natives of Ireland, who immigrated to Ohio in 1825, where both spent the remaining years of their lives. Mrs. Hann is the mother of one daughter by this marriage—Drusie. She is a member of the Disciple Church. Politically Mr. Hann is a Democrat, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity.

W. P. HANNA, piano and organ dealer, was born in New Castle, Penn., May 29, 1856, and is a son of J. C. Hanna, jeweler of that city. William P. grew to manhood in New Castle, and received his musical education at the Boston Conservatory of Music. In 1875 he established the New Castle Conservatory of Music, which he conducted about two years. In December, 1877, he located in Sharon and established a jewelry and musical instrument store. He carried on this business till the spring of 1887, when he disposed of the jewelry department, and has since devoted his sole attention to the piano and organ trade. He is one of the leading dealers in that line in Mercer County and does a large business. Politically he is a Democrat, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity. In the spring of 1888 he went to Australia as the representative of several leading musical instrument manufacturers, and took charge of their exhibit at the great Melbourne exposition.

HUGH C. HARSHAW, grocer, was born in the County Tyrone, Ireland, June 9, 1839, and is a son of James and Jane (Rafferty) Harshaw, who immigrated to Elgin County, Ontario, in 1845, subsequently removing into Middlesex County, where both spent the balance of their lives, dying at the ages of ninety-six and seventy-seven years, respectively. Our subject grew to manhood in Canada, followed farming and also taught school four years, and sold goods in St. Thomas, Ontario, about three years. In May, 1869, he came to Charleston, Mercer Co., Penn., where he remained until 1871, and then located in Sharpsville, where he was successfully engaged in the mercantile trade fourteen years, and one year in farming. In February, 1886, he came to Sharon, where he has since carried on a general grocery business. Mr. Harshaw was married June 27, 1872, to Miss Margaret T., daughter of John and Margaret McCallen, of Hickory Township. Three children survive this marriage: Jennie May, Edward Clark and Mary Evelyn. Mr. Harshaw is a Republican, and both he and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM C. HAUS, attorney at law, was born in Boalsburg, Centre Co., Penn., February 6, 1852, and is a son of Jacob and Sarah (Crozier) Haus, natives of Union and Juniata Counties, Penn., respectively. Jacob Haus was a prominent Republican politician of Union County, and served as deputy sheriff and also prothonotary of that county two terms. He afterward removed to Boalsburg, Penn., and in 1854 to New Castle, Penn., where he has since resided. In 1855 he was elected justice of the peace, and excepting the period from 1867 to 1869, when he was prothonotary of Lawrence County, has served continuously in that office up to the present. Our subject grew to manhood in Lawrence County, and was educated in the public schools of New Castle. He spent considerable time in his father's office during his term as prothonotary, and thus became familiar with the duties thereof. In January, 1870, Mr. Haus came to Mercer and clerked in the prothonotary's office nearly two years, devoting his spare moments to reading law. In October, 1871, he began reading in the office of McClure & Anderson, of Sharon, with whom he remained nearly two years. In August, 1873, he entered the Albany Law School of the Union University, Albany, N. Y., and graduated May 5, 1874. He was at once admitted to the Mercer bar, and began practice in Sharon, where he has since followed the duties of his profession. He was admitted to the United States courts May 8, 1876, and is the local solicitor for the Pennsylvania Company. Mr. Haus was married February 11, 1875, to Miss Mary, daughter of Cornelius Bowden, of Sharon, of which union two children, William B. and Emma R., have been born. Politically he is a Republican.

SALEM HEILMAN, physician and surgeon, was born in Kittanning, Armstrong County, Penn., June 10, 1847, and is a son of Isaac and Hannah (Briney) Heilman, the former a native of Armstrong and the latter of Westmoreland County, Penn., and both residents of the former county. The Doctor was the second eldest in a family of eight sons and four daughters, and received his education in the public schools and academies of Armstrong County. In the fall of 1868 he began reading medicine at Cochran's Mills, in that county, and in the fall of 1869 entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Penn., where he was graduated March 12, 1871. On the 6th of the following month he opened an office in Sharon, where he has been engaged in active practice for over seventeen years, and has built up one of the largest practices in this portion of the county. Dr. Heilman was married March 23, 1871, to Miss Bella McKee, of Cochran's Mills, Penn., of which union two children survive, Elmo Pearl and Ralph Salem. Dr. Heilman is a staunch Democrat, and the family adhere to the Lutheran Church. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and is a K. T. in that society, also belongs to A. O. U. W. and is supreme medical examiner of the P. H. C. Dr. Heilman spent five months in Europe during the winter of 1886-87, and took special courses in general surgery and gynecology in the medical colleges of Berlin, Vienna, Paris and London. For the past thirteen years he has been surgeon of the Fifteenth Regiment of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, and ranks as major of that regiment. He is an ex-president and member of the Mercer County Medical Society, and belongs to the State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

BRANTON H. HENDERSON, vice-president of the First National Bank, was born in Norristown, Montgomery County, Penn., December 24, 1823, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Branton) Henderson, of that town. His father was a lawyer of the Montgomery County bar, and died when our subject was a small child. In 1827 his mother, with her two sons, Samuel and Branton H., came from Norristown to Mercer, Penn., accompanied by her brother, Samuel Holstein. The latter was for many years one of the prominent attorneys of the Mercer County bar, where he resided until 1854. He then removed to Neshannock Falls, Lawrence County, Penn., where he owned a mill property, and lived at the Falls until his sudden death at New Castle, in 1869. Our subject was educated in the common schools of Mercer, and Allegheny College, Meadville. He early engaged in mercantile pursuits in Mercer, and in 1858 removed to New Castle with his mother, leaving his brother Samuel in Mercer, where the latter followed merchandising up to within a few years of his death, which occurred at Mercer in 1862. Samuel's first wife was a daughter of Judge Thomas S. Cunningham, a pioneer lawyer of the Mercer bar, and left one son, Matthias H., now vice-president of the Sharon National Bank. By his second wife he left three children, who, with the widow, reside in Philadelphia. Mrs. Elizabeth B. Henderson died in New Castle in 1871, and in 1872 Branton H. and his nephew, Matthias H., removed to Sharon, where both have since resided. Mr. Henderson became interested in the development of the coal fields in 1865, and has been largely interested in the iron interests of the valley during the past twenty years. In 1868 he organized the firm of Henderson, Allen & Co., who built the Allen furnace, later known as the Henderson furnace, at Sharpsville, in that year. In 1872 he was one of a company who established the Spearman furnaces of Sharpsville, and is still interested in that enterprise. He has been connected with the First National Bank of Sharon since 1873, and vice-president for the past two years, while his nephew has been interested in the Sharon National Bank since its organization in 1875. The Henderson family are Episcopalians in religious faith, and both Branton H. and Matthias H. are prominent members of the Masonic order.

WILLIAM HENLAN, proprietor of meat market, was born in Meadville, Penn., November 8, 1829, and is a son of John and Mary A. (Williams) Henlan. His father was a native of Newfoundland, of Irish ancestry, and came to Meadville in early manhood, where he married Mary A. Williams, who was born in that city in 1813. Her parents, Isaac and Margaret Williams, removed from Carlisle, Penn., to Meadville, Penn., late in the last or early in the present century. Isaac Williams was a shoemaker, and both he and wife died in Meadville. John and Mary Henlan reared two sons and four daughters, all of whom are living. The father was a tailor by trade, and served in the War of 1812. He died ten years ago, and his widow is still a resident of Meadville. Our subject left Meadville at the age of sixteen, and going to Warren, Ohio, served an apprenticeship of three years to the tin and coppersmith trade. In April, 1849, he came to Sharon, and for the next twelve years worked in the tin-shop of E. A. Wheeler, in the meantime engaging in business in Sharon on his own account for about three years. After leaving the employ of Mr. Wheeler he began working for C. G. Carver, Esq., with whom he remained nearly eighteen years. In December, 1878, he bought an interest in his brother John's meat market, some four years afterward purchased his brother's remaining interest, and has since continued the business alone. Mr. Henlan was married in 1851 to Miss Mary J., daughter of William and Julia A. (Reno) Trotter. The latter was born in Sharon, and is living with Mr. Henlan at the ripe old age of nearly eighty-four years. Five children have been born of this marriage, three of whom survive: Julia E., wife of William Dickson, of Sharon; Conrad C. and Gaylord L. Mr. Henlan is a Democrat in politics, and a leading gospel temperance worker. He has been Burgess of Sharon two terms, served in the council several years, and has also been a director on the public school board. He was once the Democratic candidate for the Legislature, and cut down the Republican majority from 1,200 to sixty-eight votes. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Henlan is a member of the Masonic order, A. O. U. W. and the E. A. U., and is one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Sharon.

SEBASTIAN HERRMANN, proprietor of the National Hotel, was born in Simmershausen, Bavaria, Germany, August 14, 1835, and is a son of Fabian and Magdalena (Dach) Herrmann, also natives of Bavaria, where the father died in 1879, and where the widow still lives. In June, 1854, Sebastian immigrated to Sharon, and began working in the coal mines of Hickory Township. He remained in that township and business principally till 1880, when he purchased his present hotel property in Sharon, where he has since carried on business. Mr. Herrmann was married in Greenville, Penn., by Rev. Andrew Schweiger, August 17, 1858, to Anna Kirch, daughter of Peter and Magdalinda Kirch, deceased, natives of Luxemburgh, Germany, who has borne him eight children, seven of whom survive: Magdalena (wife of Conrad Watson, of Sharon), Elizabeth (wife of James Claffey, of Sharon), Margaret (wife of Albert Wengler, of Sharon), John C., Atilia, Mary and Albert. The family belong to the Catholic Church, and in politics Mr. Herrmann is a Democrat.

FREDERICK HOELZLE, wholesale and retail dealer in meats, was born in Baden, Germany, November 6, 1836, and is a son of Stephen and Fredericka (Scheible) Hoelzle, who lived and died in their native land. Frederick served an apprenticeship at the butcher trade in Germany, and in April, 1854, immigrated to the United States, and spent two years at his trade in Philadelphia. In April, 1856, he came to Sharon, and the following spring opened a butcher-shop on State Street. He has since been successfully engaged in that business, being to-day one of the wealthiest citizens of the town. Mr. Hoelzle was married in March, 1857, to Miss Sophia Doerr, of Sharon, but a native of Germany. Of this union ten children were born, five of whom are living: Charles, Frederick, Henry, Nora and Eva, while Elizabeth died at the age of fourteen and the remaining four in infancy. Both he and wife belong to the Reformed Church. He is a Republican, and has filled the office of councilman two terms, and is a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities.

JACOB HOELZLE, proprietor of meat market, was born in Baden, Germany, March 15, 1841. His parents were Stephen and Fredericka (Scheible) Hoelzle, who spent their lives in Germany. Our subject learned the butcher's trade in his father's shop, and in October, 1860, he immigrated to Sharon. In the spring of 1863 he opened a meat market, in which business he has ever since been engaged. Mr. Hoelzle was married March 3, 1864, to Miss Louisa, daughter of Ignatz Dahringer, a native of Baden, Germany, who immigrated to New Castle, Penn., in 1848, moving from there to Lowellville, Ohio, and from there to Sharon, where he now resides. Mrs. Hoelzle was born in Germany, and is the mother of ten children, six of whom are living: Emma, wife of John Wagner, of Sharon; Mary, Frank, George, Elizabeth and Elmer. William died aged fourteen years, and the three others in infancy. Mr. Hoelzle is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F. and P. H. C., and his family belong to the German Reformed Church.

PETER HOFFMANN, dealer in stoves, tin-ware and hardware, was born in Bavaria, Germany, February 3, 1831, and is a son of Frederick and Margaret (Waltzer) Hoffmann, of that country. Peter grew up in his native land, and in December, 1854, immigrated to Mercer County, Penn., and began working in the coal mines of Hickory Township. One year afterward he brought out his parents, both of whom spent the balance of their days in Hickory Township. He followed coal mining for twenty years, then opened a bank for himself, which he operated successfully six years, and then retired from the business. In 1884 he opened the store now managed by his sons. Mr. Hoffmann was married January 4, 1856, to Miss Charlotta Gimbel, a native of Bavaria, who immigrated to Mercer County with her parents. They reared nine children, seven sons and two daughters: Peter, Charlotta, wife of Jacob Hassel, of Sharon; Frederick, Karl, Katherine, wife of Jacob Hassel, of Sharon; Calvin, Edward, Albert and Wilhelm. The family belong to the German Reformed Church, of Sharon, and in politics Mr. Hoffmann is a Republican.

CHARLES W. HOYT, physician and surgeon, was born June 11, 1839, in Chautauqua County, N. Y., and is a son of Joseph and Sarah (Boyce) Hoyt, of that county. The Hoyts were among the first settlers of Massachusetts, being there as early as 1620, from which time they trace their genealogy. The ancestors of this branch removed from Amesburg, Mass., to New Hampshire, where the father of our subject was born March 9, 1809. In early manhood he removed to Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he has since resided. Charles W. received his education in his native town, in the high-school, and subsequently attended Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn. He began the study of medicine in 1866, under the instruction of Drs. Glidden and Rice, of Panama, N. Y., receiving his degree from Cleveland Homœopathic Hospital College in 1870. Dr. Hoyt began the practice of his chosen profession at Panama, N. Y., removing to Sharon, Penn., in 1870, where he has since been engaged in active practice. He was the first announced homœopathic physician in the county, has built up a large and lucrative practice, and is recognized as one of the leading physicians of the Shenango Valley. He was married in 1861 to Miss Emeline Polley, of Panama, N. Y., of which union four children survive: Frank H. (a practicing physician associated with his father), Emma, Josephine and Myrtle. Dr. Hoyt went into the army in 1862, as lieutenant in Company F, One Hundred and Twelfth New York Volunteers, serving six months. He is a Republican, and one of the best known and most popular physicians of Mercer County.

ORLANDO A. JONES, physician and surgeon, was born in Youngstown, Ohio, August 19, 1863, and is a son of David A. and Cecelia (Armstrong) Jones, natives of Wales. The parents immigrated to Johnstown, Penn., about thirty-six years ago, and a few years afterward removed to Ohio, thence to the vicinity of Mercer, Penn., in 1868. They resided in this county several years, and then removed to Coalburg, Ohio, where the mother died in December, 1879, and where the father is still living. Dr. Jones grew up under the parental roof, and began reading medicine in 1880. He attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., and was graduated in March, 1886. He soon afterward located in Sharon, where he has built up a good practice. He is now in his second term as county physician of Sharon. Dr. Jones was married March 6, 1887, to Miss Matilda J. Herbert, of Coalburg, Ohio. The Doctor is a member of the Mercer County Medical Society, the I. O. R. M., is a Republican, and with his wife belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JONES BROS., grocers, are one of the younger firms of Sharon. Con C. Jones, the senior member, was born in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., October 30, 1861, and is a son of Seth and Margaret (Smith) Jones, residents of Hickory Township. He grew up on the old homestead, and began clerking in Sharon in 1886. In July, 1887, the firm of Jones Bros., was formed. They purchased the grocery store of D. A. Clepper, and have since done a fair business. Con C. was married August 1, 1888, to Marie Struble, of Sharon. He is a Republican, a member of the Equitable Aid Union, K. of G. E., and Jr. O. United A. M. Wade B. Jones, the junior member of the firm, was born on the old homestead, August 20, 1865, and remained there until the present partnership was formed. He is a Republican, and was married June 29, 1887, to Sadie Martin, of Sharon, who is a member of the Baptist Church. Though a new firm, Jones Bros. have been doing their full share of the business in their line.

MATTHIAS KAHL, general grocer, was born in Prussia, Germany, November 6, 1846, and is a son of John and Mary Kahl, natives of Germany, who immigrated to Madison, Ind., in December, 1853, and in 1855 removed to Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn. Here they resided until the fall of 1870, when they removed to a farm about three miles east of Greenville, where they are now living. Our subject grew to manhood in Mercer County, and in his early boyhood began working in the coal mines of Hickory Township, which he followed until the spring of 1884, a period of twenty-five years. In April, 1884, he opened his present grocery store in Sharon, and has since built up a good business. He was married, April 26, 1870, to Miss Rosa Connor, of Hickory Township. Of this union seven children have been born to them, six of whom survive: Mary, Catharine (deceased), Rosa, Annie, John, Martha and William. Mr. Kahl is a stanch Democrat, and in 1876 was one of the Democratic candidates for the Legislature. The family are members of the Catholic Church, and he is one of the enterprising business men of Sharon. Mr. Kahl was one of the organizers of the Merchants' Protective Association in the spring of 1887, and has been president of the society since its organization.

SAMUEL KIMBERLY, deceased manufacturer, was born near Salem, Ohio, November 25, 1817, and was a son of Amos E. Kimberly, also a native of the Western Reserve. Samuel was reared in Columbiana County, and spent his early manhood near Austintown, Ohio. About 1861-62 he became interested in the development of the coal fields near Sharon, removing to that town in 1862, and at once becoming one of its most prominent business men. With the late Henry Forker, of Sharon, and Myron Arms, of Youngstown, Ohio, he opened the Keel Ridge Bank in 1863, one of the most successful mines ever operated in Hickory Township. He was afterward interested with Enoch Filer and others in the Mount Pleasant, Hickory, Lackawannock and other mines. About 1865 he bought an interest in the Westerman Iron Company, which he retained several years. In 1869 he built the Keel Ridge Furnace, now owned by his son, P. L. Kimberly. He also had large interests at New Castle, where, in 1872, he purchased the Etna Furnace, which he operated successfully for several years. At different times he was interested in the Wampum Furnace, the Eagle Furnace, at Youngstown, Ohio, and other enterprises. The great depreciation of property and securities following the panic of 1873 compelled him to close out his interests here in 1878, and a year later he removed to the West, finally locating at Geneva, Ill. After leaving Sharon he gave his attention mostly to iron ore mining, and at the time of his death was president of the Emmett Mining Company, whose offices are in Sharon. Mr. Kimberly was twice married, first to Miss Minerva Lanterman, of Austintown, Ohio, who left at her death a family of three sons and one daughter: Amos E., German A., Peter L. and Mrs. Kate E. Murdock. He died February 25, 1885, at his home in Geneva, Ill., in his sixty-eighth year, where his widow still resides. Mr. Kimberly was a man of most active business habits, readily grasping at once the scope and details of large transactions, often involving many thousands of dollars. In politics he was an ardent Republican, and took a deep interest in the success of that party.

JOHN S. KING, deceased merchant, son of Phillip and Susanna King, was born in Charlestown Township, Chester Co., Penn., April 26, 1813, and died at Sharon, Penn., December 4, 1864. In early life he held responsible positions as a salesman in mercantile establishments in his native county, and prior to reaching manhood he became proprietor of a general store at Port Providence, Montgomery Co., Penn. While thus in business he was joined in marriage January 30, 1834, to Catharine, daughter of Peter and Rachael Young, of his native township. She was born February 18, 1812, and died April 11, 1835, leaving one son, Ambrose M., who died four months afterward. Soon after the death of his wife Mr. King disposed of his business and engaged in superintending the building of bridges, etc., on the P. & R. R. R., and at Petersburg, Va. After building one lock and bridge on the James River Canal, near Lynchburg, Va., he returned to Chester County, Penn., during the fall of 1838. Mr. King was again married, at Norristown, Penn., September 16, 1841, to Mary C. McFarland, a native of Montgomery County, Penn., born November 26, 1813. He again engaged in the mercantile business at Milford Mills, Chester Co., Penn., which he continued until 1846, when, in company with James McFarland, he removed to Mercer County, locating at the Big Bend, on the Beaver & Erie Canal. He here engaged in the manufacture of iron from the native ores, and as a consignor of merchandise. This enterprise having resulted in financial loss to its owners, he engaged in superintending an iron furnace near New Wilmington, Penn., and continued in this business about one year. He then removed to Sharon, and in partnership with A. L. and George Cochran, of New Castle, engaged in mining and shipping coal from their mines in Hickory Township, which he continued up to the time of his death. By his second marriage the following children were born to him: Kate Y., wife of W. O. Leslie, of Sharon; Mrs. Myra S. McMartin, of Raton, N. M.; Arthur M., of Arkansas; Mary W., wife of G. D. Davitt, of Sharpsville; one daughter, deceased, and one died in infancy. His wife died December 1, 1854, and he survived her ten years, dying December 4, 1864. Mr. King was a prominent and active Republican politician during his residence in Mercer County, and was a candidate for congressional nomination once or twice in the Republican district convention.

JOSEPH KING, justice of the peace, was born in Chester County, Penn., October 26, 1817, and is a son of Philip and Susanna (Slonaker) King, natives of that county, of German descent. Joseph grew up in that county, and received the usual advantages which the district schools afforded. He learned the blacksmith's trade, and followed it for many years, then went into farming, which he continued until the spring of 1859. In November, 1860, he came to Sharon, and, in partnership with his brother, John S., and Wheeler & Irwin, started a stove foundry. He remained in the foundry business about twelve years, and then opened a stove and hardware store in partnership with his niece, Mrs. W. O. Leslie, in which he remained until 1874, when he sold out to Mr. Leslie. In 1876 Mr. King was appointed a justice of the peace, has been elected to the same office three times, and has filled it continuously up to the present, each term being for five years. The present term will not expire till May 1, 1892. He was married January 14, 1847, to Miss Barbara Strough, of Chester County, Penn., of which union two children grew to maturity: Elnora, wife of S. M. Dalzell, of Erie, Penn., and Addison S., born February 2, 1853, and died November 2, 1875. Politically Mr. King is a Republican, of strong temperance proclivities; has served in the council one term and nine years on the school board, and both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, in which organization Mr. King fills the office of elder.

ARTHUR and MARIAN (Smith) KIRK are among the oldest living citizens of Sharon. The former was born in Scotland July 5, 1804, there grew to manhood, and married Marian Smith, also a native of Scotland, born December 13, 1803. In 1839 they immigrated to Allegheny City, Penn., being then the parents of eight children. Four were born in this State, and a fact worthy of mention is that the whole twelve are living. Mr. Kirk learned the weaver's trade in his native land, and came out to take charge of a cotton-mill in Allegheny City, which position he held about ten years. He afterward erected a cotton factory near Saxonburg, Butler Co., Penn., which he operated a few years. About 1855 he came to Sharon, and went into the grocery business, which he followed successfully until his declining years compelled him to give up the active duties of a business life. He and wife are still residents of Sharon, and are in their eighty-fifth and eighty-sixth years, respectively. Both enjoy the blessing of good health, have been life-long Presbyterians, and in politics he is a Republican. George S. Kirk, harness and collar manufacturer, and youngest son of Arthur and Marian Kirk, was born in Butler County, Penn., and learned his trade in Sharon, at which he worked till entering business for himself in 1869. He devotes his time to the manufacture of harness, collars and carriage trimmings. In January, 1865, at the age of fifteen, he enlisted in Company G, Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served till the close of the war, three of his brothers also serving in the army. Mr. Kirk is a Republican, and staunch in his devotion to the principles of that party.

JOHN S. KISSINGER, manufacturer and bottler of mineral waters, was born in Clarion County, Penn., January 7, 1854, and is a son of David and Siniah (Cochran) Kissinger, of the same county. Upon the death of his mother, which took place when John was about six years old, his father moved to Lawrence County, Penn., where John grew to manhood and received a common school education. He learned his present business in New Castle, and in January, 1885, came to Sharon and established a factory for the manufacture of all kinds of mineral water. He has since built up a lucrative trade, and is recognized as one of the young progressive men of the town. Mr. Kissinger was married June 15, 1879, to Miss Sarah Hunt, of Lawrence County, Penn., and daughter of Abraham Hunt, now a resident of Grove City, Penn. One son has been born to them, Walter C. Politically Mr. Kissinger is a Democrat, and his wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HARRY KLINE, contractor and builder, was born in New Castle, Lawrence Co., Penn., August 8, 1854, and is a son of Henry and Anna J. (Bell) Kline, both natives of Eastern Pennsylvania; he of German and she of Irish ancestry. Henry died in New Castle in 1861, and his widow came to Sharon with the children in 1865. Here Harry grew to manhood and learned the carpenter trade, at which he worked several years. He then began contracting and building, and in 1882 built a planing-mill on the N. Y., P. & O. R. R., which he has since operated. In 1886 he purchased his present lumber yard, corner of Railroad and Silver Streets, and in connection with his planing-mill does a good business in the contracting and building line. Mr. Kline was married in February, 1884, to Miss Mary Stickle, of Lawrence County, of which union two children, Henry and Mary, have been born. Politically he is independent, and is a K. of P., and one of the young progressive men of Sharon. He adheres to the Methodist Episcopal Church, while his wife is a Presbyterian.

LAFFERTY BROS., druggists, is one of the new firms of Sharon. John H. Lafferty was born in Jefferson Township, Mercer Co., Penn., June 14, 1863, and was principally educated in Sharon. He began clerking here in 1880, and has since followed that business. He is a son of James and Mary (Todd) Lafferty, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter of Bruce County, Ontario, Canada. The parents were married in Canada, and soon afterward removed to Mercer County, where the father died August 26, 1883. The widow resides on the homestead in Jefferson Township. Mr. Lafferty is a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and of the E. A. U., and in politics is a Democrat. He is a dealer in fine stock, and does considerable business in that line. Archie I. Lafferty, was born in Jefferson Township March 10, 1867, and received his education in this county. He learned the drug business with Dr. B. Love, of Sharon. After Dr. Love's death the business was conducted by our subject till April, 1887, when he purchased a one-half interest, and in December following, his brother, John H., purchased the remaining half. The firm of Lafferty Bros. has since carried on a successful business. In politics Archie I. is a Republican, and belongs to the E. A. U.

JOHN LEE, retired merchant, was born in Lancashire, England, May 6, 1828, and is a son of Jeremiah and Nancy (Jackson) Lee, both of whom spent their lives in England. Our subject grew up in his native land, and learned the hatter's trade, and subsequently the weaver's trade, at which he worked till September, 1854, when he immigrated to Sharon. He went to work for the Sharon Iron Company, and continued in their employ until February, 1856, when he began working in the coal mines of Hickory Township, which he followed till 1864. He then embarked in the grocery business in Sharon, in partnership with James Beveridge, as Lee & Beveridge, but soon purchased his partner's interest, and became sole proprietor. He continued to do a very successful business until 1874, when he sold out to his son and retired from active life. Since that time Mr. Lee has devoted his attention to looking after his real estate in Sharon and vicinity. He was married to Ann Martin, who is the mother of four children: Edwin, William, Nancy and Mary. Mr. Lee is a Republican, a member of the I. O. O. F., and the family adhere to the Episcopal Church. He is an ardent supporter of education, and his daughters are graduates of the Sharon High-school and the Edinboro Normal School, the youngest being now a teacher in the latter institution.

WILLIAM LEE, general grocer, was born in England, September 14, 1850, and is a son of John Lee, whose sketch appears in this chapter. In 1854 the family immigrated to Sharon, where William grew to manhood. In early boyhood he began working in the coal mines of Hickory Township. In 1862 his father started a grocery store in Sharon, and our subject assisted him as clerk until 1873, when he started in business for himself. In 1877 he sold out, and visited his native land. He returned in 1878, and lived in Sharon till 1882, when he spent one year clerking in Philadelphia. Coming back to Sharon, he continued to clerk till the spring of 1887. In August, of that year, a partnership was formed with D. A. Clepper, under the firm name of Lee & Clepper, and a wholesale grocery house was opened in the Carver House Block. This partnership continued until March 1, 1888, when the firm was dissolved, and Mr. Lee opened his present store in Lee's Block, on East State Street. Mr. Lee was married October 16, 1881, to Miss Isabella H. Jewett, of Pittsburgh, a native of Providence, R. I., of which union two children survive: Milly H. and Herbert M. The family attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Lee is a Republican and a member of the K. of P., and is one of the well-known business men of the town.

PHILIP A. LEONARD, foreman and manager of the nail department of the Sharon Iron Co.'s factory, was born in Allegheny City, Penn., November 13, 1838. His parents were Philip and Mary (Crook) Leonard, natives of Gloucestershire, England, who were married in Allegheny City. The former was an iron mechanic, and worked in Pittsburgh until his death. His widow married Edward Higgs, of New Castle, Penn., and is now a resident of Sharon. Philip A. was reared in New Castle, Penn., and learned the nailer's trade at Niles, Ohio. In the fall of 1862 he came to Sharon, and has since been connected with the old mills, being for twenty-three years foreman and manager of the nail factory. Mr. Leonard was married June 22, 1858, to Miss Anna Leah Kelly, of New Castle, Penn., of which union six children survive: John A., Mary F., Ollie (wife of Elias Gething, of Sharon), Martha A., Anna B. and Philip C. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P. and G. A. R. In the spring of 1862 he enlisted in Company C, Eighty-fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served three months. He is the inventor and patentee of a scraper or turner for grindstones, and of an attachment for a cut-nail machine for the manufacture of iron nails, and is one of the leading representative iron workers of the Shenango Valley.

W. O. LESLIE, hardware merchant, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, May 9, 1846. His father, Robert Leslie, was born June 25, 1794, on a farm where now stands the town of Tarentum, Allegheny Co., Penn., and was the son of James Leslie, born in Cumberland County, Penn., in 1764. The latter was a civil engineer by profession, and married Mary, daughter of Robert Galbreath, a Scotchman, and a prominent lawyer of Pittsburgh. James died in Pittsburgh September 1, 1830, and his widow April 1, 1849. Robert Leslie removed from Pittsburgh, Penn., to Youngstown, Ohio, when eighteen years of age, where he afterward carried on the mercantile business. He there married Betsy, daughter of Henry and Hannah Wick, who died without issue about one year afterward. He was again married, to Eliza Scott, of Allegheny County, Penn. He removed from Youngstown to Brookfield, Ohio, and was engaged in running a line of stages to Warren, Ohio. In 1846 he removed from Brookfield to Sharon, where he died June 21, 1855, his widow surviving him till March 20, 1865. They were the parents of seven children: Mary (deceased), Belinda M., Henry (deceased), Lucretia W., Lovica H., W. O. and Kate S. Our subject grew up in Sharon, and received his education in the public schools of that borough. He began clerking for A. L. Crawford & Co., coal operators, and in 1865 the firm of Williams & Leslie was organized and a hardware store opened. Since that time Mr. Leslie has been successfully engaged in the same line of business. He was married March 9, 1865, to Miss Kate Y., daughter of John S. King, deceased. She was born in Chester County, Penn., and is the mother of three children: Frank K., John S. and Grace S. SAMUEL S. LIDDLE, proprietor of livery stable, was born in Mahoning County, Ohio, May 24, 1844, and is a son of Carnes and Julia A. (Gilbert) Liddle, the former a native of England, of Irish parentage, and the latter of Eastern Pennsylvania, of German descent. They were married in Mahoning County, Ohio, and settled on a farm in that county. They were the parents of the following children: Joseph (deceased), Mrs. Mary Fletcher (of Wheeling, Va.), John (who served nearly four years in the Rebellion and died of wounds received in the service), Samuel S. (of Sharon), Juliet (deceased) and Henry (of Wheeling, Va.). Samuel S. grew up in his native county, and in 1861 enlisted in Company D, Sixty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, for three years, but in the latter part of 1862 he was discharged from the regiment on account of sickness contracted in the service. Returning home he soon after went to Youngstown, Ohio, and learned the blacksmith's trade. In 1865 he came to Sharon, where he was employed in the rolling mills about one year and learned the puddler's art, but then went back to his old trade, entering into partnership with Cornelius Bowden. He subsequently sold his interest to his partner and opened a shop for himself, which he carried on till 1868-69, when he went into the livery business with Mr. Boise. After a few years he bought out his partner and continued the business for several years, when business reverses necessitated his returning to his trade, at which he worked till October, 1878, when the present partnership of Liddle & Dougherty was formed. Mr. Liddle was married July 8, 1868, to Miss Julia Quinby, daughter of Samuel Quinby, one of the pioneers of Sharon. Three children were born to them: Carl C., William W. and Essie E. Politically he is a Prohibitionist, and a member of the A. O. U. W. The family belong to the Presbyterian Church.

DR. BENJAMIN LOVE, deceased, was born in Mercer County, Penn., July 1, 1828, and was a son of Benjamin and Sarah Love, who came from Eastern Pennsylvania, and died in this county, aged ninety-one and eighty, respectively. Dr. Love grew to manhood in Mercer County, and studied medicine with his brother, Dr. James Love, of Greenfield, Mercer County. In February, 1857, he removed to Girard, Ohio, but returned in the spring of 1858 and located in Sharon, where he continued in the active duties of his profession up to his death, which took place at the old Byers homestead in Lackawannock Township, where he was visiting at the time, July 26, 1886. He also carried on a drug store in Sharon for many years. He was married March 26, 1857, to Miss Julia A., daughter of Daniel C. and Maria Byers, of Lackawannock Township, the former a well-known hotel keeper of Greenfield. Of this union three children, Charles J., Elmer P. and Effie J., were born to them, all of whom died after reaching maturity. Dr. Love was an attendant of the United Presbyterian Church, to which denomination his widow belongs. Politically a Republican, he filled the offices of councilman and school director of Sharon, and for nearly thirty years was one of the leading physicians of the Shenango Valley. He was well known and respected by the people of his native county, and stood high among his professional brethren.

ALEXANDER MACAULAY, liveryman, was born in Scotland April 20, 1858, and is a son of Francis and Jannett (Ray) Macaulay, natives of Scotland. In 1863 the family immigrated to Honeybrook, Penn., and in 1868 the father removed to Bethel, Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where the family joined him about one year later. Francis Macaulay carried on a store about twelve years. In the summer of 1885 they located in Sharon, where the father died in September, and where the mother still resides. In June, 1885, our subject bought a half interest in his present livery stables, and with John T. Pew, under the firm name of Pew & Macaulay, carried on the business up to March 23, 1888, when Charles A. Polley bought out Mr. Pew, and the firm became Macaulay & Polley. Mr. Macaulay was married January 20, 1884, to Miss Susan Rhind, of Sharon, of which union two children survive: Francis and William. The family belong to the Episcopal Church, and politically Mr. Macaulay is a Republican.

SEPTIMUS MARSDEN, retired steel operator, was born in Sheffield, Yorkshire, England, December 7, 1832, and is a son of Jonathan and Jane (Allride) Marsden, who spent their lives in England. Our subject began working in a steel works at ten years of age, and continued working at that business until January 1, 1853, when he immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn. He there worked at his trade till June, 1856, when he came to Sharon to superintend the construction of the furnace portions of the steel works then being fitted up in the Sharon Iron Works for the manufacture of steel from raw ore. This experiment continued until the fall of 1857, when it was given up as a failure, which Mr. Marsden had predicted from the beginning would be the final result. In the spring of 1859 Mr. Marsden returned to his old employer, Samuel McKelvy, of Pittsburgh, and worked in that establishment under the successors, Hussy & Wells, till the spring of 1861, when he left and helped to establish the steel works of Parks Bro. & Co., of Pittsburgh. He worked there nearly six years, and for one year worked with Bailey & Brown, of the Wayne Iron & Steel Works. In 1867 he returned to Sharon, and in the fall of 1868 settled on his farm near Transfer. In the autumn of 1869 he sold out and removed to Philadelphia, where for nearly ten years he had charge of William & Harvey Rowland's Steel Works. In April, 1879, he resigned this position and again came to Sharon, and settled on a farm in Jefferson Township, where he resided until September, 1886, since which time he has devoted his attention to looking after his property in Sharon, whither he removed that fall. He was married April 22, 1857, to Elizabeth, only child of Solomon and Jane Dillinger. One son, Charles (deceased), was born of this union. Mr. Marsden and wife are members of the Episcopal Church. Politically he is a Democrat, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity.

WILLIAM B. MARSHALL, manager of the Sharon Iron Works Store, is a native of Washington County, Penn. His parents removed from that county to Lawrence County, Penn., when William B. was but six years old, and he there grew to manhood and received a good English education. He came to Sharon in 1868, and for about eight years was engaged in the mercantile business. In 1876, soon after the Sharon Iron Works Store was established, he took charge of it, and, excepting a period of about two years, has since continued in that capacity. Under his vigorous and judicious management the Sharon Iron Works Store has been highly prosperous, and is one of the leading mercantile houses of Mercer County. Mr. Marshall is married and the father of three children: Kate B., Clifford C. and Ettie O. Politically he is a Democrat, and both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

JACOB MESSERSMITH, proprietor of the Messer House, was born in Dauphin County, Penn., April 19, 1818, to Andrew and Catherine (Seburne) Messersmith, natives of that county. In 1824 the parents moved to Hartford, Trumbull Co., Ohio, where Jacob was reared and educated. He learned the blacksmith's trade with his father, and followed it seven years. He then located at Vienna, Ohio, and was engaged in the cattle business for twelve years. In 1865 he came to Sharon, and began the hotel business in the old Exchange Hotel, which he ran very successfully for six years. He bought his present business site in 1873, erected a building, and has remained there ever since. He was married April 9, 1838, to Mary Ann, daughter of Henry Fry, by whom he has eight living children: Belinda (wife of Robert Mackey, of Sharon), Ransom and Julia (of Sharon), Edward (superintendent of the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad eating houses), Allie (wife of Joseph Hamler, of Cleveland, Ohio), Frank (of Sharon), Mary (wife of Prof. Rumsey, of Cleveland) and Barney. Mrs. Messersmith died March 13, 1887. He is a Mason, being a member of Erie Lodge, of Warren, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and one of Sharon's respected citizens.

JOSEPH McCLEERY was born in Hickory Township March 25, 1823. His father, Rev. George McCleery, was a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Coitsville, Mahoning Co., Ohio, in 1817-18, where he married Mary Beggs, a native of Washington County, Penn., whose parents removed to Coitsville when she was an infant. After their marriage they located in Hubbard, Ohio, and in 1820 settled on the farm where our subject now lives. During the early portion of his life Rev. McCleery preached the gospel for the Baptists through this valley. He also preached two years in Butler County, besides devoting his time to school teaching. In 1828 he united with the Disciples, and preached for that church, more or less, the balance of his days. About 1830 he commenced the practice of medicine, and continued in that profession up to November 13, 1843, when he died, aged fifty-four years. Rev. McCleery reared nine children: James, Nancy (widow of Henry Dunham), Joseph J., Rainey, Mary S. (deceased), Lorinda (wife of Jesse Dunlap, of Washington Territory), Adaline, Corydon and Sarah (wife of David Hopkins, of Illinois). Mrs. McCleery died September 13, 1877, in the faith of the Disciple Church, aged eighty-three years. Our subject was reared on the old homestead, and was educated in the pioneer schools. He was married March 28, 1854, to Caroline W. Baker, of Bloomfield, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and settled in Sharon in the present residence of T. J. Porter. In early life he followed farming, and in 1848 went into the coal business, which he continued up to a recent date. He was also engaged in merchandising about four years.

Mrs. McCleery died April 30, 1884, aged fifty-two years, in full communion with the Disciple Church. She left two children, Charles J. and Jessie A. Politically Mr. McCleery was a Democrat up to the organization of the Prohibition party of Mercer County, since which time he has been an ardent advocate of Prohibition principles. He has served on the school board of Sharon sixteen years, and in the borough council two years.

SAMUEL McCLORE, agent, superintendent and manager of the Stewart Iron Company, limited, was born in Little Beaver, Beaver Co., Penn., January 3, 1839, and is the eldest son of Joseph and Nancy McClure, of Clarksville, Penn. Samuel grew to manhood under the parental roof, working on a farm and clerking in his father's store during his boyhood days. After receiving the usual common school education he entered Girard Academy, Girard, Penn., where he spent several years. In 1861 he began clerking in Clarksville, and in 1862 he entered the employ of James Wood & Co., proprietors of Homewood Furnace, Lawrence County, Penn. In June, 1863, he came to Wheatland, Mercer County, in connection with the same firm, and remained with them till their failure in 1873, at which time he was assistant superintendent of the works. For a few months succeeding this event he had charge of the blast furnace in West Middlesex. In January, 1874, he became connected with the Stewart Iron Company, limited, of Sharon, and has since been manager of the business of that firm in the Shenango Valley, as well as the coke plant in Fayette County, Penn., which was constructed under his direction. Under Mr. McClure's able management the business of this firm has grown prosperous, and stands second to none in the valley. Our subject was married July 1, 1863, to Miss Augusta R. Dickson, of Clarksville, of which union three daughters have been born: Mary, wife of Charles F. Phillips, of Sharon; Anna D. and Jennie. Mr. McClure is a leading Republican, and in 1884 was elected State senator for the Forty-seventh District, composed of the counties of Mercer and Lawrence, for the term ending in December, 1888. He was also the choice of his party in Mercer County for renomination. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also of the A. O. U. W. Mr. McClure is a stockholder in, and one of the managers of, the Shenango Machine Company, limited, and vice-president of the Sharon Steel Casting Company, two of the leading manufacturing institutions of Sharon.

JOSEPH N. McCLORE, attorney at law, was born January 1, 1843, in Clarksville, Mercer Co., Penn., and is a son of Joseph and Nancy McClure, of that borough. He grew to maturity on his father's farm at Clarksville, and at the age of sixteen entered Girard Academy, Girard, Penn., where he spent over one year, and then went to Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., where he remained four terms. During this period he clerked, and in spare moments studied law with the intention of entering that profession, registering under the law firm of Griffith & Trunkey, of Mercer. He then entered the Ohio Law School, Cleveland, Ohio, graduated November 16, 1865, and stood his examination, admitting him to all the courts of Ohio, including the United States Court. In January, 1866, Mr. McClure was admitted to the bar at Mercer, but did not commence practice until April, 1867, when he opened an office in Sharon, where he has since continued in the active duties of his profession. He has been for some years the legal representative of several of the leading manufacturing institutions of the valley, and also the attorney for several of its prominent manufacturing and financial interests. Mr. McClure is president of the S. V. Railroad, of the Stewart Railroad, and the State Line & Middlesex Railroad, and is the local solicitor for the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Masonic and

I. O. O. F. societies. Mr. McClure was married December 12, 1865, to Miss Minerva R., daughter of Samnel Madge, of Mercer County. Two children are the fruits of this union: Charles N. and Frank M.

JOHN MCCLURE, attorney at law, was born in Clarksville, Penn., April 22, 1852, and is a son of Joseph and Nancy McClure, of that town. He grew up and was educated in the public schools of his native village, and in the fall of 1868 entered Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn., where he graduated in June, 1873. During the summer he began reading law at home, and afterward read in his brother Joseph's office for a short time. In January, 1874, he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and attended one term of lectures at the law school of that city. He spent the following summer reading law, and was admitted at Mercer in September, 1874. Soon afterward he began practice with Griffith & Mason, with whom he remained till January, 1876. He then located in Sharon, where he has been engaged in active practice up to the present. Mr. McClure was married December 27, 1880, to Miss Emma Runser, of Sharon, who died October 4, 1881. Politically he is a Democrat, and a member of the Masonic and K. of P. societies.

ROBERT MCFARLAND, retired harness maker, was born in Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, March 10, 1815. His grandparents, Robert McFarland and wife, immigrated from Ireland to the vicinity of Harrisburg, Penn., whence they removed to Washington County, Penn., and settled near Steubenville, Ohio. In 1806 they removed to Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, where Robert died May 1, 1815, and his widow several years afterward. They reared three sons and four daughters: Thomas, Archibald, John, Martha, Polly, Jane and Peggy. The sons lived and died in Hartford Township; Martha married Willian Dugan, and after his death Azariah Dunham; Polly married Hugh McDowell, and Jane married John Canon, and subsequently George Shilling. Thomas, the father of our subject, was born near Harrisburg, Penn., in 1794, and grew up under the parental roof. He married Martha, daughter of Nathan Fell, of Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., who bore him five children: Nathan, Robert, Smith, George and Cynthia, wife of Lewis Holland, of Trumbull County, Ohio. The mother died in 1827, and he again married, Mrs. Nancy McKnight, and reared three children by this union: Thomas F., Amelia and Phoebe. He and his brother, Archibald, served under Harrison in the War of 1812, and he survived until 1862, dying on the old homestead in Trumbull County. Our subject left home at the age of seventeen, and went to learn the harness business, at which he served a full apprenticeship, and then spent eighteen months in a journeying tour through the Eastern States and Canada, reaching Sharon in February, 1838. The following month he went to Pittsburgh in a one-horse sleigh, purchased a small stock of leather and hardware, and, returning to Sharon, opened a harness shop on the north side of State Street, west of the river. He began business on a capital of $18, but by steady industry and rigid economy he accumulated through the passing years a handsome estate. Mr. McFarland was married May 29, 1838, to Chloe Fuller, of Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, who bore him one son, Thomas D., of Sharon. Our subject has been a life-long Democrat, filled the office of burgess four years, and has been a member of the council and school board several terms. He is one of the two living charter members of Sharon Lodge No. 347, I. O. O. F., J. J. Spearman, Esq., being the other, and is also a member of the Masonic fraternity. He has lived in Sharon over half a century, and is one of the successful pioneer fathers of the town.

WINFIELD SCOTT MCFARLAND, physician and surgeon, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., January 1, 1848, and is a son of Smith and Sarah (Varnes) McFarland, residents of Orangeville. Our subject grew to manhood on the homestead in Pymatuning Township, and attended the district schools. He learned telegraphy, which he followed about thirteen years, and in the meantime devoted his spare moments to reading medicine. He attended lectures at the medical department of the University of Wooster, Cleveland, Ohio, and graduated therefrom July 22, 1885. He immediately opened an office in Hendersonville, Mercer Co., Penn., removing to Sharpsville the following November, where he remained until locating in Sharon in August, 1887, where he has since built up a very good practice. Dr. McFarland was married to Miss Lorindia Seaton, of Pymatuning Township, December 29, 1868, who died November 20, 1884, leaving three children: Lucius Robert, Maud and Plummer Scott. He was again married, July 29, 1885, to Miss Ida Shull, of Hartford, Trumbull Co., Ohio. The Doctor is a member of the K. of P., E. A. U. and P. H. C., and in politics is a Democrat.

WILLIAM MCGILVRAY, deceased, was born within the limits of Allegheny City, Penn., December 15, 1824, and was a son of Alexander and Elizabeth (Cameron) McGilvray. The parents were natives of the highlands of Scotland, and immigrated to the United States in 1808. After reaching Pittsburgh the father entered the employ of the late Bishop Hopkins, as gardener, and subsequently served the Hon. H. Denny in the same capacity. The latter became so much interested in his employee's advancement and success that he sent his son William to the Western Theological Seminary, where he passed two years in study. His friends designed him for the law, but young McGilvray's tastes did not accord with their choice. Having a decided inclination for mechanical pursuits he learned the blacksmith trade in Allegheny City, and to better his condition went to Sharon in 1850, where, as a stockholder and director of the Jackson Iron Company, he remained until 1854, when he purchased and remodeled the works which bore his name up to his death, July 5, 1877. Both in this establishment as well as in other enterprises with which he was connected he was very successful, for he possessed in a large measure the perseverance and determination of purpose that overcame all obstacles. Starting in the battle of life devoid of pecuniary means, by his indomitable energy and industry he won a competence. Though not of the wealthiest, he exerted himself to foster the business interests of Sharon, and always took an active part in every worthy public enterprise. He was a large stockholder in the Sharon Gas Company and the Sharon Savings Bank. Mr. McGilvray was married May 3, 1844, to Miss Rebecca Ewing, of Pittsburgh, a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., who reared the following children: Elizabeth C., deceased wife of L. Buchholz; Lydia, wife of D. R. Shiras; Mary J., wife of C. W. Ray; Rebecca V., wife of James Carnes, and Catharine C., wife of Samuel C. Iddings. In politics Mr. McGilvray was a Democrat, but took no active interest in political affairs.

WILLIAM A. MCKNIGHT, druggist, was born in Wisconsin, November 26, 1859, and is a son of Jonas F. and Mary J. (Ferguson) McKnight, of Clarks-ville, Penn. His great-grandfather, William McKnight, was born in Washington County, Penn., and was a son of David and Hannah (Gaylor) McKnight, of that county, who located in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., in 1804. They had then nine children: Robert, Polly, Anna, Elizabeth, William G., David, John, Margaret and Hanna; while Andrew, James and Joseph were born after the settlement of the parents in this county. Andrew and Joseph are the only survivors of the family. The parents both died in Pymatuning Township, the father November 16, 1839, and the mother some years afterward. The paternal grandparents of our subject were William G. and Agnes (Fell) McKnight, also pioneers of Mercer County. The maternal grandparents, Thomas and Experience (Dunham) Ferguson, were pioneers of Pymatuning Township. William A. grew up in Clarksville, and was educated in the public schools of this county. In 1880 he entered the drug store of Dr. B. Love, in Sharon, and learned the druggist's profession. In October, 1885, Mr. McKnight purchased the drug store of W. V. Byard, one of the oldest drug houses of Sharon, where he has since conducted a good business. He was married December 28, 1887, to Miss Nannie L., daughter of William Bailey, of Pymatuning Township. Mr. McKnight is a Democrat, a member of the E. A. U. and N. U., and is one of the well-known druggists of Sharon.

PATRICK McMANUS, proprietor of the McManus House, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, March 1, 1844, and is a son of Patrick and Margaret (Burke) McManus, the former of whom died in Ireland, where his widow still lives. In May, 1869, Mr. McManus immigrated to Chicago, Ill., and afterward spent a few years in Michigan. In February, 1870, he came to Sharon, where he has since made his home. In 1871 he opened a grocery store, and in 1880 his present hotel, which he has since carried on. Mr. McManus was married January 16, 1871, to Ann, daughter of Terence O'Hare, of Sharon, who died November 5, 1877, leaving one son, Patrick J. He was again married, May 13, 1879, to Ellen E., daughter of John Muldoon, of Sharon, of which union three children have been born: Catherine, John and Margaret. The family belong to the Catholic Church. Politically he is a Democrat, and has served one term in the borough council. He was one of the main organizers of Branch No. 6, C. M. B. A., of Sharon, and since coming to this town has succeeded in life beyond his expectations.

FREDERICK P. MILLER, general grocery dealer, was born near Hermitage, Hickory Township, December 8, 1860, and is a son of Matthias and Catherine (Foltz) Miller, natives of Bavaria, Germany, mention of whom will be found among the sketches of Hickory Township. Our subject grew up on the old homestead and received a district school education. He worked on the farm and subsequently looked after his father's store at Hermitage. From 1877 to the spring of 1886 he assisted his father in the store and post-office at that point. In September, 1886, he opened his present grocery, which he has since operated. Mr. Miller was married June 8, 1886, to Miss Maggie, daughter of Jacob Dresch, deceased, of Sharon. She has borne him one son, Arthur J. He is a Republican and a member of the P. H. C., and both he and wife belong to the German Reformed Church.

DAVID MORGAN, head of the puddle mill of the Sharon Iron Works, was born in Monmouthshire, South Wales, November 2, 1828, and is a son of David and Mary (Leonard) Morgan, both of whom spent their lives in that country. David learned the iron business in his native shire, and in the fall of 1856 immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., and for about thirty years was manager of iron mills in that city and other points. In 1872-73 Mr. Morgan built at Wellsville, Ohio, the first mill for the manufacture of tin, and rolled the first tin-plate in the United States. In April, 1887, he came to Sharon, and has since had charge of the puddling department of the Sharon Iron Works. Mr. Morgan was married in 1848, to Elizabeth Thomas, of South Wales, of which union five children grew to maturity: James, Theo. D., Charles, David and Elizabeth. His wife died November 15, 1869, and he was again married, in 1870, to Mrs. Julia Russell, who had three children by her first marriage: Matilda, deceased; Elizabeth and Katie. Mrs. Morgan had no children by her second marriage, and died January 16, 1887. In 1888 Mr.

Morgan was again married, to Mrs. Jannett Macaulay, who had borne two children to her first husband: Alexander and Marian. Our subject is a Republican, and in the summer of 1861 enlisted as second lieutenant of Company K, First Virginia Volunteers, and served about one year. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and K. of P., and belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM G. MORGAN, foreman of the blacksmith department in the mills of P. L. Kimberly & Co., was born in Llannaganch, Carmarthenshire, South Wales, June 3, 1842, and is a son of Griffith and Ann Morgan, the former of whom is dead, and the latter a resident of Wales. At the age of seventeen William G. went to the great iron town of Merthyr-Tydfil, Glanmorganshire, South Wales, where he learned the blacksmith's trade. He worked there till the spring of 1869, when he immigrated to Mineral Ridge, Trumbull Co., Ohio, removing to Girard, Ohio, the next fall. In the spring of 1870 he came to Sharon, where he has since resided, and has been connected with P. L. Kimberly & Co. over seventeen years, twelve of which he has been foreman of the blacksmith department. Mr. Morgan was married December 25, 1865, to Miss Mary, daughter of Robert Davis, of Merthyr-Tydfil, Wales, of which union seven children have been born, three of whom are living: Robert, Thomas and Annie. He and wife belong to the Congregational Church, and he is a charter member of Sharon Lodge K. of P., K. of G. E. and I. O. R. M. Politically he is a Republican, and has served three years in the borough council. He has recently invented a machine for the manufacture of staples, which is highly praised by expert iron workers as a very important addition to the many inventions of the country.

THEO. D. MORGAN, superintendent of the Sharon Iron Works, was born in New Castle-on-Tyne, England, February 24, 1853, and is a son of David and Elizabeth Morgan, natives of Wales. In 1856 the family immigrated to Pittsburgh, where David was a manager of iron mills about thirty years. He is now a resident of Sharon, and connected with the Sharon Iron Works. Our subject grew up in Pittsburgh, and learned the iron business in that city. He took a scientific course and was graduated in chemistry from Mount Union College, Ohio, in 1874. For one year he was one of the writers on the American Manufacturer of Pittsburgh. Mr. Morgan was assistant superintendent of the Baugh Rolling Mills of Detroit three years; superintendent of the Judson Rolling Mill, Oakland, Cal., one year; had charge of the steel department of the Pennsylvania Iron & Steel Works one year, and was manager of the Chess, Cook & Co. steel mill of the same city a short time. In April, 1887, he came to Sharon to accept the position of superintendent of the Sharon Iron Works, which he has since filled. He is one of the inventors and patentees of an improved machine for the manufacture of wire nails on a cut-nail machine, and also of an improved reversing valve for regenerative gas furnaces and several other improvements on gas furnaces. Mr. Morgan was married August 21, 1875, to Miss Jennie M. White, of Glenwood, Pittsburgh, Penn., who is the mother of two children, Minnie and Lottie. He is a Republican in politics, a member of the Masonic order and A. O. U. W., and the family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

RICHARD GRAHAM MORRISON, secretary and manager of the Sharon Boiler Works, was born in Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., July 25, 1844. His father, William, was born in Huntingdon County, Penn., April 1, 1800, of Irish ancestry, and married Sarah Graham, a native of Armstrong County, Penn., of Scotch descent. About 1842 they located in Pymatuning Township, on a tract of land extending across the line of Delaware Township, whence they removed to Brookfield, Ohio, where the mother died in 1856. Her husband then returned to Mercer County, and died upon a part of the old homestead, in 1864. They reared a family of four children: Richard Graham and John L., both of Sharon; R. Woodward, of Pittsburgh, and Mary C., wife of C. A. Ashton, of Sharon. With the exception of the five years which the family spent in Brookfield, Ohio, our subject has always lived in Mercer County. His business life in Sharon since 1867 has been spent in connection with the iron interests of the borough, being book-keeper and afterward manager of the William McGilvray & Co. Foundry and Machine Shops, up to their purchase by the present company. In 1878 Mr. Morrison was one of the firm who organized the Sharon Boiler Works Company, and has since been its secretary and manager. He was married December 17, 1874, to Miss Elizabeth Egbert, of Sandy Lake, Penn., whose parents were early settlers of that part of the county. Three children have been born of this union: Sarah G., Egbert R. and Gertrude. Politically he is a Republican, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

JOHN L. MORRISON, editor and proprietor of the Sharon Herald, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., September 6, 1846, and is a son of William and Sarah Morrison, previously spoken of. Our subject received his primary education in the public schools, and at the age of sixteen, in July, 1863, he enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, and served in the 100 days' service. In February, 1864, he again enlisted, in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in all the battles of his regiment up to the close of the war. Returning to his home he attended Oberlin College and Edinboro Normal School, for the purpose of completing his education, and subsequently taught one term. In January, 1868, he entered the Argus office, at Greenville, where he spent one year. On the 1st of January, 1869, he purchased one half interest in the Sharon Herald, and was connected with that paper until January, 1876, when, having been elected recorder of Mercer County, he sold his interest in the paper. At the expiration of his term in the recorder's office he returned to Sharon, and in March, 1879, purchased the Herald, and has since been its editor and proprietor. Mr. Morrison was married October 12, 1880, to Miss Eleanor B. Serrill, of Darby, Delaware Co., Penn. Politically he is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity and the P. H. C.

THOMAS MOSES, proprietor of the City Roller Mills, was born in Sunderland, England, August 13, 1846, and is a son of Matthew and Elizabeth Moses, natives of England. In 1857 the family immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., and two years afterward removed to Johnstown, Penn., where the parents now reside. Our subject removed to Portage County, Ohio, in 1872, and carried on a general store at Nelson and Wyndham, and for three years operated a mill, in connection with the store, at the latter place. In January, 1882, he came to Sharon, leased the Stambaugh Mill for one year, and in 1883 erected his present brick flouring mill, on the corner of Pitt and Railroad Streets, fitted it up with all the latest improvements, of the full roller process, and has since conducted one of the leading mills of Mercer County, having a capacity of 125 barrels every twenty-four hours. The grade of flour turned out by the City Roller Mills is second to none. Mr. Moses was married June 10, 1872, to Miss Perlina Bosley, of Johnstown, Penn., of which union five children have been born: Maud, Myrtle, Bessie, Arthur and Florence. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Moses is a trustee of the Sharon congregation. Politically he is a Republican of strong temperance proclivities, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity. He is recognized as one of the progressive business men of the borough.

DAVID E. MOSES, grocer, was born in Monmouthshire, England, October 23, 1823, and is a son of Edward and Rachel (Phillips) Moses, the former a native of England and the latter of Wales; both died in the old country. David E. learned the puddler's trade in Tradegar, England, and followed that business in his native land till he immigrated to Wheeling, Va., in 1857, where he continued at his trade until the breaking out of the Rebellion. In May, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, First Virginia Volunteers, and served in the three months' service. He then returned to his trade in Wheeling. In the spring of 1864 he came to New Castle, Penn., and the following November located in Sharon. He worked here a few years and then went to Newburg, Ohio, and thence back to Wheeling, Va. In 1870 he again came to Sharon, and worked a few months. He then opened a small grocery store, which he has since conducted. Mr. Moses was married June 10, 1850, to Miss Sarah, daughter of David Davis, a native of Monmouthshire, England, and has seven children: David S., William H., Edward, Mary J., Sarah A., Thomas J. and Susanna. JOHN P. NEILER, photographer, was born in Phoenixville, Chester County, Penn., February 26, 1841, and is a son of John G. and Catherine (Strough) Neiler, both natives of Pennsylvania. The former was a blacksmith, and died about nine years ago in Chester County, where his widow still lives. John P. grew up in his native town, and there began to learn the carpenter trade, and was working at that business when the war commenced. In June, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, First Pennsylvania Reserves, and after the battle of Bull Run the Reserves were sworn into the United States service at Baltimore for three years. Mr. Neiler took part in all the battles and campaigns of his regiment until mustered out in June, 1864. In 1865 he came to Sharon, Penn., where he worked at the carpenter trade until embarking in the photograph business in 1870. He carried on that business here till 1883, when he sold his interest, and for three years conducted the same business at Sharpsville, though residing in Sharon. In the summer of 1886 he established his present gallery, and is the oldest photographer in Sharon. Mr. Neiler was married December 18, 1874, to Miss Lizzie Clair, of Sharon, daughter of the late John Clair. He is a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities, and politically is a Republican.

JOHN NEWTON, proprietor of livery stable, was born in Norfolk, England, April 15, 1848, and is a son of Charles and Maria Newton, both of whom are still residents of England. In the spring of 1869 he immigrated to Pennsylvania, where he worked at coal mining about one year, and then went to work in the Allentown Iron Mills, and learned the puddler's trade. He continued working in Allentown until October, 1872, when he came to Sharon and entered Kimberly's Iron Mills, where he worked until the close of 1885. In the meantime, in May, 1880, he purchased the livery stable of Frank Porter, and has continued at that business up to the present. He was married in Pittsburgh November 29, 1870, to Mrs. Sarah Briggs, a native of England, and the mother of two sons at the time of her second marriage. She has borne Mr. Newton two sons: Charles and John. The family are attendants of the Episcopal Church. In politics he is a Republican, a member of the K. of P., K. of G. E. and the K. of L.

HARRY ORCHARD, saddlery, hardware and harness dealer, was born in Somersetshire, England, April 24, 1844, and is a son of James and Elizabeth (Howe) Orchard, who spent their lives in England. Our subject immigrated to New York, where he continued to work at his trade, which he learned in England, till August, 1867, when he went to Hamilton, Ontario, and lived there one year. Returning to New York, he remained there till the spring of 1871, then came to Cleveland, Ohio, and soon afterward located in Sharon, where he obtained an interest in the harness store of C. E. Tribby. In 1875 Mr. Orchard became sole owner, and has since continued to carry on the leading harness business of the town. He was married in the fall of 1866, to Miss Mary J., daughter of John and Elizabeth Bailey, of Plymouth, England. Two daughters have been born to them: Maud B. and Nellie. Politically Mr. Orchard is a Republican, and was elected burgess of Sharon in 1887, and re-elected in 1888. Since his first election large additions in territory and population have been made to the town, and it is confidently believed that the next census will entitle Sharon to a city charter. The family belong to the Episcopal Church. Our subject is the division commander of Division No. 7, of the Masonic K. T. of Penn., and one of the State officers of the Grand Chapter H. R. A. Masons, and is also a member of the I. O. O. F. Mr. Orchard is one of the most popular and enterprising citizens of Sharon.

JEROME PATTERSON, deceased undertaker, was born in Sharon March 12, 1840, and was a son of Isaac and Lorena (Hull) Patterson, of that borough. His father was one of the first undertakers of the town, learned the cabinet-maker's trade with Joseph Reno, and began business in the thirties. Jerome grew to manhood in Sharon, received his education in the public schools, and learned his business in his father's establishment. After his marriage he went into partnership with his father, and on the death of the latter, January 18, 1878, Jerome succeeded to the sole control of the business, and carried on the same up to his sudden death, August 4, 1885. Mr. Patterson was married September 16, 1866, to Miss Sarah, daughter of David and Margaret (Sloss) Anderson. The Andersons were one of the pioneer families of Jefferson Township, and Mrs. Patterson's parents died in this county. Three children were born to Jerome and Sarah Patterson: Bertha M., Carrie H. and Harry R. Mr. Patterson was a stanch Democrat, was tax collector of the borough several years, and one of its most progressive and enterprising citizens.

JOHN T. PEW was born at Big Bend, Mercer Co., Penn., October 17, 1835. His father, William, was born in Jackson Township, Mercer County, May 25, 1798, and was a son of John Pew, who came from Washington County, Penn., to Mercer County, in May, 1797. The latter grew to manhood on the homestead farm, subsequently resided about three years in Mercer, and then purchased a farm at the Big Bend, in Jefferson Township, upon which he spent the balance of his life. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Thompson, an early settler of Pymatuning Township. They reared eleven children: Jane, Emeline (deceased), David (who married Emily Ann Caldwell, of Jefferson Township), Mary (wife of Thomas Blackstone, of Lackawannock Township), John T., Rebecca, Elizabeth (wife of Frank Booth, of Sharon), Lydia (wife of Samuel Pew, of Mercer), Martha (wife of John Gordon, of Lackawannock Township), Albert (who married Lydia McMillan) and Horace (who married Minnie Jewell), both of Jefferson Township. The parents died upon the old homestead, and were life-long Presbyterians. John T. grew up on the home farm, and was married April 9, 1859, to Mary, daughter of Andrew Snyder, of Delaware Township. In 1861 he enlisted in the Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and did good service for his country. In March, 1872, our subject located in Sharon, and went into the livery business, which he followed up to the spring of 1888, when he sold out. Politically he is a Republican, and a strong temperance man.

JOHN PHILLIPS, manufacturer, was born in Union County, Penn., October 1, 1829. His father, Samuel, was a native of Northampton County, Penn., born April 5, 1805, and married Susanna Winey, of Union County, Penn. In 1836 the family removed from Union County to the farm in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., whereon Samuel resided till his death, September 1, 1888, and where his wife died July 2, 1884, aged seventy-seven years and seven months. Our subject grew up on the old homestead, and on reaching maturity entered the employ of the late Gen. Pierce, with whom he remained about three years, principally engaged in attending to the coal shipping interests of that gentleman. He then spent a couple of years in farming, and in 1854 formed a partnership with Gen. Pierce, under the firm name of J. Phillips & Co., and developed the coal beds on his father's farm, and in 1855 opened the mines. He managed the business of the firm until 1861-62, when he sold out to his partner. In 1863 he leased coal lands on the farms of the late John Eberhart and Samuel Fry, and developed the same. The firm of Phillips, McMaster & Co., later J. Phillips & Co., mined coal on these farms and vicinity until 1887, when they retired from the business. From 1864 up to 1883 he was interested in the Sharpsville Railroad. He was one of the organizers of the Spearman Iron Company at Sharpsville, and has since been connected with that institution. Mr. Phillips has been a stockholder and director in the Sharon National Bank since its organization in 1875. He was married May 13, 1858, to Miss Emma, daughter of John and Susanna (Berlin) Eberhart, early settlers of Hickory Township. Mrs. Phillips was a native of this county, and the mother of three children: Florence E. (wife of W. G. Henderson, of Sharon), Sadie M. and Charles F. (of Sharon). She died October 20, 1885, aged forty-nine years and three months. Though a life-long member of the Lutheran Church, she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church shortly before her death. Mr. Phillips is a Democrat, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity.

CHARLES A. POLLEY, liveryman, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., November 4, 1860, and is a son of Henry and Helen, (Diefenderfer) Polley, deceased, pioneers of that township. Charles A. grew to manhood in his native township, and attended the district schools of his neighborhood. He worked at farming till February, 1887, when he came to Sharon and purchased the dray line of Samuel Tolman. He carried on that business one year, and on March 23, 1888, bought out the livery interest of John Pew, of Pew & Macaulay, and under the firm name of Macaulay & Polley has since been engaged in the livery business. Mr. Polley was married September 4, 1885, to Miss Mary E. McDowell, of Delaware Township, who is the mother of one child, Leonore. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a Democrat, and a member of the Protected Home Circle.

THOMAS J. PORTER, retired, was born in Chambersburg, Franklin Co., Penn., December 29, 1800. His father, Washington Porter, was a son of David Porter, and was born in Shippensburg, Penn., July 13, 1778. He there grew to manhood, and December 17, 1799, was married at Chambersburg, Penn., to Miss Rachel Shannon, a native of that town, born April 25, 1778. They reared three sons: Thomas J., David T. (deceased) and Alexander W. The first and last mentioned are residents of Sharon, where David T. died February 21, 1876. In 1802 the family removed to Butler County, Penn., and in 1804 to the borough of Mercer, where Thomas J. grew to manhood and attended the pioneer schools. In April, 1825, Mr. Porter located in Sharon, and was the second postmaster of the town, and one of its early hotel-keepers. He was also one of the pioneer merchants of Sharon, and among the first to go into the coal business, and for many years was engaged in developing the coal fields of the Shenango Valley. His parents moved to Sharon many years after our subject, where the mother died June 14, 1852, in her seventy-fourth year, and the father August 26, 1860, in the eighty-third year of his age. Mr. Porter was married August 14, 1827, in Sharon, to Miss Julia A., daughter of Samuel and Achsah (Parks) Quinby, natives of New Jersey, who settled here in 1808 or 1809. Mrs. Porter was born in Warren, Ohio, March 15, 1807, and was the mother of four children: Salina, widow of Henry Forker; Samuel Quinby, who died in Sharon, in 1874, and for several years one of the prominent business men of the borough; Julia, and Anna (deceased). Mrs. Porter died in the faith of the Baptist Church, October 13, 1849, and her husband has since remained unmarried. Politically Mr. Porter has always been a Democrat, though he has never taken an active interest in political affairs. He cast his first presidential vote for Andrew Jackson in 1824, and has never since missed casting his vote for the presidential nominee of the Democratic party. Since early manhood Mr. Porter has been a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is one of the few living links connecting the historic past with the ever eventful and changing present.

DAVID T. PORTER, deceased merchant, was born in Chambersburg, Penn., May 26, 1802, son of Washington and Rachel Porter, previously spoken of. The family removed to Butler County soon after the birth of our subject, and in 1804 settled at Mercer. Here David T. grew to manhood, and was married February 24, 1824, to Nancy, daughter of William and Polly (Rambo) Findley, pioneers of Mercer County. She was born September 25, 1802, and three sons, David Findley (deceased), George W. (deceased), William, and one daughter, Rachel (deceased), were the fruits of this union. The mother died September 2, 1834, and Mr. Porter was again married, October 16, 1837, to Miss Sarah Satterfield, born February 5, 1808. Three children survive this marriage: James S., Nancy F. and Sarah S. Mrs. Porter died February 13, 1845, and he was again married, November 16, 1845, to Ann Hazleton, of Pittsburgh, born November 16, 1816, of which union three children survive: Thomas H., Ann E. and Mary T. Our subject resided in Mercer till the spring of 1845, when he located in Sharon, and for many years was engaged in merchandising under the firm name of Carver & Porters, the firm being C. G. Carver, T. J. Porter and David T. Porter. He and his brother subsequently carried on the mercantile business, and were also engaged in the coal trade. He was afterward connected with his sons in the mercantile line up to his death, which occurred February 21, 1876. His wife survived him, and died September 22, 1883. Both were members of the United Presbyterian Church. Mr. Porter was originally a Democrat, one of the pioneer Abolitionists of Mercer County, and finally a Republican. He served several terms as county treasurer; was also associate judge of the county, and subsequently filled the office of justice of the peace in Sharon.

GEORGE WASHINGTON PORTER (deceased) was born in Mercer, Penn., May 26, 1826, and was a son of David T. Porter, previously mentioned in this chapter. He grew up in his native borough, where he followed clerking, and subsequently clerked in Pittsburgh. In the spring of 1850 he went to California and spent one year in the gold mines, returning to Sharon in August, 1851. He clerked in that borough for several years; in 1864 went into business with his father and brother William, and was engaged in the mercantile trade for many years in Sharon. In 1875 he was elected book-keeper of the First National Bank of Sharon, and was soon afterward chosen assistant cashier, which position he filled up to his death, November 28, 1885. Mr.

Porter was married, June 1, 1856, to Miss Sarah Ann, daughter of Rev. Sanford Parker, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which union five children were born: William F., Sanford C., Harry S., Mattie and George W. (deceased). Politically he was a staunch Republican, was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and an upright, honest and respected citizen.

CHARLES L. POWERS, of Powers & Williams, general grocers, was born in Coalburg, Trumbull Co., Ohio, July 31, 1861, and is a son of James M. and Charlotte E. (McCoy) Powers, natives of Ohio and residents of Ashtabula County. Our subject grew up in his native county, first clerked in his father's store in Coalburg, and then went to Youngstown, Ohio. He afterward worked for his father in his store in Brookfield, Ohio. In September, 1886, he came to Sharon, and in June, 1887, the present partnership was formed. Mr. Powers was married to Miss Dora Hart, of Brookfield, Ohio, of which union two daughters, Pearl and Annis, have been born. Politically he is a Republican.

WILLIAM W. SERVICE, insurance agent, was born in what is now Lake Township, Mercer Co., Penn., May 5, 1833. His parents were William and Jane A. (Stuart) Service. The former was born near Belfast, Ireland, September 27, 1798, and the latter in Allegheny County, Penn., July 9, 1807, of Scotch ancestry. In the year 1800 William Service emigrated from Ireland with his mother, Mary, to Huntingdon County, Penn., whither the father, Thomas, had preceded them, and in 1805 they settled in what was then Cool Spring Township, but since organized as Lake. The parents both died in this county, and are buried in Cool Spring Cemetery. Thomas Service was a patriot, who served in the Irish rebellion of 1798, and was taken prisoner, but escaped to America, whither his family followed him. William, the father of our subject, grew up in this county, and married Jane A. Stuart, who reared a family of nine children: Mary Ann, Caroline, William W., Adeline R., Ansley S., Susan E., Emily M., John (deceased) and Eva. The parents both died on the old homestead, the mother February 5, 1862, and the father June 9, 1868. Our subject was reared in Jackson Township, received a good common-school education, and taught in his home district school about thirteen years; also followed farming during this period. In 1872 he came to Sharon, and went into the insurance business, the firm of Service Brothers & Co. being one of the oldest insurance agencies in this section of the State. Mr. Service was married April 16, 1866, to Miss Annie Murray, of Lawrence County, Penn. Three children have been born to them: Eva L. (deceased), William M. and Etta M. Politically he is a Democrat, and a member of the I. O. O. F., E. A. U., N. U. and P. H. C.

ANSLEY S. SERVICE, cashier of the First National Bank of Sharon, was born in Jackson Township, Mercer Co., Penn., June 5, 1845, and is a son of William and Jane A. (Stuart) Service, of that township. Our subject grew up there, and after receiving a good education in the district schools spent one term at the Edinboro Normal, and graduated at Iron City Commercial College, Pittsburgh, Penn., in December 1865. He came to Sharon in January, 1866, and began clerking for D. T. Porter & Sons, dry goods merchants. In the fall of 1866 he entered the private bank of Porter & Perkins, and one year afterward the bank of D. C. Strawbridge. In March, 1870, he was elected book-keeper of the First National Bank, which had been organized the previous fall, and held that position until July, 1875, when he was elected cashier, which position he has since filled. Since the fall of 1875 he has been a stockholder of the bank, and a director thereof since January, 1886. He was married September 5, 1871, to Miss Emma V., daughter of Daniel Upson Budd, a pioneer of Sharon. Two children have been born to them: Charles and Eva. Politically Mr. Service is an ardent Democrat, a K. T. of the Masonic order, and has served as W. M. of the Masonic lodge, and E. C. of the K. T. of Sharon Commandery. He also belongs to the A. O. U. W., and is a member of the Supreme Circle of the P. H. C.

GEORGE W. SHILLING, physician and surgeon, was born in Brookfield, Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, July 28, 1842, and is a son of Samuel and Mary (Welch) Shilling, of Sharon. Our subject grew up in Ohio, and came to Sharon with his parents in 1862. He received a good English education in the public schools of Ohio and Pennsylvania. In 1870 he began reading medicine, and studied under Drs. Jesse Y., James and John Barber, of Sharon. He commenced attending lectures at the Medical University of Pennsylvania in 1872, and was graduated from that institution March 12, 1875. He remained with Dr. Barber two years, and then went to the oil country, returning to Sharon in 1880, since which time he has been engaged in the active duties of his profession and has built up a good practice. Politically, the Doctor is a Democrat, and a member of the Mercer County Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

W. W. SHILLING, attorney at law, was born on the site of Wheatland, Penn., October 24, 1856, and is a son of Henry and Mary Shilling, deceased pioneers of Hickory Township. Our subject grew up on the old homestead, attended the public schools at Wheatland, and spent two terms at the Edinboro Normal School. He took a full course in Eastman's College, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and in January, 1876, entered Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., and graduated in the class of 1880. In the fall of that year he began reading law in the office of Stranahan & Mehard, of Mercer, was admitted to the bar in June, 1882, and the following October began practice in Sharon. In October, 1884, he formed a partnership with Thomas Tanner, and the firm of Tanner & Shilling has since been one of the best known law firms of the county.

Mr. Shilling is a director in the Sharon National Bank, is a Republican in politics, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity.

DAVID R. SHIRAS, local manager of the Columbia Gas Light & Fuel Company, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., April 8, 1844, and is a son of Oliver P. and Jessie R. (Smith) Shiras, now residents of Florida. David R. was reared in Pittsburgh and received his education in the public schools of that city and New Castle, and afterward took a commercial course in the latter city. In 1857 the family removed to New Castle, Penn., where he was connected with the gas works until his coming to Sharon in July, 1866. For a few years he carried on a photograph establishment, and afterward was superintendent in the erection of the works of the Sharon Gas Light Company. He remained successfully manager of these works until 1886, when he took charge of laying the plant of the Columbia Gas Light & Fuel Company, which he has since had full charge of in this town. Mr. Shiras was married December 25, 1867, to Miss Lydia, daughter of the late William McGilvray. Five children have been born of this union: Russell (deceased), Rebecca, William Mc, Oliver C. and Donald Scaife (who died of diphtheria November 21, 1887). Politically he is a Republican, and has taken a deep interest in the development and growth of the public schools since coming to Sharon. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Shiras is one of the best known citizens of the borough.

SAMUEL SMITH, nailer, born in Pittsburgh, Penn., March 5, 1837, is a son of Samuel and Mary (Potts) Smith, the former a native of England, and the latter of Pennsylvania. Samuel, Sr., learned the trade of an engine builder in England, and immigrated with his father to Pittsburgh, where he married Mary Potts, a native of Allegheny County, Penn. He built the first Neptune fire-engine in Pittsburgh, and our subject has now in his possession a cane made from the wood of that engine and presented to his father after the engine was worn out. The parents both died in Pittsburgh. Our subject grew up in that city, and learned his trade in Sharpsburg, Penn. He subsequently worked at Apollo, Penn., Wheeling, Va., and Pittsburgh, Penn. In 1873 he came to Sharon and went to work for P. L. Kimberly & Co., with whom he has ever since been connected as the spike nailer of those mills. Mr. Smith was married February 14, 1861, to Miss Annie E. Freetly, daughter of Jacob and Fannie M. (Boggs) Freetly, of Apollo, Penn. She is the mother of one daughter, Mamie M., a teacher in the Sharon public schools. The family are attendants of the Presbyterian Church. Politically Mr. Smith is independent, and is a member of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers.

GEORGE SMITH, proprietor of the White House, was born near Noblestown, Allegheny County, Penn., July 28, 1842, and is a son of Samuel and Mary (Potts) Smith. George grew to manhood in Pittsburgh, and learned the heater's trade in the Sharpsburgh Rolling Mills. He worked at his trade in Pittsburgh till April, 1872, when he came to Sharon and continued his trade in the Westerman Iron Works and P. L. Kimberly & Co.'s Mills. In July, 1875, he started his present establishment, which he has ever since conducted. Mr. Smith was married February 13, 1863, to Miss Margaret C. Grant, of Etna, Penn., who has borne him five children: George, Alice, Maud, May (deceased) and Charles C. Politically he is independent, and a member of K. of P., National Union and B. P. O. E., Youngstown lodge.

JOHN J. SPEARMAN, iron manufacturer and president of the First National Bank of Sharon, is a son of Francis and Elizabeth (Ambrose) Spearman. He was born at McKee's Gap, in what is known as Blair County, Penn., December 17, 1824. His early advantages for obtaining an education were very limited.

He attended the common schools of Bedford County, and at the age of fourteen he was employed as a clerk in the store of David Puterbaugh, at Woodbury, Bedford County, where he remained for three years. He then found employment with Dr. Peter Shoenberger, a prominent manufacturer of iron in those days, at the Rebecca and Maria Furnaces, in Blair County, and remained there for six years. In January, 1847, Mr. Spearman was given charge of the business of the Sharon Furnace, which was operated at that time by Shoenberger, Agnew & Co. He filled that position for six years, and in 1853 purchased the Mazeppa Furnace near Mercer, Penn., which he operated until 1859, when he accepted the position of manager of the Sharpsville Furnace, for the late Gen. James Pierce, where he remained until 1862. He then located at Wheatland, as general manager for James Wood & Sons, and the following year he entered into partnership with them, under the firm name of James Wood, Sons & Co. In August, 1870, he severed his connection with this firm and removed to Sharon. In 1872 he organized the Spearman Iron Company, and built the Spearman Furnaces at Sharpsville, Penn., and has ever since been general manager of these furnaces. Mr. Spearman was prominent in the organization of the First National Bank, as one of the original stockholders, and subsequently as director, and in 1872 was elected president, which position he has since continued to fill. He was married, March 12, 1851, to Miss Cordelia, daughter of Jabish Breed, of Sharon. They have five children: Celeste, wife of David Adams, of Sharon; Eva, Chloe, wife of W. D. McKeefrey, of Sharon; Francis and Benjamin. Mr. Spearman is a member of the Masonic order, and connected with Sharon Lodge, 250. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge 347, of Sharon, being one of its two surviving charter members. Politically he is an unswerving Republican, and one of the solid, substantial citizens of the Shenango Valley. His name is the synonym of integrity, enterprise and public spirit, and he is highly respected wherever known.

URIAH SPENCER, dry goods and grocery dealer, was born in Lancashire, England, June 11, 1836, and is a son of Samuel and Hannah Spencer, natives of the same shire. Uriah learned the engineer's trade in England, and in 1863 immigrated to Sharon. He followed coal mining in Hickory Township, and subsequently ran an engine till 1877. He then entered into partnership with his nephew, J. S. Spencer, in the grocery business, in his present store-room, under the firm name U. & J. S. Spencer, which continued four years. Since that time Mr. Spencer has conducted a general mercantile trade. He was married March 3, 1861, to Eliza, daughter of Robert and Betsy Jaques, of Lancashire, England, in which shire Mrs. Spencer was born and reared. Ten children have been born of this marriage, five of whom died in infancy. The survivors are Mary A., Sarah, Esther, John L. and William, all residents of Sharon. Mr. Spencer is a Republican, and is now a member of the borough council. He belongs to the I. O. O. F. and the K. of G. E., and is one of the well-known business men of Sharon.

SAMUEL F. STAMBAUGH, proprietor of the Sharon Flouring Mills, was born in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., April 20, 1835. His father, Samuel, was a native of Perry County, Penn., and at the age of sixteen removed to Trumbull County, Ohio. For seven years he was engaged in hauling goods from the eastern markets to the Western Reserve, and during the War of 1812 served in the wagon train for a short time, in hauling supplies from Detroit. He was married in Ohio to Miss Rebecca Ritter, who bore him six children, three of whom survive, and two are residents of Mercer County: Daniel, of Pymatuning Township, and Maria, widow of George Palmer, of Sharon. In 1824 Samuel removed with his family to Mercer County and purchased what is known as the Hickman farm, in Hickory Township. About 1843 he sold this property and bought 350 acres adjoining Sharon on the east. Samuel Stokely, a lawyer of Steubenville, Ohio, laid a settlement claim to twenty-four tracts, of 400 acres each, lying in Mercer County, the land which Mr. Stambaugh purchased being included in this claim. Stokely frightened many of the pioneers into paying him for the lands upon which they were living, but Mr. Stambaugh refused to be swindled, declaring, "I will law him to h—l and back again before paying one cent." He fought the case through the courts to a successful issue, and after ten years' litigation beat Stokely, and though suffering a great deal of expense he nevertheless demonstrated the justice of his cause and saved many of his neighbors from being similarly annoyed and swindled by Stokely. This was one of the most celebrated land suits in the history of Northwestern Pennsylvania. His wife died December 24, 1827, and in 1829 he was again married, to Margaret, daughter of Robert Hodge, of Pymatuning Township, who reared nine children, eight of whom are living, Martin being killed while serving in the Union army. Politically Mr. Stambaugh was a Democrat, and died February 28, 1860. His widow was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and died in 1881. Our subject grew up in the vicinity of Sharon and followed farming until 1879, when he went into the milling business in the borough, which business he has since continued. He does a merchant and custom milling trade, and his mill has a capacity of eighty barrels of first-class gradual reduction flour every twenty-four hours. Mr. Stambaugh was married to Margaret J. Carkuff, of Hickory Township, in November, 1857, who has borne him three sons and three daughters: Michael C., Newton E., Wilmetta J., Charles E., Sarah and Etta May. He is a staunch Democrat, has served two terms in the borough council, and is a member of the Masonic order, I. O. O. F. and N. U.

DAVID C. STAMBAUGH, farmer, was born on the old homestead in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., September 8, 1841, and is a son of Samuel and Margaret Stambaugh, previously spoken of in this chapter. David was reared on the old homestead, and received a common-school education. In April, 1861, he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, and participated in all of the battles and campaigns in which his regiment was engaged up to the seven days' fight before Richmond. He was there severely wounded in the left arm, June 30, 1862, on the fifth day's fight, and remained in hospital till the following November, when, being incapacitated for further duty, he was discharged, and returned to his home. In the fall of 1863 he went to California, where he remained over one year, and then returned to Sharon. Mr. Stambaugh was married, April 9, 1865, to Miss Betty A., daughter of James and Eliza Blaney, pioneers of Butler County, Penn., where Mrs. Stambaugh was born. The Blaneys removed to the vicinity of Clarksville, Penn., in 1872, where the father died in April, 1877, and where his widow still lives. To David C. and Betty A. Stambaugh have been born eight children: Earl W., Jesse M., William B., Mary E., James (deceased), Isabella (deceased), Della U. and Fannie J. From 1866 till 1873 Mr. Stambaugh operated a coal bank quite successfully, and, excepting these seven years, followed farming up to February, 1878, when he sold his farm and purchased a woolen mill in New Castle, Penn., in partnership with L. B. Gibson, William Blaney and his brother Daniel. He operated this mill up to 1882, when he sold out and located in Sharon, where he has since resided. Politically Mr. Stambaugh is a Republican, and his wife is a member of the United Presbyterian Church.

THOMAS TANNER, attorney at law, was born in Mercer, Penn., April 13, 1843, and is a son of Richard and Catharine (Hurley) Tanner, natives of Ireland, who reared two sons, Thomas and William, the latter a resident of Michigan. Richard died in Mercer in 1850, his widow surviving him till 1864. Our subject was reared in Mercer, and received his education in the public schools and the Mercer Academy. He began reading law under Judge Trunkey, of Mercer, in 1861. In the summer of 1862 he enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served till the close of the war, participating in all of the campaigns of his regiment till the battle of Cold Harbor, where he was wounded. In June, 1865, he went to Philadelphia, and read law with I. Newton Brown, and attended the law department of the Pennsylvania University, and was admitted to the bar of Philadelphia in November, 1868. He remained in Philadelphia until the spring of 1870. In the fall of that year he opened an office in Sharon, in partnership with B. Magoffin, which continued till 1876, when the firm of Magoffin & Tanner was dissolved, the former returning to Mercer. Mr. Tanner practiced alone until October, 1884, when he formed a partnership with W. W. Shilling, and Tanner & Shilling has since been one of the well-known legal firms of the Mercer bar. Mr. Tanner was married November 13, 1873, to Miss Elma Adams, of Louisville, Ky., of which union one son has been born. Politically Mr. Tanner is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity.

WILLIAM L. WALLIS, of the firm of Wallis & Carley, contractors and builders, was born in Markham, York Co., Ontario, July 25, 1842, and is a son of William and Nancy (Cresap) Wallis, natives of Cumberland, England, who immigrated to Toronto, Ontario, in 1832, thence removed to Markham. When William was a small boy his parents removed to Ingersoll, and subsequently to the vicinity of Woodstock, Ontario, where both died. At the age of fifteen years our subject returned to Toronto, and spent nearly four years learning the carpenter's trade. In the fall of 1861 he went to Buffalo, N. Y., and in 1863 located in the oil regions of Venango County, Penn., where he continued working at his trade till the summer of 1864. He then enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Sixty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry. After four months' service he was discharged. He then joined the Engineer Corps at Nashville, Tenn., and served till near the close of the war. Returning to Venango County he remained there till the spring of 1867, when he came to Sharon, where he subsequently became a member of the firm of Faas, Kanengiser & Co., which lasted till 1876. In that year Faas and Kanengiser retired and John Carley and Mr. Wallis formed their present firm. In October, 1876, their mill was burned, and they then erected their present mills, and have ever since been the leading institution of the kind in the Shenango Valley. Mr. Wallis was married July 3, 1870, to Miss Nancy Ricketts, of Ashtabula County, Ohio. Two children have been born to them: Thomas J. and Laura May. Politically Mr. Wallis is a Republican, and has been a member of the borough council three years. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and is one of the enterprising, progressive business men of the town.

B. F. WATKINS, superintendent of the Sharon Steel Casting Company's works, was born in Myrther-Tydfil, Glanmorganshire, Wales, March 29, 1840. His parents were John and Mary (Reese) Watkins, both of whom spent their lives in Wales. Our subject immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1851, and in the fall of that year removed to Johnstown, Penn., where he learned the moulder's trade in the Cambria Iron Works. In 1859 he went south, and, returning to Pittsburgh in 1861, enlisted, in October of that year, in the Fifty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the band of that regiment. All of the regimental bands were mustered out in September, 1862, and Mr. Watkins was then discharged from the service. He worked in Johnstown till 1869, when he went to La Salle, Ill., and carried on business till 1872. He then returned to take charge of the iron and steel foundries of the Cambria Iron Company, which position he filled for eleven years. In April, 1883, he went to Alliance, Ohio, to superintend the iron foundry of Morgan, Williams & Co., and the steel foundry of the Solid Steel Company, where he remained till April, 1887. He then became interested in the establishment of the plant of the Sharon Steel Casting Company, of which works he has since been superintendent. Mr. Watkins was married September 13, 1862, to Miss Sarah, daughter of Job and Margaret Reese, of Pittsburgh, of which union four children survive: William J., Benjamin F., Lizzie T. and J. Reno. Politically he is a Republican; a member of the Masonic order, I. O. O. F. and K. of P., and both he and wife are members of the Baptist Church.

GERHARD WENGLER, retired merchant, was born in Prussia, Germany, January 24, 1828, and is a son of Christopher and Elizabeth (Herz) Wengler, both of whom died on the old homestead in Germany. Gerhard learned the shoemaker's trade in his native land. He served three years in the Prussian army, and has medals granted him from Prussia, which were hung on his breast by the Emperor William of Germany, now dead, and also from Baden. In May, 1854, he immigrated to the United States, first settling at New Castle, Penn. The following December he came to Sharon and started one of the first shoe-shops in the town, which he operated over twenty years quite successfully. He then retired from active business, and has since resided on the East Hill. Mr. Wengler was married February 5, 1856, to Miss Mary Shearman, of Sharon, a native of Germany, of which union two sons survive: Albert and John G. Mrs. Wengler died March 8, 1878, aged fifty-eight years. He was again married, to Miss Walburga, daughter of John B. and Frances (Sonntag) Heilig, both of whom died in Germany. Mr. Wengler and family belong to the Catholic Church. Politically he is a Democrat and one of the well-known citizens of Sharon, where he has lived for thirty-four years. Albert, the oldest son, was born November 18, 1859, and was educated in the public schools of Sharon. After coming of sufficient age to work he entered the iron mills of Sharon, and worked there till 1880, when he engaged in the restaurant business which he now conducts. He married Miss Margaret, daughter of Sebastian and Annie Herrmann, of Sharon, and by this union two children have been born: Ferdinand A. and Francis. Mr. A. Wengler is a Democrat, and a member of Branch No. 6, C. M. B. A., of Sharon.

JAMES WESTERMAN, deceased manufacturer, whose name was connected with the prosperity and progress of the borough for more than twenty years, was born in Paris, France, November 26, 1819, of English parentage, of Alsatian descent. His father was an extensive cotton manufacturer in Paris, but the French Revolution of 1830 ruining him, he immigrated to the United States, and located in Pittsburgh, Penn., where he again engaged in cotton manufacturing. He retired from business in 1837, and died in Sharon in 1869. Our subject received his early education in Paris, France, and subsequently attended the public schools of Pittsburgh, where, in 1838, he entered the Kensington Iron Works as an operative. Four years later he assisted in building the Onondaga Iron Works, at New Castle, Penn., and in 1846 superintended the construction of the iron works of Reis, Brown & Berger, of the same town. In 1855, in connection with Joseph Brown, William Bonnell and others, he purchased the Mahoning Iron Works, at Youngstown, Ohio, remaining there until 1861, when, in company with William Coleman, C. B. Wick and P. W. Keller, he bought the Sharon Iron Works of Gen. Curtis. From 1865 until he withdrew from them, in March, 1874, these works, then known as the Westerman Iron Company, were under his efficient management. In 1872 he became vice-president of the First National Bank, but subsequently withdrew from that institution, and in 1875 helped to organize the Sharon National Bank, of which he was chosen vice-president. He filled that position till 1878, when he was elected president, and annually re-elected until his death, July 20, 1884. A few years prior to his death Mr. Westerman became largely interested in developing the coal fields of the eastern part of the county, and was a partner in five coal firms operating mines in Mercer County, besides having valuable interests elsewhere. He was married in Pittsburgh, Penn., July 7, 1842, to Mary, daughter of John and Elizabeth Leonard, who died in June, 1884, leaving two daughters: Mrs. C. Q. Carver, of Sharon, and Mrs. C. G. Sutliff, of Lockport, N. Y. One son, Edward, died prior to his parents, at the age of twenty-three years. Politically Mr. Westerman was a stanch Republican, and the elector from this district on the Grant and Colfax ticket in 1872. Mr. Westerman was the inventor and patentee of several inventions important in the manufacture of iron, including a boat spike machine, a puddling furnace; a smoke consuming apparatus, a coal cutting machine, etc. He was a man of indefatigable and determined character, enterprising to a remarkable degree and usually carried through whatever he undertook. He accumulated through the passing years a large estate, which his children inherited at his death.

EARL A. WHEELER, manager of the Wheeler Furnace Company, was born in Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, September 28, 1828, and is a son of Alfred and Sabra (Andrews) Wheeler, both natives of Connecticut. Alfred Wheeler removed with his parents, Simeon Wheeler, a Revolutionary soldier, and his wife, Anna (Sanford) Wheeler, to Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1801, where he grew up and married Sabra Andrews, who came from Connecticut with her parents, Daniel and Polly (Hotchkiss) Andrews, to Trumbull County in 1814. Alfred Wheeler died in that county in 1884, and his widow still resides there. Our subject grew to manhood in his native county, and received the meagre advantages which the pioneer schools of that vicinity afforded. He worked on a farm until fifteen years of age, and then began learning the tinner's trade in Warren, Ohio. In September, 1848, he came to Sharon and opened the pioneer tin and stove store of the borough. He continued that business till 1862, in the meantime extending the business by adding general hardware and the manufacture of stoves thereto. Beginning on a small scale, he yearly increased his sales, until he finally had one of the largest establishments in Sharon. In 1862 he sold out, and went into the coal business, which he followed successfully for ten years. He then organized a company and built the Wheeler Iron Company Furnace, which began business in 1873. The panic of 1873 crippled the company, and, though it kept the furnace and rolling mill which they had afterward attained, and struggled along for twelve years, they finally closed up the business by a dissolution of partnership. Mr. Lloyd G. Reed, of Erie, took the plant and became responsible for all liabilities of the company, which have been paid or fully secured. In the fall of 1885 Mr. Wheeler leased the furnace, and has since been operating it very successfully. He was married September 10, 1849, to Miss Mary Fuller, of Trumbull County, Ohio. One daughter was born of this union, Frances M., wife of Maj. James L. Paul, of California. Mrs. Wheeler died in 1852, and he was again married December 15, 1854, to Mrs. Sally Gates, nee Hill. Before the war Mr. Wheeler was a Democrat, but at that time united with the Republican party. In the fall of 1869 he was elected to the Legislature, and re-elected in 1870. During his last term he introduced the first high license law, known as the "Mercer County Iron Clad," which, though then unpopular, was the entering wedge to the present temperance agitation, which is now making overwhelming progress all over the State. Mr. Wheeler is a man of strong temperance views, and was once the Prohibition candidate for surveyor-general of the State. He has filled the office of councilman several terms, and has also been a director on the school board twelve years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and A. O. U. W.

WALTER WHITEHEAD, of the Eagle Printing Company, was born in Oldham, Lancashire, England, July 16, 1861, and is a son of Abraham and Lydia Whitehead, natives of England. The mother died while Walter was quite small, and his father immigrated to the United States, and is now a resident of Kansas. In July, 1870, Walter came from England to Hickory Township, this county, and in the fall of 1880 began to learn his trade in the office of the Sharon Herald. In 1882 he went to Salina, Kas., and was connected with the Salina Herald one year. He subsequently worked in Kansas City, and in March, 1886, returned to Sharon, and with James L. Ray purchased the Mercer County Eagle, changing the title to Sharon Eagle, and has since been connected with that paper. He was married June 16, 1884, to Miss Milda Davis, of Sharon, and has one child, Francis E. Politically he is a Republican, and is a member of the Protected Home Circle.

JAMES B. WILKES, merchant, was born in Tredegar, Monmouthshire, England, December 8, 1833, and is a son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Jones) Wilkes, the former a native of England, and the latter of Wales, both of whom died in Monmouthshire, England. James B. grew to manhood in his native land, and worked in the iron mills of Tredegar, one of the great iron towns of that portion of England. In the spring of 1861 he immigrated to Scranton, Penn., from there he moved to Duncansville, and then to Pittsburgh. In September, 1863, he located in Sharon and found employment in the iron mills of Coleman, Westerman & Co., afterward the Westerman Iron Co. He continued as one of the trusted men of the company as long as it existed, and for three years was assistant manager of the mill. He was one of a company of thirty who erected the iron mill at Canal Dover, Ohio, in 1865-66, and was interested in that mill till 1874, when they sold it. In 1877 he opened his present store on Penn Avenue, which he has since carried on. Mr. Wilkes was married December 23, 1855, to Miss Margaret Davis, daughter of Daniel and Mary Davis, natives of Wales. She has borne him eleven children, seven of whom survive: Elizabeth, wife of John O. Davis, of Sharon; Mary, wife of William Foxall, of Sharon; Samuel, William, Isabella, Benjamin and John. The family belong to the Welsh Baptist Church, and politically he is a Republican.

PERRY L. WILLIAMS, deceased, was born February 18, 1821, in Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. His parents, Hector and Mary (Marvin) Williams, were natives, the former of Waterbury, Conn., and the latter of North East, Erie Co., Penn. They were married in Sandy Lake Township, Mercer County, where Miss Marvin had settled with Jared Tuttle, because of the death of her parents when she was small. The father removed with his parents to Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1808. His union with Miss Marvin occurred in 1819, and they located in Trumbull County and lived there until 1840, when he settled on a farm near Sharon. He retired to Sharon five years before his death, which took place July 20, 1864. His widow died December 18, 1880. Their children were: Perry L., deceased; Laura, widow of James Kennedy; Lester M., Riley, deceased; Alfred, Matilda, deceased, and Nelson L. The parents were Presbyterians. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was brought up at farm labor. At the age of twenty-one he began for himself by entering upon the arduous labor of a shoemaker's trade. This he continued for many years. He was married April 6, 1843, to Miss Frances, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Jennings) Buck, and the following month came to Sharon, where he opened a shoe-shop. In 1864 he began dealing in ready-made boots and shoes. In 1880 his son George became a partner and has since continued in the business. His children are Lester, Albert, George L., Samuel, Martin and Della, married to B. F. Price, of Hubbard, Ohio. Mr. Williams was elected sheriff of Mercer County in 1884, and served a full term. He belonged to the Disciple Church, was a Republican, and a member of the school board of Sharon for sixteen years and also of the town council several terms. He died October 26, 1888, from the effect of a fall from an apple tree.

ALFRED WILLIAMS, of the firm of Powers & Williams, general grocers, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, January 31, 1834, and is a son of Hector and Mary (Marvin) Williams, previously spoken of in the sketch of his brother, Perry L. Our subject grew up in Brookfield, Ohio, and principally resided in that village until January, 1865, when he came to Sharon, and for the greater portion of his residence here has been engaged in the boot and shoe business. In June, 1887, he went into the grocery trade, forming a partnership with Charles L. Powers, in which he is yet engaged. Mr. Williams was married October 9, 1852, to Sarah A. Drury, of Hartford, Ohio. Three children survive this union: Mary, wife of W. T. May, of Sharon; Emma, wife of F. J. Smith, of Sharon, and Frank H. Politically Mr. Williams is a Republican, and has been borough assessor three years and collector four years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and A. O. U. W., and the family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

A. W. WILLIAMS, attorney at law, was born in Brookfield, Ohio, December 22, 1851, and is a son of Riley and Rachel (Porter) Williams. The Williams family were from Connecticut, and settled in the Western Reserve, while the Porters were pioneers of Mercer County, Penn. To Riley and Rachel Williams were born two sons and two daughters, Alfred W., of Sharon; Wilbert M., of Cleveland, Ohio; Ella, widow of John Service, and Julia, wife of W. K. Naylor, of Bellaire, Ohio. Riley Williams died in Sharon, October 26, 1865, and his widow is still a resident of the borough. He was one of the pioneers in the development of the Pennsylvania oil country, and was postmaster of Pitthole Centre when that decayed town was at the height of its prosperity. Our subject came to Sharon with his parents, and here grew to manhood. On the death of his father he was thrown upon his own resources, and worked in one of the rolling mills in Sharon for several years. At the age of eighteen he began learning the carpenter's trade and architectural drafting, and worked as a carpenter and builder from 1870 up to the close of 1881. In December, 1881, he received an appointment from Hon. S. H. Miller, of Mercer, as paster and folder in the folding department of the House of Representatives, but was soon afterward promoted to a clerkship, which he filled till January, 1884, and was then appointed to a position in the architect's office of the United States Treasury Department. For a number of years he had a desire to enter the legal profession, and accepted his first appointment at Washington with the intention of studying law. In February, 1882, he entered the Columbian University, Washington, D. C., where he took his degree of B. L. in June, 1883. In June, 1884, he took the degree of M. L., having taken the post-graduate course, and on the fourth of the same month was admitted to the supreme court of the district. He at once returned to Sharon, and on June 10, 1884, was admitted at Mercer, and opened an office in Sharon, where he has since practiced his profession. He has since been admitted to practice in the supreme court of Pennsylvania. For the past two years he has been borough solicitor, and is also the attorney of the Supreme Circle of the P. H. C. Mr. Williams was married March 29, 1876, to Miss Louisa Hull, who died May 26, 1877, leaving one daughter, Louisa. He was again married December 7, 1886, to Miss Ida Boyce, of Sharon. Politically Mr. Williams is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity and the P. H. C.

FRANK L. WILLIAMS, agent of the Adams Express Company, was born in Lowellville, Ohio, April 23, 1861, and is a son of John W. and E. J. Williams, the former deceased and the latter a resident of Jamestown, Penn. Frank L. grew up in Jamestown, and in 1879 located in Sharon. Since that time he has been connected with the Adams express office, and for the past two years has been their local agent. Mr. Williams was married April 11, 1883, to Miss Rannie Linn, of Sharon. He is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity and National Union.

REUBEN WILLIAMSON was born in England, January 20, 1836, and in 1853 came to America, and to Sharon in 1864, where, under the auspices of William Coleman, he became connected with the Sharon Iron Mills. He remained with that company and its successors about ten years, when he became interested in the Greenville Rolling Mills. In 1879 Mr. Williamson was elected to his present position, as secretary and treasurer of the Emmitt Mining Company, and later the Hamilton Ore Company. He is a member of the Keel Ridge Coal Company and treasurer of the Black Diamond Coal Company, well known enterprises of the Shenango Valley. Mr. Williamson was married in Pittsburgh, in 1856, to Miss R. E. Eaton, who is the mother of seven children, four of whom are living. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Politically Mr. Williamson is a Democrat; was the first E. C. of Rebecca Commandery No. 50, and a Thirty-second Degree Mason, and is also a member of the I. O. O. F.

JAMES M. WILLSON, furniture dealer, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, August 7, 1820. His father, James V., was a native of Ligonier Valley, Westmoreland County, Penn., and removed in boyhood with his father, Col. Samuel Willson, an officer of the Pennsylvania Line in the Revolutionary War, to Washington County, Penn., where he grew to maturity. He went to Beaver County, Penn., and learned the wheelwright trade, with Thomas Kennedy, of Brady's Run. He was there married to James Kennedy, a sister of his employer, and in 1806 removed to Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, where he was afterward joined by his parents, Col. Samuel and Jane (Vance) Willson, both of whom resided with him the balance of their lives. He served under Harrison in the War of 1812. He reared a family of nine children, four of whom are living, and three are residents of Sharon. In 1834 the family removed to Greene County, Ohio, where the mother died in the Presbyterian faith in 1842. After her death he spent his days among his children, and died at the home of his son, James M., in January, 1865, aged eighty-one years. Our subject grew to manhood in Ohio, and in the fall of 1842 came to Harts-town, Penn., where he learned the furniture business with his brother Samuel. In February, 1845, he located in Sharon, and, in partnership with Joseph Partridge and William Logan, under the firm name of Willson, Logan & Partridge, engaged in manufacturing furniture. For the past forty-three years Mr. Willson has carried on that business in Sharon, and is to-day the oldest business man in active business in the borough. He was married December 4, 1849, to Miss Mary, daughter of Samuel Quinby, whose father was a pioneer of Sharon, of which union nine children have been born, six of whom survive: Anna, wife of Edwin D. Echols, of Sharon; John R., of Youngstown, Ohio; Clarence A., of Willson & Son, Sharon; Ollie M., Herbert M. and Mary T. Mr. Willson was an original anti-slavery man, was afterward a Republican, and is now a Prohibitionist. He has served in the council and as school director, and both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

JOHN W. WILSON was born in Lancashire, England, June 24, 1823, and is a son of Edward and Mary Wilson, both of whom spent their lives in England. John W. grew up in his native land, and followed the trade of a cotton spinner. In July, 1847, he immigrated with his wife and one son to Sharon, where he has resided continuously for more than forty-one years. He followed coal mining in the Curtis bank up to 1871, when he retired from active life. For several years past he has been occasionally engaged by the borough of Sharon. He was married in England, November 19, 1843, to Hannah Tidswell, of which union five sons and one daughter survive: Richard, Edward S., John, William H., Alfred and Hannah. Seven children died in infancy, and Mary died at the age of twenty. Mrs. Wilson died June 23, 1881, and he was again married January 1, 1883, to Mrs. Rebecca E. Ormond, daughter of Robert Campbell, of Butler, Penn., and widow of A. P. Ormond, of Pittsburgh, Penn., by whom she had four sons: John I., George K., Alfred C. and Thomas. She is a Presbyterian, and her husband is an attendant of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Mr. Wilson is a Democrat, and has served one term in the borough council. He is one of the few living citizens of Sharon who have watched the growth of the town from a small hamlet to its present flourishing proportions.

EDWARD WILSON was born in Lancashire, England, December 18, 1827, and is a brother of John W., previously mentioned in this chapter. Edward grew up in his native land and worked in a cotton factory till immigrating to Sharon, Penn., in March, 1854. He began working at the coal mines and was continuously connected with the Curtis coal bank till 1881. Since that time he has had a small greenhouse at his home on the west hill. He started his sons, James S. and Fred, in a meat market on State Street, in September, 1886, which they have since carried on. Mr. Wilson was married in England, in August, 1851, to Elizabeth Booth. Eight children of this union survive: George, Edward, James S., Annie, Clara, Fred, Laura and Willie. The family belong to the Episcopal Church. In politics he is a Democrat, and has served three terms in the borough council. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and one of the oldest citizens of Sharon, where he has lived over thirty-four years.

JAMES J. WILSON, street commissioner, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., January 5, 1831, and is a son of John and Mary (Lynch) Wilson, natives of Pennsylvania. The parents removed to Jennyberg Hill, Sharon, in 1845, and a few years after went to Lawrence County, Penn., where the father resided till his death. His widow is a resident of West Middlesex. Our subject has made Sharon his home ever since coming here, forty-three years ago. For many years he was engaged in the coal business, was superintendent of the construction of the Greenfield Railroad, and was one of the well-known coal men of the past. He has been married twice, but has no children. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and has voted for every presidential candidate of that party from Fremont to Harrison. He has been twice burgess of Sharon, and has served three terms in the borough council. He has been street commissioner for seven years, and has given better satisfaction to the people than any of his predecessors.

ARCHIBALD WISHART, carpenter and builder, was born near Guelph, Ontario, Canada, February 13, 1844, and is a son of John and Jessie (McKean) Wishart, natives of Edinburg, Scotland, who immigrated to Canada in 1832, and settled on the shore of Lake Ontario, eighteen miles northeast of Hamilton. They afterward removed into Wellington County, near Guelph, where the father died and where the mother still resides. Archibald grew up in his native county, and there began learning the carpenter's trade. In the fall of 1865 he came to Sharon and completed his trade. After about two years he went to Phelps County, Mo., where he resided four years. Returning to Sharon in 1871, he has since followed contracting and building, in which line he has been fairly successful. In April, 1886, he opened a grocery store on State Street, which is in charge of his son, Charles A. Mr. Wishart was married September 30, 1867, to Miss Jennie, daughter of the late William Ulp, of Sharon. Four children have been born to them: Charles A., Jessie, Ella (deceased), and Russell. Politically Mr. Wishart is a Republican, is a member of the E. A. U., and the family belong to the Presbyterian Church.

CHAPTER XXXI.

BIOGRAPHIES OF GREENVILLE.

HON. JOHN ALLISON, deceased, late register of the United States Treasury, was born in Beaver, Penn., August 5, 1812, and died of apoplexy at Washington, D. C., March 23, 1878. His father, James Allison, was one of the foremost lawyers at the Beaver bar. At the age of eighteen our subject went to Pittsburgh to learn the latter's trade, where he spent three years. He then went to Marietta, Ohio, and commenced business for himself. In the meantime, March 16, 1836, he had married Miss Eliza Ann, daughter of Dr. Milo Adams, a prominent physician of Beaver, and after a short residence in Marietta he returned to Beaver. He entered his father's office, read law, and was admitted to the bar, but the profession was not congenial to his tastes and he never attempted to build up a practice. Mr. Allison was a natural politician, and from 1847 to 1850 he represented Beaver County in the Legislature. Upon the expiration of his last term he was nominated and elected to Congress from the Beaver District, and after serving his term was renominated. Under a new apportionment the district was changed, Mercer County being included therein, and Mr. Allison was defeated by Hon. Michael C. Trout. At the close of Mr. Trout's term Mr. Allison was again the Whig nominee, and was elected by a good majority and served with honor in that capacity. Mr. Allison was one of the founders of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, and was president of the first Republican State convention held in Pittsburgh in 1855. He was also one of the leaders at Pittsburgh in the winter of 1856 to lay plans for a national Republican organization, and was chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation in the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia in 1856, which nominated Fremont and Dayton. Mr. Allison there named and supported Abraham Lincoln for the vice-presidency, and whom four years afterward he helped to elect President. During the Rebellion he filled the position of paymaster in the army, with the rank of major, and though he paid out hundreds of thousands of dollars his accounts always balanced to a cent. In 1864 he purchased a farm in Perry and Otter Creek Townships, Mercer County, to which he removed his family in the spring of 1865, and soon after closed his accounts as paymaster and retired to his farm. In the fall of 1867 he traded his farm for a controlling interest in the Greenville Steam Tannery. The family residence was on the west side, which his widow occupied until her death, May 4, 1884, and is still owned by his daughter, Mrs. George O. Keck. In 1869 Mr. Allison was appointed by President Grant register of the United States Treasury, and continued to discharge the duties of that position with credit and fidelity up to the day of his death. During the last ten years of his life he was frequently mentioned in connection with important positions, and was the unanimous nominee of the Republicans in the Legislature for the United States Senate when Hon. William A. Wallace was elected to that position by the Democracy, then holding a combined majority. Mr. Allison left a wife, two sons, James and John H., residents of Missouri, and four daughters: Mrs. Charles M. Merrick, of New Brighton, Penn.; Mrs. George O. Keck, Mrs. W. O. Tillotson and Mrs. W. H. Beil, all of Greenville. At the time of his death the Philadelphia Times paid the following glowing tribute to his worth: "He was one of Pennsylvania's purest and best men. Although aggressive as an anti-slavery champion, he was a man of general conservative attributes, and avoided the conflict of faction and the race for conspicuous party leadership. He was one of the few men who have filled so high a measure of public trust, and died with hardly an enemy to dispute the integrity of his public or private acts." He was a devoted friend, a kind father and husband, a wise counselor and an upright, Christian man.

JOHN ANNETT, dry goods merchant, was born in the County Down, Ireland, August 20, 1844, and is a son of Hugh and Mary A. Annett, natives of that county, where his mother died and his father yet resides. In May, 1861, John immigrated to Huntingdon County, Penn., where he had an uncle living. In October, 1861, he came to Greenville and began clerking for Charles Hoge, with whom he remained seven years. In the winter of 1868 he went to Jamestown, Penn., where he clerked one year for James Rodgers. He then opened a store in that town, which he carried on till January, 1875, when he sold out and went on the road as a commercial drummer for Raymond, Lowe & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio. He afterward traveled for Morgan, Root & Co., of the same city, and then for Tefft, Weller & Co., of New York, with which firms he spent in all ten years. In June, 1885, he began the dry goods business in Greenville, in which he has since been engaged. Mr. Annett was married April 28, 1870, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of James W. Brown, one of the early settlers of Mercer County. Mrs. Annett was born on the old Brown homestead immediately north of Greenville. She is the mother of three children: Jennie M., Hugh W. and Maggie B. Politically Mr. Annett is a Republican, and the family adhere to the United Presbyterian faith.

JOHN RANDOLPH ARTERHOLT, queensware dealer, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., June 22, 1852, and is a son of David and Mary Ann (Speir) Artherholt, a sketch of whom will be found under the head of Pymatuning Township. He grew up on the homestead, and attended the district schools of his neighborhood. In March, 1872, he entered the employ of D. B. Packard & Co., crockery dealers, with whom he remained for about four years. He then attended commercial college at Mount Union, Ohio, for one term. In April, 1876, he purchased an interest in the queensware store of E. P. Beckwith & Co., the firm name remaining as before. In the spring of 1877 James Loutzenhiser and L. D. Leech bought interests in the business, and the firm of Artherholt & Co. was established. In December, 1881, Mr. Leech retired from the business, and Messrs. Artherholt and Loutzenhiser have since continued to carry on one of the largest business houses of Greenville. Mr. Artherholt was married January 30, 1883, to Miss Sakie Whitesides, of Crawford County, Penn. He is an unswerving Democrat, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and one of the enterprising young business men of the town.

EDWIN ASH, farmer, was born in Northampton County, Penn., January 31, 1832, and is a son of John and Catharine (Laurish) Ash, natives of the same county, and of German ancestry. They were married in Northampton County, and in the spring of 1834 removed to Hickory Township, Mercer County, with a family of seven children, and five were born in this county. Nine of these grew to maturity, and six are now living, two of them residents of Mercer County. John Ash was a tailor by trade, and worked at that business on his farm, where he also kept a tavern for many years. The parents died on the old homestead in Hickory Township, the father January 23, 1853, and his widow in March, 1855. Both were life-long members of the Reformed Church. Our subject grew to manhood on the home farm, and was married September 8, 1853, to Marietta, daughter of Samuel and Eva (Cover) Rickert, who settled in Pymatuning Township in the spring of 1836, where the father died and the mother yet resides, at the ripe old age of eighty-five years. Mrs. Ash is a native of Eastern Pennsylvania, and is the mother of eight children, five of whom are living: Milton E., James E., Newton D., Edwin E. and Mary V. Of the three deceased children only one, Ada J., grew to maturity. Mr. Ash followed farming in West Salem Township up to the spring of 1884, then removed to Greenville, where he was engaged in the coal business until the spring of 1888, when he sold out. In politics he is a Republican, and the family belong to the Reformed Church.

HENRY AUSTIN, the pioneer jeweler of Greenville, who died of paralysis on Tuesday, March 6, 1888, was born in Sheffield, Berkshire Co., Mass., February 28, 1821, and celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday on the Tuesday preceding his death. His parents were Harry D. and Elmira (Pope) Austin, natives of Massachusetts, both of whom died at Sheffield at ripe old ages. At the age of fifteen Henry left home and went to Michigan, and three years afterward located in Erie, Penn., where he was employed in his brother's jewelry store. In the fall of 1840 he returned to his early home and entered the jewelry store of his brother-in-law, in Sheffield, whence he removed to Norfolk, Conn. Soon afterward he returned to Sheffield, where he worked at his trade till the fall of 1845, when he came to Greenville, Penn., and opened a jeweler's store. For nearly forty-three years Mr. Austin carried on that business successfully in this town, and at the time of his death was the oldest merchant of Greenville, all of those who were in business when he came having either left the borough, retired from active life, or passed to their eternal reward. Mr. Austin was married in Sheffield, Mass., October 19, 1847, to Miss Clarissa Jones, a native of the same place, who survives him. Six children were born of this union: Harry D., Robert E., Adela F. (wife of C. E. Loutzenhiser), Charles H., Ida L. and T. Merrill, all of whom are residents of Greenville, except Robert E., of Sharpsville, and T. Merrill, a professor of music in Westminster College, New Wilmington, Penn. Deceased was one of the oldest members of Eureka Lodge No. 290, F. & A. M., also of Mound Chapter No. 212 and North-Western Commandery, and belonged to Alhambra Lodge No. 293, I. O. O. F. Politically he was a stanch Republican, and served in the borough council and filled the position of burgess. He always took a deep interest in the growth and progress of education, and was at one time an active member of the school board. Throughout his long residence in Greenville Mr. Austin was at all times an ardent advocate of temperance, and did all in his power against the liquor traffic. He possessed a cheerful, hopeful and benevolent disposition, strong convictions, strong likings, and the opposite, but was always courteous in business and social life; while simplicity, integrity and love of home and family were among the most prominent traits of his character.

JOHN BACHER, clothing merchant, was born in Warren, Trumbull Co., Ohio, April 26, 1841, and is a son of Michael and Margaret (Fichtner) Bacher, natives of Wuertemberg, Germany, who immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., about 1830, and a few years later removed to Warren, Ohio. They reared three sons: John, of Greenville, Penn.; Henry, of Warren, Ohio, and Daniel, of Washington Territory. The mother died in Warren, Ohio, and the father in Greenville, Penn. Our subject attended school in Warren, Ohio, until March, 1857, when he came to Greenville and spent three years and a half at the confectioner's trade. In the fall of 1860 he began clerking in the store of Henlein & Brother, which he followed until October, 1862. He then enlisted in the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nearly ten months, when he was honorably discharged from the service. He returned to the old establishment, where he took charge of the clothing department as clerk. In 1871 he obtained a working interest in the business, the firm being Henlein & Bacher, and in January, 1873, T. C. Gibson joined the firm, and it then became Bacher, Gibson & Co. In April, 1876, Mr. Gibson retired, and the old name of Henlein & Bacher was resumed. This firm continued in successful operation until February, 1885, when Mr. Henlein dropped out and J. G. Benninghoff and Gustav B. Henlein each obtained an interest, and the present firm of Bacher, Benninghoff & Co. was established, and carries on one of the largest clothing houses in Mercer County. Mr. Bacher was married, November 16, 1865, to Eva M. Mathay, a native of Germany, whose parents settled in Mercer County when she was a child. Of this union six children have been born to them: William F., Mary, Nettie U., Jennie B., Eva M. and Annie E. Mr. Bacher is a Democrat in politics, a member of the G. A. R., and the family belong to the Lutheran Church.

B. F. BASKIN (deceased attorney) was born July 2, 1819, in Selins Grove, Union Co., Penn., and was educated at Lafayette College, Easton, Penn., from which institution he graduated in 1839. He read law with John Lashells, then of New Berlin, and was admitted to the bar in 1842. He began the practice of his chosen profession in Mercer in 1843, being a portion of the time that he remained in the county seat in the office of John Hoge. In 1849 he removed to Greenville, and ten years later to Meadville, Penn., and for three years was associated with the Hon. S. Newton Pettis in the practice of law, in the latter named city. He returned to Greenville in April, 1862, where he died July 9, of that year. He served one term as district attorney of Mercer County.

WILLIAM BEATTY, ex-commissioner of Mercer County, was born March 5, 1831, in Delaware Township, this county. His father, James, was a native of Chester County, Penn., and one of nine, the children of William Beatty, who immigrated to America from his native country, Ireland, prior to the Revolutionary War. The children of William Beatty were: Jane (married a Mr. McCreary), Rebecca (married a Mr. Porter), Polly (married Washington Tait, a brother of the well-known Rev. Samuel Tait), Betsey (was never married), Margaret (married Richard Moore), Samuel (was never married), Robert (married Anna McMillan), William (was never married), James (married Elizabeth Campbell). William Beatty, the grandfather of our subject, was a brave soldier in the great Revolutionary struggle, and two of his sons, Robert and William, served in the War of 1812; the latter was wounded in the shoulder and maimed for life. Elizabeth (Campbell) Beatty, was one of seven children: Margaret married Robert Fruit; Anna married Thomas Fruit; Jane married J. W. Ormsby; Polly married Charles Koonce; William married Esther Dilly; James married a Miss Thompson, and Eliza. The mother of William Beatty, Sr., often walked fifteen miles and return to enjoy the preaching of the famous Whitfield. Robert, the brother of James Beatty, was an earnest worker in all reforms, especially temperance, abolition and the church. Robert's children were: Sarah (married Thomas Shoemaker), William (died young), Samuel (was never married), Eliza (married W. Alden, a nephew of Timothy Alden, once president of Allegheny College, at Meadville, Penn.), Isabella (died single), Ebenezer (died young), Amelia (married Bartlett Leonard), Caroline (married David Parker), Harriet (married Samuel Hubler), James (married Axenia Cutler). The children of James and Elizabeth (Campbell) Beatty are: Mary A. (never married), Margaret (married Anson Jones), Elmyra (died when young), William. The last named was educated in the common schools. His father died when he was ten years old, and his school days were consequently cut short, because of the need of his services to sustain the family. He spent his early days on the farm, and later gave his attention to stock growing. In 1874 he formed a partnership under the firm name of Bright & Beatty, and dealt in boots and shoes at Greenville. After a period of success he withdrew, and subsequently re-entered the same business with his son, J. P. In 1884 Fred, another son, was taken into the firm, and they continued until 1886. In 1884 he was elected a county commissioner, and served as president of the board with credit and ability. He was married in 1855 to Mary E., a daughter of John L. Dilley, of Hubbard, Ohio. By her he has been blessed with three children: J. P., Fred (deceased) and Eva (the wife of J. W. Vaughn). Mr. and Mrs. Beatty are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is a staunch Republican. The ancestors of Mr. Beatty have nearly all lived to a ripe old age, and were closely identified with the Presbyterian Church. It was about 1802 or 1803 when the first of the Beattys came to Mercer County. On March 12, 1888, the angel of death came along and plucked from this happy family their brightest flower, in the person of Fred Beatty, which filled the entire community with sorrow. For many years he had been an efficient clerk in the store of Tillotson Bros., in whose welfare and business he took as deep interest as if it were his own.

EDWIN T. BEATTY, of the firm of Beatty & Findley, dealers in books, etc., was born in Sheakleyville, Mercer County, Penn., August 10, 1849. His father, David M. Beatty, was also a native of this county, where he was born February 10, 1813, his parents being Hon. Francis and Isabella Beatty, of Salem Township. David M. grew up on the old homestead, and during his boyhood days learned the shoemaker's trade. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Findley, April 25, 1839, who was born in Crawford County, Penn., and was a daughter of Moses and Elizabeth Findley, natives of Ireland, pioneers of that county. Soon after his marriage David M. removed to Portersville, Penn., where he resided about two years, then returned to Mercer County and located at Sheakleyville, where he carried on the boot and shoe business till his sudden death, January 9, 1885, his wife having died May 3, 1884. They were the parents of seven children: Francis G. (of Nevada City, Cal.), Findley N. (deceased), Mrs. Caroline Carver (of Sandy Lake) Norman H. (of Jefferson, Ohio), Edwin T. (of Greenville), Elizabeth (deceased), and Thomas D. (of Rock Creek, Ohio). Mr. Beatty was a prominent Republican, and filled the office of justice of the peace in Sheakleyville twenty-three years, and died while serving his fifth term. He also went out in the ninety-days service during the Rebellion in Capt. John Stinson's company. He was a quiet, unassuming man of upright character, and died possessing a host of friends. Both he and his wife were Presbyterians all their lives, and belonged to the United Presbyterian body from its organization in 1858. Edwin T. was reared in this county, and attended the public schools of Sheakleyville till 1868, when he commenced clerking in Wayne, Ohio. In 1869-70 he attended the Normal Academy at Cannonsburg, Penn., for two terms. During the winter of 1870-71 he taught school in Mercer County, came to Greenville in the latter year and engaged in clerking. For a few months in 1872, he was in the coal business. In August, 1873, he formed a partnership with W. H. Findley, and purchased the book store of Jacob Miller, of Greenville. The firm of Beatty & Findley has ever since been engaged in that business. Mr. Beatty was married September 1, 1875, to Miss Maggie M. R. E., daughter of the late Dr. R. E. Breiner, of Greenville, where Mrs. Beatty was born and reared. Three children are the fruits of this union: Robert E., Susan

A. and Breiner F. (deceased). Mr. Beatty is a Republican in politics, and a member of the borough council. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and belongs to the Masonic order, R. A. and K. of H.

E. F. BENNETT, tinner, was born in New Castle, Penn., October 13, 1839, and is a son of Silas and Catharine (Nicholas) Bennett, the former a native of Connecticut, born in 1816, and the latter of Eastern Pennsylvania. The parents of Silas died when he was six years old, and he then went to live with his uncle, who removed to New Lisbon, Ohio, where he grew to manhood and learned the tin and coppersmith trade. In 1837 he was there married to Catharine Nicholas, who had come from Eastern Pennsylvania to Ohio with her brother-in-law. Eleven children were born of this union, ten of whom are living. In 1837 Silas Bennett located in business at New Castle, Penn., where all of his children were born. His wife died in that city in February, 1882, and he survived her until July 30, 1887. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics he was a Republican. Our subject grew up in New Castle, and learned the tinner's trade with his father. At the age of seventeen he went to Warren, Ohio, where he worked at his trade till September 2, 1861, when he came to Sharon, Penn., and enlisted in Company B, Seventy-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He served in the field until the charge on Fort Wagner, S. C., where he was severely wounded and taken prisoner. The Confederate surgeons amputated his left leg, and he was soon afterward exchanged and sent to New York, where it was found necessary to perform another amputation. He remained in hospital quarters till his discharge, July 27, 1864, when he returned to New Castle and thence to Warren, Ohio. In May, 1866, Mr. Bennett came to Greenville, where he has since remained. He was married July 25, 1866, to Miss Ellen J. Dunlap, of Warren, Ohio, who is the mother of one son, William H. In June, 1878, Mr. Bennett opened a tinner's and job shop in Greenville, and has since carried on a successful business. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Republican in politics, has served in the council three years, and is a member of the G. A. R. and the Masonic fraternity.

JOHN BENNINGHOFF, deceased, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., December 25, 1801, and when quite young removed with his parents to Union County, where he grew to manhood. He was there married in 1824, to Miss Elizabeth Heise, a native of Union County. Her father, Solomon Heise, was one of the pioneers of that section of Pennsylvania, where he died at the remarkable age of over one hundred and seven years. He was a native of the Keystone State, but his parents were natives of Germany, who immigrated to Penn's Colony soon after it was founded. About 1831 John Benninghoff, wife and family removed from Clearfield County to Venango County, where he rented farm land for several years. He finally purchased land at different times until he owned a farm of 235 acres, which subsequently proved to be the most productive oil farm in the oil country discovered up to the present. This fortunate stroke of luck made him rich. His interest in the oil product of his farm extended from 1861 to April, 1868, when he sold his lands and removed to Greenville. During that period he had a large royalty coming in from the wells on his land, and his bank deposits in Franklin were correspondingly heavy. The bank failed and he lost a large amount of money. Losing confidence in such institutions, he concluded to be his own banker, and purchasing a safe kept his money in his house. On the evening of January 16, 1868, his safe was robbed of $250,000, not a cent of which was ever recovered, though the family spent $50,000 in attempts to capture the robbers. Notwithstanding this very heavy loss he died worth about $400,000. Mr. Benninghoff and wife reared a family of eight sons and four daughters, viz.: George, Charles, Martin, Amelia, Elizabeth, John E., Catharine, Frederick W., Mary J., Jeremiah, Joseph and Milton, all of whom are living except John E., Amelia and Catharine. The mother died in the Presbyterian faith, July 26, 1872, her husband surviving her nearly ten years, and dying March 20, 1882, in the eighty-first year of his age. He was a Lutheran in religious belief, and politically a Republican. At the time of his death he had sixty-one grandchildren and twenty-one great-grandchildren. John Benninghoff was a plain, practical, upright man, whose word was ever sacred. Though his struggles with poverty in early life made him frugal and economical, when wealth came to him, almost as if by magic, he seldom refused to help worthy objects. He also gave a liberal donation to the Lutheran Church, and a similar gift to Thiel College, which alone attest his generous nature.

JOSEPH BENNINGHOFF was born December 18, 1843, in Cherry Tree Township, Venango Co., Penn., within one mile of Petroleum Centre, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Heise) Benninghoff, both of whom died in Greenville. Joseph was the eleventh in a family of eight sons and four daughters, and received his primary education in the public schools of Venango County. In 1868-69, he attended the commercial college of Meadville, and graduated in March of the latter year. He then entered the law office of Hiram L. Richmond & Son, of Meadville, but on his mother's death, in 1872, he came to Greenville to reside with his father, and did not renew his legal studies till 1880, when he returned to Meadville and was there admitted to the bar in the spring of 1882. Since his admission he has resided in Greenville. Mr. Benninghoff was married to Miss Ella Affantranger, of Meadville, daughter of the late P. A. Affantranger, a merchant of that city. Five children have been born of this union: Maud E., Arthur H. (deceased), Leon A., Josephine and Helen M. Politically he is a stanch Republican, and was elected burgess of Greenville in the spring of 1887, and served one term. For the past twenty years Mr. Benninghoff has been a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JACOB G. BENNINGHOFF, clothing merchant, was born in Venango County, Penn., May 13, 1859, and is a son of Martin and Mary Benninghoff, residents of West Salem Township, whither they removed in 1865. Our subject grew to manhood in this county, and in 1880 began clerking in the clothing house of Henlein & Bacher. In February, 1885, he became a member of the firm of Bacher, Benninghoff & Co., to which he still belongs. Mr. Benninghoff was married April 11, 1888, to Miss Minnie, daughter of S. H. Ross, of Greenville. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the I. O. O. F. society.

GEORGE A. BITTENBANNER is one of the few remaining pioneer business men of the town. He is a native of Columbia County, Penn., born November 28, 1815, and a son of Conrad and Sarah (Blank) Bittenbanner, natives of Northampton County, who were married and lived in Columbia County. They came to this county in the spring of 1826, and located in Delaware Township. They had at that time four children: George A., David, Esther and Conrad. Three were born after coming, viz.: Jacob, Sarah (deceased) and Mary Ann, wife of Hon. J. C. Brown, of the Advance Argus. In 1832 the parents moved into Greenville, where the father kept hotel several years. He then went back to agricultural pursuits, and both he and wife died on the farm now occupied by Mr. Brown. George A. grew to manhood in Mercer County, and in 1839 was married to Miss Louisa McDonald, who is the mother of two daughters, Alice (deceased) and Mary, wife of Dr. John T. Shutt, of Greenville. From early manhood up to a recent date Mr. Bittenbanner was one of the leading business men of Mercer County, and was prominently identified with the mercantile and financial interests of Greenville throughout his business career. He was one of the most public-spirited citizens of the town, and his name was the synonym of push and enterprise. Politically he was first a Whig, and afterward a Republican. In 1855 he was chosen an elder of the Presbyterian Church, and, though unable to fulfill the duties of the office because of failing health, he is nevertheless still an elder in that body.

REV. JEREMIAH REED BRITTAIN, D. D., late pastor of the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville, but now located in Englewood, Ill., was born near Beaver Falls, Beaver Co., Penn., July 26, 1839, and is a son of Joseph and Belinda (Clark) Brittain, natives of the same county. The Brittains were originally from Maryland, and removed to Berwick, in Eastern Pennsylvania, whence, about 1796, Jeremiah Brittain, grandfather of our subject, immigrated to Beaver County, where, during a long residence, he was widely known as one of the most prominent farmers and sheep growers of that section of the State. Both he and his wife died on the old homestead in Beaver County. They reared a family of seven sons and three daughters, Rev. Brittain's father, Joseph, being the ninth and youngest son. He inherited the old homestead, and reared a family of three sons and two daughters, all of whom are living. He now resides with his daughter, Mrs. W. C. Chamberlain, of East Palestine, Ohio, where his wife died August 5, 1886. Rev. Brittain was the oldest of the family, and his boyhood days were principally spent on his father's farm. His first schooling was obtained in White's school-house, which stood near his home and not far from the site of Geneva College. In his fourteenth year he attended one term at Darlington Academy, in Beaver County, and when seventeen again spent some time in the same institution, then under the charge of Joseph B. Kiddo, afterward a brigadier-general in the Union army. He taught one term of school when seventeen years of age, and from that time till attaining his majority worked on the farm. In September, 1859, Mr. Brittain entered Beaver Academy, then under Simon B. Mercer, and the next autumn cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln for President. He spent two years at Beaver Academy, and then entered Westminster College, New Wilmington, Lawrence County, then under the presidency of Dr. James Patterson, where he graduated with first honors in June, 1863, delivering the Greek salutatory on commencement day. Immediately after graduating he enlisted in a company of volunteers, made up chiefly of students, Dr. George C. Vincent, captain, but only experienced a brief service. In the fall of 1863 Mr. Brittain entered the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Allegheny City, where he spent three years studying for the ministry, but was licensed at the end of the second year. In March, 1866, Dr. Brittain received a call from the United Presbyterian congregation of Greenville, where he entered on his work July 1, and where he was ordained and installed pastor by the Lake Presbytery in September, 1866. The following year the present church building was erected, and under his pastorate the congregation increased from 100 to 300 members. Dr. Brittain has been a member of the board of trustees of Westminster College ten years, and in June, 1885, that institution conferred upon him the title of Doctor of Divinity. He has also been a director of the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary six years. Dr. Brittain was married August 30, 1864, to Miss Nannie D. King, of Illinois, who has borne him nine children, eight of whom are living, two sons and six daughters. During his pastorate in Greenville of nearly twenty-two years Dr. Brittain received several calls from other churches, but his popularity among his people was such as to deter his departure from the field wherein he had labored so long and faithfully, until his acceptance of the call from the United Presbyterian congregation of Englewood, Ill., in February, 1888. He is one of the ablest men of his church, and throughout his long residence in Greenville was recognized as a hard-working, successful minister, and an enterprising, influential citizen.

JAMES WILSON BROWN, deceased, was born in Fayette County, Penn., October 2, 1794, and died in Greenville February 10, 1885, in his ninety-first year. His father, Hugh Brown, was a native of County Down, Ireland, who immigrated to Maryland, and there married Sarah Wilson, born near White Hall, in that State. They afterward removed to Fayette County, Penn., and in 1799 came to what is now Mercer County, and located on a tract of 500 acres, immediately north of the site of Greenville. They reared a family of four sons and five daughters, all of whom, excepting one, became heads of families. Hugh Brown died on his homestead November 25, 1845, aged eighty-three years, his wife having died June 15, 1838, aged sixty-eight. He was an elder of the Associate Presbyterian Church, of Greenville, about thirty years. James W. was nearly five years old when his parents settled in the Shenango Valley, and his subsequent life was spent in the vicinity of Greenville. He was married October 27, 1825, to Jane, daughter of Robert King, an early settler of Kinsman, Ohio. The following children were born of that union: H. Wilson and Robert K., of Cincinnati, Ohio; James C., editor of the Greenville Advance Argus; Mary A., wife of Conrad Bittenbanner, of Greenville; Isabella, wife of Rufus Thompson, of Piper City, Ill.; John E., of Greenville; William A., killed by a runaway horse in 1848; Lizzie E., wife of John Annett, of Greenville, and Maggie J., a teacher in the public schools of this borough. Politically James W. Brown was originally a Democrat, subsequently joined the anti-Masonic and Whig parties, and finally became a Republican, being from early manhood a staunch opponent of slavery.

HON. JAMES C. BROWN, editor and one of the proprietors of the Advance Argus, was born on the old homestead, settled by his grandfather, October 7, 1829, and is the third son of James W. Brown, previously spoken of in this chapter. He received his primary education in the common schools, and at the age of seventeen, in September, 1846, entered the office of the Mercer Whig, where he remained till January, 1848. He then entered the Mercer Academy, but after a few months returned to Greenville and became a student in the academy, then under the charge of Revs. D. H. A. McLean and J. G. Wilson, where he completed his education. In the winter of 1848-49 he commenced teaching a school in the Law district, five miles west of Mercer, and the following winter taught at Leech's Corners. At the close of the latter term he went to Brookville, Penn., and taught a select school six months. He then bought a half interest in the Jefferson Star, a Whig paper, published at Brookville, and began editing that journal ere reaching his twenty-first year. While connected with the Star Mr. Brown taught in the common schools of Greenville two winters. In the spring of 1853 he sold his interest in that paper, came to Greenville and purchased the Independent Press, and during the past thirty-five years he has been connected with the press of Greenville the larger portion of his time. Politically Mr. Brown was first a Whig, and since the birth of the Republican party has been one of its staunchest supporters. In June, 1854, he was elected the first county superintendent of public schools in Mercer County, and filled that position two years. In October, 1861, he was elected to the Legislature, and re-elected to the same office in October, 1862. The following year he was the choice of his party in Mercer County for the Senate, but the nomination went to Venango County.

In June, 1863, Mr. Brown enlisted as a private in Company C, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, and served his full term of enlistment. In 1866 he was elected to the State Senate, and served in that body three years. In March, 1871, he was appointed United States assessor, by President Grant, for this district, and in May, 1873, when the offices of assessor and collector were merged, he became deputy collector for the counties of Mercer and Crawford. In September, 1874, he was appointed collector for the district, and continued to fill that position nearly nine years, or until a reorganization of districts legislated the old collectors out of office. On settling up accounts, subsequently, the government was found to be in his debt several hundred dollars. Mr. Brown was married April 29, 1856, to Mary A., daughter of Conrad Bittenbanner, of Greenville, where Mrs. Brown was born and reared. Four children survive this union: Sarah J., wife of Rev. Alfred Ramsey, of Scenery Hill, Washington Co., Penn.; M. A., wife of P. E. McCray, of Greenville; Robert W., a recent graduate of Thiel College, and George A. The family belong to the United Presbyterian Church, in which body Mr. Brown has been an elder about fifteen years. Few citizens of Mercer County are more widely known or more thoroughly respected than the able editor of the Advance Argus.

JOHN E. BROWN, grocery merchant, was born near Greenville, June 17, 1835, and is a son of James W. and Jane (King) Brown, pioneers of Mercer County. Our subject grew up on the old homestead, attended the common schools of his neighborhood, and worked at farming throughout his early manhood. In October, 1862, Mr. Brown enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nearly ten months, when his term of service expired. On his return to Mercer County he continued his former occupation of farming. In April, 1878, he opened a grocery store in Greenville, where he has since continued in that business. He was married November 16, 1865, to Miss S. M., daughter of Samuel and Eliza J. Caldwell, pioneers of Delaware Township. Mr. Brown is a Republican in politics, a member of the G. A. R., and both he and wife belong to the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville.

DR. G. G. BRUSH, deceased, was born in Sheakleyville, Mercer County, Penn., September 9, 1820, and was a son of James and Margaret (Sheakley) Brush, the former a native of Westmoreland County, and the latter of Adams County, Penn. James Brush came to this county early in the present century, where he married Margaret, daughter of John Sheakley, Sr., a pioneer of Sandy Creek Township. He followed farming, and with his wife died on the homestead near Sheakleyville. Dr. Brush grew to manhood on the home farm, and taught a few terms of school in that vicinity. He read medicine two years in the office of Dr. Cossitt, of Greenville, and subsequently one year with Dr. Ray, formerly of Philadelphia. In March, 1845, he opened an office in Sheakleyville, where he practiced his profession twenty-nine years. In April, 1874, Dr. Brush removed to Greenville, where he continued in active practice till his death, August 8, 1886. He attended lectures in the medical colleges of Philadelphia, Buffalo and New York City, and was a graduate of the Buffalo Medical University. He built up a large practice during his residence in Sheakleyville and Greenville, and was surgeon of the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad six years. Dr. Brush was married September 19, 1845, to Miss Asenath Thatcher, a native of Trumbull County, Ohio, who is the mother of six children, only one of whom survives. The children are: Hattie R.; James A., a deceased physician of Sheakleyville; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Addison Williams, of Mercer County, and three died in infancy.

Dr. Brush was a kind father and husband, an honest, upright man, a useful citizen and a successful physician.

DR. JAMES A. BRUSH, deceased, was born in Sheakleyville, Penn., March 16, 1846, and died there after a lingering illness March 29, 1881. He was the only son of Dr. George G. Brush, with whom he read medicine. He attended lectures at Ann Arbor University, Buffalo Medical University and Jefferson Medical College, and was a graduate of the two last mentioned institutions. He located at Sheakleyville immediately after graduating at Buffalo, and, excepting two years spent in Greenville, during which time he was surgeon of the Erie & Pittsburgh and Atlantic & Great Western Railroads, he continued practicing in Sheakleyville until his death. He was a thorough student and deeply wedded to his profession, and stern and positive in the prosecution of his duties. Dr. Brush married Miss Nancy J. McQuiston, of Hartstown, Penn., who survives him. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died in a firm hope of a blessed immortality. Both father and son are buried in the family lot in Shenango Valley Cemetery, Greenville.

ORSON A. CARLIN, agent of the Adams Express Company, was born in Conneaut, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, February 15, 1842, and is a son of Capt. Thomas J. Carlin, of that town. Capt. Carlin was born in the County Down, Ireland, and when he was about two years old his parents immigrated to Westfield, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where the father died, his widow subsequently dying at Conneaut, Ohio. Soon after reaching manhood Capt. Carlin removed to Conneaut, Ohio, where he married Miss Mary A. Dibble, a native of Ashtabula County. Five children have been born of this union, four of whom are living, and two residents of Greenville, our subject and Mrs. J. C. Kuchler. When Sumter was fired upon Capt. Carlin was filling the office of mayor of Conneaut, Ohio, of which town he had been postmaster throughout the administrations of Presidents Pierce and Buchanan, and immediately called a meeting of the citizens, organized a battery of 160 men, and was chosen captain of the same. Carlin's battery was soon after assigned to service as the Second Ohio, Capt. Carlin being the second captain of artillery commissioned by the governor of the State. He served in the field two years, and then resigned on account of injuries received in the service, but his sons served through the whole war. Capt. Carlin and wife are still living in Conneaut, Ohio, and throughout his long residence in Ashtabula County he has been one of the foremost Democrats in that county. He has filled the several offices of the town; been a school director for twenty-seven years, and is now a justice of the peace. Orson A. received a common-school education, and was clerking for his father in the Conneaut post-office when the tocsin of war was sounded. He at once enlisted in his father's command, and served in Carlin's battery till near the close of 1863. In March, 1862, a detachment of this battery, under Lieut. Huston, was surrounded near Bentonville, Ark., by a battalion of Texas Rangers, under Capt. White, who demanded its surrender. A number of the men under Corp. Carlin refused to comply with the demand, and attempted to cut their way through the rebel lines, but all were captured excepting Corp. Carlin and Private Henry Sweet, both of whom escaped uninjured amidst a shower of the enemy's bullets. At the battle of Pea Ridge a rebel officer on horseback was noticed behind a rail fence, reconnoitering the Union lines, and Corp. Carlin was ordered to give him a shot. He immediately complied, and the fence was scattered in every direction, covering the officer with a shower of rails. Gen. Asboth, in command of the division, witnessed the shot, and riding up to Corp. Carlin, complimented him on his efficiency as an expert artillerist. Toward the close of 1863 Corp. Carlin was assigned to the quartermaster's department, and was stationed at Nashville, Tenn., till the end of the war; was then mustered out of service, and returned to his home. While at Nashville Mr. Carlin became well acquainted with Andrew Johnson, and, though opposing his election to the Vice-Presidency, was nevertheless, upon Johnson's accession to the Presidency, appointed postmaster of Conneaut, Ohio, which office he filled till April, 1869, when he resigned. Mr. Carlin was married December 3, 1867, to Miss Alice A. Loomis, of Conneaut, Ohio, whose parents were pioneers of that county. In January, 1872, he came to Greenville to accept the agency of the United States Express Company, and subsequently was appointed agent of the Adams Express Company. Mr. Carlin continued to fill the position of local manager of both companies until the withdrawal from Greenville of the United States Company's office, since which event he has remained in charge of the Adams. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity, and also the G. A. R. Politically Mr. Carlin has always been an unswerving Democrat, and while a resident of Astabula County, Ohio, he was once the Democratic candidate for sheriff, and though defeated he polled the largest vote on the ticket.

JAMES WILLIAMSON CHRISTY, retired farmer, was born in Salem (now Hempfield) Township, Mercer Co., Penn., October 4, 1807, and is a son of Col. Andrew and Susan (Williamson) Christy, a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere in this work. James W. grew to manhood on the old homestead, and at the age of twenty-four came to Greenville and followed the tanning business about five years. He then traded his interest in the tan-yard for fifty acres of land near Greenville, which he soon afterward sold and purchased 200 acres in Sandy Creek Township, upon which he settled permanently in 1836. On the 20th of December, 1838, he was married to Miss Mary L. Thompson, a native of Salem Township, who bore him the following children: Thompson A. (deceased), Susan, Elizabeth, Emily, Andrew, Alice (deceased), Madison, Cassius C. (deceased) and Velzora. Mrs. Christy died April 16, 1885, in her sixty-seventh year. She was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, to which denomination her husband also belongs. Politically Mr. Christy is a Republican, but aside from exercising the right of franchise has taken no active part in political affairs. He is one of the few remaining links between the pioneer days and the ever changing present, and has been a daily eye-witness for three-quarters of a century of the steady growth and development of his native county.

DR. ANSON T. CLARK, physician and surgeon, was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., April 21, 1835, and is a son of Elam and Perces (Carpenter) Clark. His father was a native of Northampton, Mass., and his mother of Norwich, Conn., who immediately after their marriage located in New York State. In 1843 the family removed to Crawford County, Penn., and settled four miles east of Meadville, where the parents resided until death. Dr. Clark grew to manhood on the homestead in Crawford County, and received his primary education in the public schools thereof. He afterward attended Randolph Academy, in New York State, now the Chamberlin Institute, two years. For the next three years he taught school in Crawford County, and during that time commenced the study of medicine in the office of Dr. John C. Cotton, of Meadville. In 1859 he entered the medical department of Michigan University, Ann Arbor, where he graduated in March, 1861. Dr. Clark opened an office soon afterward in Centerville, Crawford County, where he continued in practice up to May, 1863, when he was appointed assistant surgeon of the Twenty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, for the unexpired term of that regiment, which extended up to the fall of 1864. Dr. Clark then returned to his home and opened an office in Greenfield, Mercer County, where he prosecuted the duties of his profession, until the fall of 1879, when he removed to Greenville. Since locating in this borough he has devoted his whole attention to his profession, and now enjoys a good practice. He was married October 7, 1861, to Miss Adelia F. Carr, a native and resident of Conneautville, Crawford County, of which union three children have been born, two of whom are living: Charles C., now at United States Military Academy, West Point, and S. Frances. Dr. Clark and family belong to the Baptist Church. He is a Republican in politics and a member of John C. Dickey Post, No. 433, G. A. R. He is also a member of the Mercer County Medical Society, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

W. H. CLIFT, grocery merchant, was born in Bucks County, Penn., March 13, 1852, and grew to maturity under the parental roof. His father, Jonathan Clift (deceased), was born in the same county, March 31, 1826, and was a son of Jonathan and Ann Clift, who resided in Bucks County until their decease. Jonathan, Jr., learned the stone-mason's trade in his native county, which he followed in different parts of the Union. He was a contractor in Bucks County until his removal to Delaware Grove, Mercer Co., Penn., in 1863. Here he engaged in hotel-keeping, and dealing in stock in partnership with B. E. Worthington, a leading stock dealer in Bucks County, Penn. In 1865 he removed to New Hamburg and formed a partnership with Daniel Hecker in the mercantile business, which lasted six years. Throughout this period Mr. Clift continued the stock business, and in the fall of 1870 removed to Greenville, where he bought and shipped stock up to 1881, when he retired from the stock trade. In partnership with his son, W. H. Clift, he established a grocery house, in which he was interested until his death, September 21, 1887. Mr. Clift was married in Bucks County, Penn., September 11, 1850, to Miss Emily R. Boyd, a native of Philadelphia, who bore him five children: William H., Anna M., Louisa S. (deceased), Mary H. and H. Jennie (wife of L. F. Black, of Greenville). Mr. Clift was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which his family also adheres. He was a Republican in politics, and a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities. His widow and family reside in Greenville. Our subject, W. H. Clift, followed clerking from the age of twelve until he went into business for himself. Besides a public school education he spent one year in Bustleton Academy, Philadelphia. In 1881 he formed a partnership with his father, and they opened a grocery store, which he still operates. Mr. Clift was married February 10, 1884, to Miss Phebe J. Freeman, of Crawford, Penn., of which union two daughters, Mabel and Emma, have been born. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he belongs to the Republican party. He is a charter member of Greenville Lodge, No. 64, A. O. U. W.

CHARLES DAMBACHER, merchant tailor, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, June 24, 1852, and is a son of Andrew and Veronica (Hafler) Dambacher, natives of the same place, where both died. Charles grew up in Wurtemberg, and there learned the tailor's trade. In 1871 he immigrated to Greenville, Penn., where he worked at his trade three years. For the succeeding six years he worked in Erie, New Castle and Fredonia, Penn., returning to Greenville in 1880, where he continued the same for nearly two years longer. On September 1, 1882, he formed a partnership with Frank A. Donner, under the firm name of Dambacher & Donner, and opened a merchant tailoring establishment, since which time they have won and retained a good share of the business. Mr. Dambacher was married January 27, 1876, to Miss Sophia, daughter of Michael and Mary (Rommelfinger) Schumacher, a pioneer Catholic family of Greenville. Mrs. Dambacher was born in Greenville, and bore him a family of four children: Otto, Mary, Michael and Gertrude (deceased). She died June 11, 1885, in the faith of the Catholic Church. Our subject was again married January 6, 1886, to Miss Lizzie F., daughter of Samuel and Mary (Huston) Kee, natives of Lake Township, Mercer County. The father died in 1868, and his widow resides on the old homestead. Mrs. Dambacher was born and reared in Lake Township. Mr. Dambacher is a member of St. Michael's Catholic Church, and his wife of the Presbyterian Church, of Greenville. He is a Democrat in politics, and one of the active young business men of the town.

ROBERT DICKEY, retired merchant and farmer, was born in County Donegal, Ireland, November, 8, 1808, and is a son of Rev. William and Margaret (Porter) Dickey, of the same place, where both spent their lives. Rev. William Dickey was a Presbyterian minister, and followed that vocation in his native county up to a short time of his death. Our subject grew to manhood in Ireland, and there learned the trade of a copper and tinsmith. In May, 1830, he immigrated to Pittsburgh, Penn., where he married Miss Matilda Cooper, October 7, 1833. She, too, was a native of County Donegal, Ireland, born May 10, 1810, and was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Cooper. Mrs. Dickey reared the following children: Samuel C., John C. (deceased), Rebecca, Joseph P., Robert and James C. Mr. Dickey resided in Pittsburgh until the spring of 1845, when he came to Greenville and established the business house which his sons still carry on. In 1859 he gave up that business and purchased a part of the old Loutzenhiser farm, northeast of Greenville, and resided there till the spring of 1888, when he removed into the borough. Mr. Dickey became a member of his father's congregation in Ireland, and when he settled in Pittsburgh he united with the Associate Presbyterian Church of that city. He kept up his membership in that body until its amalgamation, in 1858, with the Associate Reformed, since which event he has continued a leading member of the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville, Penn. In 1838 he was elected an elder of the Allegheny Church, and for the past fifty years has filled that office. His wife died February 22, 1883, in the United Presbyterian faith. Mr. Dickey has been a resident of Mercer County over forty-three years, and is one of its well-known, respected pioneers. He was first a Whig and then a Republican; was burgess of Greenville in 1858, and has also filled the office of school director.

DICKEY BROTHERS, stove and hardware merchants, are the successors of one of the oldest firms in the borough. Their parents, Robert and Matilda Dickey, natives of Ireland, removed from Pittsburgh to Greenville on April, 1845, where the former established a tinware and stove store, which he conducted fourteen years, when he sold out to his son Samuel C., the senior member of the present firm. Samuel C. was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., October 25, 1836, and came with his parents to Greenville. In 1859 he bought out his father's store and ran the business until 1867, when A. G. Boies purchased an interest. The firm of Dickey & Boies continued until 1873, when Mr. Dickey bought out his partner. His brothers, Joseph P. and Robert, subsequently entered the business, and the firm of Dickey Bros. was formed. Mr. Dickey was married September 20, 1866, to Miss Eliza Stinson, of Greenville, whose father, James Stinson, was one of the early settlers of Mercer County. One son and two daughters have been born of this union, Amelda being the only survivor. Both he and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church. Mr. Dickey is a Republican in politics, has been councilman of the borough nine years, and is now serving as burgess. He is a member of Sergt. John C. Dickey Post No. 433, G. A. R., which was named in honor of his deceased brother.

JOSEPH P. DICKEY was born in Greenville September 5, 1848, and grew up in his native town. In 1866 he went to Colorado, where he spent several years in mining and merchandising. In 1873 he returned to Greenville and became a member of the present firm. On the 1st of December, 1879, he was married to Miss Ada M. Palmer, of Cleveland, Ohio, of which union three daughters have been born and survive: Mamie, Rebe and Clara. Mr. Dickey is a stanch Republican, and a member of the Masonic fraternity.

ROBERT DICKEY, JR., was born in Greenville October 13, 1852, and has always lived here. In 1873 he became a member of the firm of Dickey Bros. He was married February 2, 1882, to Miss Dora, daughter of James W. Linn, who spent his whole life in this county. Two daughters have been born to them, Matilda and Roberta, both of whom are living. Mr. Dickey is an ardent supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

DR. FIELDING DONALDSON, SR., physician and surgeon, was born in Washington County, Penn., December 25, 1822. His grandfather, William Donaldson, emigrated with his family from the County Armagh, Ireland, to Chambersburg, Penn., where he spent the balance of his life. The Doctor's parents, John and Nancy (Watson) Donaldson, were also natives of Armagh, Ireland, where they were married, and in 1801 immigrated to Lancaster County, Penn. Two years afterward they removed to Washington County, where a family of eleven children were born to them. In the spring of 1840 the family settled in Freedom, Beaver County, and there the parents died in October and December of 1851, respectively. Dr. Donaldson received his education principally in his native county. He began his medical studies in Youngstown, Ohio, and completed them under his brother, Dr. James A. Donaldson, of Venango County, Penn. In the spring of 1850 he commenced practice in Venango County, where he remained in practice over seven years. In the fall of 1857 Dr. Donaldson came to Greenville, and formed a partnership with Dr. H. D. La. Cossitt, one of the pioneer physicians of the town. This partnership continued two years, when it was dissolved and Dr. Donaldson continued alone. He attended his first course of lectures at the Western Reserve Medical College, Cleveland, Ohio, and his second course at Philadelphia Medical University, where he graduated in 1866. The Doctor was married May 14, 1845, to Miss Margaret C. Jones, a native of Rochester, Beaver Co., Penn., who is the mother of four sons: Nelson F., a physician at North Platte, Neb., and one of the surgeons of the Union Pacific Railroad Company; James A., a dentist of Greenville; Jacob J., a dentist of East Palestine, Ohio, and Fielding, a practicing physician of Greenville. Dr. Donaldson belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church and his wife to the Disciples, while the whole family are Republicans in politics. Since locating in Greenville, more than thirty years ago, Dr. Donaldson has continued in active practice, and he yet occupies the same house, on the corner of Main and Water Streets, wherein he first located. He is to-day the senior member of the medical profession in Greenville.

SIMON DONNER, retired merchant, was born in Northampton County, Penn., March 12, 1821, and is a son of Michael and Susannah (Laubach) Donner, natives of the same county, of German ancestry. Simon grew to maturity in Northampton County. His father died when our subject was about eighteen years old, and he subsequently went to learn the tinner's trade, at which he spent a couple of years. He worked at his trade in his native county till 1848-49, when he came to Clarksville, Mercer County, and started the tinning business. He was there married, April 16, 1850, to Christiana Holler, of Hickory Township, but a native of Northampton County, Penn. Soon after marriage Mr. Donner removed to Greenville, where he continued in the tinner's business a few years. He then engaged in merchandising, and remained in that line of business the greater portion of his time up to a recent date. Mr. Donner reared two children: Frank A., of the firm of Dambacher & Donner, and Amanda, wife of George W. Hewitt, a jeweler of Greenville. He has been a staunch Democrat all his life, and is one of the oldest and most substantial citizens of the town.

REV. BERNARD DONOHUE, pastor of St. Michael's Catholic Church of Greenville, was born in Ardleny, County Cavan, Ireland, August 15, 1852, and is a son of James and Bridget (Keirnan) Donohoe, natives and residents of the same place. Our subject attended the national schools until his twelfth year, and then went to a classical academy, located on the banks of the celebrated Lough Sheelan, in his native county, where he spent six years. In August, 1870, he immigrated to New York, and soon afterward entered St. Bonaventure's College, Allegany, N. Y., where he remained until June, 1874, when he was called to Erie, Penn., and ordained priest by Bishop Mullen, June 7, 1874, and was immediately sent as assistant priest in St. Thomas' Church, Corry, Penn. In December, 1874, he took charge of Lepanto, Clarion Co., Penn., but early in 1875 he removed to St. Michael's Church, Emlenton, Venango Co., Penn. A short time afterward he took charge of the Immaculate Conception Church, in Rome, Crawford County, returning to Corry in the fall of 1875. He remained in Corry until July, 1876, when he was appointed pastor of St. Michael's Church, Greenville, where he has ever since had charge. In connection with St. Michael's are the missions of Jamestown, Transfer, Orangeville, Hadley and Atlantic. Since taking charge of the Greenville Parish, Father Donohoe has made many improvements in the church and pastoral residence. He has also purchased four lots opposite the church, known as the Andrews property, and four acres of an addition to the cemetery, adjoining the same on the west. He has done a great deal toward building up St. Michael's congregation, which is to-day in a more flourishing condition than during any period of its history.

W. H. H. DUMARS, editor and proprietor of the Shenango Valley News, is a descendant of one of the pioneer families of Mercer County. His grandfather, Timothy Dumars, was a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Pennsylvania when eighteen years of age, and in 1797-98 came to the Shenango Valley, and located in what afterward became Salem Township, Mercer County. He was twice married, first to Mary, daughter of William Fell, a pioneer of West Salem, of which union two daughters, Nancy and Polly, were born. His second wife was Sarah Stuart, who bore him seven children: Phoebe (deceased), Thomas S., William (deceased), James, Joseph (deceased), Fanny (deceased) and Sarah. The parents both died in this county. The eldest son, Thomas S., is the father of our subject, and was born in Salem Township June 18, 1810. His boyhood days were spent upon his father's farm, and his early manhood in agricultural pursuits. He was married April 23, 1833, to Hannah A. Limber, who bore him nine children, five of whom survive, viz.: Sarah (wife of Rev. W. H. Mossman), W. H. H., Mary F., Annie (wife of D. D. Buck) and Emma (wife of H. H. Lininger). In 1846 Mr. Dumars began keeping hotel in Mercer, removing to Meadville in 1849, where he continued in the same business till 1852, when he came to Greenville and opened the St. Charles Hotel. From 1857 to 1862 he lived in Jacksonville, Ill., where he was engaged in farming and milling. He then returned to Greenville, and has since resided in this borough. Our subject was born a few miles east of Greenville, December 24, 1840, and was named in honor of the then President-elect, William Henry Harrison, grandfather of Benjamin Harrison, recently elected to the same high office. In 1854 he commenced learning the printing trade in the office of Finch & Weir, then publishing the only paper in Greenville, and worked three years in that office. In 1858 he entered Illinois College, at Jacksonville, spending four years in that institution, and during vacations worked at his trade and on the farm. He did editorial work on the Jacksonville Journal, and in 1860-61 published the Jacksonville Review, at the same time contributing to the Continental Monthly, St. Louis Democrat and other publications. In 1862 he returned to Greenville, and August 11 enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served till the regiment was mustered out, May 31, 1865. He is a member of the G. A. R., and, though a sufferer from rheumatism contracted in the army, he has never applied for a pension. After the war Mr. Dumars was appointed to a clerkship in the war department at Washington, which he resigned, in 1867, to take an interest in the Greenville Argus. He soon sold out to his partner, and took a situation on the Erie Dispatch, filling consecutively the positions of compositor, night editor and managing editor on that paper. Returning to Greenville he became one of the founders of the Advance, now the Advance Argus. In 1882 he purchased the Shenango Valley News, and has since been the editor and owner of that paper. Mr. Dumars was married March 27, 1876, to Mrs. Nellie M. Lyon, who is now his business, as well his domestic, partner. She is a practical printer, and fully competent to take charge of the office. Both are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. As the News is one of the most vigorous supporters of the Republican party it is perhaps unnecessary to add that its able editor has always held the same political faith since the birth of that organization.

DAVID EMERY was born in what is now Lawrence County, Penn., March 21, 1823, and removed with his parents, William and Lydia (Harlan) Emery, into Butler County, when he was about two years old. His parents were natives of this State, and his grandparents, John and Ann (Covert) Emery, settled in what is now Lawrence County, on Slippery Rock, early in the present century. The maternal grandfather, Jonathan Harlan, emigrated from Eastern Pennsylvania to the site of Harlansburg, Lawrence County, in the latter part of the eighteenth century. David grew up in Butler County, and was married, in Grove City, Penn., to Miss Isabella Campbell, born near Harlansburg, Penn. They reared seven children, all of whom are living, and three sons and one daughter residents of Greenville. Mr. Emery taught school for fifteen years and carried on farming during this period, removing in the spring of 1857 to the vicinity of Greenville, and in 1872 located in the borough where he and his wife have since resided. W. W. Emery was born near Harlansburg, Butler Co., Penn., July 27, 1847, and remained under the parental roof until he grew to maturity, receiving a common-school education. Ere reaching manhood he began clerking in a dry goods store in Greenville, and in 1877 formed a partnership with W. A. Keck in the dry goods business. Mr. Emery continued a member of the firm of Keck & Emery until February, 1886, when he sold out to his partner and, with his brother, P. C., purchased the boot and shoe stock of William Beatty & Sons, which he sold out in the fall of 1888, with the intention of reentering the dry goods in 1889. Mr. Emery was married, September 15, 1874, to Miss Dora F., daughter of Marvin Loomis, of Greenville. Four children have been born of this union: Mary, Ella, Laura and Marvin. Mr. Emery is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and belongs to the Republican party. P. C. Emery was born in Butler County, Penn., November 4, 1855, and grew up and received his education in Mercer County. In 1871 he came to Greenville, and clerked until 1879, then went to Mercer and formed a partnership in the dry goods business with James Campbell, the firm being Campbell & Emery. He remained in business at Mercer until February, 1886, when the partnership of Emery Bros. was formed, which existed till the fall of 1888. Mr. Emery was married March 22, 1883, to Miss Sadie, daughter of William Logan, president of the First National Bank of Mercer. He and wife are adherents of the United Presbyterian Church, and he is an unswerving advocate of the Democratic party.

WALTER J. FELL, manufacturer, was born in West Salem Township, Mercer Co., Penn., October 12, 1851, and is a son of Aylett R. and Clarissa (Follett) Fell, who reside upon the old homestead in West Salem. W. J. grew to manhood on his father's farm, and received his primary education in the district schools. He afterward attended the high-school at New Lebanon, Mercer County, and subsequently the Western Reserve College at Hudson, Ohio, and Mount Union College in the same State, also the State Normal School at Edinboro, Penn. During this period he had been engaged in teaching at various points, and was principal of the public schools of Orangeville, Ohio. In January, 1878, Mr. Fell commenced the manufacture of oil barrel staves and lumber in this county and Trumbull County, Ohio, and West Virginia, and has since continued in this line of business. He owns and operates several mills in Mercer and adjoining counties of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and in West Virginia, and has been very successful in the several enterprises in which he has been engaged. Mr. Fell is a staunch Republican, and one of the most energetic and enterprising citizens of his native county.

WILLIAM R. FESSLER, merchant tailor and cutter, was born in Heidelberg Township, Berks Co., Penn., October 19, 1828, and is a son of Daniel and Rebecca (Gruber) Fessler, natives of the same place, of German ancestry. Both died in Harrisburg, Penn. Our subject grew up under the parental roof, and learned the tailor trade in Cumberland, Md., and afterward spent some time working at his trade in different portions of the Union, principally in the Southern States. In June, 1848, he came to Mercer County and located in Sheakleyville, where he was married, in March, 1849, to Miss Nancy H., daughter of the late Thomas and Ellen (Limber) Wallace, pioneers of that portion of Mercer County. Three children were born of this marriage: Lydia (deceased), John W. and Walter Woodruff. From 1848 until 1861 Mr. Fessler spent most of his time in Sheakleyville, where he followed his trade and where his family resided. In April, 1861, he came to Greenville and entered the employ of John Brackin, merchant tailor, in which house he filled the position of cutter a period of over twenty-seven years. Mrs. Fessler died after a lingering illness January 28, 1888, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which denomination her husband also belongs. Politically Mr. Fessler is a Democrat, and has been councilman of the borough and a director on the school board. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also of I. O. O. F. since 1849, and has always taken a deep interest in the growth and progress of his adopted county.

M. H. FETZER, D. D. S., was born in Cambria County, Penn., November 18, 1856, and is the son of Rev. C. A. and Anna W. (Harris) Fetzer. The former is a native of Germany, and a minister of the Lutheran Church. The latter was born in England, and they were married in Jefferson County, Penn. Dr. Fetzer was one of the first students of Thiel College, then known as Thiel Hall, and afterward attended Tabeleau Seminary in Venango County, Penn. He subsequently taught school two terms in Clarion and Armstrong Counties. In June, 1875, he commenced the study of dentistry in Ephrata, Lancaster Co., Penn., under Dr. Rhine Hertz, a prominent dentist of that section of the State. In 1881 and 1882 he attended the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery, and graduated in the spring of the latter year. His parents having removed to Greenville in 1880, Dr. Fetzer, immediately after graduating, came to this borough, opened an office and has since built up a good practice. The Doctor was married in January, 1876, to Miss Mary E. Mohler, of Ephrata, Penn. Dr. Fetzer is a member of Lake Erie Dental Association and the Odontological Society of Western Pennsylvania. He is a Democrat in politics, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and a Lutheran in religious belief.

W. J. B. FINDLEY, grocery merchant, was born in East Fallowfield Township, Crawford Co., Penn., January 28, 1831, and is a son of Moses and Elizabeth (Hays) Findley. The former was born in Ireland, and at the age of twenty-one immigrated, with his father, John Findley and family, to Crawford County. John Findley died in the north part of Crawford County, leaving three sons and two daughters: Moses, John, Robert, Rhoda and Mary Ann, all of whom have since passed away. Moses Findley was married to Elizabeth Hays, in Crawford County, December 17, 1811. She, too, was a native of Ireland, and a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Hays, natives of Scotland, who emigrated from Ireland to Westmoreland County, Penn., when she was seven years old, and in 1803 settled in Crawford County, where they died. To Moses and Elizabeth Findley were born eight children: John, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Mary J. deceased; Samuel H., of Crawford County; Rhoda, deceased; Haul, deceased; Thomas, of California, and W. J. B., of Greenville. The father died on the old homestead in 1845, in his sixty-fifth year, from disease contracted while serving in the War of 1812. His widow survived him until 1873, dying in her eighty-third year. They were Covenanters in religious faith, and Democrats in politics. The Hays family were connected in marriage with the Buchanans of Pennsylvania, Polks of Tennessee, and the Knoxes of Arkansas. Our subject grew to manhood in his native county, and at the age of twenty-two opened a store in Sheakleyville. In 1856 he went to California, and returned in 1860. He began mercantile business in Meadville, which he carried on until the spring of 1877, when he sold out and spent some time recuperating his broken health. In the spring of 1879 he located in Greenville, and in the spring of 1881 opened a general grocery store, which he has since conducted. Mr. Findley was married August 21, 1856, to Miss Hattie Dunn, of Sheakleyville, of which union three children have been born: Carrie E., wife of S. H. Sutherland, a stock grower of New Mexico; Charles H., who died July 9, 1883, and James E., of Greenville. The family belong to the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Findley is a fearless advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and in 1874 was the choice of his party in Crawford County for Congress.

WILLIAM H. FINDLEY, of the firm of Beatty & Findley, dealers in books, stationery, etc., was born in East Fallowfield Township, Crawford Co., Penn., January 5, 1850, and is a son of Hon. Samuel H. Findley, of Hartstown, Crawford County, who has represented that county two terms in the Legislature. He was born on the old Findley homestead, in East Fallowfield Township, February 4, 1821, and is a son of Moses Findley, previously mentioned. He grew up under the parental roof, and received a good English education.

He spent a portion of his early manhood in the South engaged as a contractor. He was married June 22, 1847, to Miss Louisa Ann, daughter of Richard and Almera (Whetmore) Custard, of Crawford County, who afterward removed to Sheakleyville. Mrs. Findley was born in Greenwood Township, Crawford County, December 17, 1827, at what is well known as "Custards," where her father kept hotel and post-office for many years. Samuel H. Findley and wife are residents of Hartstown, and members of the United Presbyterian Church. Politically he was always an anti-slavery man, and was one of the local organizers of the Republican party. He has served many years as justice of the peace in a Democratic township, and has always been prominent in the local affairs of his neighborhood. He is a strong temperance man, of wide knowledge of men and affairs, and is highly respected by his neighbors. In 1863 William H. Findley went to Meadville, where he spent three years in the public schools and the academy of that borough. He afterward clerked in Meadville three years, and in the fall of 1869 entered Jefferson Academy at Cannonsburg, Penn., and spent two terms. He taught school one term in Crawford County, and in May, 1872, came to Greenville, and clerked till August, 1873, when the firm of Beatty & Findley was established and began business. They have been the leading house in their line in Greenville for the past fifteen years. Mr. Findley was married October 31, 1877, to Miss Susan J. P., daughter of the late Dr. R. E. Breiner, of Greenville, of which union one son, Paul B., survives. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Findley has been one of the leading Republicans of Mercer County for several years.

DAVID H. FORD, carriage manufacturer, was born in Bolesburg, Centre County, Penn., August 11, 1839, and is a son of Hiram Ford, a native of Pennsylvania, of English parentage. His father grew to manhood in Centre County, and there married Barbara Ream, of that county, of German ancestry. They reared two children: David H. and Mary J., wife of Edward Stenger, of Hempfield Township. The father died when our subject was an infant, and the widow subsequently married John Durst. About 1851 the family came to Mercer County, where the mother died in 1886. David H. grew up in Mercer County, and was educated in the common schools. He learned carriage trimming in Greenville, commencing in 1857. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, Sixty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the charge at Mayers Heights in the battle of Chancellorsville, May 3, 1863, where he was severely wounded while carrying the colors of his regiment in that charge. He lay in the hospital eight months, and at the end of fourteen months was honorably discharged as unfit for further service. Mr. Ford followed his trade until 1873, when he purchased the interest of William McDowell, of McDowell & Cooke, carriage manufacturers, and the firm of Cooke & Ford was then formed. In October, 1884, Mr. Ford became sole proprietor, and in January, 1886, his present partner, R. E. Thorn, joined him in business, and the present firm of Ford & Thorn was established. Mr. Ford was married July 26, 1866, to Amanda M., daughter of Samuel and Louisa Spear, early settlers of Mercer County. He is a Republican in politics, a member of the G. A. R. and the Masonic fraternity, and both he and wife are Presbyterians.

CHARLES H. FRY, farmer and proprietor of stone quarries, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., December 26, 1813. His parents, Abraham and Rebecca (Hofford) Fry, lived and died in that county. In the fall of 1837 our subject came to Greenville, where he has ever since made his home. He was married December 26, 1846, to Hannah, daughter of Jacob Hommer, one of the well-remembered pioneers of West Salem Township, where he came with his father from Maryland in 1809. Mrs. Fry was born on the old homestead April 23, 1826, and is the mother of nine children: Louisa, widow of Daniel Knappenberger; William, Elizabeth E., wife of Jonathan Hawk; Charles, Joseph, Fannie, wife of Frank Keck; Samuel Q., Benjamin and Addie B., deceased. Mr. Fry has followed farming and quarrying the principal portion of his life. From 1852 to 1860 he was connected with Samuel West in carrying the mails between Greenville and Mercer, and the latter part of that period between Greenville and Warren, Ohio. Mr. Fry began life in Mercer County without a dollar, and by steady, industrious habits has accumulated during the past fifty-one years a competence for himself and family. Politically he is a Republican, and the family belong to the Lutheran Church. He is now a member of the borough council.

FRED H. GAISER, of the firm of Gaiser & Kane, general merchants, was born in Greenville, March 31, 1853. His father, David Gaiser, was born in Switzerland, in 1806, there grew to manhood and learned the carpenter trade. In 1830 he immigrated to Greenville, Penn., and was one of the pioneer carpenters of the town. He was married November 29, 1840, to Mrs. Elizabeth Snyder, nee Sweitzer, widow of Jacob Snyder, an early settler of Greenville, where they were married in June, 1834. Mr. Snyder died May 7, 1837, and three years and a half afterward she became the wife of David Gaiser. She was born in Germany in 1809, and bore the following children by her second marriage: Eliza, John, David (deceased), George, Eli and Fred H. Mr. Gaiser died April 1, 1853, and his widow has ever since resided in Greenville. He followed his trade up to his death, and erected many of the first buildings in this part of the county. Fred H. Gaiser has always made Greenville his home. He began clerking at the age of sixteen, in the store of S. P. Johnston & Co. In February, 1877, he obtained an interest in the business, and has since continued a member of the firm under its several changes. In September, 1887, Martin Kane obtained a half interest, and the present firm of Gaiser & Kane was formed. Mr. Gaiser was married June 27, 1875, to Miss Abigail Bates, a native of Greene Township, Mercer Co., of which union seven children have been born: Nora, Bert, George, Eli, Thomas, Mabel and William, all of whom are living. Mr. Gaiser is a stanch Democrat, a member of the K. of P. and K. of H. and the family adhere to the Reformed Church.

THOMAS CHISMAN GIBSON, clothing merchant, was born in Darlington, England, November 8, 1847. His paternal grandparents, William and Sarah (Chisman) Gibson, had a "registered coat of arms," and lived and died in Darlington, England. The father of Sarah Gibson kept the "Queen's Head" Hotel in Darlington for many years, and after his death, at the age of eighty-seven, his widow conducted the business for a long time, living to the ripe old age of eighty-eight years. The parents of our subject, Chisman and Hannah (Hodgson) Gibson, were also natives of England, where the latter died in 1854, leaving a family of three sons. Chisman Gibson immigrated to Buffalo, N. Y., in 1856, whither his children followed him in January, 1858. The family subsequently removed to Aurora, N. Y., where the father still resides. Thomas C. was educated in the public schools of New York State, and at the age of twenty went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he commenced learning his present business; thence removed to Warren, Ohio, and afterward to Sharon, Penn. In June, 1871, Mr. Gibson came to Greenville, to fill the position of cutter for Henlein & Bacher, and in January, 1873, obtained an interest in the business, the firm becoming Bacher, Gibson & Co. This co-partnership was dissolved in April, 1876, and Mr. Gibson opened a merchant tailoring and clothing house in the room he has ever since occupied, and where he is conducting one of the largest trades in the county. Mr. Gibson was married October 26, 1876, to Miss Lizzie Kern, of Greenville, a native of Hamburg, Bucks Co., Penn., and a daughter of John and Wilhemina (Feather) Kern, natives of the same place. Two sons have been born of this marriage: Howard K. and Frank C. Mr. Gibson is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and an active adherent of the Republican party. He was president of the Blaine and Logan Club in 1884, and has always taken a deep interest in the success of Republican measures and principles. He is also one of the managers of the Board of Trade, and every worthy enterprise finds in him a warm friend and generous supporter. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Greenville, Mr Gibson being one of the trustees of the church.

ALEXANDER D. GILLESPIE, attorney at law, was born two miles east of Greenville, October 10, 1822. He is a son of David and Hannah (Dumars) Gillespie, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter a daughter of Alexander Dumars, who settled two miles east of Greenville in the spring of 1800. When our subject was six years old his parents moved to Big Bend, on the Shenango River, and there spent the remaining years of their lives. Alexander left home at seventeen to attend the academy of Greenville, then under the charge of Rev. John Gamble, a well-known educator of that period, where he spent one year. He then began teaching school in the winter seasons, and devoted the remainder of his time to the study of law in the office of William Maxwell, of Mercer. He attended Allegheny College at Meadville during the session of 1842-43, and taught school until 1844. On the 17th of December, 1845, he was admitted to practice, and "hung out his shingle" in Greenville. His surplus of cash to bridge over the period during which he was waiting for clients was the enormous sum of 75 cents. The first few years he scarcely made expenses, but with indomitable pluck he stuck to the law, and finally became one of the leading and most successful attorneys of the Mercer bar. Mr. Gillespie was married, July 4, 1846, to Miss Nancy Linn, a native of Mercer County, who has borne him four sons: Alfred D., Cassius R. (who died while attending the Edinboro Normal School), Eugene P. (a prominent attorney of Greenville) and Alexander J. (a practicing attorney of the same borough). Mr. Gillespie and wife reside on the west side, and are one of the few remaining pioneer couples of the town. Throughout his life he has been firm in his adherence to the Democratic party; assisted in establishing the Greenville Progress, and for a time was its editor and proprietor, and has been elected eight terms as burgess of Greenville, which fact, the town being strongly Republican, speaks volumes in favor of his standing among the people of his old home.

EUGENE P. GILLESPIE, attorney at law, was born in Greenville September 24, 1852, and is a son of Alexander D. Gillespie, a prominent pioneer lawyer of that borough. After receiving the advantages which the public schools afforded, he entered Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., in 1868, where he spent two years. Late in 1870 he entered St. Michael's College, Toronto, Ontario, and was a student of that institution till June, 1872, when he received his certificate of graduation. Returning to Greenville he began reading law with his father, and was admitted to the Mercer bar August 18, 1874. He has since been engaged in the active duties of his profession, and has built up a large and successful practice. Mr. Gillespie was married, November 25, 1880, to Miss Ella Davidson, of Sharon, Penn., of which union three children have been born: Florence Stanley, Ellen and Robert Wray. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a leading politician of the Democratic party, and one of the best known attorneys of the county.

GEORGE H. GRAUEL, dealer in books, stationery, etc., was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., March 25, 1862, and is a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Nippert) Grauel, he a native of Bavaria, Germany, and she of Pittsburgh. In 1863 his parents came to Greenville, subsequently returning to Pittsburgh, where they remained a year or two and again located in Greenville, where his father is now engaged in the bakery and confectionery business. Our subject was educated in the public schools of Greenville, and at the age of seventeen began clerking in a book and stationery store of the borough. He continued clerking in this town till the spring of 1883, and the following nine months clerked in Kansas City, Mo., returning to Greenville late in 1883. He afterward went to Pittsburgh, where he clerked until October, 1885, then came home and purchased a half interest in the book store of John P. Derr, the firm becoming John P. Derr & Co. In May, 1886, Frank M. Woods purchased Mr. Derr's interest, and the firm of Grauel & Woods was organized, and has since carried on the business. Mr. Grauel was married, October 5, 1887, to Miss Della, daughter of Lyman B. Speir, of Greenville. Politically he is a Republican, a member of the I. O. O. F., and both he and wife belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JOHN K. HAMBLIN, senior member of Hamblin, Sons & Co., proprietors of the Greenville Foundry and Machine Shops, was born in Wilmington, Essex Co., N. Y., March 2, 1809. He is a son of Samuel and Rhoda (Smith) Hamblin, natives of Connecticut, and grandson of Simeon Hamblin, a native of Maine, and a pioneer of Essex County, N. Y. Samuel removed with his family to Licking County, Ohio, early in the thirties, where he died in 1838. His widow afterward came to Mercer County, Penn., and here spent the remaining years of her life. In 1829 John K. Hamblin came West, and located in Unionville, Lake Co., Ohio, and taught school in that county two terms. He then, as confidential clerk, took charge of a furnace store in the same county, which position he filled three years, and then went to Cleveland, Ohio, to occupy a similar position. In 1835 he went back to Wilmington, N. Y., and on the 20th of September was there married to Miss Elizabeth Hickok, a native of Essex County, born September 10, 1810. Mr. Hamblin immediately returned to Lake County, Ohio, and resided there until March, 1838, when he removed to Greenville, Penn., and opened on Canal Street the first foundry operated in the town, and one of the first in Mercer County. For the past fifty years, excepting one short interval, he has been continuously engaged in the same business, the present foundry being just across the street from the site of the one he established half a century ago. Mrs. Hamblin died in November, 1846, leaving a family of five children: Henry M., Mrs. Mary E. Thalimer, of Greenville, Samuel, Mrs. Harriett Donaldson (deceased) and Mrs. Emeline McClelland, of Warren, Ohio. Mr. Hamblin was again married in April, 1848, to Mrs. Eunice B. Hunstable, who bore him three children: Albert, a resident of North Carolina; Alice, wife of A. T. Kreps, of Hamblin, Sons & Co., and J. Charles (deceased). Mrs. Hamblin died April 6, 1888. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and the oldest surviving pioneer business man of Greenville.

HENRY M. HAMBLIN, of Hamblin, Sons & Co., was born in Lake County, Ohio, August 29, 1836, and is the eldest son of John K. and Elizabeth Hamblin. After receiving the usual advantages of the Greenville public schools, he attended Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn. A large portion of his youthful days was spent in Rock Island, Ill., and Boston, Mass. He read law in the former city, and, after his return to Greenville in 1865, practiced his profession in Mercer County, and has served one term as district attorney. In August, 1871, he became a member of the present firm, and has ever since devoted his attention to the foundry and machine business. Mr. Hamblin is married, is the father of three children, and is one of the staunch Republicans of Greenville.

SAMUEL HAMBLIN, of Hamblin, Sons & Co., was born in Greenville, Penn., January 7, 1840, and grew up in his native town. After obtaining a common-school education he entered his father's foundry and machine shop, and became master of the mechanical part of the business. He continued to work for his father until August, 1871, when he became a member of the present firm, with full control of the mechanical department. Mr. Hamblin was married December 7, 1861, to Miss E. J. Kyle, of Greene Township, a native of Dauphin County, Penn. Four children have been born of this union: Mary C., John G., Maud G. and Ralph R. Mr. Hamblin is a Republican in politics, and the family are adherents of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

MICHAEL HAMILL, proprietor of the Hamill House, was born September 29, 1842, in the parish of Fork Hill, County Armagh, Ireland, and is a son of Michael and Susan (Lee) Hamill, who lived and died in their native place. Our subject received a good education in his native land, and in August, 1865, immigrated to Greenville, Penn., where he then had relatives. He worked for his uncle a short time and then began clerking in the grocery store of Eugene Rooney, with whom he remained three years. In February, 1869, he started a grocery store, which he carried on successfully until March, 1881, when he opened the Hamill House, and has since been engaged in the hotel business. For the past fourteen years Mr. Hamill has had the general local agency of all the steamship lines between the Atlantic seaboard and Europe. He was married December 27, 1867, to Miss Mary Morgan, of Greenville, and a native of his own parish in Ireland. Of this union six children have been born to them, three of whom survive: Michael J., John T. and Susan. The family belong to the Catholic Church, and Mr. Hamill is a member of the C. M. B. A., and one of the staunch Democrats of the borough.

WILLIAM PERRY HANNA closed his eyes in the sleep of death on Saturday, October 6, 1888, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, aged seventy-three years, four months and twenty-seven days, after a lingering illness of several months' duration. He was born at Carlisle, Cumberland Co., Penn., May 7, 1815. His father, John C. Hanna, was a native of County Donegal, Ireland, and immigrated to the United States in early manhood, where he met and married Hannah Smith, also a native of the Emerald Isle. William P. was thus of pure Celtic stock, and inherited many of the characteristics of that remarkable race. His parents resided successively in Cumberland and Allegheny Counties, and removed to the borough of Mercer in 1822. They had then a family of three sons and three daughters, viz.: Robert, John S., Mary H., Sarah A., Nancy and William P. Sarah died at Mercer the year following their settlement. Our subject received his education in the pioneer schools of Mercer, and in 1833 came to Greenville to learn the chair-maker's trade in his brother Robert's factory. He, however, did not like the business, having had from early youth a strong natural inclination for drawing and painting. Following this penchant he quit his trade and engaged in house and sign painting, also indulging in his natural though uncultivated taste for drawing and portrait painting whenever the opportunity offered. In his late home are a few specimens of his brush, which he took pleasure in exhibiting to his friends. His mother died at Mercer October 21, 1844, in her sixty-fifth year, and his father then came to Greenville and made his home with his children until his death, June 16, 1846, aged seventy-two. From early manhood William P. was the mainstay of his parents, and their principal support in their declining years. His brother Robert and sisters Mary and Nancy died in Greenville, while John S. emigrated to Baltimore, Md., and is supposed to have died there. Politically Mr. Hanna was a staunch, unswerving Democrat, and faithfully believed in and advocated the principles of his party. He was appointed by President Polk postmaster at Greenville, December 29, 1845, and served until May, 1849, when the administration of President Taylor having come into power he was relieved from office. He then followed painting until June 6, 1853, when he was again appointed to the postmastership by President Pierce, and reappointed by President Buchanan in 1857. Soon after Abraham Lincoln succeeded to the Presidency Mr. Hanna was replaced by William Keck, a supporter of the new administration. In May, 1861, immediately after leaving the post-office, he established the Union Democrat—the first Democratic paper published at Greenville. He continued the publication of the Democrat under trying difficulties until the autumn of 1864, when the business proving unprofitable he sold the office to W. F. Chalfant, of the Argus, and retired from the newspaper field. He ever afterward, however, retained a love for newspaper work, and contributed many valuable articles to the local press. He was also one of the best and most reliable authorities on local history in Greenville, and his extensive memory preserved for the historian a mass of valuable information on the early history of the town that but for him would have been lost 'mid the rubbish of forgotten things. After selling the Democrat Mr. Hanna opened a news and book store, which he disposed of in 1865 to Conrad Bittenbanner, and subsequently spent a few months in West Virginia. Returning to Greenville he again entered the book and news business, which he carried on till burned out by the fire of January, 1871. He did not engage in business after this event, but in 1874 he was elected justice of the peace, and served five years, commencing April 11, 1875. Mr. Hanna was married October 13, 1859, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Moses and Esther Blair, of Crawford County, Penn., who has borne him two children: Lizzie, wife of Lewis Klein, and William T., now in the government mail service. His home life was strongly marked with the Christian virtues of love and kindness, and the deep affection existing between him and the members of his household was an example worthy of imitation. For many years he had been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died strengthened and solaced by the teachings of his faith. Mr. Hanna was generous and charitable beyond his means, and could not pass by a case of suffering or need without extending consolation and a helping hand. Ever true to his friends, he had few if any enemies, and was always courteous to friend and stranger alike. He possessed a modest, unassuming, obliging disposition, and was never so happy as when doing a favor or granting a request. His thorough distaste of ostentation, and strong love for his fellowmen, were vividly illustrated by his dying injunctions. He requested that his funeral should be a simple one, devoid of show, and that the services should be conducted at the residence. Said he to his pastor: "Say nothing about me or my life, but try and say something that may find a lodging place in the heart of some friend present." Here was an example of unselfishness and Christian charity worthy of perpetuation in the pages of history.

CAPT. W. F. HARPST, one of the editors and proprietors of the Greenville Progress, was born in Half Moon Valley, Centre County, Penn., July 13, 1837. He is a son of Philip and Sarah Harpst, and a grandson of Daniel Harpst, a Revolutionary soldier, who was serving under Washington when Cornwallis surrendered his army at Yorktown, Va. The parents of our subject removed to Meadville, Penn., when he was two years old, and he there grew up and attended the common schools of the town. At the age of sixteen he became an apprentice in the printing office of the Spirit of the Age, of Meadville. In April, 1856, he left Meadville to try his fortunes in the West, and for over three years he worked at his trade in Wisconsin and Minnesota. In September, 1859, he went South, where he followed the occupation of a typo in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi till April, 1860, when, finding that the political atmosphere in the South was getting rather warm for Union men, he returned to Meadville, and worked at his trade till August, 1862, when he enlisted as private in Company C, One Hundred and Fiftieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, for the nine months service. On arriving at Harrisburg it was found that the nine months quota was filled, and his command then enlisted for three years, and subsequently joined the army of the Potomac. Capt. Harpst participated in all of the battles in which his regiment was engaged during its service except Chancellorsville, when he was sick in hospital. He was mustered out with his regiment June 23, 1865, with the rank of first sergeant, and returned to Meadville. He there resumed the duties of his trade, and in September, 1865, came to Greenville, and began working in the Argus office. He continued in that office till November, 1870, when he formed a partnership with W. H. H. Dumars and Amos A. Yeakel, for the purpose of establishing a new paper, and on January 7, 1871, the first number of the Greenville Advance was issued by them. The following April Capt. Harpst sold his interest in the paper to J. C. Brown, Esq., but remained in the office as foreman and assistant local editor till January 1, 1879. On that date he became a compositor in the office of the Greenville Progress, in which capacity he served till May 2, 1881, when, in company with Frank C. Huling, he purchased the office from A. D. Gillespie, Esq., and thus became half owner of the paper. Capt. Harpst was reared a Whig, but cast his first vote for Douglas in 1860, and has ever since been a staunch adherent of the Democratic party. In 1876 he joined Company K, Fifteenth Regiment National Guards of Pennsylvania; participated with his regiment in quelling the railroad riots the following year; was commissioned second lieutenant of his company February 18, 1878; first lieutenant, March 24, 1883, and captain, February 2, 1885, which position he has filled up to the present. Capt. Harpst was married at Greenville, Penn., October 30, 1867, to Miss Emma R., eldest daughter of Edward and Matilda Yeakel. Five children have been born of this marriage: Mary E. (deceased), Freddie M. (deceased), Sadie B., Matilda G. and Alice L.

DANIEL HASENPLUG, boot and shoe merchant, was born in West Salem Township, Mercer Co., Penn., December 6, 1843, and is a son of Jacob and Anna (Lichty) Hasenplug, natives of Union County, Penn., who settled in West Salem Township in the fall of 1834. Our subject was reared on the old homestead, and attended the common district schools of his neighborhood. He learned the shoemaker's trade, and began business in Pymatuning Township in 1865, where he remained until coming to Greenville in the spring of 1884. He spent some time in traveling through the West, and in January, 1887, opened his present boot and shoe store, where he has won and retained a fair share of the trade. Mr. Hasenplug served in the Fifty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers three months, and subsequently in the One Hundred and Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers nearly a year and a half, his regiment being at Appomattox. On the close of the war Mr. Hasenplug returned to his home and settled down to peaceful avocations. He was married May 19, 1868, to Sarah J., daughter of John Mowry, of Delaware Township, of which union two daughters have been born: Lillie P. and Jennie M. The family belong to the Evangelical Association, and politically Mr. Hasenplug is a Republican.

THEODORE ETTING HEILMAN, contractor and builder, was born in Plum Creek Township, Armstrong Co., Penn., January 7, 1842, and is a son of George and Henrietta (Hengst) Heilman. The former was born in Armstrong County in 1814, and the latter in Germany in 1819. They were married in Armstrong County, where the father died October 9, 1849, and his widow is now living with her daughter near Fredonia, Mercer County. The great-grandparents of our subject were Peter and Elizabeth Heilman, who emigrated from Germany, and died in Pennsylvania June 1, 1833, and January 10, 1832, respectively, each being in the eighty-third year of their age. The grandparents of our subject, Daniel and Lydia (Yount) Heilman, were natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., born in 1782 and 1790, respectively. The former died December 26, 1832, and the latter June 24, 1868, both in Armstrong County, Penn. His paternal grandfather, Christian Hengst, was a native of Hanover, Germany, where he married a Miss Etting, and in the spring of 1832 immigrated to Baltimore, Md., and died near Cumberland, Penn., in 1833. His widow subsequently came to Mercer County, and died in 1871 aged eighty-six years. In 1850 Mrs. Heilman, with her two sons, Theodore and George, and one daughter, Lydia, now the wife of August Bye, of Fredonia, Penn., removed from Armstrong to Indiana County, Penn., where the family lived two years. They returned to Armstrong County, and in the fall of 1854 came to Mercer County and settled near Gillespie's Corners, in Pymatuning Township, where the mother lived eleven years. Theodore E. began learning the carpenter's trade at Gillespie's Corners, and followed that business until his removal to Greenville in the spring of 1866. Soon after locating in Greenville he began as a contractor and architect builder. For the past twenty years he has been successfully engaged in that business, and throughout that period has been one of the leading contractors of this part of the county. Thiel College buildings, Thomas Gibson's residence, the Fell House, Vance Stewart's dwelling house and Dr. Martin's residence are among the many buildings that attest his skill as a builder. Mr. Heilman was married April 11, 1865, to Miss Loretta E., daughter of Dr. Augustus B. Bierdman, then a resident of Crawford County, Penn. Dr. Bierdman was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1810, immigrated to America in 1832 and died in Edinburg, Crawford Co., Penn., October 20, 1869. He first read medicine and then studied for the Lutheran ministry. Mrs. Heilman was born in Canton, Ohio, December 4, 1846, and is the mother of four children: Luther A. (who died in 1882, aged sixteen), Sadie, Gustavus A. and Adeline L. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and Mr. Heilman is a member of the P. H. C., and one of the staunch Democrats of Mercer County.

GEORGE H. HEILMAN, carpenter and builder, was born in Plum Creek Township, Armstrong Co., Penn., January 4, 1849, and is a son of George and Henrietta Heilman, previously spoken of. Our subject was reared in Mercer County, and attended the public schools of Pymatuning Township. In the spring of 1866 he came to Greenville and began learning the carpenter's trade with his brother, Theodore E. He remained with his brother until 1870, and then began contracting and building through the eastern part of the county, which he continued in that section for five years, when he returned to Greenville. He again commenced working for his brother, which continued till the spring of 1880, when he formed a partnership with A. Sahn, under the firm name of Heilman & Sahn. This lasted two years, when the partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Heilman has since been one of the well-known contractors and builders of Greenville, having erected some of the best buildings in the town. He was married June 11, 1872, to Miss Julia A. Stillings, a native of Fairview Township, Mercer County. Two children have been born of this union: Hattie M. and Leona A. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and Mr. Heilman is an unswerving Democrat.

JAMES A. HEILMAN, proprietor of planing-mill and lumber yard, is a native of Armstrong County, Penn., born September 26, 1850. His parents are Isaac and Hannah (Briney) Heilman, the former a native of Armstrong County, born upon the farm where he yet lives, and the latter of Greensburg, Westmoreland Co., Penn. Our subject grew to manhood on the old homestead, and in 1870 came to Greenville, where he learned the carpenter's trade. In 1877 he began contracting and building, and in May, 1879, in partnership with his brother, Jackson B., and cousin, T. E. Heilman, purchased the McPherrin planing-mills and lumber yard. In 1880 T. E. Heilman sold his interest to his cousins, and the firm of Heilman Bros. came to be known as one of the largest and most successful institutions of the borough. Mr. Heilman was married August 6, 1879, to Miss Annie M. Schilpp, a native of Allegheny City. Three children have been born of this union: Bertha M. (deceased), Fred L. and Florence P. Mr. Heilman is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P. and P. H. C., and the family belong to the Lutheran Church. He is a Democrat in politics, and staunch in his adherence to Democratic principles. He has been councilman of the borough, and in 1887 was the choice of his party in this portion of the county for sheriff, losing the nomination by only six votes.

JACKSON B. HEILMAN, who died in Greenville May 29, 1888, was the junior member of the firm of Heilman Bros. He was born in Armstrong County, Penn., March 13, 1856. In February, 1876, he came to Greenville, and learned the carpenter's trade with his brother, James A., and cousin, T. E. Heilman. He worked for the former until May, 1879, when, in company with his brother and cousin, the McPherrin planing-mill and lumber yard was purchased. His cousin retired from the firm in 1880, and Heilman Bros. conducted the business up to the death of our subject. He was married June 28, 1887, to Miss Carrie Miller, a native of Allegheny City, Penn. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P. and the P. H. C., and was a firm adherent of the Democratic party. He belonged to the Lutheran Church from early boyhood, and remained a consistent member thereof up to his death. His frank, open-hearted manners endeared him to all with whom he came in contact, while his straightforward, honest business principles stamped him as one of the leading young business men of the borough. He was a whole-souled, generous, kind and genial companion, and was highly respected by the best citizens of the community.

BENJAMIN HENLEIN, retired clothing merchant and farmer, was born in Wuertemberg, Germany, July 2, 1825, and is a son of Henle Henlein, of that place. He grew to manhood in Germany, and in July, 1847, immigrated to Franklin County, Penn., coming to Greenville in May, 1850, where his brother Morris was engaged in merchandising. He began clerking for his brother, and in 1855 obtained an interest in the business, then owned by his brothers, Manassa, of New Castle, and Morris. The latter died in 1857, and our subject continued the business with his brother Manassa. He too died in 1863, and Benjamin then became sole proprietor of the Greenville store. In 1870 he sold his dry goods and grocery business, and continued the clothing alone. In February, 1885, he retired from business and engaged in farming, which he still follows. Mr. Henlein was married September 22, 1852, in Germany, to Miss Amelia Ullman, of that country. Nine children are the fruits of this union: Alfred F., an attorney at law of Greenville; Matilda, deceased, aged twenty; Allen, deceased; Frances, wife of Julius Weis, of Philadelphia; Morris, who died aged twelve; Gustav B., of the firm of Bacher, Benninghoff & Co.; Manassa, of New York; Ida and Louis. Mr. Henlein is a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Jewish faith. Coming to America comparatively penniless, by rigid industry, economy and close attention to his business, he has amassed a handsome fortune.

DR. FAYETTE HERRICK, dentist, was born in Ontario County, N. Y., August 6, 1834, and is a son of Eben A. and Malinda (Webb) Herrick, natives of New York State. When our subject was quite young his parents removed to Michigan, where his father died. His mother afterward returned to New York, whence she removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, where she now lives. Dr. Herrick is the eldest in a family of three sons, all of whom are living. He grew to manhood and received his education in the public schools of the Western Reserve, and in 1857 began the study of dentistry in Ashtabula County. In 1858 he commenced practice in that county, and in 1861 removed to Gustavus, Trumbull County, coming to Greenville in the fall of 1865, where he has since built up and enjoyed a large and successful practice. Dr. Herrick was married August 18, 1855, to Miss Catherine M. Webb, of Ashtabula County, Ohio, but a native of Ontario County, N. Y. Two children have been born of this union, Lenora B. and Fred A. The Doctor has always been a Republican in politics, has been councilman of the borough, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity. He belongs to the Lake Erie Dental Society, the Odontological Dental Society of Western Pennsylvania and the State Dental Society.

GEORGE W. HEWITT, jeweler, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, August 29, 1850, and is a son of George and Sarah Hewitt, the former a native of Connecticut, and the latter of Trumbull County, Ohio. His father died in Trumbull County in 1851, and in the spring of 1865 our subject removed with his mother to Greenville, where he learned the jeweler's trade. His mother resided in that borough until her death July 22, 1888. In the spring of 1869 Mr. Hewitt bought out the jewelry store of David Hum, and has since conducted that business. He was married in 1868 to Miss Amanda, daughter of Simon Donner, one of the old retired business men of Greenville. Two children have been born of this marriage: Cora and Clem. Politically he is a Republican, and belongs to the I. O. O. F., K. of P., K. of H. and A. O. U. W.

ELIJAH W. HODGE, of the Hodge Manufacturing Company, was born in Gloucestershire, England, June 9, 1843. His parents, William and Amelia Hodge, are both residents of that shire. He learned the fuller's trade in a woolen factory in England, and worked at it there till coming to Greenville, Penn. In April, 1868, he and family immigrated to this borough, and for a short time he worked at his trade. The Greenville Woolen Mills closed the following autumn, and he was compelled to go at coal mining. In October, 1869, he entered Hamblin's Foundry, where he spent nearly eight years working at molding. In 1876-77 he began operating during the evenings, and when short of work, a small brass foundry, a portion of his present plant. This gradually developed into the Hodge Brass and Iron Foundry and Machine Shops, since April, 1883, the Hodge Manufacturing Company. On the 2d of April, 1863, Mr. Hodge was married in England to Ann E. Howell, who bore him six children, four of whom are living: John H., Elizabeth A., Rose R. and Emma H. His wife died in Greenville, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, March 21, 1874, and on the 26th of the following November he was again married, to Angeline L. Scott, of which union five children have been born, four of whom survive: Thomas S., Garfield, Mary and Florence L. Mr. Hodge has always been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his wife a Presbyterian. Politically he is a Republican of strong prohibition proclivities. John H. Hodge, machinist, and eldest son of Elijah W. Hodge, was born in England May 23, 1864, and came to Greenville with his parents. He learned the trade of a machinist in his father's shops, and has since worked in the same establishment. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a Republican of strong temperance views.

URIAH HOMER (originally spelled Hommer) was born in that borough August 20, 1823, and was a son of Joseph Hommer, a pioneer of West Salem Township. Our subject followed stock dealing all his life, excepting three years spent at merchandising at West Middlesex. He was married in April, 1852, to Miss Mary J., daughter of Adam Wier, of Mercer County. She bore him four children, three of whom are living: Harry M., Drayton E. and Warren E., the two eldest being now the firm of Homer Bros., proprietors of meat market in Greenville. Mrs. Homer died August 7, 1874, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically he is a Republican, and a member of one of the oldest families of the valley.

FRANK C. HULING, one of the editors and proprietors of the Greenville Progress, was born in Greenville, Penn., February 27, 1859, and is a son of Robert and Mary (Kidd) Huling. The former was born in Williamsport, Penn., and the latter in Mahoning County, Ohio. Robert Huling came to Greenville in 1839, where he afterward married Miss Mary Kidd, whose parents located near that borough when she was about eight years old. He was a tanner by trade, and ran a tan-yard on the west side from a short time after his arrival up to his death March 8, 1877. His widow now resides in Greenville, and is the mother of six children, five of whom are living. She is a member of the United Presbyterian Church. In early childhood our subject was adopted by his uncle, John Crowder, and lived with him till a short time prior to his death, in 1873. His early boyhood days were spent in Canada, New York City and Cleveland, Ohio, at which points his uncle was engaged in the lumber business. About 1871 Frank C. returned to Greenville, and received his education at the public schools and Thiel College. He learned the printer's trade in the Progress office, beginning in 1878. In May, 1881, he formed a partnership with W. F. Harpst, and purchased the Greenville Progress, and the firm of Harpst & Huling has since conducted that paper successfully. Politically Mr. Huling is a Democrat, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

JOHN J. HUTCHESON, boot and shoe merchant, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, January 3, 1833, and is a son of William and Anna (Battles) Hutcheson. The former was a native of Connecticut, of English descent, and his wife of Niles, Ohio, of French ancestry. William's parents removed from Connecticut to Bucks County, Penn., when he was a youth, and there died. In 1812 he came to Pittsburgh, where he joined the army that went to the defense of Erie in the war with England. After the War of 1812 he settled in Trumbull County, Ohio, where he was married to Miss Anna Battles, of that county. They reared a family of five sons and four daughters: Mary (deceased wife of James Wilson), Elizabeth (wife of William Struble), Allen, Rebecca (wife of George Beggs), Warren (deceased), Lucinda (deceased wife of Perry English), John J., Asa and Clinton. In 1840 the family removed from Ohio to Perry Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where the parents resided until death. They were members of the Baptist Church, and patriotic supporters of the government throughout the period of civil strife. John J. was seven years old when his parents came to Mercer County, where he grew to manhood. In the spring of 1856 he went to California, and remained on the Pacific coast until the summer of 1861, when he returned to his home. He then went into the dry goods business in Cochran, Crawford County, and continued merchandising at that point two years. The next two years he spent in the oil country, and in 1866 opened a shoe store in Greenville, which he conducted five years. In 1873 he formed a partnership with William Paden, in the dry goods business, in which he remained three years, when he sold out to his partner and purchased the boot and shoe stock of John Ramsey, and has since been engaged in that business. In 1878 Mr. Hutcheson erected his present store-room, which he has since occupied. He has been thrice married, his two deceased wives having been daughters of Peter Fritz, Esq., of Greenville. Four children were born of both marriages, all of whom are dead. His present wife was Miss Theresa Boies, and is the mother of one son, John. Politically Mr. Hutcheson is a Republican, and a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. societies of Greenville.

SIMON KAMERER, dry goods merchant, was born three miles south of that borough, March 11, 1822. His father, Jacob Kamerer, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., September 26, 1788, and was married to Miss Margaret Highberger, a native of the same county. In 1812 they removed to Mercer County, and settled on the farm where Simon was born. It had a clearing and a small log cabin, the latter being utilized as a sheep pen. When he reached his purchase he drove out the occupants of the cabin, fixed it up and lived in it until such time as he could build a better one. The whole surrounding country was then a comparative wilderness, with a few settlers scattered through the forest at long intervals. Wild game was so abundant that Mr. Kamerer could at pleasure raise a window and, with his trusty rifle, kill a wild turkey for dinner as the flock strutted through his garden patch. Jacob and Margaret Kamerer reared a family of five sons and six daughters, viz.: Joseph and Daniel, both of whom died in this county; Hannah, wife of Gideon Falk, of Hancock County, Ohio; Samuel, a resident of Hancock County, Ohio; Mary, widow of David Beil, of Greenville; Simon, of Greenville; Rebecca, deceased wife of Reuben Diefenderfer (deceased); Catherine, wife of Charles Diefenderfer, of this county; Lydia, wife of Daniel R. Saul, of Greenville; Sarah, wife of George Fye, of Hempfield Township, and Levi, of Greenville. The whole family were brought up in the faith of the Reformed Church, in which belief the parents lived and died, the mother dying June 12, 1855, and the father August 6, 1869. Jacob Kamerer was an ardent Democrat, and served under Col. Andrew Christy in the War of 1812. He accumulated considerable landed property, which, through the passing years, he divided among his children, but resided on the old homestead, which adjoined his first settlement, until his death, at the ripe old age of nearly eighty-two years. During his boyhood days Simon attended the primitive log school-house then standing on his father's farm, and remained with his parents till attaining his majority. He then began learning the tanner's trade in Isaac Greenewalt's tannery, near Greenville, and completed it in a yard opened by his father on the home farm. He operated this yard successfully for twenty-five years, when failing health compelled him to give up the business, and in 1868 he sold out and removed to Greenville. In 1870 he formed a partnership with his son-in-law, Aaron Wagner, under the firm name of Wagner & Kamerer, and began merchandising. This firm has since carried on that business. Mr. Kamerer was married May 11, 1845, to Miss Henrietta Saul, a native of Lehigh County, Penn., whose parents settled about one mile south of Greenville in 1833. Of this union four children have been born: Margaret E., wife of Linus Dorwart, of Mercer County; Anna M., wife of Aaron Wagner, of Greenville; Oliver D., grocer, and George F., druggist, both of the same borough. The whole family are Democrats in politics and adherents of the Reformed Church. Mr. Kamerer was one of the leading spirits in the erection of the Reformed Church of Greenville, and has always taken a deep interest in the growth of that society.

DAVID L. KAMERER, secretary of the Pymatuning Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and secretary and director of the Keystone Mutual Storm Insurance Company, was born in Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., November 24, 1858. His grandfather, Samuel Kamerer, was a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and settled in what is now Hempfield Township in 1812. He married Elizabeth Lininger, who was born in Maryland in 1790, thence removed to Westmoreland County, and to Mercer County in 1802. They reared eight children: David (deceased), Joseph, Benjamin (deceased), John, Esther (wife of Frank Cooper), Elizabeth, Leah and Mary (deceased). David, the father of our subject, was born in what is now Hempfield Township, January 7, 1819. He there grew up, and on the 6th of January, 1848, was married to Lea Bortz, a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., born February 16, 1821, and who came to Lackawannock Township with her parents, Jacob and Anna M. Bortz, in May, 1822. Mr. Kamerer lived on a part of the old homestead until 1852, when he purchased and settled on the farm in Delaware Township where he resided up to his death, October 9, 1888. They reared seven children: Levi T., Edward O., Mary Adaline, Samuel S., David L., Franklin W. and Tillman E. Politically the whole family are Republicans, and adherents of the Lutheran Church. David was secretary of the Pymatuning Mutual Fire Insurance Company twenty-seven years, and was one of the prosperous farmers of Delaware Township. He was captain of the Greenville company of militia for six years. Our subject here grew to maturity, and was educated in the public schools of Delaware Township, and from early boyhood was more or less connected with the Pymatuning Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of which his father was secretary. In February, 1885, he came to Greenville and began clerking, while at the same time conducting an agency for the Pymatuning Mutual Fire Insurance Company. In January, 1887, he succeeded his father as secretary of this company, and has since filled that position. In 1888 he was the leading spirit in the organization of the Keystone Mutual Storm Insurance Company. Mr. Kamerer was married April 8, 1886, to Miss Sadie E. Adams, a native of Delaware Township. They are members of the Lutheran Church. He belongs to the Republican party, and is a member of the P. H. C.

FRANKLIN W. KAMERER, furniture dealer, was born in Delaware Township August 27, 1861, and is a son of the late David Kamerer, of Delaware Township. Our subject grew up and received his education in his native Township, and in the spring of 1879 began clerking in Greenville, which he continued eight years. In June, 1887, he formed a partnership with L. F. Black, purchased the furniture stock of Woodward Bros., and removed to the Johnston Block, where they continued to do a large and increasing business till November, 1888, when the present firm of Kamerer & Newell was organized. Mr. Kamerer was married March 11, 1886, to Miss Fannie Brown, of Greenville.

He is a Republican in politics, and one of the enterprising young business men of the town.

MARTIN KANE, dry goods and grocery dealer, of the firm of Gaiser & Kane, was born in Kilrush, County Clare, Ireland, June 24, 1847, and is a son of Patrick and Bridget Kane, natives of the same county. The family removed to England when Martin was three years old, and both died in Halifax, England. Our subject grew to manhood in that country, and in the fall of 1864 immigrated to Scranton, Penn., where he learned the boiler-maker's trade, at which he worked several years, subsequently traveling on the road selling goods. In 1873 he came to Greenville, and July 2, of that year, was married, by Rev. Thomas Tracy, to Miss Mary McEleavy, a native of the County Armagh, Ireland. Of this union eight sons have been born unto them: Patrick, John, Francis, James, Edward, Martin J. (deceased), Leo and Robert. Mr. Kane followed merchandising in Greenville, and in September, 1887, he purchased one-half interest in the general mercantile house of Gaiser, McClure & Co., the firm becoming Gaiser & Kane. Mr. Kane and family belong to St. Michael's Catholic Church, and he is a member of the C. M. B. A., and a staunch adherent of the Democratic party.

WILLIAM KECK, deceased, was born near Greenville, Penn., February, 29, 1808, and is a son of Joseph and Catharine Keck, pioneers of the Shenango Valley. Our subject obtained the usual advantages of a common-school education, and grew to manhood upon the old homestead. On the 3d of April, 1839, he married Miss Harriett Asberry Sheriff, a native of Zanesville, Ohio. Three children were born of this union: Lewis L., William A. and Ella S., wife of James Morgan, and all residents of Greenville. In early days William learned the fuller's and carder's trade, but did not follow that business very long. He then entered the dry goods store of the late Robert Cochran, a pioneer merchant of New Castle, Penn. He was there married, and soon afterward opened a dry goods store at Old Harmony, Butler Co., Penn., in partnership with a Mr. Ziegler. He afterward returned to New Castle, thence removed to Sheakleyville, where he established and carried on a mercantile business about four years, when he located in Greenville and followed clerking. In 1861 he was appointed by President Lincoln postmaster of the borough, and after serving his full term of four years was reappointed by Lincoln, and again by Grant, and continued in office until his sudden death, April 27, 1871. He was succeeded by his daughter, Ella S., who was appointed and served four years. He was first a Whig and afterward a Republican.

JOHN KECK, deceased merchant, was born on the old homestead, south of Greenville, September 5, 1816, and removed into the village at the time his father, Joseph Keck, purchased the old log flouring mill from the executors of Jacob Loutzenhiser. Soon after attaining his majority our subject entered the employ of William B. Osmon, a merchant of New Castle, Penn. On the 24th of September, 1839, he married Terrissa Osmon, daughter of his employer, who was born in Philadelphia, Penn., February 10, 1819. Her parents, William B. and Terrissa Osmon, removed to Beaver County, Penn., when she was an infant. In 1839 Mr. Osmon died, and Mr. Keck became his successor in the business, which had previously been removed from New Castle to New Wilmington, and the following year he removed to Georgetown, Mercer County, where he carried on the mercantile trade about five years. In 1845 he came to Greenville to take charge of the business of Vincent, Himrod & Co. From that time forward he was engaged in merchandising for many years. In January, 1882, Mr. Keck was elected president of the Greenville

National Bank, which position he filled up to his death, September 7, 1885. He was the father of five children, three of whom grew to maturity, viz.: George Osmon (deceased) J. M. and William D., a leading merchant of Mercer. Politically Mr. Keck was a Republican, and filled the offices of justice of the peace and Burgess of Greenville, and was also prominently identified with the growth and progress of the public schools. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and one of the most respected and best known citizens of his native county.

LEWIS L. KECK, dry goods merchant, was born in Old Harmony, Butler Co., Penn., January 30, 1840, and is the eldest son of William Keck, deceased. He received a common-school education and began his mercantile career in boyhood days as a clerk in the store of Root & Hoge. He followed clerking up to 1864, when, in partnership with his Uncle Henry, he opened a dry goods store on the site of the First National Bank, Greenville, whence they removed to the room now occupied by him. The firm of H. & L. L. Keck continued for about six years, when his brother, William A., succeeded his uncle in the firm, which then became L. L. Keck & Bro. In 1877 our subject sold out to William W. Emery, and engaged in operating a coal bank west of town, which he followed five years. In the spring of 1882 he re-entered his former business in the old room, where he has since commanded a successful trade. Mr. Keck was married June 5, 1866, to Miss Felicia, daughter of David and Euty (Brown) Loutzenhisser, of Greenville. Three children have been born of this union: Harry L., Florence E. and Frederick L. Politically Mr. Keck is a Republican, belongs to the R. T. of T., and the family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

GEORGE OSMON KECK, who died in Greenville August 12, 1887, was born in Sheakleyville, Mercer Co., Penn., February 13, 1842. and was the eldest son of John Keck, deceased. He received a common-school education, and afterward attended Girard Academy and Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., and for a brief period taught school in West Salem Township. In September, 1862, he enlisted in Capt. Wood's company, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and after serving five months was discharged on account of sickness and inability to continue in the service. In 1864 he purchased the interest of his uncle, Henry Keck, in the firm of J. and H. Keck, and the firm became John Keck & Son. He continued business in Greenville, Penn., and afterward East Palestine, Ohio, up to within a short time of entering the private banking firm of Achre, Wick & Co., in 1872, which was afterward merged into the Greenville National Bank, of which he was assistant cashier and book-keeper, and also one of the directors up to his death. Mr. Keck was married, August 17, 1869, to Miss Louisa, daughter of the late Hon. John Allison, who bore him three sons, J. Allison, C. Clifford and George Osmon, who reside with their mother in Greenville. Mr. Keck was a Republican in politics and a member of the G. A. R. He served on the school board from June, 1885, up to July, 1887, when failing health compelled him to give up the duties thereof. He always took a deep interest in the growth and progress of the public schools, as well as in the social and material development of the town. He died in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with which society he united in 1870. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was buried with Masonic honors. Mr. Keck was a man of high standing in this community, and left to his children the rich legacy of an unblemished character.

STEPHEN R. KEELLEN, contractor and builder, was born three miles east of Sheakleyville, Penn., September 20, 1837, and is a son of James and Elizabeth (Rowland) Keelen, natives of Bucks County, Penn. They came into Mercer County early in the twenties, where they were married. James Keelen was a stone mason, and did considerable contracting in building the locks on the canal. He died when our subject was about four years old, leaving four children, only two of whom survive: Stephen R. and Mary E. (wife of Samuel Gibson, of New Castle, Penn.). His widow subsequently married Nathan Hazen, since whose death she spends her time with her children. After her second marriage she removed to the vicinity of New Castle, Penn., where our subject grew up and learned the trade of a bricklayer. He has since followed that business in different parts of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky, and located in Greenville in the spring of 1874, where he has been successfully engaged in contracting and building for the past fourteen years. Mr. Keelen was married, July 4, 1863, to Elizabeth J. Henderson, of Lawrence County, Penn., who is the mother of six children: Alonzo O., Robert B., Archy K., Olivia, Edwin E. and Elva. Politically Mr. Keelen is a Republican, and now a member of the borough council.

F. H. KELLER, deceased attorney at law, was born in West Salem Township, Penn., March 16, 1859, and was a son of Christian and Caroline (Beckstein) Keller, natives of Germany, born September 6, 1830, and November 26, 1838, respectively. The former immigrated to Mercer County when a young man of twenty-three years of age, and the latter to the vicinity of Greenville when a girl of eight years old. They were married in West Salem Township August 19, 1858, and F. H. was the only fruit of this union. On the breaking out of the war Christian Keller was in New York State, and immediately enlisted in the three months' service. On the expiration of his term he returned to Mercer County, and enlisted in Company K, Sixty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers, in which regiment he served three years. He died July 19, 1880, from disease contracted in the service, which incapacitated him from manual labor. His widow afterward applied for a pension, which was granted her in 1886. Our subject grew up in this county, and in September, 1876, began working in a coal mine, where he remained three years, earning sufficient means to defray his expenses in Thiel College five years. He entered that institution in September, 1879, and graduated June 19, 1884. The following autumn he went to Washington, D. C., and entered the law department of Columbian University, where he graduated with the degrees of B. L. and M. L. in June, 1886. He was admitted to practice June 8, of that year, in the supreme court of the district, and shortly afterward returned to Greenville, was admitted to the Mercer bar at the September term, 1887, and began practice in Greenville. Politically he was a Republican, and captain of General Vincent Camp No. 179, Sons of Veterans. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, and died in that faith April 5, 1888. Mr. Keller was a young man of bright promise, and during his residence in Greenville had won the respect and confidence of its best citizens. Straightforward and honest in all his actions, he was likewise kind and courteous to friend and stranger alike, and few young men of his native county possessed so many warm friends.

REV. MICHAEL KUCHLER, deceased, was born near Hanover, York Co., Penn., November 10, 1800, and was a son of John Michael and Elizabeth (Beringer) Kuchler. In 1806 the family removed to Frederick County, Md., and in 1811 to Columbiana County, Ohio, where Michael attended the pioneer schools of his neighborhood. In the spring of 1818 Rev. Henry Heut, pastor of the Lutheran Church of his settlement, sent young Kuchler to Wolf Creek, Mercer Co., Penn., for the purpose of giving religious instruction to the children of that community. In 1818-19 he taught school near Zion Church, meanwhile studying with a view of entering the ministry of the Lutheran Church. On October 2, 1821, he was married to Miss Catharine, daughter of Jacob and Mary E. (George) Snyder, pioneers of the southern part of Mercer County. She was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., April 1, 1802, and was also an adherent of the Lutheran faith. Soon after his marriage Mr. Kuchler moved to Ohio, and taught a German school one term. He returned to Mercer County in the spring of 1822, where he continued to teach and give religious instruction. Rev. Kuchler conducted his first regular religious service November 26, 1826, at Herbst's, in Mercer (now Lawrence) County, and for nearly two years continued to serve several charges in that capacity. On June 4, 1828, Rev. Kuchler was received into the German Evangelical Lutheran Ministerium of Ohio, at Canfield, as a catechist. In 1829 he was licensed by the Lutheran synod in session, at Lancaster, Ohio, and was finally ordained at Zelienople, Penn., June 16, 1833. To Michael and Catharine Kuchler were born eight children, six of whom grew to maturity, and are still living: John, of Rolla, Mo.; George D., a physician of Greenville; James S., a physician of Sharon; Louisa M., widow of George L. Baker, and a resident of Buffalo, N. Y.; Lucinda H., of Greenville, and J. C., agent of the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, Greenville. In 1839 Rev. Kuchler and family removed to Erie, Penn., and he labored in that section of the State for many years. In 1860 he located in Greenville, where he resided until his death, April 4, 1887, in his eighty-seventh year. His wife died in Erie ten years prior to her husband's death. From early manhood up to within a few years of his death Rev. Kuchler's life was devoted to the interests of his church in Northwestern Pennsylvania and Northeastern Ohio, his active service extending through a period of nearly fifty-four years, when failing health demanded a rest from labor. But his deep interest in church work, to which his whole life had been devoted, never ceased till his eyes closed in death. His last years were spent in Greenville, where he enjoyed the unceasing devotion of his children.

DR. GEORGE D. KUGHLER (originally Kuchler), physician and surgeon, was born in Mercer County, Penn., April 6, 1827, and is a son of Rev. Michael Kuchler, deceased. His early boyhood was spent in his native county, but in 1839 his parents removed to Erie, Penn., where George D. grew to manhood and was educated. He read medicine in that city, and in 1848 commenced practice in Clarence, N. Y. In the meantime he attended lectures at the New York Central Medical College, of Rochester and Syracuse. This institution was afterward removed to New York City as the Metropolitan Medical College, now the Eclectic Medical College of New York, where he graduated in the spring of 1858. He practiced in Buffalo, N. Y., from 1855 to the fall of 1861, when he opened an office in the same room he has ever since occupied, over the Greenville National Bank. Dr. Kughler was married in Erie, Penn., to Miss Elizabeth F. Foust, of Norristown, Montgomery Co., Penn., who has borne him four children, two of whom survive: James W., of Beaver Falls, Penn., and W. Wallace, general manager of the W. W. Kughler Company, collectors and financial adjusters, New York City. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and the Doctor is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity. Before the breaking out of the Rebellion Dr. Kughler was a Democrat, but at that time he joined the Republican party, and still adheres to that political faith. In 1877 the Georgia Eclectic Medical College conferred upon Dr. Kughler the degree of M. D. He is a member of the National Eclectic Medical Society, president of the Eclectic Medical Society of Pennsylvania, and president of the Eclectic Medical Society of Northwestern Pennsylvania. The Doctor enjoys a lucrative practice, which he has gradually built up since locating in Greenville twenty-seven years ago.

J. C. KUCHLER, general agent of the Erie & Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in Erie, Penn., September 1, 1840, and is a son of Rev. Michael Kuchler (deceased). Our subject learned telegraphy, and after acquiring a knowledge of that profession was, in 1858, appointed operator at Girard, Penn., in the Lake Shore Railroad office. He afterward served in the same capacity at Conneaut, Geneva and White Sulphur Springs, Ohio, and then at Franklin, Union City, and Meadville, Penn. In 1863 he was appointed ticket agent and operator of the A. & G. W. R. R., at Greenville, and in 1866 received the appointment as general agent of the E. & P. R. R. in the same borough, which position he has filled for the past twenty-two years. Mr. Kuchler was married July 3, 1862, to Miss Helen J., daughter of Capt. Thomas J. Carlin, of Conneaut, Ohio. Three children have been born of this union: Artie (deceased), Eva Carlin, and one who died in infancy. Mr. Kuchler is a member of the Lutheran Church, and his wife of the Presbyterian denomination. Politically he has been a life-long Democrat, and stanch in his allegiance to the principles of that party. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and one of the well-known citizens of Greenville.

LESTER KUDER, attorney at law, was born in Allegheny County, N. Y., July 1, 1835. His father, Israel Kuder, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., January 14, 1806, and June 17, 1834, was married in Allegheny County, N. Y., to Miss Elizabeth Hollister, a native of that county, born August 9, 1818. In 1836 they removed to Turnersville, Crawford Co., Penn., where they have ever since resided upon a farm which adjoins the Mercer County line. They reared a family of six children: Lester, of Greenville; Mary Ann, wife of William Durham, of Turnersville; Charles, who lives near the parents; Juliett, wife of Reuben Camp, residing on the old homestead; John, a merchant of Turnersville, and Osee, wife of J. W. Snodgrass, a contractor and builder of Turnersville. Our subject grew to maturity under the parental roof, and received his early education in the public schools of that vicinity. He commenced teaching at the age of seventeen, and followed that profession twelve years, four years in the district schools, one year in Harmonsburgh Academy, two years in Chatham, Ontario, Canada, and five years as principal of New Lebanon Academy, Mercer County. Upon the expiration of his fourth year as teacher in the district schools Mr. Kuder attended Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., where he took the degree of A. B. in 1862, and that of A. M. in 1865. In 1864 he began his legal studies in the office of H. L. Richmond & Son, Meadville, and was there admitted to the bar in 1866. In the fall of the latter year Mr. Kuder took charge of New Lebanon Academy, which position he filled until the spring of 1871. He then opened a law office in Packard's Commercial Block, Greenville, where he has since been engaged in the active duties of his profession. Mr. Kuder was married November, 19, 1868, to Miss Cordelia, adopted daughter of Dr. D. B. Packard, of Greenville, who died March 31, 1873. He was again married November 19, 1874, to Miss Louisa, daughter of John and Catharine (Snyder) Rutter, natives of Dauphin County, Penn., who came to Mercer County in 1847. Mr. Rutter died April 27, 1879, and his widow still resides on the old homestead in Delaware Township. Mrs. Kuder is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while our subject adheres to the Presbyterian faith. Mr. Kuder has always been a Democrat, and was once the candidate of his party for district attorney, and though defeated he ran considerably ahead of the balance of the ticket.

WILLIAM LAIRD, deceased, was born in the County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1806, and was a son of James and Ellen (Blakely) Laird, natives of the same place. His mother died when William was only two weeks old, and when a year old his aunt, Mrs. James Donnel, took him to her home and cared for him till he was old enough to make his own living. In return for this loving care Mr. Laird provided for his aunt for many years preceding her death. When William was about three years old, James Donnel and wife immigrated from Ireland to Chester County, Penn., locating in that county in 1809, where they remained till 1820, when they came to Greenville, William being then fourteen years of age. Four years after coming to Mercer County he became an apprentice in the cabinet-shop of Robert G. Mossman, one of the pioneer business men of Greenville and subsequently sheriff of the county. He spent three years with Mr. Mossman, and after completing his trade he worked in Meadville, Penn., and Vienna and Warren, Ohio, during which period he purchased and paid for twenty-five acres of land, on which was a log cabin, as a permanent home for his aunt. He also saved some money, and returning to Greenville, in 1835, purchased an interest in the business of his old employer, which then consisted of a furniture establishment and grist-mill, located on the north side of Main Street, immediately east of the bridge. Messrs. Mossman & Laird soon afterward established a woolen mill across the street, and took John M. Graham into partnership to operate that factory. Mr. Mossman was elected sheriff of the county in 1836, and sold his interest to Mr. Laird, who soon afterward added a saw-mill to the business. In 1838 he sold out and removed to a farm a short distance south of Greenville, where he resided five years. In 1843 he returned to the borough, purchased considerable real estate, and began improving the same. Among these improvements was a large frame building, which stood on the site of Laird's Opera House Block till burned down. In 1877 he began the erection of the latter substantial structure, but ere its completion Mr. Laird was laid at rest in the beautiful cemetery near Thiel College, his death occurring December 14, 1877. Mr. Laird was twice married, his first marriage taking place in 1838, in Vienna, Ohio, to Miss Lois Woodford, a native of Connecticut, whose parents died when she was quite young. Five children were born of this union, viz.: Mrs. Lovisa Miller and James S., of Greenville; Mary E., deceased; Mrs. Celestia Camp, of Union City, Penn., and Susan J., deceased. Mrs. Laird died August 3, 1850, in her thirty-third year, and her husband was again married, February 19, 1852, to Mrs. Rebecca Burton, of Brookfield, Ohio, who bore him two children: Blakely, deceased, and William F., of Brookfield. A few years after his second marriage Mr. Laird removed to Brookfield, but upon his wife's death, September 20, 1875, returned to Greenville, where he spent the few remaining years of his life. Mr. Laird was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was known and recognized as a plain, sober, industrious citizen, and an upright, honest, Christian man. Beginning life a poor orphan boy, he soon developed those industrious and saving habits which, ere his death, made him the possessor of an estate valued at about $40,000.

WILLIAM P. LEECH, produce dealer, is a descendant of one of the pioneer families of Sugar Grove Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where he was born May 21, 1824. His grandfather, John Leech, settled in that township in the spring of 1802, and his father, Joseph Leech, grew to manhood, married and spent his whole life in that part of the county. [See sketch in Sugar Grove Township of father and grandfather.] William P. received a good English education, and taught school a couple of terms. He was married April 12, 1849, to Miss Minerva Martin, a native of Greenville, and daughter of John and Mary Martin, early settlers of Mercer County. Mr. Leech settled on a farm close to the old homestead, where he resided until his removal to Greenville. Four children were born to William P. and Minerva Leech, viz.: Lester D., Augusta, Elizabeth H. and Sarah E., all residents of Greenville, where the mother died August 10, 1887, a zealous disciple of the United Presbyterian Church. In early life Mr. Leech was a Whig, but was in at the birth of the Republican party. In the fall of 1860 he was elected, on that ticket, sheriff of Mercer County, and served one term, and was afterward elected jury commissioner. In 1857 he took up his residence in Greenville, and, excepting his term in the sheriff's office, when he lived at Mercer, has ever since been one of the active business men of the borough.

LESTER D. LEECH, general grocer, was born in Sugar Grove Township, Mercer Co., Penn., March 20, 1850, and is the only son of W. P. Leech, of Greenville. He resided with his parents until reaching manhood, and obtained a good English education. In the spring of 1877 he and James Loutzenhiser each purchased an interest in the queensware store of D. D. Lynn & Co., of Greenville, and the firm name was changed to Artherholt & Co. In December, 1881, Mr. Leech sold out to his partners, and in March, 1882, purchased a half interest in the grocery house of L. L. Kamerer, and the firm of Kamerer & Leech was established. This lasted till February, 1884, when the partnership was dissolved. The following October Mr. Leech bought out the grocery store of R. C. McClure & Son, and has since conducted one of the leading houses of Mercer County. Mr. Leech was married March 3, 1880, to Miss Clara, daughter of John R. Packard, Esq., of Greenville. Two children are the fruits of this union: Josephine and John P. (deceased). Politically Mr. Leech is an unswerving Republican, a prominent member of the I. O. O. F., and is one of the enterprising young business men of the borough.

FREDERICK H. LEET, physician and surgeon, was born on the site of Rochester, Beaver Co., Penn., October 17, 1821, and is a son of Jonathan and Mary (Haymaker) Leet. The former was a native of Washington County, Penn., but removed to Beaver County with his parents, who were among the first settlers. He kept a trading post at Beaver Point, and subsequently a hotel on the site of Rochester. In 1819 he was married to Miss Mary Haymaker, one of the very first settlers of Crawford County, Penn., and a subsequent pioneer of Beaver County. The Haymaker family removed to the site of Kent, Ohio, at an early day, where some of the descendants now reside. In 1851 Jonathan Leet and family removed from Beaver to Mercer County and located on a farm close to Greenville, where the parents passed the remaining years of their lives. The mother died in 1862, leaving a family of eight children to mourn her loss. Her husband survived her ten years, and both lived and died in the Baptist faith. Dr. Leet was educated in Beaver County, at the school which subsequently became the Sewickly Seminary, and afterward attended Beaver Academy. He taught school in Beaver County five years. In 1854 he began the study of medicine under Dr. H. D. La. Cossitt, of Greenville, and in March, 1858, graduated at the Western Reserve Medical College, Cleveland, Ohio. He immediately opened an office in Greenville, where for the past thirty years he has prosecuted the duties of his profession. In January, 1863, Dr. Leet was appointed assistant surgeon of the Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in that capacity about nine months, when failing health compelled him to resign and return to his home. He was married March 8, 1864, to Miss Sarah F. Waldron, of Portsmouth, N. H., who has borne him the following children: Frederick (deceased), Irene, William H.,

Susan, Blanche (deceased) and Clara. Dr. Leet was first a Whig and then a Republican, and still affiliates with the latter organization. He is to-day one of the oldest medical practitioners in Mercer County.

DAVID LINN, retired farmer, was born in Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., October 19, 1812. About the year 1802 his grandparents, David and Susan (Coyle) Linn, came from Westmoreland County, Penn., to what is now Sugar Grove Township, Mercer County, with a family of nine children: James, David, John, William, Anna, Betsey, Margaret, Polly and Jane, all of whom, except Polly, became heads of families ere their decease. After a few years' residence in the north part of the county, the family removed to Delaware Township, where the grandparents died. James, the father of our subject, married Anna Williamson, of Centre County, Penn., in 1811, and located in Delaware Township, where both passed the remainder of their lives. James was a soldier at Erie in the War of 1812. He and wife were members of the Presbyterian Church, and reared a family of seven children: David, James W., Jane, Susan, William P., Eliza A. and Oliver H. P., all of whom are dead except the eldest and the youngest. David grew to manhood in his native township, and in 1839 settled in what is now Otter Creek Township. He was married October 18, 1840, to Mary M., daughter of Joseph Leech, who has reared a family of seven children: Joseph, who died from the effects of imprisonment at Columbia, S. C., during the war; Sylvester J., of Salt Lake City; Anna B., wife of W. A. McLean; Rhoda B., wife of W. E. Davidson; D. D., of Sugar Creek Township; Jennie, wife of John Wiley, and William P., of Salt Lake City. In the spring of 1873 Mr. Linn located in Greenville. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Mr. Linn has been a life-long Whig and Republican. He is to-day one of the oldest representative pioneers of Mercer County, where he has lived over three-quarters of a century.

SAMUEL C. LIVINGSTON, of Livingston & Moyer, general hardware merchants, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., January 10, 1848, and is a son of Andrew T. and Elizabeth (Caldwell) Livingston. The former was born in Washington County, Penn., in 1817, and was a son of Samuel Livingston, born in 1776, and grandson of Joseph Livingston, of County Antrim, Ireland, who immigrated to America about 1788, and settled in Allegheny County, Penn. In 1836 Samuel, Sr., located in Pymatuning Township, Mercer County, where his son, Daniel L., now lives. His wife, Sarah, was a daughter of Andrew Thompson, a native of Ireland, and a resident of Allegheny County, Penn. They reared seven children: Joseph, deceased; Eliza J., who married Samuel Caldwell, of Delaware Township; Margaret L., who married William Walker; Andrew T., deceased; Daniel L., Sarah L., and Catherine P., who married Samuel Kennedy, of New Brighton, Penn. The parents both died on the old homestead near Transfer. Andrew T. Livingston was nineteen years old when his parents settled in this county, and he here married Elizabeth Caldwell, who was born in Delaware Township in 1819, and was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Caldwell, pioneers of that township. She bore him seven children: Samuel, Mary E. (deceased), William, Ada, Eliza, and two died in early youth. Mr. Livingston died in the United Presbyterian faith in November, 1884, and his widow resides upon the old homestead. Our subject grew up in his native township, and after obtaining a district school education, spent two years at the Edinboro Normal School. In 1869 he and his Uncle Daniel engaged in milling at Hadley Station, in which he remained four years, then came to Greenville and clerked for Packard & Co. nine years. In 1882 he and William Lohr established a general hardware store in Greenville, in which he has since been engaged. His partner died in 1886, and in January, 1887, H. F. Moyer obtained the interest of Mr. Lohr, and the present firm was organized. Mr. Livingston was married October 19, 1887, to Miss Mary Ohl, of Greenville. Politically he is a Republican.

MARVIN LOOMIS, president of the First National Bank, was born in Tyringham, Berkshire Co., Mass., December 19, 1807. His father, Josiah Loomis, was a native of Massachusetts, of English and German extraction, and was reared in Windsor, Vt. His mother, Rebecca Loomis, nee Ray, was born in Great Barrington, Berkshire Co., Mass., and was of Irish and French ancestry. Josiah and Rebecca Loomis reared a family of six sons and five daughters, some of whom were born after their removal to Williamsfield, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, in 1816, where the parents spent the balance of their lives. Marvin was the third eldest, and remained under the parental roof till attaining his majority. He received a good English education, and taught school six winter terms. In 1828 he visited Mercer County, and the next year took up his residence in Salem (now Sugar Grove) Township, where he was married, October 29, 1829, to Miss Mary Ann Walker. She was a daughter of James and Catherine (McFetridge) Walker, and was born upon the old Walker homestead, half a mile west of Leech's Corners, March 13, 1812. Her parents were natives of Ireland, and her father settled in Mercer County in the fall of 1797. [See Walker sketch in Sugar Grove Township.] Mr. Loomis resided with his wife's parents and took charge of the farm until both had passed away. In 1865 he removed to Greenville, where he has since continued to reside. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank, and also of the Greenville National Bank; is a director of each and president of the former, but has not been otherwise engaged in business since coming to Greenville. Mr. Loomis and wife reared two daughters: Electa C., wife of John H. Wilson, of Rock Island, Ill., and Dora F., wife of W. W. Emery, of Greenville. Mrs. Loomis died May 22, 1874, a fervent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which her surviving husband and daughters also belong. Politically Mr. Loomis has been a Whig and Republican all his life. During his residence in Sugar Grove Township he served as school director about twenty years, and since locating in Greenville he has filled the office of burgess one term. In 1863, though fifty-six years old, he exhibited his patriotism by going into the three-months service, and is now a member of John C. Dickey Post, G. A. R., of Greenville. Mr. Loomis has always taken an active interest in the social and material development of Mercer County. He was prominently connected with the first fairs held in Greenville, and president of its first agricultural society; and was also one of the organizers of the Shenango Valley Cemetery Association and its secretary and treasurer. For many years Mr. Loomis had the general management of the cemetery, and was largely instrumental in having it finely improved and beautified. For nearly sixty years he has watched the steady growth of his adopted county, and for a large part of that time has been one of its best known citizens. Beginning in early manhood without a dollar, he so improved his opportunities that he is to-day one of the wealthiest pioneers of the county.

FREDERICK W. LOOSER, coal dealer and operator, was born in Essen, Prussia, Germany, March 18, 1842, and is second in a family of fourteen children, and a son of F. W. and Katrina Looser, of Prussia. In May, 1867, he immigrated to Illinois, and engaged in coal mining, which business he had followed for nine years in his native land. He came to Greenville in 1870, and continued working in the coal mines till 1878, when he opened a bank two miles west of town. He ran this till 1882, and then opened another mine, which he operated till 1886, when he sold out and started his present coal yard in Greenville. Mr. Looser was married in August, 1868, to Miss Amelia Obst, a native of Germany. Six children are the fruits of this union: William, Ella, Matilda, Lawrence, John and Fred. Politically he is a Democrat, and adheres to the Catholic Church.

JACOB LOUTZENHISER was one of the hardy band of land prospectors who came from Westmoreland Co., Penn., in the fall of 1796, and selected their future homes in the Shenango Valley, where they settled permanently in the spring of 1797. Our subject first located on the site of Orangeville, in Pymatuning Township, where he erected a mill in 1798. In 1802 he sold his property and removed to a tract of land west of the Shenango, now partly included in Greenville. In 1809 he sold this to Jacob Hommer, Sr., having purchased in 1806 the Williamson Mill, near Greenville, afterward known as the Loutzenhiser Mill, which he ran up to his death in 1821. In 1815 he built the old log grist-mill, which stood on the site of Mathers Mill, and also operated it up to his death. Mr. Loutzenhiser was a native of Germany, and a son of Joseph Loutzenhiser, who settled in West Salem Township in the spring of 1800. He was reared in Westmoreland County, Penn., and married Mary, a daughter of Daniel Klingensmith, and with his father-in-law became the owner of a large tract of land in Mercer County, including the site of Greenville, which they purchased from Lodge, Probst & Walker, Mr Probst being the brother-in-law of our subject. These lands were sold or divided up among the family, Jacob retaining the old homestead in Greenville till his death. Jacob and Mary Loutzenhiser reared the following children: Betsey, who married Jacob Keck; Jacob, one of the pioneer sheriffs of the county, who died in February, 1864; John, who removed to the West; David, Daniel, who died in Ohio; Joseph, who died in Indiana; Henry, who died in Illinois; Polly, who married William Bean, and after his death became the wife of Adam Wier, and died in this county, and Catharine, who married James L. Wick, of Greenville, and died in 1887, being the last survivor of the family. The parents both died upon the old homestead in Greenville.

David Loutzenhiser is perhaps the best remembered of Jacob Loutzenhiser's children. He was born on the site of Greenville August 12, 1803, and resided on a portion of his father's original purchase all his life. The widow of his son Amos still occupies the old home on East Main Street. He was married March 25, 1823, to Euty Brown, a native of Crawford County, Penn., born in 1805. They reared the following children: Amos, deceased, who left two children; Jacob, deceased, who left a family of five children; Benjamin, deceased; Maria, deceased wife of James Nesbit; Frederick, deceased; Catharine, deceased; Henry, deceased; Emeline, deceased, and Felicia, wife of L. L. Keck, of Greenville, and the only survivor of the family. Mrs. Loutzenhiser died March 5, 1871, in her sixty-sixth year, and her husband survived her till June 21, 1882, in his seventy-ninth year. For many years preceding his death he was comparatively retired from the active duties of life. He was a generous-hearted neighbor, a kind father, and an honest, enterprising citizen.

AMOS LOUTZENHISER, the oldest child of David, was born on the old homestead May 20, 1824. He was married June 5, 1850, to Emily Ikler, a native of Columbia County, Penn., whose parents, Phillip and Elizabeth (Kitchen) Ikler, removed to Crawford County when she was nine years old. Her father died in Kentucky and her mother in Greenville, Penn. Two sons were born to Amos and Emily Loutzenhiser: James and Henry A., residents of Greenville. Mr. Loutzenhiser followed farming and stock dealing all his life, and died January 5, 1881. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics a Republican. His widow resides on the old homestead in Greenville.

BENJAMIN LOUTZENHISER, deceased, was born in Greenville, Penn., January 28, 1829, and was also a son of David Loutzenhiser. Benjamin grew up and was married in Greenville May 9, 1859, to Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob and Mary Hommer, one of the pioneer families of West Salem Township. One son was born of this union, but died in infancy. Mr. Loutzenhiser resided in Greenville and vicinity all his life. He was one of the most enterprising and successful citizens of his native county, and accumulated through the passing years quite a respectable estate. He died in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church November 11, 1887. He was a staunch Republican, and a man of unsullied reputation and honest character.

JAMES LOUTZENHISER, queensware dealer, was born in Greenville, August 15, 1853, and is a son of Amos and Emily Loutzenhiser, the former a native of Greenville and the latter of Crawford County, Penn. James was the eldest in a family of two sons, his brother, Henry A., being also a resident of Greenville. Our subject was educated in the public schools of his native town, and afterward attended Eastman's Business College, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for one year. In the spring of 1877 he and L. D. Leech purchased interests in the queensware store of D. D. Lynn & Co., and with John R. Artherholt established the firm of Artherholt & Co. In December, 1881, Mr. Leech sold out to his partners, and the two remaining members of the firm have since continued a successful and growing business. Mr. Loutzenhiser was married February 10, 1880, to Miss L. B., daughter of Dr. Isaac Mulholland, of Greenville, now of Toledo, Ohio. Two children are the fruits of this union: Clifford and Margery. Mr. Loutzenhiser is a member of the I. O. O. F., and in politics is a Republican. He is now filling the office of second burgess of Greenville, and is recognized as an energetic, enterprising business man.

DR. WILLIAM COWAN EDMISTON MARTIN, for thirty years one of the most prominent physicians of Mercer County, died at his home in Greenville, November 19, 1885. He was born in South Shenango Township, Crawford Co., Penn., October 28, 1829, and was a son of Robert and Jane (Stinson) Martin. His father was a native of Ireland, and his mother of Mercer County, the Stinsons being one of the pioneer families of this section of the State. Dr. Martin was the fourth in a family of seven children, only three of whom are now living: James, Samuel and Mrs. Susan McArthur. His early life was spent on his father's farm in Crawford County, where he received the usual advantages that country schools afforded. In his fifteenth year he became a student of Mosiertown Academy, where he spent one year, the two succeeding years being passed in Kirtland Institute, then located in West Chester, Ohio. Upon the close of his academic course, he taught school one term near Greenville, and in the spring of 1851 he entered the office of Dr. F. H. Judd, of that town, as a student of medicine. After a year's preparatory study he attended lectures in the Eclectic Medical College, Cincinnati, Ohio, and graduated in the spring of 1854. He soon afterward purchased the residence, office and drugs of his preceptor, Dr. Judd, and located in Greenville as a practicing physician. Dr. Martin was married July 12, 1854, to Miss Jennie E., daughter of Dr. John Hall, of Syracuse, N. Y., a refined and accomplished lady. Mrs. Martin died in 1859, leaving one son, John H., who is now one of the leading physicians of Greenville. On the 5th of November, 1867, Dr. Martin was again married, to Miss Jennie P. Ralston, of Cannonsburg, Penn., who, with their daughter, May, survives him. Dr. Martin was a Republican in politics, and in October, 1862, joined Company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Regiment, and served nine months. Soon after commencing practice Dr. Martin united with the Associate Presbyterian Church, and remained a faithful and practical member of the United Presbyterian denomination until he passed to his eternal reward. He was a true, unselfish friend, a kind, generous, father and husband, and a progressive, enterprising, Christian gentleman. As a physician he was skillful and conscientious, and no call of the sick or afflicted was unheeded by him, when in his power to answer it, whether there was a prospect of compensation or not.

DR. JOHN H. MARTIN, physician and surgeon, was born in Greenville April 13, 1855, and is the only son of Dr. W. C. E. Martin, deceased. He was educated at Thiel College, Greenville, and Westminster College, Wilmington, Lawrence Co., Penn., and read medicine in his father's office. Dr. Martin graduated at the Eclectic Medical Institute, Cincinnati, Ohio, June 3, 1879, and at once associated himself in practice with Dr. W. C. Brittain, of Cochran, Crawford County, a former student in his father's office. He practiced there and at Utica, Venango County, five years, and then spent about one year in the Homœopathic Medical College and Hospital, of Chicago, Ill., where he graduated February 25, 1885. The failing health of his father necessitated his return to Greenville, where to a large extent he took charge of his father's business, and has since continued in active practice. Dr. Martin was married February 2, 1887, to Mrs. Grace P. Hill, of Akron, Ohio, and resides in a handsome residence on East Main Street, Greenville. The Doctor is a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities, and a warm adherent of the Republican party. Since opening an office at Greenville he has built up a large practice, and is now surgeon-in-chief of the Pittsburgh, Shenango & Lake Erie Railroad.

JAMES MATHERS, who died in Greenville February 14, 1888, was born near Mount Jackson, Lawrence County, Penn., July 8, 1810. His parents, Margaret and Thomas (Baird) Mathers, were natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., and removed to Lawrence County, Penn., then a part of Mercer, early in the present century. His father died when James was only six years old, but his mother lived to the ripe old age of nearly ninety, and died in Hubbard, Ohio. They reared a family of eight children, none of whom are now living. James worked on the home farm till eighteen years of age, and then went out in the world to begin the battle of life. Soon after reaching manhood he engaged in contracting on the Sandy & Beaver Canal, which public work subsequently proved a failure. When the State began the construction of the Beaver & Erie Canal Mr. Mathers obtained a contract to build Lock No. 16, and afterward Dams Nos. 2 and 5. In 1842 the State refused to appropriate any more money toward completing the canal, and subsequently turned over the work to a private company. Mr. Mathers took a contract from that company to finish eighteen miles of the canal, which he carried to a successful completion. In partnership with James C. Brown, of Greenville, he afterward assisted in building two bridges over the Shenango, at Greenville and Sharpsville, respectively. Mr. Mathers was also a contractor in the construction of the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad; built two short coal lines, and was interested in the abandoned Air Line road. He was quite successful in these several enterprises, and made considerable money during their prosecution. Mr. Mathers was married December 23, 1841, to Miss Sarah Welch, a native of Hickory Township. Her father, William G. Welch, was born in Washington County, Penn., and married Elizabeth Flenniken, of Greene County, Penn., whence they came to Mercer County in 1801 and 1803, respectively, both dying on the old homestead in Hickory Township. In January, 1842, Mr. Mathers and wife located in Greenville, where he had previously purchased an interest in a flouring mill. With the exception of two intervals, when he disposed of his mill interest and engaged in contracting, he was prominently and successfully connected with the milling business in Greenville up to the illness which closed with his death. In August, 1880, the frame mill was burned, and Mr. Mathers immediately began the erection of the large, substantial brick mill, on the site of the old structure, which his sons, J. F. and M. P., now manage. Six children were born to James and Sarah Mathers: Sarah J. (deceased), William W., James F., John G. (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased) and Mead P. Politically Mr. Mathers was a Republican, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, to which denomination his widow also belongs.

HON. WILLIAM MAXWELL, attorney at law, was born in Gettysburg, Adams Co., Penn., February 28, 1809, the son of William Maxwell, a member of the Adams County bar, who died in 1816. Our subject read law in the office of John Lashells, Esq., a well-known lawyer of New Berlin, Union Co., Penn., and was there admitted to the bar in September, 1831. In February, 1832, Mr. Maxwell came to the town of Mercer, and was admitted to practice the following term of court. In March, 1832, he opened an office, and practiced the duties of his profession in Mercer until the fall of 1866, when he removed to Greenville. In May, 1874, he was appointed president judge of Mercer County, and served on the bench nearly a year. In September, 1861, by authority of Gov. Curtin, Judge Maxwell raised the Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, of which he was commissioned colonel. He commanded his regiment till sickness compelled him to resign. During his brief term of service his regiment was stationed at Washington, D. C., where he acted as brigadier-general in organizing several regiments into a provisional brigade. It was the constant worry while thus engaged that produced the sickness which necessitated his retirement from the service. Col. Maxwell was married October 17, 1833, to Miss Caroline Geddis, a native of Lewisburg, Union Co., Penn., born in 1812. Of this union were born three sons: James, who commanded a vessel throughout the Rebellion, and died at Tampico, Mexico, in 1867, while serving as lieutenant-commander of the United States gunboat "Yantic;" Ralph, now a notary public of Greenville, who served as captain in the Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers the greater portion of the war, and was subsequently a lieutenant in the regular army, which position he resigned in 1867; and William, who died in New Orleans during the yellow fever epidemic of 1867. Mrs. Maxwell still survives to solace her aged husband in the evening of his life. Judge Maxwell is the Nestor of the Mercer bar. Of the attorneys at the bar when he was admitted to practice but three representatives in Northwestern Pennsylvania are still living. Before the Rebellion Judge Maxwell affiliated with the Democratic party, but when Sumter was fired upon he at once became prominent in organizing the Union party, and subsequently united with the Republican party. He has ever since been staunch in his allegiance to the principles and measures of that political organization.

JAMES B. McCCLIMANS, proprietor of meat market, was born in Salem Township, Mercer Co., Penn., January 17, 1846, and is a son of Samuel and Jane (Cannon) McClimans. The former is a native of Butler County, Penn., and came to this county with his parents about 1828, where he grew up and married Miss Jane Cannon, a native of Fayette County, Penn., whose parents settled in West Salem Township, Mercer County, in 1833. Of this union ten children were born: Margaret L., Martha A., David A., James B., Elizabeth J., Matthew Eli, William E., Sarah M., Samuel A. and Thomas M., all of whom are living except the first mentioned. The mother died a few years ago. Our subject was reared in Salem Township, and followed farming till February 14, 1864, when he enlisted in the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served until the close of the war, returning to his home in August, 1865. He still continued to work upon a farm till the spring of 1874, when he came to Greenville and worked at the carpenter's trade about three years. He then followed the butcher's trade until the spring of 1880, when he purchased an interest in the meat market of James A. Clark. He remained with Mr. Clark up to December, 1883, when J. A. Lyons bought out Mr. Clark. Our subject subsequently purchased Mr. Lyon's interest and has since continued the business alone. Mr. McClimans was married September 3, 1868, to Miss Adda E., a daughter of Clinton George (deceased), of Sugar Grove Township. She was born in Erie County, Penn., and is the mother of three children: Jennie (deceased), Adella F. and George L. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church of Greenville, in which body Mr. McClimans has been steward about six years. Politically he is a Republican, of strong temperance proclivities, and is a member of the G. A. R. and the F. M. C.

PHINEAS E. MCCRAY, secretary and auditor of the P. S. & L. E. Railroad, was born July 9, 1857, at Harmonsburg, Crawford Co., Penn. He was educated in the schools of his native town, obtained a knowledge of telegraphy, and at the age of sixteen years entered the employ of the Shenango & Allegheny Railroad as an operator, which position he filled for a few years, when he was appointed chief clerk in the general office. On May 1, 1880, he was appointed auditor, and in 1882 he was made secretary of the W. P. & S. C. Railroad, one of the connecting lines. In 1885 he was appointed secretary of the P. S. & L. E. Railroad. In 1875 Mr. McCray became a resident of Greenville, and has filled the office of borough auditor, and is the present secretary and auditor of the Greenville Water Company. He is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge No. 290, of Greenville, also a member of the P. H. C. No. 18. Mr. McCray was married in 1886 to Miss Annetta, daughter of Hon. James C. Brown, of Greenville. Politically he is a Republican.

DR. M. J. McELHANEY, physician and surgeon, was born in Greene Township, Mercer Co., Penn., October 23, 1838. He comes of pioneer stock, his father, James McElhaney, having been born a short distance north of Jamestown, in Crawford County, and his mother, Margaret (Mahan) McElhaney, being a native of Mercer County. His grandfather, Matthew McElhaney, was a native of Ireland, and one of the earliest settlers of South Shenango Township, Crawford Co., Penn., coming there in the latter part of the eighteenth century, when the whole country was yet a wilderness and the Indians still roamed the forest. Both he and wife died on the old homestead, where they reared a family of six sons and six daughters. That was one of those good old-fashioned Irish families, who believed in the scriptural injunction to increase and multiply, and who knew nothing of the new American idea that large families are unfashionable. Only three of the twelve children are now living, one son and two daughters. James was the second oldest, and was born in South Shenango Township in 1800, and there grew to manhood. In 1820 he was married to Miss Margaret Mahan, whose parents emigrated from Ireland to Westmoreland County, Penn., and thence to Mercer County about 1800, locating some three miles southeast of Jamestown, where Margaret was born in 1802. Her father served from this county in the War of 1812, and both her parents died on the old homestead, leaving a large family, a son and daughter, now residing in Crawford County, being the only survivors. Soon after their marriage James McElhaney and wife settled in Greene Township, Mercer County, one and one-half miles west of Jamestown. They reared a family of three sons and three daughters, viz.: John K., living near the old home; Isabella, deceased; James, deceased; Mrs. Jane Snodgrass, residing across the line in Crawford County; M. J., of Greenville, and Leander, who died while serving in the army during the Rebellion. The mother died on the old homestead in August, 1870, and the father in January, 1887. The whole family adhered to the United Presbyterian faith, from the grandparents on both sides down to the present generation. Dr. McElhaney grew to maturity on his father's farm, and received his education in the public schools. At the age of eighteen he began teaching school in his neighborhood, and subsequently attended the academies at Meadville and Jamestown, Penn. He continued to teach for several years, and was assistant teacher in the Jamestown Academy a portion of the time while attending that institution. In the spring of 1863 he began his medical studies under Dr. Gamble, of Jamestown, Penn., and in the winter of 1865-66 attended lectures at Buffalo Medical University. He commenced practice in the spring of 1866 at Hartstown, Crawford County. In the winter of 1869-70 he again attended lectures at Buffalo Medical University, where he graduated February 22 of the latter year. Dr. McElhaney then removed his office to Brookfield, Trumbull Co., Ohio, where he continued in active practice for fifteen years. In the spring of 1885 he sold out and took a course of study in the Post Graduate School of New York, and then located in Greenville, where he has since won and retained a good practice. Dr. McElhaney was married September 24, 1867, to Miss Letitia Wilson, of Hartstown, Crawford County, and has a family of one son and four daughters. The family belong to the United Presbyterian Church, and the Doctor is a strong advocate of temperance. He served in the ninety days service in the Rebellion, and is a member of John C. Dickey Post No. 433, G. A. R., of Greenville.

JOHN G. McFATE, farmer, was born near Oil City, Venango Co., Penn., December 16, 1837. His father, Joseph, was a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and removed with his parents to Venango County when about two years old, where he spent nearly all of his days, dying in Crawford County in 1878. Joseph McFate married Margaret McKnight, a native of County Donegal, Ireland, who immigrated with her parents to Sugar Lake, Crawford Co., Penn., when nine years of age. She reared eight children, and died in Crawford County in 1882. The parents were life-long members of the United Presbyterian Church. Our subject was the third eldest in the family, and grew to manhood on the old homestead in Venango County, and received a common-school education. He began teaching at eighteen, and taught four winter terms. He was married February 14, 1866, to Miss Lizzie A. Birchfield, of Meadville, Penn. The following children have been born of this union: Willis (deceased), Howard C., Percy (deceased), Cornell R., Le Grand, La Pierre, Mary E. and Derwood. In 1866 he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he was engaged in the real estate business until the spring of 1874, when he located on his present homestead, in the eastern suburbs of Greenville, where he has since been engaged in farming. Mr. McFate is a Republican in politics, and the family belong to the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville, in which body he has been a ruling elder about eleven years.

JESSE McQUISTON, proprietor livery stables, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., October 18, 1825, and is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Showers) McQuiston, natives of the same county. In 1833 the family removed to Jefferson County, Penn., where they resided until 1849, when the parents went to Lawrence County, to reside with their son, Samuel, where the mother died. The father and Samuel subsequently removed to Illinois, and there died. They reared six sons and three daughters, only two of whom, Nicholas, of Jefferson County, and Jesse, of Greenville, are living. Our subject followed the lumber trade for many years, and was married in Jefferson County, Penn., to Miss Margaret Davidson, of that county, who bore him three sons: Curtis (deceased), Clarence J., of Sugar Grove Township, and Samuel K., of Youngstown, Ohio. Mrs. McQuiston died in Lawrence County, Penn., April 27, 1855, and he was again married January 1, 1858, in Mercer County, to Miss Margaret Carver, a native of Poland, Mahoning Co., Ohio, but who grew to womanhood in Mercer County. In December, 1859, Mr. McQuiston and family removed from Lawrence County to Greenville, where he worked in a saw-mill about ten years, afterward serving for six successive years as constable. In 1869 he began operating a small livery stable, and has since grown into quite a flourishing business. Six children were born of his second marriage: Curtis L., James, Harry P., Fred L., Wilbert (deceased) and Charles Wesley. The family are attendants of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. McQuiston is a Republican in politics.

DR. CHARLES A. MILLER, physician and surgeon, was born in New Castle, Lawrence Co., Penn., August 3, 1857, and is a son of William W. and Adela (Moffet) Miller. The former was born in New York State, and removed with his father, Almon F. Miller, to the vicinity of New Castle, Penn., more than fifty years ago, where the father yet resides. William there grew up and married Adela Moffet, a native of New Hampshire. In 1862 he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was killed at Chancellorsville May 3, 1863, leaving a wife and two sons to mourn his loss. Charles A. was the eldest, and subsequently went to live with his grandfather. He was educated in the public schools of Lawrence County; read medicine under Dr. J. W. Covert, of New Castle, Penn., and graduated at Pulte Medical College, Cincinnati Ohio. He began practice in 1882, and in the spring of 1885 came to Greenville, where he has since practiced his profession. Dr. Miller is a member of Hahemann Medical Society, of Cincinnati, and is the only Homœopathic practitioner between the towns of Mercer, Sharon and Meadville. He was married December 13, 1876, to Miss Cally Bell, of Lawrence County. Two children have been born of this union, one of whom is deceased. Politically Dr. Miller is a Republican, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity, A. O. U. W. and P. H. C., and is the local medical examiner for the two last mentioned societies.

WILLIAM H. MILLER, horseshoer, was born in Newburg, Orange Co., N. Y., October 29, 1845, and is a son of Elmer and Alice (McCormick) Miller, the former a native of Orange County, N. Y., of Connecticut stock (his father being a soldier of the Revolution), and his wife a native of Ireland. Elmer Miller died in Chicago in 1852, and his widow returned to Newburg, N. Y., and now resides in Cleveland, Ohio. Our subject grew up in the East, and learned the horseshoer's trade in New York City, after which he spent three years on the road shoeing and treating horses. In 1872 he located in Greenville, where he has since principally made his home. He was married September 23, 1875, to Lovisa, eldest daughter of the late William Laird. Politically Mr. Miller is a stanch Republican, and a member of the P. H. C. He is a local writer of some note on political and other subjects, and many of his articles have recently appeared in the local press.

N. N. Moss, grocery dealer, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, October 24, 1864, and is a son of Nicholas and Ann (Donie) Moss, natives of Germany. They emigrated from Germany to Ohio, where our subject was born, and in 1878 removed to Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where the parents now reside. They reared a family of eight children, all of whom are living and adherents of the Catholic Church. Our subject grew up in Trumbull County, and received his education in the common schools of that and Mercer County. In 1886 he came to Greenville and began clerking, and in March, 1887, formed a partnership with J. C. Kahl, under the firm name of Moss & Kahl, which lasted until the spring of 1888, when Mr. Kahl sold out to J. E. Davenny, and the firm became Moss & Davenny. This young firm has built up a good trade and is doing a fair share of the business in their line. Politically Mr. Moss is a Democrat, and a member of St. Michael's Catholic Church.

ROBERT GILLIS MOSSMAN, born in Fayette County, Penn., October 1, 1795, eldest son of William Herdman and Sarah (Gillis) Mossman, died August 25, 1847, in Greenville, Penn. When but four years old his parents removed to West Salem Township, Mercer County, at that time part of Allegheny County, and settled at what was afterward known as Mossmantown. His early education was quite limited. He received several months' day schooling, and, being bright and studious, he acquired a good knowledge of the rudiments of the English language. His father was a manufacturer of spinning wheels, which trade he learned and worked at when not engaged working on the farm. He married Miss Margaret, daughter of Col. Andrew Christy, September 27, 1821, Rev. Samuel Tait, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Mercer, officiating. He subsequently removed to Greenville, and settled in what is now the East Ward, part of which is Mossman's addition to Greenville. He carried on several branches of business, such as a furniture factory, woolen mills, grist and saw-mills, tannery and other branches of enterprise. He was a go-ahead man, of unlimited energy, and contributed largely to the development of the business interests of the place. He was a strong supporter of Andrew Jackson when first elected, but was afterward a Whig. He was the first Whig sheriff of Mercer County, elected in October, 1836. Mr. Mossman was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and a man of sterling qualities, honored and respected by everybody. He had eight children, only two of whom are now living, viz.: Rev. William Herdman Mossman, a member of Erie Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, and Dr. Beriah Edwin Mossman, of Greenville. Sarah Ann, one of his daughters, married Dr. Reuben E. Breiner, father of Mrs. E. T. Beatty and Mrs. William H. Findley; another daughter, Susan Jane, married Chambers Templeton, father of Edwin S. Templeton, Esq., of this place.

BERIAH EDWIN MOSSMAN, physician and surgeon, was born in Greenville, Penn. He is the fifth son of Robert Gillis Mossman, of that borough, descended from Scotch-Irish ancestors, and Margaret (Christy) Mossman, a daughter of Col. Andrew Christy, a pioneer of 1797. He received a thorough classical and scientific education at the Greenville Academy, and during vacations was under private tutorship. He began the study of medicine in the office of his brother-in-law, the late Dr. R. E. Breiner, in Greenville, in the year 1861: entered the Cleveland Medical College in 1862, from which institution he graduated at the head of his class, March 1, 1864. Returning to Greenville he commenced the practice of medicine on the 9th of the same month, in company with his brother-in-law, with whom he remained until March, 1868, when he entered an office by himself. In 1874 he became associated with Dr. H. D. La. Cossitt, with whom he remained until the death of Dr. Cossitt, which occurred

March 1, 1877. After a number of years' practice he moved his family to Philadelphia, and regularly entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he graduated with first honors in March, 1879. He also received the diploma of the Philadelphia Lying-in Charity, March 1, 1879, an institution devoted exclusively to obstetrics and the diseases of females. He then returned to Greenville and engaged in the active practice of his profession, devoting special attention to obstetrics and diseases of women, in which specialty he has built up a large practice. He was for many years the surgeon of the A. & G. W. and S. & A. Railroads, and has successfully performed all the capital operations. In 1870 he became a member of the Medical Society of Pennsylvania, and in 1874 of the American Medical Association. He is a member of the Mercer County Medical Society, and is one of the members who, by zeal and energy and love for the profession, established that organization. For many years he was its secretary, and on January 9, 1877, was elected president. He has contributed a number of valuable articles to the "transactions" of the State society, and various other medical journals, and is a contributor to the American Journal of Obstetrics. The Doctor is a prominent Mason, and at present H. P. of Mound Royal Arch Chapter, a member of Eureka Lodge F. & A. M., North Western Commandery K. T., and a member of Pennsylvania Consistory Scottish Rite Masonry, in which order he has received the thirty-second degree. On September 5, 1872, he married Emma E., daughter of Reuben V. Hilands, of Greenville, and has five children: Beriah E., Nana M., Margie B., Hazel and Roy G. Politically Dr. Mossman is an unswerving Democrat, and in the spring of 1888 came within three votes of being elected burgess of Greenville, which usually gives a large Republican majority. The Doctor is United States examining surgeon for pensions for this district, and one of Mercer County's best known physicians.

THOMAS MOULD, guide and hoop roller in P. L. Kimberly & Co.'s Greenville Iron Works, was born in Victoria, Monmouthshire, Wales, October 28, 1852, and is a son of Thomas and Hannah (Davis) Mould, he a native of Somersetshire and she of France. In the fall of 1862 the family immigrated to Duncansville, Penn., and subsequently lived in Allentown and Johnstown, whence in 1866 they came to Sharon. Since boyhood our subject has worked in the iron mills of Sharon and Greenville, and learned his trade in the works of P. L. Kimberly & Co., for whom he has worked for the past eighteen years. His mother died in Sharon in 1884, and his father now resides with him, and is a puddler by trade. Mr. Mould was married June 17, 1877, to Miss Priscilla Parry, of Sharon, who is the mother of four sons: Thomas, William H., Richard and Ralph P. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically Mr. Mould is a Republican. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P., A. O. of F. and Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers.

IRVIN M. MOYER, manufacturer of cigars, was born in Montgomery County, Penn., January 12, 1853, and is a son of Josiah and Mary (Miller) Moyer, also natives of Montgomery County, where both spent their lives. His mother died when Irvin M. was only five years old, his father surviving until 1883. At the age of thirteen our subject left home, and began learning the cigar maker's trade in Quakerstown, Bucks Co., Penn. For several years he worked at his trade in different sections of the State, coming to Greenville in July, 1873. He worked for H. K. Reiss until 1881, when he formed a partnership with Frank Bortz, under the firm name of Bortz & Co., and bought out Mr. Reiss. In January, 1885, Mr. Moyer purchased his partner's interest, and has since conducted the business. He was married June 3, 1879, to Miss Ella, daughter of James Bortz, of West Salem Township. Two sons are the fruits of this union: Ralph and Ray. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and Mr. Moyer is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party.

H. F. MOYER, hardware merchant, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., July 24, 1861, and is a son of Levi and Elvina (Diefenderfer) Moyer, natives of this State and residents of Pymatuning Township. Our subject grew up on the old homestead, received his primary education in the common schools, and afterward attended the State Normal at Edinboro three terms. He then taught school one term in the building where he himself had received his early education, and subsequently spent one course at Duff's Commercial College, Pittsburgh, where he graduated, afterward teaching a term in his old district. Mr. Moyer clerked a brief time in Cleveland, Ohio, and in May, 1884, entered the employ of Livingston & Lohr, as book-keeper, which position he filled up to January, 1887, when, Mr. Lohr having previously died, he purchased his interest in the store, and the firm of Livingston & Moyer has since continued to do a successful business. Mr. Moyer was married April 20, 1886, to Miss Permilla, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Bartholomew) Stoyer, of Pymatuning Township. Both he and wife are members of the Reformed Church. He belongs to the P. H. C., and is an adherent of the Democratic party.

OLIVER H. MUNTZ, manufacturer and dealer in harness, etc., was born in New Castle, Penn., April 24, 1863, and is a son of J. H. and Sarah (Rodgers) Muntz, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Lawrence County, Penn., where her parents were among the early settlers. Our subject grew to manhood in Lawrence and Butler Counties, Penn., his parents removing to the latter county in 1875, and are now residents of Centreville, Butler County, where Mr. Muntz carries on the harness business. When thirteen years old Oliver H. entered a printing office in Centreville, where he served one year as a typo, when the paper ceased publication, and he then began learning the harness business in his father's shop. In the fall of 1885 his father established the harness business in Greenville, and placed our subject in charge of the same. They have since done the leading business in the borough. Mr. Muntz was married April 25, 1882, to Miss Anna, daughter of Pressley Gill, of Centreville, Penn. Three children have been born of this union: Almira, Laura and Raymond. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Mr. Muntz is a Republican. He is the inventor and patentee of the bristle-bone whip, ornamental hame-clip, and a horse-tail holder (a device for tying up a horse's tail), which inventions are valuable to the harness trade.

JOHN NEEL, contractor and builder, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., February 15, 1830, and is a son of John and Mary (Hendrickson) Neel, he a native of Westmoreland County, of Irish parentage, and she of New Jersey, of German ancestry. In 1831 the parents, with three sons and one daughter, our subject being the youngest, removed from Westmoreland County, Penn., to Mercer County, and located on a farm about four miles south of Greenville, near the old Salem Church. Four daughters were born after their coming to Mercer County, and of the eight children seven grew to maturity and three sons and one daughter survive. The mother died near Greenville forty years ago, and the father in Illinois, whither he and most of the family removed about 1851. Our subject grew to manhood in Mercer County, and learned the carpenter's trade in Greenville. About 1852 he started out as a contractor and builder. For the past twenty years he has been one of the leading contractors in Greenville, and has erected many of the finer buildings in this part of the county. Mr. Neel was married, January 17, 1856, to Miss Nancy, daughter of William and Ann Young, pioneers of Hempfield, where both died on the old farm one mile east of Greenville, where the water works are now located. Mrs. Neel was born on the old homestead, and was at the time of her death the mother of five children: Lydia A. (wife of Edwin McMannus, of Greenville), William H., Mary (deceased), Curtin (deceased) and Milton. Mrs. Neel died January 14, 1872, in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Neel is a Republican, and has filled one term as councilman and two consecutive terms as burgess of Greenville.

DANIEL B. PACKARD, M. D., deceased, was born in Trumbull (now Mahoning) County, Ohio, September 19, 1817, and died in Greenville, Penn., September 19, 1873, having completed his fifty-sixth year on the very day of his death. In 1835 he removed with his parents to Northern Indiana, but returned to his native place within one year. Though thrown upon his own resources at an early age, by characteristic application he secured a fair education. He commenced the study of medicine in the office of his brother, Dr. John A. Packard, of Austintown, Ohio, and taught school during this period to defray his necessary expenses. He attended medical lectures at Worthington, Ohio, and subsequently at Willoughby Medical Institute, from where he graduated in February, 1842. He soon after began practice at Clarksville, Mercer Co., Penn., removing to Greenville in August, 1842, where he formed a partnership with Dr. H. D. La. Cossitt. Upon the dissolution of this co-partnership Dr. Packard opened an office for himself, and vigorously prosecuted the arduous duties of his profession until embarking in commercial pursuits in the spring of 1854, when he gradually relinquished his professional duties and devoted his attention to the interests of his new enterprise. Under the firm name of Packard & Co., his nephews, Warren and John R. Packard, being his partners, he opened the pioneer hardware and iron store of Greenville May 10, 1854, in the brick block erected by him the previous year. This house has ever since continued to be the leading iron and hardware store in the borough, and one of the largest in the Shenango Valley. Dr. Packard retired from the firm in April, 1870. He was the leading spirit in establishing the dry goods house of Anderson & Packard, and also the queensware and crockery store of D. B. Packard & Co., in which he was interested at the time of his death. In 1859 he erected the "Commercial Block," corner of Main and Canal Streets, and in 1873 remodeled and enlarged that structure. Dr. Packard was married, October 26, 1841, to Miss Celestia, daughter of John Cotton, Esq., of Austintown, Ohio, who, with one son, D. P., an attorney of Greenville, survives him. He took a prominent part in having Thiel College removed to Greenville, and was one of its warmest supporters up to his death. Dr. Packard was recognized as a sagacious and successful business man, who took an active interest in the growth and development of the social and material prosperity of his adopted county.

JOHN R. PACKARD, of the firm of Packard & Co., wholesale and retail hardware merchants, was born in Lordstown, Trumbull Co., Ohio, January 31, 1836, and is a son of William and Julia A. (Leach) Packard. The former was a native of Washington County, Penn., and the latter of Mendhan, Morris Co., N. J. The Packards and Leaches immigrated to what is now Mahoning County, Ohio, in the early part of the present century. Our subject was reared in Lordstown, and educated in the common schools and a select academy conducted by Rev. Joseph King, of the Disciple Church, and subsequently taught school in that vicinity. In 1852 he began clerking in his brother's hardware store in Warren, Ohio, and in the spring of 1854 came to Greenville and entered into partnership with his uncle, Dr. D. B. Packard, and his brother Warren, of Warren, Ohio, as Packard & Co. After three years his brother sold his interest to the other partners, who continued the business until 1870, when Dr. Packard retired and our subject has since been head of the firm. Mr. Packard was married September 26, 1859, to Miss Augusta Buck, of Westfield, N. Y. Eight children have been born of this union: Clara, wife of L. D. Leech, of Greenville; Cora, wife of F. A. Mallery, of Erie, Penn.; Edwin B., Celestia, Julia, deceased; Sylvia, Paul, deceased, and Stanley, deceased. The family adhere to the Episcopal Church. Mr. Packard is a Democrat in politics, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is one of the oldest and most prominent business men of Mercer County.

D. P. PACKARD, attorney at law, was born December 6, 1857, at Greenville, Penn., where he has always resided. He attended the Greenville union schools until Thiel College was established, and then attended that institution some four or five years, or until the death of his father, Dr. D. B. Packard, who died September 19, 1873. He made a trip to California in 1874, and afterward attended college at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was called home to look after the crockery and glassware business of the old firm of D. B. Packard & Co. He has always been an active Democrat, and was elected chairman of the Democratic County Committee in 1881 and again in 1882, the two most successful years in the history of the Democratic party in Mercer County, there being more Democrats elected to office under his administration as chairman than ever before. He read law under A. F. Henlein, and was admitted to practice in January, 1885. In 1887 he was nominated by his party for the office of district attorney, and was defeated by a small majority, so small that his party placed him in nomination in 1888 for the office of State senator, and this was done without his knowledge and against his private wishes. He is prominent in local military, fire department and secret society circles, being adjutant of the Fifteenth Regiment National Guards of Pennsylvania, and foreman of the D. P. Packard Hose Co., No. 1, which was named after him. A Mason of high standing, he has filled every office in the power of the lodge to give him, and was elected and served as district deputy grand master of Odd Fellows for some three years.

WILLIAM PADEN, dry goods merchant, is a native of Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where he was born April 7, 1847. His grandfather, Robert Paden, was a native of the County Down, Ireland, whence he immigrated to Beaver County, Penn., as early as 1790, bringing his family with him. Both he and wife and most of their children lived and died in Beaver County. The only survivor, Robert, resides in Lawrence County. Robert Paden, Sr., like most of the pioneers from Ireland, served in the War of 1812 against the hereditary foe of his native land. His son John, the father of our subject, was born in Beaver County, Penn., in 1801, and there grew to manhood. He married Miss Jane Patton, a native of Lawrence County, Penn., born in 1810, and daughter of Nathan Patton, of that county. The latter was a Pennsylvanian, of Scotch parentage, and located in Lawrence County in the last decade of the eighteenth century. He reared a large family, some of whom are residents of that section of the State. He served in the War of 1812, and both he and wife died on the old homestead, about four miles north of New Castle, Penn. About 1835 Mr. Paden's parents removed to Mercer County, where both resided until their decease in 1878. They were members of the United Presbyterian Church and were highly respected. John Paden was an ardent Republican, and took a deep interest in the success of his party. Our subject was the eldest son in a family of nine children, was reared on his father's farm, attended the common school of the district, and afterward the high-school at Sheakleyville. In 1870 he came to Greenville, and began clerking in the store of Charles Hoge. In the spring of 1871 he and H. H. Lininger bought out the business, and the firm of Lininger & Paden was formed. In the spring of 1872 the store was destroyed by fire, and the partnership dissolved. The present building was then erected, and Mr. Paden has since conducted business therein. He was married November 2, 1872, to Miss Olive A. Long, a native of Mercer County, and daughter of David Long, an early settler of Otter Creek Township. Two sons and two daughters have been born of this union, all of whom are living. The family belong to the United Presbyterian Church. Mr. Paden is a Republican, has served in the council three terms and has been a school director several years. He is also a member of the Board of Trade, and a prominent breeder of fine horses.

JOHN PEARCE, head of the Pearce Woolen Company (limited), was born in Allegheny County, Penn., March 26, 1831, and is a son of Richard and Susanna (Holstein) Pearce, natives of England, who immigrated with three children to Allegheny County, Penn., before the birth of our subject, where six children were born to them. The parents both died in Allegheny County, the father in 1862, and the mother about two years afterward. John was reared upon his father's farm, and on reaching manhood began learning the miller's trade in the flouring-mill owned by his father on the old homestead, where he was engaged six years. In 1859 he removed to Harmony, Butler Co., Penn., and purchased a flouring-mill, which he operated till 1865, when he sold out and bought a half interest in the Harmony Woolen Mills, and, in partnership with Robert Sample, carried them on till 1871, and then became sole proprietor by the purchase of Sample's interest. He operated this mill till February, 1885, when, having formed a stock company known as "The Pearce Woolen Mill Company (limited)," in Greenville, he erected the present mills and removed his machinery and business to this borough. He has since conducted a large and constantly growing trade, and the goods turned out by the Pearce mills have a high reputation in the markets of neighboring cities. Mr. Pearce was married May 5, 1847, to Amelia M., daughter of Michael Douglas, of Beaver County, Penn., of which union three children have been born to them: Walter D., William A. and Anna L., all residents of Greenville, and the two sons connected with the Pearce mills. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Pearce has always affiliated with the Republican party.

HENRY K. REISS, tobacco merchant and postmaster, was born in Berks County, Penn., May 3, 1833, and is a son of Marmaduke and Sarah (Kessinger) Reiss. The former was a native of Lehigh County, and his wife of Berks, both of whom died in the latter county, he in 1858 and she in 1867, leaving two children: Henry K. and Mrs. Hiram Holston, of Pottstown, Penn. Our subject was reared in Lehigh County, Penn., where he attended school only about six months in early boyhood. At the age of ten Henry K. began working in a tobacco factory, and the balance of his youth was spent in that business. Mr. Reiss was married July 15, 1854, in Allentown, Penn., to Miss Fiana Lick, a native of Lehigh County. She is the mother of four children, only two of whom survive: Tilghman and Allen. The former is a partner with his father in the tobacco business. In August, 1862, Mr. Reiss enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the expiration of his term of enlistment. In April, 1867, he located in Greenville, and established his present business of manufacturer and dealer in cigars and tobacco. In March, 1887, Mr. Reiss was appointed postmaster of Greenville, and is the first Democrat to hold that office since the accession of Lincoln to the presidency, in 1861. Mr. Reiss is an unflinching Democrat, and both he and family belong to the Lutheran Church. He is a member of Dickey Post G. A. R., also of the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities, and has filled the offices of school director, councilman and auditor of the borough.

PETER SAAL, deceased, was born in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, May 14, 1836, and in 1852 immigrated to Greenville. After a few years he went to Illinois, where he spent about five years, and then returned to Greenville. In 1863 he was married near Clarksville, Mercer Co., Penn., to Miss Susan Batteiger, a native of Germany. Six children were born of this marriage: Emma, Maggie, Mary, Charles, George and Clara, all of whom are living. Mr. Saal was a brewer by trade, and worked for Mr. Ohl, of Greenville, many years. He subsequently became a partner in the business, and finally sole owner of the brewery. About ten years ago he gave up the manufacture of beer, and established a bottling works, which he conducted up to his death, September 10, 1887. He was a member of the Reformed Church, to which faith his widow and family also belong. In politics he was a Democrat. Mr. Saal was an upright, honest man, straightforward and courteous in his dealings, and had many friends among the people of Greenville, where he came, an unknown boy, thirty-five years ago.

JOHN E. SANKEY, farmer, was born in Edenburg, Lawrence Co., Penn., June 11, 1827, and is a son of John R. and Cynthia (Espy) Sankey. His grandfather, Ezekiel Sankey, and family, emigrated from east of the Mountains, in the latter part of the eighteenth century or early in the present one, to the Shenango Valley, and located in that portion of Mercer County cut off in the organization of Lawrence. They reared a large family, and the parents both died on the homestead in Shenango Township. Ezekiel Sankey was the second sheriff of Mercer County, and was county commissioner two terms. He served at Erie in the War of 1812, and died from the effects of a cold contracted during his service there. John R., the father of our subject, was born November 3, 1797, and grew to manhood on the old homestead in Lawrence County. He learned the cabinet-maker's trade, which he followed most of his life, in that portion of the State. He married Cynthia Espy, a native of Tarrstown, Penn., born in April, 1799, whose parents were pioneers of that portion of Lawrence County. They reared six children, all of whom are living. Both were members of the Presbyterian Church, and the mother died in June, 1854, her husband surviving her until March, 27, 1868. Our subject spent his boyhood days under the parental roof, and learned the carder's and fuller's trade in a woolen mill. Soon after completing his trade he went into farming, and has followed that occupation a large portion of his life. For the past twenty years he has devoted his attention to the sale of agricultural implements, and is well known in every portion of the county. He was married November 8, 1849, to Miss Nancy A. Wines, a native of Beaver County, Penn., who has borne him seven children: William W., Cynthia A., Ezekiel V., James M. (deceased), Carrie (deceased), Edwin M. and King. In February, 1865, Mr. Sankey removed from Lawrence County to a farm in Sugar Grove Township, upon which his son William now lives, and in 1874 he removed to Greenville, where he has since resided. Mr. Sankey is a Democrat in politics, and the family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church. He filled the office of justice of the peace in Sugar Grove Township one term. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and the A. O. U. W., and is one of the well-to-do citizens of the county.

AARON SAUL, grocery merchant, was born in Berks County, Penn., February 7, 1827. His parents were Daniel and Polly (Reichart) Saul, natives of Berks County, Penn., where they were married. In the spring of 1833, with a family of six children, they came to Mercer County, and located on a farm on the Mercer road, one mile south of Greenville. They reared seven children: Henrietta, Aaron, Daniel, William, Mary, James A. and Nancy, all of whom are residents of this county. The father was a tailor by trade, and followed that business all his life. Politically he was a Whig, and afterward a Republican, and died on the old homestead May 2, 1885, his widow surviving him until August 20, 1887. Both lived and died consistent members of the Reformed Church. Our subject grew up on the old homestead, and July 4, 1848, he was married to Miss Maria, only child of Jacob Beitler, an early settler of West Salem Township. Mrs. Saul was born in Eastern Pennsylvania, but was reared in Mercer County. Three children are the fruits of this marriage: Mary E. L., Martha H. J. and Agnes H. L., all living and heads of families. Mr. Saul farmed two years after his marriage, then removed to Greenville, and for sixteen years drove a mail line. He had the routes from Greenville to Orangeville, Ohio, and also to Franklin, Penn. In 1862 he went into the grocery business with Samuel West, whom he bought out in less than a year, and has since continued alone. Mr. Saul is a member of the Reformed Church, and his wife is a Lutheran. Politically he is a Republican, and one of the oldest and best known business men of Greenville.

WILLIAM HARVY SHEAKLEY, attorney at law, was born on the old Sheakley farm, November 10, 1833, and is the third son of Moses and Susan (Limber) Sheakley. He grew up in his native township, receiving his education in the public schools and at Allegheny College, Meadville. After teaching a few years he began his law studies under Gen. Wilson, of Franklin, Penn., and was there admitted to the bar in 1860. He returned to Sheakleyville, and in 1861 was admitted to practice at Mercer. In the fall of 1862 he was elected, on the Union ticket, district attorney, and took up his residence in Mercer, where he practiced for five years. In 1868 Mr. Sheakley opened an office in Greenville, where he has ever since prosecuted the duties of his profession. He has always been independent in politics; was a Democrat up to the war, then joined the Republican party; in 1872 supported Greely, and since that time has again affiliated with the Democratic party. Mr. Sheakley was married in 1862 to Miss Lydia Hay, of Girard, Erie Co., Penn., who has borne him three sons and one daughter, all living in Greenville except Samuel H., who graduated with first honors at Thiel College, in the class of 1883, and is now principal of the public schools of Nashua, Iowa.

JOHN T. SHUTT, physician and surgeon, was born in Armstrong County, Penn., May 18, 1851, and is a son of Michael and Sarah (Ashbaugh) Shutt, natives and residents of that county. Dr. Shutt was reared in Armstrong County, where he obtained the usual advantages of a common school education. In the fall of 1873 he came to Greenville for the purpose of attending Thiel College, at which institution he spent three years. In 1876 he began reading medicine in his native county, and in the winters of 1878-79 and 1879-80 he attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., where he graduated in the spring of the latter year. He commenced practice in Greenville in June, 1880, where he has since made his permanent home. Dr. Shutt was married June 17, 1880, to Miss Mary, daughter of George A. Bittenbanner, one of the pioneer business men of the town. Two children are the fruits of this union: Louise and Albert. Dr. Shutt is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and belongs to the Democratic party. He is a member of the Mercer County Medical Society, of which he has been secretary and vice-president.

DAVID S. SOULT, oil dealer and producer, was born in Clearfield County, Penn., October 19, 1841, and is a son of Michael and Hannah (Hoover) Soult. The former was a native of Union County, Penn., and removed to Clearfield County when he was ten years old, where he grew up and married Hannah Hoover, a native of that county. In 1863 they removed with a family of five children to Greenville, subsequently settling on a farm in Delaware Township, whence they returned to Greenville, where Michael Soult died in August, 1881, in the faith of the United Brethren Church. His widow resides in Greenville, and is also a member of the United Brethren denomination. Our subject was the third son in a family of eleven children, and grew to maturity in his native county. He received a good common school education, and taught school three winter terms. In 1864 he left Greenville and went into the oil country, where he engaged in the oil business, and has since been a dealer and producer of oil. Mr. Soult was married January 6, 1869, to Miss Nannie G. English, of Fairview, Mercer Co., Penn., and took up his residence in Titusville, Penn. In 1876 he went west, and in the following year settled in Meadville, Penn. In the spring of 1878 he came to Greenville and built his present residence on Meadville Street, where he has since resided. Four children have been born to David S. and Nannie G. Soult: Fannie E., deceased; Eda M., deceased; Edwin Earl and Edson Carl. Mr. Soult is a staunch Republican and the family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. He commenced life in moderate circumstances, and has been quite successful in his many business ventures.

LYMAN B. SPEIR was born in West Salem Township, Mercer County, January 25, 1838. His parents were John H. and Sarah (Smail) Speir, pioneers of that township, where a sketch of the Speir family will be found. Our subject was reared on the old homestead, and in 1863 came to Greenville and followed the coal business for one year. He then went to Warren County, Penn., where, after about six months spent in the lumber business, he returned to Greenville, and was in the grocery business about one year. In the fall of 1866 he engaged in the livery business, which he carried on until April, 1888, when he sold out. Mr. Speir was married June 20, 1861, to Eliza J., daughter of Bartlett McLaughlin, one of the well remembered farmers of West Salem Township. Three children were born of this union: Bartlett E., Della (wife of George Grauel, of Greenville) and Sarah N. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Speir is a member of the I. O. O. F., R. T. of T. and F. M. C. He is a staunch Republican, and in November, 1888, was elected to the Legislature as one of the three representatives of Mercer County.

VANCE STEWART, retired farmer, was born in what is now Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., May 15, 1818. His father, Vance Stewart, emigrated with his parents from Ireland to Huntingdon County, Penn., when he was about four years old, where both died; and where his father, John, was engaged in farming up to his death. Vance Sr. grew to manhood in that county, and there married Mary, daughter of James Sample, who emigrated with his family from Ireland when she was a small child. In 1805 Vance Stewart, Sr., and wife, with one child, James, crossed the Mountains on a pack horse, and located on a tract of land south of the site of Hickory Corners, in Mercer County. They were the parents of thirteen children, two of whom died in infancy. Of the remaining eleven, five sons and two daughters became heads of families, of whom but two, Vance and Robert, survive. The parents resided all their days upon the old homestead where Robert now lives. They were members of the United Presbyterian Church, and died in that faith

March 22, 1855, and May 24, 1867, respectively, aged seventy-three and eighty-five years. Our subject grew to manhood in his native township, and attended school in the primitive log school-house of pioneer days. On the 2d of November, 1842, he was married to Miss Eliza M., daughter of John and Leonora (Gilbert) Sherrard, the former a native of Franklin County, Penn., and the latter of Berkley County, W. Va. Mrs. Stewart was born in Franklin County, Penn., and came to Mercer County with her parents in childhood. In the spring of 1844 Mr. Stewart removed to Upper Sandusky, Ohio, returning to Mercer County three years afterward. With the exception of this period, and a few years spent in the oil country, his whole life has been passed in his native county. Vance and Eliza M. Stewart have reared five children: Mrs. Mary J. Bartlett, of New Richmond, Wis.; James W., a lawyer of Cleveland, Ohio; Orlando V., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Steubenville, Ohio; Wilber V. (deceased) and Della. They settled on a farm south of Greenville in 1862, removing to Greenville in 1864. The family are Presbyterians in religious faith, and Republicans in politics. The sons all graduated at Westminster College. Beginning in life comparatively poor Mr. Stewart has accumulated a comfortable competence, and is recognized as one of the substantial, wealthy citizens of Greenville.

THOMAS STONE, plumber and assistant superintendent of the Greenville Water Works, was born in Nottingham, England, April 18, 1842, and is a son of George and Anna (Ely) Stone, both of whom are residents of Nottingham. Mr. Stone grew up in his native town, and served seven years at the plumber's trade. He was there married, October 4, 1869, to Miss Tacy Pears, of Nottingham, who has borne him four children: Frederick W., Rose E., Alva W. and Leroy, all of whom are living. In February, 1870, Mr. Stone and family immigrated to New York, and soon afterward removed to Philadelphia. Early in 1871 he came to Erie, Penn., where he continued working at his trade until the spring of 1876. He then returned to England with his family, and worked in South Wales one year, returning to Erie, Penn., in the spring of 1877, and locating in Greenville in May of that year, where he has since resided. In the fall of 1879 Mr. Stone opened a plumber's shop, and has since conducted that business. For several years Mr. Stone has had charge of the business of the gas works, and was superintendent of the works about three years. In the spring of 1888 he accepted his present position of assistant superintendent of the water works. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically he is independent. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the A. O. U. W. fraternities.

WILLIAM G. TAYLOR, deceased undertaker, was born in Greensburg, Westmoreland Co., Penn., August 17, 1823, and died in Greenville, Mercer Co., Penn., September 11, 1887. He was a son of Jehu A. and Elizabeth Taylor, of Westmoreland County. He learned the cabinet-maker's trade, which he followed for many years. On the 8th of September, 1844, he was married to Susan, daughter of Adam Turney, of Greensburg, Penn., where she was born April 21, 1821. In April, 1845, Mr. Taylor and wife removed to Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., and located on a farm near Fredonia, and he was for several years one of the leading stock dealers of the county. In January, 1865, he located in Greenville, and followed contracting and building, also operated a planing-mill, and was one of the leading contractors of the county. Some ten or twelve years ago he embarked in the undertaking business, which he followed up to the illness which ended with his death. To William G. and Susan Taylor were born three sons and three daughters: Annabell (wife of John Davenny, of Stoneboro, Penn.), Lucetta (wife of W. A. Kreps, sheriff of Mercer County), J. A. (of Greenville), J. W. (successor of W. G. Taylor & Son), Carrie (deceased) and Thomas O. (of Washington, D. C.). Mrs. Taylor died in the Methodist Episcopal faith, September 20, 1887, nine days after the death of her husband. He, too, was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and since early boyhood a strong temperance man. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and the A. O. U. W. Mr. Taylor was an upright, successful business man, a kind father and husband, and had the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens.

EDWIN S. TEMPLETON, attorney at law, was born in Brady's Bend, Armstrong Co., Penn., April 23, 1854, and is a son of Chambers and Susan J. (Mossman) Templeton. The former is a native of Armstrong County, of Scotch-Irish descent, while his wife, who died in Greenville December 19, 1872, was born in Mercer County, her parents being among the very first settlers of the Shenango Valley. Chambers Templeton and family located in Greenville in 1869, and he has since been connected with the business interests of the county. Edwin S. graduated from Thiel College in June, 1875, and the same fall was appointed to a clerkship in the office of the Hon. John Allison, Register of the United States Treasury, where he remained two years. During this period he attended the law department of Columbian University, Washington, D. C., and graduated in June, 1877, thus becoming a member of the bar of that district. Mr. Templeton was admitted to the Mercer bar in the fall of 1877, but for the succeeding two years devoted his attention to the oil business. In 1879 he commenced active practice in Greenville, and is one of the able attorneys of the Mercer bar. He was married July 27, 1887, to Miss Clara, daughter of H. N. Shrom, Esq., the pioneer druggist of Greenville. Politically Mr. Templeton is a Republican of independent proclivities, and takes an active interest in the practical reformatory movements of the day.

CALEB M. THOMPSON, manufacturer and dealer in lumber, was born in French Creek Township, Mercer Co., Penn., December 2, 1847, and is a son of Abel and Margaret J. (Bell) Thompson, the former a native of Mercer County, Penn., and the latter of Bedford, Penn., and both residents of Greenville. The Thompsons were pioneers of French Creek Township, and the parents of our subject have had fourteen children, twelve of whom grew to maturity. Ten of the children are yet living, and all but two are residents of Mercer County. Caleb M. grew up on his father's farm, on which was a grist-mill, which his father built in 1852 and operated until 1882. He began the lumber business eighteen years ago in a part of the old mill, and has since been engaged in that business. During this period Mr. Thompson has operated saw-mills in Mercer and Clarion Counties, Penn., and Andover, Ohio, coming from the latter place to the mill at Loutzenhiser's Corners, which he began operating June 1, 1884. In the fall of 1885 he erected and put in operation a saw-mill immediately north of the Mathers mill in Greenville, which he carried on till January, 1888, when he purchased the Field & Fell stave mill, on the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad, known as the old Fiske property, to which he removed his saw-mill machinery and where he has since conducted business. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics is a Prohibitionist.

RALPH E. THORN, of the firm of Ford & Thorn, carriage manufacturers, was born in Mill Creek Township, Mercer Co., Penn., September 12, 1856. His father, Charles Thorn, was born in Youngstown, Ohio, where he grew up and married Miss Hulda Holcomb, a native of Vermont. He was engaged in merchandising in Youngstown, but soon after his marriage settled on a farm in Mill Creek Township, whence he removed into Sandy Lake Township a few years after coming to Mercer County. He resided in Sandy Lake till his death in September, 1874. Besides the widow he left a family of three children: Ralph E., Wilson S. and Hattie E. In 1876 the family removed to Youngstown, Ohio, where the mother and two youngest children now live. Ralph E. grew up in Sandy Lake Township, and after attending the public schools spent two terms at the New Lebanon Academy. In 1875 he began learning the carriage builder's trade in Youngstown, Ohio. Coming to Greenville in 1877, he continued working at his trade till January, 1886, when he purchased a half interest in the present carriage factory of Ford & Thorn, one of the leading manufacturing firms of Greenville. Mr. Thorn was married April 8, 1879, to Miss Lizzie Beachler, of Greenville, of which union two children, Ada M. and Helen M., have been born. He and wife are members of the Reformed Church, and in politics he is a Republican.

W. O. AND N. E. TILLOTSON, under the firm name of Tillotson Bros., carry on one of the leading dry goods stores in Greenville. They were born in Sodus, Wayne Co., N. Y., March 13, 1843, and August 22, 1847, respectively. Their father, William Tillotson, was born in Genoa, Cayuga Co., N. Y., December 20, 1810, and is a son of Matthew N. and Asenath (Higby) Tillotson, natives of Hartford, Conn., of English ancestry. William grew to maturity in New York State, and was there married October 17, 1837, to Miss Louisa Ogden. She, too, was born in Genoa, N. Y., and is a daughter of Ezekiel and Abijail Ogden, natives of New Jersey. Two sons and two daughters were born of this marriage: W. Ogden, Clara, wife of James F. Crandall, of Jersey City; Norton E., and Ida, wife of James A. Waugh, of Greenville. The parents came to Greenville in 1868, where they have since resided. Mr. Tillotson is a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Masonic order. In January, 1866, W. Ogden, senior member of Tillotson Bros., came from New York State to Greenville, and bought the dry goods stock of Simon Donner, which occupied a room in Packard's Commercial Block. In 1867 his brother, Norton E., came to Greenville to assist him, and the stock was removed to a frame room which stood on the site of Reiss & Son's tobacco store. In 1868 Norton E. obtained an interest in the business, and the present firm was formed. In the extensive fire which occurred in Greenville January 15, 1873, the store of Tillotson Bros. was among those destroyed, and they immediately erected the brick building now occupied by Reiss & Son. They carried on business in that room till the erection, in 1881-82, of their present block, which they took possession of in the latter year. W. Ogden Tillotson was married August 15, 1872, to Miss Eliza, daughter of Hon. John Allison, late register of the United States Treasury. Of this union two sons have been born: W. Ogden and Gustav K. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Tillotson is a member of the Masonic fraternity. Norton E. was married June 6, 1876, to Miss Augusta M., daughter of W. P. Leech, of Greenville. Two children have been born to them, Jesse M. and William P.

RICHARD TUNISON, retired merchant, was born in Reading, Steuben Co., N. Y., January 16, 1823. His parents, Cornelius and Catharine (Hays) Tunison, were natives of New Jersey, but were married in New York State. In the spring of 1853 the family came to Mercer County, and located north of the site of Thiel College. The parents died on that farm, the father August 20, 1854, aged sixty-eight, and the mother March 10, 1865, aged ninety-one years. Both adhered to the Baptist faith, Mrs. Tunison being one of the original members of the Greenville congregation. Cornelius Tunison was in the United States Army eight years, and served in the War of 1812. In early life a Democrat, he subsequently became a Whig and then a Republican, to which political faith he adhered until his death. Richard Tunison grew to manhood in his native county, receiving the usual common school education. He was married in Bound Brook, N. J., to Miss Mary E. Sullard, a native of that town. They resided in New Jersey about three years, and Mr. Tunison then engaged in the grain trade on Seneca Lake, N. Y. In the spring of 1853 he removed with his parents to the vicinity of Greenville, where he followed farming until his removal to that borough some twenty years ago, where he purchased and ran the St. Charles Hotel for one year. In 1873 Mr. Tunison erected a store-room on Main Street, and in partnership with his son, William F., opened a grocery house. In the fall of 1882 he retired from the firm, and his son conducted the business till the spring of 1888, when he sold out. To Richard and Mary E. Tunison have been born three sons: William F., H. A. and Charles, deceased. Both he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the family are all staunch supporters of the Republican party.

ALLEN TURNER, lumber dealer, etc., was born in Warren County, Penn., October 18, 1821, and is a son of Marcus and Sarah (Stevens) Turner, the former a native of Massachusetts, born February 12, 1794, and the latter of Vermont. Mr. Turner's grandfather, Abraham Turner, of Massachusetts, was one of the soldiers who erected the fort at the mouth of French Creek, on the site of Franklin, Penn., and also that on the site of Meadville, Penn., after the purchase of this territory from the Indians. He subsequently returned to Massachusetts, and there died. Marcus Turner grew up in that State, and thence came to Meadville, Penn., where he married Sarah Stephens and settled on a farm in Warren County, Penn. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. In 1847 he removed to Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he still resides, and enjoys good health, at the advanced age of ninety-four years. His wife died in Greenville while on a visit to her son Allen, in March, 1869. They were the parents of seven children, five of whom are living. One of the daughters, Mrs. Orpha Hammond, is a well-known pioneer educator of Pennsylvania and New York States, and for about one year was editor of the Times (now Argus), of Greenville. Our subject was the oldest son in the family, grew to manhood in Warren County, Penn., and was there married August 19, 1849, to Miss Mary E. Shipman, of Erie County, Penn., and a native of Madison County, N. Y. Mr. Turner followed the lumber business up to his removal to Sharon in June, 1852, where he went into the stove and tin-ware business, having the only store in that line in the borough at that time. In 1856 he removed to Kinsman, Ohio, where he continued business. Finding that Kinsman was not sufficiently flourishing for his business enterprise, he came, in 1859, to Greenville and purchased the store building of Achre, Bittenbanner & Co. on Main Street, the upper story of which was then occupied by his sister, Mrs. Hammond, in publishing the Times. In the spring of 1860 he located in the borough, and opened a stove and tin-ware store in the same building which he has ever since been interested in, and which his two sons and son-in-law now occupy. He also carried on a book and wall-paper store in the same building up to 1865, when he sold out, being the only dealer in that line in Greenville during his term of business. In 1865 he purchased 800 acres of timber lands on the head-waters of the Shenango River, which stream had been declared, by the act of 1803, navigable to its source, and cleaned out up to Greenville. Mr. Turner cleaned out the bed of the stream from Greenville to his purchase, a distance of from thirty-five to forty-five miles. For the succeeding eighteen years he rafted his logs to Greenville, where he had erected extensive saw-mills, and cut them into lumber, producing about 1,000,000 feet annually. His mill was burned in 1881, but he remained in the business until 1883. Mr. Turner, in 1870, started the first tree and small fruit nursery in this portion of the county, which he sold out in 1873, when he had 50,000 valuable roots. He was one of the men who was instrumental in having the rolling mills located in Greenville, and also the Pearce Woolen Mills, and one of the leading spirits in having Thiel College brought to the place. Since 1865 he has been engaged in the lumber business, and has been one of the most successful financiers of this part of the county. Mrs. Turner died in the Methodist Episcopal faith November 18, 1878, leaving a family of three children: Julius Fillmore, Elmer Allen and Edith, all of whom are living. Mr. Turner was again married August 23, 1883, to Miss Margaret Sheriff, of Mercer, a member of the Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican in politics, and has been Burgess of Greenville one term. His mother was a relative of President Fillmore, and Hon. Jabe Sutherland, judge in Utah Territory, while his brother Oren is a prominent attorney of the Chicago bar.

JOHN LAMBERT TURNER, general grocer, was born in Monmouthshire, England, April 22, 1838, and is a son of William and Sarah (Lambert) Turner, the former a native of Oxfordshire, and the latter of Monmouthshire, England. In the fall of 1841 the family immigrated to Youngstown, Ohio, where the parents spent the balance of their lives. They reared a family of seven children, four of whom are living: Mrs. Sarah A. Crowther, of Ashland, Ky.; William, of Niles, Ohio; Mrs. Matilda Hull, of Youngstown, Ohio, and John L. Our subject grew to manhood in Youngstown, Ohio, and worked in one of the iron mills of that town as a roller. Mr. Turner was married May 6, 1858, to Miss Sarah Jane, daughter of David and Hannah (Dumars) Gillespie, who was born at Big Bend, Mercer Co., Penn. One son, John A., a partner with his father in the grocery house, is the only fruit of this union. Mr. Turner followed the iron business until removing to Greenville. In 1871 he superintended the erection of a rolling mill in Massillon, Ohio, and then went to Wyandotte, Mich., as superintendent of the Wyandotte Rolling Mills, and was subsequently superintendent two years of the iron mills in Hamilton, Ontario. In April, 1881, Mr. Turner came to Greenville, and began operating coal mines in Butler County, which he sold out in December, 1886. In the meantime he bought out the grocery store of Kamerer & Leech, in February, 1884, and the firm of J. L. Turner & Son has since conducted a general grocery business. The family are attendants of the Presbyterian Church. Politically Mr. Turner is a Democrat, and a member of the R. A. and the Masonic fraternity.

WILLIAM A. VAUGHN, carriage manufacturer, was born in Washington County, Penn., July 27, 1823, and is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Alexander) Vaughn. The former was born in Washington County, Penn., June 12, 1797, and was a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Storer) Vaughn, who were married October 4, 1792, and were the parents of the following children: Agnes, James, Thomas, Mary, John, Elizabeth, Rebecca, Andrew and Lydia. Thomas came to Mercer County a young man, where he met and married Elizabeth, daughter of William Alexander, a pioneer of Findley Township. He and wife went back to Washington County, and returned to Mercer County in 1824, locating a short distance from the county seat. Of this union three children were born, our subject being the only survivor. The mother died when William A. was a small boy, and his father remarried, and reared by his second wife three children: James A., Harriet E. and Thomas L. He died in Greenville in February, 1884, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. Our subject was reared in Mercer County, and learned the carriage blacksmith trade at Mossmantown, in West Salem Township. In June, 1847, he opened a shop across the street from his present factory, and in the spring of 1850 erected a building on its present site, where he has ever since carried on the carriage business, which has increased from year to year, until to-day he conducts one of the leading manufacturing institutions of the borough. Mr. Vaughn was married October 18, 1849, to Miss Sarah, daughter of Hugh and Isabel (Hunter) Mossman, one of the pioneer families of West Salem Township. Mrs. Vaughn was born on the old homestead, in West Salem, not far from the Ohio line, and grew to womanhood in that part of the county. The following children have been born of this union: James W., of the firm of W. A. Vaughn & Son; Theresa, deceased; Harriett E., wife of C. H. Gardner, of Cleveland, Ohio; Emma P. and Carrie M. Mr. Vaughn and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he belongs to the Masonic fraternity. Politically he is a Republican, has filled the position of councilman and school director, and has always taken a deep interest in the growth and progress of his adopted county.

JOHN W. VOSLER, attorney at law, was born in Salem Township, Mercer Co., Penn., January 20, 1850, and is a son of Leonard and Viletta (Waters) Vosler, the former a native of New York State, and the latter of Eastern Pennsylvania. They came to this county in early youth, married, and are now residents of Salem Township. Our subject was reared upon the old homestead, and received his primary education in the district schools. At the age of seventeen he came to Greenville, and attended the high-school one term. In the fall of 1868 he entered the State Normal School at Edinboro, Penn., where he graduated in June, 1871, and subsequently spent one term at Mount Union College, Mount Union, Ohio. In the meantime he had taught school two winter terms in Mercer County. After graduating he taught one term in the Utica, Penn., public schools as principal; was principal of the schools at Parker's Landing, Penn., one year, and the Freeport schools two years. He began his law studies in 1874, under Judge William Maxwell, of Greenville, and was admitted to the bar in the spring of 1876. He did not begin active practice, however, in Greenville until the spring of 1878, since which time he has followed the duties of his profession. In the fall of 1878 he was elected, on the Republican ticket, one of the auditors of Mercer County, and re-elected in 1881, serving in that position six years. Mr. Vosler was married February 7, 1878, to Miss Mary Hoak, of Freeport, Penn., of which union one son, Ray, survives. Mrs. Vosler died in the consolations of the Christian faith, January 25, 1888, after a lingering illness of about three years' duration. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and belongs to the I. O. O. F. Since locating in Greenville Mr. Vosler has built up a fair practice at the bar of Mercer County.

HON. WILLIAM WAUGH was born in New Bedford, Lawrence Co., Penn., May 4, 1818. His father, James Waugh, was born in Cumberland County, Penn., July 5, 1788, and his grandfather, James, was a captain in the Revolutionary War, and died on his farm near New Wilmington, Penn., about 1815, whither the family had removed early in the present century. The father of our subject, when a boy, crossed the Mountains to Crawford County, Penn., with Alexander Power, a pioneer surveyor of that county, whence he subsequently returned to Cumberland County. Soon after reaching manhood James, Jr., opened a small store in a log cabin near New Bedford, Penn., into which town he subsequently removed. About 1824 he formed a partnership with his brother, Alexander Power Waugh, under the firm name of J. & A. P. Waugh, and started a store in Greenville. They carried on merchandising in that town about twenty years, and during this period operated its leading mercantile establishment. Their business house stood west of the Shenango, on Main Street. Alexander P., born July 4, 1791, located in Greenville in 1824, and was the first postmaster of the village. After giving up merchandising he led a retired life, and died in the Presbyterian faith March 7, 1869. He was a quiet, unassuming man, and well known and respected by the early settlers of Mercer County. They sold their store to Gen. James Power and John Waugh, a son of James, who, as Power & Waugh, removed it to the east side of the Shenango, and were leading merchants of Greenville. They were also large canal contractors, and in connection with Charles M. Reed, of Erie, Penn., built the first blast furnace in Greenville, which they operated a few years at a large financial loss. John Waugh was also one of the prominent stock dealers of Mercer County, and one of its well-known citizens. James Waugh and family resided in New Bedford till the spring of 1829, when he joined his brother at Greenville. Politically he was a Whig, and in 1828 was elected from Mercer County to the Legislature, and served one term. He was married at New Bedford to Miss Jane Thompson, born in July, 1788, who bore him four children: Margaret, Elizabeth, John and William, all of whom are dead except the last mentioned. During the War of 1812 he served at Erie, in Capt. Gilliland's company. The family were Presbyterians, and his wife died in that faith July 19, 1861, her husband surviving her until July 18, 1874. James Waugh was a self-educated man, of strong argumentative ability, and a wide knowledge of men and affairs. William came to Greenville with his parents in the spring of 1829, attended school in the Jamestown Academy, and in 1838 graduated at the Western University, Pittsburgh. He then read law with Pearson & Stewart, of Mercer, and was admitted to the bar December 28, 1842. He soon gave up the law profession, however, and engaged in other business. In 1850 he was appointed associate judge, and served until new judges were elected by popular vote, when he was not a candidate. In 1857 he was elected, on the Republican ticket, prothonotary of Mercer County, and re-elected to the same office, in which capacity he served six years. Judge Waugh was a leading spirit in the organization of the First National Bank of Greenville, in 1864, and was its first cashier. He filled that position until the death of the president, the late Samuel P. Johnston, in the fall of 1875, when he was chosen president of the bank, and served in that capacity up to January, 1888. Judge Waugh was married February 6, 1846, to Miss Annie D. Lasher, of Philadelphia, Penn., of which union three sons have been born: James A., of Greenville; William F., professor in the Medical Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, and John H., a stock grower of Dakota. From 1845 until 1848 Judge Waugh was editor and proprietor of the Mercer County Whig, at Mercer, and in the latter year was the nominee of the Whig party of Mercer County for the Legislature, but, because of his opposition to the division of the county, the Whigs in the southern part split off and defeated him.

SAMUEL WEST, grocery merchant, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., April 2, 1828, and is a son of David and Catharine (Beitnett) West, also natives of Lehigh County, and of German parentage. They grew up and married in their native county, and in 1832 removed with their family to Canfield, Ohio, and settled on a farm. Two years afterward they removed to Leavittsburg, Ohio, and in 1842 came to Mercer County, and located one mile east of Greenville. In 1849 the parents moved into West Salem Township, where they spent the remaining years of their lives. The mother died in 1863, and the father in 1867. They were life-long Lutherans, and Mr. West supported the Democratic party up to his death. They reared three children: Samuel, Mrs. Polly Greenewalt, of Crawford County, Penn., and Mrs. Mary Struble, who died in Wisconsin. Samuel left the parental roof in 1841, came to the vicinity of Greenville, and worked on a farm until his twenty-fourth year. In 1852 he got a government contract to carry a daily mail between Greenville and Mercer. He established a hack line, and carried the first daily mail between those points, which he continued to do for eight years. In 1856 he obtained a similar contract to carry the mail from Greenville to Warren, Ohio, which lasted four years, both contracts ending in 1860. Mr. West then engaged in farming, and in 1863 opened a grocery store in Greenville, which he conducted for one year. He purchased and ran the Greenville Steam Saw-mill for the next two years, and then sold out and went into the clothing business. In the spring of 1871 he disposed of his stock and again engaged in the grocery trade, which he has since continued. Mr. West was married April 6, 1852, to Miss Mary L. Homer, who bore him one daughter, Mrs. Frances Hernevious, of West Salem Township. Mrs. West died, in the Methodist faith, December 23, 1855. In December, 1859, Mr. West was again married, to Miss Maria Knappenberger, who has borne him four daughters and three sons: Minnie, Lydia, Samuel, Alice, John, Harry and May, all living at home. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and Mr. West is a member of the I. O. O. F., and a staunch supporter of the Democratic party.

JAMES R. WICK was one of the early business men of Greenville, where he located as a clerk in the store of J. & A. P. Waugh in 1826-27. He was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1807, and was a son of Rev. William Wick, a Presbyterian minister. After clerking a few years he began merchandising, and continued in the mercantile business till about 1850, when he started a private bank. He was engaged in the brokerage line until 1856, and then removed to Wisconsin. He finally returned to Greenville, and died November 1, 1865. Mr. Wick was the second postmaster of Greenville, filling the office from July, 1830, till October, 1831. He was also a justice of the peace several terms, and associate judge one term. He was married in 1830 to Catherine, daughter of Jacob Loutzenhiser, a pioneer of Greenville, and reared a family of six children. She died October 11, 1887, surviving her husband nearly twenty-two years.

CHAPTER XXXII.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SHARPSVILLE.

DAVID AGNEW, deceased, was born at Frankstown, Huntingdon Co., Penn., September 25, 1805, and died at Sharpsville, Penn., August 24, 1882. Ere reaching manhood he obtained a clerkship with Dr. P. Shoenberger, at Maria Forges, in Bedford County. About the year 1823 he removed to the Doctor's iron works, at Pittsburgh, where he remained until the spring of 1832, when he removed to Wheeling, Va., having entered into partnership with Dr. Shoenberger for the erection of a rolling mill at that place, the first in that city, and believed to be the first of the kind erected in that State. He was about the same time connected with a forge and furnace at Hanging Rock, Ohio. While a resident of Wheeling he was appointed by the governor a member of the "County Court;" was instrumental with others in establishing the Merchants' & Mechanics' Bank, of Wheeling; was a director, and for a time acted as president of that institution, and subsequently was appointed by President Tyler postmaster, which office he held for more than four years. During his term of postmaster Polk was elected President, and when the new administration came into power an attempt was made by the politicians to have Mr. Agnew removed; but the Postmaster-General, having examined into the affairs of the office, and finding that they were conducted in such an able and business-like manner, protested so strongly against any change being made that Mr. Agnew, though of different political faith, was permitted to retain the office. Wheeling, at that time, was one of the most important points along the line of the National Road, being a distributing office. Mr. Agnew resigned about a year later. In the year 1846 he removed to Sharon, this county, and, in connection with Dr. Shoenberger and others, built the Sharon Furnace. Afterward, together with Gen. Curtis, Mr. Boyce and other citizens of Sharon, the Sharon Iron Company was formed, and the rolling mill at Sharon, known as the Sharon Iron Works, was erected, of which Mr. Agnew was a director and manager. About the year 1846 there was considerable excitement in Mercer County in regard to the coal and iron business, which led to the erection of quite a number of blast furnaces along the Shenango Valley, but the expectations of these pioneers in the iron business of this county were destined to disappointment. The Lake Superior ores had not been obtained, and confined, as they were, to the native ores, and the use of mineral coal, with a general want of knowledge and experience in the working of these materials, it is not surprising that the business proved unprofitable, and was generally abandoned, so that very few of these old furnaces remain, having, since the introduction of Lake Superior ores, been superseded by larger and more perfect establishments. The connection of the iron ore of Lake Superior with the coal of Mercer County has produced an entire revolution in the manufacture of iron in Mercer County, and throughout Western Pennsylvania generally. Mr. Agnew and his brother, John P. Agnew, were the first to use Lake Superior ore in a blast furnace. While running the old Sharpsville Furnace they procured, at great expense, a few tons of ore for that purpose, which, it is believed, was the first time it had ever been so used. In 1856 Mr. Agnew removed to Erie, where he remained two years, looking after the business affairs of the Sharon Iron Company, at the end of which time he severed his connection with the firm, and went to Parkersburg, W. Va., and engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1862 he went to Mount Savage, Md., and took charge of the rolling mills and furnaces in that place, and returned to Parkersburg about the close of the war, and stayed until the spring of 1869, when he came to Sharpsville. In an acquaintance of over fifty years Mr. Agnew witnessed many seasons of prosperity and adversity, as well as great improvements, in the iron industries of the county. Since 1869 he resided in Sharpsville, having the general supervision of the books and accounts connected with the various iron, coal and other concerns in which the late Gen. Pierce was interested, and in the capacity of secretary and treasurer of the Sharpsville Railroad Company. The business of the Pierce estate was closed in 1881, and notwithstanding its extensive and varied character, and the immense amount of labor involved, under Mr. Agnew's wise management, and comprehensive acquaintance with the affairs thereof, it was settled in a comparatively speedy and satisfactory manner to all concerned. In politics Mr. Agnew was a Republican, but never took an active part in any of the campaigns of the party. In 1873, just before the borough of Sharpsville was formed, he was elected a justice of the peace, but could not devote much time to the affairs of the office, though he did considerable work in drawing up deeds, legal documents, etc. In religion Mr. Agnew always took an active and earnest part, being a leading member of the Presbyterian Church. He was elected an elder of the Fourth Street Church in Wheeling, and was honored with that position in the church of his choice wherever he resided. He was prominent in organizing the church here, and lived to see a very neat edifice erected and dedicated but a short time before his death, toward the building of which he contributed liberally. Mr. Agnew was married in Pittsburgh, December 29, 1829, to Miss Eliza C. Lightner, Rev. Francis Herron, D. D., performing the ceremony. The deceased left two children: Charles E. and Mary. His widow died February 6, 1888, a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. Her four oldest children also are dead. Their names were John L., Theodore P., William H. and David L. John L. has one son, J. Ford, who lives in St. Louis, Mo.; Theodore P. has one daughter, Nellie, who lives with her mother at Fredericksburg, Md.

PHILIP J. BARTLESON was born in Campbell County, Ky., October 20, 1837. In 1840 his father moved to Wheeling, Va., where he purchased, in connection with James E. Wharton, the Daily Times and Gazette, a Whig journal, in which office the subject of this sketch learned the printer's trade. At that time this was the best printing office in the State outside of Richmond, having six presses in the jobbing department, with bindery, etc. Mr. Bartleson had three brothers, Charles, Frederick and William, Charles and Frederick being older and William younger. The two first named also learned the printer's trade. Charles started with the "forty-niners" to California, but died on the way from illness contracted on shipboard. Frederick became a lawyer, and settled in Joliet, Ill., and was, during the war, colonel of the One Hundredth Illinois Infantry. He was killed at the battle of Kenesaw Mountain. William was a private in the Sixty-ninth New York Infantry, and was killed in the Wilderness. In 1858 Mr. Bartleson went to Waynesburg, Greene Co., Penn., with his father, where they published the Republican. In 1861 Mr. Bartleson was married to Miss Margaret, daughter of Jesse Rinehart, Esq., of Waynesburg, and moved to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was employed on the Times. In 1866 he moved to Pittsburgh, and was engaged on the Gazette, where he remained until 1869, when he moved to Greenville, this county, and became a silent partner of Jacob Miller in the publication of the Argus, but withdrew just before the sale of the paper to W. F. Chalfant. In August, 1871, he assumed the editorship and management of the Advertiser, and has been in charge of the paper since. In politics Mr. Bartleson is a conservative Republican. He has never held an office, with the exception of school director of Sharpsville, which position he is now holding, serving his twelfth year, or fourth successive term.

REV. SAMUEL L. BOSTON was born November 8, 1859, near Mercer. He is the son of Adam Boston, deceased, and Christena (Crill) Boston. His early life was spent on the farm of his father, except only the time spent at school. Beginning his higher studies under Dr. I. C. Ketler, at Grove City, he graduated in the academy in 1878, and thence he pursued his collegiate studies at Wooster, Ohio, where he graduated in June, 1883. In the fall of 1883 he entered his theological course at the Western Theological Seminary of Allegheny City, where he graduated in May, 1886. His first year after leaving the seminary was spent in supplying the churches of Cool Spring and Fredonia, in his native county. During this year he enjoyed a great outpouring of the Spirit on his work, and received about 100 members into the two churches. In July, 1887, he received a call to the Presbyterian Church of Sharpville, which he accepted, and he is now settled pastor of that church, being ordained and installed at that place in September, 1887. In 1886, July 29, Rev. Boston was married to Jennie P. Keifer, of Allegheny City, and a graduate of Curry Musical Conservatory. Mrs. Boston was the daughter of A. S. and Maggie (Barclay) Keifer. Rev. Boston and wife are the possessors of one infant son, whom they have named John Keifer Boston.

REV. THOMAS J. CLARK, pastor of St. Bartholomew Church, is a son of Patrick and Catherine (Hughes) Clark, natives of Ireland, who immigrated to this country in 1850, and settled in Silver Lake Township, Susquehanna Co., Penn., where our subject was born in 1854. His early life was spent upon the homestead farm, and his primary education was received at the common schools. He afterward entered the commercial college of Binghamton, N. Y., from which he graduated in September, 1871. He then entered St. Bonaventure College, in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and was ordained priest December 28, 1879, by the Rt. Rev. Tobias Mullen, of Erie. He was then appointed assistant pastor at Ridgeway, Elk Co. Penn., where he remained four months, and was next assistant pastor at Kersey, Penn., where he remained nine months, and was then appointed assistant at Bradford, McKean Co., Penn. He was afterward appointed to take charge of the parish located at Petroleum Centre, Venango Co., Penn., where he remained five years. October 1, 1885, he became pastor of his present parish, and August 16, 1886, his church was destroyed by fire. He has since rebuilt the present substantial brick edifice, which is entirely clear of debt. In connection with his Sharpville charge Father Clark's pastoral duties include the missions located at Neshannock and Wheatland.

GEORGE D. DEVITT, superintendent of Perkins & Co.'s blast furnace, is a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Dean) Devitt, natives of Lincoln County, Canada, where our subject was born in 1844. He received his education at the public schools, and at the age of fifteen commenced his business career as a clerk in the store of Henry Dilts, of Wellandport, Canada, with whom he remained for six years. He then engaged with his father as superintendent of his saw-mill. In 1866 he came to Sharon, Penn., and engaged with Runser, Carver & Trout as superintendent of their planing-mill, where he remained till 1869, when he located at Jamestown, Penn., and engaged in the planing-mill business for himself. In 1880 he removed to Sharpville and engaged with Perkins & Co. as book-keeper, which position he filled for four years, when he was placed in his present position as superintendent. Our subject was married in December, 1873, to Miss Mary W., daughter of John S. King, of Sharon, Penn., and by this union they have born to them two children: Carrie E. and John K. Mr. Devitt is a member of F. & A. M., Lodge 424, of Jamestown, Penn., also of the A. O. U. W., Lodge No. 17, of Sharpville, Penn., and is a member of the Baptist Church.

G. M. DULL, millwright, was born in Centre County, Penn., September 18, 1829, and is a son of George and Mary C. (Weaver) Dull, who were married February 19, 1816. Six children were born to them: Elizabeth A., wife of A. T. Watson; Wilhelm A., John B., deceased; Margaret S., wife of Eli Woods; Hannah W., deceased, and George M. Our subject's educational advantages were very limited. He commenced work in a woolen factory at the age of twelve, where he remained for six years. He then learned the wagon-making trade, which he followed until 1862. In August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company H, One Hundred and Fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, which was assigned to the Fourteenth Army Corps, and participated in all the battles in which his regiment and corps were engaged, and Sherman's famous march to the sea. He went through the war without receiving a wound, and was mustered out as orderly sergeant June 9, 1865. After coming home from the army he removed to Clarksville, Mercer County, and started a carriage factory under the firm name of G. M. Dull & Co., which he conducted a few years. Subsequently he purchased the interest of the silent partner, William Dickson, and continued that business until 1871, when he removed to Sharpsville, and engaged in the same business with Thomas Eagan, under the firm name of Dull & Eagan, which they carried on until 1874. He then sold his interest to Daniel Eagan, and since that time has principally been engaged in the millwright business, which business he is now following. Our subject was married on the 4th of July, 1860, to Hannah, daughter of William and Mable Livingston. Two children were born to them: Mary E., wife of Frank Fitch, Hartford, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and William Sherman. Our subject is a staunch Republican, and is a member of the I. O. O. F. and R. T. of T., being a strong advocate of temperance.

SAMUEL DUNHAM, merchant, is a son of George and Jane (Hodge) Dunham. The grandfather of our subject, Jonathan Dunham, who married Mary Clark, was a native of New Jersey, who came to Mercer County at an early date and took up a large tract of land, which was located where the borough of Sharpsville now stands. He died in 1856. He had eleven children: Justus, Margaret, who married Henry Dunlap; George, Nancy, Mrs. William Moyer; Experience, Mrs. Thomas Ferguson; Clark, Azariah, Phenias, Rachel, Mrs. Robert Jackson; James, who died in 1846; Mary, Mrs. Daniel Groscost, and George, the father of our subject, whose family consisted of seven children: Jonathan, deceased, who served three years in the Tenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry; Robert, who died from the effect of a wound received in the war, and was a member of the Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers; Samuel, Mary, deceased; George, deceased; Jane and Phenias. George died in 1871, and his wife in 1878. Samuel, our subject, was born in 1838, and was reared and educated in Pymatuning Township. His first employment was as a clerk for his uncle, Samuel Hodge, a merchant of Sharpsville. Subsequently he was employed by his father in stone quarrying and stone cutting. On August 10, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years, participating in all the engagements from Yorktown to the engagement at Weldon Railroad, which included Fair Oaks, Seven Days' Fight, second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Mine Run, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Cold Harbor and Petersburg. In 1865 he engaged in the grocery business in Sharpsville, which he now conducts. Our subject was married in 1859 to Miss Hannah, daughter of William Carnes, of Pymatuning Township, and by this marriage they have seven children: Victor H., William G., Gertrude, Mertie, Minnie, Cora and Bessie. Mr. Dunham was appointed postmaster of Sharpsville in 1869, which office he held until 1885. He is also connected with the G. A. R., Post No. 234, of Sharpsville, a member of the I. O. O. F., No. 739, and the K. of P., Lodge No. 163, both of Sharpsville. Politically Mr. Dunham is a Republican.

THEODORE M. FORD is a son of Darius and Samantha (Butler) Ford. He was born April 5, 1830, in Chantauqua County, N. Y., and received his education in the common schools of his native county. In 1848 he entered the employ of Tomlinson & Co., grocery and commission dealers, of Erie, Penn., where he remained for two years. From Erie he went in the winter of 1850-51 to Aspinwall (now Colon), as receiving clerk for the Panama Railroad, then just building, and had the honor of unloading from the brig "Tartar" the first locomotive that went onto that road. He then engaged in the lumber business, and conducted it in various localities, in connection with his farming in Chautauqua County, N. Y., and Crawford County, Penn. In 1870 he engaged with the late Gen. James Pierce, at Sharpsville, in his book-keeping department, where he remained until 1874, when he engaged in mercantile business, which he carried on until 1878. In 1882 he received the appointment of auditor for the Sharpsville Railroad, which position he filled until 1886. In that year he entered the employ of Jonas J. Pierce, as book-keeper, where he remained until 1887. In 1887, in connection with C. E. Agnew and W. A. Lynch, they formed the company known as Agnew, Lynch & Co., contractors and builders, and dealers in building materials, coal and lumber. In 1858 our subject was married to Miss Phebe, daughter of John Rodgers, of Silver Creek Township, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and by this marriage they have three children: Fannie F., wife of C. B. Allen; Kate L. and Edith. Our subject is a member of the F. & A. M., Sharpsville Lodge No. 517, Royal Arch Chapter 244 of Sharon; also of the R. T. of T. Council, No. 27, of Sharpsville. Mr. Ford is a member of the Universalist Church of Sharpsville, filling the office of clerk and treasurer. In politics he is a Republican.

JOHN D. HADLEY, agent for fire, life and accident insurance, is the second son of David and Jane (Robinson) Hadley, of Hadley Station. He was born in Columbiana County, Ohio, May 25, 1832, and came to Mercer County with his parents in 1843. In 1850 he started in life by learning the blacksmith's trade, which occupation he followed for seventeen years, at Hadley and elsewhere. In 1867 he moved to Hubbard, Ohio, where he worked at his trade for one year, and then engaged in the drug business, and afterward in the wholesale and retail feed business. In 1873 he located at Sharpsville, and established a flour and feed store, which he conducted for three years, and engaged in the grocery business. His store was burned in June, 1887, and since that time he has followed his present insurance business. March 3, 1853, he married Miss Mary, daughter of John and Ruth McClure, of Clarks Mills. She died April 12, 1865, leaving five children, one of whom married John McElwain, and died in January, 1874. The living children are Loretta, wife of William H. Bell, of Youngstown, Ohio; Ruth E., wife of Deloss Longstreet, of Hadley, and have Hiram, Mary, Bessie, Albert; David M., engaged in the livery business at Sharpsville, married Constance Holstein, of Sharpsville; John B., of the firm of Hadley & Maxwell, grocers, etc., Sharpsville, married Alice Ashton, of Sharon. Our subject was again married in 1866 to Lucy A., daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth McKey, of Sandy Creek Township. The children of this union are Jane E., wife of R. G. Maxwell, of Sharpsville, and has one child, Helen; W. C., station agent at Sharpsville for the Sharpsville Railroad Company, married Miss Catherine, daughter of Rut Collins, of West Middlesex; George G., brakeman on the Sharpsville Railroad; Alice S. and Clara G. Mr. Hadley has held several borough offices, and is now serving as school director. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., No. 71, of Sharpsville, of the E. A. U., No. 359, and of the Protected Home Circle, No. 3, of Sharpsville. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is an elder. He is a strong temperance advocate, and votes the Prohibition ticket.

THOMAS O. HAZEN, justice of the peace, real estate and insurance agent and dealer in wall and window shades, is a son of Ziba and Milcah (Perrine) Hazen, who are natives of Hickory and Worth Townships, respectively. Nathaniel Hazen, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Massachusetts, and was one of the early settlers of Mercer County. Our subject was born in Hickory Township in 1842, and was reared and educated in the common schools of the same township, and graded schools of Sharon, Penn. He learned the painter's trade, which he followed in the summer, and taught school in the winter for twelve years. In 1872 he engaged in the lumber business in Sharpsville, which he carried on for six years. In 1878 he engaged in his present business, as a dealer in wall paper and window shades, and the same year was elected justice of the peace, which office he continues to fill. Mr. Hazen also represents the following insurance companies as their agent for this locality: Phoenix, of Hartford, Conn., Reading, of Reading, Penn., and the Dwelling House Insurance Co., of Boston, Mass. In politics our subject is a Republican. He was married in 1865 to Miss A. V. McDowell, daughter of Josiah McDowell, of Crawford County, Penn., who died in 1869, leaving one son, Elton E., who died in 1872. Mr. Hazen's second wife was Miss Eva McDowell, sister of his first wife, and by this marriage they have one child, Birdie May. Our subject is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 739, of Sharpsville, Lodge A. O. U. W. No. 71 of Sharpsville, and the E. A. U. Union, No. 359, of Sharpsville. He is also a member of the First Universalist Church of Sharpsville, and rung the first Universalist Church bell that was ever rung in Mercer County. Mr. Hazen is of Scotch and Welsh descent.

SAMUEL W. HAZEN, publisher of the Sharpsville Times, is a son of A. B. Hazen, and was born in Hickory Township in 1863. He received his education in the public schools of Sharpsville, and was engaged in teaching for some years, when he connected himself with M. W. Thompson in the establishing of the Sharpsville Times. Our subject is a Republican in politics and a progressive citizen, always ready to advance by his personal interest any movement of a public nature.

WILLIAM HOFIUS, the third son of George Hofius, was born May 12, 1806, in Hickory Township, where he spent the early years of his life on the homestead farm, and was engaged in farming. About 1847-48 he removed to Jackson County, Iowa, where he now resides. He married Martha, daughter of Thomas Dugan, of Trumbull County, Ohio, who died in 1841, leaving seven children: Seth, Azariah, Jonathan, Hulda, Mrs. Bently, of Iowa; Marilda, wife of John Damond, of Iowa; Mary A., Martha, Mrs. Melvin J. Thompson. His second wife was Mrs. Vaughn, and by this marriage they have one child, George.

Seth, the eldest son of William, was born in May, 1829, in Hickory Township, where he was reared and educated. In 1846 he entered the employ of Himrod & Vincent, subsequently working at the different furnaces located in Clarion and Venango Counties, Penn., Youngstown, Ohio, and West Middlesex, Penn. In 1858 he removed to Mineral Ridge and took charge of the works at that place for James Wood & Warner. He subsequently was engaged as superintendent for James Wood, Sons & Co., of Wheatland. He also had charge of the Mount Hickory Iron Co. works at Sharpsville. He then removed to Buffalo, N. Y., and took charge of the Buffalo Iron & Nail Co.'s works. In 1882 he located in Ohio, and engaged in farming, where his family now resides. In 1886 he was placed in charge of the Spearman Iron Furnace at Sharpsville, which position he now fills. Our subject was married in 1850 to Miss Elizabeth Maxwell, of West Middlesex, Penn., and by this union they have five children: William D., Lewis W., Frank, Annie J., wife of Henry Sibes, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Harriet, wife of William Fair, of the same city. Mrs. Hofius died in 1862, and our subject was again married in 1867 to Miss Margaret McGowan, of Campfield, Ohio, and by this marriage they have five children: Walter, Charley, Blanch, Seth and James.

William D. Hofius, the eldest son of Seth, was born September 25, 1852, at West Middlesex. He was reared and educated at Mineral Ridge, Ohio, Wheatland and Sharpsville. At the age of twenty he engaged in the iron business as furnaceman, and followed that business as an occupation until 1883, when he engaged in the foundry and machine business with Charles F. Eldridge, under the firm name of Hofius & Eldridge, located at Sharpsville. He is also operating the Grafton Furnace at Leetonia, Ohio, under the name of McKeefrey & Hofius. Mr. Hofius was married in 1882 to Miss Emma K., daughter of Louis Laux, of Baltimore, Md. Our subject is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge No. 250, Norman Chapter 244 and Commandery No. 50, of Sharon.

HENRY KAUFMAN, livery, is a son of Jacob and Catherine (Speigelmeyer) Kaufman. Our subject was born in Delaware Township, December 12, 1856. He received his education at the public schools of his township. He was engaged in farming on the homestead until 1880, when he located at Mercer and engaged in the butcher business. In 1881 he located at Sharpsville and engaged in his present business. Our subject was married in October, 1883, to Miss Ella, daughter of John Shell, of New Hamburg. Mrs. Kaufman died in 1884, leaving one son, Harley A., who died in 1884. Our subject married for his second wife, in 1887, Miss Maggie, daughter of Joshua Reichard, of New Hamburg, Mercer Co., Penn., and by this marriage they have one daughter, Bertha L. Politically Mr. Kaufman is a Democrat.

GEORGE D. KELLY, of Pierce, Kelly & Co., iron manufacturers, was born in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1843. His parents are Moses and Jane M. (Howe) Kelly. His father was a native of Livingston County, N. Y., and his mother of New Haven, Conn. Our subject received his education in the select schools of Cleveland, Ohio. At the age of seventeen he was employed as a clerk by the Cuyahoga Furnace Co., of Cleveland, where he remained for two years. He then entered the employ of the late Gen. James Pierce, at the Sharpsville Furnace, as a clerk, remaining in that capacity until 1870, when he entered into co-partnership with James, Jonas J. and Wallace Pierce as manufacturers of iron at the Douglas Furnace. He was united in marriage, in 1870, to Miss Kate, daughter of Calvin C. Wick, of Ashton, Ohio, and by this marriage they have four living children: Clara M., George W., Douglas and Catherine. Mr. Kelly has been identified with the public offices of Sharpsville, filling the office of burgess in 1880-81, also as a member of the council for a number of years. In politics he is independent, but of Republican proclivities.

WILLIS W. KITCH, postmaster and hardware dealer, is a son of John M. and Elizabeth (McCleery) Kitch, both natives of Mercer County. The mother of our subject is the daughter of Alexander McCleery, one of the pioneer settlers of Mercer County. Mr. Kitch was born in Perry Township, and received his education in the public schools. At the age of sixteen he entered the employ of the late Gen. James Pierce as a clerk in his store at Mount Hickory. In 1872 he located at Sharpsville, and entered the employ of J. W. Mick & Co., hardware dealers, as a clerk. On the death of Mr. Mick, which occurred in 1875, he formed a co-partnership under the firm name of Walter Pierce & Co., as dealers in hardware, which continued until December 31, 1883, when the present firm of Kitch & Mower was organized. Our subject was appointed postmaster November 23, 1885. He was married in 1875 to Miss E., daughter of Hiram and Susan (Henry) Phelps, and by this union they have two children: Walter (born in 1887) and Frances (in 1886). Mr. Kitch is a Democrat, and belongs to the F. & A. M., Lodge 517, of Sharpsville, Norman Chapter, No. 250, and Rebecca Commandery, No. 50, of Sharon.

JAMES R. LYTLE, engineer, is a son of Hugh and Elizabeth (Robinson) Lytle. The father of our subject settled in Shenango Township in 1813, was a farmer by occupation, and died in 1881, and his wife in 1838. He married for his second wife Sarah Thompson, of Shenango Township, who survives him, and lives in Greenfield. Our subject was the only child, and was born in 1838, in Shenango Township, where he was reared, receiving his education in the common schools of that township, and the private schools of West Middlesex. Mr. Lytle was engaged in farming until 1864. He then engaged as an engineer, and was located at Charleston, Jefferson Township, where he remained until 1872, when he located at Sharpsville, and has been employed at the different furnaces of this place. Mr. Lytle is now located at the Claire Furnace as engineer. When Sharpsville was first incorporated as a borough Mr. Lytle was elected a member of the school board, and was its secretary for three years. In 1881 he was elected justice of the peace, and served one term of five years. He was married in 1860 to Miss Mary J., daughter of Robert Wallace, of Lackawannock Township, and by this marriage they have one son, Robert K., who is an engineer at Claire Furnace. Our subject is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge 517, of Sharpsville, and Norman Chapter 244, Rebecca Commandery No. 50, of Sharon, Penn. He is also a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Sharpsville, and has filled the offices of steward and class leader for ten years. In politics he is a Democrat.

JAMES C. McDOWELL, prop. of livery stable, son of James H. and Fanny F. (Byerly) McDowell, was born September 13, 1848, in Jefferson Township; was reared on the homestead farm; received his early education at the common schools of the township; completed his education at New Brighton College, and after graduating engaged in farming until 1883, when he located at Sharpsville, and engaged in the livery business. Our subject was married in 1868 to Miss Sarah, daughter of Branton Holstein, of Mercer. By this union they have three children: Charles, Constance and Branton. In 1866 Mr. McDowell was elected burgess of Sharpsville, and re-elected in 1887. Our subject is a member of the A. O. U. W., No. 127, of Sharpsville, also of the K. of P.

ANDREW J. NICKLE, superintendent of Sharpsville Furnace, is a son of Andrew and Sarah A. (Hoffman) Nickle, of Philadelphia, Penn. Our subject was born in 1835, in Venango County, Penn.; was reared and educated in Clarion County, and when a young man found employment at different furnaces, where he learned the business of manufacturing iron. In 1862 he was employed by the late Gen. James Pierce, and in 1875 engaged with Pierce, Kelly & Co., as foundryman, where he remained until 1887, when he took charge of the Sharpsville Furnace. Our subject was married in 1857 to Miss Nancy J. Barnacle, of Venango County, Penn., and by this union they have seven children: Philip H., Sarah, Ann, Mrs. Henry Myers (of Sharpsville, Penn), Andrew Jackson, William A. (died in 1871), Martin V., Stanceless C. and Charles C. Our subject is a member of the United Brethren Church of Sharpsville, and politically is a Democrat.

GEN. JAMES PIERCE (deceased).—The history of those who, under adverse circumstances, have, by their own unaided efforts and native force of character, achieved success in any department of human enterprise, is always interesting, and should be especially so to young men about to engage in the active duties of life, as examples for their imitation. No man has ever lived in the Shenango Valley who is more worthy of a place in the pages of history than he whose name stands at the head of this biography. James Pierce was born in Swanzey, Cheshire Co., N. H., on the 24th day of September, 1810, and remained with his father, whose name also was James, working on the farm until he was twenty-one years of age, receiving in the meantime such limited education as country schools of that period afforded. He then left the parental roof and began working by the month at the lumber business, at which employment he continued about two years, and then commenced the same business on his own account, in the manufacture of shooks for sugar hogsheads, conveying them to market down the Connecticut River. He was married January 1, 1839, to Miss Chloe Holbrook, a native of New Hampshire, born March 20, 1816. Immediately after his marriage, in connection with the lumber business he added the occupation of a farmer. He and a cousin, Jervis Bates, came to Erie County, Penn., in 1844, bringing with them cotton and woolen cloth, which they disposed of and turned the proceeds into horses, which they took back with them when they returned home. They made the journey out with wagons and sleighs. Mr. Pierce came to Erie County again, in December of the same year, and stayed all winter. This time he was engaged in selling clocks through Erie and Crawford Counties. There being very little money in this section at that time, his accumulations, which were about $1,000, consisted wholly of Beaver & Erie Canal Bonds. Being unable to obtain the interest on the bonds at Erie, he disposed of them for a lot of stoves. Possessing an enterprising spirit, and desiring a wider field for the display of his energies, he sold his property in New Hampshire, and in the year 1845 removed with his young family to Cranesville, Erie Co., Penn., where he remained until the spring of 1847, when he located at Clarksville, Mercer County.

The first business enterprise in which he engaged here was mining and shipping coal in the vicinity of Clarksville, in the year 1847. Coal then found its market in Erie, and was transported to that point via the Beaver & Erie Canal, the business being then in its infancy in the Shenango Valley. This first adventure was only moderately successful; the mine being limited in extent, soon became exhausted. He then opened new mines near to his late residence, Mount Hickory, in Hickory Township. These proved very valuable, and here was laid the foundation of his subsequent eminently successful business career. To convey the coal from these mines he constructed a tram-road, operated by horse-power, which was regarded at that time as a wonderful achievement of individual enterprise, and which answered a most valuable purpose until it was superseded by the Erie & Pittsburgh and the Sharpsville & Oakland Railroads. In the construction of both these roads he took a most active interest. In the former he was a large stockholder and a director; in the latter the principal stockholder and its president and general manager from the beginning to his death. These roads have performed an indispensable part in the development of iron, coal and other industries of the country through which they pass, and to the energy and public spirit of Mr. Pierce is the community indebted for the existence and beneficial results of these improvements. Among the first to engage in the coal business in Mercer County, so did he continue until the day of his death to be among the most prominent and successful operators, being connected with extensive mines both in Mercer and Lawrence Counties.

His connection with the furnace business commenced in the year 1859. Becoming the proprietor of the Sharpsville Furnace, he put the same in blast that year, and started to work on the Jackson iron ore of Lake Superior, and it was then that the principal revival of the blast furnaces of the Shenango and Mahoning Valleys took place, the successful working of the Jackson ore in the Sharpsville furnace calling the attention of the furnace men to Lake Superior ores for the manufacture of a distinctive red short iron. In 1868, in connection with William L. Scott, of Erie, the Mount Hickory Furnaces (two stacks) were erected, and more recently, in company with two of his sons (Jonas J. and Wallace) and George D. Kelly, the Douglas Furnaces (two stacks) were built. Another son, Walter, is also a partner in the Spearman Iron Works, consisting of two blast furnaces. He was thus identified with seven out of nine furnaces located at Sharpsville, all of which are first-class establishments of their kind. He had also large investments in iron mines at Lake Superior, which, however, are only partially developed. These comprise the mining, manufacturing and railroad enterprises with which he was connected, but do not by any means include the whole of his business operations. He was president and principal owner of the Iron Banking Company, of Sharpsville, and a stockholder in the Sharon Banking Company. His farming operations were conducted on a very extensive scale, and with more science and system than is generally employed. Mount Hickory is a model farm. The mansion and out-buildings are equal to any in the county, and perhaps not surpassed by any of their kind in Western Pennsylvania. The land is in the highest state of cultivation, abounding in all the fruits suitable to this latitude, and, in short, with everything to make it a most pleasant and desirable residence. His extensive herd of thoroughbred cattle was greatly admired by farmers and stock breeders. That he had very superior stock is evidenced by the many premiums awarded him at the North Western Pennsylvania Fair and elsewhere.

To design and successfully accomplish these varied and extensive operations suggests the possession of no ordinary business capacity. Nature had, indeed, been kind, endowing him with large mental powers, but with a physical organization fitted for the endurance of almost any amount of labor. It might be supposed that, in the midst of these numerous and pressing business cares, he would be indifferent to the welfare of the community in which he dwelt. The contrary was the case, however, and every object designed to benefit society met his cordial approbation and co-operation. He always manifested a deep interest in the cause of education, devoting much personal attention, as a director for a number of years, to the common schools, and in liberal contributions in lands and money for the erection of school-houses, aside from the large amount of taxes paid by him annually for their support. A noted instance of his liberality is seen in the contribution of $10,000, made in the name of his wife, toward endowing the female professorship in Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio, to be called the "Chloe Pierce" professorship. This is a new institution of learning, of which he was one of the trustees, and is in a very prosperous condition. Several of the churches in Sharpsville also received generous donations from his hands, while public and private enterprises have been greatly aided and fostered through his liberality.

Gen. Pierce died at his residence, Mount Hickory Farm, on Wednesday morning, December 2, 1874, after an illness of only a few days' duration, caused by a fall a week previous, from the effects of which he gradually sank into the sleep of death. He was a Universalist in religious belief, and it was through his influence the first Universalist organization was effected in the county at Sharpsville. His wife also was a Universalist, and the present financial prosperity of the Sharpsville Society is largely due to her liberality. Gen. Pierce left a widow and five grown sons to mourn his unexpected decease. The former survived him nearly twelve years, and died August 16, 1886, aged seventy years. Jonas J., the eldest son, was born September 23, 1839, and was married April 6, 1865, to Miss Kate Pritzl, of Baltimore, Md., who has borne him five children: Scott, James A., Chloe H., Jonas and Frederick P. Walter and Wallace (twins) were born October 19, 1842; the former was married June 28, 1871, to Miss Alice Mower, of Greenville, Penn., who died October 11, 1884, leaving three daughters: Alice, Mary and Kate; Wallace is unmarried. Frank was born November 10, 1852, and married, October 21, 1880, Miss Minnie Andrews, of Sharpsville, Penn., who has borne him two sons: Frank W. and Thomas A. James B. was born September 2, 1856, and married, June 17, 1880, Miss Albertine Pomplitz, of Baltimore, Md., and has two daughters: Louesa and Pauline. These gentlemen are all engaged in large business enterprises, and are among the most prominent and best known citizens of this portion of the State.

Gen. Pierce was one of the leading members of the Democratic party in Northwestern Pennsylvania, and always took a deep interest in its success, favoring legislation for the advancement of the general interests of the State. He was once the Democratic candidate for the Legislature, and, though defeated, polled a much larger vote than the full strength of his party. Few men in the Shenango Valley were so widely known and respected by the people in every walk of life, and his death was a severe loss to the community in which he had spent so many years of a successful business career. His kindnesses passed from his hand not as credits to be returned with use, but as souvenirs sacred to his memory, and as such will be cherished in perpetual remembrance. His memory will long be retained in the hearts of those whom he has befriended and assisted by counsel, advice and pecuniary aid, and among them can be numbered many poor men who have been brought to a prosperous condition, if not to affluence and wealth. The strict rule of rectitude was the magnet by which he moved, and the guide-star of his business life, while indomitable will, enterprise and perseverance were the three leading traits of his character.

M. W. THOMPSON, publisher of the Sharpsville Times, is a son of Samuel Thompson, of Pymatuning Township. Our subject was born in 1862 in Hickory Township. He received his education in the public schools of Sharpsville, in which place he was reared. Mr. Thompson began the printing business in 1877, serving his time in the office of the Sharpsville Advertiser. Our subject has been employed upon many of the leading journals of the present day, including the New York World, Cincinnati Enquirer, Cleveland Leader and Erie Dispatch. In 1887, in connection with Samuel W. Hazen, he established the Sharpsville Times. In politics he is an ardent supporter of the Republican party.

DR. JOHN H. TWITMYER, son of Emanuel and Lucy (Gebhart) Twitmyer, was born April 26, 1844, at Zion, Centre Co., Penn. He received his early education at the common schools of his native town, subsequently entered Dickenson Seminary at Williamsport, and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, March 12, 1872. His first location in Mercer County was at Transfer in 1872. In the spring of 1873 he located at Sharpsville, where he has since continued the practice of his profession. Our subject was married, June 1, 1875, to Miss Donna, daughter of Lewis Hull, and by this marriage they have one daughter, Alma. The Doctor is a member of the A. O. U. W., Lodge No. 27, of Sharpsville, also a member of the R. T. of T., of Sharon, and a member of the Reformed Church of Sharpsville.

DR. CHARLES L. WILLIAMS was born in 1851, at Sharon, Penn., a son of Lester and Ann E. (Moore) Williams. His early education was received in the public schools of Sharon. He commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Hoyt, of Sharon, and Dr. Hurlbert, of Youngstown, Ohio, and was graduated from the Homœopathic Hospital College of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1879. He then commenced the practice of medicine with Dr. Hoyt, of Sharon, Penn. In 1880 he located at Sharpsville, Penn., where he has continued in practice. He married, November 17, 1881, Miss Chlœ, daughter of David and Jane D. Stewart, of Sharpsville, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this borough.

MATTHIAS R. ZAHNISER is a son of David and Rachel (Tice) Zahniser. The grandfather, Matthias Zahniser, was one of Mercer County's early settlers. Our subject was born May 12, 1844, in Jefferson Township. His early life was spent on the home farm, receiving such education as the township schools afforded. At the age of eighteen he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Reserves, and participated in all the engagements from the battle of the Wilderness to Spottsylvania, where he suffered the loss of his right leg from a gun-shot wound. After returning from the army he engaged in the mercantile business at Big Bend, Jefferson Township, where he remained for three years. In 1871 he located in Sharpsville, was elected constable for that borough and served three years. In 1877, in connection with his brother, H. N. Zahniser, he engaged in the boot and shoe business. In 1880 his brother sold his interest to J. L. Filman, and in 1882 our subject sold his interest, also, to Mr. Filman, and until May of the present year, was in his employ. Our subject is now in charge of the boot and shoe department of J. P. Hughes' mercantile business. Mr. Zahniser was married in 1871 to Miss Lottie, daughter of James Hunter, of Pymatuning Township, and by this union they have two children: Charley W. and Nellie D. Our subject was the Democratic candidate for member of the Legislature in 1884. He is a member of the G. A. R., Sharpsville Post No. 234, and one of the past commanders. He also belongs to the K. of L. Politically he is a Democrat, but voted for Harrison and Morton.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SHENANGO AND HICKORY.

SHENANGO TOWNSHIP.

WILLIAM ANDERSON, farmer, post-office New Bedford, Penn., is a son of John and grandson of William Anderson, a pioneer of Mercer County, who immigrated to this county in company with his wife, Betsey (Adams) Anderson, and one child, the father of our subject. About 1796 John Anderson, a brother, followed and located a short distance from his brother William. He was known as "Agent John Anderson," acting in that capacity for Dr. Nathaniel Bedford, of Pittsburgh, who owned large tracts of land in this and Lawrence Counties. He married Jane McFarland, and had six children, all of whom are dead, the last survivor, William R., dying on the old homestead June 27, 1888, aged seventy. He died in 1826, leaving an estate of 800 acres. William Anderson, the grandfather of our subject, and his son John, were progressive men of their day. They erected on their farm one of the first grist-mills built in this county, and were also extensively engaged in the distilling business. John served with the army in the War of 1812. He married Ellen, daughter of William Crawford, of Mercer County, and by this marriage was the father of eleven children: William, Adam, deceased; James, deceased; David, Hiram, Robert, deceased; Alexander, of Fairview Township, Mercer County; Samuel, deceased; Betsey, wife of Frederick Breede, of Crawford County, Penn.; Ellen J., deceased, and Mary E., deceased. He married for his second wife Eliza, daughter of John and Jane (McFarland) Anderson, by whom he had four children: Lemuel, deceased; Julia, wife of James Keer, of Crawford County, Penn.; John, and Louisa, deceased. He died in 1860 at the age of sixty-three. His father died in 1859 at the age of ninety-three. William was the eldest son, and was born in 1817 on the old homestead, and was educated in the common schools. He was apprenticed to the carpenter's trade, which business he followed for some ten years, then engaged in farming upon a part of the homestead, and has since followed farming. He married, in 1851, Miss Mary A., daughter of David and Kate (Gundy) Crawford, and they have one child, David W.

DAVID C. ANDERSON, farmer, post-office New Bedford, Penn., is the third son of John and Ellen (Crawford) Anderson. His father's family is mentioned in the sketch of William Anderson. He was born on the homestead May 4, 1825, where he resided until 1851, when he purchased his present home. He married, March 20, 1851, Miss Rebecca J. Robinson, daughter of Andrew and Betsy (Maxwell) Robinson, of Ohio. She died May 4, 1874, leaving four children: John A., Lizzie, Mrs. Irwin Caldwell; William F. and David Lawrence. Mr. Anderson married for his second wife Eletha Gundy, daughter of John P. and Sarah (Marstler) Gundy, April 7, 1877. He has always been engaged in farming, and excepting four years' residence in Ohio has resided upon his place since 1851. He has been connected with the schools of his township as director. He is a member of the New Bedford Presbyterian Church, which was built in 1801, his grandfather and father having aided largely by their means and influence in its erection.

SAMUEL G. BELL, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a descendant of William Bell, who settled upon the place now owned by our subject. His son Samuel was the grandfather of our subject, and was a prominent business man of his day. He was born in Washington County, Penn., in 1795, and moved from there with his parents while yet a child. He was engaged in the insurance business, and represented the North American Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, for forty-four years. He married Nancy Ewing, a daughter of Irish parents, and died in 1884 at the age of eighty-eight years. He was the father of six children: William, Woods, Margaret, Mrs. Clark; Eliza, Mrs. Clinger; Rebecca, Mrs. Miles, and Jane, Mrs. Crossman. William, the father of our subject, was born in 1816, and married Mary Shirk, of German and Irish descent. Her parents immigrated to this country and settled in Centre County, Penn. She had eight children: Walter J., Thomas W., Theresa, Mrs. William Riblet; Nancy E., Mrs. Dr. Stevenson, of Hubbard, Ohio; Mattie A., Florence M., Mrs. John E. Phillips; Nettie J., Mrs. Marcus Miller, and our subject, Samuel G., who was born in 1848. He was educated in the public schools of the township, and has been engaged in farming since he arrived at manhood. He has filled the office of tax collector for his township.

JOHN C. BELL, farmer and agent for the American Road Machine, is a son of William S. and Margaret (Irwin) Bell. The mother of our subject was a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and the father a native of Cumberland County, who settled where Mr. Bell now resides in 1826. He was born in 1805, and died in 1879, his wife having died in 1873. They had six children, two of whom are living: Eliza J., Mrs. Benjamin Love, of Lackawannock Township, and our subject, who was born January 29, 1843, and received his education at the common schools of his township. Our subject early engaged in farming in connection with his father, and is now largely engaged in the raising of farm products. In 1886 Mr. Bell connected himself with the American Road Machine Company as its agent, and represents them in Mercer and Lawrence Counties. Our subject has always been active in public matters connected with his township, having filled the position of justice of the peace and all the principal offices of the township. In politics he is a Republican, and for several years he has been an elder in the Presbyterian Church of Neshannock. He married, October 16, 1866, Miss Susan, daughter of Robert and Rebecca Thompson, of Mercer County, and by this union they have four children: Robert Thompson, William Stephenson, Rebecca, Mary and John Mealy.

SAMUEL BUCKWALTER, farmer, is a son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Witwer) Buckwalter, natives of Lancaster County, Penn. The father of our subject, in the fall of 1843, removed with his family from Lancaster County, and settled upon a large tract of land known as the Hezlip property, in Wilmington Township, Mercer County, and in 1852 he removed from there upon the Paup Mills property, in the same township. In 1853 he removed to Grundy County, Ill., where he died in 1872, at the age of seventy-nine, his wife surviving him until July 7, 1882, when she died, aged eighty-two years. They had six sons and three daughters: John, the eldest, and Elizabeth died in this county; Daniel died in Lancaster County, Penn., and David died in Illinois; Benjamin and Michael reside in Illinois; Mary, Mrs. Isaac Showalter, of Illinois; Ann, Mrs. W. E. Weber, of Indiana. Our subject was born November 23, 1827, in Lancaster County, Penn., where he received his early training. Upon the removal of his father to Illinois he purchased his present home, and has since been engaged in general farming. In 1879 he was elected county commissioner, which position he filled for three years. He has always been identified with public affairs connected with his township, filling nearly all the local offices. He married Miss Mattie, daughter of Jacob Bixler, of Shenango Township, and by this marriage they had four children: Benjamin, who married Mary Musselman, and resides in Lancaster County; Abraham, died May 29, 1864; Samuel W. and Nancy J., died in 1864. Samuel W. married Miss Lydia M. Cowden, daughter of I. Cowden, Esq., and resides on the homestead with his father.

JAMES P. BYERS, farmer, post-office Pulaski, Penn., is a son of John and Jane (Porter) Byers, and grandson of William Byers, the first sheriff of Mercer County. The father of our subject was a native of this county, and a farmer by occupation; was active in county affairs; served as commissioner one term, being elected in 1849, and was also justice of the peace for many years. He died in 1851, his wife surviving him till 1871. They had nine children: Isabella, Mrs. Josiah Gibson; William, deceased; J. P., John T., Walter D., Mary J., Mrs. Ebenezer McFarland; Ebenezer, Esther, Ellen, Mrs. Peter West, of Albion, N. Y. Our subject was born in May, 1828, and received his education in the public schools of the township. Mr. Byers enlisted in August, 1861, in Company B, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, his regiment being known as the "Roundheads," being so named from the fact that the members were nearly all descendants of Scotch families, who were followers of Cromwell. Mr. Byers followed the fortunes of his regiment for three years, and participated in the following engagements: Port Royal, Port Royal Ferry, James Island, second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg and Weldon R. R. While in the service Mr. Byers contracted the small-pox, which has resulted in depriving him of his hearing. Our subject is engaged in general farming. He was married February 2, 1857, to Miss Eliza J. McMillin, daughter of Robert and Margaret (Hulse) McMillin, of Beaver County, Penn. By this union they have had eight children, of whom five are living: Ellen F., John P., married Tilla Pomroy, and has two children, Harvey and a daughter; William W., Eliza A. and Hattie B. Mr. Byers is a member of the G. A. R., and a good, enterprising citizen.

WILLIAM BYERS and his wife, Jane (Kincaid) Byers, natives of Adams County, Penn., settled in 1797 near the site of Georgetown, Mercer County. He was born September 6, 1767, and died January 3, 1844, at Pulaski, Lawrence County. He was the first sheriff of Mercer County, and after completing his term of office removed to Pulaski, and in 1834 received the appointment of postmaster, it being the first for that place. He had ten children, of whom three are living: James, of Iowa; Mary, Mrs. Andrew Morrison, of this county, and Ebenezer Wiley, who was born at Pulaski in 1816, and subsequently removed to his present place of residence in Shenango Township. He married, in 1841, Hannah, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Bebout) McClain, of Lackawannock Township, and by this marriage they have had ten children, six of whom are living: Sarah A., Mrs. J. D. Porter, of this township; Addie, Esther, John W. and Carrie, at home, and Maggie, Mrs. J. M. McFarland, of Mercer County. John W. was born at Pulaski in 1856, and was educated in the common schools, completing his education at Wilmington College. He subsequently taught school, and afterward engaged in farming. He was elected, in 1883, justice of the peace for his township, which position he now fills. He married, in 1880, Miss Anna, daughter of James Reddle, of Butler County. They have two children: Wiley and Helen A.

THOMAS CALDWELL, deceased farmer, was born in December, 1806, on the place where he resided till his death, September 3, 1888. His parents, Charles and Isabella (Stitts) Caldwell, removed from Huntingdon County in 1805, and settled in Shenango Township, Mercer Co., Penn., where our subject was born. The grandfather on the paternal side was a native of Ireland, and came to Huntingdon County, Penn., at an early date. The father of Mr. Caldwell died in 1840 and his mother in 1844. They had seven children, all of whom are deceased. He was married in 1830 to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of James Clingan, a native of Ireland. By this marriage they had three children: Robert, who in 1861 enlisted in the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died from wounds received at the battle of Bull Run; John, who lives at home, and Irwin, who married Miss Lizzie, daughter of David Anderson, of this township, and has three children: Robert, Nellie and Josiah. Mr. Caldwell was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, of Deer Creek, having held a continuous membership therein for sixty-one years.

CANON FAMILY.—Among the earliest settlers of Mercer County, Penn., were Thomas and Margaret (Heath) Canon, who came from Philadelphia, Penn., about 1796-97, and located in what is now Hickory Township. He was twice married, and was the father of eleven children: Moses, John, Rachel, Rebecca, Thomas, Ruth, Ross, James, Margaret, Samuel and William, all of whom may be classed as pioneers of the Shenango Valley. Moses was the eldest son of the first marriage, and was born in Philadelphia in 1782, and on reaching manhood married Elizabeth, daughter of George Swase, a pioneer of Mercer County. Six children were born to this union: Rebecca (who married Henry Coryea), Mary (who married James Dunlap), John, Eliza (who became the wife of John Livingston), James and Thomas, all of whom are dead, excepting John and Thomas, both residents of Shenango Township. John was born in this township in 1810, and here grew to manhood. He learned the blacksmithing trade, and after serving his apprenticeship followed that business about seven years. He then purchased the farm upon which he has ever since resided. He married Rebecca, daughter of William Jones, of this county, who died in 1881. She was the mother of eleven children: Maria (deceased), Eliza (wife of Alex. Mayberry), Moses (deceased), Rachel (wife of Henry Morehead), Alfred (deceased), Hannah (wife of James Thompson), James, John C., Mary (deceased), William W. and Robert (deceased). Mr. Canon is a member of the Presbyterian Church, is a Republican in politics, and one of the well-known and respected citizens of Shenango Township.

CROSSMAN FAMILY.—One of the pioneer families of Mercer County was the Crossmans. Abner Crossman, a soldier of the War of 1812, settled in Shenango Township, Mercer Co., Penn., shortly after the close of the war. He was a native of Beaver County, and married Mary, daughter of Alexander McCall, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, and a native of Washington County, Penn. But little is known of Abner Crossman by his descendants. He had two brothers and one sister: Robert Crossman, a Methodist minister of Zanesville, Ohio; James Crossman, who settled in Indiana, and Mrs. Robert McGill, of Lowell, Ohio. Abner Crossman, previous to his locating in Mercer County, was extensively engaged in the distillery business in Beaver County, Penn., but his works were destroyed by fire, and he then removed to this county, and settled where his son Robert C. now lives, in Shenango Township. He had seven children, three of whom are living: Murry Alexander, who married Jane, daughter of Samuel Bell, of Shenango Township, in 1867, and by this marriage have four children: Mary B., Samuel A., Nannie E. and Addison W. Mr. Crossman is a carpenter by trade. In 1861 he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, and was discharged the same year for disability. Robert C., who was born in 1831 upon the place where he now resides, learned the carpenter trade, and was subsequently a member of the firm of Harriott, Eaton & Crossman in the oil business at Mackey, Ohio. In 1861 he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves, and participated in the following engagements: Drainsville, Mechanicsville, Gaines' Mill, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, Groveton, Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Bristoe Station, Mine Run, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna River, Tolopotomy and Bethesda Church. At Mechanicsville our subject received a wound in the head from a shell; at Fredericksburg he was wounded in the left leg, and at the Wilderness was sun-struck. At the battle of Fredericksburg he was appointed color bearer for his regiment. At the close of the war Mr. Crossman returned to Mercer County, and engaged with his old employers, the Crawford & Patterson Coal Co., as shipper, and remained with them two years. He then associated with himself his brother Cyrus, and engaged in the saw-mill business and the manufacture of shingles. In 1870 he purchased the old homestead, and since that time has been engaged in farming. In 1859 he married Sarah, daughter of James and Jane (Wilson) Mayers, of Shenango Township, and by this marriage they have five children: Sarah F. (Mrs. Elwyn Hart, of Madison, D. T.), Arsena E., Ulysses G. (who resides in Dakota), Horatio A. and Cyrus E. Mr. Crossman is a member of the Alonzo McCall Post No. 456, G. A. R., of West Middlesex, and is connected with the United Presbyterian Church of that borough.

Cyrus, the fifth and youngest son of Abner Crossman, was born in 1843, in Shenango Township, and was educated in the public schools of the township. After leaving school he engaged with his brother Alexander to learn the carpenter's trade. In 1862 he enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war. He followed the fortunes of his regiment, and participated with it in the following engagements: Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Cold Harbor, Weldon Railroad, Petersburg, Five Forks, South Side Railroad, and was present with his command at the surrender of Lee. On his return to Mercer he engaged in the carpenter business and farming, and in the winter of 1866-67 he engaged in teaching school. He subsequently became connected with his brother in saw-mills and shingle business. In 1867 he was united in marriage to Miss Maria, daughter of Benjamin and Margaret (Mathews) Mayers, early settlers of Shenango Township, who settled on the land now occupied by our subject. Mr. Crossman is a member of Alonzo McCall Post, G. A. R., and also of the United Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex, Penn.

CHARLES H. DILLEY, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of John H. and Orlena (Currie) Dilley. The father of Charles H. was a native of Mercer County, Penn., and his mother of Wisconsin, where she died in 1859, leaving one child, the subject of our sketch. The grandfather on the paternal side was Matthias Dilley, a native of Westmoreland County, who settled in Mercer County at an early date. The father of our subject married a Miss Irvine, of Shenango Township, and by this marriage they had one son, Fred, deceased. Mr. Dilley, Sr., died in 1887, his wife having died the previous year. Our subject was born in Wisconsin in 1858, and at the age of seven years came to Shenango Township with his father. He received his education in the public schools of the township, and early began farming. Mr. Dilley is extensively engaged in farming, and his homestead, containing 250 acres, is situated west of the Shenango River, and near the Lawrence County line.

ALBERT EDEBURN, farmer, post office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of Henry and Ellen (Crawford) Edeburn. The grandfather, William Edeburn, emigrated from Germany, and settled on the Shenango River, near West Middlesex Borough, and was engaged in farming. The father of our subject had a family of three children: Calvin, David W. and Albert. His wife died in July, 1882. He was again married May 1, 1884, to Mrs. Elizabeth McClung, and died May 26, 1885. Our subject was born July 22, 1853, was reared on the homestead where he now lives, two miles west of Middlesex, and received his education in the public schools of his native township. He married, in 1871, Miss Nancy A., daughter of John Walker, of Shenango Township, who is the mother of three children: Ella B., Harry and Jennie O. Mr. Edeburn is engaged in general farming. He is a member of the United Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex.

DANIEL GEARHEART, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, is a son of Jacob Gearheart, and grandson of Daniel Gearheart, a native of Bucks County, Penn., who settled where our subject now lives at an early date. Mr. Gearheart was reared and educated in Shenango Township, and has always been engaged in farming. He was married in 1879 to Miss Eliza Garrett, of Shenango Township, and by this union they have five children: Jessie, Alice, Grover Cleveland, Minnie and Frank.

ROBERT M. GRAHAM, justice of the peace and farmer, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of William and Margaret (Canon) Graham. Our subject was born in 1849, and was reared upon the homestead farm, where he now resides, in Shenango Township. The father of Mr. Graham was a native of Chester County, Penn., and came to Mercer County when quite young. He was a blacksmith by trade, and subsequently engaged in farming. His wife was a native of Mercer County, and a member of a pioneer family. William Graham always took a great interest in the public affairs of the county, and held the position of justice of the peace in Shenango Township for over twenty years. He was connected with the State militia, holding a major's commission. He died April 20, 1876, and his wife in December, 1877. They had twelve children, six of whom are living: Dr. J. W., of Ashtabula, Ohio; Thompson, of Berg Hill, Ohio; Charles, of Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Thomas, of Australia; Sarah J. (Mrs. Walter McIntroy, of Shenango Township) and Robert M. Our subject received his education in the public schools, and has always been engaged in farming. In 1887 he was elected justice of the peace, which position he now fills. He was united in marriage December 28, 1871, to Miss Maggie, daughter of John Burns, of Michigan. They have three children: Sarah J., Maggie M. and William. Mr. Graham is a member of the United Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex, and in politics is a Democrat.

B. J. HAYWOOD, prothonotary of Mercer County, post-office West Middlesex, was born April 12, 1849, in Hickory Township, this county. His parents, Benjamin and Catharine (Long) Haywood, were among the most respected citizens of the community in which they lived, and their union resulted in four children. Our subject was brought up at farm labor, and was educated in the common schools of his native township. He also took a course at the Iron City Business College, Pittsburgh, and in 1869 he was employed as a clerk in the general store of H. N. Warren, at West Middlesex. Later he became a partner with Mr. Warren, and remained as such until 1870, when he withdrew from the firm, and accepted a position in a local banking institution, remaining there until 1878, when he was appointed and commissioned postmaster at West Middlesex, and held the position until July 1, 1886. Mr. Haywood was elected transcribing clerk of the State Senate during the session of 1885, and message clerk of the same during the session of 1887. He served as auditor, member of the town council, and three terms as Burgess of West Middlesex. He served as chairman of the Republican county committee during the years 1883-84-85, and displayed great tact in organizing the Republican forces and wresting the county from the Democracy, who had control of the leading offices when he first became chairman. As evidence of his popularity he was elected to the office of prothonotary by a majority of 1,306. He was married July 29, 1873, to Miss Lizzie E. Powell, born July 25, 1850, in Shenango Township, daughter of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Satterfield) Powell. Mr. Haywood was a member of the Home Guards, although too young for service in the late war. He is a staunch Republican, a member of the Masonic and A. O. U. W. lodges, and, with his wife, belongs to the Presbyterian Church at West Middlesex.

JOSEPH WARREN HILLIER, M. D., post-office West Middlesex, was born in Cooperstown, Venango Co., Penn., July 22, 1839. He received his education in the schools of his native place, subsequently attending Allegheny College, in Meadville, Penn. He studied medicine with Dr. Robert Crawford, of Cooperstown, and graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, March 15, 1860. He located in West Middlesex, Penn., July 19, 1860, and has continued the practice of his profession uninterruptedly up to the present time.

PETER HUFF, a native of Germany, immigrated to this country, enlisted in the army, and served through the Revolutionary War, afterward drawing a pension until the time of his death, which occurred about 1838. He was well off when he left Germany, but was shipwrecked on the way over, and lost all he had. But little is known of his early history by his descendants. He eventually settled in Hubbard Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. He was married three times, his first wife bearing him four sons and six daughters; his second wife had three daughters, but there was no issue by his third marriage. Adam was the oldest son by his first wife, from whom have descended the Huffs of Mercer County. He was born in Hubbard, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and settled in this township in 1827, where his son Samuel now lives. He was a farmer and carpenter by occupation. He married Annie Hall, a native of New Jersey, and they have seven children: Jesse H. (deceased), Elizabeth (Mrs. David Raymond, of Ohio), Sarah (Mrs. William Napier, of Ohio), Susan (Mrs. E. Snyder, of Ohio), Mary (Mrs. Joel Morford, of Ohio), and Peter, who was born in Ohio July 22, 1815, and was reared and educated in the township schools, learned the carpenter trade, which he has followed for forty years, and is also operating a small fruit farm. He married Margaret Gilbert, of Shenango Township, who died in 1862, leaving seven children, six of whom are living: Sarah A., Gilbraith, Henry, Adam, Parkshale and Margaret. In 1862 he married Mary J. Lightner, of Butler County, Penn. Samuel was the third son, and was born January 31, 1825, at Hubbard, Ohio, and was reared and educated at the common schools of Shenango Township. On coming of age he engaged in the machine business with his cousin, at Brookfield, Ohio. In 1857 he returned to the homestead property, and engaged in manufacturing guns. In 1860 he engaged in the manufacturing of wagons and general blacksmith business, which he carried on until 1866, when he erected a steam saw-mill, which he operated in connection with his other business. He was married February 18, 1850, to Miss Catherine A. Wireman, of Brookfield, Ohio. By this union they have had three children: Francis S. (deceased), Rachel A. (Mrs. D. M. Buchanan, of this township) and Otis A. Mr. Huff and his brother Peter are members of the Disciple Church of Hubbard, Ohio.

WILLIAM A. JACKSON, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of William and Anna (Carmichael) Jackson. He was a son of William Jackson, one of the prominent families of Washington County, Penn., and a nephew of Philip Jackson, noted as the praying elder of the Cross Roads Church in Washington County, which had for its pastor the Rev. E. McCurdy, a famous preacher of the Presbyterian Church in pioneer days. The paternal grandfather of our subject was William Jackson; he had ten children and settled originally about eight miles northeast of New Castle, subsequently removing to the place where our subject now lives. He purchased the patent for 640 acres of land, being located in the donation lands. The father of our subject had eight children: Thomas and James, deceased; Sarah, wife of John Carnahan, of Kansas; Mary J., wife of John Pinkerton, of Illinois; Margaret L. and Elizabeth E., who reside upon a part of the homestead; Hugh, who enlisted in 1861 in Company B, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died, from exposure received in the service, at Newport News, July 25, 1862. Our subject was born in 1832 on the old homestead; was reared and educated at the common schools; learned the carpenter's trade, and subsequently engaged in farming. He married, in 1858, Miss Adelaide, daughter of Thomas Mathews, of Ohio, who died in 1861, leaving one son, Albert, who is now principal of the Wyman Institute of Upper Alton, Ill. He married for his second wife, October, 1864, Miss Maggie, a daughter of John and Harriet Ayres, of Butler, Butler Co., Penn. By this marriage they have seven children: William A. (principal of Wilmington High-school), Thomas C.

(teacher), Alfred H., Harry L., Charles E., Anna H. and Mary. Mr. Jackson has been officially identified with the schools of his township as a director. He belongs to the A. O. U. W., Lodge No. 12, of West Middlesex, and is a member and ruling elder of the West Middlesex Presbyterian Church.

DAVID W. LEESE, farmer and surveyor, post-office West Middlesex, is a son of Daniel and Maria (Emig) Leese, natives of York County, Penn. Mr. Leese was born north of Codorus, York Co., Penn., in October, 1834. He received his education in the public schools of the county, and in early life taught school in the winter months, and worked on the farm in the summer, until he had educated himself for his profession of surveying and expert accountant. In 1863 he removed to Mercer County, settled in West Middlesex, and engaged as the book-keeper for the coal and iron works, which position he filled for ten years. In the spring of 1873 he removed to Brazil, Ind., to fill the position of superintendent of the brass furnace and several coal mines located there. He returned to West Middlesex in 1875, and was not engaged in any active business until 1879, when he purchased his present place of residence, about one mile and a half east of the town, where he has since resided. Mr. Leese has 105 acres of land, and pays particular attention to the growing of fruits. He is well known through the county, having been identified professionally with the settling of many private and public estates. He was married in the fall of 1858 to Miss Sarah E. Wood, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Brown) Wood, of East Berlin, Adams Co., Penn. By this marriage they had three children: Oliver E., Thaddeus S. and Maud F. His wife died in May, 1886. He married for his second wife, in the fall of 1887, Miss Julia McLain, daughter of Charles McLain, of Mercer County, Penn.

JAMES McCANDLES, retired, post-office West Middlesex, is a son of James and Margaret (Jackson) McCandles, natives of Ireland, who settled in Beaver County, Penn., about 1800. Our subject was born in Beaver County, Penn., July 15, 1808. The father of our subject was a weaver and farmer by occupation. In 1834 our subject removed to Shenango Township, in this county, and purchased a farm of fifty acres, to which he added. He has filled many of the township offices, and served as school director for twelve years. In 1829 he married Miss Jane, daughter of John McCall, of Beaver County, and by this marriage they had ten children, three of whom are now living: Selina, wife of Charles Williams; Maggie, wife of Hudson Veach, and James. Our subject in politics is a Prohibitionist, and is a member of the United Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex.

JOHN McCREARY, SR., farmer, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., was born February 23, 1814. Our subject is a son of David and Betsey (McFarland) McCreary. His grandfather, John McCreary, was a native of Ireland, and immigrated to this country prior to the Revolutionary War. He enlisted in the American army and served through the entire struggle with Gen. Morgan. He subsequently settled in what is now Washington County, and died in Shenango Township, Mercer County. He had three sons: William, David and John. David, the father of our subject, was born in 1782, and died February 28, 1855, his wife having died in 1853. They had nine children: Ann, deceased; John, William, deceased; Jane, wife of William Long, of Ohio; David, deceased; James, of Shenango Township; Robert, deceased; Andrew, deceased, and Sarah E., deceased. James married Miss Jane, daughter of David Pathour, of Ohio; and is the father of five children: Elizabeth, Sarah, Mrs. William Ayres, deceased; Emma, deceased; Appeline, Mrs. E. E. Harshman, and Lurina, Mrs. G. E. McBride. Our subject has never married, resides in Shenango Township, and has always followed farming. He has never taken any active interest in the public affairs of his county, but after seventy-four years of quiet usefulness it is befitting that some mention be made of his identification with the development of Shenango Township. Mr. McCreary is a gentleman of genial manners and wide intelligence, and in politics he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM MITCHELTREE, farmer, is a son of William and Margaret (McKnight) Mitcheltree, natives of Westmoreland County. Our subject came to Mercer County in 1852, and located at his present home, and engaged in farming. He married, in 1855, Miss Elmira, daughter of Jacob Garrett, of Shenango Township. By this union they have six living children: Anna M., Mrs. Robert Wallace; James G., of Lawrence County; William, Mary J., Mrs. George Holland of West Middlesex; Joseph H. and Elmira A. Mr. Mitcheltree's wife and family are connected with the United Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex.

HENRY NEWKIRK, hardware merchant, and burgess of West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of John F. and Elizabeth (McBride) Newkirk, the mother being a daughter of James McBride, a native of Ireland, who settled in Mercer County. The grandfather of our subject, John F. Newkirk, was a native of Washington County, Penn., who removed to Brookfield, Ohio, subsequently came to Mercer County, and afterward removed to Beaver County, Penn., where he died. John F., the father of our subject, was born in Washington County, Penn., in 1793, and was reared in Mercer County. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. After the close of the war he returned to Mercer County, and established the Newkirk House at West Middlesex, and kept it for many years. His family consisted of eight children: Mary Ann (deceased), who married John McCall; Christina, Rebecca, Mrs. Samuel Parrshall of West Middlesex; Matilda, Mrs. James Clark; Elizabeth, Mrs. J. P. Arbaugh; Minerva J., Mrs. J. W. Russell, of West Middlesex; John, who resides in Colorado. He died May 5, 1856, and his widow in 1868. Our subject was born in 1836 in Shenango Township, was reared and educated in West Middlesex, and here learned the shoemaker's trade. He subsequently engaged with the Sennett & Warren Iron Company, of West Middlesex, remaining with them for twelve years as manager of the store. He then connected himself with J. P. Risher & Co., remaining with them one year. He afterward engaged with David Theobald in the clothing business as manager of the branch store in West Middlesex. In connection with J. W. Russell & Co., he engaged in the mercantile business and the manufacture of iron in 1867, and the same year was appointed postmaster of West Middlesex. He subsequently engaged in the hardware business, which he has continued up to the present. Mr. Newkirk was married in the fall of 1860 to Miss Victoria, daughter of James and Margaret Eakin, of Beaver County, Penn., and they have one son, Charles E. Mr. Newkirk was elected burgess of West Middlesex in 1874-75, and was again elected to the same office in February, 1888. He has been further identified with the public affairs of the borough as a member of the council, and school board. He belongs to the A. O. U. W. and the R. T. of T. Mr. Newkirk is a member of the Methodist Church, holding the office of steward, and is superintendent of the Sunday-school. In politics he is a Democrat, and one of the well-known citizens of this portion of Mercer County.

NATHANIEL RILEY PETTITT, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, was born in 1821 in Bedford County, Penn. He is a son of Nathaniel and Margaret (Carr) Pettitt, who removed from Bedford County in 1828 and purchased the farm now occupied by our subject. Nathaniel, Sr., was born in 1783, and was the father of eight children: John, Isabella, deceased; Samuel K., deceased; William, deceased; Charles T., Margaret, wife of J. M. Brown, of Pulaski, Penn., and Rebecca J., wife of George Brown, of the same place. He died in 1874, his wife having preceded him in 1868. Our subject was educated in the public schools of the township. He was apprenticed to the carpenter trade, and at the expiration of his time, in 1845, engaged in business for himself, which he carried on successfully for twenty years. On the death of his father he purchased the homestead property and has since been engaged in general farming. He was married in 1845 to Miss Catherine, daughter of Peter and Rosanna (McConnell) Michael, of Harlensburg, Penn., who died in 1883, leaving seven children: Calvin M., of Greenville, Penn.; Samuel R., of West Middlesex, Penn.; Mary, wife of Hamilton Sample, of Ohio; Willis B., of Wilmington, Penn.; John C., who is engaged on the farm; Nathaniel, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Adah Z., at home. Mr. Pettitt married for his second wife Mrs. Rebecca Falls, sister of his deceased wife. He is a member of the New Bedford Presbyterian Church.

CAPT. FRANCIS M. POWELL, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Satterfield) Powell. They were natives of Maryland and located at New Bedford, in what is now Lawrence County, Penn., in 1837. They were the parents of seven children: William S., Francis M., Elijah D., John W., deceased; James S., Elizabeth, wife of B. J. Haywood, of West Middlesex, and Eugene R. He married for his second wife Eleanor Sloss, by whom he had one child, Fernando, deceased. Our subject was born in 1838, at New Bedford, Penn., and received his education in the schools of his native town. At the age of twenty-two he engaged in teaching. In 1862 he was mustered into the service of the United States volunteer service as second lieutenant of Company A, One Hundred and Forty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers. He followed the fortunes and hardships of the regiment in its marches and battles with the Army of the Potomac, and at the battle of Fredericksburgh received a slight wound and was promoted to first lieutenant. He participated with his company in the battles of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, and in the latter received two severe wounds, and was promoted to the command of his company. After recovering from his wounds he rejoined his regiment and participated in the battle of the Wilderness, again being severely wounded. Upon his recovery he was detailed for duty under Col. J. V. D. Reeves, at Pittsburgh, Penn. At the close of the war Mr. Powell engaged in the mercantile business in West Middlesex, which he followed until 1873, when he was elected county treasurer, which position he filled for three years. He returned to West Middlesex and again engaged in the mercantile business, which he carried on until 1878. He then engaged in farming and has since given his attention to that business. He was married December 14, 1871, to Lucy S. Spearman, daughter of Francis and Elizabeth Spearman. They have two children: Alice E. and Norman S. Mr. Powell is a member of the Alonzo McCall Post, No. 456, G. A. R., of West Middlesex, also of F. & A. M., No. 389. He is connected with the A. O. U. W. and the R. T. of T. Both he and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he is filling the position of treasurer and trustee.

ALBERT E. RANDALL, postmaster of West Middlesex, Penn., was born September 6, 1857, at New Hamburg, Mercer Co., Penn., and is a son of Robert and Leah (Hildebrand) Randall. In 1865 he removed with his parents to West Middlesex and received his education in the public schools of that borough. At the age of fifteen he entered the employ of William Jones, a merchant of West Middlesex, and remained with him for three years. He then engaged with the Wheeler Iron Company, and subsequently became their book-keeper, which position he filled until his appointment as postmaster July 1, 1885, being the first postmaster appointed by the present administration. He was married, September 21, 1881, to Miss Jessie, daughter of George Lloyd, of Ohio, and by this union they have one daughter, Edna C. Mr. Randall is a member of the Masonic order, being connected with Kedron Lodge, No. 389, of West Middlesex. He also belongs to the P. H. C., and is a member of the Baptist Church of Hubbard, Ohio.

ELMER T. REED, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of William and Phoebe (Carll) Reed, natives of Clarion County, Penn., where our subject was born October 10, 1835, and came to Mercer County with his parents. Mr. Reed's father was an iron worker, and was engaged in many of the furnaces in the State. He died in 1873, and his wife in 1876. They had nine children. Elmer T. was the third child, and received his education in the common schools of this county. In 1846 he commenced work at the Mineral Ridge Furnace, in this county, and found employment at various furnaces until 1857, when he settled in West Middlesex and commenced work with the Sennett & Warren Iron Company as furnace keeper. In 1859 the Shenango Furnace was erected at West Middlesex, and he engaged with them. In 1862 he took charge of the work, for G. W. Tift & Co., of this place. In 1869 the Shenango Furnace Company was organized, and he was engaged by them to fill the same position, and has continued his connection with them up to the present time, the company now being known as the Wheeler Furnace Company. In 1857, when Mr. Reed came to the works, the daily output was from thirteen to fifteen tons, employing about eighty-five hands. The present daily output is 112 tons, and 170 hands are employed in the works. Mr. Reed was married, in 1859, to Miss Melissa, a daughter of W. D. Brandon, of Mercer County, and by this union they have seven children: Philitus, Anna, Ella, Maud, Lydia, Rufus and Charley. Our subject is a member of Kedron Lodge 389, F. & A. M., also of the A. O. U. W., No. 12.

ADDISON L. V. RIGGS, farmer, post-office Hubbard, Ohio, is a descendant of Jonathan Riggs, of Baskinridge, N. J., who settled near the Mercer County line in Venango County, Penn., in 1795. His wife's maiden name was Mary Hampton, a native of New Jersey, who bore him nine children. He was a soldier in the Revolution, serving through the seven years' service. He died April 2, 1836, at the age of ninety-five, his wife having died some years previous. Jonathan, his second son, was the grandfather of our subject, and was born about 1785, and married Druscilla, daughter of John Toland, of Wilmington, Penn. They had six children, all of whom are dead excepting Jonathan, the third of that name in the family, and the father of our subject. He died in 1823, and his wife in 1851. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, having command of a company. Jonathan, the father of our subject, was born in 1815, and was reared and educated at Hubbard, Ohio, where his father had removed in 1818. He married, in 1838, Miss Sarah Van Fleet, daughter of Richard Van Fleet, of Pulaski, Penn., and reared four sons: Richard C. N., John P. J., J. W. Byron and Addison L. V., all deceased excepting the last named, who was born in April, 1842, in this township, where his father had located. In 1843 his father removed to Mill Creek, where he was reared and educated. In 1882 he, in connection with his father, removed to his present farm, and they are extensively engaged in farming, operating some 435 acres in Shenango Township and in Mill Creek. Mr. Riggs and his father occupy a handsome residence, which they built in 1884, and where they live, surrounded by the results of their industry. He married, in 1870, Miss Emma, daughter of John McClure, of Perry Township, Mercer County, and they have four children: John J., Mary R., Ad E. and Sarah E.

HON. JOSEPH W. RUSSELL, post-office West Middlesex, Penn., is a son of Joseph and Jane (Gallagher) Russell, natives of Ireland. The parents of Mr. Russell immigrated to this country about 1832, and settled in Philadelphia, Penn. Mr. Russell, Sr., engaged in the contracting business upon the public works in Philadelphia, and continued in that business until 1852, when he removed to Mercer County, and settled at New Vernon, where he engaged in farming. His wife died in 1849, leaving five children: Martha, who married George Marshall, of Philadelphia; Mary Ann, married Andrew J. Johnson, of Philadelphia; Elizabeth L., married John L. Cheessman, of Burlington, N. J.; Isabella F., married Charles Benner, of Philadelphia, and Joseph W., all of whom are dead excepting Elizabeth and our subject. In 1852 he married Mrs. Margaret James, daughter of James Buchanan, of Butler County, Penn., and of this marriage two children were born: David J. and James A., both of whom reside in Nebraska. Mr. Russell, Sr., died January 13, 1866, meeting his death by accident, through his team running away. Our subject was born in Philadelphia, Penn., in 1837, received his education at the public schools of that city, and was apprenticed to the moulder's trade. In 1856 he came to Mercer County and settled in West Middlesex. He followed his trade until 1861, when he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served for three years, participating in the following engagements: Drainsville, Mechanicsville, Gaines' Mill, White Oak Swamp, Charles City Cross Roads, Malvern Hill, South Mountain and Antietam, when he was appointed commissary-sergeant of his regiment, which position he held until the close of his term of enlistment. In 1864 he connected himself with the William McGilvray Iron Works of Sharon, as superintendent of the foundry department. In 1865 he purchased the Veach, Risher & Co. Iron Works of West Middlesex, which he sold in 1868 to engage in the coal and mercantile business in the same place. In 1870 he bought back the iron works, which he operated until 1887, when he removed them to Hubbard, Ohio, where he now has them in operation. Our subject has been actively identified with the public affairs of the county, and in 1884 he was elected to represent this county in the State Legislature. He has been identified with the schools of West Middlesex as school director, with the exception of two years, since 1867, and also as a member of the borough council. In 1881 he was elected a member of the Republican State Central Committee and served in that capacity for the years 1882-3-4. Mr. Russell was married in 1863 to Miss Minerva J., daughter of John and Elizabeth (McBride) Newkirk, of Mercer County, and by this marriage they have four children: Frank M., who is a midshipman in the United States Navy; Fred E., Clara B. and Helen E. Mr. Russell is connected with the Masonic order, and is a member of the Kedron Lodge No. 389, of West Middlesex, also of Alonzo McCall Post 456, G. A. R., and A. O. U. W. No. 12. He and family are members of the Methodist Church of West Middlesex, and he is an enterprising, trustworthy citizen.

ELIJAH D. SATTERFIELD, post-office West Middlesex, farmer and drover, was born in Maryland in 1812. His parents were Elijah and Elizabeth (Dukes) Satterfield. Our subject was reared in Maryland. He was left an orphan at the age of twelve years, and for five years worked for $25. He bound wheat after a cradle for 25 cents a day. From Maryland he went to Delaware and worked three years at $3.50 a month. When about twenty years old he came to Mercer County, traveling in a two-horse wagon, where he worked on a farm for $6 a month, and afterward clerked in David Thompson's store, who sent him to Philadelphia with a drove of horses, which he sold there, and walked home in eleven days, the distance being about 400 miles. He remained with Mr. Thompson until his first marriage, when he bought a farm at Clarks-ville for $1,000, where he settled, but subsequently removed to West Middlesex. Mr. Satterfield was married in 1834 to Marilda, daughter of William Haywood, of Hickory Township, who died in 1855, leaving one child, Catharine, who married Dr. Veach, of New Castle, Penn. His second wife was Miss Addie, daughter of James Campbell, of Hickory Township, whom he married in 1859. She died in 1862, leaving two children: Frank, who resides in Shenango Township, and Fred, a resident of Hickory Township. Mr. Satterfield married for his third wife Miss Sarah, daughter of James and Hannah (Waddle) Hamilton, of Bellefonte, Centre Co., Penn., September 21, 1869. Mr. Satterfield has been one of Mercer County's most active business men, and has been the most extensive purchaser of horses and cattle in this section of the State. For thirty-seven consecutive years, in the same month of the year (February), he has crossed the Alleghany Mountains with his drove of horses for the Eastern markets. He has also farmed extensively, and is to-day one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of West Middlesex. Mr. Satterfield is connected with the Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex, and politically is an ardent Democrat.

GEORGE STEWART, farmer, post-office Wheeler, Penn. The grandfather of our subject was Robert Stewart, and was one of Mercer County's early settlers. He came from Huntingdon County, Penn., in 1810, and settled where our subject now lives. His wife was Elizabeth (Sample) Stewart, by whom he had ten children. He participated in the War of 1812, and died in 1845 at the age of sixty-five. Robert, Jr., his son, and father of our subject, was born on the homestead in 1820. He married Elizabeth Thompson, who died in 1856. By this marriage he was the father of three children: Mary, deceased; Joseph and Robert. He married Miss Annie Allen for his second wife, by whom he had four children: John, deceased; James, William and George. He died in 1871. George was born in 1862; was reared and educated in the schools of the township, and has always resided upon the old homestead. He married Miss Fannie Rankin, daughter of Robert Rankin, of Pulaski, Penn., and has one child, Robert.

VAN FLEET FAMILY.—Among the early settlers of Mercer County was Richard Van Fleet. He was born October 21, 1769, in Somerset County, N. J. He was a young unmarried man on his coming to the county in 1798, where he took up a tract of 400 acres in the donation district, felled the timber and built his log cabin, thus making a permanent settlement. He then brought out his sister, Mrs. Hannah Burwell, and her three children, William, John and Lydia. In 1800 a dispute arose as to the ownership of the tract, which was compromised by his giving up 200 acres of his entry. On August 1, 1801, he was married to Miss Sally Hogue, a native of Ireland, born December 25, 1779, who came to this county with her brothers, John and James Hogue, who settled in what is now Lawrence County, Penn., about 1800. Richard Van Fleet was a farmer and weaver by occupation. It is claimed that the first Presbyterian sermon ever delivered in Mercer County was preached by the Rev. W. Wick, August 1, 1800, in Mr. Van Fleet's log cabin. He was the father of twelve children: Phoebe, born in 1802, died in February, 1886; William, born in 1803, died in March, 1885; Eleanor, born in 1805, married William Fitch, of Youngstown, Ohio, and died in April, 1886; John, born in 1807, and resides in Youngstown, Ohio; Hannah, born in 1810, married Fredrick Price and lives in Brookfield, Ohio; Richard H., born in 1811, killed by a fall at Youngstown, Ohio, in 1846; Sarah, born in 1813, married Jonathan Riggs and lives in Shenango Township; Alexander M., born in 1815, and died in Shenango Township in 1850; Jesse G., born in 1817, and died in Shenango Township in 1857; Rebecca B., born in 1820, married Henry Kile and lives in Pulaski, Penn.; David, born in 1822, and now resides upon the old homestead, and Eliza, born in 1824, married Adam Sheriff and lives in Lawrence County, Penn.

GEORGE WATSON is a son of James and Elizabeth (Mitchell) Watson. The father of our subject was a native of Penn's Valley, Penn., and removed with his father, William Watson, to New Castle, and married Elizabeth Mitchell, of that neighborhood, who died February 21, 1854, leaving one child, the subject of our sketch. In the fall of 1849 he located upon the property now occupied by our subject, in Shenango Township. Mr. Watson, Sr., married for his second wife Jane Irvine, in 1856, who died May 3, 1861, leaving two children, Irvine and Jane. He married, August 20, 1863, Miss Margaret Soders, who survives him, and by whom he had one child, Ella (Mrs. Randall, of Kansas City, Mo.), with whom the mother resides. He died June 5, 1872. George, the subject of our sketch, and the present representative of the family, was born April 5, 1847, was reared upon the homestead, and received his education in the schools of the township. When he became of age he engaged in farming with his father, and has, since his father's death, been engaged in conducting the business upon his own account, and is following general farming and stock raising. He was married September 18, 1878, to Miss Anna, daughter of Mathew and Lillie Barrett, of New Bedford, Lawrence Co., Penn., and they have three children: Georgianna, Vida P. and Emma B.

FORD J. WHARTON, son of Oliver P. and Harriet (Mortley) Wharton, was born August 25, 1858, at Rock Island City, Ill. The father of our subject is a prominent newspaper man, at present located at Sandusky City, Ohio, as the manager of the Journal and Local. He established the first Republican paper west of the Mississippi River, at Rock Island, Ill., known as the Rock Island Daily Advertiser. He was an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, and drafted the resolution that founded the Republican party in Illinois. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in an Iowa regiment, and served four years. The grandfather of our subject, on the paternal side, was Henry L. Wharton, and a descendant of Lord Philip Wharton, of England. Our subject was educated at Beaver Seminary, at Beaver, Penn., and was apprenticed to the Beaver Argus. After completing his apprenticeship he located at Youngstown, Ohio, and was engaged on the Youngstown Vindicator, subsequently working on various papers in different parts of the country. In 1879 he located at Youngstown, and established the Greenback Signal. In 1881 he settled in West Middlesex, and established the West Middlesex Mail, which he subsequently removed to Youngstown, Ohio, and changed the paper to the Youngstown Free Press. In 1881 our subject located his family upon his farm, two and a half miles from West Middlesex, where he now resides, and is engaged in farming. He was married January 4, 1879, to Miss Clara, daughter of Anderson McCreary, of Shenango Township, and by this marriage they have four children: Henrietta, Wade H., Howard and Lottie. Mr. Wharton is a member of the I. T. U., K. of L. and the Jr. O. W. A. M. In politics he is a Democrat, and a public-spirited citizen.

DAVID WHEELER, farmer, post-office Hubbard, Ohio, is a son of William and Margaret (Weldon) Wheeler. Our subject was born in Erie County, Penn., February 17, 1822. At the age of eight years he removed to Brookfield, Ohio, with his parents, where he was reared and educated. Our subject has always followed farming as an occupation. In 1882 he removed to Shenango Township, and settled upon the Dr. John Mitcheltree farm, where he now resides. Mr. Wheeler married in 1849 Miss Elmina, daughter of A. Alderman, of Ohio, who died in 1854, leaving two children: Belle, wife of George Patterson, of Crawford County, Penn., and Charles, who resides in Trumbull County, Ohio. In 1885 Mr. Wheeler married Mrs. Albina Van Ness, of Hubbard, Ohio. Our subject is one of the present supervisors of his township, and in politics is a Republican.

JAMES F. YOUNG, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, was born in 1847 in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., but was reared and educated in Shenango Township. His parents were John and Mary (Mitcheltree) Young. The father of our subject was a native of Ireland, settled in Pymatuning Township about 1828, and was married about 1845. In 1854 he removed to Shenango Township, and settled where our subject now lives, about one mile west of the borough, on the West Middlesex and Hubbard road. They had three children: Margaret, Lewis and James. The father died in 1855, the mother surviving him, and resides with our subject. Mr. Young is engaged in farming, which occupation he has always followed. He was married in 1870 to Miss Catherine Young, a daughter of James Young, of the County Tyrone, Ireland, by whom he has seven children: Rebecca J., John H., Andrew E., James A., Sadie, Fred and Charley. Our subject is a member of the Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex, and one of the young progressive farmers of his township.

HICKORY TOWNSHIP.

FRANCIS ALLEN, retired iron manufacturer, post-office Hermitage, Penn., was born in Luzerne County, Penn., March 15, 1817, and is a son of Richard and Nancy (Mowery) Allen, the former being a native of Ireland, and the latter a daughter of Andrew Mowery, of Luzerne County. Mr. Allen removed with his parents in 1827 to Waterford, Erie Co., Penn., where he was reared. He was educated at the Waterford Academy, incorporated in 1811, and at one time a prosperous institution of learning. At the age of eighteen our subject commenced a business career which has extended over a successful period of fifty years, engaging at that time with B. B. Vincent, of Waterford, as a clerk in his store. In 1841 he went to Erie and entered the employ of Johnson, Himrod & Co., mercantile and iron manufacturers. Early in 1845 he came to Mercer County in the capacity of general manager for Vincent & Himrod, to superintend the erection of the Clay Furnace, situated two and a half miles from Clarksville. This was the first blast furnace built in Mercer County. He remained three years in charge of the works, and then, returning to Erie County, purchased a farm and engaged in farming. In 1852 the Clay Furnace, having changed hands, was re-organized as the Sharon Iron Works, and Mr. Allen returned and acted as manager and agent for the company. Under his official management it was demonstrated that Lake Superior ore could be successfully manufactured into iron in paying quantities. In 1861 the works closed, and Mr. Allen purchased the property. In 1862 our subject formed a connection with James Wood & Sons, of Pittsburgh, as superintendent, and erected the first furnace built in Wheatland. In the spring of 1863 he became a member of the firm composed of the Hon. William L. Scott, Gen. James Pierce and F. Allen, and opened the Oakland Coal Bank, in Hickory Township. He located his residence five miles south of Sharpsville, and was identified with the building of the Sharpsville & Oakland Railroad. In 1868 he removed to Sharpsville, and superintended the building of the Allen Furnace, Henderson, Allen & Co., proprietors. He continued there as its manager until 1882, when he purchased his present place of residence at Hermitage, in Hickory Township, where he is engaged in farming. He was united in marriage in April, 1846, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Henry and Jane (Patton) Woodworth, of Conneaut, Ohio. By this union he has had four children: Blanche, who died in 1851; Jane, who married T. K. Mackey, of Carbondale, Ill., and died in 1886; Charles B., who married Fannie F., daughter of T. M. Ford, of Sharpsville, who has blessed him with two children: Francis F., and Jessie, wife of David Jamison, of New Castle, Penn., who has one daughter, Elizabeth W. Politically Mr. Allen is an unswerving Democrat, and is one of the most successful business men who has ever lived in Mercer County. He is a man of unblemished reputation, and a fitting representative of the growth and development of the leading interests of the Shenango Valley.

THOMAS CLARK, deceased, son of Thomas and Mary (Presland) Clark, was born February 12, 1793, in England. He immigrated to this country about 1827, and located at Fort Erie, Canada, opposite the city of Buffalo, N. Y., remaining there five years working at his trade of miller. He then came to New Castle, Penn., where he took charge of a mill. In the fall of 1833 our subject purchased the mill located on the Shenango River, near Sharon, now known as "Clark's Mill," and kept it in constant operation up to 1843. Mr. Clark during that period did the principal milling business of this location. He was also extensively engaged in farming, cultivating some 200 acres in connection with his mill. He was identified with the late Joel B. Curtis in the construction of the old Sharon Rolling Mill, as one of the stockholders. Mr. Clark was a staunch Democrat, and always took great interest in the success of his party. He died in 1876, leaving a widow and eleven children. Mr. Clark married, in 1832, Miss Nancy, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Young) Crowder, of Canada. Their family consisted of Louisa, Joseph P., Edmond F., and Lucy J., of Sharon; John L., of Jackson Centre; Elizabeth, wife of I. K. Whitcraft; Robert, of Ohio; Mary, wife of Louis Buchholz, of Sharon; Florence, James T. and Alfred D.

SAMUEL COLE, farmer, post-office Wheatland, Penn., is a son of Isaac D. and Elizabeth (Taylor) Cole, and was born May 31, 1846, on the old homestead in Shenango Township. He received his education in the common schools of the district, and early engaged in farming, which occupation he has continued to follow, in connection with the breeding of Norman horses. In 1869 he was married to Miss Mary J., daughter of William Stewart, of Hubbard, Ohio, who died in November, 1885. By this marriage one daughter was born to him, Ida May (deceased). In 1886 he was again united in marriage, to Miss Mary, daughter of James McCallen, of Shenango Township, who has borne him one son, Heilman D. Our subject is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 347, of Sharon, Penn., and is one of the well-to-do farmers of the Shenango Valley. His father resides in Sharon, and a sketch of him will be found in the biographical chapter of that borough.

ISAAC DEFORREST, farmer, post-office Sharon, Penn., is a son of Abraham and Margaret (Vandenberg) DeForrest. The father of our subject came to Mercer County in 1820, and settled where our subject now lives. He was a native of Hunterdon County, N. J., and an officer in the Revolutionary War. His death occurred at the ripe old age of ninety-eight years and nine months. His family consisted of nine children, viz.: Jennie (married G. Karhuff of New Jersey), Hannah (married William Hall, of Ohio), Catherine (married Mr. Koon, of New Jersey), Elizabeth (married Robert Stout, of New Jersey), Sarah (married Charles Campbell, of Mercer), Jane (married Philip Homer, of Sharon), Gershom, Mary (Mrs. Peter Warren, of New Jersey), and our subject, who was born August 7, 1797, in Hunterdon County, N. J. He was reared and received his education in New Jersey, and removed to Mercer County with his parents. He has always lived on the old homestead and followed farming for an occupation. He was married in 1822 to Miss Nancy, daughter of Samuel Quinby, and by this union they reared seven children: Eliza J. (wife of Charles Brewster, of Fort Madison, Iowa), Theodore (who died in 1887), Julia (wife of William Buchanan, of Beaver County, Penn.), Josephine (who died at the age of twenty-six), Adoniram (deceased), Nannie (wife of Joseph Higgs, of Sharon), and Teresa (wife of M. H. Staunton). Mrs. DeForrest died in 1885. Our subject is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Sharon, and one of the oldest citizens of the valley.

THOMAS DOWNING, farmer, was born March 4, 1819, in Indiana County, Penn. He is the son of John Downing, a native of Vermont, and a soldier of the War of 1812, who served during the war in the United States service, participating in the battle of Lundy's Lane, near Niagara Falls. John was married March 20, 1817, to Miss Nancy Baux, of Centre County, Penn., where he at that time resided. She was a native of the northern part of Ireland. They had by this marriage eleven children, seven of whom are now living: Thomas, our subject; Nancy, wife of J. C. Thompson; Jane, Mrs. Jane McCord; Susan, widow of Thomas Pearson; Mary, wife of Frank Osborn; John and George. In 1838 the elder Downing located in Sharpville, having contracted to build one mile of the Beaver & Erie Canal, which passed through what is now the borough of Sharpville. In 1853 he removed to Jackson, Iowa, where he and wife died. Our subject was married February 5, 1840, to Miss Phebe, daughter of John and Lydia Cary, of Hickory Township. He located on his present farm, which he purchased from Mrs. Hull. By this union they have seven living children: James L., Thomas J., Harkness W., Jerome H., Melinda (wife of U. Snyder, of Ohio), Mary (wife of G. D. Gilson) and Anna. In politics our subject is a Republican. He is a member of the F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F. Mr. Downing and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sharpville.

DUNHAM FAMILY.—One of the pioneer settlers of Mercer County was Azariah Dunham, a native of New Jersey. He was a blacksmith by trade, and his first settlement in this county was made in Hickory Township. He subsequently removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, but returned to Mercer County, and died in Sharon about 1855. His family consisted of seven sons and one daughter—Robert, the first son, being the progenitor of the Dunhams now residing in Hickory Township. He also was a blacksmith, and carried on the business in connection with farming. He married Annie, daughter of Archibald Titus, of Hickory Township, and by this marriage was the father of six children: Azariah R., of Hickory; Adeline, wife of Sebastin Runser, of Sharon, Penn.; Shedrick, of Michigan; Albine, of Hickory Township; Melvin, of Sharon, Penn., and Newton, who died in 1884. Robert died in 1884, his wife having passed away in 1868. Azariah R., the eldest son, was born in 1827, in Hickory Township; was here reared and educated at the common schools. Early in life he engaged in coal drilling, and subsequently went into farming. He married in 1849 Miss Elizabeth, daughter of George and Mary (Boyer) Troutman, and by this marriage they have three children: Lawrence, Ella (wife of John Metzler, of Hadley, Penn.) and A. Douglass. In politics Mr. Dunham is a Democrat.

CHARLES EATON, a native of Washington County, Penn., came to Mercer

County in 1818, and made his first settlement in Springfield Township, south of Leesburg. He subsequently bought a tract of land containing 300 acres, on the line of what is now Shenango and Hickory Townships, about two and a half miles northeast of West Middlesex, and settled upon it in 1837. He married Elizabeth Pencil, and they had ten children, seven of whom grew to maturity: George, resides in St. Paul, Minn.; Maria, married Joseph Caution, and resides upon a part of the homestead property; Rebecca, deceased, married James Highgate, of Canada; Charles, lives in Washington Territory; Lavinia, deceased, married James Stewart, of Michigan; Henry, deceased, and Jonathan, who now resides upon a part of the old homestead, where the parents both died. Jonathan was born in 1819, in Springfield Township, and was there reared. He removed to Hickory Township with his parents in 1837, engaged in farming and has always followed that calling. In 1847 he married Agnes, daughter of James Hood, of Lackawannock Township, who died March 4, 1879, leaving ten children, eight of whom are living: Susannah, wife of John Boyler, of Pulaski, Penn.; Charles V., Henry, Samantha, wife of George W. McLaughlin, of Mercer County; Alice, wife of William Wallace, of Hickory Township; Mary C., wife of Robert Plater, Youngstown, Ohio; Ida, wife of Judson V. Stewart, of New Castle, Penn., and William G., who resides in Hickory Township. He married, for his second wife, Mrs. Lizzie J. Davenport, of Hickory Township, in the fall of 1886. Mr. Eaton has 216 acres of land, and is engaged in general farming. He is a member of the United Brethren Church, of Shenango Township, of which he has been a trustee for many years.

THE EBERHART FAMILY, consisting of four brothers, Paul, Abraham, Joseph and John Eberhart, were among the early settlers of Hickory Township. Abraham and Joseph subsequently went west and died, and it is the descendants of John of whom we write. John Eberhart married Susanna, daughter of Jacob and Susanna Berlin, November 27, 1827, and by this union they had eight children: Maria C. deceased; Sophia, deceased, who married Josiah Dustman, of Hickory Township; Aaron D., who married Mary A. Allen, of Jackson Township; Sarah A., wife of Valentine Troutman, of Mercer County; Emma, deceased, wife of John Phillips, of Sharon; Cyrus, deceased; John Mc., married Maggie Titus, of Mercer County, and Millie S. Mr. Eberhart was a farmer by occupation, and died December 15, 1878. His widow resides at Neshannock.

JOHN HAGAN FRAMPTON, farmer and lumber dealer, post-office, Five Points, Penn., a son of Jonathan and Matilda (McDowell) Frampton, was born in Clarion County, Penn., and was married in 1872 to Mary Emma, daughter of F. J. and Mary A. (Chestnut) Bean, of Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn. He commenced housekeeping on his farm, where he is now living, and in connection with farming is extensively engaged in manufacturing hardwood lumber, making a specialty of bill timber and railroad supplies. Our subject's family consists of five sons and three daughters: David A., John, Grover C., Lance and Earl. In politics he is a Democrat.

HON. NORMAN HALL, iron manufacturer and member of Congress, post-office Sharon, Penn., was born at Muncy Farms, Lycoming Co., Penn., November 17, 1829, and is a son of Robert C. and Sarah A. (Watts) Hall. He graduated in 1847 from Dickinson College, and in 1851 located at Marietta, Penn., where he was connected with the Marietta Furnaces. In 1862 he came to Sharon and engaged in the manufacture of iron at the Sharon Furnace, which he operated up to a recent date. In 1886 Mr. Hall was elected member of Congress from the Twenty-sixth Congressional District, which is strongly Republican, by a plurality of over 500 votes. He is a man of modest, retiring disposition, yet withal one of the most enterprising citizens of the Shenango Valley, while his name is the synonym of unimpeachable honor and business integrity. Mr. Hall has always taken a deep and active interest in the growth and development of Mercer County, and is a director in the First National Bank of Sharon. He is a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church of that borough, to which faith he became a convert after reaching manhood.

CHRISTOPHER HANN, deceased, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Roof) Hann, natives of Sussex County, N. J., was born August 14, 1814, in that county. His father, Jacob, came to Mercer County in 1830, and settled about one mile south of Hickory Corners. He died October 16, 1873, and his widow October 24, the same year. They reared a family of six children: Sarah A., married William Applegate; Christopher, Mary, married Henry Shilling; James, Jacob, and Elizabeth, widow of Lemuel Troutman. Our subject was married in March, 1843, to Sarah, daughter of Jacob Trout, and he died December 29, 1886, leaving four children: Mary E., Lusetta J., wife of J. A. Ewart, of Warren County, Penn.; S. Malvina, and William Alfred, married Jessie B. Cole. One daughter, Phebe T., wife of John N. Miles, died in 1882. Mr. Hann was a farmer by occupation, a consistent Christian, and respected by all with whom he had dealings or any business relations.

HOFIUS FAMILY.—One of the pioneer families of Hickory Township are the descendants of John Theodore Hofius, a German minister, who immigrated to this country and settled in Washington County, Penn. He there married Nancy Baker. Nothing of his early life or his family is known by his descendants, further than in the year 1800 he came to Mercer County with his son George, who purchased a farm of 200 acres in Hickory Township, near Sharpsville. John Theodore died on this farm about the year 1808 at an advanced age. George, his son, was born in Washington County, Penn., and married Jane Clark, of the same place. They, with one child and father, George Theodore, came to Mercer County in the year above mentioned. At that date, A. D. 1800, Mercer County was almost a forest. A camp of Indians was located at the mouth of Pine Run, above where Sharpsville now is; also another camp where Wheatland now is. Kindashawa, the well-known chief, was a frequent visitor at the farm. George Hofius was well-known among the early settlers. He was a soldier in the War of 1812; was the father of twelve children, six sons and six daughters. He died in the year 1842, his widow surviving him until October, 1870, when she died at the advanced age of ninety-one years, retaining her mental faculties to a remarkable degree to the last. She could give a vivid and thrilling account of the pioneer and frontier life, and was familiar with the incidents connected with that ill-fated expedition that resulted in the burning of Col. Crawford. She had an uncle who served in Washington's army, and was killed in the battle of Long Island. She was and had been for a great many years a consistent member of the Sharon Baptist Church. She was the mother of twelve, grandmother of ninety-three, great-grandmother of one hundred and sixty-three, and great-great-grandmother of eleven children at the time of her death. The descendants of George and Jane (Clark) Hofius are as follows: Henry Hofius, the eldest child, was born in Washington County, Penn., brought by his parents to Mercer County when about one year old; raised on the homestead farm in Hickory Township; received a common school education, principally under the tutorage of the well-known teacher, Master Hays. In 1823 he married Mary Reno, daughter of Charles Reno, one of the early settlers of Sharon. They settled on the farm in Hickory Township now owned by his son, George C., and remained on same until his death. He was quite a prominent military man in the days of the Old State Militia, having been commissioned captain, major, lieutenant-colonel, his commissions bearing the signatures of Governors Shulze, Wolf and Shunk. He was five times elected justice of the peace, holding the office at the time of his death; took an active part in the political issues of the day, and in latter years great interest in the Sabbath and common schools. His wife died in 1851, and in 1854 he married Charlotte Austin, of Mahoning County, Ohio, who survives him. He was the father of seven children, all by his first marriage, four sons and three daughters. He died November 15, 1866, and was buried in Moorfield Cemetery. John Hofius, second son, was born March 16, 1801; raised on homestead farm; settled on a farm near Hermitage; was twice married, and was the father of a large family. He died in the year 1873 and was buried in the Sharon Cemetery. William Hofius, third son, was born May 12, 1806; moved to the State of Iowa about the year 1847-48, where he now resides; has been twice married, and is the father of a large family of children. James Hofius, fourth son, born August 8, 1808; moved to Wisconsin about the year 1855, where he died in the year 1865, leaving a family. Jonathan Hofius, fifth son, born May 12, 1817, on the homestead, where he has since resided, following farming. Mr. Hofius in his younger days was connected with the State Militia, holding the position of sergeant in the Shenango Sharpshooters. He was married September 25, 1847, to Sarah McHenry, who died October 28, 1849. September 23, 1888, he was again married, to Nancy, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Flower) Artherholt, of Brookfield, Ohio. Our subject and wife are members of the Baptist Church of Sharon. George Hofius, youngest child, was born July 22, 1822; was reared and educated in the township of Hickory; resides on part of the old place, and has always followed farming. He was married November 24, 1854, to Betsy, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Flower) Artherholt. He and his wife are members of the Baptist Church of Sharpsville. They have four children: Mary E., N. Emelda, Luther W. and Leonard C. Of the six daughters of George and Jane Hofius, but two are living: Anna Titus, widow of the late William Titus, of Hickory Township, born in 1803, is the mother of a large family of children and grandchildren; and Sarah, widow of George Haun, late of Hickory Township, born in 1819. She also is the mother of a large family. George D. Hofius, a son of John Hofius, was born in Hickory Township, July 19, 1824. He represented Mercer County in the State Legislature two terms, 1860-61. He died January 24, 1886, and was buried in the cemetery at Sharpsville. Socrates Hofius, son of Henry Hofius, was born March 16, 1842; was a member of Company H, Eighty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers; died while in the service, June 2, 1865. Seth and J. P. Hofius, sons of William Hofius, reside at Sharpsville, Penn., and are identified with the iron industry. G. C. Hofius, son of Henry Hofius, resides at Hermitage; by occupation a farmer and acting justice of the peace. M. B. Hofius, youngest child of Henry Hofius, was a member of Company D, One Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers; resides at Grove City, Penn., and is engaged in mining and shipping coal.

THE HULL FAMILY were among the early settlers of Hickory Township. Three brothers, Daniel, Bashara and John Hull, natives of New Jersey, removed in youth to the vicinity of Pittsburgh, Penn., and in 1798 or 1799 located on farms in what is now Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn. All reared large families, and died on their respective homesteads in Hickory Township. John Hull married Patience Elliott, born in 1784, daughter of Capt. John Elliott, an ex-officer of the Revolutionary War, who settled on the banks of the Shenango River a short time before the Hull family came to the valley. John and Patience Hull reared a family of twelve children: Hiram (deceased), Annie (deceased, wife of Benjamin Reno, deceased), Mary (deceased, wife of Samuel Carnes, deceased), Emily (deceased, wife of James McWilliams, deceased), Catharine (widow of William Budd), Lewis (who died in Hartford, Ohio), Milton (deceased), John (of Greenville), Seth (of Cleveland), Jerusha (deceased, wife of David Strawbridge, deceased), Rue (of Greenville) and Jane (deceased, wife of William Grace), all of whom grew to maturity. When John Hull came to Mercer County his sole possessions consisted of an ax and a hoe, and he endured all of the trials and privations of pioneer days. He was a soldier in the War of 1812 at Erie. His first wife died in 1834, and he married Mrs. Sarah Wheeler, who died in September, 1858. Mr. Hull helped each of his children, and died a respected and honored pioneer father of the county, which he had done so much to settle, January 30, 1859.

WILLIAM JAMISON, JR., merchant, post-office Wheeler, was born in Hickory Township, this county, January 29, 1847. He is a son of William and Matilda (Kelly) Jamison, natives of Ireland. William immigrated to Mercer County, Penn., in 1832, and Miss Kelly in 1835. They were married in June, 1839, and located in Hickory Township, where they lived until about 1875. The mother died August 19, 1869, and the father has for the last ten years lived with his son William, being now eighty-five years old. There were six children born to them: John H., Anna B., wife of Wirt W. Fruit, of Jefferson Township; Samuel, William J., Sarah J., deceased, and George G., deceased. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church, and politically he is a Democrat. John H. enlisted in the War of the Rebellion, was wounded June 22, 1864, before Petersburg, Va., from the effects of which he died June 24, 1864, in the hospital at City Point, Va., and his remains lie in the National Cemetery there. Our subject graduated at Duff's Commercial College, Pittsburgh, Penn., June 24, 1864. He then accepted a situation with J. W. Ormsby & Co. in 1866, and remained in their store at Hermitage over two years, afterward keeping books for the same firm over two years. In 1871 he became a partner with his brother and Enoch Filer at Pleasant, and remained until 1884, when their property was consumed by fire. He was postmaster there for over twelve years. He then removed to the borough of Bethel, where he is engaged in a general mercantile store, and in 1886 was appointed postmaster here. He was married September 12, 1876, to Frances, daughter of Dr. A. Parsons, of Springboro, Crawford Co., Penn. They have five children: John P., died in infancy; Ada F., William B., Samuel H., Anna M. Politically he is a temperance Democrat, and the family belong to the United Presbyterian Church.

MOSES W. JENKINS, post-office Sharon, mining and civil engineer, is a son of John and Rachel (Jones) Jenkins, who immigrated to this county in 1849, and located in Clarksville, Penn. They had seven children: Ellis J., pastor of the United Brethren Church of Newburgh, Ind.; Jacob, of Ohio; Phillip, Joshua, who died August 29, 1888; Herbert R., of Mercer County; Dinah, Mrs. Bertwhistler, and our subject, who was born in 1845. At the age of eight years he started to work in the coal mines at Clarksville. Being deprived of the early advantages of an education, he had to rely upon his own resources to obtain his profession. In 1874 our subject leased the coal mine of Porter, Bailey & Co., and operated it for one year. He located at Jackson Centre in 1875, and opened a coal mine on the farm of B. A. Williams. The result of the opening of this mine necessitated the building of the branch of the Pittsburgh, Buffalo & Western Railroad into Jackson Township. In 1879 he engaged with E. A. Wheeler and opened the coal mine in the west tract below West Middlesex, where he remained one year and a half. He took charge of the Filer, Westerman & Co. mine at Jackson Centre in 1882, and remained with them four years as mine boss. In 1886 he connected himself with the New Virginia Coal Co., located in Hickory Township, as superintendent and mining boss. Mr. Jenkins was married in April, 1867, to Miss Hannah, daughter of Samuel Siddaoe, of Sharon, Penn. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 347, of Sharon, Penn.

CHARLES S. LOVE, farmer, post-office Sharon, Penn., is a son of Benjamin and Sarah (Stewart) Love, the latter being a daughter of Charles Stewart, of Westmoreland County, Penn. Our subject was born in 1815 in Mercer County. His father in 1814 removed from Westmoreland County, and settled in Hickory Township on the McBride tract. He had a family of twelve children: Margaret, wife of Emanuel Millikin, of Ohio; Hugh, Mary A., Charles S., Robert, Joseph S., Dr. James, who died in McKean County, Penn.; John, Samuel C., Dr. Benjamin, died in Sharpsville, Penn.; William, Flora E., Thomas B. and Charles S. Our subject was reared on the homestead farm where he now resides. He learned the carpenter's trade and was engaged in that business for a number of years. In 1847 he engaged in farming, and has since followed that occupation. He was married in 1847 to Miss Tirzah, daughter of Robert McClellan, of Ohio. Our subject and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Sharon, and politically he is a Republican.

JOSEPH LINN, deceased, was a son of James and Esther (Donehay) Linn, natives of Ireland. Joseph came from Coitsville, Ohio, in 1828, and purchased a tract of land containing 100 acres, which was afterward increased to 300 acres, in Hickory Township, and made his settlement on it in 1836. He married Nancy Gordon, of Lackawannock, and by this union they had four children: Eliza, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Jane, deceased, and Newton. Joseph died in 1882; his wife survives him and resides upon the homestead farm with her son Newton. Mr. and Mrs. Linn were members of the Presbyterian Church, of Clarksville, from its organization. He was a Democrat in politics, and a man who took great interest in the offices of his township. Newton, the youngest child, was born in 1854 on the home farm, and was reared in the township. He has always followed farming, and taken an active interest in the offices of his township, and was secretary of the school board from 1882 to 1884. He is a Democrat in politics, and has worked for the welfare of his party, filling all the positions on the election board. He is a member of the Clarksville Presbyterian Church, has been one of its trustees and secretary of the Sunday-school. He was united in marriage in 1877 to Nannie J., daughter of William B. and Rebecca Ann (Butterfield) Rust, of Hickory Township, and by this marriage has four children: James W., Joseph C., Nannie N. and Charles C.

PROF. WILLIAM S. LYTLE, post-office Hermitage, Penn. The subject of this sketch was born in Huntingdon County, Penn., in 1822, and is a son of William and Ruth (Everhart) Lytle. He was reared and educated in Venango and Lawrence Counties, of this State, and came to this county in 1848. His early life was engaged in farming, and in 1844 he engaged in the iron business. He was subsequently engaged in teaching at Shaffer's school-house, now Reno, Venango Co., Penn. In 1860 he was in the employ of Veach & Burnett, of West Middlesex, as their book-keeper until 1865, when he located in Pittsburgh, as book-keeper for A. Fultons, Son & Co. In 1883 our subject located in Indian Territory, and was employed for three years as a teacher among the members of the Choctaw Nation, and is vice-president of the Wilberforce Institute of the Choctaw Nation, and professor of natural and mental philosophy of that institution.

Mr. Lytle has spent the larger part of his life teaching in the schools of Hickory Township. He is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge 517, of Sharpville, Mercer Co., Penn., also a member of the Indian Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, No. 1, of Indian Territory. He was married in 1846 to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Bell, of Venango County, who died in 1847, leaving one son, Christian E., of Washington County, Penn. His second wife was Miss Margaret, daughter of Abram Leasure, of Mercer County, to whom he was married in 1850, and by this union they have six children now living: David S., who resides in the Indian Territory; Mary, wife of Aaron Coon, of Transfer, Mercer County; Elizabeth M., wife of George Teeager, of Indiana; Nettie, wife of D. J. Stewart, of Pittsburgh; Anna, wife of Edward Peters, of Sharpville, and Ella, now at home. Mr. Lytle is a member of the Congregational Church of the Choctaw Nation. He is the author of the history of the coal and iron interests of Mercer County, in a former history of the county.

THOMAS MILES, a soldier of the Revolution, and his wife, Mary (Treadway) Miles, natives of Maryland, settled at Plain Grove, in what is now Lawrence County, in the last decade of the eighteenth century, and from them have descended the Miles family of Mercer County. They were the parents of eight children: Aquilla, Joshua, Hannah, Sallie, Lewis, Thomas, Nellie and John. The father died in 1827. Thomas, the fourth son of Thomas, Sr., was born in 1794, was a harness-maker by trade, and served in the War of 1812 under Capt. James McCune. He married a daughter of Capt. James and Sarah (Nelson) McCune, by whom he had the following children born to him: Rebecca, married Robert Young; Aquilla, Thomas, Elizabeth, married Edward Clingan; Ellen, married Hugh Miles; Clarissa, married Morrison Lewis; Milonorris and John. The parents died in 1865 and 1863, respectively. Aquilla, the eldest son of Thomas, Jr., was born in 1820, at Plain Grove, and was reared in Shenango Township, on the homestead where his father settled the same year. In 1841 he married Catharine, daughter of John and Rebecca (Copenhagen) Riblett, and by this union they had fourteen children: John R., Mary S., married Charles Livingston; Thomas H., Rebecca M., married David Love; Hannah C., married James McCollough, of Jefferson Township; Ella J., married George Reimold, of Grove City, Penn.; Caroline E., married Charles Hawthorne, of Lackawannock Township; James N., of Hickory Township; Sarah W., married Lewis Reno, of Jefferson Township; Frances I., married Joseph L. Baker, of Springfield Township. Thomas, the third son of Thomas, Jr., was born in 1822 on the homestead in Shenango Township, and at an early age engaged in farming, which he has since followed. He was united in marriage in 1884, to Miss Rebecca, daughter of Samuel Bell, of Shenango Township, and by this union they have the following children: Sarah, widow of Newton, Dunham, deceased; Margaret, wife of James Haggerty, of West Middlesex; Jane, John N., Nancy, Clara, Alice and Thomas. Mr. Miles is an elder in the Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex.

MATHIAS MILLER, post-office Hermitage, was born October 4, 1820, in Bavaria, Germany. In 1850 he immigrated to this country, and settled at Greenville, remaining there only one year, when he changed his location to Hickory Township, and for eighteen years he was engaged in the coal mines of that vicinity. He then purchased a farm at the same place, and engaged in agricultural pursuits. In October, 1877, he purchased the mercantile business, at Hermitage, of J. W. Ormsby, and at the same time he received his appointment as postmaster of that office, which position he still fills. Mr. Miller was married in 1847 to Miss Catherine Foltz, of his native town, and by this marriage they have eight children: Jacob, who is engaged in business at Sharon; Catherine, Mrs. Charles Doerr, of Sharon; Augustus, Mary, Frederick P., who is engaged in the grocery business in Sharon; Mathias, engaged in farming with his father; Maggie and Lizzie. Mr. Miller is a member of the German Reformed Church.

HON. JAMES W. ORMSBY, farmer, post-office Sharpville, Penn., was born July 15, 1808, in Pittsburgh, Penn. His parents were Matthew and Jane (Williamson) Ormsby, of Scotch-Irish extraction. The father came from Chambersburg, Penn., and the mother from Centre County, Penn. They settled in Pittsburgh, where he followed the business of cabinet-making. In 1811 they settled in Mercer County, at Greenville, and in the War of 1812 he joined the American army, and did some service. They had the following children: Dr. John, who died in Utah; James W., Dr. Oliver, who died in Mercer; William, who was killed by the Indians in Nevada; Eliza J., Mrs. Dr. Fowler, of Butler County, Penn.; Amanda, married John Reznor, who died, leaving one child, John, deceased (she then married A. D. Waldron, of San Francisco, and prior to his death she returned to Mercer County, and died, leaving two children); Lemuel, who died in Indian Territory; David, a physician, who settled in Kentucky and died there; Joel and Samuel, who died at the ages of twelve and fourteen years, respectively; and Ezra, who started with his family from Indian Territory in 1866 to California across the plains, and has not been heard from since. James W. was the second eldest child, and his early opportunities for an education were confined to the small country schools of that day. When he was sixteen years of age, or in 1824, his father died, and he remained at home for two years after his death, and assisted his mother in maintaining the family. Desiring to push himself forward in the world he induced his mother to purchase a wool carding machine, and locating at Clarksville he commenced, at the age of eighteen years, a business career that has but few equals in the history of the Shenango Valley. In 1832 he purchased the place where he now resides and engaged in farming, and in 1836 he obtained the contract for supplying the meat for the men engaged in building the canal that was then being constructed through Mercer County. He then engaged in purchasing all classes of stock and in driving them to the Eastern market. Maj. Ormsby was largely engaged in the coal trade of Mercer County, being among the first to open up its coal banks. He operated largely in real estate, and at one time owned large tracts in this county and at other points. In 1873, in company with his sons, Leander and E. W., he erected, at Sharpville, a blast furnace, at a cost of $120,000, and engaged in the manufacture of iron. Here came the most trying period of his life, for in the panic that swept the country that year he saw pass away a fortune of over $300,000, the earnings of many years. Even the homestead where he had resided for forty-one years went with the balance, and at the age of seventy-two he found himself comparatively penniless. But future events proved that the boy who forty-seven years before had started unknown with a carding machine in a small village, as a foundation of his subsequent fortune, was equal to the occasion. Removing to a rented farm in Hickory Township he again commenced the battle of life. After remaining there a short time he went to Brazil, Ind., and again engaged in the coal business, with results that enabled him to buy back his old homestead, upon which he now resides. Maj. Ormsby has always taken a great deal of interest in the public affairs of his county and State. Under Gov. Johnson's administration he was appointed a justice of the peace, which office he filled for many years in Hickory Township. He was appointed major in the State Militia by Gov. Ritner. In 1883 he was elected a representative, and served in the long session of 1883-84. Politically

he is an ardent Democrat, and has always furthered and upheld the principles of that party. He has also taken a deep interest in educational matters, and has been officially identified for years with the schools of his township. Maj. Ormsby was married in 1832 to Miss Jane, daughter of Squire Edward and Mary (Satterfield) Campbell, of Hickory Township. She died in August, 1873, leaving three children: Edward W., of Central City, Neb., who is engaged in the stock business; Leander M., who resides at Mercer and is engaged in the coal business at Jackson Centre, Penn., and Margaret J., who married Dr. Babcock. In 1876 Maj. Ormsby was married to Miss Margaret E., daughter of Thomas and Esther (Porter) Stewart, of Hickory Township. The Major is a member of Clarksville Presbyterian Church, and one of the most enterprising citizens who have ever lived in Mercer County.

THOMAS PERRY, post office Wheatland, Penn., is a son of the Rev. John and Mary A. (Fullwood) Perry, natives of England, who immigrated to this country in 1852, and located at Johnstown, Penn. In 1868 he came to Mercer County and located at Wheatland as the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died while in charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Clarksville, Penn. He was twice married; by the first marriage he had four children: William, John, Elizabeth and our subject. His second wife was Mrs. Ann Griffiths, and by this marriage they had one son, Joseph, a resident of Youngstown, Ohio. Thomas Perry was born November 3, 1844, and was educated at Johnstown, Penn. At an early age he entered the mines of that locality and followed the business of a miner until he was twenty-one years old. In 1865 he enlisted in the Regular Army, Second United States Cavalry, and served three years on the plains. In 1868 he located in Wheatland, and was employed on the railroad. In 1870 he entered the employ of James Wood, Son & Co. as time-keeper, subsequently, in 1873, engaging in mercantile business at Wheatland, which he conducted until 1880. In 1876 Mr. Perry was elected a member of the school board, which office he has filled up to the present time. In 1878 he was elected justice of the peace and filled that office for two years. In 1880 he was elected representative from Mercer County, and served in the session of 1881-82. Our subject was married in 1869 to Miss Kate, daughter of Jenken and Esther Reese, natives of Wales. Mr. Perry is a member of Lodge 347, I. O. O. F., of Sharon, Penn., also K. of P. 387, of Wheatland, and is the present grand chancellor of Pennsylvania, and a member of the K. of E. No. 11, of Sharon. Politically he is a Republican.

HON. DAVID ROBISON, farmer, post-office Hermitage, Penn., was born in 1818, in Huntington, now Blair County, Penn., upon the farm where his grandfather, a soldier of the Revolution, first settled. The parents of our subject were Col. Abraham and Margaret (McCune) Robison. David was educated at the common-schools, and in 1849 he removed to Mercer County, and settled at his present place of residence, in Hickory Township, about four miles from Sharon. He was elected in 1868 to represent this county in the State Legislature, and served in the session of 1868-69, his brother representing the county of Blair at the same time. Mr. Robison has always taken an active interest in the public affairs of his township, having filled many offices of trust and honor. In 1849 he was united in marriage to Miss Sarah J., daughter of Charles Gibson, of Blair County, Penn., and by this union they have had eleven children: Margaret (Mrs. James Tenant, deceased), John M. (who married Miss Emma Graham, of Hickory Township), David W. (deceased), Mary (Mrs. Wesley Sloss, of Lackawannock Township), Abraham, Lucy J., Emma (Mrs. Joseph McGingan, of Montgomery City, Mo.), George, Charles (deceased), Alice (deceased) and William. Mr. Robison is a member of the F. A. M., Sharon Lodge No. 250: In politics he is a staunch Republican, and one of the most progressing and best informed citizens of the township.

JAMES SATTERFIELD, farmer, post-office Wheatland, is a son of Rev. James and Anna (Gibson), Satterfield. The grandparents of our subject were James and Margaret (Mead) Satterfield. The former was a native of Queen Ann County, Md., where the father of our subject was born in August, 1776. After the death of James, Sr., his widow married a Mr. Davis, and removed to Washington County, Penn. The Rev. James Satterfield was licensed to preach in 1800. He was then sent as a missionary to the Indians, and traveled as far west as Detroit. In 1801 he removed to Mercer County, and settled upon the land where his son, James, now resides. In March, 1802, he was ordained and installed as pastor of the two churches of Moorefield and Upper Neshannock by the Presbytery of Ohio. He subsequently had charge of the church in Brookfield, Ohio, in connection with Hubbard and Moorefield. His death took place at his homestead November 20, 1857, in his ninety-first year. He was thrice married; his first wife was Polly Orbison, of Washington County, Penn. He married for his second wife Miss Anna Gibson, who died September 12, 1815, leaving two sons and three daughters. His third wife was Miss Sarah, a daughter of Gen. David Mead, the founder of Meadville. She was the first white child born on the site of that city. She died in 1823, leaving one son and one daughter. Our subject is the only living representative of this family in the county, and was born in 1815. He was reared and educated in Mercer County, and has always followed farming as an occupation. He was united in marriage in 1839 to Miss Margaret, a daughter of Elijah Satterfield, of Maryland, who died March 11, 1888, leaving two children, Edward C. and Laura N.

THOMAS B. SATTERFIELD, deceased, was born in 1831 in Maryland. He was the son of Peter and Martha (Smith) Satterfield, natives of the same State. On the death of his father, which occurred when he was four years of age, he was brought to Mercer County, and reared and educated by his uncle, E. D. Satterfield, who resided near West Middlesex. Upon reaching his majority he engaged with his uncle in the purchase of horses and cattle and general farming, which he continued until his death, July 23, 1887. Mr. Satterfield's death was occasioned by the kick of a horse while bringing a number to his home. He was a man of unusual ability, of sterling integrity, a kind father and a true friend, and his untimely death was regretted by all who knew him. He was married in 1866 to Addie, a daughter of Robert and Phoebe (Newkirk) Donthitt, of Beaver County, Penn. He left to mourn his loss eight children: Charles D., Sarah H., Helen P., Ida H., Robert W., Thomas R., Mary A. and George Mc. The children are all at the home of his widow, known as Sunny Side Residence, in Hickory Township, which she purchased since his death.

THE SHILLING FAMILY were among the first settlers of Hickory Township, and are noted for longevity. The parents, George and Elizabeth (McBride) Shilling, were natives of Westmoreland County, Penn. The former was born February 24, 1781, and learned the blacksmith trade, and also served an apprenticeship to shoemaking in early youth, but after he was married he followed farming and blacksmithing. In 1814 he removed with his mother, wife and four sons, George, Andrew, Samuel and Henry, to Mercer County, and settled on a tract of 500 acres whereon the borough of Wheatland now stands. Here three children, Mary, William and Sarah, were subsequently born. The four eldest were born in Westmoreland County, Penn. George was born September 4, 1808, was married to Eliza Davis, of Meadville, Penn.,

January 1, 1829, and with his wife resides in Lackawannock Township. They have reared three children, viz.: Amanda, wife of Robert Rankin, of Lackawannock Township; Henry A., lives near Hadley, and Gabriel D., of Findley Township. Andrew was born October 19, 1809, and lives near Wheatland. Samuel was born February 7, 1811, and was married November 26, 1835, to Mary, daughter of William G. and Elizabeth Welch, pioneers of Hickory Township. She was born in this township January 17, 1809, and reared two children, Dr. George W. and Elizabeth, both of Sharon. A few years after their marriage Samuel and wife moved to Ohio, where they resided until the spring of 1862, when they located in Sharon, and are still residents of that borough. Henry was born April 7, 1812, and on reaching maturity married Mary, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Hann, who settled in Hickory Township in 1830. She was a native of New Jersey, was born December 11, 1816, and reared five children: Elizabeth, wife of B. A. Williams, of Mercer; Albert L., of Wheatland; Jacob H., of Findley Township; Mary L., of Wheatland, and W. W., an attorney of Sharon. The parents spent their lives on the old homestead at Wheatland, where Henry died September 16, 1882, and his widow February 10, 1885. He was one of the substantial and respected pioneers of Hickory Township. Of the three youngest children of George and Elizabeth Shilling, Mary was born June 17, 1815, and married Seeley Castor, both of whom are dead; William was born December 30, 1816, and is now living in Iowa, and Sarah was born June 1, 1822, married Andrew Small, and both are dead. Elizabeth, wife of George, Sr., died in the Presbyterian faith in December, 1836, and he married Mrs. Jane (McFarland) Canon, who died without issue. He was again married, to Anna Lawton, who bore him one son, Miller, since deceased. George Shilling was a member of the Baptist Church, in politics a Democrat, and died on the old homestead in February, 1860. He was highly respected, and is still kindly remembered by many of the citizens of Mercer County. His mother resided with him until her death at the remarkable age of over one hundred years. George Shilling, Sr., was a man of wonderful energy and determination, and was the principal in the great land suit with the Bedford Land Company.

ANDREW SHILLING, farmer, post-office Wheatland, son of George and Elizabeth (McBride) Shilling, was born October 19, 1809, in Westmoreland County, Penn. He was reared upon the homestead at Wheatland and educated in the district schools. He early engaged with his father in farming, and has always followed that calling, and now resides upon the old homestead. He was married October 16, 1836, to Salina, daughter of Andrew Satterfield, and by this union they had six children: William, of St. Louis; Porter, deceased; James K., John, Sarah, wife of William Fulton, of Allegheny County, Penn.; Amanda E., wife of Milton Troutman. Mr. Shilling's wife died in 1874. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex. In politics he is a Democrat, and is a representative of one of the pioneer families of the Shenango Valley.

ALBERT L. SHILLING, farmer, post-office Wheatland, Penn., son of Henry and Mary (Hann) Shilling, and grandson of George and Elizabeth (McBride) Shilling, was born September 25, 1841, and reared on the old Shilling homestead, where Wheatland now stands. He was educated in the common schools of the Township. In 1863 he was united in marriage to Miss Josephine, daughter of Alden Woodward, of Hickory Township. By this marriage they have two children: Virgie, wife of William Laird, of Westmoreland County, Penn., and Mary B. Our subject early in life engaged in farming, and has followed it as an occupation. Politically he is a Democrat.

S. C. SIMONTON, JR., farmer, post-office Clark, Penn., son of Maj. S. C. and Silva (Gleason) Simonton, was born February 27, 1851, in Clarksville, Penn.; was educated at the Edinboro Normal School, in Erie County, Penn., and completed his education and graduated from the Iron City College, of Pittsburgh, in 1870. In the same year our subject located at Sharon and engaged in the insurance business. In 1881 he was elected prothonotary of Mercer County, and at the expiration of his term of office he resumed his insurance business at Sharon, which he continued until 1886, when he removed to his farm in Hickory Township, on the line of Pymatuning, and is now engaged in general farming. Mr. Simonton was married February 19, 1879, to Alda, daughter of Alonza Alderman, of Sharon, and by this union they have one child, William W. Our subject is a member of the K. of P., Lodge No. 398, of Sharon, and in politics is a staunch Democrat.

M. HENRY STAUNTON is a son of William and Mary (Evans) Staunton, natives of England, who settled in Allegheny City in 1818. Our subject was born September 23, 1831, in Allegheny City, and received his education in the public schools of that city. He early engaged as a clerk in a drug store, and subsequently engaged in that business for himself, conducting stores in New Castle, Sharon and Wheatland. In 1854 he married Miss Teresa, daughter of Isaac and Nancy (Quinby) De Forest, and by this marriage they have six children: Teresa, Isaac D., Harry L., Adoniram, May and Birdie. In 1882 he bought the farm of his father-in-law, and since that time has been engaged in farming.

JOHN STEVENS, farmer and carpenter, post-office Sharpsville, Penn., son of John and Hannah (Madox) Stevens, was born in 1824, in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn. The father of our subject was a native of Crawford County, Penn., and about 1813 removed to Mercer County, and settled in Pymatuning, on the line of Hickory Township, about two miles southeast of Clarksville. He was a carpenter and farmer. His family consisted of nine children: Mary A., Lewis M., Elizabeth, John, Jesse, William V., Hannah, Caroline and Angeline. Our subject was reared in Pymatuning Township, learned the carpenter's trade, and was engaged in that business for three years after serving his time. He then engaged in farming and followed it for thirty years. In 1884 he purchased his present place on the Sharpsville and Mercer road, in Hickory Township, and is engaged in the carpenter business in connection with farming. He was married in 1847 to Miss Sarah J., daughter of Berton Bust, of Pymatuning Township, and by this marriage they have seven children: Armelda J., wife of A. K. Mattocks, of Pymatuning Township; William H., James W., Mary, wife of John Blaney, of Hickory Township; John W., Maggie M., Nannie L. Mr. Stevens has been a member of the Clarksville Methodist Church for forty years.

CHARLES STEWART, a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., married Miss Fannie Stockton, of the same county, and settled in Hubbard, Ohio, about 1812. He was the progenitor of the Stewarts of Mercer County. They had twelve children: John, Robert, Margaret, Mrs. Jesse Welch; Sarah, Mrs. Benjamin Love; Charles, Joseph, Elizabeth, Mrs. Samuel Dennison, of Ohio; Fannie, Mrs. Henry Dennison, of Ohio; Thomas, Samuel C., deceased, of California; James G. and William S. The father died in Ohio, about 1840. James G., the seventh son, was born July 4, 1807, in Westmoreland County, Penn. He was a tanner by trade, and in 1831 located in Hickory Township, erected a tannery and carried on the business for twenty years, and then engaged in farming. He was married in 1831 to Miss Margaret, daughter of William Porter, of Lawrence County, Penn., and by this marriage they had four children: William F., Francis, deceased, Linus and Emma. Linus enlisted, in 1862, in the One Hundred and Forty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died from wounds received at the battle of Fredricksburg. William F., the eldest son, was born in 1834, in Hickory Township, upon the farm where he resides with his mother and sister Emma. He was educated in the common schools of the township and at Kingsville Academy, in Ohio, and turned his attention to teaching, following it as an occupation for some years, in connection with farming. He is unmarried, is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Clarksville, and in politics is a Republican. Thomas Stewart, the fifth son of Charles Stewart, was born in 1801, in Westmoreland County, Penn. He came to Mercer County about 1827, and settled in Hickory Township, five miles east of Sharon, and was a farmer by occupation. He married Esther, daughter of William Porter, of Lawrence County, Penn. They had eleven children: Samuel P., of Pymatuning Township; William, deceased; Amanda J., Mrs. Lawrence Lightner, of Mercer County; James, deceased; Margaret E., Mrs. Hon. James W. Ormsby, of Hickory Township; Alexander, deceased; Charles, deceased; N. Coe, of Cleveland, Ohio; Emeline and Anne, deceased, and John W., of Cleveland. Thomas Stewart died in 1875, his wife having previously passed away, in 1861. The simple home lives of such pioneers are well worthy of preservation in the annals of local history.

ARCHIBALD TITUS was born in the State of Delaware in 1770, son of a Scotch immigrant, and was married to Nancy Hartford, who was born in New Jersey in 1778, and immigrated to Hickory Township in the year 1802. He had a family of eleven children, five sons and six daughters: Isaiah, Martha, William, Lucy, John, Annie, Mary, Samuel, Sarah, James, Eliza. The descendants of the family now embrace ninety-five families and 447 persons, at present scattered over thirteen different States and Territories. Eliza (wife of Elijah Baker), the youngest, is living on the old place, and eating of the fruit planted by her parents eighty years ago. Archibald Titus did his full share of the pioneer duties of his day, was a stockholder of the first turnpike roads built in Western Pennsylvania, and was a member of the militia regiment called out to defend the building of the fleet of Commodore Perry, at Erie, in 1813, accompanied by his son-in-law, James Morford. The family had eleven representatives in the war for the suppression of the rebellion, and one now sleeps in an unmarked grave on a Southern battle-field. Of the original eleven children only two remain, Sarah and Eliza (October, 1888). Isaiah Titus, the oldest son of Archibald Titus, was born May 15, 1804, settled on a claim of his father's, four miles east of Sharon, where he resided the remainder of his days. He was one of the founders of the first Methodist Episcopal Church in this section of the country, and was a consistent member up to the time of his death. He married Elizabeth Boyer July 10, 1828, and by this marriage ten children were born to them: Archibald (married Jane Stambaugh, who died in 1868, leaving three children), Deliah (Mrs. Hiram Young, of Kansas), John (who lives in Allegheny County, Penn., married Sarah Best, and has eight children), Samuel (who was born December 1, 1837, died April 24, 1858), Mary M. (Mrs. James Jones, died June 1, 1873), Belinda (Mrs. Samuel Hewitt, died March 15, 1881), Margaret (Mrs. John Eberhart, of Iowa), Isaiah (who married Mary Moyer, has one child, and owns and lives on the old homestead), Wilford (married Marilla Alderman, who died in 1873, leaving one child, married for his second wife Angeline Moyer, and has five children), James (married Margaret Wilson, has six children). Isaiah Titus, the father of the above children, died March 25, 1855, and his widow February 7, 1874.

TROUT FAMILY.—Michael Trout, a Lutheran minister, emigrated from Germany, and settled near Hagerstown, Md., and subsequently removed to Westmoreland County, Penn. He had five sons: George, Michael, Philip, John and Jacob. The last mentioned was a saddler by trade, and came to Mercer County in 1811. He settled on a tract of land situated where George Trout, his son, now lives. Here he engaged in farming in connection with his saddler business. He married Mary, a daughter of George Shilling, of Westmoreland County, and there were born to them seven children. He died January 18, 1829, and his widow June 1, 1842. George, the eldest son of Jacob, was born in 1807, in Westmoreland County, Penn., and came to this county with his father, and was reared and educated in Hickory Township. He married, in 1837, Mary, a daughter of James and Jane (Christy) Ward, of Shenango Township, and by this marriage he had three children, two of whom are living, Della and Jacob C. Michael C., the second son of Jacob, was born September 30, 1810, and died in 1873. He learned the hatter's trade, and followed it for three years. He then engaged in the carpenter and building business, and while thus engaged he built the Sharon House at Sharon. He was elected, on the Democratic ticket, recorder of Mercer County in 1843, and served one term. He was immediately elected prothonotary, which position he filled for six years. He removed, in 1852, to a part of the homestead farm, and erected the residence where his son, Conrad C., now resides with his widowed mother. The same year he was elected, on the Democratic ticket, a member of Congress, and served in the session of 1853-54. After his term of Congressional labor expired he engaged with the Sharon Iron and Steel Rolling Works as its manager. He subsequently engaged in the machine business, under the firm name of McGilvray, Trout & Carver. He was also engaged in the planing-mill business, the firm being known as Carver & Trout. Mr. Trout was connected with the Sharon Banking Company as one of the directors. He also obtained the charter for the Sharon Gas Works. He opened the coal banks on his own property, and was extensively engaged in real estate operations. Mr. Trout was always alive to public affairs, and was president of Hickory Township School Board for over twenty years. He was married January 14, 1835, to Margaret J., daughter of Gabriel Carkhuff, a native of New Jersey. By her he had two children: William E. (born July 3, 1838, and died June 16, 1841) and Conrad C. (born July 29, 1845). The latter was educated in Sewickley, Beaver Co., Penn., Poland, Ohio, Agricultural College of Ohio, and at the Iron City Business College of Pittsburgh. Mr. Trout is now engaged in farming and dealing in real estate. Henry, the third son of Jacob, is dead. Mary, the eldest daughter of Jacob Trout, was married to James Hann, and they reside in Hickory Township. Sarah, the second daughter, married Christopher Hann. Olivia, the third daughter, is single, and resides with her sister, Mrs. Sarah Hann. Jacob, the fourth son, was born June 22, 1823, learned the trade of a carpenter, and follows farming in connection with his trade. He married Sarah, a daughter of William and Ann (Hofius) Titus, and has six children: William H. (a banker of California), Alfaretta (Mrs. Reuben Howell), Michael (of Colorado), Mary (Mrs. E. R. Powell, of Montana), Ida and George.

TROUTMAN FAMILY.—George Troutman, a native of Northumberland County, Penn., was a descendant of a German of that name, who came to this country at an early date. George married Catherine Muse, and in the year 1823 they came with their family of six children and settled at Brookfield, Ohio. George, their eldest son, was the only one who made this county his permanent home; he was born in Northumberland County, Penn., in the year 1792, married Mary Boyer, of Berks County, and in 1823, when his father came to Ohio, he located at Sharon, where he followed his trade as carpenter until he purchased his farm in Hickory Township, where he resided until his death, which occurred February 7, 1875, his wife surviving him until February 24, 1886. They had ten children: Lemuel, Joseph, Caroline, Mrs. P. Dunham, of Sharpsville; Sarah, Mrs. John Dennison, of Jamestown, Penn.; George F., of Lackawannock Township; Valentine, of Hickory Township; John P., of Ohio; Elizabeth, Mrs. A. R. Dunham; Luther, and Henry M., of Sharon. Lemuel and Luther are deceased long since. John P., of Trumbull County, Ohio, recently deceased, leaves a family of nine orphaned children, his wife having died some four years previous. Joseph Troutman, the second son of George and Mary Troutman, was born in 1821, in Clarion County, Penn., and was reared and educated in Mercer County. In the year 1848 he married Miss Nancy, daughter of the late James Clark, a well-known citizen of Hickory Township, and one of its early settlers. In the same year he purchased the farm where he now resides, and has followed farming and dealing in stock ever since. In the year 1886 he met with a sad bereavement; in the short space of four months, his mother, wife, only son, Perry B., and little grandson, child of Perry B., all died and were interred at Moorefield Cemetery. He has a daughter living, wife of G. C. Hofius, at Hermitage, Penn. His son Perry B. Troutman was aged thirty-six years at the time of his death, and had resided at Jamestown, Penn., for about fifteen years, being for a long time agent of the Union Express Company, afterward engaging in the mercantile business with Carr, Dennison & Co.; a few months prior to his death he came to Sharon, and entered the firm of T. J. Gillespie & Co. He was married September 15, 1881, to Miss Grace McCartney, of Jamestown, Penn., who, with their little son Carl, still survives him.

JOHN WELCH, deceased, was a son of William G. and Elizabeth (Flenniken) Welch, and was born in 1806 and died in 1881. His father was a native of Washington County, Penn., and settled in Hickory Township about two miles north of West Middlesex in 1801. William's family consisted of five children, one of whom died in infancy: Jane (married Luke Porter and is dead), John (deceased), Mary (wife of Samuel Shilling, of Sharon) and Sarah (widow of James Mathers, of Greenville). John was reared and educated in Hickory Township, and was married in 1833 to Miss Eliza, a daughter of Andrew Satterfield. By this union they had ten children, seven of whom survive: William (resides in Ohio), DeKalb (lives in Hickory Township), James (a resident of Montana), Elizabeth, C. D., Selina and Emma. Mr. Welch was a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church of West Middlesex. His widow resides with the four last mentioned children upon the old homestead in Hickory Township.

BIOGRAPHIES OF LACKAWANNOCK, EAST LACKAWANNOCK AND WILMINGTON.

LACKAWANNOCK TOWNSHIP.

GEORGE ALLEN, deceased, was born November 13, 1823, in Shenango Township, this county. His father, Joseph, was born September 19, 1794, in Ireland, and came to America when nine months old, with his parents. They settled in Ohio. Joseph remained with his parents until June, 1820, when he married Miss Mary Irwin. He then purchased a farm near West Middlesex, on which they settled. There were six children born to them. Christopher I. and Esther are the only ones living. Joseph's wife died May 5, 1833, at the age of thirty-three years. He was married the second time to Agnes Stewart, of Shenango Township, to whom were born two children: Robert (deceased) and Margaret J., wife of Thomas B. Porter, of Wilmington Township. Joseph obtained a good common school education and taught school for a few terms. In politics he was a Whig and Republican. They were members of the United Presbyterian Church, and he was a ruling elder for thirty-seven years. About three years before his death he was disabled by a stroke of paralysis. He died August 24, 1871, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. His wife died August 20, 1845. George, our subject, was married November 2, 1852, to Rachel J., daughter of Thomas and Betsey (Waugh) Porter, of Wilmington Township, this county. They located in Wilmington Township, where he worked at carpentering for a few years, and then lived on a farm in Lackawannock for eight years. Returning to Wilmington Township, they lived there a few years, when they went back to Lackawannock Township. His wife died March 20, 1854. He was married the second time, in 1856, to Martha Randolph, of Wilmington Township. By his first marriage there was one child, Elizabeth, now living in Youngstown, Ohio, and by his second marriage there were six children, four of whom are living: Joseph W., John C., Maggie A. (wife of G. W. Davis) and Charles S. The subject of our sketch was a firm Republican, and filled the offices of poor director, justice of the peace, school director and constable. He was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and died May 2, 1888, in his sixty-fifth year.

JAMES R. BLACKSTONE, farmer, was born May 24, 1849, in Mercer County. His great-grandfather, Samuel Blackstone, was one of the first pioneers of Wilmington Township, whose son James was born November 2, 1798, in Wilmington Township, and was married to Nancy Waugh in 1822, and purchased 200 acres of land in Lackawannock Township at a sheriff's sale, which was afterward sold to secure back taxes, and he made a second purchase. Here they lived until death, which occurred November 8, 1865, and February 12, 1871, respectively. They had four children: Thomas, Samuel, John and Hannah. They were of Scotch-Irish descent, and members of the Presbyterian Church, and he was a Democrat. Thomas, the father of our subject, was born July 8, 1824, in the old Whistler house in Mercer. He was married April 19, 1848, to Nancy, daughter of John and Nellie (Wilson) Reed, of East Lackawannock Township. Their children were James, Ella A., the wife of Samuel Thompson, and Villa. Nancy Blackstone died January 9, 1866, and he was again married March 5, 1867, to Mary, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Pew, and by her has had Lillie I. They are Presbyterians. James R. was married April 2, 1874, to Lizzie, daughter of Hanson and Margaret Campbell, resulting in three children: Ethel, Cora and Richard N. His wife died May 15, 1887, of brain fever. He is a staunch Democrat.

JACOB S. BORTZ, farmer, post-office Hill, was born November 12, 1816, in Westmoreland County, Penn. His father, Jacob, was born in Northampton County, Penn., April 24, 1790, and settled in 1822 on a piece of land of 160 acres, purchased of Joseph Junkin, in Lackawannock Township, all a solid wood lot, on which he erected a cabin. He afterward returned to Greensburg for his family, having formerly married Anna M. Fry, of Greensburg, Westmoreland Co., Penn. She was born December 15, 1794. There were fourteen children born to this union: Elizabeth, Mary, Jacob S. (these were born in Westmoreland County, Penn.), Simon, Leah (widow of the late David Kamerer, of Delaware Township), Jessie, David, Andrew, Sallie, Caroline, Sarah, George, Lydia and Hiram. He followed the occupation of a farmer and shoemaker. The parents were members of the Lutheran Church. Jacob died October 3, 1865, in Clarksville, and his wife died March 17, 1874. Our subject, Jacob S., was married May 1, 1848, to Anna M. Gangaware, of Pymatuning Township, and with her located on a farm in that township, which he purchased at the orphan's court sale, where they lived until 1854, when he bought the homestead in Lackawannock Township, of his father. The following are the names of his children: Leah, married William Zahniser; Aaron G., married Maggie H. Bye; Sarah, wife of William Bartholomew; Phyllis, married Edward Zimmerman; Lucinda H., wife of Ephraim Zahniser; Martin L., John J., Lydia S., Ella E., Phoebe R., Elias M., Rachel R. and Anna M., deceased. Jacob S. is independent in politics, and he and wife belong to the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM H. BURGESS, farmer, post-office Worth, was born December 24, 1847, in Lackawannock Township. His father, James, was born April 6, 1817, in Ohio, where he grew up to manhood and was there married to Miss Agnes Hogg. Both were of Irish descent. They located on a farm of fifty acres in Lackawannock Township, Mercer Co., Penn. There were seven children born to this union: Mary A., born in Ohio, now the wife of Robert Strain, of Kansas; Elizabeth J., died, at the age of seventeen years, of diphtheria; William H., Sarah E., wife of Samuel Ross; Andrew (deceased), George V., Flora L. James, the father, acquired a superior education. He taught school several terms, and was also engaged in book-keeping. He was justice of the peace for many years, and was employed as clerk in Pollock's store, at Jonesville, for many years, at the same time carrying on the farm work. He was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, of Lebanon, was one of the founders thereof, and a deacon and leader of the singing for many years. He died September 23, 1859, in his fifty-ninth year, and his widow in December, 1870, in her forty-eighth year. Our subject was married April 20, 1871, to Maggie A., daughter of Robert and Martha (McWilliams) Lusk. He purchased the old homestead and settled thereon. There were two children born to them, Cora A. and one who died in infancy. He obtained a good education at the common schools. They are members of the First United Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican, and has held the offices of constable, collector, assessor and school director.

DANIEL C. BYERS, deceased, settled in Lackawannock Township at an early date. He was married to Miss Maria McBurney, of Deer Creek Township. They located in a log house in the woods, and on the grounds now occupied by the Greenfield Hotel. He engaged in farming, hotel keeping and merchandise business, and was extensively known as the auctioneer. He dealt heavily in stock and country produce. Shipments of produce and merchandise were made to Pittsburgh by a six-horse team, loading both ways. There were ten children born to them: Alexander M., president of the Iron City National Bank of Pittsburgh, also manufacturer of gas pipes at the same place; Levina, died April 29, 1880, in her forty-ninth year, wife of Thomas Jones, of Clarksville; Sebina, single, lives with her brother at Greenfield; Julia, widow of Dr. Benjamin Love, of Sharon; Samuel, lives in Pittsburgh; Jennie, wife of William Miller, of Allegheny City; James W., deceased; William H. H., Ebeneser, of the firm of A. M. Byers & Co., of Pittsburgh, and Thomas H. Daniel C., their father, obtained a good common school education. Politically he was an old-line Whig. They were members of the United Presbyterian Church. He died February 11, 1854, in his fifty-eighth year, from the result of being thrown out of his carriage and fracturing his skull. His widow died March 9, 1879, in her seventy-seventh year. William H. H. was born in 1846 and Thomas in 1850. J. W., H. H. and T. H. began business in Greenfield, under the firm name of Byers Bros., in 1866, conducting a general merchandise store, and in addition carrying on an extensive business in shipping stock, grain, wool and farm products to Pittsburgh and other markets, now carried on by H. H. and T. H., under the same name, Byers Bros. Politically they are both Republicans.

MOSES BYLER, farmer, post-office West Middlesex, was born in 1827 in Centre County, Penn., to Christian and Magdalen (Yoder) Byler, natives of this State. Of their children, six are living: Christian, Jr., lives in Lawrence County, married to Mary Caffman; Solomon, married Anna Caffman, also lives in Lawrence County; Samuel, lives in Kansas; Jonas, Mary and Moses live in Lackawannock Township. Christian died in 1851 at the age of sixty-seven years. His widow died in 1874 at the age of eighty-three years. Jonas was born in 1818 and Mary in 1823. Moses and Mary purchased a farm of 100 acres, known as the Samuel Sweezer farm, in Lackawannock, where they now live, and with them live their brother, Jonas, and a niece, Miss Barbara Byerly. They are members of the Menonite Church, and hold their worship from house to house. In politics they are Republicans.

R. T. GREEN, farmer, post-office Hill, was born July 12, 1833, in Chester County, Penn., son of Richard and Martha Green, to whom were born three sons and one daughter: John, Catharine, Henry, Richard T. The parents came to Lackawannock Township in 1849, and located on the Kelly farm, in what is extensively known as the old "Red Tavern," on the State road. They remained here until he retired from business. The father died October 16, 1868, and the mother September 28, 1873. Richard T. continued the same business until 1864, after which he was in a hotel at Delaware Grove three years, at Greenville one year and at Hamburg twelve years, in what is known as the Washington Hotel. In 1871 he returned to the old Red Tavern stand, which had been converted into a private house, and has since followed the occupation of a farmer. He was married July 14, 1854, to Rachel, daughter of Aaron and Anna (Davis) Vanatta, of Lackawannock Township. Three children have been born to them: M. Virginia (wife of Ed. Mayer, of Allegheny City), Mary (wife of J. L. Vandeverter), Anna Maud. His education was completed at the Fairmount boys' school, Philadelphia, and at the Cootsville High-school. ANDREW J. DUNLAP, post-office Wheeler, was born in Mahoning County, Ohio, October 9, 1837, and is a son of Alexander and Eliza (Burgess) Dunlap. The father was born December 11, 1806, and after his marriage lived in Ohio until 1851, when they came to Mercer County and purchased a farm of Squire Graham, near Greenfield. Of his ten children, seven are living: John P., Andrew J., Josiah, Mary, wife of Robert Taylor; William, Jennie and Zannie. Alexander is a Democrat, and is eighty-one years of age. His wife died September 23, 1878. Andrew remained with his parents until January 1, 1861, when he was married to Margaret, daughter of Alexander and Mary (Hemphill) McGuffey, formerly of Washington, Penn. He went to Ohio for a few years, and then settled in Mercer County. Alexander McGuffey was a native of Scotland, born in 1767, and died in March, 1855. He was the father of the publishers of McGuffey's series of school books. Mrs. McGuffey resides with her daughter, Mrs. Dunlap, at the advanced age of ninety-five years. Our subject, after his marriage, settled on a farm of fifty-three acres near Greenfield, where they still reside. He enlisted in the late war on October 2, 1862, under Capt. L. C. Morrow, of Company H, One Hundreth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was soon stricken down with typhoid fever and inflammatory rheumatism, and after six months was honorably discharged and returned to the farm. He is a Prohibitionist, and with his wife belongs to the United Presbyterian Church.

DR. THOMAS ELLIOTT, post-office Worth, was born in Fayetteville, Lawrence Co., Penn., March 1, 1851, to John and Hannah (Barr) Elliott. His parents came from Castle Fin, Ireland, and settled in Fayetteville in 1849, where they remained until 1853, when they located at Elliott's flouring-mill, in this county. Here he settled on a farm, which he managed in connection with the mill. They had six children: Thomas, Samuel E., who is a Presbyterian clergyman at Mount Pleasant, and was married to Catherine, daughter of James Clark, an attorney of Washington County, Penn.; Latetia, John W., attending medical college in Cleveland; Lydia A., and James, drowned when a boy in the mill-dam. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church of Neshannock, where John was an elder for many years. They were of Scotch-Irish descent. Politically he was a Democrat. The children have all had the benefit of a collegiate education, three of them having graduated from Westminster College, and Samuel at Princeton Theological School. Dr. Thomas attended the Westminster College, and was in his first term of the junior class when his health failed him. He then spent one season in Ireland, and returned to New Wilmington, where he read medicine with Drs. Popino & Brugh until the winter of 1874, when he went to Jefferson Medical College, in Philadelphia, and graduated in 1877, in the meantime spending one winter in Bellevue Medical College, New York. He located in Greenfield, Mercer Co., Penn., in the practice of his profession, in 1878, where he still remains, and by prompt attention to professional demands, coupled with his energy, ability and success, he is gaining a host of friends within the circle of his extensive practice. On October 24, 1878, he was married to Miss Maud, only daughter of Thomas and Emeline (Carson) Johnson, of Wilmington Township, this county. They are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and politically he is a Republican.

STEWART HODGE, farmer and stone-mason, post-office Worth, was born in 1822, near Clarksville, this county, and is a son of Robert and Rebecca Hodge, both natives of this State, Robert being born in Fayette County. The Hodge family were old pioneers of the county, having settled near Clarksville before the War of 1812. They came from Fayette County via Pittsburgh, where they took passage in a canoe, which they paddled up the Shenango with poles. They purchased a farm of 200 acres from Mr. Rankin, and, after having it well improved, found the title was deficient, consequently they had to pay for it the second time. While assisting to raise a barn Robert had his leg broken, and after suffering from it eighteen years, finally had it amputated. There were sixteen children born to them, of whom Stewart was the seventh son. The parents lived to a ripe old age, the father being eighty-two years and the mother seventy-nine years of age at the time of their deaths. They were members of the United Presbyterian Church for many years. Stewart was married in 1847 to Eliza, daughter of James and Rebecca (Thatcher) Terrance, of this county. He purchased thirty acres of land near Clarksville, where they remained for a time, but he subsequently sold it, and followed the occupation of a furnace keeper for twenty-one years, during which time he enlisted under Capt. Chapman, Company K, Sixty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers. He served two and a half years, thirteen weeks of which time he was a prisoner in Libby and Belle Isle. His wounds were confined to a fractured bone in the right arm. There were six children born to them: William, James, Cynthia A., wife of James Titus, of Ohio; Stewart and Celone, died young, and Frank, lives in Ohio. His wife died in 1865, and in 1870 he was married to Mary M., daughter of John and Mary A. Cron, by whom he has four children: Freddie R., Edward E., Saddle I., and one other who died in infancy. He was educated in the district schools and worked at the stone-mason trade until 1887, when he purchased a farm of forty acres in Lackawannock Township, from William J. Miller, where they are now living. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a Democrat.

William was married May 6, 1839, to Elizabeth, daughter of Lewis and Jane (Parry) Griffith, natives of Merthyr, Tydville, South Wales, and who immigrated to America and settled in Baltimore, where Elizabeth was born February 28, 1818. William purchased a farm of forty acres in East Lackawannock Township, on which he now lives. They are the parents of ten children: Mary J., wife of William Livermore, of Cool Spring Township; Ann L., Edward S., Phoebe, Isabell, Caroline, Daniel, Amelia, William and John, of whom only Mary J., William and Edward are living. Politically Mr. Edwards is a Democrat. He has filled many of the local township offices, and has been constable and collector for many years. He and wife have been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Mercer for more than forty-six years, and are among the most respected citizens of the county.

S. W. HAWTHORN, farmer and stock grower, post-office Hoagland, was born April 12, 1853. His grandfather, Alexander, was born in 1780, near the Scotch and English boundary line, and immigrated to America at an early day, locating near New Castle. He enlisted in the War of 1812, but was not called into active service. He remained on the farm during his life excepting a few years when he kept hotel at New Castle. He died in 1864, preceded by his wife many years. James, the father of our subject, was the oldest son, born September 11, 1808. He worked at the shoemaker's trade in Pittsburgh, until the cholera broke out, when he returned to New Castle. He was married to Hannah McFarland, who lived only one year, and was afterward married to Mrs. Margaret McJunkin, nee Cross, of Butler County, Penn. In 1852 they purchased a farm of fifty acres of John S. Thompson, in East Lackawannock Township, on which they settled, and were the parents of five children, Samuel W. and Anna Mary being the only living ones. His second wife died in 1860. In 1862 he was again married, to Sarah A. Thompson, of East Lackawannock Township, daughter of John and Sarah (Bell) Thompson. In 1878 he left the homestead and moved to Mercer. In politics he was a Republican. He was assessor and auditor of his township several terms. Samuel W. was married September 14, 1875, to Florence B., daughter of John and Mary (Carmon) Thompson, of Lawrence County, but who were born in Mercer County, and moved to Lawrence County in 1852. Samuel W. has three children: John B., Nellie M. and Mary L. His early education was obtained at the old stone pile schoolhouse, but he afterward attended commercial college at New Castle. Politically he is a Republican. He and wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

SETH HOAGLAND, merchant, was born October 16, 1822, in Mercer County, to John and Catherine (Hull) Hoagland. John Hoagland was born in Washington County, Penn., and came to Mercer County when four years old, about the year 1797, with his father, Henry Hoagland, who settled on the Shenango, near Sharon, on land now in possession of some of his posterity. His children were: John, Samuel, Joseph, Jesse, Mary, Matilda and Druzilla. John Hoagland was born October 31, 1792, and died October 3, 1872. His wife Catherine, whom he married January 21, 1826, was born October 20, 1799, and died January 11, 1881. Their children were: Seth; Mary A., born May 6, 1825; Hiram, born June 13, 1828; Hull, born November 11, 1829; Almira, born October 15, 1832; Jesse, born November 26, 1836. Our subject and Elizabeth Phillips were married October 3, 1843. Their children are: John P., Alonzo S., Hiram W., Almon P., Austin E., George W., Almira, Ida Caroline, Emma May and Susannah. Our subject being born and reared on a farm, was trained to habits of industry and hard labor from youth to manhood, and having chosen the occupation of a farmer has obtained a prominence of which he may well be proud. By indefatigable labor, untiring perseverance and excellent management he is now the owner of one of the largest and most beautiful farms in Mercer County. His well painted buildings, slate roofs, patent gates, agricultural implements and machinery indicate thrift and prosperity. He was among the first farmers who introduced fertilizers and improved breeds of stock in Mercer County. For many years he gave special attention to bee culture, and has been eminent in apiarian conventions. When quite young he was elected justice of the peace and served twenty-five years. He was formerly a Democrat, but since the nomination of Seymour for President he has not acted with that party. In 1882 he was nominated by the National Labor Party for Congress from the Twenty-sixth Congressional District, then composed of Butler, Crawford and Mercer Counties. He is now engaged in a general store on his farm, and is postmaster at Hoagland Post-office. In religion he is an outspoken Restitutionist, believing in Adam all died and in Christ all will be made alive. Just what was lost in Adam is being found in Christ. He condemns the opposing creeds and rival sects composing the heterogeneous mass of baptized professions, and claims the only way to immortal bliss is through faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

WILLIAM HUTCHISON, farmer, post-office Hoagland, was born February 8, 1831, in East Lackawannock Township. His father, John Hutchison, was born in County Down, Ireland, in 1794. He married Margaret McKelvy, of the same place, and in 1824 immigrated to this county, and purchased a farm, of 200 acres in East Lackawannock Township, on which they settled. There were six children born to them: Jane, wife of James Forsythe; Alexander, Richard, John, who married Susan Shannon, and lives in Mercer; Andrew, and William, our subject, who was married to Jane E., daughter of Amos and Susan (McWatty) Taylor, of Mercer County, Penn. The father was a Democrat in politics. William is extensively engaged in farming, operating 150 acres which was left to him by his father. He is an attendant of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Politically he is a Democrat.

JOHN H. LEES, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born September 27, 1827, in Macclesfield, England. His father, James Lees, was born at the same place, June 16, 1792. The father was married to Charlotte Birttenshaw, June 6, 1813. His trade was that of a silk weaver, which he followed for many years.

His union gave him nine children: William, James, Mary A., Charles, Hannah, Samuel, Samuel (2), Robert and John H. The family immigrated to this county in 1829, and settled in East Lackawannock Township, where the father was engaged in farming. He obtained an education by attending night schools. The parents were identified with the Presbyterian Church. The father died February 5, 1845, and his widow died September 21, 1878. Our subject was married December 17, 1867, to Kezia Smith, daughter of William and Catharine (Black) Smith, of Liberty Township. By her he has three children: James W., Hannah E. and Jessie M. Mr. and Mrs. Lees and their daughter, Hannah, are members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He served in the late war as a member of Company I, Fifteenth Pennsylvania Militia. He was corporal of that regiment. He has filled the office of school director for his township for three years, and in politics is a Republican. Further mention of his father is given in another part of this work.

MONNIE MILLER, farmer, post-office Hoagland, was born March 6, 1809, in Somerset County, Penn. In 1839 he was married to Leah Mishler, daughter of Peter and Susan (Berky) Mishler, of Holmes County, Ohio. In 1841 they settled in East Lackawannock Township on land which he purchased of the estate of his father, containing 225 acres, and known as the Levi Griffith farm. There were twelve children born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: David, Jacob C., Ann, wife of Philip Bruch, of Indiana; Fanny, wife of Henry Yarian, of East Lackawannock Township; Benjamin, Nannie, Elizabeth, wife of W. W. Johnson; Mary, wife of William B. Roupe; Zachariah H., married Sadie A. Virtue; Susie, Phœbe and John are dead. In politics Mr. Miller is a Democrat.

WILSON MILLER, farmer, was born July 22, 1838, in Pine Township, to Hugh and Adaline Miller, the latter a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Rambo) Wilson. John Wilson was born in Westmoreland County. The children of Hugh Miller and Adaline were: Infant, died small, and Wilson. Mrs. Miller died in 1840, and our subject lived with his grandmother Miller and daughters, Nancy and Mary, until about 1844, when he was taken home by his father, he having married again. Wilson Miller began learning carpentering in 1857 with William Lamar, of Pine Township, which he followed until 1885, when he bought a farm of seventy-four acres, and devotes his principal time to its cultivation. He was married to Margaret J. McCord, daughter of Matthew and Margaret (Nelson, a niece of Daniel Nelson) McCord. Mr. and Mrs. McCord had seven children: Mary, John, Margaret J., Harriet, Matilda, Ida and Della. Our subject has ten children: Albert K., married Mina, daughter of J. G. Gilfillan; Clarence G., attending a Presbyterian seminary at Chicago; Harry M., married Ida Vanhorn; Lillie J., Addie M., Mary F., Bessie, John, Maud A. and Carl. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a Republican.

ALEXANDER MCCOLLOUGH, farmer, post-office Mercer, son of Alexander, Sr., and Eleanor (Smith) McCollough, was born May 14, 1829, on the homestead on which he now lives. He completed his education in the Mercer Academy. In the spring of 1851 he went west and engaged in farming and stock raising on a rented farm for three years, thence to Iowa and continued the same vocation for seven years. He was married, June 12, 1856, to Harriet, daughter of James and Amelda (Bean) Stinson, of Hempfield Township, this county. Three children were born to them in Iowa: Amelda (deceased), Abby A. and William A. In 1862 they returned to the parental homestead to care for and protect his aged parents and an invalid sister, Mary E. Three children were born to them in Mercer County: Ellen E., John S. and Mary M. His family are all members of the First Presbyterian Church. Politically he is a Republican. He has filled the office of school director and road commissioner in his township. He was formerly identified with the Mercer County Agricultural Society. His sister, Mary E., died March 31, 1864, and his mother February 19, 1869, and his father July 19, 1869. In the year 1883-84 he erected a commodious brick house, and has materially improved the out-buildings and barns, which are well filled with stock. His son, William A., lives in Nebraska, where he has a situation as superintendent of a large ranch. He has been a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church for thirty years, led the singing in said church for twenty-five years, has been assistant superintendent of the Sabbath-schools of the church for fifteen years, and was one of the delegates to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church which met in Cincinnati in May, 1885.

ABEL S. McVEY, farmer, post-office Worth, was born May 26, 1839, and is a son of Abel and Elizabeth (Copper) McVey, of East Lackawannock Township. Abel was born in Lawrence County in 1793, and was married May 22, 1817. In 1831 they settled on the William Aspy farm of forty-nine acres, in East Lackawannock Township. There were eight children born to them, of whom Abel S. is the only surviving one. They were Martha, Nancy, Hannah, Benjamin, Maria, Alexander, Joseph and Abel S. Abel S. obtained his education at the common schools. He was drafted near the close of the war, but paid the amount of money necessary for a substitute. Politically he is a Democrat. He is the father of four children: Martha E., William Y., Lorenzo H. and Anson C. His father, Abel, died February 15, 1844. The widow is still surviving. Both were members of the Old Seceder Church of Mercer.

ADAM ROGERS, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born September 22, 1835, son of Thomas T. and Eva (Wise) Rogers, natives of Lawrence County, Penn. The father was of Irish and the mother of German descent. They had nine children: Andrew, George T., John, Adam, Catherine J. (wife of Jacob Steiner, of Cool Spring Township), Ruth A. (wife of J. P. Brest), John B., Mary M. (wife of Jacob Grimm) and Sarah E. (wife of James Eastlake, of Jefferson Township). Thomas T. was a farmer, and in politics a Whig and Republican. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in March, 1859. Adam was married March 27, 1864, to Harriet, daughter of David and Rebecca (McChesney) Roberts, of Lawrence County, Penn. They settled on a farm of ninety-two acres, purchased of John P. Hoagland, in East Lackawannock Township, where they reared a family of four children: Elizabeth K., Robert W., Edwin S. and Leota. The land was partially cleared, but the buildings have been erected by his own labors. He served seven years as school director. He was a volunteer in the late war in Company B, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, under Capt. James McCune, and served nine months. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Republican.

ANDREW STRANAHAN, farmer, was born in 1837. His father, Andrew Stranahan, emigrated from his native country, County Down, Ireland, in 1828, and lived three years in New Jersey, and in 1835 he went to Philadelphia, where he was married August 5, 1835, to Mrs. Elizabeth Shaw, and remained in that city until 1851, when he purchased 121 acres in East Lackawannock Township of the Dickson heirs. Here he died November 17, 1869. He and his wife were members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he in his younger days was a member of the I. O. O. F., having been admitted to the Amity Lodge of Philadelphia in 1842, and to a lodge in Mercer in 1851. Andrew Stranahan, our subject, was married April 4, 1866, to Jeannette, daughter of Thomas and (Merideth) Parsons, of Clarion County, who bore him three children: Thomas, Elizabeth and Harry L. Mrs. Stranahan died August 22, 1877, and he was again married, to Maggie J. Patterson, of Logan County, Ohio, May 25, 1880. He was for many years identified with the Democratic party, but is now an earnest Prohibitionist, and with his wife is a member of the Covenanter Church of Mercer. He was drafted in the service of his country, and after serving a short time secured a substitute, and subsequently enlisted in the 100-days' service, and remained until the close of the war.

ROBERT STRANAHAN was born April 22, 1841, in Philadelphia, and is a brother of Andrew Stranahan, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He came to Mercer County with his father, and on July 17, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, Tenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Corps, under Capt. A. J. Warner. He participated in the battle of Drainsville, the seven days fight under McClellan before Richmond, South Mountain, Antietam, the second battle of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, the Wilderness, and returned to Pittsburgh, in 1864, where he was mustered out of service. His injuries received in the war are total deafness in the right ear, and hernia in the right side. He was married December 19, 1864, to Julia, daughter of Jacob and Wilhelmina (Brenaman) Hess, of Ohio. Robert W., Julia A. and Mary L., their only children, are dead, and their mother died May 21, 1870; she was a member of the Unity congregation of Lackawannock Township. He was again married, February 28, 1871, to Elizabeth J., daughter of Euphema (Linn) Wallace, of Espyville, Crawford County, and has had five children: Euphema H. (dead), Ella M., Jennie E., James A. and Mary L. He settled in 1865, on a farm of fifty-five acres given him by his father. In 1887 he purchased twenty-eight acres of the McConnell farm adjoining. He and wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Democrat. He has served as school director for several terms. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. of Mercer.

ROBERT K. WALLACE, deceased, farmer and stone-cutter, was born April 26, 1815, in County Antrim, Ireland, son of Hugh and Ann (Kerr) Wallace, who immigrated to America at an early day, and settled in Jackson Township, this county. Robert K. followed them in 1839, and also purchased a farm of sixty acres in Jackson Township, at that time a dense forest. With his ax he commenced the clearing for his future home. He was married February 21, 1844, to Euphema daughter of John and Elizabeth (Collins) Linn, of Espyville, Crawford Co., Penn. They then settled on his farm in a house he had previously erected. There were eleven children born to them: Elizabeth (wife of Robert Stranahan), Hugh C. (died at the age of thirty years), John L., James S., William C., Robert K., George, Anna E. (wife of Milton Stephenson), Mary L. (widow of John J. Wharton), Phemie (wife of S. Hazen, of Crawford County, Penn.) and Talitha. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church of Springfield. Politically the father was a Democrat to the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, after which he became identified with the Republican party. He died on his old homestead February 1, 1870, in his fifty-fifth year. After his death the family sold the farm and purchased a portion of the Cozad farm, in East Lackawannock Township, where they still reside.

B. A. WILLIAMS, farmer, was born October 10, 1831, in Center County, Penn., to William and Mary (Poorman) Williams, natives of the same place, and who married in Center County, Penn., in 1818, where they remained five years, and then moved to Clarion County, Penn.; remained there a number of years, and then moved to Trumbull County, Ohio; remained there five years, then moved to Mercer County, Penn. They had ten children: Barbara A., married Henry Thompson; Sarah, married Richard Arthurs, an attorney at Brookville; Ithamer B., died in Rock Island County, Ill.; Mary E., married Harrison Clover; Benton A., resides in Mercer County, Penn.; Daniel P., farmer in Rock Island County, Ill.; Maria, deceased; John Z., lives in Mitchell County, Kas.; Princetta, married William McLaughlin; Gifford is a resident of Mercer County, Penn. The father of the above named children was born in 1800 and died March 23, 1876, and their mother was born in 1797 and died October 9, 1885. Our subject attended the common schools, and was brought up at farm labor. He began for himself at the age of twenty-three years, renting a farm of 175 acres in Hickory Township, of Everhart, Satterfield & Co., for seventeen years. He kept the cattle for this company, and after awhile became a partner in the stock. In 1868 he began cultivating a farm, known as the "Truesdale Farm," which he continued for five years. In 1872 he bought a farm in Jackson Township, and five years later he purchased the J. P. Kerr farm of 285 acres, in East Lackawannock Township, paying for the same $28,000 cash. He deals especially in cattle, sheep and hogs, and raises the finest of each. He was married to Lizzie Shilling, a sister of W. W. Shilling, a rising young attorney of Sharon. This union has given him four children: Mary E., married Austin Hoagland; Charles G., John F. and Jennie M. The family attend the United Presbyterian Church at Mercer, and he is a Democrat.

JOSEPH H. WRIGHT, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born on his present homestead July 10, 1818. George Wright, his grandfather, was married in 1778 to Margaret Simon, of the eastern part of the State. They settled in 1806 on a farm of 130 acres, which they bought from Samuel Hawthorn, when it was all a wilderness, in what was then Lackawannock, but now East Lackawannock, Township. Their family consisted of four boys and four girls: George, died in infancy; Maria, wife of John McCullough, of Cool Spring Township; John and Susannah, both deceased; William, deceased; Catharine, widow of Jacob Zahniser, of Mercer; Elizabeth and Adam, deceased. Their names are recorded in a Bible which has been in the family for 137 years. John, the father of our subject, was born in Franklin County, Penn., in 1783. At maturity he was married to Sarah, a daughter of Cyrus Beckwith, of Cool Spring Township. They remained on the old homestead, where five children were born to them: Sarah, married Benjamin McWilliams; George, died in infancy; Sabina, wife of William Stephenson, of East Palestine, Ohio; Joseph H. and Caroline, the latter deceased. They followed farming and coal operating. The subject's father was an elder in the United Presbyterian Church for many years, being such at the time of his death. His wife belonged to the same church. Politically he was a Democrat. He served a short time in the War of 1812. He was county treasurer one term and commissioner several terms, and served in various local township offices. He died in 1845, and his widow in 1846. At the death of the parents Joseph H. succeeded to the ownership of the farm. He was married September 3, 1846, to Phoebe, daughter of Daniel and Mary Edwards, of Armstrong County, Penn., and they are the parents of nine children: John, deceased; Mary, wife of James H. Allen, of New Castle, Penn.; Caroline, deceased; George, deceased; James E.; Sarah, deceased; Phoebe, still at home; Amelia and Emma, the latter deceased. Mr. W. obtained his education at the common schools and Mercer Academy. Politically he is a Democrat. His wife was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and died October 1, 1884, in her sixty-second year. Mr. W. and his three daughters are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

WILMINGTON TOWNSHIP.

AUSTIN B. CARTER, merchant, post-office Indian Run, was born June 18, 1859. He is a son of Joseph and Jane (Welker) Carter, of East Lackawannock Township. Our subject was married June 7, 1884, to Emma, daughter of John Montgomery, of Springfield Township. He purchased the store owned by R. J. McClain, at Indian Run, Wilmington Township, where he lives and continues the mercantile business. His wife was appointed postmistress in 1885, which she conducts in the store-room. One child, Pearl, is born to them. Our subject attended school at Grove City College, and graduated at the Iron City College, of Pittsburgh. They are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

JOHN W. McCrUMB, farmer, post-office New Wilmington, Penn., was born January 12, 1840, on the old homestead where he now resides. The paternal grandfather, John McCrumb, was a native of the County Down, Ireland, and immigrated to Chester County, Penn., and subsequently removed to Fayette County, Penn., and in 1799 to Wilmington Township, what is now in Lawrence County, Penn. In 1818 he removed to Wilmington Township, Mercer County, and purchased a tract of 400 acres, upon a portion of which our subject now resides. John, Sr., was married in Ireland, to Jane Bell, and the result of this union was seven children: one died on the passage to America; Sarah, married James Waugh; William, John, Samuel, Robert and James, all of whom are dead excepting John, who resides in Philadelphia, Penn. John, Sr., died February 6, 1842, and his wife in September, 1832. Robert, the father of our subject, was born in 1798. He was a farmer and spent his life upon the homestead. He was married July 20, 1836, to Prudence A. Crawford, and by this marriage they had five children: Harriet, wife of James Donaldson; John W., Martha R., wife of J. F. Caldwell, of Allegheny City, Penn.; Sarah E. and Valentine. The latter died at the age of seventeen. Robert McCrumb died February 13, 1864; his widow died July 20, 1881. Our subject was educated in the common schools of the township. He was reared a farmer, which occupation he has always followed. In 1887 he purchased the extensive flouring-mills formerly owned by Swogger Bros., in Wilmington Township, which he conducts in connection with his farm. Our subject has never married, and is one of Wilmington's most progressive and wealthy citizens. Politically he has followed the footsteps of his ancestors, and is a staunch Republican.

DAVID G. McWHIRTER, farmer, post-office New Wilmington, was born June 19, 1852, in Lackawannock Township, to John and Mary (Garvin) McWhirter, and is a second cousin of the late Hon. W. S. Garvin, of Mercer. David was married February 18, 1875, to Margaret, daughter of William and Alice (Spratt) Crocker, of Butler County. They settled on a farm of eighty acres in Wilmington Township, purchased of his father. Seven children have been born to them: John S., Charles A., William H., Frederick, Mary A., Leroy and Pearson, deceased. David obtained his education at the common schools. Politically he is a Democrat.

JAMES MERCER, deceased, was born July 14, 1819, in Wilmington Township, and was the oldest son of William Mercer, who came from Ireland, in company with his brother Henry, in 1788. James, our subject, was married October 29, 1850, to Joanna, daughter of James and Elizabeth Reed, of East Lackawannock Township. They settled on a tract of land which was willed to him by his Uncle Henry. There were three children born to them: James W. (deceased), Lizzie E. and Sarah B. James, our subject, received a common school education; was a volunteer in the late war in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three and one-half months, when he was taken sick and died January 21, 1863, in the forty-fourth year of his age. He was a Republican. His daughter, Lizzie E., was married September 19, 1878, to John Stein, and resides in Wilmington Township, Mercer County. Mr. Stein is a Republican, and was elected justice of the peace in 1886. Sarah B., the other daughter, was married May 25, 1886, to George W. McFarland, and also lives in Wilmington Township.

He was the eldest son of William and Sarah Mercer, and was married September 29, 1885, to Iris, daughter of William and Nancy Junkin, of Fayetteville, Lawrence Co., Penn., by which union there is one child, William A. William Junkin was a soldier in the late war; was taken prisoner, and cast into Libby Prison, where he died September, 1864, from starvation. He was to have been exchanged the next day if he had lived. Our subject settled on the old homestead, in which he purchased the interests of the other heirs. He completed his education at Westminster College. Politically he is a Republican. He was elected to the office of county auditor in 1881, served for three years, and was re-elected in 1884. He was a volunteer in the late war under Capt. J. C. Vincent, Company I, Fifty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

J. C. VAN ORSDELL, farmer, post-office New Wilmington, was born December 9, 1847, in what is now Pulaski Township, Lawrence County, and is the sixth son of Ralph L. Van Orsdell. Our subject was married December 23, 1869, to Mary E., daughter of John and Nancy (Jack) Barnett, of Mercer. They lived on a farm in Pulaski Township, Lawrence County, until 1882, when he purchased a farm of forty acres of F. T. Davis, in Wilmington Township, Mercer County, on which they now live. Five children have been born to them: Ralph M., A. Belle, Cora, Nannie and Maud. Our subject attended school at Westminster College for three years, after which he taught school for three years. He was elected justice of the peace in 1888 for a term of five years. His mother died April 30, 1887, at the age of seventy-four years. His father is spending his declining years with him. They are members of the Presbyterian Church.

THOMAS B. PORTER, farmer, post-office New Wilmington, was born March 25, 1835, in Wilmington Township, this county. His father, Thomas, was born in County Donegal, Ireland, in 1791. At the age of twenty-six he immigrated to America, and worked for four years on a farm for Squire Abrams, near Philadelphia. He then visited Mercer County and purchased a farm of sixty acres of Mr. McConnell. He soon after returned to Philadelphia, where he was employed by Stephen Girard, as overseer of his farm hands, where he remained two years. He then returned to Mercer County. He was married in 1826, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth Waugh, of Wilmington Township. They located on a farm, where they lived about ten years, when they sold it to Joseph Douglass, and bought 100 acres of Dr. Smith, near Wilmington. There were six children born to them: Sarah A., deceased wife of William Glendenning; Robert M., Rachel J., wife of George Allen; Thomas B., Elizabeth, wife of Allen Watson, and one child died in infancy. Thomas B., our subject, was married September 18, 1860, to Margaret J., daughter of Joseph and Nancy (Stewart) Allen, of Wilmington Township. They located on a farm which was given to him by his father, in Wilmington Township. To them were born eight children: Joseph S., Thomas M., William E., Nannie L., Lizzie M., Sadie M., Emma R., deceased, and Robert B. Our subject obtained his education at the common schools. He is a Democrat, and the family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

CHAPTER XXXV.

BIOGRAPHIES OF PYMATUNING, DELAWARE AND JEFFERSON.

PYMATUNING TOWNSHIP.

DAVID ARTHURHOLT, deceased, was born in Brookfield Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, December 12, 1820, and in 1828 removed to Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., with his parents, Samuel and Sarah (Bibighans) Artherholt. They were born and reared in Berks County, Penn., and lived for a few years in Northampton, Luzerne and Union Counties before their removal to Trumbull County, Ohio, about 1815, whence they came to this county. Both died upon the old homestead in Pymatuning Township, having had a family of four sons and three daughters. David grew up in this township, and married Miss Mary Ann, daughter of John H. Speir, of West Salem Township, April 15, 1841. He settled on a tract of uncleared land, deeded to him by his father, to which he added by purchase. He cleared up and resided on this farm till his sudden death by accident, June 18, 1887. Nine children were the fruits of this union: Curtis H., of Kent, Ohio; Smith S., of West Salem Township; Sarah E., wife of James P. Simcox, of Pymatuning Township; Silas A. and John R., of Greenville; Marilda, deceased; Myron D., of Pymatuning Township; Ida, wife of Charles A. See, of Butler, Penn., and Levoid D., of Greenville, Penn. His wife died September 4, 1867, and he was married again in the fall of 1868, to Mrs. L. (Miller) Splitson, but left no children by the second marriage. Mr. Artherholt and wife were members of the Reformed Church, and he was an ardent supporter of the Democratic party. He was a quiet, earnest and obliging neighbor, and belonged to the old school of honest, industrious and square-dealing citizenship. He was kind, considerate and hospitable toward all, and was recognized as one of the wealthiest and most highly respected citizens of Pymatuning Township. Myron D. inherited the old homestead, upon which he was born December 19, 1854, and was reared and educated in this township. He married, September 24, 1878, Miss Vesta, daughter of John and Caroline (Chestnut) Kelly, of Pymatuning Township. Two children have been born to them, Ida and Ruby C. Politically Mr. Artherholt is a Democrat, and both he and his wife belong to the Reformed Church.

ANDREW BYERLY, farmer, post-office Sharpsville, was born December 17, 1812, in Westmoreland County, Penn. He is the son of Joseph and Mary (Smith) Byerly, natives of Westmoreland County, and of German descent. They came to Mercer County in 1832, and settled on a farm in Pymatuning Township. They were the parents of Andrew, Fanny, widow of J. McDowell; Joseph, died in California about 1860; Catherine, wife of Robert Hodge; Lovina, widow of H. Sharp; George and Lebiou, now of Wisconsin; Phœbe, wife of Mr. Klingensmith, of Crawford County. Their parents lived on the homestead until their deaths. They were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Joseph was politically a Democrat. He died August 19, 1865, in his eighty-third year. His wife died June 6, 1861, in her sixty-ninth year. Andrew, our subject, was married March 13, 1834, to Ruth, daughter of George and Lydia (Gill) McDowell, of Hickory Township. There have been born to them George, Joseph, Isaac, Andrew, James, Sarah, wife of James Reed; Lile, married; Julia, wife of J. W. Lindsay, and Smith, who died in the service of his country in the late war. George and Isaac were also in the service four and three years respectively. Andrew purchased a portion of his father's farm, on which the family lived about twenty-five years, when they bought a farm of 140 acres of Mr. Hull, in Pymatuning Township, on which they still reside. Our subject and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically he is a Democrat.

JOSEPH BYERLY, wagon manufacturer, post-office Sharpsville, Penn., is a son of Andrew and Ruth (McDowell) Byerly. He was born in April, 1837, in Pymatuning Township, and was educated at the common schools. He was taught the trade of wagon manufacturing, serving his time with S. Runser, of Hickory Township, and was employed for three years, after he served his time, in the shops of Sharon, Pittsburgh and Warren, Ohio. In 1859 he established himself in business in Pymatuning Township, and is engaged in the manufacture of wagons and buggies and general blacksmith business. In 1862 he engaged in the livery business in Sharpsville, which he conducted, in connection with his manufacturing business, for fourteen years. Our subject was married in 1859, to Miss Sophia, daughter of Henry Lightner, of Huntingdon County, Penn., and to them have been born six children: Maud, Elizabeth, Mrs. Justius Hum, of Sharpsville; Palenia, Ruth, Harvey and Mary.

Our subject is a member of the A. O. U. W. lodge of Sharpsville, and is also a member of the Baptist Church of that borough.

GODFREY CARNES, a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and of German extraction, settled in Mercer County in 1801, on the place where his grandson, Godfrey G., now resides, in Pymatuning Township. He purchased first 200 acres, and subsequently added several hundred more. He was a Revolutionary soldier and served through the entire war. He married Mary McDowell, and reared twelve children: Edward, William, Robert, George, Samuel, John, Margaret, married Robert McCord; Mary, married Samuel Ingram, and died; Jane, married Samuel Ingram as his second wife; James, Elizabeth, married George Snyder; Ruhannah, married Henderson Turner, all of whom are dead but Mrs. Ingram, of Kentucky. He was one of the enterprising men of that day, was a Democrat and held many of the township offices. His wife died in 1839 and he in 1842. John, the youngest son, was born in 1803 and reared on the old homestead, always followed farming, and was married in 1828, to Miss Sarah, daughter of John Kepner, of Hartford, Ohio. By her he had the following children: Godfrey G., Kepner, Seth, James, William Elizabeth, married Thomas McCord, and Mary. The mother died in 1871, and, the father in 1873. Godfrey G. Carnes was born December 25, 1830, and was reared on the farm and educated in the common schools. In 1856 he engaged with Allison Chew as clerk in a store in Brookfield, Ohio. He subsequently engaged in the mercantile business, under the firm name of Chew, Carnes & Bowden. He was engaged in the lumber business for a few years. He is now located on the old homestead, engaged in farming and stock raising. He is a Democrat, and has filled some of the township offices.

CHARLES CHESTNUT, farmer, post-office Sharpsville, Penn., was born in 1830, in Pymatuning Township, and is a son of Andrew and Mary (McKnight) Chestnut, she being a daughter of David McKnight. The father of our subject came to Mercer County, Penn., in 1798, with a relative, Robert McCord, from Westmoreland County, Penn. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and died in 1867, aged ninety years. His wife died in 1854. Mr. Chestnut's family consisted of nine children: David, of Grant County, Wis.; Robert, of Lee County, Iowa; Sarah, Mrs. Isaiah Armstrong, who died March 11, 1888, in Lee County, Iowa; Andrew J., who died in Lee County Iowa; Caroline, Mrs. J. B. Kelly, of Pymatuning Township; Hannah, Mrs. Henry Clark, who died in Grant County, Wis.; John, who died in Clear Lake, Iowa; Mary A., Mrs. F. J. Bean, who resides on the old homestead in Pymatuning Township, and our subject, who was the youngest. He was reared and educated in his native township, and learned the trade of a farmer, and followed it for twenty-five years, excepting five years spent in Iowa. He was married in 1853 to Miss Sarah, a daughter of Jacob Klingensmith, of Pymatuning Township, and by this marriage they have ten living children: Andrew W., Mary K. (wife of Jacob Reimold), Byron F., Laura M., Charles C., John J., Annie, Horace, Maud and Elsie. Mr. Chestnut is identified with the schools of his township, and engaged in general farming.

THE CLARK FAMILY.—Samuel Clark was born near the Lehigh River, in Northampton County, Penn., January 17, 1770. Some seven months after his father's death, which occurred in the latter part of 1771, his mother (Mary) removed to Walpack, Sussex Co., N. J., where she had been reared. Her people being Germans, Samuel first spoke that language. His mother, having one sister living, and being poor, supported her family in infancy and through the tedious War of the Revolution. The Indians being on the north and west, the British army on the south and east, her family was compelled at times to flee and at others to seek the nearest fort. At the age of fourteen Samuel was bound out to John Dimon, a carpenter and wagon-maker, and served seven years in hard drudgery. On April 18, 1792, he married Mary Custer, by whom he had ten children, as follows: William, born June 8, 1794, in Sussex County, N. J., still living at Clarksville; Samuel, born in New Jersey August 13, 1796, died near Sharon; Catherine, deceased, born in Jefferson County, Ohio, April 12, 1798, married James Simonton; Abraham, born in Jefferson County, Ohio, May 21, 1800, died in Clarksville in October, 1888; Mary, deceased, born in Jefferson County, Ohio, March 10, 1802, married John Conley; Sarah, deceased, born in Jefferson County, Ohio, April 11, 1804, married John Gill-espie; Susannah, born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., July 15, 1806, married John Fruit, and lives in Clarksville; Jane, deceased, born in Mercer County December 17, 1808, married John McDowell; Jacob, born in Mercer County January 8, 1811, still living in Clarksville, and Nancy, born in Mercer County September 6, 1813, the wife of Joseph McClure, of Clarksville. Samuel Clark, Sr., died October 29, 1860, aged ninety years, nine months and twelve days. His wife, Mary (Custer) Clark, died October 7, 1863, aged ninety-one years, eleven months and twenty-three days. Her family gave to the world the brave Gen. Custer, killed by the Sioux Indians in June, 1876.

FELL FAMILY.—Among the pioneer families of Mercer County were the Fells, William and Nathan, who were sons of John and Elizabeth (Hartley) Fell, natives of Bucks County, Penn. In the fall of 1796 William and his son George came from Westmoreland County, Penn., to Mercer County, and made a selection of a tract of land in the south part of West Salem Township, and then returned to their home. They again came out in the spring of 1797, built a cabin, and made a permanent settlement. In the spring of 1798 William moved his family to his new home in the wilderness of Mercer County. He was accompanied by his brother, Nathan, who was born in 1775, and was a weaver by trade. He made his settlement in what is now Pymatuning Township, purchasing a tract of 400 acres of land, and built his log cabin opposite to where the residence of his grandson, Aaron Fell, now stands. Nathan married Ann Smith, a native of Bucks County, March 8, 1780, and to them were born twelve children: John, who died in 1837; William, who died in infancy; George, who died June 12, 1853; Elizabeth, who married Joseph Morford; Martha, wife of Thomas McFarland; Rachel, wife of Philip Wald-ruff; Anne, who never married; Rebecca, who married E. Fox; Benjamin; Esther, who married John McFarland; Nathan, who died in 1813; Mary, who died in infancy; Cynthia, who married Michael Yeager, and Jesse. Nathan died October 12, 1835, and his widow in 1842.

Jesse, the youngest child of Nathan, was born in Pymatuning Township in 1801, and was reared on the old homestead, where he continued to live until his death, which occurred in April, 1886, his wife having died in 1882. His wife was Esther, daughter of Thomas Coulson, of Mercer, Penn., and by this marriage they had eight children: Nathan, who lives in Green Township; Amanda, who married George Smith, of Mercer, Penn., and died in 1856; Emeline, who married J. B. Campbell, of Delaware Township; Oleand, who died in infancy; Lorena, who married Jerome Allen, of Delaware Township; Mahlon, of Pymatuning Township; Aaron, of Pymatuning Township, and Allen, who was killed in his saw-mill in Pymatuning Township in 1859.

Mahlon, the second son of Jesse, was born February 23, 1832, in Pymatuning Township, on the old homestead of his grandfather. He received his education in the common schools, has always been engaged in farming, and now lives upon a portion of the land that was accumulated by his father, which at his death amounted to 2,400 acres. He was married, April 16, 1854, to Miss Julia A., daughter of David Lininger, of West Salem Township. She died January 16, 1876, leaving four children: James, who lives in Pymatuning Township; Jesse, of Iowa; Mahlon and John, both of whom live in Pymatuning Township. Mr. Fell married for his second wife, in 1880, Miss Sarah, daughter of Albert Hays, of Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and by this marriage they have one child, Edwin D.

Aaron, the third son of Jesse, was born in Pymatuning Township in 1834. He received his early training at the common schools of that time. He was bred a farmer, and was engaged in that business until he was twenty-five years of age, when he engaged in the lumber business in connection with farming, which he has continued to follow. He is extensively engaged in farming, operating some 700 acres of land. Mr. Fell was united in marriage in 1861 to Emeline, daughter of Thomas Mossman, of West Salem Township, and to them have been born five children: Jesse A., who is engaged in the lumber business at Erie, Penn.; Frances; Allen M.; Charles A., who died in infancy, and Aaron, Jr. Mr. Fell is a member of the F. & A. M., Eureka Lodge No. 290, of Greenville, and also of the K. of H. of the same place.

DAVID A. FRAMPTON, farmer and contractor, post-office Transfer, Penn., was born December 3, 1837, in Clarion County, Penn., and is a son of Maj. Jonathan and Matilda (McDowell) Frampton, whose family consisted of five children: David A., Hannah J., John H., Mary E., wife of J. C. Duncan, and Matilda. Our subject was reared in Clarksville, where he was also educated. He early engaged in business, his first venture being transporting of coal and merchandise, running a line of boats upon the Beaver & Erie Canal, in which business he was engaged from 1855 to 1870. He was also extensively engaged at the same time in the lumber business. He is at present largely engaged in railroad contracting, and is one of the most extensive farmers of Mercer County, operating some 1,100 acres. Mr. Frampton has never held any public office, his extensive business and farming operations demanding his entire time. Politically he is an ardent Democrat, and one of Mercer County's enterprising and successful citizens. His residence in Pymatuning Township is one of the most substantial and elegant in the county. He married, in 1869, Miss Delora, daughter of Robert Stewart, of Hickory Township, and by this union they have had nine children: Pearl, Prescott, Wade H., Edith, David A. J., Eva M., Carrie C., Gracie and Robert S., deceased. Mr. Frampton and family are members of the Baptist Church of Transfer.

SETH FRUIT, merchant, post-office Clark, was born in May, 1838, in Clarks-ville. His father, John Fruit, was a native of Northumberland County, Penn. His grandparents, Richard and Sarah (Wilson) Fruit, came from Northumberland County and located in Jefferson Township [see sketch]. John was a son of Richard, and was born in 1805. He was married in 1829, to Susan, a sister of the venerable William Clark, of Clarksville, and they had three children: Seth, Frances, wife of Theodore Hofius, and John R. John engaged in mercantile business in Clarksville, was the first postmaster of that place, and died in 1835, aged thirty years. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Seth obtained his education at the common schools, and spent his younger days at home. In 1853 he went to California, where he spent four years farming, mining, etc. He was married March 31, 1857, to Miss Harpolissa, daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Egbert) Hazen, of Hickory Township. They have four children: Mary, wife of C. Mali, of New Brighton; Fannie, Thomas S., and Eliza, who died in infancy. They located in Clarksville and engaged in mercantile business. He was postmaster of Clark from 1874 to 1885. He filled nearly all the local offices in the borough of Clarksville. Politically he is a Republican.

JAMES B. GILL, farmer, post-office Sharpsville, Penn., was born January 3, 1847, and is a son of Thomas and Rachel (McCord) Gill, of Pymatuning Township. Thomas was born in the last decade of the eighteenth century, and when young he learned the cabinet-maker's trade, with his wife's father. He was married in 1816, and soon after purchased a farm of 100 acres in Pymatuning Township, on which he spent the remainder of his days. There were fourteen children born to them, of whom four are living: James B., Mary, widow of J. Koon; Jane, wife of J. C. Sample, and Prudence, wife of J. H. Kidd. The parents were of Irish descent, and were members of the old Seceder Church. Politically Thomas was an old-time Whig, and served in the War of 1812. He died October 19, 1849, in the fifty-sixth year of his age, and his widow July 3, 1886. James B. was married June 27, 1867, to Matilda H., daughter of George D. and Mary J. (McMurray) Hofius, of Pymatuning Township. They settled on the old homestead, which he afterward purchased and still lives upon. They are the parents of ten children: George B., Thomas McM., Florence J., William H., James F., John R., Walter S., Samuel S., Eliza, Matilda and Millie E. Politically Mr. Gill is a Republican.

DAVID GILLILAND, farmer, postoffice Sharpsville, Penn., is a son of David and Sarah (Moreland) Gilliland, and was born in 1827, in Indiana County, Penn. The father of our subject was a native of County Derry, Ireland, and immigrated to this country in 1791. His first settlement was in York County, Penn. He learned the trade of a weaver in that county, and removed to Armstrong Township, Indiana Co., Penn., where he married, his family consisting of seven children: Elizabeth, Mrs. James Gailey; James, John, Rachel, Mrs. Robert Calhoun; Mary, Sarah and David. Our subject was reared in Indiana County until he was fifteen years old, when he went to Pittsburgh, and was taught the stone-cutting trade, and followed it for an occupation in that city until 1847, when he removed to Chicago, Ill., and remained there until 1859, when he removed to West Middlesex, Mercer County. In 1861 he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, and served two years, when he was discharged for disability. While in the service he participated in the following engagements: Drainsville, seven days fight, Fair Oaks and Antietam. On his return he followed his trade in West Middlesex until 1879, when he purchased his present place and is engaged in general farming. He was married in 1863, to Miss Emily, daughter of John Thompson, of Pymatuning Township, who died October 12, 1872. By this marriage they had one son, John D., who died April 9, 1872. Our subject was again married, to Miss Jennie, daughter of John Porter, of Pymatuning Township, and by this union they have one child. Mr. Gilliland belongs to Post 234, G. A. R., of Sharpsville, is a member of the United Presbyterian Church, of Clarksville, and in politics is a Republican.

SAMUEL L. HENDRICKSON, miller, post-office Orangeville, Ohio. The subject of this sketch is a son of Richard and Martha (Long) Hendrickson, she being a daughter of Samuel Long, of Mercer County, Penn. The father of our subject was born in New Jersey, and removed to Mercer County, Penn., in 1835, and settled in Hempfield Township, where he died in 1847. His widow survives him, and lives with our subject, who was born in Hempfield Township April 6, 1839. He was reared in Hempfield Township by his grandfather, who had settled in that township previous to the settlement there of the father of our subject. Mr. Hendrickson received his early education in the common schools of that township, and at the age of fourteen was employed by T. G. Van Lew as a clerk in his store in Sheakleyville, where he remained until 1860, when he formed a copartnership with Dr. Packard, and engaged in the crockery and glassware business in Greenville, which they conducted until 1873, when the death of Dr. Packard occurred, and he was appointed his executor and had charge of his estate until 1879. He then removed to his farm in Hempfield Township, and engaged in farming, where he remained until early in 1885, when he removed to Orangeville, and commenced operating his flour and grist-mill, which he had purchased in 1876. Mr. Hendrickson was married May 12, 1864, to Teresa, daughter of Harvey Stephenson, of Gustavus, Ohio, and they have had born to them eight children: George, Harvey, Richard, Katie, Clara, Samuel, Annie and Birt. Our subject is a member of F. & A. M., Lodge No. 290, of Greenville.

EDWARD O. KAMERER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born July 3, 1852, in Delaware Township, this county. His grandfather, Samuel, settled in Hempfield at an early date, where he remained until his death. David was married to Leah Bortz. They commenced housekeeping on his father's farm, in Hempfield, where they remained a few years, when they settled on a farm in Delaware Township. There were seven children born to them: Levi T., Edward O., Mary Adaline, Samuel S., David L., Franklin W. and Tillman E. He was secretary of the Pymatuning Mutual Fire Insurance Company for twenty-seven years. Edward O. obtained his education in Delaware Township, and was married September 23, 1875, to E. C., daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Artherholt) Klingensmith, of Pymatuning Township. Edward first located on the homestead, where he remained for three years. They then moved to the farm of Mrs. Klingensmith, mother of Mrs. Kamerer, where they remained four years. They then purchased a farm in Pymatuning Township, on which they still live. Before his marriage he was clerk at Hecker & Fry's, in New Hamburg, and for Packard & Co. and Henry Keck, in Greenville. In politics he is a Republican. His wife is a member of the Baptist Church at Transfer.

SAMUEL C. KOONCE, farmer, post-office Clark, is about forty-five years old. His father, Charles Koonce, was born in Bedford County, Penn., July 9, 1808, where he obtained such educational advantages as could be secured at the common schools of that day. In 1808 he came with his parents to Mercer County. By strict application he acquired a fund of general information which qualified him for the various positions of trust and honor which he so efficiently filled. The early portion of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits. He was subsequently identified in mercantile pursuits, and in speculation in coal lands, in which he was very successful. In 1835 he was appointed postmaster at Clark, under Gen. Jackson's second administration. He filled the office of justice of the peace for two terms of five years each. He was married February 25, 1834, to Miss Hannah Haywood, by whom he had six children: Emily, Sarah, William H., Samuel C., Cynthia A. and Alfred H. His wife died in May, 1845. He was married again, in 1846, to Miss Rachel Vernon, to whom was born one child, Rachel V., now Mrs. G. W. Phillips, of Clarksville. His second wife died in May, 1847. He was again married, to the widow of David Thompson, of Hickory Township. In 1863 he was elected a representative in the Legislature, and was re-elected in 1864, which duties he discharged with honor to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. During the late war he was a staunch supporter of Union principles, and ably supported the administration in its efforts to crush out the Rebellion. He always led an active and industrious life. Politically he was a Democrat until the breaking out of the late war, after which he became identified with the Republican party. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church about forty years. He died September 17, 1880, in his seventy-fifth year. His widow died in 1884. Samuel C., our subject, remained at home during his early years, obtaining an education at the public schools and at the academy at Clarksville. He graduated at Duff's Commercial College in Pittsburgh in 1860, after which he attended Westminster College at New Wilmington for two years. He spent one year in the service of his country in the late war as private, lieutenant and assistant paymaster. In 1864 he entered into mercantile business in Clarksville, where he remained for twelve years. He was married September 12, 1865, to Miss Amanda E., daughter of A. M. Black, D. D., of Monmouth, Ill. They are living on the old homestead on which he was born. He was appointed postmaster at Clark May 30, 1867, which office he filled till June, 1875, when, on account of failing health, he resigned the official position and went west, and spent about a year in Colorado. Politically he is a Republican, and has filled numerous positions of trust in the party. He was chairman of the Republican County Committee, and has been State and National delegate to the Republican conventions, and was a member of the State Central Committee two terms.

JOSEPH McCURE, retired, Clarksville, was born in the parish of Convoey, County Donegal, Ireland, in April, 1810, and is a son of Nathaniel and Catharine (Noble) McClure, natives of the same place. In 1831 Nathaniel and wife, and three sons, Joseph, John and Thomas, immigrated to Little Beaver Township, Beaver Co., Penn., where they settled on a farm, and where the father resided till his death. During the construction of the Beaver & Erie Canal our subject began working on that improvement in Beaver County, and while engaged at his labors on the canal learned the stone-cutting trade. He continued working and contracting on the same public improvement till arriving at Clarksville, Mercer Co., Penn. He there met and married Miss Nancy, daughter of Samuel and Mary Clark, pioneers of the village. He soon returned to the old home in Beaver County, where he remained till 1840, when he sold the farm and removed to Clarksville, where he engaged in merchandising, while also conducting stores at other points in Mercer County. His mother, with his brothers John and Thomas, afterward removed to Girard, Penn., where John and the mother resided until their decease, and where Thomas still lives. In 1846 our subject and his brother John formed a partnership with B. B. Vincent and David Himrod, and under the firm name of Vincent, Himrod & Co. erected the first blast furnace in Sharpsville, Penn., and Joseph located at that point. After a trial of several years, this venture proving unsuccessful, he returned to Clarksville and resumed the mercantile business in connection with farming and contracting. About 1859 he gave up the mercantile trade, but continued farming and contracting up to a recent date, when he retired from active business. To Joseph and Nancy McClure have been born ten children: Samuel, Catharine, Joseph N., Thomas, Mary, Nancy, Sarah, John, Nathaniel and Rebecca, all of whom are living excepting Catharine, who died after reaching womanhood. Mr. McClure was a Whig until 1854, when the growth of Know-nothingism made him a Democrat, which he remained until the breaking out of the war. He then voted with the Republicans until 1863, when he again became a Democrat, and has since supported the principles of that party. He is a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and has been connected with the growth and development of the Shenango Valley for nearly half a century.

SMITH McFARLAND, hotel keeper, post-office Orangeville, Ohio, is a son of Thomas and Martha (Fell) McFarland. The grandfather of our subject was Robert McFarland, a native of Washington County, Penn., who settled in Trumbull County, Ohio, on the State line road, two and one-fourth miles south of Orangeville, in 1806, and purchased a tract of 100 acres of land. He died May 1, 1815. His family consisted of three sons and four daughters: Thomas, Archibald, John; Martha, Mrs. William Dugan, and afterward Mrs. Azariah Dunham; Jane, Mrs. John Canon; Polly, Mrs. Hugh McDowell, all of whom are deceased. Thomas, the eldest son and the father of our subject, was born in 1794 near Harrisburg, Penn. He served as a soldier in the War of 1812. He married Martha Fell, and by this marriage they had five children, viz.: Nathan, deceased; Robert, of Sharon, whose sketch appears in that chapter; Smith, our subject; George, who is deceased, and Cynthia, who married Lewis Holland, of Trumbull County, Ohio. Our subject was born in 1818 in Trumbull County, Ohio, where he was reared, and was bred a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1873, when he built the McFarland House at Orangeville, on the Pennsylvania side of the State road, and has been engaged in the hotel business up to the present time. He was married, in 1846, to Miss Sarah Varnes, of Trumbull County, Ohio, and by this union they have three children: Dr. W. S. McFarland, of Sharon, Penn.; Dwight, of Pymatuning Township, and Lizzie, who is the wife of Madison Russell, of Meadville, Penn.

McKNIGHT FAMILY.—Among the early families of Mercer County were the McKnights. David McKnight, a native of Washington County, Penn., was born in 1786, and in 1804 he removed to Mercer County and located on the Clarksville and Hartford roads, three miles north of Sharpsville. He married Hannah Gill, and by this union they had twelve children: Robert, lives in Pymatuning Township; Mary, who married Andrew Chestnut; Anna, who married Joseph Woods; Elizabeth, married William Carnes; William G., David, John, Margaret, married Daniel McCord; Hannah, married Lewis Mattocks; Andrew, James and Joseph, all of whom are deceased excepting Andrew. Mr. McKnight was one of Mercer County's enterprising farmers. He was appointed by Gov. Shulze a justice of the peace for his township in 1824, which office he held until his death, November 16, 1839. James, the sixth son, was born September 14, 1811, in Pymatuning Township. He was reared upon the old homestead, where he lived until 1842, when he removed to Mercer and engaged in hotel business. He was landlord of the Forest House, and subsequently kept the old Red Tavern on the Mercer and Sharon road. In 1848 he purchased the farm where his son, John C., now resides. He married, March 10, 1840, Miss Grizzila, daughter of David Garvin, of Mercer, Penn., and by this marriage they had two children: James and John C. His death occurred February 29, 1880, his widow surviving him until April 17, 1883. John C. was born September 21, 1844, in Lackawannock Township, and was reared in Pymatuning Township. He was bred a farmer, an occupation he has always followed. He married Helen, a daughter of Albert Herriott, of Pymatuning Township, and by this union they have two children: Mary M. and Albert C. Mr. McKnight is one of Pymatuning Township's progressive farmers, and is one of the present school directors. In politics he is a Democrat.

JOHN L. RENO, farmer, post-office Clark, was born November 2, 1841, in Jefferson Township, this county. His parents, Jesse and Elizabeth (Bebout) Reno, were natives of Beaver County [see sketch in Jefferson Township]. Our subject was educated in the common schools and academy at Clarksville, and was married September 21, 1865, to Hester, daughter of George W. and Mary (Robinson) Magargee. There have been four children born to them: Lizzie P. M., Frank A.,

Lewis M. and P. H. Tack. They lived one year on a farm, after which he was engaged in a drug store in Orangeville, Ohio, two years, in Toledo two years, and in Erie about eight years. While in Toledo he became interested in the manufacture and sale of mineral paints in Pulaski, Penn., which he conducted for ten years, and in which he was very successful. After leaving Erie he located in Clarksville, and spent much of his time traveling in the interest of his paint works, and looking after the interest of a farm which he owns, near Clarksville. He was a volunteer in the first call for troops in the late war. He enlisted in Company B, Seventy-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, as a private, and was promoted to first lieutenant, and served till the close of the war. He received a wound in his breast at Deep Bottom, Va., which has deterred him from active labors ever since.

EDWARD, DANIEL AND ALICE RICKERT, post-office Transfer, are heirs of Charles Rickert, who was married in 1843, to Susannah Holler, daughter of Jonathan and Catharine Holler, of Hickory Township. They rented the Robert Campbell farm, in Pymatuning Township, for a short time, when they settled on a farm of eighty acres in the same township. Charles was born October 4, 1816, in Northampton County, Penn., and came to Mercer County with his father, Peter, in 1834. Charles was the father of ten children: Albert, Samuel, Sarah E., wife of William Everett, of Ohio; Edward, Lewis S., Daniel P., Alice S., Simon H., Jonathan C. and Milton B. His education was limited. He was a Republican, and with his wife were members of the Reformed Church. He died October 19, 1886, and his wife died February 15, 1886. The three children named at the head of this family notice reside on the old homestead, and are enterprising and intelligent citizens.

SAMUEL C. SIMONTON, postmaster of Clarksville, was born April 29, 1822. His father, James T., was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1800, and was married to Catharine, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Custard) Clark, of Clarksville. They settled on a part of the Clark estate, where he followed the occupation of a farmer and shoemaker. They reared three children: Jemima, wife of William Stillings; Samuel C., and Mary A., wife of Israel Garritson. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics he was a Democrat. James T. Simonton was captain of a militia company for many years, and died in 1872, his wife dying in 1867. Our subject grew up on the old homestead, and was married October 13, 1842, to Sylvia A. Gleason, of Portage County, Ohio. They located in Clarksville, where Mr. Simonton worked at the mill-wright trade until 1850, when he took charge of a division of forty-nine miles in the superintending of the Beaver & Erie Canal, and was employed on that work until 1872, excepting two years spent in the war. He owns the farm of 100 acres near Clarksville, and some property in the borough. He has reared a family of four children: Samuel, Mary C., wife of Thomas Stewart; George W. and Charles C. Politically he is a Democrat, and has filled the office of justice of the peace twelve years, resigning in 1886 to accept the postmastership at Clarksville. Mr. Simonton was elected captain of a company organized at Clarksville during the War of the Rebellion; was afterward promoted to major and served two years.

DANIEL STAMBAUGH, farmer, postoffice Sharpsville, Penn., was born July 14, 1815, at Campfield, Ohio, and is a son of Samuel and Rebecca (Ritter) Stambaugh. The parents of our subject came from Ohio in 1824, and located upon a farm of 200 acres in Hickory Township. Previous to their removal to Mercer County four children were born to them: Daniel, Israel, Maria, widow of George Palmer, of Sharon, Penn.; Catherine, wife of Mr. Sylvester, of Iowa. Subsequently two more were born: Julia, who died in infancy, and Rebecca, who died at the age of thirty. Samuel's wife died December 24, 1827. In 1829 he married Margaret, daughter of Robert Hodge, of Pymatuning Township, and by this marriage they had nine children: John, William, Jane, Mrs. Archie Titus, who is deceased; Samuel F., Martin, who was killed in the late war; Sarah, David C., Robert, and Lydia, Mrs. Samuel Johnson, of Youngstown, Ohio. The father of our subject died February 28, 1860, his wife surviving him till 1881. Our subject received his education in the common schools of the township, and was bred a farmer. He located near Sharon in 1836, and engaged in operating coal mines until 1844, when he purchased the Nathaniel Hazen farm, in Hickory Township, where he lived for fifteen years, when he purchased the farm of Lewis Lightner, containing 275 acres, in Pymatuning Township, where he lived for fifteen years. He then purchased his present place, known as the Budd farm, in Pymatuning Township. He was married June 14, 1836, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Benjamin and Orpha (Heath) Castor, of Peters Creek, near Petersburg, Penn., and there has been born to them eleven children: Orpha, deceased, Samuel R., Benjamin K., Rebecca, wife of J. W. Stewart, of Cleveland, Ohio; Amanda M., widow of John Hope; Israel, Hiram, deceased; Julius, of Texas; William E., of Colorado; Loresta, of California, and Lawrence, of Colorado. In politics our subject is a Prohibitionist, and is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

SAMUEL STOYER, farmer, post-office Transfer, was born July 11, 1834, in Delaware Township, this county. His father, Daniel, was born September 17, 1795, in Berks County, Penn., and his mother, Christinia Miller, was born in 1795 in Lehigh County, Penn., both of German descent. They were married about 1818, and settled in Berks County on a small farm, where he followed the occupation of a shoemaker. There were nine children, four of whom are living: Priscilla, wife of Joshua Homer; Daniel M., of New Hamburg; Christinia, wife of T. Hengist, of Kansas, and Samuel. They moved to Delaware Township, this county, in 1833, and settled on a farm, where he continued his trade, and his sons conducted the work on the farm. He remained on the farm and in that vicinity for many years, when he sold it and spent the remainder of his days with his children. He died October 11, 1885, in the ninety-first year of his age, and his wife died about 1875, at the age of eighty years. They were members of the Lutheran Church, and in politics he was a Democrat. Samuel was married December 23, 1858, to Lydia Bartholomew, daughter of Philip and Lydia (Donner) Bartholomew, of Hickory Township, this county. They located in Hickory Township on a farm, where they lived until 1869, when he purchased a farm in Pymatuning Township of forty-one acres. They have seven children: Franklin A., Permillia (wife of Frank Moyer, of Greenville), Hiram (of Pymatuning), Daniel P., Clara V., Walter S. and Charles E. He and wife are members of the Lutheran Church. Politically he is a Republican, and has held the office of assessor one term and assistant assessor two terms.

ANTHONY STRUBLE, farmer, post-office Clark, was born June 3, 1828, in Sussex County, N. J., and is the third son of David and Hannah (Woodhill) Struble. His parents moved to Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1834. His father was killed while crossing a railroad track, in 1878, at the age of seventy-seven years. His mother died in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1886, in the eighty-fourth year of her age. Anthony, our subject, attended school at Cottage Hill, Ohio, and remained at home, teaching and attending school, till he was about twenty-five years of age. He was married September 15, 1853, to Miss Julia A., daughter of Samuel and Mary (Thompson) Koonce, of Hickory Township. They have had seven children: Walter S., Frank F., David C., John T., Anna L., Wallace (who died in infancy), Mary E. (died at twenty years of age, the wife of S. O. Ewing, of Canfield, Ohio). They located in Pymatuning Township, on a farm that was a portion of the Koonce estate. In November, 1859, he moved to Delaware Township, and settled on a farm purchased of Peter Free, containing 100 acres, to which he afterward added, by purchase, ninety acres adjoining, which property he still retains. He also owns fifty acres in Pymatuning Township and eighty acres in Summit Township, Crawford Co., Penn. He was extensively engaged in buying and selling stock. He moved into the borough of Clarksville in 1884. He was a volunteer, and captain of Company D, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nine months in the late war. Politically he is a Republican. He was county commissioner for three years, and has filled the offices of school director and councilman in the borough. He was elected justice of the peace in 1887. He is a member of the G. A. R., Post No. 557, of Clarksville, and his wife and himself are members of the Presbyterian Church.

DWIGHT WILLSON, saw and planing-mill, post-office Orangeville, Ohio, is a son of Nathaniel and Betsey (Brockway) Willson, and was born in Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, October 10, 1840. He was reared and educated in his native township. At the age of sixteen he was employed in the saw-mill business with his father, and at the age of nineteen he purchased a half interest in a saw-mill in Vernon Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, where he remained three years. In 1865 he was employed as engineer at E. B. Ward's coal mine, three miles east of Orangeville, where he remained for three years. In 1868 he purchased the saw-mill at Orangeville, and operated it till 1887, when he erected his present saw and planing-mill. Our subject was married in 1863 to Miss Lizzie J., daughter of Eli and Jane Myers, of Hartford Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and by this marriage they have three children: Ada V., Jennie E. and Lyle M. Mr. Willson is one of the members of the school board of Pymatuning Township, and in politics he is a Republican.

REV. SAMUEL E. WINGER, post-office Clark, was born December 3, 1850, in Venango County, Penn., and is a son of David and Catherine (Smith) Winger, both of whom are of German descent, and to whom were born eleven children, seven of whom are living: William, Henry, Josiah, Frederick, Jennie, Tillie and Samuel E. The parents moved to Oil City in the fall of 1862, where the father died December 17, of the same year, at the age of fifty-four years. Samuel, our subject, remained on Oil Creek, where he relied upon his own efforts for a livelihood until he was seventeen years of age. He then attended school at Oil City two years, and afterward the Allegheny College at Meadville for three years, and a theological seminary in New Jersey. In 1872 he joined the Erie Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was married January 1, 1873, to Miss Eva F., daughter of Rev. James and Sabina (Muse) Clyde, of Mercer County. He received his first charge on the Clapp farm, near Oil City, where he preached one year, and then at Brady's Bend, Waterloo, Venango, Sunville, one year each. He then attended school at Allegheny College, in Meadville, for one year. He then preached at New Bethlehem, Clarion County, two years, Luthersburg one year. Helena, Montana, two years, Salem, Mercer County, three years, and located at Clarksville in 1888. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Peck in 1874, and as elder in 1876. He has seven children: Merril C., Rose F., Clare M., Samuel H., Eva M. (deceased), Bessie, Pearl and Cecil B. He is a Republican of Prohibition proclivities.

JOSEPH K. WOMER, farmer, was born July 5, 1857, in Mercer County, Penn., and is the seventh child of John and Margaret (Keiser) Womer, of Clarion County, Penn. The family settled at Harry of the West furnace, in 1851, and moved to Findley Township about 1855. Here they remained eight years, and then moved to a farm owned by Wilson Ormsby, in Pymatuning Township. Seven years later they moved to the farm of John Frampton, and the year following to the farm of Maj. Frampton, and after a period of farming for Vance Stewart they bought a farm of thirty acres. They have had nine children: Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Weller; Emily F., wife of A. G. Cron; Harry B., Rev. John C., William H., Amos M., Joseph K., Edward G., and Beva C., wife of C. J. Law. The parents are still living in Pymatuning Township. Joseph K. was married June 28, 1881, to Julia, a daughter of Joseph and Eliza (Weaver) Rickert, of Pymatuning Township, who have lived there for nearly half a century. The Rickerts are the parents of seven children: Abraham, Joshua, Lydia, Emeline, Sophia, Julia and Henry P. Joseph purchased a part of the Rickert estate and resides thereon. He has one child, Essie E. Joseph obtained his education at the common and select schools, and spent seven years in teaching in Mercer and Venango Counties. He served as school director for three years, is a Democrat, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. His wife is a member of the German Reformed Church.

DELAWARE TOWNSHIP.

DR. DANIEL ACHER, post-office Kremis, was born October 3, 1821, in Union County, Penn., and is a son of Daniel and Rebecca (Reichard) Acher. The father of our subject was a native of Lehigh County, Penn., who removed to Union County about 1819. In 1834 he settled in Salem Township, Mercer County. His family were six sons and three daughters: Daniel, David, William, James and Henry; Elizabeth, Mrs. Joseph Humphrey; Margaret, Mrs. David Baxter, and Lucy. The early education of our subject was received at the Mercer Academy. He commenced the study of medicine under Dr. John Rodgers, of Mercer, Penn., and completed his medical studies at the Eclectic College of Cincinnati, Ohio, and commenced the practice of medicine in 1857, in Middle Lawrence, Butler Co., Penn., where he remained until 1863, when he located at Mount Jackson, Lawrence Co., Penn., remaining there until 1867, when he removed to Bellefontaine, Ohio, and pursued the practice of his profession until 1871, when he returned to Mercer County, and settled at London, where he remained until 1885, when he returned to Kremis, Penn., where he enjoys a lucrative and growing practice. In 1843 the Doctor was married to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Peter Cribbs, of Findley Township, and by this marriage they have five children: William H., of California; C. J., of Greenville; Prudence, wife of C. E. Bellows; Ellen J., at home, and Salena A., Mrs. H. D. Hecker, of Kremis, Penn. The Doctor is a member of the P. of H., Delaware Grange 463, also the Lutheran Church of Delaware Township. Politically he is a Republican.

THE BIGLERS.—One of the prominent families of Mercer County, to which reference has been made, was that of the Biglers, who lived in what is now Delaware Township, a few miles from Fredonia. The family resided there for a number of years. Two of the sons, John and William, became prominent in public affairs. John Bigler was born in Cumberland County January 16, 1804, and died November 13, 1871. He was of German descent. Learning the printers' trade, he became a journalist, but subsequently a lawyer. He spent some of his youthful years on the parental farm in Mercer County. In 1846 he removed to Illinois, and three years later went with emigrants to California, where he became prominent in the Democratic party, and was known as "honest John Bigler." From 1852 to 1856 he served as governor of that State. William Bigler, his brother, was born in Cumberland County in 1814, and died in Clearfield, Penn., August 9, 1880. He assisted his brother John, in 1829, to publish the Centre Democrat at Bellefonte. In 1833 he removed to Clearfield, and established the Clearfield Democrat, a Jackson paper, which became prosperous and notable. In 1836 he sold it and began lumbering. His editorial career, however, marked him as a public leader. He was elected to the State Senate in 1841, and its speaker in 1843-44. In 1849 he was appointed a revenue commissioner, and in 1851 was elected governor of Pennsylvania, the same day that John was chosen to a similar position in California. He was renominated in 1854, but was defeated by the Know-nothing swell. In 1855 he was chosen a member of the United States Senate. He was a member of the Charleston Convention in 1860, and temporary chairman of the Democratic National Convention in 1864, and a member of the same body in 1868. He was a member of the Centennial Commission in 1874. These two distinguished sons, as well as their noted Christian mother, are well remembered by citizens of Mercer County still living.

AARON BLUMER, farmer, post-office New Hamburg, Penn., is a son of Henry and Micky Blumer. He was born in Whitehall Township, Lehigh Co., Penn., September 29, 1809. The grandfather of our subject was a German Reformed minister, a native of Switzerland, who immigrated to this country previous to the Revolutionary War, and settled in that part of Lehigh County which at that time was Northampton County. Our subject was the third child of a family of seven children. He was taught the trade of blacksmith. At the age of twenty-four, in 1833, he came to Delaware Grove and purchased 200 acres of land, erected his blacksmith shop, and began the clearing of his farm, which was a wilderness for miles surrounding. At the expiration of five years he gave up his business, giving his attention entirely to his farm and its development. In 1838 he married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Sarah Haas, natives of Northampton County, Penn., who had settled in Delaware Township, and by this union they had three children: Thomas, John and Edwin, who was a member of the Tenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Cavalry, and was killed at Fredericksburg. Mrs. Blumer died January 15, 1888. Mr. Blumer has been a life-long supporter of the Democratic party, and has always taken an active interest in educational matters, and was a school director for nine years. He is a member of the German Reformed Church of Delaware Township.

SAMUEL BUSCH, farmer, post-office Fredonia, is a son of Andrew and Louisa F. (Greiner) Busch. The father of our subject was a native of Germany, who immigrated to this country about 1812 or 1813, and settled in Green Township, Mahoning Co., Ohio. He subsequently came to Mercer County and located in Otter Creek Township. He was twice married; his first wife bore him a family of two children: Beva, who married James Moyer, of Lake Township, and Margaret, the widow of Andrew Bowman, of Ohio. Andrew died in 1865 in Otter Creek Township. His second wife survives him and resides upon the old homestead in Otter Creek Township. Their family consisted of nine children, seven of whom are living: Mina, Mrs. Michael Groh, of Delaware Township; Samuel, of Delaware Township; Louisa, Mrs. Fred Shoner, of Fairview Township; Andrew, of Otter Creek; Leah, Mrs. M. E. Pauly, of Transfer, Penn.; Rev. William L., of Otter Creek, and Joseph, of the same township. Our subject was born April 16, 1839, in Jackson Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. He was reared and educated in Otter Creek. In 1863 he married Mary Ann, daughter of Amos Ruhlman, of Perry Township, and settled in Delaware Township, where he now resides. By this union they have four children, viz.: Levida, Emma, Lester and William. Our subject was bred a farmer, an occupation he has always followed. He is an ardent Democrat, and was one of the candidates for the Legislature in 1887, on the ticket with the Hon. Norman Hall. Mr. Busch is a member of the Lutheran Church of Otter Creek, of which his brother, the Rev. William L. Busch, is the pastor.

RICHARD FRUIT, post-office Clark, the second son of Robert Fruit, was born August 12, 1826, in Jefferson Township, where he was reared and educated, and where a sketch of the ancestry will be found. His early life was spent upon the old homestead farm. In 1854 he engaged in droving, in which business he operated in very extensively for twenty years. He has since been engaged in the saw and grist-mill business, purchasing the old mill property that belonged to his father. He is also one of the most extensive farmers of Mercer County, managing some 800 acres. In 1874 he was appointed sheriff, by Gov. Hartman, to fill the unexpired term of Sheriff Pew, and at the expiration of his appointment was elected to the same position and filled the office three years longer. He has also served in all of the important offices of his township. He was married June 24, 1858, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of John Zahniser, of Jefferson Township. Their children are: Robert, of Jefferson Township; Ellen M., Margaret, wife of D. W. Bactress, of Delaware Township; Caroline, Jennie and Walter. Politically Mr. Fruit is a leading Republican, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and one of the most enterprising citizens of his native county.

JOHN W. FRUIT, post-office New Hamburg, son of Robert Fruit, was born in 1837, in Jefferson Township, where he lived upon the old homestead until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when he enlisted in Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, in which he served until June 30, 1862, and on that day, at the battle of Charles City Cross Roads, he received a gunshot wound in the right knee, was taken prisoner, and confined in Libby Prison three months, when he was exchanged and sent to the general hospital, at Philadelphia, Penn., from which place he was discharged in October, 1862, when he returned home, where he remained until Lee's raid into Pennsylvania, when he was commissioned by Gov. Curtin, and raised a company, which was attached to the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers. On his return from the war Mr. Fruit was engaged in farming until 1876, when he was appointed deputy sheriff under Sheriff Pew, which position he filled from that time until the expiration of his brother, Richard Fruit's term of office. He also filled two terms of justice of the peace while residing in Jefferson Township. In 1879 he established himself upon his present place, and in 1882 was elected justice of the peace, and served one term, and has also served as school director for both Jefferson and Delaware Townships. Mr. Fruit has been identified with the National Guards, having had command of Company A, Fifteenth Regiment Pennsylvania National Guards, for ten years. He was married in 1864, to Sarah, daughter of Daniel Lowell, of Erie County, Penn., and to them have been born five children: James, Frank A., William, Mary and Robert D. Mr. Fruit is a member of the G. A. R., Post No. 234, of Sharpsville, Penn., also Sharon Lodge No. 250, F. & A. M., and politically he is a Democrat.

CHARLES HECKER, general manager and treasurer of the Kremis Milling Company, post-office Kremis, was born in Seneca County, N. Y., February 15, 1828. He is a son of Daniel and Catharine (Haas) Hecker, natives of Lehigh County, and who removed to Seneca County, N. Y., after marriage. Mrs. Catharine Hecker died in 1828, and was the mother of Stephen, Daniel, Joseph and Charles. The father was again married, and had the following children: Franklin, Levi, and Mary, the widow of Edwin Hoffman. Daniel Hecker removed to Mercer County in 1839, and here died in August, 1886, at the age of ninety-three years. His last wife died in 1883, at the age of seventy-seven years. Mr. Hecker was a justice of the peace for Delaware Township for fifteen years, a prominent member of the German Reformed Church, and in politics a staunch Republican. Our subject was taught the carpenter's trade, and for fifteen years was engaged in that business. He then established himself in the lumber business and farming. In 1883 he organized the Kremis Milling Company, and is its treasurer and general manager. The mill is a prominent industry of Delaware Township, and its capacity is fifty barrels of flour in twenty-four hours. He is also extensively engaged in farming, and is one of the stockholders of the Kremis Co-operative Store. Mr. Hecker is an energetic business man, enjoying the confidence and esteem of the people of his county. He is a member of the P. of H., Delaware Grange 463, also of the Reformed Church of Delaware Township. In politics he is a Republican. He married, in 1849, Caroline, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Reinhart, early settlers of Delaware Township, and to them have been born a family of four children: George W., Henry D., Lizzie, wife of William Limber, and James E., manager of the Kremis Co-operative store.

DAVID KAMERER (deceased).—Among the early settlers of Mercer County were Jacob and Samuel Kamerer, natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., who located in what is now Hempfield Township in 1812. Samuel, the father of our subject, here married Elizabeth Lininger, who was born in Maryland in 1790, and came to Mercer County in 1802. They reared a family of four sons and four daughters, five of whom are living. David, the eldest, was born on the old homestead January 7, 1819, and spent his early life under the parental roof, receiving the meager advantages which the pioneer schools of his youth afforded. On the 6th of January, 1848, he married Leah Bortz, a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., born February 16, 1821. In May, 1822, her parents, Jacob and Anna M. Bortz, removed to this county and settled in Lackawannock Township. Immediately after marriage Mr. Kamerer located on a part of his father's farm, where he resided until 1852. He then purchased and settled upon the homestead in Delaware Township, where the balance of his life was passed. This farm at that time was principally covered with the original forest, and it required a great deal of toil ere it was brought to its present well-improved condition. Mr. Kamerer reared seven children, all of whom are living, viz.: Levi T., Edward O., Mary Adaline, Samuel S., David L., Franklin W. and Tillman E. He watched over his family circle with loving consideration, and his kind, paternal heart always tempered justice with mercy. Though a farmer by occupation, he had not been able to perform much physical labor for the past thirty years. He therefore turned his attention to other matters, and in 1860 was one of the leading spirits in the organization of the Pymatuning Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was chosen its first secretary, and filled that position with commendable zeal, ability and honesty from 1860 up to January, 1887—a period of nearly twenty-seven years. Under his careful management this company has had a substantial growth and a prosperous career. Mr. Kamerer was succeeded by his son David L. In early manhood he united with the Lutheran Church, and ever since lived a consistent Christian life. He possessed a kind and charitable disposition, and was ever ready to assist the needy and succor the afflicted. His aim was always to be right, and hosts of friends gladly testify to the unimpeachable integrity of his character. He was a Republican in politics, and though filling several township offices he had little political ambition beyond exercising the duties imposed by American citizenship. He was not a strong partisan, and accorded to his neighbor the just privilege of believing as conscience dictated on all matters relating to religion and civil government. For many years he had been troubled with weak lungs, and while attending the funeral of his brother Benjamin, a short time since, was attacked by the illness which ended in death on the 9th of October, 1888, at 5 o'clock A. M., aged sixty-nine years, nine months and three days. His remains were followed to their last resting place in Delaware cemetery by his aged widow and family, and a large funeral cortege, the services being conducted by Revs. William Rehrig and J. A. Kunkleman, D. D. In the death of David Kamerer the community lost a worthy citizen, the church a stanch adherent, and his family a kind and affectionate protector.

JOSEPH MCCLEERY, farmer and surveyor, post-office Kremis, was born May 14, 1823, in Hempfield Township, and is a son of Thomas and Margaret (Wilson) McCleery. The parents of our subject were natives of Donegal County, Ireland, who immigrated to this country about 1814. His first settlement was made in Lancaster County, Penn. He subsequently lived in Crawford County, in the vicinity of Jamestown, Penn. In 1823 he located in Mercer County, on the Dumars farm, in Hempfield Township, afterward on the Bigler and Flock farms, in Delaware Township. In 1827 he purchased a tract of 200 acres, known as Lot 974, in the northeast corner of Delaware Township, upon a part of which our subject now resides. He was a plain, unassuming farmer, but a man who took a deep interest in educational matters, and it was through his exertions that the first school was established, and a building erected for that purpose, in that neighborhood. His family consisted of nine children, two of whom were born in Ireland: Thomas, who resides in Wilmington, Lawrence County, Penn., and William W., of Oakland, Cal., the balance being natives of Mercer County; Solomon, of Livingston County, Mo.; our subject; Alexander, who died in Delaware Township; James, who was in the late war, and was killed near Medley, Va., in a skirmish in 1864; Wilson, who died in Delaware Township in 1862; Nancy, widow of Henry Ewing, of Crawford County, Penn.; Elizabeth, widow of Jackson Hurst, of Delaware Township. Mr. McCleery died in 1858, and his widow in 1860. Our subject was reared upon the homestead, and received his education at the select schools of the township. He was taught the trade of a printer, in the office of the Mercer Luminary, which was published by William F. Clark in the last year of his apprenticeship. Mr. McCleery felt desirous of obtaining a better education, and he entered the Mercer Academy, then taught by Hon. Samuel Griffith, completing his education under the private tuition of Prof. McLean, of Greenville, Penn., and for eighteen years taught in the schools of Mercer County. Mr. McCleery also taught about three years in the schools of Dorchester County, Md. While in Maryland our subject pursued a course of studies in mathematics, and on returning to Mercer County he engaged in the business of surveying in connection with farming. In 1860 he was elected county surveyor, which position he filled for three years. In 1869 he was elected justice of the peace for his township, and filled the office for five years, and has been a school director in his township. He married, in 1856, Miss Elvira, daughter of W. W. Greenman, of New Hamburg, Penn., and by this union they have five children: Arthur G., James O. (of Montana), Lottie, Sarah (Mrs. Herman Early, of Jefferson Township) and Nettie. Mr. McCleery is a member of the P. of H., Delaware Grange 463, of Delaware Township.

PATRICK McCONVILL, farmer, post-office New Hamburg, Penn., was born in 1827, in Ireland, and is a son of Peter and Mary (O'Hare) McConvill, natives of County Down, Ireland, who immigrated to this country in the spring of 1847, and settled in Delaware Township, upon the land where our subject now lives. His family consisted of seven children, all of whom were born in Ireland. They were Patrick, Michael, who died in 1870; Rose, deceased, who married John McCann; Mary, the widow of Patrick McGrath, of Delaware Township; Alice, Mrs. James Hughes, of Delaware Township; Sarah, and Eliza, Mrs. Daniel Hurley, of Cool Spring Township. Peter died August 27, 1862, at the ripe old age of eighty-five, his wife surviving him, dying March 11, 1883, at the age of ninety-three. Our subject was reared in Ireland, where he received a common school education, and engaged in farming with his father, an occupation he has always followed. Mr. McConvill is unmarried, and resides on the old homestead farm with his sister Sarah, both of whom are members of All Saints Catholic Church, of Jefferson Township. In politics our subject is a Democrat.

GEORGE W. MAGEE, farmer, post-office Kremis, Penn., is a son of George and Sarah (Cross) Magee. The father of our subject was born in 1806, in Mifflin County, Penn. In 1812 he removed to what is now Lawrence County, Penn., and lived in that and Butler County for thirty-five years. He was a carpenter and wheel-wright, in which business he was engaged in Centreville, in the latter county. In 1841 he moved to Jackson Township, Mercer County, and purchased the land upon which is now located the Fox Coal Mine. He developed the mine, and subsequently disposed of it and removed to Fairview Township, and engaged in farming. Mr. Magee died January 6, 1887. His widow is a native of Butler County, Penn., and a daughter of David Cross, of that county. Mrs. Magee survives her husband, and resides in Fairview Township. Their family consisted of eleven children: Mary, Mrs. Joseph Infield, of New Vernon Township; John, of Ohio; Eliza, Mrs. A. P. Page, of Fairview; David, who died in infancy; Emeline, widow of R. R. Crooks, of Wheatland, Penn.; Margaret, Mrs. J. F. Boyd, of Cool Spring Township; William, of New Vernon Township; Henrietta, Mrs. F. B. McCormick, of Fairview Township; Herman, who died in infancy; Melinda, Mrs. R. N. Jones, of Kidder County, D. T., and our subject, who was born October 7, 1851, in Jackson Township. He received his education in the common schools, and was taught telegraphy, and was employed for several years by the N. Y. P. & O. R. R., and was located at Freedom, Ohio. In 1875 he engaged in the planing-mill business at Ashtabula, Ohio, where he remained for two years, subsequently entering the employ of the S. & A. R. R. as an operator. In 1878 he purchased his present farm in Delaware Township, and has since been engaged in general farming. Our subject was married in 1874, to Miss Vila, daughter of Harris and Fannie Bowen, of Trumbull County, Ohio, and by this marriage they have seven children: Minta M., Maggie, Jennetta, Florence, Earl, Millie and George Grover. Mr. Magee was elected, in 1888, justice of the peace for his township, which office he now fills. He is a member of the P. of H., Delaware Grange No. 463, of Delaware Township. Our subject in politics is a Democrat, and is connected with the schools of his township as a member of the board of school directors. Mr. Magee, while still a young man, is an enterprising citizen, and has the confidence of his fellow citizens. He is master of Delaware Grange No. 463, and deputy for Mercer County P. of H.

GEORGE MOWRY, constable and tanner, post-office New Hamburg, Penn., son of Jonas and Esther (Lesher) Mowry. The grandfather, George Mowry, settled in Delaware Township in 1823. He was a native of Berks County, Penn., and was the father of the following children: Jonas, George, Jacob, Jesse, John, Kate, Michael, Grover, Sarah, wife of Mandis Bortz; Mary, wife of Benjamin Foulk; Louisa, wife of Benjamin Griner; Elizabeth, wife of William Grim; Eliza, wife of Samuel Beil. George Mowry, Sr., died in 1875, and his wife is also dead. The father of our subject was born in Lehigh County in 1813, and came with his parents to Mercer County. His family consisted of Jonathan, James, Alvin and our subject; Matilda, Mrs. Allen Saul; Mary, Mrs. Joshua Wheeler; Eliza, Mrs. Clint Russell; Louisa (single). Our subject was born in 1852. He received the advantages of a common school education, and was taught the trades of a stone-mason, plasterer and brick-layer, which business he followed for twelve years. In 1886 he located on his present farm and engaged in general farming. He was married in 1872 to Miss Maria J., daughter of James Heckman, of Delaware Township, and by this union they have five children: Edwin, Cora, James, William and Frederick. In 1878 our subject was elected constable, which office he has filled up to the present time, an unmistakable evidence of his popularity in Delaware Township. He is a member of the Reformed Church of Delaware Township, and in politics a Democrat.

HENRY M. REICHARD, farmer, post-office New Hamburg, Penn., is the son of George and Hannah (Moyer) Reichard, and was born in Lehigh County, Penn., in 1830. His father came to Mercer County in 1832, and purchased a farm of 132 acres two miles north of New Hamburg, where he died in 1862. His widow died May 10, 1888. Their children were: James, deceased; Henry, Daniel, George, Benjamin, deceased; William, deceased; Sarah, Mrs. John Weaver; Jane, Mrs. Lewis Haws, both deceased, and Mary Ann, deceased. The grandfather of our subject came from Lehigh County in 1833, and settled upon the Greenville and Mercer road. He built the Reichard Tavern, which he conducted for several years. It then passed into the hands of his son Joshua, who conducted it for some forty years. In 1872 the hotel property was purchased by his son Peter, who removed the hotel building and built upon the site his residence, where he now resides. Henry Reichard, Sr., married Mary M. Acher, of Lehigh County. Their children were: Henry, George, Rebecca, Mrs. Acher; Polly, Mrs. Daniel Saul, both deceased; Benjamin, David, Betsey, Mrs. Moyer; Jonathan and Peter. Mr. Reichard, Sr., died in 1845, and his widow in 1847. Our subject was reared upon the homestead farm, and early engaged in farming. In 1858 he purchased his present home, half a mile west of New Hamburg. He was married in 1855, to Miss Mary Ann, daughter of Joseph Raber, of Delaware Township, and to them have been born five children, of whom two are living: Laura, wife of Henry Moyer, merchant of Cleveland, Ohio, and Elsie, who resides at home. Mr. Reichard is now serving as one of the school directors, and assistant assessor. In politics he is a Democrat, and Delaware contains no more useful and influential citizen than our subject.

ADAM WAGONER, farmer, post-office Kremis, Penn., son of Philip and Lucinda (Rheinhardt) Wagoner, was born July 8, 1840, in Delaware Township. His father was a native of Lehigh County. He settled in Delaware Township in 1836, and reared a family of fourteen children, nine of whom are living: Moses, Adam, Aaron, Henry, Mary, Mrs. John Reimold; Catharine, Mrs.

Bernard Reimold; Lavina, Mrs. Jeremiah Will; Daniel and William. Mr. Wagoner, Sr., served his township as a member of the school board and supervisor. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church of Delaware Township, and held the offices of deacon and elder for many years, and in politics a life-long Democrat. He died March 15, 1878. His widow survives him and resides upon the homestead farm. Our subject's opportunity for an education was limited. He remained at home until he was twenty-six years of age. With limited capital Mr. Wagoner started in the world to do for himself, and by frugality and hard work has succeeded in establishing for himself the reputation of being one of the most successful farmers and enterprising business men of his native township. In 1883 he associated himself with Charles Hecker and erected the Kremis Mills, of which company he is one of the stockholders. He is also identified with the Kremis Co-operative Store Company as one of its stockholders. He takes an active interest in public affairs, having filled all the important offices of his township. Politically he is a Democrat. He was married in 1868 to Miss Eliza, daughter of Joseph and Judith Haas, of Delaware Township, and by this union they have six children: Edwin A., Albert, Sadie, Mary, Ellen and Clara. Mr. Wagoner is a member of the P. of H., Grange 463, and himself and family are members of the Lutheran and German Reformed Churches of Delaware Township.

JEFFERSON TOWNSHIP.

ISAAC ANDERSON, deceased, was born April 1, 1813, in Beaver County, Penn., and was carried to Mercer County by his mother when a child through a deep snow. He was a son of Isaac and Lydia (Warner) Anderson. His parents settled where F. C. Bagnall now lives. Here the Indians used to congregate, sing, dance and drink until nearly daylight. His parents had fourteen children: William, Joseph, David, Isaac, Cynthia, James, Peter, Enos, Sallie, Nancy, Mathias, Eliza, Milo, Hannah. Our subject attended the country schools three months. He married, December 10, 1844, Anna C. Soawash, a sister of Mrs. William Bagnall. The ceremony was performed by Esquire Graham. She was born April 16, 1824, and bore him Milo W., born November 19, 1845; Joseph H., born February 13, 1847; Sarah A., born July 22, 1848; infant son, born April 15, 1850; Isaac, born March 11, 1851; Hannah, born May 9, 1853; infant daughter, born September 19, 1855; Catharine, born August 25, 1856; John, born December 28, 1857; infant daughter, born September 9, 1859; Lincoln, born October 11, 1860; infant daughter, born October 26, 1861; Lewis, born January 19, 1864; infant son, born May 12, 1867. The two sons, Lewis and Lincoln, manage the home place. Mr. A. died August 18, 1883. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father, and a Republican. His widow, who toiled with him through the many trying scenes of his life to lay up something for old age, is yet living in good circumstances, a consistent member of the Methodist Church. She recently gave each of her eight children a large family bible, costing $9 each.

WILLIAM BAGNALL, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born January 19, 1811, in Draycot, England, and is a brother of Thomas Bagnall, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He attended school in his native country. He was married October 24, 1835, to Susan Soawash, born August 24, 1814, in Pittsburgh, to Isaac and Mary (Weaver) Soawash. Her father was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., and her mother was a daughter of John W. Weaver, a minister of the Lutheran organization, a native of Germany, and who preached his last sermon at the age of eighty-four years and while sitting in a chair. Mrs. Bagnall came with her father and brother, William, to Mercer County, when eleven years old, in the spring of 1826. They slept first in the county at the Junkin Mills, and the second night in a log cabin on his farm in Lackawannock Township. On arriving at the cabin in the evening Mrs. Bagnall says they found it to be a log structure with roof, but no floor or windows. They crept under the bottom log, and with brush prepared a bed for the night. Mrs. Bagnall, then a very young cook, arranged the kettle on a pole laid in forks, and made coffee and prepared a supper. Soon after Mr. Soawash constructed a better house. He worked some days for Mr. Robert Fruit, and while his little daughter was attending to the household duties, and alone in the woods, wild hogs surrounded the cabin, and she climbed upon the joists for safety, and hurled stones at them, driving them away. One season she stacked nine stacks of hay, thus helping her husband to get a start in life. Mrs. Bagnall says she walked four miles to hear the Rev. Tait preach. In August, 1826, Mr. Soawash with his two children went for the remainder of the family. They soon returned to Mercer County. The family then consisted of father, mother and children: William, Eliza, Frederick, Susannah, Hannah, Mary, Margaret, Catharine. Another, Caroline, was born in this county. Mr. Soawash was a soldier in the War of 1812, having served under William H. Harrison. Mr. and Mrs. Bagnall when married came to the farm where they now reside, and began keeping house in a cabin 16x16 feet. They subsequently built a better residence. By economy and hard labor they have secured a large competence to sustain them in their old age. Their children are Beriah S., Mary J., Elizabeth (married William Arbuckle), Christian (married Henry Allison), Isis (deceased), Susan (deceased), Isaac W., John W. and James A. William Bagnall has been a member of the church fifty-five years, and his wife since a small girl. They are now members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

THOMAS BAGNALL, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born February 9, 1826, in England, to Thomas, born October 25, 1785, same country, who married Ann Hudson, born January 16, 1782. Their children were: George, William, Mary, Sarah, Jane, Thomas. The entire family came to Mercer County from England in 1829, and settled permanently on the farm where our subject now lives. Here the father died March 18, 1850, and the mother January 3, 1852, both in the Methodist faith. Our subject attended the country schools and was brought up on the farm. He began for himself in 1850, and was married September 9, 1849, to Mary Cozins, born April 9, 1825, to Frederick and Mary (Yocum) Cozins, natives of Philadelphia, and the parents of Rebecca, John, Catharine, Sarah, Jacob, John, Abram, Mary. Her father was one of the original members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Mr. and Mrs. Bagnall had eight children: Thomas M., married Susan Anderson, lives in Michigan; Benton, married Mary Duncan; Jane, married John Nicklin; Fremont, died February 14, 1864; Alcott, died March 3, 1859; Lucinda, born November 19, 1861, married Lewis Patterson, a teacher at Cadillac, Mich; Fremont (2), born February 29, 1864, died February 5, 1881, in the West, whither he had gone seeking his health, and his body was brought home by his father and mother and buried; Chandler, born April 3, 1868. In 1860 Mr. and Mrs. Bagnall took charge of the agricultural department of the Manual Labor School at Amherst, N. H., but owing to the lack of funds the institution suspended, and they returned to their farm in 1861. He has served as school director; was at one time a member of the I. O. O. F., and was secretary of Mercer Grange Lodge, once in existence in Mercer, Penn. He is a Republican.

F. C. BAGNALL, farmer and justice of the peace, post-office Kile, was born October 24, 1842, in Jefferson Township. He is a son of George Bagnall, born September 1, 1808, in England, and Rebecca Cozins, born April 14, 1811, in Philadelphia. Mention of the Bagnall and Cozins families is to be found elsewhere. George and Rebecca have three children: F. C.; Mary, married George Bowles, and Thomas H. They are members of the Presbyterian Church. F. C. Bagnall was educated in the common schools. He enlisted in Company H, Fifth Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, at its organization, and was mustered out with it at the close of the Rebellion. On his return from the war he resumed farming, and was married in 1871 to Doratha Ann Zahniser, daughter of Samuel T. Zahniser. She was born May 7, 1851, and they have two children, Samuel W. and Edith R. He owns two good farms. He was elected justice of the peace in 1888, and is a Republican. His wife is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Big Bend.

JESSE BERINGER, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 9, 1850, in Venango County, to George Beringer, born in Indiana County, and Margaret E. Davis, a native of Cambria County. The parents settled in Franklin soon after marriage, where George engaged in teaming, chopping cord wood and various other labors. He is now among the wealthy men of Venango County. He was offered at one time $80,000 for his farm. He had twelve children: John, deceased; James, killed in a coal bank; Elizabeth, married James Shiner; George W.; William, crippled in a coal bank and died three weeks later; David; Samuel, died in a hospital during the war; Mary A., deceased; Sarah C., married David Hoves; Jesse; Margaret, deceased; Martha M., married John Henderson. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married the 8th of February, 1872, to Hattie Layton, born February 11, 1855, in Butler County to Thomas and Mary (Vernum) Layton, natives, the former of Washington and the latter of Butler County. They were the parents of twelve children: Hollister; Nancy J.; Margaret, married John Mc-Nerney; Harriet; Martin; Elizabeth, married Washington Kelley; Elmer, James, William, Clara, Della and Bertha. Jesse Beringer came to Mercer County in 1877, and farmed in East Lackawannock Township till 1879, when he moved to his present residence. He owns 227 acres of good land. His children are Thomas G., Anna V., William L. He is a Democrat.

ANDREW BREST, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born August 1, 1823, in a portion of Mercer County which is now attached to Lawrence County. His father, Andrew, was born in 1791, and came to Lawrence County when a child with his parents, David and Catharine (Wise) Brest, from Washington County, Penn. David and Catharine had three children: John, died with the dropsy; Elizabeth, married Henry Richel, and Andrew. Catharine (Wise) Brest was a well-known herb doctor during her early residence in this county. Andrew Brest, Sr., married Mary Rodgers, a native of Mercer County, and by her he had David, Nathaniel, Elizabeth, John, Andrew, William, George, Catharine, Washington, who was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, and is buried there; James and Alexander. The latter was poisoned when small by tea made from steaming an old pipe by a doctor named Cribble, who prescribed the tea to force a vomit. William was scalded to death by falling into a kettle of water. Andrew, Sr., died in 1870, and his wife in 1882; both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject was educated in Springfield Township, and at the age of sixteen years began working for himself by the day at from 25 cents to 50 cents. He bought his first piece of land in 1846, and in 1862 he moved to Jefferson Township. He was married August 29, 1844, to Jane Roberts, daughter of Rev. David Roberts, born October 17, 1791, and died October 18, 1879, and was a distinguished minister of the Methodist Episcopal organization in New Castle and surrounding neighborhood for over forty years. He married Rebecca (McChesney), who bore him Sarah, Jane, Susannah, William, Moses, Enoch, David, Mary, James, Rebecca, Harriet, Robert and Watson. Mr. and Mrs. Brest had Mary J., born July 23, 1846, who married William A. Noble, who died in the war; infant, born August 11, 1848, died soon; John Z., born January 21, 1850, entered the war at the age of fourteen years and died with the measles; Sarah R., born January 14, 1852, died August 10, 1854; Jasper N., born May 15, 1854; William W., born July 6, 1856, died November 14, 1859; Jasper N., married Sarah Gilson, of Hickory Township, and has two children, Isabella and Milroy E. Mr. Brest united with the Methodist Church when young, and has been class-leader and steward in the same, and his wife has been a member of said church since the age of fifteen. Andrew Brest enlisted in Company E, Fifty-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, as did also his brothers, Washington and James. His brother John was confined in Libby Prison for nearly three years. Nathaniel was also in the war, as were also David W. and Frank, the sons of David Brest. Mr. and Mrs. Brest have reared John L. Young from the age of five years, and Della Layman, taking the latter from the industrial schools of Cleveland. He is a Republican.

H. A. BROADBENT, county treasurer, post-office Mercer, was born January 1, 1844, in Worcester County, Mass., to Ammon and Elmira (Wadsworth) Broadbent. Ammon was a native of England, and came with his parents, Ammon and Martha (Briley) Broadbent, to America when he was ten years old. Our subject was educated in the common schools of Oneida County, N. Y., and at Utica, N. Y. He was engaged with his father in a woolen factory in Jefferson Township, when he was elected county treasurer, in 1887. The family came to Mercer County in 1857. He enlisted in Company B, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, re-enlisted in the Two Hundred and Fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served with the Fifth Heavy Artillery. He was married in October, 1865, to Miss Maggie Anderson, daughter of William Anderson, of Jefferson Township. This marriage resulted in five children: William W. and Joseph (both type-setters in the Dispatch Republican office, Mercer), Jesse F., Harry A., Anna J. Our subject has served as justice of the peace and school director. He is a member of Mercer Post, G. A. R., and is a staunch Republican. He and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

JOHN CLARK (deceased) was born in 1817 in County Tyrone, Ireland, and came to Pittsburgh about 1850, and in 1854 he brought his family to Mercer County. They lived for a number of years in Lackawannock Township. In 1864 they moved to the farm where the family reside, in Jefferson Township. Here John Clark died, on June 25, 1876. He married Mary McWilliams, a native of Ireland, who blessed him with nine children: John, died in Pittsburgh; Jane, married Isaac W. Bagnall; Margaret, taught school a number of years, and became the first wife of R. M. Smith; Mary, deceased; Elizabeth A., married William H. Womer; Thomas A., deceased; Rachel, John W. and Charles C. Mr. Clark's family belongs to the First Presbyterian Church at Mercer (Charles excepted). John Clark taught school in Ireland and in Mercer County. His estimable widow resides with her sons, John W. Charles C., and daughter Rachel, on the home place, known as the "Old Law" farm, consisting of 125 acres. The father was assessor and school director. John W. Clark was elected constable of Jefferson Township in 1887, by a majority of thirty, and collector by twenty-four. In 1888 he received forty-eight majority for the same offices. In June, 1887, he was appointed school treasurer, and still serves. The Clark brothers are Democrats, and enterprising young men, and the family is one of the most respected in the community where they live.

HENRY DAVIS, farmer, post-office Clark, was born June 17, 1824, in what is now Lawrence County, to Adam and Elizabeth (Steiner) Davis, natives of Westmoreland County. They came to Lawrence County about 1818. The father died at Big Bend in 1866, and his widow still lives, and blessed her husband with Kate, John, Henry, Susannah, Joseph, Nancy and Hannah. The parents were Free Will Baptists. Henry Davis was educated in the country log cabin, and learned carpentering. He was married February 5, 1846, to Lucy, daughter of Francis and Mary C. (Davis) Brazee (no connection). Her parents were natives of Connecticut, and settled in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1838. She was born November 10, 1827. Mr. Davis settled on his present farm March 8, 1864, and now owns eighty acres, through a portion of which the old canal passes. He bought the canal-boat "Compromise," and operated it for a number of years transporting lumber, coal, pig iron, tan-bark, etc., to Pittsburgh and Erie. He and wife are Free Methodists of Jefferson Hall. He is a Republican. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Davis are: Lewis A., married Mary Young, and has had Clyde, Birt (deceased), Lillian (deceased), May, Victor, Glenn, Clifford, Olive; Francis A., married Sarah DeGarmo, children, John W., Jennie, James (deceased), Washington, Harriet and Lizzie; Theodore P., married Jane McIntyre, children, Thomas and an infant; Mary E., married T. JAMES FORSYTHE, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born April 21, 1811, in County Antrim, Ireland, to John and Rose (Hamilton) Forsythe, the parents of John, James, Jane, Sarah, Andrew and Ann. Only Ann, Andrew and James came to America. Ann married Samuel Fyffe, and Andrew is dead. James received his education in his native county. Here he began very poor, by working out by the day at as low as 50 cents. He finally became able to buy twenty acres, on which he erected a log cabin and lived two years before he married Jane Hutchison, a sister of William Hutchison, of East Lackawannock. He brought his wife to his log cabin, where they lived for five years. He now owns 200 acres, of which he is the artificer. His only son, John, married Lizzie Treflinger, of Pittsburgh, and has two children, James H. and Margaret. He farms the place for his father. Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church at Mercer. He is a Democrat, and contents himself in his old age by reading the Western Press, Pittsburgh Post and the Ohio Farmer.

THOMAS FRUIT, deceased, was born in 1800, in Northumberland County, Penn., and came to this county with his parents, Richard and Sarah (Wilson) Fruit, when quite small, and the family settled on land now owned by the Fruit heirs. Here Richard and Sarah died, he in 1822, she in 1844, and were the parents of Robert, Elizabeth, Catharine, Thomas, William and John. They were Presbyterians. Thomas Fruit was married in 1826 to Anna Campbell, the daughter of Edward and Margaret (Satterfield) Campbell, the parents of William, Margaret, Eliza, James, Anna, Mary and Jane. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were Presbyterians, and he was a justice of the peace for many years. Thomas Fruit was blessed by his union with six children: Wilson,

STEPHEN HORNE, farmer and blacksmith, post-office Mercer, was born January 8, 1821, in Delaware County, Penn., to William D., born in the same county December 22, 1777, and Sarah (Pyle) Horne, born in same place July 5, 1785. The family came to Neshannock Township, now Lawrence County, in 1824, and there the father died April 2, 1862, and the mother August 12, 1872. They were Friends in religious belief, and had Edward, Hannah, Hiram, Eliza, Ann and Stephen. Stephen was educated in Lawrence County. At the age of sixteen he began learning the blacksmith trade with his brother-in-law, James McConahay, at New Castle, where he remained three years. He then worked at various places until 1845, when he formed a partnership with Jacob Shaffer, of Mercer, which continued until 1847. He then conducted the business by himself until 1851, when he farmed and followed smithing in Lawrence County. In 1862 he located at Big Bend, where he followed his trade and farmed. In 1873 he came to his present farm, and the following year removed to Mercer. In 1875 he bought forty-one acres where he now lives, and has since farmed and conducted his blacksmith shop. He was married in 1843 to Elizabeth Boyd, who died February 5, 1858, leaving three children: Henrietta, married William Forbes and lives in Pueblo, Colo.; William H., married Clara Wade, and resides on a farm near Morning Sun, Iowa; Helen, married

N. W. McKay, and lives in Wapello, Iowa. He was married again, to Mary A. Gross, daughter of Henry and Catharine Fair, and the widow of John Gross. By her he has Hannah, a teacher; Stella, married William McCullough; Ida, married Newman Cozad; Crissie, Edith and Charles. The present Mrs. Horne was born December 15, 1833, in York County, Penn., and married John Gross, by whom she had one child, Matilda. Her father, Henry Fair, was born in Berks County, came to Lawrence County in 1850, and died in Mercer County October 25, 1873, in the Lutheran faith. His widow lives with her daughter, Mrs. Horne, and was the mother of Philip, Mary, Hannah, Sarah, Elizabeth, Christiana, William and John. Mr. and Mrs. Horne are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Big Bend, and he is a Republican.

JAMES H. McDOWELL (deceased). By the decree of the immutable laws of nature, Death wielded his sceptre and took from the midst of a dutiful wife and obedient children one of the most venerated and esteemed citizens of Jefferson Township, James McDowell, who departed this life on September 15, 1888, with the honors of a well-spent life around him, and the tender ministrations of friends and relatives to comfort his last moments. The deceased had been in failing health for a few years prior to his death, the principal affection being the failure of the eyesight, which necessitated his close confinement to the house, which, because of his indomitable will to be doing something, was very trying to him. He had, however, a wonderful degree of vitality and strength even to the last, and the active business and farm life he led since he attained manhood brought him in contact with many people, and a certain frankness and unaffected courtesy of manner made friends of all with whom he transacted business or exchanged civilities. In this volume will be found a portrait of the worthy deceased, which speaks more for his personal traits than any amount of language that might be framed together. He was born September 10, 1810, in Pymatuning Township. His parents, Robert and Jane (Lodge) McDowell, were natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., and who settled at an early period where their son, James, was born. During James' boyhood days he had the advantage of only two weeks at the old log cabin school-house, for which he paid a small tuition. By securing good books and studying at spare moments, he acquired a fair business education, such as warranted his neighbors to solicit his service in public office, which he, however, refused, because of a pressure of farm duties. He early learned the arduous trade of a stone-cutter, and followed that for many years. He finally bought a farm in the woods, and went through the various hardships that go to make up the life of the pioneers. By careful attention to his duties, strict economy and frugal dealings, he accumulated a large amount of personal property, together with a farm of 230 acres, which he brought into a high state of cultivation, before receiving his last summons. The family can pride themselves that he and his estimable consort were the artificers of all they possessed, for they began their matrimonial career with but little else than willing hearts and strong hands. Early in life he identified himself with the Presbyterian Church, and the living of a life of an earnest Christian, added to his natural inclinations, made him one of the best of citizens, the kindest of husbands and a cherished father. He was married in 1834 to Miss Fannie, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Smith) Byerly, natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., and early residents of Pymatuning Township. The result of this union was the following children: George, married Rebecca Columbus; Joseph, married Alice Carr; Mary A. married Daniel Hay; Jane, married James Branaugh; Julia, married Ferdinand Vansicklin, a merchant of Brooklyn, N. Y.; James C., married Sallie Holstein, and Emma, married Hiram W. Hoagland. In politics the deceased was an earnest Democrat.

SAMUEL T. McCULLOUGH, farmer, post-office Hill, was born March 3, 1827, in East Lackawannock Township, and is a brother of F. S. McCullough. He was educated in the country schools and the Mercer Academy; his teachers in the latter being Samuel Griffith, George W. Zahniser and others. He was married, in 1859, to Martha Carpenter, daughter of Thomas Carpenter and Jane (Hunter) Carpenter, the parents of James, Joseph, John P., Martha and Sarah. Mrs. McCullough died July 27, 1871, a member of the Presbyterian Church, and the mother of Mary A., Flora J., Robert F. and Alonzo S. He was married again, to Elizabeth Bean, of Delaware Township. When a boy Mr. McCullough came to the farm where he now lives, the gift of his father, and has experienced the hardships that go to make up the life of the pioneer. He is serving his third term as school director, and he and family are Presbyterians.

F. S. McCULLOUGH, farmer, post-office Hill, was born September 19, 1820, in Lackawannock Township, on the farm where Alexander McCullough now lives. He is a son of Alexander and Eleanor (Smith) McCullough. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and by Rev. Geo. W. Zahniser in Mercer. In 1844 he began in the wild woods on the farm where he now lives, erecting a cabin 16x16 feet out of round logs. He and his brother, Samuel T., "batched" until 1847, when on August 27 of that year our subject was married to Louisa Bean, of Hempfield Township. He brought his bride to this cabin, and subsequently built a commodious house, which he has recently repaired, making a beautiful residence. He has owned 400 acres, a portion of which he has divided between his sons. His children are: Mary E., Susan E., married Thomas H. Miles; James A., married Clara Miles; Samuel F.; Jennie M.; William I., married Emily Dickson. Mr. McCullough owns a saw-mill now located in Delaware Township, and his sons have run a threshing machine for sixteen years. He and wife and children are members of the Presbyterian Church of Clarksville, in which he has been an elder for twenty years. He is a Republican.

THOMAS RAY, farmer, post-office Hill, was born November 23, 1823, in County Down, Ireland, to John and Eliza (Hurley) Ray, the parents of John, George, Thomas, James, William and Jane. George Ray came to Hope Valley, Rhode Island, in 1848, and was for four years manager of a weaving establishment owned by a man by the name of Darling. In 1852 he hired to Gen. James, of Providence, to superintend a weaving shop in Reading, Penn. Eight years later he went into a machine shop at the same place. Our subject came from his native country in 1850 to where his brother was in Rhode Island, and was employed in a cotton machine shop for three years. He then came to the home of his uncle, Thomas Ray, of Butler County, and worked one year on his farm. In 1854 he settled in Mercer County, and rented a farm of William Gordon, of Lackawannock Township, for three years. The next two years he was on the farm of Robert Gallagher, of Shenango Township. He spent the six subsequent years on the farm of a Mr. Thompson, which was composed of 300 acres. At the close of this period he bought a house and lot in West Middlesex, and was there engaged in dealing in cattle for six years. In 1870 he bought a farm in Lackawannock Township, which he traded in 1883 to Kimmell for his present farm. He was married in 1845 to Margaret Boal, of Ireland, and has Eliza, married John Boals; John, married Emma C. Troutman, and is the present postmaster of Hill; Thomas, deceased; Sarah, deceased; George; William G., deceased; Sadie, married W. P. Morrow; Susan

M., married Z. S. Dunlap; James, attending Grove City College; Maggie, married William Leshner, a carpenter of Sharon. Mr. Ray is now an elder in the United Presbyterian Church of Sharon, and is a Democrat.

ABNER L. RENO, farmer, post-office Hill, was born September 13, 1832, in Beaver County, to Jesse and Elizabeth (Bebont) Reno, natives, the former of Beaver and the latter of Washington County. The parents came to Mercer County in the fall of 1836, and settled on a farm in Jefferson Township, yet owned by the heirs. They moved to Lawrence County in 1879, where the father died December 31, 1880. His widow resides with her daughter, Mrs. Addie E. McNish. They had Abner L., Henry B., Frank A., Kate J., Anna L., John L., Perry A., principal of a university at Mitchell, Dakota; Luella, Addie and Rebecca M. The father established a tannery in Jefferson Township in 1843, and operated it for twelve years. He and wife were Methodists. Abner L. Reno attended the common schools, and spent two terms at Beaver College, Beaver, Penn. He was engineer at the Clay Furnace for eight years, and at Youngstown, Ohio, some time. He went to California in 1853, in company W. W. Williamson, Moses Blank, William and Harry Ash, making the trip from Saint Joe, Mo., by ox team. He returned in 1855, and March 11, 1856, was married to Margaret C. Davis, born October 28, 1836, near Painesville, Ohio, a daughter of Carson Davis, born March 28, 1809, in Armstrong County, Penn., to Ebenezer and Mary (Moore) Davis, natives of New Jersey. Mr. Davis' parents had James, Nancy, Carson, Rachel and Ebenezer. Carson Davis was married to Harriet Carman, of Meadville, December 1, 1831. This marriage resulted in five children: Emeline, Margaret C., William, George H. and Albert. Mr. Davis engaged, after his marriage, in moulding at a furnace in Ohio, and seven years later he was employed at the same in Meadville. In 1841 he went to Erie, and moulded until 1845, when he was transferred to the Clay Furnace, in Jefferson Township, which was erected that year by David Himrod and B. B. Vincent. He acted as their foreman until 1858. In 1859 he was employed by the above firm in Youngstown, Ohio. He retired principally in 1870, having lost the sight of one eye that year, and in 1877 he lost the sight of the other. His wife died March 25, 1861, a member of the Presbyterian Church. He now resides with his daughter, Mrs. Reno, the mother of three boys: Charles C., George L. and Wilbur H.

RALPH M. SMITH, farmer and stock raiser, post-office Mercer, was born July 18, 1848, in Cool Spring Township. His father, Richard W. Smith, was born in England February 20, 1816, to Richard and Phoebe (Wooduff) Smith, natives of England. The family, consisting of father, mother and eleven children, John, Mary, Elizabeth, Phoebe, Richard W., Samuel, William, Ellen, George, Ann and Jane, came to America in 1831, and settled in Mercer, where the father engaged in butchering for twelve years, and also bought and sold wool. He bought eight acres where William Fry lives, and there he died about 1839, and is buried in the old Mercer graveyard; his wife died at the home of her daughter, Elizabeth Livingston, in Illinois, in 1865; she was a Baptist. Richard attended the common schools, and some time at Mercer Academy, his teachers being Levi Arnold and others. His class-mates were such men as J. H. Wright and George W. Zahniser. Mr. Smith has, however, taken a deep interest in buying and reading books, theology, history, etc. He learned chair making, wheel-wrighting, spinning wheels and painting with James McKean. He was married, 1835, to Elizabeth Johnston, a sister of the "twin Johnston girls," who died in Cool Spring Township suddenly, and within an hour. In 1836 he moved to Franklin, and engaged in chair making, house and carriage painting; he remained nearly four years. In 1840 he moved to Mercer County, and bought and cleared forty acres of land in Cool Spring Township. In 1859 he sold this, and bought where William Nickol lives, and there he lived about sixteen years, and followed butchering, in connection with his farming, for thirteen years. He then sold that, and bought twenty-five acres where he now lives, where he has remained since. He has had ten children, five of whom grew up: Samuel, Richard, George H., Ralph M.; Lucy, married Albert Merchant. Mr. Smith has held township offices, and seven years as school director, and in 1865 was elected county commissioner, and two months from the time he entered upon official duty the court-house was burned, and he took an active interest in building the present court-house; he was also commissioner when the jail was constructed. He was once an Odd Fellow. He has been a member of the agricultural society. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; joined that organization when seventeen years old. He was an early advocate of free soilism, and when the Republican party came into existence he was among its earliest supporters. He started poor, and has owned considerable property.

HENRY STEINGREBE, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born August 8, 1826, in Hanover, Germany, to Henry and Christina (Brummer) Steingrebe, the parents of Earnest, Charles, Henry, and two who died small. Henry was educated in his native country, and, because of the death of his father when he was but twelve years old, he was compelled to work with Frederick Steingrebe until he was eighteen years old, when he was employed as a laborer on an 800-acre farm for ten years. He received for the first two years $18 per year, and for the next five years he got $36 per year, and the remaining three years he was driving the government hack for the proprietor of the farm, who had the contract to carry the mail and was allowed to carry passengers. For these years he got $45 yearly. In 1854 he, with his wife, whose name was Cena Heisterman, came to West Virginia. In the fall of 1854 they came to Jefferson Township, and lived with Henry Wagner. In 1868 he and Mr. Wagner bought a tract of land, which they subsequently divided, and of which Mr. Steingrebe got seventy-four acres. By economy and hard labor he has earned considerable property. He was numbered in the last draft, but owing to the close of the war did not respond. His children are Charles, Lewis, William, Henry, Hannah, married David Anderson. His son Lewis lost one leg while working in a saw-mill, and is an agent for various farm implements and reapers, and is the present assessor of Jefferson Township, having been elected to that important office in 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Steingrebe are Lutherans and he is a Democrat.

SAMUEL STEISTER, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born about 1816, in Union County, Penn. He is one of ten children: Susan, Betsey, Valentine, Jacob, John, Levi, Ann, Catharine, Sophia, Samuel. The father of the above was Barnhart Steister. Samuel Steister attended the log cabin schools in Mercer County a short time. He began learning the blacksmith trade at the age of eighteen years with John Moyer, in Union County, which business he followed for nine years. He was married in 1841, to Mary A. Ross, a native of Sandy Lake Township, and the daughter of David and Elizabeth (Fowler) Ross, the parents of Abigail, Mary A., Elizabeth, Sarah J., David, Ellen. Mr. and Mrs. Steister have five children: Lizzie, married William Wright; William, married Lizzie Wright; John, died in a hospital while in the service of his country; Samuel, and Levi, deceased. Mr. Steister resides on thirty-eight acres of well improved land which is owned and cultivated by his son Samuel, who is growing berries with good success. Our subject and his son are Republicans.

SAMUEL T. ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office Hill, was born August 1, 1821, on the farm which he now owns, son of Mathias Zahniser, born in Westmoreland County, Penn., and came to Cool Spring Township when about twenty-four years old. He married, in Cool Spring Township, Doratha A. Fry, and by her had eleven children: John and Michael, dead; Polly, married Jonathan Young; Mathias; Hannah, married James Young; David; Julia, married James Anderson; Jacob; Samuel; Susan, married Adam Merchant; Catharine. The father was road supervisor, and was once an elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. His wife was also a member of the same church. The subject's father gave each of the boys, except Samuel, the value of 100 acres of land, and our subject was to have the old home place, he to maintain his parents. Samuel was educated in a log cabin school-house, and was married January 16, 1844, to Mary W. Walker, born May 15, 1819, a daughter of Andrew and Esther Walker, by whom he had nine children: Jane, Jeremiah, Dorotha, George, Sophia, Albert, and three others who died small. His wife died December 5, 1887, and was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Charleston. Our subject has been township supervisor. He is a farmer, and has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church thirty-three years. He has always been a Democrat, and has taken the Western Press for forty-six years. Mrs. Zahniser was blind for twenty-five years before her death. On December 3, she went from the home of her daughter, Mrs. James R. Nelson, to her own home, and on the fifth day following, as she was sitting on a chair knitting, the needles fell from her hands and her eyes were opened in the world beyond where there is no blindness.

AMOS ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office Hill, was born January 17, 1837, in Jefferson Township, and is a brother of Josiah, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He was educated in the common schools. He was married September 17, 1861, to Hannah Blackstone, daughter of James and Nancy (Waugh) Blackstone, the parents of Thomas, Samuel, John and Hannah. Her father died in 1865, and her mother in 1871, both Presbyterians. Her father was once county collector. Mrs. Zahniser was born July 20, 1835, and at marriage settled with her husband in a log cabin on the farm of 160 acres where they now live, 100 acres of which were given him by his father. Mr. and Mrs. Zahniser have, Nannie A., dead; John E., Lizzie M., Frank W., Thomas M., Montrose, and an infant, died small. He has been justice of the peace for five years, and assessor, school director and road commissioner. He was a leading member of the Grange Lodge once in existence in the township. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Charleston, and he is a staunch Republican.

JOSIAH ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office Hill, was born December 10, 1841, in the house where he now lives, to John and Mary A. (Bernhard) Zahniser, natives, the father of Cool Spring Township and the mother of West Salem. They were the parents of Dollie A. Levina, married Cornelius Shaffer; Levi, dead; Elizabeth, married Richard Fruit; Amos, John A., Mary A. and Josiah. The father died September 15, 1869, and the mother February 14, 1882; they were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Charleston. Josiah received his education in the common schools, and has always been a farmer. He was drafted for the late war, and insisted on going, but his father, rather than give up his only son then at home, hired a substitute. He was married February 25, 1868, to Mary J. Broadbent, a sister of H. A. Broadbent, county treasurer, and has by her Ammon, Ella M., Ida J., Willis H., Verne W. and Herbert. He settled at marriage on a portion of the old homestead. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a staunch Republican. An extensive history of the Zahnisers appears among the Jackson Township biographies.

D. N. ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office Hill, was born April 16, 1856, in Jefferson Township, to David and Rachel (Tice) Zahniser. David was a brother of Samuel T. Zahniser, whose sketch appears elsewhere. Rachel was born in Canada, and came to America with her parents many years ago. The children of David and Rachel were Catharine, Jacob L., M. R., lives in Sharpsville; F. T., lives in Mercer County, Ill.; H. N., lives near Greenville; A. J., farming on the old place; D. N. The father died in 1878, and his widow in 1883. The latter was a Methodist. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up on a farm. He kept a grocery store at Charleston for about eighteen months. He was married May 1, 1884, to Chloe Weller, daughter of Samuel and Lizzie (Womer) Weller. Her mother is a sister of Rev. John C. Womer, who preached in this county, but is now located at Wampum, Penn., in charge of a Methodist Episcopal congregation. The parents of Mrs. Zahniser had Chloe, T. G., J. C., Liola, Effie, Roy and Willie. By his marriage our subject has one child, Frank Logan. He owns 125 acres of good land and a house and lot in Charleston. He has served as assessor two terms, road commissioner two terms, and in 1887 was elected a justice of the peace by 100 majority. He is an I. O. O. F. at Greenfield, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Big Bend, and a staunch Republican.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SPRINGFIELD AND FINDLEY.

SPRINGFIELD TOWNSHIP.

B. S. ALEXANDER, farmer, post-office Indian Run, was born January 26, 1850, in Findley Township, and is a son of ex-Commissioner M. W. Alexander, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He was educated in the common schools, and has always been a farmer. He was married February 11, 1872, to Anna M. Eats, daughter of George and Nancy (Miller) Eats, and is one of four children: Mary, married J. J. Covert; Anna M., George A., engaged in the livery business at Grove City, and Lydia, married I. V. Covert, of Grove City. Mr. Alexander has by his marriage five children: Harry E., Robert M., Celia J., William M. and John H. He settled on his farm of sixty-three acres, known as the Daniel Nelson farm, in 1881. He was a delegate to the State convention which nominated Judge Williams and William B. Hart. He and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is one of the progressive farmers and enthusiastic Republicans of the county.

W. N. ARBUCKLE, farmer, post-office Balm, was born December 11, 1835, in Hickory Township. His father, Joseph, was born in Berks County, Penn., and married Eliza Moore, a daughter of John Moore, an early settler of Hickory Township, and who is mentioned in another part of this work. Joseph Arbuckle died in Shenango Township in 1871, his wife had died on her way home from a visit to a neighbor's in November, 1856. They were buried in the Clarksville cemetery, and had ten children: Isabella, Culbertson, John, Rebecca, James, William N., Elizabeth, Maria, Harriet and Joseph S., who, in his seventeenth year, enlisted in the Fifty-seventh Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers. The father was a stone and brick-mason. He walked from his native locality to this county, carrying all he had on his back. He said "that when he arrived he found his feet were blistered." He did his first mason work in this county for a Mr. Pearson, it being the old stone woolen-mill which stood on the site of the "Broadbent Woolen Mills," in Jefferson Township. He also built a furnace for John and Joseph McClure at Sharpsville. Our subject was educated in the country schools, and was married February 23, 1860, to Elizabeth Bagnall, daughter of William Bagnall, of Jefferson Township, whose sketch appears in this work. She was born October 20, 1841. Mr. Arbuckle was drafted in the first draft made on Mercer County, served a short time, and then hired a substitute, and in the second draft he was called upon again. He paid his fine, and after having secured a little home for his family he enlisted in Company H, Fifth Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, and served until the close of the war, and is a sufferer from the effects of that service in the cause of his country. On his return from the war he resumed farming, and subsequently engaged in the real estate business with W. J. McKean, of Mercer. In 1873 they bought their present farm in Springfield Township, where they have since remained. Their marriage has given them five children: Minnie A., married J. M. Vanhorn, a carriage manufacturer, Balm, Penn.; William P., attended the common schools, and graduated at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, preached one year in the Centerville Circuit, married Anna Whieldon, and is attending Boston University Theological School, preparing for the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while his wife is pursuing her musical studies in the same city; May, married Charles Brown, a merchant of Pittsburgh; S. Carrie is at home; Jesse E. entered Boston University College of Liberal Arts in the fall of 1888. He and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he has been a steward. He is a Republican, and one of the enterprising farmers of Springfield Township, and every member of his family have the advantage of commencing life with college instruction.

W. C. BLACK, farmer, post-office Balm, was born December 13, 1843, on the farm where he now resides. His parents, A. H. P. and Eliza (Christley) Black, were natives of Springfield Township. The mother died in 1864 and the father in 1865. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, and had three children: Anna, deceased; Helen, married Dr. G. W. Burnes, who lives in White Hall, Greene Co., Ill. and W. C. Our subject was educated in the common schools and at New Wilmington College. He taught two terms of common school, and has followed farming. He was married April 9, 1868, to Ellen Pearson, daughter of William W. and Sophronia (Loveland) Pearson. Her father is dead, and had a large family. Mr. Black settled on the present farm of 180 acres at the time of his marriage. He has one child, Grace. He enlisted in Company D, Two Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nine months, and was in the battles of Fort Steadman and Petersburg. Mr. and Mrs. Black are members of the Center Presbyterian Church, of which he is a ruling elder. He makes a specialty of raising fine stock. He is a Republican. Mention of the Black family is made in another part of this work.

A. U. CHRISTLEY, farmer, post-office Balm, was born August 31, 1826, in Springfield Township, to William, who was born in 1796, to George and Elizabeth (Snyder) Christley, natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., from whence they came to this county in 1812 and settled in Liberty Township. There the grandparents of our subject died, and had William, John, Polly, married Stephen Cooper, and is the only one of the children living; Catharine, Michael, Elizabeth, George, Samuel B. and Curtis. William Christley was educated at the country cabin schools in Westmoreland County, and learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, which he followed until 1832. His father was also a cabinet-maker. Our subject has in his house several pieces of furniture which were made by his father and grandfather. William was married September 25, 1817, to Magdalene Uber, who settled at an early day where Benjamin Uber now lives. William located on a farm near London, in Springfield Township, at his marriage, and in 1832 came to the farm where our subject now resides. He built a log cabin, and later a small frame house, which is yet standing. He died March 4, 1858, and his widow February 2, 1867. They were members of the German Reformed Church at Blacktown. Their children were: Catharine, married Thomas Courtney, April 11, 1843, died January 17, 1864; Mary E., married A. H. P. Black, December 15, 1840, died January 30, 1864; Sarah A., married W. J. Tinker, September 24, 1863, died December 23, 1879; Margaret, married A. T. Black, October 3, 1846, died April 24, 1875; George S., died August 10, 1869; and A. U. Our subject was educated in the district schools and the log cabin. One of his early teachers was James Mathers. This man used the old Western Calculator, and when he could not get the answer in the book in his solution of a problem, he would put his answer on the work and write "corrected by James Mathers". Mr. Christley worked for his father until 1850, when he formed a partnership with Jacob Snyder, in the general mercantile business, at North Liberty. In four years he sold to Snyder, and after a period of a few months in the employ of Mr. Snyder engaged in farming on the old place. He was married January 21, 1864, to Martha W. Morris, daughter of George and Harriet (Winton) Morris, natives, the father of Westmoreland County and the mother of Onondagua County, N. Y. Mrs. Morris was born March 4, 1817, and married October 16, 1839, in Mercer County. Her husband died in 1881. They had Martha W., born August 26, 1840; Albert, married Mary Hosack, and lives in Mercer; Mary, married Cyrus Hosack; Isabella, dead; Sarah, married George Snyder, and lives in Buffalo, N. Y.; William. Mr. Morris was a member of the Congregational Church, and Mrs. Morris lives with our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Christley have three children: Anna E., Ida B. and William G., all at home. Mr. Christley is the owner of over 300 acres of good land, and is one of the wealthiest and most respectable citizens of the township. He is a stanch Republican, and he and his family are members of the Center Presbyterian Church.

W. A. COULTER, merchant, London, was born July 14, 1827, in Wolf Creek Township, Mercer Co., Penn., and is a son of Andrew and Sarah (McCoy) Coulter. The father was born in Chambersburg, Penn., and came to this county at an early day with his parents, Richard and Catharine Coulter, and settled in Wolf Creek Township, where the parents died, having been blessed with the following children: Andrew, James, William and Samuel. Andrew got his education in Franklin County, and was in the War of 1812. He married Sarah McCoy, by whom he had two children: Mary J., married Edward Denniston, and W. A. The parents died in Wolf Creek Township, were Presbyterians, and the father held some of the small township offices. Our subject was educated in the common schools and the old Mercer Academy, and taught two terms in the public school. He was educated in vocal music, receiving his instructions under Dr. Mason at Chicago, George F.

Root, Bradley, and one term under Bassina, the noted Italian musician. He taught music in Mercer, Lawrence and Venango Counties. He enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and after 100 days' service he re-enlisted in the Two Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was colonel of the latter, commanding that regiment the last year of the war. On his return from the war he resumed teaching music, and in 1870 he purchased a stock of dry goods of Mrs. E. C. Breck, at London. He succeeded David Gilson in this business at this place in 1849, and conducted it until 1860. In 1872 he erected a fine building, which was destroyed by fire in 1886, together with the entire stock of goods and his household goods also. He at once rebuilt and put in a line of goods, and carries a stock of about $6,000, under the firm name of W. A. Coulter & Sons. He was married in 1851, to Caroline M. Smith, daughter of John C. and Charlotte (Croy) Smith, by whom he has five children: Willis and John S., of the firm; Clara, married P. N. Painter; Sadie, married William Munnell; Lucia, married B. E. Robb. Mr. Coulter was appointed postmaster at London in 1849, and served until 1860. He was again appointed in 1870, and resigned in 1886 in favor of his son, Willis, who conducts the office in his store. Mr. Coulter was appointed notary public in 1883, and re-appointed by Gov. Beaver. He, W. C. Davis and G. C. McCracken established a creamery at London in 1885, which was one of the first in Northwestern Pennsylvania. He and wife belong to the old Center Presbyterian Church, and he has led the music for this organization forty years, and has been superintendent of the Sabbath-schools for sixteen years. In politics he is a Prohibitionist.

SAMUEL DRAKE, farmer, post-office Leesburgh, was born January 12, 1803, in Westmoreland County, Penn., to Moses and Susan (Beneman) Drake. The father was born in New Jersey, and came to what is now Lawrence County in 1815, and finally settled in Wilmington Township, this county, with his second wife. By his first wife he had four children: Fannie, Samuel, Daniel and Betsey; and by his second wife he had Sarah, Susan, James, Anna, Jane and William. Samuel Drake was educated in the log cabin schools, which were much unlike those in which his children were educated by his means. He attended only twenty-three days in all, but by securing good books and papers he has become a well-informed man. He early learned the art of making brick, and made those used in the construction of the first Second United Presbyterian Church edifice in Mercer. He was married in 1831 to Elizabeth Orr, a sister of John Orr, and by her had only one child, Mary J., who lived with her grandmother until the latter's death, when she came back to the home of her father. Some time subsequent to the death of his first wife, he was married to Lydia Orick, of Ohio, by whom he has four children: Erastus, Margaret M., married William McCracken; Julia A., Samuel W., married Martha Robinson, and has two children, William and Jane. Mr. Drake was married a third time, his last wife being Martha, the widow of Robert Donley, by whom he had four children: Robert, Rebecca, Margaret and Lucetta. He has been an elder of the Leesburgh Presbyterian Church for over twenty years. The two wives who lived with him in this county were also attached to that church. Mr. Drake began in this world with only a willing heart and strong hands, and by economy and frugal dealings he has accumulated 160 acres, which he yet manages. He has always contributed to every enterprise that goes to help build up and retain the good name of Mercer County, and at the time of furnishing the data for a sketch of his life to appear in this volume he expressed the hope that he might live long enough to peruse the history of the county he has labored so earnestly to help make "blossom as the rose," that those coming after him might enjoy what he helped to make with his willing hands. At the ripe old age of eighty-five years he attends to his own business, and a part of that of the church of his choice. He has always been an ardent Republican since the organization of that party.

T. S. ELLIOTT, miller, post-office Leesburgh, was born September 21, 1849, and is a brother of J. G. Elliott, of Mercer, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He was educated in the common schools, Beaver Female Seminary and a select school at Grove City. He began the milling business several years ago, buying the property of John Campbell. He subsequently built a new mill at a cost of $8,000, which burned two years later, but he got only $4,000 insurance. In 1886 he rebuilt a three-story mill, 30x36, and put in five sets of rollers, one purifier of the Wolfe & Hamaker make, of Chambersburg, Penn., four centrifugals, two cleaning machines, all costing about $6,000. The mill is run by water power, the water being conducted to the wheel by means of a tube, which is 300 feet long, and has its source from never failing springs. Indeed it is one of the most complete small mills to be found anywhere. He was married in 1875 to Elizabeth Stuart, daughter of William Stuart, of Lawrence County, and has by her five children: Hallie, Jessie, Kate, Clara and an infant. He is an elder of the Leesburgh Presbyterian Church and superintendent of the Sunday-schools. His wife is a member of the same church. He is a Republican, and the owner of 102 acres of land. Since the above was written Mr. Elliott took pneumonia, and on May 31, 1888, he resigned his spirit to the God who gave it, and his widow and little ones are left to mourn his loss as a severed tie that no lapse of time can restore, but they were left in good financial circumstances.

DAVID GILSON, farmer, post-office London, was born July 9, 1812, in Westmoreland County, Penn., to David and Elizabeth (Wier) Gilson, natives, the father of Westmoreland, and the mother of Adams County, Penn. William Gilson, the grandfather of our subject, bought a large tract of land in Westmoreland County, and at a time owned the famous "Trindle Springs" property in Cumberland County. William Gilson had three sons: William, John and David. Our subject attended the common schools in the log cabin. His father died when he was nearly eight years of age, leaving seven children: William (who lives on the old homestead in Westmoreland County), Dorcas, Robert, James, David, Mary and Samuel. Those living are Mary and David. The parents were strict Presbyterians, never leaving any work for Sunday that could be done on Saturday. Because of the death of his father, David had to do for himself while quite a boy. He, however, remained with his mother until twenty-one years old, and in 1833 came with his brother-in-law, Dixon Hall, to Butler County, to where his sister, Dorcas, and her husband, Mr. Hall, lived. Here he remained one summer. July 14, 1836, he was married to Rebecca, a daughter of Thomas and Esther (Robinson) Courtney, born September 8, 1812, and, after a short period of renting, he went with her to his farm of 125 acres in Butler County. In the fall of 1839 he came to London, this county, and opened the first store in that place. He was thus engaged for a period of ten years, and during this time was instrumental in establishing a post-office, of which he was the first postmaster, and to which he gave the name of London. In 1849 he sold his stock of goods, and engaged extensively in buying and selling cattle, which he continued for thirty years. In 1854 he bought a farm of 125 acres near London, and added to it until he had about 554 acres, on which he raises and grazes cattle; 150 acres of this he gave to his son, Thomas, and 87 acres to his daughter, Elizabeth. He is one of the wealthiest citizens in the township, and is the artificer of his fortune. He became a member of the Center Presbyterian Church in 1857, also his wife and eldest daughter. He has always taken a deep interest in this organization, the financial interests of which are much benefitted by his relationship as well as otherwise. He and wife have had five children: Melissa, Thomas, William, Elizabeth (dead), and Matilda, wife of Isaac Ketler, president of Grove City College. Mr. Gilson cast his last Democratic vote for President Jackson, is now a staunch Republican, and is largely interested in the First National Bank of Mercer. In 1833 he bought up his first drove of horses, took them East and sold them.

JAMES T. GLENN, farmer, post-office Balm, was born July 27, 1812, in Pine Township. His parents, William and Jane (Cunningham) Glenn, were natives of Pennsylvania, and from the eastern part of the State. They came to this county about the year 1800, and settled in Pine Township. In 1823 the family moved to Circleville, Ohio. In one year they returned to Mercer County and bought a farm of 280 acres, a part of which is owned by our subject. Here he died about 1832, and his widow in 1839. They had Margaret, Samuel, Rebecca, married Abram Vanhorn; Elizabeth, William, James T., Charles, married Rachel McCleary; Robert, married Sarah Young, and Hannah, married Marcus Rodgers. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was an elder. Our subject was educated in the log cabin schools. He married, May 29, 1834, Sarah E. Kerr, daughter of John and Polly (Agee) Kerr, natives of Adams County, Penn., and early settlers of Springfield Township. The father died in 1833, and his widow in 1854. Their children were Mary J., William, Sarah, Nancy E. and Margaret. Mr. Glenn settled on his present farm at marriage. He owns fifty-seven acres, and has been auditor of the township. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. His children are: Peggy J., married H. T. Vanhorn; John K., married Christina Reeher, daughter of Abram and Catharine (Michael) Reeher, and has two children, Lola K. and James A. John K. and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church at Centre. He and his father are Republicans. Mr. Glenn was captain of a militia company for eight years.

BENJAMIN F. GORDON, retired physician, Leesburgh, was born August 29, 1822, in Lackawannock Township, this county. His grandparents, Thomas and Jane (Young) Gordon, the former born in 1754 and the latter in 1751, were married in 1774, and emigrated from Ireland to America in 1790 and settled first in one of the eastern counties of Pennsylvania, but subsequently, about the year 1802, in Lackawannock Township, Mercer County, on Tract No. 581, in the third district of donation lands, which they had purchased. Their children were: Mary, born October 25, 1776; John (father of Benjamin F.), born April 27, 1779; William, born October 2, 1783; Jane, born November 25, 1786; Agnes, born April 29, 1790, and Thomas, born April 11, 1793. The first four were born in Ireland. Agnes was born on the sea as the family were coming to America, and Thomas was born in this country. Thomas Gordon, Sr., died October 16, 1822, and Jane, his wife, on August 27, 1835. John Gordon was married August 27, 1801, to Amelia Barton, born in 1775. He died at Pulaski, Penn., in the year 1839. His wife survived him, and died at the home of her son, Benjamin F., on July 24, 1853. To John and Amelia Gordon were born ten children, viz., Thomas, born July 2, 1802; Daniel, born April 5, 1804; Rachel, born May 5, 1806; Jane and Susan (twins), born July 4, 1808; Nancy, born July 24, 1811; John, born June 29, 1813; Joseph, born January 22, 1816; Emily, born in March, 1820, and Benjamin F. The latter was educated in the country schools and the old Mercer Academy. He taught school in Mercer in 1846-47 in an old building which stood near the present site of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1846 he began reading medicine with Dr. Baskin, of Mercer, and completed his studies at the Cleveland Medical College in 1849. In February of that year he began the practice of his profession at Leesburgh, and continued the same at that place for thirty-seven years. He was the examining surgeon for the county at the time the first draft was made during the war of the Rebellion, and was a member of the Legislature in 1879. His wife, Mrs. Isabel M. Gordon, to whom he was married November 12, 1850, was a daughter of James and Nancy (McDowell) Brandon, early settlers of Pine Township, this county. The Doctor and his wife have five children: Quincy A., William B., Mary A., Laura B. and Hettie M.

ARTHUR J. JOHNSTON, farmer, post-office Leesburgh, was born September 13, 1840, on the farm now owned by John W. Nelson, to James and Eliza (Deniston) Johnston, natives, the father of Ireland and the mother of this county. Arthur Johnston, the father of James, married Eleanor Campbell, a descendant of the Highlands of Scotland, with whom he came to this county in an early day, and settled on the farm where Joseph Masters now lives, where he remained as a renter for five years. He then built the stone house where John W. Nelson now resides, and from 1831 to 1842 he kept tavern to accommodate the traveling public. He also kept a post-office there for years. He died in another stone house on his farm of 200 acres in 1844, aged sixty-eight years. His widow died in 1862, aged eighty-nine. Their children were: Mattie E., Mary, Eleanor and James C. Arthur was a Democrat. The children of James C. and Eliza Johnston were nine: William, deceased; Ellen, deceased; Mary E., married James S. Collins; Esther A., married Erastus C. Drake; A. J., William H., Joseph, died small; Margaret, killed by the horses running away when the family were going to church; infant, died small. The parents of the above children were members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer at the time of their death. A. J. Johnston was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on the farm. He was married in 1864 to Hannah, a daughter of Alexander Campbell, of Lawrence County, Penn., and had by her four children: William, deceased; Mary, married John W. Nelson; Anna M. and Ora C. Mr. Johnston is the owner of seventy-five acres of good land, part of which he inherited. He has taken a deep interest in the Democratic party, to which he is attached, has served as delegate, and was assessor of Springfield Township for three terms. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Leesburgh, of which he has been deacon.

ALEXANDER KENNEDY, farmer, post-office Balm, was born September 17, 1835, in Butler County, to David and Mary (Armstrong) Kennedy. The father was a native of Ireland, immigrated to America about the year 1800, and settled in Allegheny County. He was a brick maker, and finally located in Butler County, where he engaged in the milling business. He died July 5, 1858, and April 30, 1858, his wife died. They had ten children: James (deceased), Jane (married Ethen Kelley), Catharine (deceased), David, Alexander, Margaret, Melissa, George G., Robert A. and John E. George, David and Robert were in the war. Our subject was educated in the common schools and was brought up at farm labor. He enlisted in Company D, Fourteenth Pennsylvania Reserves, for three years, but after being wounded at South Mountain, in the right leg, he was discharged. He thus served only nineteen months. He was in the battles of his regiment, in the seven days' fight, was taken prisoner the second day, confined in Libby and Belle Isle prisons for thirty-nine days, and was exchanged at the second battle of Bull Run. He married Maria, daughter of Samuel Shaffer, a native of Huntingdon County, Penn. Her mother, Elizabeth Simenton Shaffer, was a native of Center County, and lived with her husband in that county until his death, 1871. Since then she has been a resident of New Castle. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy have two children: Florence and William. He and wife and Florence are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a staunch Republican. About five years ago he sold his farm in Butler County and bought where he now resides, and is engaged in farming and stock growing. Although not long a resident of this county, his name is to be seen at the head of every enterprise that tends to build up and sustain the good name of Mercer County.

EZEKIEL W. LOVE, farmer, post-office Indian Run, was born October 10, 1824, in Butler County, Penn., to John and Margaret (Wilson) Love, natives, the father of Ireland and the mother of Beaver County. The father came to America at the age of ten with his parents, Patrick Love and wife. After a short residence in New York they came to Butler County, where the father was employed as a miller. He also served in the War of 1812. He died June 3, 1876, at the age of eighty-four years. His wife died in 1853. Their children were: Ezekiel W., Sarah J., married James Rodgers; David, lives at New Castle; William (deceased), John, in Oil City; Charles, in Pittsburgh; James, died small; Martha (deceased), Thomas (deceased). The parents were members of the Covenanter Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed until 1878. He bought a part of his present farm in 1853, and has now ninety-five acres, with a fine field of raspberries. He was married December 17, 1850, to Margaret Montgomery, whose family is mentioned elsewhere. She was born June 3, 1826, on the farm where they now reside. He has by her seven children: John A., dead; Nannie A., dead; Lizzie M., married December 13, 1887, to Robert Breckenridge, of North Liberty; Mary J., James M., Sibbet A., dead; Samuel T. A. Lizzie and Nannie have taught school. He has been a school director, and he and family are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is an elder of that church, and is a staunch Republican. He is a man of unimpeachable character and a good citizen.

NATHANIEL McCONNELL, farmer, post-office London, was born August 14, 1841, in Lawrence County, Penn., to John and Martha (Carlon) McConnell. He was educated in the common schools, and began for himself at the age of twenty-one years. He was married to Flora, a daughter of Alexander Campbell, of Lawrence County. He enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served nearly three years. May 6, 1864, he was taken prisoner at the battle of the Wilderness, was confined for a few days in a prison in Danville, Va., and with seventeen others he was transferred to Andersonville. The only two of this number to get out of the prison alive were Mr. McConnell and William O. Wood, of Ohio. They were taken from there to Florence, S. C., and in December, 1864, were paroled. After returning from the war, and somewhat recovering from the evil effects of horrible prison confinement, he engaged in farming. He bought, in 1867, 125 acres of land in Springfield Township, and has lived thereon ever since. He served as constable for one term, and has been school director. They have one daughter, Mary, and are rearing Joseph Campbell, a son of Mark Campbell, a brother of Mrs. McConnell. They are members of the Presbyterian Church of Leesburg, and he is a Democrat. Alexander Campbell was born in Huntingdon County, and married, in Lawrence County, Mary McWilliams, by whom he had John, Robert, Flora, Joseph, William, Hannah and Mark. The last named married Elizabeth, daughter of David Gilson, and had three children: Herman, dead;

David A. and Joseph T. Mr. McConnell is a good citizen, and daily suffers the severest pains from the effect of his services in the defense of his country. (Note: Since the above sketch was written Mr. McConnell died May 20, 1888).

JAMES MICHAELS, soldier and farmer, post-office London, was born October 29, 1845, in East Lackawannock Township, to George and Sarah (McCormick) Michaels. The father was a native of Westmoreland and the mother of Dauphin County, Penn. They came to Mercer County about the year 1842, and the former died in Springfield Township, January 16, 1885, and the mother, June 14, 1871. They were members of the Center Presbyterian Church, and the parents of ten children, seven of whom are now living: Francis M., married Ellen Dunwiddy and lives in Butler County; James T., Isabella, the wife of William Black, of Pine Township; Amelia, married Jacob Stillwagon; R. S., Lovina (dead), Rebecca (dead), Thomas S. (dead), Jacob, married Minnie Waldron, lives in Pittsburgh, and Lovenia, who lives with our subject. Our subject was educated in the common schools and Greenfield, West Lackawannock Township. He enlisted in Company F, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served sixteen months. At the battle of Deep Bottom a ball struck his right eye, passed through the nose, and took out the left eye with the right. He is, therefore, blind. He was confined in prison in Richmond for eight days, was paroled and discharged at Pittsburgh. There was no time that he was not rational. He is a member of the Center Church, is a stanch Republican, and is the only soldier in Mercer County who gets a full pension. He can do his feeding and gather eggs with seeming ease. He is the owner of 103 acres of good land, on which he has erected good buildings. His sister, Lovenia, lives with and cares for him. He has never married.

J. A. MONTGOMERY, farmer, post-office Indian Run, was born November 14, 1823, in Jamestown, Penn., to James and Elizabeth (Andrews) Montgomery, natives of County Antrim, Ireland, who came to Jamestown, Penn., in 1822, and later to Springfield Township. Here the father died in 1857, and his widow in 1880. They had Mary, married Samuel Smith; Elizabeth, married James English; J. A.; Margaret, married E. W. Love; Nancy M., died in 1850, and James. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church. Our subject obtained his education by walking nearly three miles to a log cabin school-house, where he experienced all of the ancient ways of school instructions. He was married, November 27, 1849, to Jane Akin, daughter of Andrew and Rachel (Adams) Akin, natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., and early settlers of Lawrence County, where she was residing when married. She was born October 7, 1823, died June 25, 1882, and was a consistent member of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a member of the same church. He settled at marriage where he now lives, on his farm of ninety-two acres, which is the result of his own labors. His children were seven: Melissa, married Noble Cozad, of Mercer; Mary, teaching in Washington Territory; Andrew A., Jennie, Anna, Emma, married A. B. Carter, a merchant at Indian Run, and William J. He is a stanch Republican, and one of the enterprising men of the township.

JAMES L. MOORE, post-office Balm, farmer, was born in Hickory Township, November 20, 1836. His parents, Joseph and Eliza (Dawson) Moore, were both brought to this county in their mothers' arms, the former from Westmoreland County and the latter from Washington County. John Moore (father of Joseph) settled three miles east of Sharon, was the founder of the old Moorefield Church, and was elected elder at its organization. Joseph was the oldest of the family, born in 1797, died October 2, 1865, married 1821, and had twelve children, viz.: Matthew D., Isabella, John J., Calvin, Wylie A., Robert R., Nancy J., William W., James L., Mary C., Amanda E. and Joseph W. The parents were members of the Clarksville Presbyterian Church, of which he was an elder. He was justice of the peace, and five of his children were school-teachers. Eliza (Dawson) Moore was born July 31, 1802, and died November 3, 1884. She was a daughter of Matthew Dawson, who came to Mercer County at an early day, and, with his wife, whose maiden name was Wylie, settled, lived and died in Lackawannock Township. They were members of Neshannock Presbyterian Church, of which he was an elder. Our subject was educated in the common schools and in the Clarksville Academy. He taught school for four years, and was married December 22, 1860, to Cornelia E. Robison, born June 28, 1840. Her father, Abram Robison, was born September 12, 1805, and her mother, Mary (Hamilton) Robison, was born October 22, 1800. They were married December 16, 1830, and were natives of Blair County. They came to this county in the spring of 1840, where they died, he June 24, 1870, and she April 25, 1867. They had six children: Elizabeth H., Margaret J., Martha S., Emma A., Cornelia E. and Winfield S. They were Presbyterians, belonging to the West Middlesex Church, of which he was an elder. Mr. and Mrs. Moore have four children, viz.: Harry A., born January 6, 1862, married September 8, 1885, to Sarah L. Freeman, of Crawford County, who is agent and operator for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Shenango, Penn.; Wilbur W., born April 22, 1866; Mary E., born May 8, 1870; Anna E., born February 18, 1873. Mr. Moore resided in Hickory Township until 1872, when he bought what was known as the Esquire Black Farm, in Springfield Township, where he now lives. He is a member of the P. of H., and with his wife belongs to the Center Presbyterian Church, of which he is an elder. In politics he is a Republican.

NICHOLAS MOUL, deceased, was born March 2, 1812, in Hessen, Germany. He came to America with John, his father, his mother and two sisters when he was eighteen years of age, and settled for awhile in Butler County. He afterward came to Mercer County, where he, December 22, 1836, married Elizabeth Sager, who was born December 2, 1815, in Crawford County, Penn. The Sagers were natives of Westmoreland County, and in 1818 settled on the farm where Alexander Kennedy now resides. This farm was afterward sold, and they moved to the farm where Jacob Shuler now resides. There the mother died in 1857, the father in 1860. There were eight children: John, Jacob, Mary, Abram, Daniel, Elizabeth, Andrew and Barbara. The parents were members of the Lutheran Church. Nicholas Moul settled on a farm in Findley Township, where Mr. Moul was killed by a limb of a tree October 6, 1855. His sad and untimely death was mourned by all who knew him. He was possessed of many noble traits of character. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. By his union with Elizabeth Sager he had eight children: Clarissa, married George Cribbs; John, married Hannah Glenn; Jacob, died when four years old; Reuben, married Ettie Trout, and, after her death, Mrs. Mary George; Salome, lives with her mother; Melissa, died when three years old; Amos, died when one year old; George, a member of Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, killed at Cold Harbor June 7, 1864, having been shot in the head; he died the same evening at 9 o'clock, and was buried on the 8th near the Cold Harbor and White House Landing road. Mrs. Moul settled in Balm in 1857, and has since led a quiet life, deeply mourning the loss of her worthy companion. She is a consistent member of the German Reformed Church.

THOMAS P. MUNNELL, farmer, post-office Indian Run, was born July 8, 1835, in Armstrong County, Penn., son of Adam and Mary (Risher) Munnell, natives of Mercer and Armstrong Counties, respectively. The father was reared near New Castle, learned the trade of a stone-cutter, and while working on the construction of a canal through Armstrong County he became acquainted with his future wife. After marriage he removed to Mercer County, and was employed on contract to build locks on the Beaver & Erie Canal, at or near Greenville. He afterward removed to the farm where our subject now resides, and three years later to another farm, in Lawrence County, where he died September 13, 1851. His widow is still living at the ripe old age of eighty-one years, and is the mother of the following children: Eliza J., married William H. Crooks, she is a widow with four children; Mary, wife of James Thorn; Calvin, Effie, married William Simmison and resides in the West, and W. H., who is engaged in the general book business; Peter R. Munnell married Maria Oakley, of Lawrence County; Thomas P., Mary K., married James M. Rice, who is dead, and she resides in Oil City and has three children: Effie, Edwin and Anna; William Munnell is a resident of Springfield Township; Lizzie married W. H. Harper, an oil producer of Venango County. Adam Munnell was the owner of about 400 acres of land at the time of his death, which was the result of his labors, economy, and frugal dealings. Thomas P. Munnell was educated in the common schools, and was married to Lizzie Young, a daughter of John and Margaret Young, natives of Washington County, and who came here during the early settlement of this county. Mrs. Munnell was one of four children: Jane, William, Mary and Lizzie. Her father was a strong anti-slavery man, and took an interest in the under-ground railroad transportations. He made public speeches against the evil of slavery, and his son, William, served in Company D, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers. Our subject enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was out eight months, and was wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg in the left leg. He has six children: John, Charles W., Herbert, Anna, Mabel M. and Freddie. He is the owner of ninety acres of the old homestead, and is a stockholder of the Mercer Central Agricultural Association. In politics he is a Republican.

JOHN A. NELSON, farmer, post-office Indian Run, was born on the farm where he now lives, August 26, 1839, and is a son of James Nelson, whose sketch appears elsewhere. Further mention of the Nelson family is made in the notice of Daniel Nelson, of Mercer, hence it is useless to repeat it here. Our subject was educated in the common schools of the neighborhood where he lives, and was brought up on the farm. He has always been at home, consequently he helped his father in the nursery business, and is engaged in the berry cultivation and general farming. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and is an intelligent, enterprising gentleman and a Republican.

J. W. NELSON, fruit grower, post-office Indian Run, was born March 3, 1844, to James A., born in Pennsylvania, and Lydia (Holman) Nelson, who came to Mercer County after marriage, and settled on the farm where our subject now resides. They erected a log cabin, in which they lived for many years before building the residence yet standing. Here the father died April 22, 1887, and his widow still resides on the farm. They had nine children: Adonin J. (engaged in the fruit business in Kansas), Sophia A. (deceased), John A., Jonas (enlisted October 10, 1862, in Company I, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, was taken prisoner August 19, 1864, and confined in Salisbury prison, and died March 27, 1865, a few days after being released from confinement in that terrible prison), J. W., Susan J. (deceased), Margaret E., Mary L., Elizabeth and one died when young. The father began the nursery business about 1857, planting out from 2,500 to 5,000 trees. After 1870 he made a specialty of small fruits. About this time, however, he retired, leaving the business to his sons, J. W. and John A., who are running an extensive business in small fruits. The father was a Democrat, and was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married in 1879 to Kate Grubb, a native of Erie County, Penn. Her father, T. P. Grubb, came to this county in 1854, and settled where his son now resides. Mrs. Grubb died in 1855, and Mr. Grubb in 1886. Mr. Nelson enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served fourteen months. He belongs to the G. A. R., is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is one of the enterprising, progressive men of the township.

HIRAM ORR, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born January 30, 1832, in Springfield Township. His father, John M. Orr, was born February 4, 1804, to William and Mary (Orrick) Orr, natives of Ireland, from whence they immigrated to America in 1794, and settled in Washington County, Penn. In 1803 they came to this county, and died in Springfield Township, he in 1843, and she in 1863. They had seven children: James, William, John, Robert Jane, Elias and Elizabeth. John M. Orr married Elizabeth Jamison, by whom he had ten children: Mary J., William, Isabella, Hiram, John, Elizabeth, David P., Margaret, James and Joseph S. He married a second time, his wife being Mrs. Martha Denniston, who died September 7, 1871. His first wife died October 7, 1854. Our subject, Hiram Orr, was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm. He began for himself at the age of twenty-five years, on a farm of forty acres given him by his father. This he owned about nine years, when he sold and bought the farm where he now lives. He has in all 192 acres, mostly the result of his own labors. He was married November 24, 1856, to Mary J. Carlon, of Lawrence County, by whom he had three children: H. M., married Jane Ramsey, and lives in Butler County; George C., died at the age of eighteen months; John C., married Emma Fithian, and is a jeweler in Sharpsburg, Allegheny County. Mrs. Orr died May 18, 1863, and he was again married June 30, 1864, to Mary J. Barnes, born June 29, 1832, a daughter of John Barnes. By her he has five children: Ida E., a teacher, of this county; Eva J.; infant, dead; Melvin B. and Hattie E. The first Mrs. Orr was a consistent member of the Leesburg Presbyterian Church. He and his last wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church at Mercer. He has taken a deep interest in the Democratic party.

G. W. PALMER, farmer, post-office Leesburgh, was born March 6, 1835, in Springfield Township, to Thomas and Catharine (Guist) Palmer, natives of Washington County, Penn., where they were married, and in 1827 they came to Springfield Township, and settled in the green woods on the farm where our subject now resides. They moved to different farms in the township before they died on the farm where Mr. Galloway lives, that event in his career occurring April 7, 1875, and in hers December 12, 1877. They had eleven children: Daniel, Elizabeth, Alexander, G. W., Andrew J., was in the service of his country, and died with congestive chills after the siege of Vicksburg; James S., Nancy, Sarah A., Maria, Thomas, Mary. The parents were members of the Seceder Church. He began poor, and at death was the owner of considerable property. Our subject attended the common schools, and was married January 9, 1862, to Wilhelmina, daughter of Henry and Catharine (Lewis) Baughman, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1847, settled in the neighborhood of Clarksville, and in 1854 came to Springfield Township. Here he died in 1877 and she in 1868. Their children were: William, Christina, John, Henry, Albert, Louesa and Wilhelmina. Her parents were Lutherans at Blacktown. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer have ten children: Archie E., Ida L., Cora, Quincy, Harry, Frank B., Charles W., Anson L., Minnie F. and Floyd C. He and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church at Leesburgh, of which he is an elder. He is also superintendent of the Sunday-school, and is a Democrat.

THOMAS REED, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born June 15, 1835, in East Lackawannock Township, to John and Eleanor (Wilson) Reed, natives, the father of Washington County, and the mother of Westmoreland County, Penn. The father came to Mercer County when a single man and married here. He died April 23, 1870, and his wife November 26, 1855. Their children were: Mary, James, Nancy, Elizabeth, Wilson, John and Thomas. The father and mother were members of the Old School Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he was a Democrat. Our subject was educated in the country schools, and was brought up at farm labor. From 1859 to 1862 he was principally engaged in buying and driving stock. He was married in 1867 to Sarah J. Crawford, a sister of L. I. Crawford, and daughter of Hugh D. Crawford, whose sketch appears in this work. Mr. Reed settled on the home place in East Lackawannock Township at marriage, and remained there until 1872, when he came to the Crawford farm, which he bought in 1883. Their children were: Infant, dead; Lizzie C., Willie D., Matilda E.; infant, dead; and T. Herman. Mr. Reed is the possessor of 220 acres in Springfield, and eighty acres in Findley Township. He has been assistant assessor of Springfield Township, and school director. He and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a stanch Prohibitionist. He is an enterprising citizen, a progressive farmer, and an intelligent gentleman.

G. W. WILLIAMS, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born June 24, 1826, in Erie County, Penn., to Enoch and Mary (Graham) Williams, natives, the father of Centre and the mother of Beaver County, Pa. In about the year 1830 the family came to Hope Mills, where Enoch was engaged in milling. He fought under Gen. Harrison in the battle of Tippecanoe, and died on a farm in Springfield Township. His wife died while the family were at Hope Mills. Their children were: James and Hugh, who died in Erie County; Jane, married Socrates J. Johnston; Margaret, married Edward Irwin; G. W.; Nancy, married Jackson G. Baird; Mary M., married Frank Miles; Enoch, died when young. Our subject attended the common schools and was brought up on a farm. He was married, June 25, 1850, to Caroline G. Carpenter, daughter of James Carpenter. By her he has had four children: Mary F., married J. M. Smith; James C., married Elizabeth Moore; Loretta, married John Moore; Samuel A., married Frances Laura Smith, and has one child, Mary C. Samuel assists his father on his farm of 105 acres, upon which he has twelve acres of fine raspberry plants. He and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church at Mercer. He is a Republican, and one of the worthy citizens of the township. Mrs. Mary Smith has an infant child, William G.; James C. has one son, George A., and Loretta J. Moore has one child, Bennett W. James Williams was born July 3, 1818; Enoch was born January 2, 1787; Mary, born February 10, 1797; James, born March 23, 1820; Hugh, April 17, 1822; Margaret, April 21, 1824; George W., June 24, 1826; Nancy, October 9, 1828; Mary M., March 29, 1832; Enoch, December 20, 1834;

FINDLEY TOWNSHIP.

DAVID ACHRE, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born August 10, 1823, to Daniel and Rebecca (Richard) Achre, natives of Lehigh County, Penn., who came to this county about the year 1836. They settled near Greenville, and six years later moved to the farm adjoining that of our subject. Here the parents died after having been blessed with the following children: William, Daniel, David, Elias, Elizabeth, married Joseph Humphrey; Margaret, married David Baxter; James, deceased; Henry, deceased, and Lucy A. The parents were Lutherans. David Achre was educated in the country schools, and was married in 1851 to Salome Miller, who died in 1857, leaving two children: Gilbert W., born May 16, 1852, married Eva S. Reed, and Newton, born February 2, 1858. He was subsequently married to Mary E., a sister of his first wife, and by her had: Eva, born May 21, 1868, died August 24, 1865; Victor D., born April 28, 1873, died December 28, 1874, and an infant, born July 6, 1877, died July 10, 1877. Mr. Achre settled on his present farm in 1861. He and wife are members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a Republican. Peter J. Miller, the father of Mrs. Achre, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., September 6, 1807, and grew to manhood in that county, where he learned the art of coverlet weaving. In October, 1829, he married Miss Sarah Cribbs, of the same place, and for several years followed the occupation of weaving as a trade. In 1836 he moved with his family to Mercer, Mercer County, and engaged in weaving coverlets, carpets, table linen and all kinds of fabrics, some of which will be kept and handed down to future generations as mementoes of his workmanship. He also held offices of trust, having been elected justice of the peace two terms in succession. In 1866 he moved to Minnesota, and there died August 14, 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Miller reared a family of ten children, five sons and five daughters, eight of whom are now living: Susannah was for many years an efficient teacher in the common-schools of Mercer County, married Jacob Beighley, of this county, and in 1857 settled with her husband in Minnesota, where he is a prominent and prosperous grain merchant. She has one daughter, named Ruth E., who married William Buchannan. Mr. and Mrs. Beighley are Methodists; Sarah married David Cook and lives in Mercer County; Louisa married S. P. Beighley, and with him lives in Minnesota. She is the mother of ten children: Samuel M., Mary E., Harvey F., Joseph E., Ellen E., Maggie L., James A., Agnes B., Ruth E. and Grace E.; Michael P., married Oleanna Alson and resides in Minnesota. Joseph H. married Rachel J. Burnes and lives in Minnesota. John L. married Mary Buchannan and resides in Minnesota, where also his single brother, Samuel, lives. Joseph H. was in the service of his country from Mercer County, and was taken prisoner and confined in Andersonville and Libby prisons for about six months. Peter Beighley, the father of Jacob and Simon P. Beighley, came to Mercer County with his family in 1846. They settled in Lake Township, but his sons soon became tired of clearing away the large timber and prevailed upon their father to allow them to take Greeley's advice "to go West and grow up with the country." Accordingly the family went to Minnesota in 1857, where he died in 1876. His widow died in 1878. Their son, Simon P., was engaged in fighting the Indians in Minnesota in the early part of the Rebellion, and later came to the support of his country in Company C, Fifth Minnesota Volunteer Infantry. He was in the service about three years, and fought in the battle of Gettysburg.

JAMES S. ALEXANDER, farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born April 8, 1823, to Benjamin and Rebecca (Simpson) Alexander, who are mentioned in the biography of M. W. Alexander. Our subject was educated in a log cabin which stood on the John Crill farm, and two of his schoolmates were Judge McDermitt and Clinton McCoy. His life has been that of a farmer, and he was married in 1850 to Sarah A. McChesney, whose parents are mentioned in the sketch of M. W. Alexander. She died in 1861, and was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and he was again married, to Mary Carroll, a native of Worth Township, and a daughter of John and Margaret (Rhodes) Carroll, January 1, 1868. The children of James S. Alexander are Carrie M., Charles, Maggie S. and John B. He settled at his first marriage on the old homestead, and in 1884 moved to where he now lives. He is the possessor of excellent property, is a Republican, and he and his wife are consistent members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

M. W. ALEXANDER, ex-county commissioner and farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 21, 1826, in Findley Township. His father, Benjamin Alexander, was born in Washington County, Penn., and came to this county in 1816, and worked for awhile for Benjamin Stokeley. He died April 18, 1869, in his eighty-eighth year. He was married to Mary Elizabeth Hosack, by whom he had six children. William H., of Mercer, is the only living child. He was married again, to Rebecca Simpson, a native of Washington County, who came to this county when young with her father, Robert, and settled one mile from Mercer, in Cool Spring Township. By his second wife, who died in 1868, he had four children: Elizabeth N., James S., Mathew W. and Prudence. The last named married Patterson Findley, and lives in Jackson Township. The father was one of the first surveyors of this county, and served one term as commissioner. He served two terms as county surveyor, and was a strong Republican, and an elder in the Second United Presbyterian Church at his death. Our subject attended the common schools, and has always lived on the old homestead. He began for himself on reaching his majority, and was married in 1848 to Celia McChesney, a native of Findley Township, and the daughter of Samuel McChesney, a native of Washington County, Penn. She was one of six children, three of whom survive: Mary J., married Archibald Crawford; Sarah A., married James S. Alexander, and Thomas, who lives in Wheeling, W. Va. M. W. Alexander has seven children, all living: B. S., married Anna Eats; J. L., married Ella Cummings; Annie, married Benjamin E. Runkle; T. E., married Myrtle Hosack; Janetta B., married F. S. Morrison; Mary G. and Jennie S., who are unmarried. He was elected county commissioner in 1884; was director and president of the Mercer Agricultural Association; is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

JAMES BARNES, deceased, was born in County Armagh, Ireland, and came to America with his parents, John and Mollie (Boyd) Barnes, in 1803. Mollie Barnes died in 1850, in her eighty-fourth year, and her husband, John Barnes, died January 9, 1809, on the farm where John L. Barnes now resides, in Jackson Township. Their children were John, George and James. George married Margaret Zeigler, and died December 4, 1866. He was a miller in the early times, and operated a mill on Mill Creek, in the eastern part of the township of Findley. George had by his union Susannah, who married Archie McBride; Sarah, married William Paxton; Martha, married John J. Hosack; Margaret, married William Garvey, and John L. married Eliza J. Barnes. John Barnes was married to Betsey Miller, and had three children: John; Robert, died March 9, 1870, in Mercer; Mary J., married Hiram Orr. James Barnes married Margaret Vincent, a sister of the Rev. George C. Vincent, once a teacher in the Mercer Academy. John's children were: James, married Julia Rose, lives in Nebraska; Thomas, married Elizabeth Greenlee, lives on the old farm; John G., for many years a minister of the United Presbyterian Church, died in Monmouth, Ill., in 1880; Maria, married William Seidley; William V., died during service in the war with Company C, Second Ohio Volunteer Cavalry; Samuel, married Elizabeth Baker, a sister of J. R. W. Baker, whose family history appears in this work; Charity J., died in 1851; Rev. Robert H., married Belle Cook, who died six weeks after marriage, and he subsequently married Mattie Kilgore; George E., died small. John Barnes, Sr., was in the War of 1812, and his two brothers, James and George, were, like he, Democrats. Samuel Barnes enlisted in Company C, Second Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, August 22, 1861, and served with this company two years. He was captured at Greenville, Tenn., October 2, 1863, and was confined on Belle Isle and in Libby Prison until April, 1864. He was paroled and commissioned as lieutenant of the Forty-seventh United States Cavalry Troops, and was mustered out in the summer of 1865. He fought in several battles. He was married January 21, 1869, and his children are: Morgan, a teacher; Kate, a student in the Grove City College; Bailey, Joseph and Letitia. Mrs. Barnes was born June 2, 1843, and her husband May 18, 1841. Mrs. B. taught seven terms of school, and Mr. B. was also a teacher. He was appointed postal clerk on the S. & A. R. R. in 1877, and resigned the position in 1888. He and wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a staunch Republican.

D. S. BASTRESS, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born December 16, 1818, in Lycoming County, Penn., to Solomon and Elizabeth (Slonaker) Bastress, natives of Montgomery County, Penn., and the parents of six children: Peter, Margaret, Harriet, Elizabeth, D. S. and Sarah. Our subject was educated in the schools at Jersey Shore, Penn. He began to learn the silversmith's trade at that place, and finished at Williamsport, where he followed the business until 1838, when he went to Columbus, Ohio, and prosecuted his trade. It was then the custom to put teeth in gold plates, and Mr. Bastress was employed by dentists to make the plates, and in that way learned dentistry. In 1840 he came to Mercer, and soon after opened up a shop for himself. He practiced dentistry in Mercer for thirty years, and did work for citizens at Warren, New Castle, Franklin, Sharon, Butler and Greenville. He was married in 1846 to Mary A. Satterfield, daughter of Elijah and Sarah A. Satterfield, by whom he had eight children: Elizabeth, Fidderman, David, Emeline, Henry, Maggie and two deceased. Mrs. Bastress died December 7, 1883, and a Mercer paper said the following in giving a notice of her death: "We cannot chronicle the death of this lady without a word of tribute to her worth. She was born August 11, 1827, near Milford, in the State of Delaware, and when quite young her father removed with his family to Mercer County, where the deceased had resided ever since. She was a woman remarkable for her quiet, uniform Christian spirit, patient under all the cares and labors incident to a large family, thoughtful, prudent and kind in everything. She was greatly beloved in all of the relations of life. She had long been a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and her life was a continual testimony of the genuineness of her faith and the power of divine grace. Her experience during her illness was of profound peace with her Maker, and her death was like her life, in quiet trust. Her memory is very precious to her family and a large circle of friends." Mr. Bastress came to his present farm in 1870, and has resided here since. He owns the house in Mercer where Hon. John A. Bingham was born. In politics he is a Democrat.

ADAM BOSTON, deceased June 16, 1886, was born in Butler County, Penn., February 18, 1818. He was the son of John and Elizabeth (Albert) Boston, who were of German descent. His father enlisted in the War of 1812 from Butler County. February 24, 1842, Adam Boston was married to Christeena Crill, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Coon) Crill, who are mentioned in the biography of James Hosack. Adam Boston and his wife lived for three years on his father's farm in this county, and then, in 1845, settled on the farm where he died, and where his widow still lives. Seven children blessed their home, all of whom are living at present: Jane Elizabeth was born March 20, 1843, and was married to Cyrus J. Montgomery December 31, 1873; they are the parents of eight children. Sarah was born January 14, 1845, and was married to J. M. Albin December 30, 1869; they are the parents of seven children. Mary Adaline was born October 22, 1846, and lives with her mother, being an invalid. Melda Malissa was born October 30, 1848, and was married October 6, 1887, to Rev. H. H. Houston, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Struthers, Ohio. John A. Boston was born June 27, 1851, and was married January 10, 1884, to Maggie M. Buxton, who died June 28, 1887. William B. Boston was born May 17, 1854, and was married to Mary Fry January 27, 1881; they are the parents of three children. Samuel L. Boston was born November 8, 1859, and was married July 29, 1886, to Jennie P. Keifer; they are the parents of one child. Samuel L. has entered the profession of the ministry, and will have further notice in his own biography. Religiously the Bostons are Presbyterians, and Adam Boston served for many years as an elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer, which office he held at death. Politically they are all Democrats, except Samuel L., who is a zealous Prohibitionist.

GEORGE W. BRANDON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 22, 1822, in Lawrence County, Penn., to James and Elizabeth (Stewart) Brandon, natives, the father of Kentucky and mother of Pennsylvania. They were married in Beaver County, and lived there about fifty-six years. The father died in 1875, and his widow in 1876, the parents of Thomas; Margaret, married William Patterson; James, G. W., William; Sarah, married John Alexander; Samuel, Franklin; Elizabeth J., married Joseph McBurney; Benjamin F. and Mary. G. W. Brandon was educated in the log cabin schools of his day; was brought up at farm labor, and was married April 6, 1843, to Eleanor, daughter of Matthew Alexander, of Lawrence County. She died in 1863, and had two children: One died in infancy, and James S., was educated at New Wilmington College; taught school at Grove City; studied for the ministry at the Theological Seminary of Allegheny City, and preached five years in the Allegheny Presbytery; was married to Helen M. Moon, a daughter of Dr. Moon, and had one child, Ella S. He enlisted in Company I, Sixty-fourth Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, and served about one year. He died November 28, 1879. Mr. Brandon was again married March 31, 1864, to Isabella P. (Alexander) Morrison, widow of William S. Morrison. Mrs. Brandon's first marriage gave her one son, Francis S., who married Nettie B., daughter of M. W. Alexander, and has two children: Eva B. and William C. Mr. Morrison died January 1, 1862, a member of the United Presbyterian Church. By his last marriage Mr. Brandon had three children: William I., died January 26, 1866; Burton R., died October 2, 1867; and Edwin E., died September 1, 1869. Mrs. Brandon is a daughter of James and Martha (Barnes) Alexander, natives, the father of County Tyrone, Ireland, and the mother of Armagh, Ireland. They came to America before they were married with their respective parents, James and Mary (Hamilton) Alexander, and Thomas and Mary Barnes. The children of James and Martha Alexander were: Mary, Rebecca, Susan, Margaret, Elizabeth, Martha, James H., Sarah, Ellen, Isabella P., and one who died young. Her parents were members of the old Springfield Church at the time of their death, and he was an elder. Mr. and Mrs. Brandon are members of the same church of which he is an elder. He is a strong advocate of Prohibition.

EDWARD BUCKHAM, justice of the peace, Pardoe, was born August 29, 1834, in England. His parents were Edward and Mary (Scott) Buckham. Our subject was educated in his native country, and there early learned the art of coal mining. He came to America in 1870, and engaged for a while in mining coal in Washington County, Penn. He then, in 1871, came to Pardoe, where he engaged in mining coal until 1880, when he opened a store at Pardoe. This he conducted with good success for four years, and only withdrew because of affliction. He was elected a justice of the peace in 1883 and is the present incumbent. In 1886 he passed an examination for mine boss, and secured a situation at Leechburg, Armstrong Co., Penn., but gave it up because of lameness. He was married in 1856 to Jane Hall, a native of England, by whom he has had fifteen children: Mary A., married Augustus Freidhaber; Edward, married Elizabeth Peters; George, Matthew W., Charles B., Maggie, John W., Augustus H. and Thomas J. The others are dead. He and his wife are members of the Episcopal Church, which holds meetings in a small building near his residence. In politics he is a Republican.

THOMAS COURTNEY, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born December 3, 1814, in what is now Liberty Township, to Thomas and Hadessah (Robinson) Courtney, natives, the father of Chester County, Penn., of Scotch-Irish extraction, and the mother of Franklin County, Penn. They came to Mercer County in 1809 and settled in the woods, where they built a log cabin. The mother died in 1815, and had blessed her husband with two children: Rebecca, married David Gilson, and Thomas. The father was married a second time, to Catharine McDowell, and had by her: D. F., Nancy J., married Hugh Miller; Catharine, married Alexander McCoy, and Amanda, married James Uber. The father was a soldier in the War of 1812. He was a captain, and died in 1841, a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, to which his wives were also attached. Thomas, our subject, attended the schools of his time, his early teachers being Alexander Riddle and Joseph Sterrett. He was brought up at hard farm labor. He was married in April, 1843, to Catharine Christley, a daughter of William and Mary Christley, of Springfield Township, and had by her: William, killed in the battle of the Wilderness; T. A., Mary, dead, was the wife of Samuel McClelland; Sarah A., John A., professor in the Grove City College; George F. Mrs. Courtney died in 1864, a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was again married, to Mary E. Breckenridge, in 1870, and has by her, James P. Mr. Courtney came to his present farm of 200 acres in 1843. It was the gift of his father. He is a consistent Presbyterian, an upright man, and a staunch Republican.

JAMES CRIBBS, farmer, post-office Balm, was born September 18, 1832, in Findley Township, to Peter and Catharine (Millison) Cribbs, natives of Westmoreland County, where they were married, and came to this county about 1825, settling on the farm where George Cribbs now resides. Here they began in a little shanty which was erected by some hunters. This farm of 200 acres in the green woods was given him by his father, who had obtained it from the government. Peter Cribbs died in this county in March, 1878, and his wife died in April, 1863. They were members of the German Reformed Church, and the parents of Elizabeth, who married Dr. Daniel Acher;

Mary M., married John Moon and afterward Henry Wagner; Susan, married Andrew Reher; John C. G., James; Clarissa, married Andrew Boyer and afterward Elias Pauley; George W., and Hannah, married Benjamin Uber. James Cribbs attended the country schools. He followed carpentering for twenty-five years in connection with farming. He was married in 1853 to Christina Heasley, daughter of George and Mary (Beighley) Heasley, natives, the father of Westmoreland and the mother of Butler County. The father died in Findley Township in 1864, and his children were: John H., Rebecca, married Henry Walls; George, Daniel, Mary, married John Hamilton; Elias P., Christina, Elizabeth, married William Guist; William, and Amelia, married Alfred Hardy. Her father was a Presbyterian and her mother a Lutheran. Mr. and Mrs. Cribbs have the following children: Amanda R., married James C. Thompson, and has four children; Albert E., Austin G., married Agnes Shannon; Laura, married George McCullough; Mary E., Elmer E., Ella, William R., and Sadie A. Mr. Cribbs and family attend the German Reformed Church. He has served in some of the offices of his township, and is a staunch Republican. He has an evaporator, and engages during the fruit season in drying fruit for himself and the general public. He has in good cultivation about six acres of raspberries, and an almost endless quantity of fine fish are to be found in the ponds he has arranged for them around his residence.

JOHN T. CRILL, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 18, 1853, on the farm where he now lives, to Lewis and Susan (Todd) Crill, natives of this county, and the parents of seven children: Jane E., married William Houston; Mary A., died small; Catharine; John T.; Mary, married Hiram Worley, and an infant who died small. Mrs. Crill died August 1, 1856. Her husband has been an invalid since 1873, and has been afflicted with spinal disease for over thirty years. He is a Presbyterian, to which organization his wife was attached. John T. Crill was educated in this county and brought up at farm labor. He was married to Charlotte, a daughter of Henry and Susannah Worley, and has by her four children, Lewis H., Samuel W., James E. and Ida M. A coal bank was opened up on his farm in 1847 by his father, and John is now operating it in connection with his farm. Mr. Crill is serving as school director, road commissioner and justice of the peace. He and wife are Presbyterians, and he is a Democrat. On his farm, which is the old homestead of John Crill, are to be seen the remnants of an old distillery and saw-mill which were erected by the elder Crill during his early residence in this county. A more extended mention of John Crill, Sr., will be found in the historical chapters and in the sketch of the Hosack family.

REV. J. P. DAVIS, post-office Pardoe, pastor of the old Springfield Church, was born October 31, 1842, near Hartstown, Crawford Co., Penn. His father, Andrew Davis, came from his native country, Ireland, to Philadelphia when he was twenty-one years of age. He was a weaver by trade, and while thus engaged married Hannah Porter, a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Philadelphia two years after her parents. The marriage ceremony, which occurred December 11, 1825, was performed by the Rev. Dr. Potts, he being twenty-seven and she eighteen years of age. In 1829 he came to Pittsburgh to look up a home, and later his wife and three children followed by means of a six-horse team. They were eighteen days making the journey, which was multiplied in the hardships by the driver, who was a colored man, being drunk the greater part of the way. In a few weeks they removed to Warren County, Penn., and there operated a farm for three years. They then moved to Mercer County, and subsequently bought a farm in South Shenango Township, Crawford County, where he died September 21, 1884, leaving a widow and seven children: John S., Ann, Walter L., Margaret I., James P., Thomas D. and Mary E. The following are dead: William, William (2), Andrew, Andrew (2), Hugh C. and Emma J. He was at a time a Seceder in church relations, but died a member of the United Presbyterian Church. His wife was one time a member of the New Light Covenanter Church, but united with her husband in his religious beliefs. Our subject attended the common schools, and was graduated at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill., in 1871. He taught district schools before entering college. He entered the theological seminary at Allegheny City in 1870, and graduated from that institution in 1872. He was licensed May 3, 1871, by the Lake Presbytery, was ordained and installed by the Frankfort Presbytery September 3, 1872, as pastor at Hookstown and Tumlinson's Run, and served there until 1874. He was installed pastor of Mt. Prospect, in Chartier's Presbytery, June 29, 1875. He was released from this in 1886, and on December 1, 1886, he was given charge of the old Springfield congregation. He is well worthy to follow the much-beloved Rev. Edward Small, who has gone to his reward. He was married, June 26, 1872, to Maggie McMichael, by the Rev. Dr. H. H. Hervey. She is a sister of Judge McMichael, of Lawrence County. By this union he has five children: Walter H., Eva M., Sarah E., J. Paul and Howard M. His wife is a consistent member of his church. Rev. Davis has by a vast amount of labor prepared a very interesting history of the Davis and Porter families, which is, of course, too long for a general work of this kind.

WASHINGTON DAVIS, farmer, post-office Balm, was born April 16, 1837, in Butler County, to Joseph and Mary Jane (Morrison) Davis, natives, the father of Bedford, and the mother of Butler County, Penn. The parents came to Mercer County in 1856, and settled on the farm in Findley Township now owned by Davis Shilling. Here the father died in February, 1880, and the mother is still living. They had the following children: Harriet, married William Crothers; Morrison; Washington; Clarissa, married John Snyder; and three are dead. The father was previously married to Isabella Oliver, by whom he had Anna, married Thomas Clark, and John. The present Mrs. Davis was the widow of a Mr. Stewart when she married Joseph Davis. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church. Washington Davis was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm. He was married in 1860 to Mary Johnson, born November 25, 1842, daughter of James and Agnes (Gray) Johnson, natives of Ireland and Scotland, respectively. Her parents immigrated to Pittsburgh about the year 1831, and to Mercer County in 1852. Here the father died in 1884, and his widow survives. Their children were as follows: Margaret, John (deceased), Lizzie, Mary, Jane (wife of George Shannon). Mr. and Mrs. Washington Davis have four children: James J. is clerk at the transfer depot, Pittsburgh; Pearson, Ella and Agnes. James J., the eldest, is married to Hattie Holmes, of Rochester, Penn. He is a part owner of the old Findley farm, near Mercer; his brother, Pearson, is interested with him in the same. Mr. Davis settled on his present farm of fifty-three acres in 1861, and has been successful. He is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

JACOB EBERLE, retired farmer, post-office Mercer, was born December 7, 1810, in Wittenburg, Germany. His parents, George Leonard and Doratha (Munce) Eberle, immigrated to this country in 1829 and settled in Columbiana County, Ohio, where the father engaged in farming and making baskets. They subsequently settled near Sandy Lake, where they died, he in 1860 and she in 1841. Their two children were Jacob and Doratha, who married Stephen Yourdan and lives in Noble County, Ind. The parents were Lutherans. Jacob Eberle was educated at a seminary in his native country, and learned the trade of shoemaker. August 28, 1828, he engaged at his trade in Philadelphia, where he continued with earnest efforts till 1830, when he was married to Mary A. Aberle, and at once the happy couple set out on an extended wedding trip to Petersburg, Ohio, a distance of over 500 miles, every foot of which they walked. Mr. Eberle carried his shoemaker's tools with him, and when a job could be secured on the way availed himself of the opportunity to make a few pennies. When they landed in Petersburg they had about $5. He at once secured work at his trade, and in three years they went to Milltown, in what is now Mahoning County, Ohio, where he worked at his trade. Six years later they came to Mercer County, and settled near Sandy Lake. In 1847 they moved to the farm where he now resides. Mrs. Eberle died in March, 1887, and was the mother of the following children: Elizabeth, born July 2, 1834; William, born March 15, 1836, was in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness; Louesa, born December 20, 1837; Charles, born September 29, 1839, was in the Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers; Mary, born May 24, 1841; Emily, born December 23, 1842; Henry, born February 8, 1845; Amanda, born December 17, 1847; David, born November 18, 1849; James A., born December 25, 1852, and Joseph, born October 28, 1854. John Eberle married Kate Rice, a daughter of Daniel Rice, of West Salem Township, and has four children: Lizzie, Charles, Carrie and Fred. He has worked some at the shoemaker's trade and at carpentering. The latter trade he followed awhile at Greenville where he was working on wagons. He now conducts a farm of sixty-three acres, and he and his wife are members of the Second Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Jacob Eberle has served as township treasurer, collector and school director. He was for twenty years an agent for the Pymatuning Insurance Company, and resigned said position in 1887. He is a stockholder in the First National Bank of Mercer.

HENRY GILES, farmer and manager of a coal bank, post-office Mercer, was born August 4, 1836, in Franklin County, Penn., to James and Elizabeth (Parsons) Giles, natives of America, and of English and German extraction, respectively. The father died in Clarion County, Penn., and the mother in this county. His death occurred in 1844 and hers in 1876. They had seven children: Samuel, deceased; George, Sarah A., widow of David Carbaugh; Jackson, who went West in 1861 and died there; Elizabeth, married Joseph Platt; Catharine, married Joseph Call, and Henry. The last named was educated in the common schools and was brought up on a farm. He was for awhile employed by the Erie & West Middlesex Blast Furnace Company. He came to Mercer County in 1854, and was married in 1857 to Leah Rupert, daughter of Philip and sister of Reuben Rupert, whose sketches are to be found elsewhere. By his marriage he has had: Sarah M., married Albert Cribbs; Anna, married John Platt; James, deceased; William, married Mattie Hart; Ella, Emma, Edwin, Nettie and Laura. Mr. Giles settled on his farm of sixty-two acres in 1877, and farms it in connection with his management of the John T. Crill coal mine, which employment he took under William Houston in 1873. He believes in the doctrines of the Methodist Church and is a Republican.

JAMES G. GILFILLAN, farmer, post-office Balm, was born December 21, 1816, in Mercer County, to John and Mary (Glenn) Gilfillan. The father was a native of County Derry, Ireland, born October 14, 1783, and immigrated to America when eleven years old, with his parents, James and Martha (Wiley) Gilfillan. The family settled in Lawrence County, where James and Martha died after having been blessed with the following children: John, Alexander, a physician, drowned near New Castle while fishing; Ebbie, married Joseph Law; Sarah, married James Gill; Thomas; Nancy, married John Green; Martha, married Abraham Green, and James, a blacksmith, who learned his trade with Robert Stewart, the father of the distinguished William Stewart, and married Jane, a daughter of William Adams, once the owner of the "Ranals Mills." These became the property of James Gilfillan, and were afterward known as the "Gilfillan Mills." John Gilfillan and his father, James, were among the prominent members and founders of the "Slippery Rock" Church. The former was in the War of 1812, was educated in the country schools, and brought up on a farm. When he was about sixteen years of age, and at home by himself in a log cabin, an Indian came and took dinner with him. John was married in 1814 to Mary Glenn, and settled on the farm, where he died May 20, 1857. His first wife died in 1828, and her children were: Martha, married Thomas McClemen; James G., Robert, Isabella, married Samuel Adams; John, Mariah, married George Mathers; Robert (2). His second wife was Jane Lowry, and she, as well as his first wife, was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, to which he also was attached. James G. Gilfillan was educated in Mercer and Lawrence Counties, and studied surveying with Samuel McDowell, now deceased, but once a well-known character of Lawrence County. He began surveying in 1840, and has surveyed the greater part of the roads in the southern portion of Mercer County and many in Lawrence. He bought a farm of 100 acres in the woods in Liberty Township in 1839, the greater part of which he cleared. In 1878 he sold it for $10,000, and bought the place where he now resides in Findley Township. He was married December 15, 1842, to Mary A. Brewster, a daughter of Robert and Mary (Tonnihill) Brewster, the parents of eight children: John T., James, Rebecca, married Robert Tigert; Tonnihill, died young; Robert, Mary, Emeline, who died small, and the parents named their next Emeline. The children of our subject are: R. A., graduated at Westminster College and at the Theological Seminary of Allegheny City, is now in charge of a United Presbyterian congregation at Turtle Creek; Emma, married William Wilson; and John N., died young; R. Brewster, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, dropped dead with heart disease at Stonebore; J. Calvin, a farmer and an agent for evaporators; A. J., engaged in the millinery and dress-making business in Fairview, Butler County; Flora P., teaching at Turtle Creek; Lulu M., Ella M., married A. K. Miller, and Charles, who died at the age of nineteen years. He and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and he is a Prohibitionist.

ARCHIBALD GLENN, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born August 15, 1835, in Pine Township, to Valentine and Eliza (McCune) Glenn. The father was born in Pine Township, near Center Church, March 17, 1804, and his father's name was Robert. Eliza was born in what is now Lawrence County, and her children were: Mary, married James Breckenridge; Catharine, married Harris Armstrong; Archibald, Maggie, Robert, Thomas C., William D. The parents are members of the Presbyterian Church. Archibald Glenn attended the common schools, and for years was engaged in lumbering in Pine, Cool Spring and Lake Townships. He enlisted in Company F, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served two years. He was in the seven days' fight, was wounded in the shoulder at Charles City Cross Roads, and was in the battle of Fredericksburg. He was married December 30, 1869, to Anna M. Albin, and had four children: Charles C., died small; Nannie E., John A. and George V. In 1875 they came from his saw-mill to their present farm, a part of which is the old homestead of her father. They are members of the Center Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican. John Albin, the father of Mrs. Glenn, was born October 3, 1819, in Pine Township, to William and Martha (Walker) Albin. His father was born in Ireland, and came to Mercer County with his father, John Albin, in 1803. The children of John Albin, Sr., were: William, Amy, John, Sallie, Margaret, Reuben and Isabella. The children of William and Martha Albin were: John, Mary A., Margaret J., Sarah, Elizabeth, Caroline, Rebecca, Maria and James. John Albin was educated in the common schools and one term at the academy at Greenville. He taught school several terms in this and Butler Counties. He was married in 1843 to Nancy Lightner, and their children are: John G., read law with Hon. Samuel Griffith, and practiced law till his death, June 28, 1875, was married to Lillie Day and left two children; Anna M., James M., married Sarah Boston and has a son, Samuel M., who clerks for A. J. McKean, and Laura, Gertie, Emma, Mary and John A.; Maria J., married Dr. L. G. Meyers. John Albin has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for over forty-nine years, and his wife is a member also. He is a Democrat.

WILLIAM GLENDENING, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 13, 1818, in County Derry, Ireland. His parents, Andrew and Elizabeth (McMillan) Glendenning, came to Mercer County in 1828 with their children, Mary A., William, Elizabeth, Andrew, Jane and Sarah. They settled in Springfield Township in the portion that is now in Findley. After fifteen years they moved to Delaware Township. Ten years later they moved to Cool Spring, where the father died August 28, 1873, and his wife November 24, 1871. They were members of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the country schools in Ireland and Mercer County. He was married in 1844 to Eliza A. Linn, daughter of James and Jane (Williamson) Linn, early settlers of this county. By this union he had four children. Eliza, the wife of James Keck, is the only one living. His wife died in 1858, and he married Sarah Walker, daughter of William and Jane (Hazlett) Walker, also early settlers in the county. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Walker were: Ebenezer; Robert, killed in front of Petersburg in the seven days' fight; William and Sarah. By his second wife Mr. Glendenning has Jennie, married A. C. Slater; Lewis, married Julia Bolton; Lizzie, Emma, Maggie and Leroy. Mr. Glendenning settled, when first married, in Delaware Township, and in 1883 located where he now resides, in Findley Township. He is the owner of a good farm and other property. He and wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church, and he has been a Republican since 1862.

WILLIAM J. GRAHAM, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born July 11, 1827, in Mercer, to James and Jane (Patterson) Graham. The father was born in Ireland, and came to the eastern part of Pennsylvania when two years old with his parents, William and Mary (Ewart) Graham. There William died, and Mary married John Patterson. She and her second husband subsequently came to Mercer County. Her two sons, James and John, were bound over to a 'Squire Irwin, of Buffalo Valley, east of the mountains, with whom they lived until they were young men. Two brothers of William Graham, Thomas and Dr. Graham, came to Mercer before Mr. and Mrs. Patterson. The doctor practiced only a few years, and returned to Philadelphia. Thomas kept what was known as the Graham Hotel in Mercer for many years. Thompson Graham, the son of Thomas, was the proprietor of a drug store in this city for many years. Mrs. Forker and the mother of C. W. Whistler were also children of Thomas Graham. John and Mary Patterson had four children: Jane, married Andrew Todd; William P., married Catharine McClure; Robert, married Milche Turner; Mary A., married Thomas McElree. John and James Graham came to this county when sixteen and eighteen years old, respectively, and John took up his home with his mother and step-father, Patterson. In 1823 he was married to Mary Barnes, a daughter of John Barnes, and subsequently died. His widow died at the home of our subject. James Graham went to Philadelphia, and there learned carpentering. He returned to this county, and married Jane Patterson, daughter of Hugh Patterson, of Ireland. She came to America at the age of twenty with her brother, James Patterson, and his wife. James Graham settled with his wife in Mercer, and helped to build the old Dr. Magoffin property, where the Magoffin sisters now reside. He died in Mercer in 1828, and his widow married Samuel Cleland, of Butler County, Penn. Both are deceased. By her first husband she had three children: Martha, married Samuel Moore; John, died small, and William J., married Lavina J. Kelty, daughter of David and Catherine (Fisher) Kelty. By her second husband she had three children: Eleanor, married Joseph McKee; Patterson, married Mary J. Patterson, and Mary A., married Joseph Moore. Mrs. Graham and her two husbands were members of the United Presbyterian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Graham have six children: John C., married Celia Newbury; Emma K., married James Hughes; Mary J., Clara N., Lewis K., Violet N. The parents of Mrs. Graham are dead. Their children were Arthur, Mary E., Thomas I., Nancy J. and Lizzie Ann. Mr. Graham farmed in Butler County from 1862 to 1873, when he settled on the farm where he now resides. He has served as school director, assessor, collector and township auditor; is a Prohibitionist, and he and his wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

JAMES M. GRAHAM, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 21, 1842, in Mercer County, on the farm where he now lives. His father, Mark Graham, was born in a house which stood exactly on the line between Washington County, Penn., and Virginia. Arthur Graham, the father of Mark, bought the farm where James Graham now lives of John Hinelight, who got it for services in the Revolutionary War. Arthur came to the county when his son Mark was about sixteen years old. Arthur Graham had three children: Mark, Samuel, and Isabella, who married William Cummins. Mark Graham was born August 30, 1813. He was married May 11, 1837, to Nancy Reed, daughter of William Reed, who settled in East Lackawannock Township, but died in Jackson Township. The children of Mark and Nancy were: Samuel, born March 20, 1838, and died May 14, 1880; Alexander E., born October 31, 1839; Martha E., born October 5, 1841; William R., born August 20, 1843, died October 19, 1861; James A. and Arthur W. The father died April 9, 1870, and his widow March 1, 1885. They were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Their deaths occurred in the house where Arthur W. now resides. Mark was a strong Abolitionist, a Republican, and was once poor director. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up at farm labor. He was married in 1872 to Ella Douglass, and has three boys: Francis, Joseph L. and Herman D. Mr. Graham has been school director and township auditor, and is a stanch Republican. Archibald Douglass, the father of Mrs. Graham, was of Scotch extraction, a native of Pennsylvania, and married for his first wife Maria Parks, by whom he had seven children: Joseph, deceased; Dr. Thomas J., lives in Ottumwa, Iowa; Mary, the wife of Dr. Joseph Lusk, of Butler; Milton, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Nettie, married Col. George Noble, lives in Dallas, Tex., and Lizzie, who lives in Ottumwa, Iowa. Mr. Douglass was married again, to Mary Weaver, a native of Maryland, and had three children: One died when six weeks old;

Maria, married Joseph Cochran, and Ella. Her father died in 1869. He was for many years connected with the official business of Mercer County, and is mentioned in the historical chapters of this volume. His last wife died in 1861. They were members of the First Presbyterian Church.

ARTHUR W. GRAHAM, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born February 1, 1848. He is a son of Mark Graham, whose sketch appears in connection with that of James M. Graham in this work. Arthur was educated in the common schools and at a graded school at Mercer. He was brought up on a farm; was married April 16, 1885, to Melinda E., daughter of Robert and Mary (Dunlap) Taylor, natives, the father of Trumbull County, Ohio, and the mother of Mercer County. Her parents live in Lackawannock Township, and have had seven children. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham have one son, Fred W. They live in the house where his parents lived for many years and died. Arthur Graham is an enterprising farmer and is a Republican.

W. H. HARRISON, carpenter and farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born September 15, 1837, in Jackson Township, this county, and his parents, William and Sarah Harrison, were natives, the father of England and the mother of either Scotland or England. The father came to America about the year 1808, and bought 200 acres of land, now on the site of Buffalo, N. Y. He was a cabinet-maker, and was induced by John North, an acquaintance, to locate in Mercer County, Penn., and to give up his claim in New York. He finally settled on land in what is now Cool Spring Township, and died in Jackson Township, on the farm where his son, Jesse, resides, in 1880. His wife died in 1869, having blessed him with eleven children: Joseph H., Anna J., George W., Isaac J., W. H., John J., Lizzie E., Sarah J., Jesse, Thomas L. and Mary L. The parents were members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. W. H. Harrison was educated in the common schools, and learned the trade of a carpenter with George Moon, and has followed that the greater part of his time since. He bought thirty acres where he now lives, and has farmed it in connection with the manufacture of doors and sash. He was married in 1863 to Nancy E. Evans, daughter of James and Barbara (Truxell) Evans. Her father came from Ireland to America in 1806, and settled in Findley Township, where Hugh Evans now resides, where he and his wife died, the parents of six children: Sarah, married William McKay; David, Hugh, James was in the war; Mary J. and Nancy E. Our subject and wife have had six children: Hugh E., farming; Sarah A., Nettie D. and Anna M. are dead; John L. and James B. Mr. Harrison enlisted in Company I, Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three months. His brothers, George W., John J., Jesse and Isaac J., were in the service of their country; John J. died during the battle of the Wilderness, and Isaac J. was in a New York cavalry regiment. Mr. Harrison and wife are members of the Methodist Church at Pardoe, and he is a Republican.

ANDREW HIGHBARGER, blacksmith for the Mercer County Coal Company at Pardoe, was born November 27, 1837, in Clarion County, Penn. He was educated in the common schools, and began learning his trade at the age of nineteen years in Clarion, where he continued for four years. He then went to Oil City, where he combined his trade with drilling until 1862, when he came to Mercer County and enlisted in Company H, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served for three years. He was wounded in the left hip at Spottsylvania, and was laid up for several months. Excepting this loss he was with his regiment in every battle they fought. On his return from the war he engaged in smithing at Pardoe, where he has since continued. He does the smithing work for the Mercer County Coal Company. He was married to Margaret Wilson, a sister of David Wilson, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. Mrs. H. died, leaving two children: John and Albert. He was married again, to Mary Parks, and has three children: Ada, Irene, James Arthur and Floyd Morris. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Pardoe, and he is a Republican. John and Betsey Highbarger had six children: Jacob, Eliphas, Henry, Amos, Jonas and Andrew. The parents are both dead, and were consistent members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Highbarger is one of the representative citizens of this county, and one of the most efficient blacksmiths in the State.

JAMES HOSACK (deceased) was born May 25, 1817, in what is now Findley Township, to David and Rebecca (Paxton) Hosack, the parents of James, Jane, Thomas, Margaret, the wife of A. C. Amberson; Martha, the wife of Sylvester Harrison, of Ashtabula County, Ohio; Mary, married Lewis Moon; John, Henry, Rebecca, married James McKay; David, Emily M. and Ewing. James Hosack was educated in the common schools, and was married May 20, 1841, to Mary Crill, born October 13, 1818, who was a daughter of John Crill, who was born in Franklin County, Penn., where he was married to Elizabeth Coon. In the spring of 1806 he came to this county and bought land where John T. Crill now lives, in Findley Township. In the fall of the same year he brought his family to the county. They came by team, and stopped at the old Herrington Hotel in Mercer long enough for Mrs. Crill to bake a quantity of bread. They slept the first night on their farm in the wagon-bed, and the next day erected a log cabin. Here the father died November 9, 1849, and his faithful wife May 13, 1842. Their children were: Catharine, Elizabeth, Catharine (2), John, Elizabeth (2), Naucy, Sarah, Mary, Christina and Lewis. The parents of the above children were Lutherans. James Hosack was the father of six children: Cyrus, married Mary Morris and has Hattie B.; James, deceased; George, Anson, Minnie and Charles; Jane, married Peter H. Ebert; Rebecca, deceased; Mary, married G. A. Morris; Samuel, Angeline, married M. H. Black, son of Matthew and Jane Black, and he and wife have Mary J., Eva M. and Frank M. James Hosack was a Democrat, and his estimable widow is a consistent member of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Further mention of the Hosack family appears in this volume. Matthew Black, the father of M. H., married Jane Billingsley, and had Susan, who married William Buchannan; James, died while serving in the Twenty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers; Lizzie, Joseph, M. H., Sarah J., deceased; Maggie and Samuel. Mr. and Mrs. Black live in Pine Township, and are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

JOHN J. HOSACK, farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born March 2, 1833, in Mercer County, to David and Rebecca (Paxton) Hosack. David Hosack was a brother of James Hosack, whose sketch appears previously. Our subject was educated in the pioneer schools of this county, and brought up on a farm. His father died when he was eleven years of age, and one year later he started out in the world for himself. He hired out to his neighbors at anything he could get to do. At the age of fifteen he engaged by the month and took his pay in store goods. He was married in 1857 to Martha Barnes, a daughter of George and Margaret (Zeigler) Barnes. Her father was a native of Ireland, and came to America when six years of age. Margaret Zeigler was a daughter of George and Susannah (Lear) Zeigler, who immigrated to America at an early period. George B. Barnes, a brother of Mrs. Hosack, was in the One Hundred and Forty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was killed at the battle of Fredricksburg. Mrs. Hosack's father was an elder in the Seceder Church. Mr. and Mrs. Hosack have had ten children: James L., married Jennie Donaldson, a native of Scotland, and is the engineer for the Mercer County Coal Company at Pardoe; Margaret R., married J. W. Banister, of Sharpsville; Mary A., married T. E. Armstrong, of Venango County; Jennie S., married Albert Nelson; Susa L., Wilda A., Tillie E., Nellie B., Esta and Fred, both dead. Mr. and Mrs. Hosack are United Presbyterians, and he is a Republican. David Hosack, father of J. J. Hosack, was born in Adams County, near Gettysburg, Penn., in 1790. In the year 1802 he, with his father's family, immigrated to Mercer County, settling on a tract of land on the south branch of Mill Creek, now a part of Findley Township, where they became the possessors of a large tract of land, a part of which became the property of David. On this farm J. J. Hosack was born, and he is now the resident owner. In 1852 J. J., being of a somewhat rambling disposition, desiring to visit new country, traveled to Pittsburgh by stage and canal. He then took deck passage on the river from there to Fort Madison, Iowa. The first business he engaged in toward gaining a livelihood was chopping cord-wood on an island in the Mississippi River, two and one-half miles from Fort Madison, where he with three other boys "were monarchs of all they surveyed," they being the only occupants on the island. While thus engaged it became necessary to take their first lesson in baking bread. While here the enjoyment of the situation was interrupted by the subject of this sketch receiving a severe blow on the head from a falling cotton-wood limb, which caused a fracture of the skull, and which caused him to vacate the happy surroundings. From here he went to Livingston County, Ill., traveling a greater part of the distance on foot. Here he spent most of the summer of 1853, and witnessed the execution of George L. Gates, at Ottawa, Ill. In the following fall, receiving word of the serious illness of his mother, he returned home, and has since made his home in Mercer County.

THOMAS HOUSTON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born in September, 1810, in Antrim, Ireland, to John and Mary (McBroom) Houston. He was educated in Ireland, and was married there to Nancy, born November 15, 1810, daughter of John and Jennie (Rankin) Adair, natives of the same country. Mr. and Mrs. Houston came to Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1832, where he engaged as a laborer until 1840, when they came to the farm where he now lives. They made the trip by team, and settled in a hewed log house in which Daniel Moon had resided. By hard labor and strict economy he obtained a good farm. He had ten children: Mary, married David Wilson; John, William and Robert (all farmers), Hugh H., a minister of the United Presbyterian Church; Thomas A., also a minister of the same church; James H., a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Houston are consistent members of the United Presbyterian Church, which organization they have attended for over forty years. He is a stanch Democrat.

WILLIAM HOUSTON, post-office Mercer, proprietor of the Mercer Grist Mills, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., May 18, 1839. A mention of his parents and family is to be found elsewhere in this work. He attended the district schools of his boyhood days, going through the woods at a great inconvenience. He was brought up at rural pursuits, and helped his father to clear away the heavy timber on his farm. He was engaged in the coal business twelve years in the coal bank now owned and operated by John T. Crill. In 1882 he, in company with W. R. Packard, erected the Mercer Roller Grist Mills. He subsequently bought Packard's interest, and, with his son, now operates the business. The mill has a capacity of 125 barrels per day. He employs seven men regularly. If running continually they can grind about 28,000 bushels per month. The mill contains twelve eighteen-foot reels, three of Martin's centrifugals, fourteen sets of Steven's rollers, one Richmond Empire bran duster and bolt, six of George T. Smith's purifiers, one Richmond bust machine, one Eureka separating and scouring machine, one H. A. Bernard dustless wheat separator and extractor, one Babcock & Ewing warehouse cleaner, one meal bolter, and the following, made by the John T. Noyes Manufacturing Company, of Buffalo, N. Y.: The improved bolting chest, two four-reel chests and two two-reel chests. Mr. Houston was married February 6, 1868, to Jane E. Crill, whose family history is found in another part of this volume. By this union he has four children: Lewis C. is engaged with his father in the mill, and Mary A., Ella J. and T. A. are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Houston are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Democrat.

JACOB IFFT, farmer, post-office Balm, was born August 8, 1838, in Beaver County, Penn. He was educated in that county, and was brought up at farm labor. He married Miss Mary Shalt, daughter of Michael Shalt, by whom he has had four children: Anna (deceased), Charles, Albert and John. He came to Mercer County in 1869, and settled on his present farm, where he has been very successful. His wife is a member of the Lutheran Church, while he is a member of the United Presbyterian Church. He is one of the enterprising citizens of the county, and is taking a deep interest in the education of his children.

JOSEPH JUNKIN AND HIS FAMILY.—It was in 1805 that John and Joseph Junkin, sons of the subject of this memoir, came to Mercer County to commence improvements on a property purchased by the father in 1800. This property was about two and a half miles south of the county town, and is known as the Hope Mill property. In 1806, Mr. Junkin came out himself, bringing along with him the balance of a large family, consisting of wife, sons and daughters. In a biography of his son George it is related that at what is now the foot of Federal Street, in Allegheny City, dwelt a Mr. Robinson, who had threshed rye for him in Cumberland County, and who offered him the farm on which the central part of the city now stands, from the second bank to the foot of the great hill, for $4,000. Mr. Junkin was well convinced of the speculation offered him, had the money wherewith to purchase, and although preparations had been made for his reception at Mercer, on land already owned by him, would probably have closed with Robinson's offer, had not his son-in-law, John Findley, who was then prothonotary, etc., of Mercer County, strongly dissuaded him from entertaining the proposition. The result was that Junkin prosecuted his journey to Mercer, contenting himself to remain in moderate circumstances, while Robinson retained his farm, and, by the proceeds derived afterward from the sale of lots from it, lived and died a millionaire. The subject of this sketch was a soldier of the Revolution, and the commander of a company in the battle of Brandywine, a few days after which, in a skirmish, he received a musket ball through his right arm, shattering the bone. The torture arising from the wound, or perhaps loss of blood, caused him to faint and lie as one of the dead when the enemy passed over the ground. A shower of rain falling on him in the evening he revived, and sought by crossing fields and woods to get outside of the British lines unperceived. Providence directed his steps to the kitchen door of the residence of a Quaker named George Smith, who met and gently pushing him back said, "Friend, thee is in great danger; my house is full of British officers, and there in my meadow is encamped a squadron of British horse; but I will try to save thee." He took the wounded Junkin to his hay-loft, but in a short time returned, saying that the British officers demanded hay, and that their soldiers would be presently there to take it, so another hiding-place must be found. The loft over the spring house was the next place, where a bed was made of some bundles of flax for his resting place. Mrs. Smith soon afterward supplied him with a supper of scalded bread and milk, and with some linen cloths, with which he dressed his wounds. Before daybreak his host routed him out, and leading him past the sentries of the British encampment, and giving a hunting-shirt to cover his continental uniform, pointed the way of Washington's retreat. This was not to be the end of his trouble. Soon after sunrise he was captured by two dragoons dressed in English uniform, who compelled him to march forward between the heads of their horses. Their questions as to who he was, and to what brigade he belonged, he answered truly. They marched him along for about a mile, he in the meantime determining to attempt escape when they reached a piece of woods in advance. When within a short distance of the thicket at which he contemplated making the attempt his captors said, pointing the way, "You will find your regiment encamped in a field just beyond this wood—we are Americans in disguise." The enfeebled man sank to the ground from the revulsion of feeling caused by this declaration, but with the assistance of the perpetrators of this rough jest played upon him was soon enabled to rejoin his company. A horse was then procured for him, a saddle improvised out of a knapsack stuffed with hay, with a rope bridle, he made his way home, a distance of ninety miles, in three days. Mr. Junkin was a valuable acquisition to Mercer County. He had means to enable him to put up a fine grist mill, saw-mill, fulling-mill and a carding machine, besides building what at that time was perhaps the finest residence in the county, which was recently torn down. He soon took quite an active share in the public affairs of the county, in both church and politics, and was very active during the War of 1812 in sustaining the administration. In politics he was a Democrat, and being a ready and strong writer, was frequently pitted against Benjamin Stokely, who was a Federalist in his political views. He was not an office-seeker, but in 1818 was appointed county treasurer. It was in the fall of 1812 that his wife accidentally fell through the hatchway in his flouring-mill, dislocating the spinal column, and causing her death in a few days afterward, on the 17th of September. He died in February, 1831. Both father and mother were Scotch-Irish, and devotedly attached to the religious views taught by Calvin, not only to the dry doctrines of that faith, but cherishing in their hearts the warm and fervent feelings of a sincere, evangelical piety that impelled to activity and industry in the cause of Christianity. Eleven of their children reached adult life and married. Two of their sons, George and David, became ministers in the Presbyterian Church. Two of their daughters, twins, were married to ministers of the Associate Reformed Church, Revs. Galloway and Buchanan. Including these, with other sons and sons-in-law, and grandchildren, the Christian ministers among his descendants, in 1876, numbered no less than fifteen, and ruling elders, sixteen. But it was in Capt. John Junkin that the people of Mercer County, of that day, took the deepest interest. From his engaging manners, probity and talents he secured the esteem, confidence and respect of his fellow citizens, both young and old, to a very great extent. When Hull's surrender threw Ohio and Western Pennsylvania into consternation, he was first lieutenant of the Mercer Blues, a rifle company composed of men drawn principally from Mercer and the eastern side of the county. This company determined to answer the call of their country by volunteering for six months. The captain, who was John Findley, for a domestic reason that reflected credit rather than discredit, could not then leave his home, and resigned his command. John Junkin was then made captain, and Walter

Oliver, a brother-in-law, succeeded to his place as first lieutenant, Joseph Junkin, a brother, being ensign. This company was remarkable in many respects. With scarce an exception they were Presbyterians, and connected with some one or other of the organizations of that faith. In camp every tent, with the exception of two, in which the officers officiated occasionally, family worship was regularly kept up. They numbered eighty-four persons, wore their own uniforms, carried their own rifles, powder horns, shot pouches, tomahawks, knives, blankets, bibles and psalm books. They rendezvoused first at Pittsburgh, where they were joined by others, and thence, through the wilds of Ohio, their march was directed toward Fort Meigs. They were accompanied by another company from Mercer County, drawn from the Shenango and Mahoning region, commanded by Capt. Dawson. At Mansfield, Ohio, containing but a few log cabins, they rested a few days. This place was then considered in the Indian country, and the troops were cautious and careful in guarding themselves. On one occasion there was an alarm. Capt. Junkin had his men in line without delay, and while going among them to steady the ranks, and incite their courage, his sleeve was plucked by one of his men, John Feltsbarger, who whispered, "Capt. Junkin! Capt. Junkin! may I go back to turn my pone?" "Oh, yes, John; but get back as soon as you can," was the reply. John left his gun with a comrade, hastened to his tent, turned his pone so that it could be baked properly, and speeded back to his place in the ranks. On resuming his gun he said, "Now let them come on!" The incident afforded a great deal of fun afterward for his companions, but it was the act of a simple-hearted, cool-headed and brave man, who could be depended upon to do his duty whenever emergencies were to be met.

The Mercer County men did not get away from Mansfield without disaster. One of Capt. Dawson's men, John Gibson, of Mahoning Township, died from disease on the 20th of November, at Wooster, and on the night before they left Mansfield, the 28th, a violent storm arose, by which an oak tree was blown down on one of the tents, killing Jeremiah Ralston, breaking a thigh for Samuel Patterson, dislocating a limb for Jacob Poole, dangerously wounding John Bean and slightly William Beatty and William Clark, all of the Dawson company.

In garrison at Fort Meigs Capt. Junkin and his company were assiduously attentive to their duty as soldiers, taking good care, also, that their Christian duties were not neglected in the camp-life they were leading. On one occasion, while some of the Virginia troops were pitching quoits on a Sunday for amusement, Capt. Junkin found a few of his men among the spectators. He spoke to them kindly, saying: "Boys, what would our pious relatives at home think if they heard that we were thus dishonoring the Sabbath day? Let us retire, so that we may give no countenance to the desecration." They all followed him from the ground. The attention of the commanding general, Harrison, was soon arrested by the way in which Capt. Junkin performed his duties, and he appointed him to the command of a perilous expedition, having for its object the capture of the British vessel, the "Queen Charlotte," then supposed to be lying ice-bound near to Malden. Capt. Junkin had authority to pick his own men, and he took all of them from his own and Capt. Dawson's company. It was expected that a considerable quantity of military stores would be found in the vessel, and the party took with it hand-sleds for the removal thereof, if successful. The lake was reached, the ice traversed until the situation of the vessel was seen, when the party found a quarter of a mile of open water between them and the desired prey. They had no boats, and were constrained to return without other effort to effect the object for which they had started. The return was perilous. The ground swell that prevented their reaching the vessel, after their passage forward, had opened the ice in their rear, but not to such a great extent that in the use of the planks carried on their hand-sleds they could bridge the chasms, and thus escape the perils threatened in the breaking up of the ice on the lake before they reached the shore.

At the end of the time for which the Pennsylvania troops had volunteered their services there seemed to be a necessity for their continuance. At the expiration of their engagement the Virginia troops left Fort Malden, and the Pennsylvanians determined to remain until the army preparing for the recapture of Detroit could be brought up by Gen. Harrison, which detained them another month. In the end Capt. Junkin returned home with every man in his company with whom he left Mercer. His indefatigable and tender care for the health, morals and comfort of his men, as well as his industry in perfecting their military drill and knowledge, not only made him a very valuable officer, but so endeared him to his men and fellow citizens as to cause his idolization among them as long as he lived. His mother's death, caused by accident, occurred but a few days before his march, and while absent his wife, who was a daughter of Hon. William Findley, of Westmoreland County, also died, so that his domestic afflictions while in the service of his country were very great.

The succeeding summer Capt. Junkin went to aid in the defense of Erie and the vessels preparing for Com. Perry. The British fleet paraded itself before the mouth of the harbor for several days, and the difficulty was to get the American fleet over the bar at its entrance and out to sea. Perry, as soon as over, called for volunteers from the landsmen for his first cruise, and Capt Junkin, along with fifty others from this county, whose names are mentioned elsewhere, promptly placed themselves on board his vessels. The cruise lasted four days, without sighting the enemy, when the fleet returned to port. A re-enforcement of sailors, that had in the meantime arrived at Erie, enabled the commodore to dispense with his Mercer County volunteers.

It is quite probable that on the report of Gen. Harrison a captain's commission in the regular army was afterward tendered him by the General Government, and so, also, an unsolicited nomination for the Legislature by the Democrats. Whether he thought the country was in more need of soldiers than legislators, or that he was better qualified for the field than a legislative hall, is unknown, but he declined the civil and accepted the military promotion. He was directed to open a recruiting office in Mercer, and was rapidly getting his company filled out when a malignant fever broke out in the barracks. More mindful of the health and comfort of those under his care than of his own safety, he gave such a personal attention to the sick that the disease was contracted by himself, resulting in his death on the 27th of April, 1814. The writer, then a lad of about eight years, well recollects the public sorrow on that occasion, for the praises of Capt. Junkin, without detractors, were in the mouths of all. Old and young, men and women alike, respected and loved him for the tender care he so uniformly exercised over those under his command, as well as for the engaging manners, high talents and unbending probity that marked his intercourse with his fellow citizens. He was buried with military honors from a house that stood on the Kline corner of the public square. The muffled music, playing a mournful measure, led the way, followed by the military, and then the body borne by pall-bearers, the relatives and a large number of citizens closing the procession. After the corpse had been lowered to its resting place, and the usual religious observances performed, a file of soldiers on each side fired blank cartridges into the grave, after which the unmuffled drums struck up a lively measure, when the procession reformed and returned to the place of starting. Capt. Junkin left but one living child behind him, a daughter, who afterward became the wife of William M. Francis, of Wilmington, Lawrence County, who not many years back so well and ably represented Mercer and Lawrence Counties in the State Senate.

Other sons of Joseph Junkin became eminent, particularly George, who had been devoted by the thoughts and prayers of his parents in early life to the gospel ministry. He was the founder of several educational establishments, the greatest and most permanently successful of which was LaFayette College, at Easton, Penn., that now rivals all the other great schools of the country. He was very prominent in the Barnes' conflict in the Presbyterian Church, in 1833, being, in fact, the prosecutor on that occasion, and which finally resulted in a split in the church, now happily reunited. When the Civil War broke out Dr. George Junkin was president of the Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Va. Two of his daughters had married Virginians, professors in the Military Institute, Col. Preston and Maj. (Stonewall) Jackson. They took the side of their State, he, that of the Federal Government. He abandoned his post as president of the university, and came north, and when the war was over Gen. Lee was elected to the vacancy. In 1862, while the war was raging, he delivered an address on the 4th of July to the people of Mercer. Fifty years before, after the War of 1812 commenced, he had addressed the Mercer Blues at a 4th of July celebration held on the farm of John Findley, near town. He died in 1868.

Dr. D. X. Junkin, the youngest son of the family, also arose to considerable distinction as a Presbyterian divine, and died at New Castle. He was a very elegant and ready writer, logical and strong in argument, and devoted to the cause of Christianity.—Garvin.

ADAM KNAUFF, farmer, post-office Balm, was born June 3, 1824, in Germany, to Nicholas and Anna (Vining) Knauff, natives of the same country, who came to America in 1831. Michael, the grandfather of Adam, started on the same vessel, but died on the way and was buried in the ocean. The parents settled first in the woods of Butler County. There the father died in 1855 and the mother in 1834. They had five children: Nicholas, Michael, John, Michael (2), Adam and Margaret, who married Michael Senkan. The parents were members of the German Lutheran Church. Adam Knauff was educated in the German schools of his native country and in Butler County. He learned the tailor's trade with his brother, Michael, and followed it for some time. He was married April 7, 1846, to Elizabeth Ifft, daughter of Peter and Anna (Ginter) Ifft, natives of the same country, and who came on the same vessel with the Knauff family. Her parents settled in Beaver County, Penn. They had six children: Peter, Jacob, John, Eliza, Barbara and Gertrude. Our subject has had ten children, seven of whom are living: Adam, married Susannah Uber, and has Anna, Maggie, Ida, Joseph, Clara, Rosa and Mary; John, married Helen Reeher, and has Freddie, Harry, Mabel and Dennis; Herman, married America Harman, and has Willie and Lestie; Jacob, married Magdalena Blumenshine, and has Clarence and Hattie; Anna, married Martin Bortz, and has Walter and Freddie; Mary and Charles are at home. Mr. Knauff came to his present farm of 126 acres in 1866. He and wife are members of the Lutheran Church of Balm, and he is a Democrat.

PHILIP MASSON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 10, 1837, in what is now Findley Township, to Lewis and Christina (Martin) Masson, natives of France. They came to this county in 1835 and settled where our subject was born. Here the father farmed the greater part of his busy life, although he was by trade a carpenter. He died in 1851, and was buried in the Catholic Cemetery in Jefferson Township. His wife died in 1876, and had blessed him with four children: Joseph; Mary J., deceased, after becoming the wife of A. Besancon; Philip and Lewis, deceased. The father was in the militia until he was fifty years old. Philip Masson was educated in the common schools, and was married in 1861 to Rebecca McDonald, a daughter of Alexander McDonald, who was born and reared in this county and married Rebecca Jennings, by whom he had four children: Mary A., Ellen, John and Rebecca. Her parents were Catholics. Her father died June 14, 1851, and her mother May 29, 1862. Mr. Masson has eight children: Christina R., Mary A., married Newton Robinson; Ellen A., Alphonsus, Cecelia, Ambrose, Anselem and John F. Mr. Masson and his family are members of the Catholic Church in Jefferson Township. He is the possessor of an excellent farm, and is an anti-monopolist. Lewis Masson was on the ocean for thirty-eight days while on a trip to his native country, about two years before his death. The ship was drifted on an island, but the only loss he sustained was his trunk and effects.

JOHN B. MAXWELL, farmer and carpenter, post-office Mercer, was born April 5, 1839, in what is now Lawrence County, the son of George B. and Christiana (Emery) Maxwell, natives of Lawrence County. The mother died in Fredonia in 1874, and had blessed her husband with eight children: Catharine, married Patterson Page; John B., Sarah, married Isaac Cornell; William F., living in Allegheny City; Nancy J., married James Mowry; Mary M., married James Hamilton; James A., dead; George E., dead. The mother of the above children had previously married John Bentley and had by him one son, Joseph. John B. Maxwell, our subject, was educated in the country schools, and began learning the carpenter trade at the age of twenty. He has followed his trade ever since. He lived in Sandy Lake for twelve years, and in 1878 came to his present farm of eighty-seven acres, in Findley Township. He was married, in 1861, to Priscilla Black, daughter of John Black, of Jackson Township. She died in 1862, and he was married again, to Nancy B. Rodgers, daughter of William Rodgers, whose sketch appears in this work. His children are: Nancy C., William A., George E., Margaret E., John R., Robert R. and Joseph Leroy. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Mercer. He is a Republican, and a strong temperance man. He was a soldier in Company D, Two Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was in several hard battles.

ROBERT MCCOY, deceased, was born in 1812, in Ireland, and was of Scotch-Irish extraction. He married Mary Armstrong, of the same country, and with her came to Cool Spring Township, Mercer Co., Penn., in 1841. They settled on the farm now owned by William Reed. He died August 2, 1873, and his widow lives in Findley Township, and is sixty-seven years of age. Their only children are William O. and Thomas A. Robert McCoy was a Democrat, and held some of the small township offices. William A. McCoy was born July 19, 1845, in East Lackawannock Township, and was educated in the common schools, and thoroughly learned the avocation of a farmer. He was married November 3, 1871, to Ellen, a daughter of William Burton, of Cool Spring Township, and has Robert E., Eva B., Mary E., William T., Emma N. and Bessie. Mr. McCoy settled on his present farm of 180 acres in 1880. He has given a great deal of his personal attention to the breeding of Chester-White hogs, Short-horn Durham cattle, Leicester and Southdown sheep. He and his wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

He is a Democrat, and he and his brother take, in partnership, eight weekly newspapers. Mention of the Armstrong family is made in the sketch of John Armstrong, of Cool Spring Township.

JOHN MICHAELS, manager of the Mercer Coal Company at Pardoe, was born May 7, 1841, in Bavaria, Germany, to John and Elizabeth (Barber) Michaels, natives of the same country, and who came to Pittsburgh in 1844, where the father engaged in the cooper business and continued it until his death, in 1850. He was a Lutheran, and his wife, who died in 1849, was also a member of that organization. They had the following children: Anna M., married George Slyger, who died, and she was again married, to a Rev. Platte, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; John, deceased, and John. Our subject, at the death of his parents, made his home with his uncle, Jacob Schwartz, a cooper by trade, which business John learned and followed for two years. In 1863 he began mining for the Brady's Bend Iron Company, in Armstrong County, Penn., and continued for eight years. July 30, 1865, he was married to Catharine E., daughter of Andrew and Catharine (Warner) Meyers, natives of Germany, and who immigrated to Armstrong County, Penn., in 1860; they had two children: Ann M., married Joseph Meyers (no connection), and lives in Pardoe, and Catharine E. Mr. Meyers, the father of Mrs. Michaels, followed farming in the old country, and was killed in a mine in Armstrong County, by the fall of a stone. Mrs. Meyers died in 1880, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Michaels. John Michaels is a man of good education, having had the benefit of four years' training in the Pittsburgh schools, though young at the time. In 1871 he was employed by the Mercer County Coal Company at Pardoe, as track-layer, which position he held until 1883, when he was promoted to the management of the mine, and has given general satisfaction. His children are: Catharine E., Anna M., Sophia and John J. The family belong to the German Lutheran Church.

JAMES MCKAY, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born May 10, 1823, in Antrim, Ireland, to Encas and Catharine McKay, natives of the same country. The father came to America in 1837 on a prospecting tour. In 1842 his family had arrived and settled on the farm where William McKay now lives. Here the father died in 1867 in his seventy-second year. His wife died in 1861. Their children were: Isabella, married Laughlin McCurdy, died in 1850; Mary, married John Greenlee; William, married Sarah Evans; James; John, was drowned while bathing in Lawrence County; Sarah, married James Reed, died in 1859; Laughlin, died in 1856; Catharine, married Albert McConahy, died in 1859; Enos, died February 27, 1865. The parents died in the faith of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Our subject attended school in his native country in the cabins, and like the rest of his schoolmates carried each day to school two turfs or combustible bricks for fuel. He came to this country in 1842 in a sail vessel, and was six weeks on the ocean. He was married in December, 1849, to Rebecca Hosack, and had two children; one died small, and the other, Talitha, is the wife of William Calvin. Mrs. McKay died May 14, 1884. She, in 1851, connected herself with the Associate Reformed Church at Springfield. Removing to the vicinity of Mercer in 1873 she united with the First United Presbyterian Church, of which congregation she remained a consistent member until her death, being faithful in her attendance upon the ordinances of God's house. Although possessed of a weak constitution she missed but one communion during the thirty-two years she was in connection with the church, and that was the one immediately preceding her death. In her last illness she manifested a cheerful, patient and submissive spirit. She set her house in order, and with lamp trimmed and burning awaited the coming of the bridegroom. Peacefully she passed away. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Mr. McKay was again married in March, 1886, to Miss Maggie Worrell, and with her lives near Mercer on his excellent farm. He and his last wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a Republican.

WILLIAM MCKAY, deceased, was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1809. He immigrated to Philadelphia in 1834, and there married, in 1836, Eliza Lanigan, daughter of Daniel and Nancy (Sharp) Lanigan, natives of Ireland. She was born in 1811, in County Antrim, and came to Philadelphia the year she was married. In 1837 she and her husband came to Mercer County, and finally located where she now lives, in Findley Township. Here Mr. McKay died September 18, 1871. He was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and was the father of the following children: Nancy (deceased), William J., Sarah A. (married James Patterson, of Mercer), Alexander B., James C., Daniel G., Mary J. (married Milton Montgomery) and Robert. The parents of Mrs. McKay died in Mercer County, and their children were: John, Alexander, Margaret, Ruth, Nancy and Jane. James C. McKay was born July 12, 1847, was educated in the common schools, and married August 17, 1870, to Belle, a daughter of James and Margaret (Allen) Montgomery, the parents of William J. (deceased), Allen, Mary, Lizzie (married Robert Houston), Margaret (a maiden lady), Belle, James C. (on the old home place), Melissa (married Prof. J. B. McClellan), R. C. (a minister of the Reformed Presbyterian Church at Philadelphia) Samuel R. and Renwick S. James C. McKay has by his wife one daughter, Myrta L. He and wife belong to the old Springfield Church. His brother, Robert, was born September 12, 1851, was educated in the country schools, and was married January 31, 1873, to Rebecca Moon, a daughter of Lewis Moon, by whom he has Lewis E., Lillie M., William R. and Mary E. He is engaged in farming and selling farm implements, and, with his wife, belongs to the Springfield Church. Daniel G., another brother, was born on the old homestead, and was educated at Allegheny College, Westminster College and a theological seminary at Newberry, N. Y. He married Lizzie M. Leslie, and has three boys: William L., John G. and Robert J. He is now stationed at Shusham, N. Y. The other two brothers, William J. and Alexander B., are mentioned in separate sketches in Pine Township. The McKays are all staunch Republicans, especially those from this branch, and are among the most respected and enterprising citizens of the county.

L. G. MEYER, physician and surgeon, post-office Pardoe, was born July 8, 1849, in Centre County, Penn., to John and Mary (Close) Meyer. The mother of Mary was a Reichard, a cousin of Peter Reichard, of Greenville. John and Mary are dead, and seven of their eight children are living: Sarah; Malinda, married Dr. J. H. Ziegler; Joseph; Henry, dead; David; Mary, married, resides in California, and Ellen, married C. M. Bower, Esq., Bellefonte, Penn. The parents were members of the German Reformed Church. Levi George, our subject, was educated in the common schools and a normal, and academy in Centre County. He taught school for five years, during which time he read medicine with Dr. P. T. Musser, of Aaronsburg, that county. He attended the Jefferson Medical College in 1871-72 and 1873-74, graduating March 11, 1874. He began to practice at Pardoe the same year, and has built up a lucrative business. He was married June 15, 1876, to Jennie M., daughter of John Albin, of Mercer, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. By his marriage he has five children: John D., Ida L., George C., Anna M. and Charles C. Dr. Meyer joined the Mercer County Medical Society in 1874, the State Medical Society at Pottsville, Penn., in 1875, and has attended the latter five times. He joined the American Medical Association, at Cleveland, in 1882. He was secretary of the Mercer County Medical Society three years, was its vice-president one year, and was elected its president in 1888. He is physician to the A. O. F. of Pardoe, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Pardoe. He is a Democrat.

HUGH MILLER, deceased, was born November 4, 1812, in Pittsburgh, to John and Elizabeth (Montgomery) Miller. The parents came to this county at an early day. Hugh Miller was a brother of the late William Miller, father of Hon. S. H. Miller, and William Miller of the First National Bank of Mercer. Hugh married Adaline Wilson, and had one son, Wilson, whose sketch appears in East Lackawannock Township. He was married a second time, to Nancy J. Courtney, a daughter of Thomas Courtney, who is mentioned in the sketch of Thomas Courtney. Hugh Miller lived in Pine Township until 1868, when he moved to the farm where his widow now lives. By his last marriage he had seven children: Catharine, born January 22, 1844, married William Sullivan March 26, 1866, and died January 13, 1874; Thomas C., born August 16, 1845, lives in East Lackawannock Township; J. M., born in 1848, is the owner of the old home place, and one of the most respected citizens of the township; David A., born July 8, 1849, and died August 6, 1868; Mary E., born January 19, 1852, died September 5, 1871; Nancy R., born July 1, 1855, died June 11, 1876; and James, born August 23, 1869. Hugh Miller died February 11, 1875. He was a member of the Second Presbyterian Church, and had been an efficient township official at various times. He was a Republican, and was possessed of a remarkable memory, having been able to recall incidents profusely for years back without reference to a diary.

ROBERT MILLER, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 26, 1853, to James and Sarah Miller, the parents of William, John, Jane, Albert, Mary, Elizabeth, Samuel, Robert, James and George. James Miller married Sarah, a daughter of William and Mary (Davile) North, natives of England, who came to Cool Spring Township in 1819. Mention is made of them in Cool Spring Township. James died in 1872, and his widow survives with her son on the old farm in Findley Township. Our subject was educated in the country schools, and was married in 1880 to Mary J. Robinson, a daughter of Andrew Robinson, of this township. She died in 1881, the mother of one child, Jennie. He was again married, to Harriet M. Calvin, and by her had one child, Alice. His last wife is the daughter of Jonathan and Jane (McCullough) Calvin, the former of whom was born in Beaver County, in 1809, to Stephen and Mary (Grosscost) Calvin. Jonathan came to this county in 1837, and his children are: Alexander, Emeline, Martin L., Mary, the wife of Alexander Donaldson; James W., Lizzie, Harriet, William, Samuel, and Stephen and John N., who both died young. Robert Miller, our subject, settled where he now lives in 1880. He is an enterprising farmer, a staunch Republican, and he and his wife are members of the Second Presbyterian Church. He has served as school director for three years, is deeply interested in education, and is building up a good library for himself and family.

WILLIAM NELSON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born April 5, 1822, in what is now Lawrence County, to Robert and Sarah (Dunavin) Nelson. The former was born in Ireland, and when thirteen years old settled in Lawrence County, where his wife was born, and where he was killed by a falling tree while clearing. His widow died in 1875, thirty-nine years after his death. The children of Robert and Sarah were: William, James, Margaret, married William Foster; John, Thomas, who is thought to have starved to death in Andersonville prison; Robert, Rebecca, married Joseph Donley, and Mary A. The mother was married to Stephen McKinley, and had one child, Elizabeth, who married Joshua Snyder. Our subject attended school in Lawrence County, and well remembers the old slab seats and writing desks, greased paper window lights and the huge fire-place that were a part of the school-houses of that day. When his father died he began working for himself at farming and brick-making. He was married to Susannah (Merchant) Crill, widow of Philip Crill, and by her Mr. Nelson has two sons: James R., married Sephronia, a daughter of Samuel T. Zahniser, whose sketch appears in this book, and has by her one child, Elsie S.; and Albert E., married Jane Hosack. Mrs. Nelson went to bed feeling well on the evening of May 25, 1885, and the next morning her husband arose, built a fire, and on going to the bed to call her up was shocked to find her dead. She had been a Methodist for many years. Mr. Nelson came to his present farm of 245 acres in 1859, and his son, James R., helps him to farm it. He is a good citizen, a Democrat and a strong temperance man.

JOSIAH NEWBURY, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 6, 1821, in Northumberland County, Penn., son of James and Sarah (Paul) Newbury. The father was born in Pennsylvania, and was of Scotch extraction, and the mother was a native of Germany, and immigrated to America with her parents at an early day. James Newbury died when Josiah was quite small, and our subject was therefore compelled to make his own living long before he reached his majority. He, however, remained with his mother until 1836, when he moved with Robert Pardoe to Trumbull County, Ohio, and for whom Mr. Newbury worked on a farm in Ohio for one year, and then came with the same gentleman to Mercer County and remained in his employ for seven years more. He was married in 1844 to Jane Todd, born May 17, 1824, in Mercer County. Her father, Andrew Todd, was born in Ireland, and settled in Wolf Creek Township, this county, when five years of age, where he grew up and was married to Jane Patterson, who blessed him with the following children: Mary A., married William Long; Jane, Susan, married Lewis Crill; John, deceased; Elizabeth, died when small; Jane, deceased; Hugh, deceased; Margaret, married Gilmore Baker; William, died small; William (2) is living and Robert is also living. Mr. and Mrs. Todd are dead, and were members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church. Josiah Newbury and his wife lived with her mother for one year after their marriage, because of the sad death of Mr. Todd, he having been killed by his horses running away while returning from Mercer on a business trip. In 1845 they made their permanent settlement on the farm where they yet reside. It was at that time principally a dense forest, and consequently necessitated a vast amount of hard labor, which Mr. Newbury proved able to bear, to make it bring forth fruit. He is the artificer of sixty-two acres of arable land, and has always been a hard-working, honest, upright citizen. His marriage gave him the following children: Andrew, married Mary Walsmith and resides in Luzerne County, Penn.; Mary A., married A. L. Cooper; James, is single and lives in Minnesota; John, deceased; Celia J., married John Graham; Montrose, is a machinist of Sharon. Mr. Newbury has served his township as assessor, and is a staunch Democrat. He and his wife belong to the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

WILLIAM PAXTON, farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born August 1, 1824, in Mercer County, on the farm where he now lives. His father, Thomas, was born in Franklin County, Penn., in 1792, and died July 14, 1850. He came to Mercer County with his father, Thomas, who died at the home of his daughter, the wife of D. Hosack, and an aunt of Dr. J. P. Hosack, of Mercer. Thomas Paxton, the father of our subject, was married to Mary A. Kerr, a sister of Judge Joseph Kerr, once associate judge of this county. Their children were: James and Jane, who died small; John, died with cancer in 1880; Caroline, married Thomas Hosack and is deceased; Mary E., married George W. Moon, a brother of A. B. Moon; Nancy J., married Matthew Barnes, and is dead; Sarah, died in 1842; Margaret, died in 1842; Emily, died in 1842; James, lives in Kansas; Anna, married Alexander McKay. Mrs. Mary Paxton died April 7, 1880, and, like her husband, was a consistent member of the Springfield Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married to Sarah, a daughter of George Barnes, and had by her eight children: George B., Thomas K. (both engaged in the lumber business in this county), Kissie, William B. (a brakeman on the passenger train from Butler to Pittsburgh), Maggie J., John L., Mary A. and Harry E. Mr. Paxton came in possession of the old home by buying out the heirs. He and wife are members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church, and he is a Democrat.

ELI RAHAUSER, farmer, post-office Balm, was born September 1, 1806, in Greencastle, Franklin Co., Penn. His father, Daniel, was a minister of the German Reformed organization, and came to Mercer County in 1830, and died later in Ohio. Daniel's first wife was Susannah Hum, by whom he had Eli, Leah, Mary, Daniel, Elizabeth, William and Jesse. Mrs. Rahauser died in 1815, and he was married again, to a Mrs. Ditterman, and had six children. Our subject farmed and followed the cooper trade during his activity. The latter business was a source of considerable means, he having been prepared to take advantage of the great demand for barrels and kegs during the war. He was married to Anna M. Sager, resulting in nine children: Susannah B., married Lewis Heasley, who was killed in the war; she died of cancer, in Michigan, November 7, 1886; Lydia E., who remains at home to care for her feeble parents; Jesse, died in the war; Anna M., married William J. Snyder; Elias, Jr.; Leah M., died small; Michael J.; William D., deceased; Esther C., deceased. Jacob and Elizabeth (Snyder) Sager, the parents of Mrs. Rahauser, had John, Jacob, Anna M., Abraham, Daniel, Elizabeth, Andrew and Barbara. Sagertown, Crawford County, the seat of the famous medicinal springs, was named after relatives of Mrs. Rahauser. The father of the Mr. Rahauser was actively engaged in ministerial labors for about forty years, and married a couple the day before he was stricken from life's roll on earth and gathered into life eternal. Mr. Rahauser adheres to the German Reformed faith, while his wife is a Lutheran. He and his sons are Democrats.

J. W. RAINEY, farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born October 22, 1851, in Mercer County, Penn. His father, Hugh Rainey, is a native of Ireland, and came to this county about 1836. He followed stone masonry for many years, helped to build the Magoffin Block in Mercer, and laid the first brick in the present court-house. The first work he did in this county was to cultivate a potato patch for the late Judge Pearson, of Harrisburg. This potato patch was on the site of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Hugh Rainey married Eliza Boyd. He was born June 24, 1807, to James and Rachel (Wilson) Rainey. The mother died May 16, 1816, and the father came to Canada, where he died in 1836. Hugh had by his marriage seven children: David S., Eliza, married David White; Rachel, James W. The others are dead. Mrs. Rainey died May 5, 1886. Hugh Rainey was six years a director of the Pymatuning Fire Insurance Company. He is a member of the Reformed Church, and a Republican. J. W. Rainey was educated in the common schools, and was married October 1, 1874, to Maggie J., daughter of John and Eliza (Kelley) Gildersleeve, natives, the father of Mercer and the mother of Butler County. Daniel Gildersleeve, the father of John, married Margaret Albin, an aunt of John Albin, of Mercer, and died about 1876. Our subject settled on his present farm in 1887. He has six children: Willie J., David L., Mertie A., Elmer A., James C., Lizzie M. He is now a school director. He and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Springfield, and he is a stanch Republican and a good citizen.

WILLIAM RAMSEY, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born October 11, 1816, in Springfield Township, to Andrew and Anna (Creighton) Ramsey, natives, the father of Ireland and the mother of Mifflin County, Penn. The father came to America when about thirteen years old with his father, Andrew, and settled in Springfield Township in 1806. There Andrew died in 1853, the father of ten children: Mary A., married William Kerr; Eliza, married Cunningham Glenn; Jane, married William Walters; William, Robert C., engaged in the patent fence business; Lucinda, married Robert Reed; Nancy, married William Gilmore; Narcissa, married Thomas Humphrey; Margaret, married David Swim and a Mr. Barrett; and Andrew. Andrew Ramsey was out in the War of 1812, and he and his wife were members of the Seceder Church. Our subject attended the common schools. He was married in 1845, to Jane Hindman, who died in 1860, leaving no issue. He was again married in 1861, to Martha J. Campbell, daughter of John Campbell, of Butler County, and they have no children. They are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Republican. In 1841 Mr. Ramsey entered a woolen factory at Craigville, Armstrong County; in 1872 he came to the old homestead, and in 1873 bought forty-six acres where he now lives, known as the "old smoky John Thompson farm."

GEORGE W. RIDDLE, shoemaker, Mercer, was born May 12, 1837, son of John B. Riddle. He was educated in the common schools, and was married December 25, 1860, to Mary, a daughter of Joseph McDonald. Her father was born in 1806 and her mother was born in 1803. Mr. Riddle enlisted in the late war as a private in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, on the 14th day of August, 1862. He was mustered out June 21, 1865. During his services in the defense of his country he was stricken with rheumatism, which has since troubled him a great deal. His children are Edmund, born February 22, 1862; Ida M., born May 12, 1866; Anna B., born February 28, 1868; Frank W., born January 9, 1870; Walter C., born November 5, 1871; Alfred, born December 1, 1873; Parker, born November 3, 1876. The children are all unmarried. He is a member of the G. A. R., is a Republican and a strong temperance man. His grandfather, Edward Riddle, was born in Scotland, and his grandmother, Margaret Riddle, was a native of Shippensburg, Cumberland Co., Penn. They were the parents of six boys and four girls, and became residents of Mercer County. James Riddle, a member of this family, was born September 19, 1794, and served in the War of 1812, being present at the engagement of Perry's fleet with the British in the famous "Perry's Victory."

ANDREW ROBINSON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born December 23, 1829, in Trumbull County, Ohio. His father, Thomas, was a native of Washington County, Penn., and his mother, Mary Mayers, was a native of Westmoreland County, the same State. The Robinsons moved to Trumbull County about the year 1802, and to Mercer County in 1836, where they settled in what was then Sandy Creek Township, now Perry. There they bought 500 acres in the woods. Here the father died in 1852, and his widow died at the home of our subject in 1868. The father was a member of the Ohio Legislature in 1834-35, and was an elder in the Associate Church at his death. He was for years a justice of the peace in this county, and was the father of seven children: John, deceased; Benjamin, deceased; James H., died at the age of six years; Thomas A., lives in Jamestown, Penn; James H. (2), whose sketch appears elsewhere; Hiram, lives in Florida, and Andrew. The last named was educated principally in the common schools, and was brought up at farm life. He was married March 14, 1853, to Mary Mills, a daughter of Robert and Mary Mills, natives of County Tyrone, Ireland, who came to Pittsburgh in 1831, and two years later settled for a period in Springfield Township, but finally in Perry Township, where the father died in 1857 and the mother in 1878. They were the parents of Joseph, James, Eliza, William, John, Mary, Jane A., Robert, Andrew, Thomas, David, Jane A. (2), Cass, Sarah and Emma H. The father was an Episcopalian in religious belief, while the mother was a Presbyterian. Our subject has had ten children: Thomas, married Ella Keith and is dead; Mary J., married Robert Miller, and is dead; Sarah E., married Homer S. Black; Joanna, deceased; Robert M., married Mary A. Yengor; Emma, deceased; Frank A., Hattie, deceased; Sarah, L. F. and James H. Mr. Robinson was commissioner in 1874-75, was school director for fifteen years, and is serving his third term as a justice of the peace. He is an enterprising gentleman, is a Republican, and he and wife are earnest members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, of which he is one of the ruling elders.

REUBEN RUPERT, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 5, 1829, in York County, Penn., to Philip and Leah (Rahauser) Rupert, natives of York County. The family came to this county in 1831, settling one year near Blacktown, and then moving to an old school-house which stood on the farm where James McGonnell now resides. From there they moved to the farm on which our subject now lives, and settled in an old log cabin, which stood for fifty years, and was then made into wood and used to burn the brick out of which the present elegant residence of Mr. Rupert was built in 1884. The father died in 1862, and his widow January 1, 1886. They were the parents of eleven children: Mary A., married Samuel Reeher; Reuben; Catharine, married John C. Cribbs; Adam (married Hannah McDowell) was in the war from this county, and was for awhile confined in Libby and Salisbury Prisons; Elizabeth, married Newton McDowell; Leah, married Henry Giles; William, married Hannah Wingard; Susan, married Jacob Shuler; Sarah, married Daniel Uber and Ephraim McCalmond, and Philip, married Frances Guist. Our subject was educated in the country schools, and brought up at farm labor. He was married in 1853 to Hannah Uber, daughter of Michael and Mollie (Urey) Uber, natives of Westmoreland County and early settlers of this county. Her parents had three children: Mary, married James Guist, who was found dead in his bed by his second wife, who was Jane Patterson; Sarah, married Jacob Wingard, and Hannah. Lizzie Guist, a daughter of James Guist, makes her home with Mr. Rupert. Mr. and Mrs. Rupert have had four children: Adam P., married Eva Thompson; Norias, deceased; William A., married Lizzie Todd, and James C., at home. Mr. Rupert some time ago established five fish ponds, and raises the German Carp. A beautiful spring flows from the side of the hill near by, which feeds the ponds with fresh water, making them of much value to him. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Mercer, and he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM SEIDLEY, farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born June 9, 1838, in Mercer County, on the farm where he now lives. He was educated in the log cabin schools, and was married July 4, 1867, to Maria Barnes, a sister of Samuel Barnes, whose sketch appears in this work. By her he has five children: Jennie, John G., George V., Maggie (deceased) and Reed B. He settled at marriage on his present farm of 106 acres. He and his family were members of the old Springfield congregation, some of them being there when Rev. E. Small was pastor. They now belong to the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He was a Democrat until the war, when he became a Republican. He is now a Prohibitionist. His father, Bartholomew Seidley, was born August 24, 1806, in Germany, to Anthony and Mary Seidley. He came to America in 1827 and settled in Somerset County, Penn., where he worked at clock-making. In 1834 he settled in Mercer and followed his trade for three years. He married Jane Truxell in 1837, and began clearing a farm in Springfield Township in connection with his clock tinkering over the county. He probably fixed 1,000 clocks in Mercer County. He settled on his present farm in Findley Township in 1861. His wife died in 1854, the mother of six children: Jacob, William, Mary, John, Sarah and Elizabeth. He was married again, to Mrs. David Boyer, who died in 1863. She was a German Reformed in religious belief.

S. M. STEWART, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born in 1846 in County Derry, Ireland, to David and Elizabeth (Campbell) Stewart, who came to America in 1850, and settled in Lawrence County, Penn. Here the father was employed at the McKinley Furnace for ten years. He then moved to a farm in that county. He subsequently sold notions at wholesale over the surrounding country, traveling by a four-horse team. He was employed in this for some time by James Cochran, then of Hanover, Ohio. He finally joined the firm of James Cochran & Co. He later removed to Pittsburgh and followed this business, and subsequently established a business in partnership with his sons, W. C., D. W., S. M. and A. L., at Beaver Falls, and continued a number of years, and then moved back to Pittsburgh, where he continued in trade until death, in April, 1882. His widow died in Mercer County, and had blessed him with eleven children: J. B., W. C. (was in the One Hundred and Fifteenth Pennsylvania Volunteers), D. W. (was in the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers), S. M., James (deceased), A. L., R. W., Mary, Margaret J., Elizabeth and Mattie. The father was married a second time, his last wife being Mrs. Mertilla Reed. S. M. Stewart was educated in the common schools of Mercer County, and was married to Zenobia E., daughter of George and Amanda Cotton, natives of this county and the parents of the following children: Zenobia, Melissa, Armina, Fannie, Mary, John, William, Edward and Clarence. Mr. Stewart located where he now lives in 1887, and has built a fine house in which to spend the remainder of his days. He and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Republican and belongs to the F. & A. M. His children are Eleanor, Lina, Florence and Nina B.

DAVID WILSON, carpenter for the Mercer County Coal Company, and farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born September 10, 1832, in Westmoreland County, Penn. His parents, James and Catharine (McKee) Wilson, were natives of Ireland, and came to this country while single. They moved to Mercer County about 1840, and settled in what is now Findley Township, where the mother died in 1878, and the father in 1876. They had nine children: David; Hannah, married Alexander Moore; Jane, married William J. Michaels; Sarah A., married John Axe; Margaret, married A. Highbarger; Catharine, married James Lusk; Lizzie; Thomas, married Addie Heasley, and Hugh. The parents were members of the old Springfield United Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and began to learn his trade when seventeen years of age. He is the carpenter for the Mercer County Coal Company, and has been since 1878. He was married in 1857 to Mary, a daughter of Thomas Houston, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. By this union he has seven children: William J., a farmer; Jennie; Sadie, married William McCurdy, of Jackson Township; Mary C., Minnie E., George A. and Thomas, deceased. Mr. Wilson owns two farms of eighty-one and ninety-one acres, which are the result of his own labors. He has been school director of Wolf Creek Township and assistant assessor of Findley Township. He became a member of the old Springfield Church when Rev. Edward Small was the pastor, and his wife belongs to the same. He is a Republican, and has taken a deep interest in every public enterprise.

JOHN YOUNG, deceased, was born about the year 1776 in Franklin County, Penn. His father, William Young, came to what is now Lawrence County in 1804. John Young, the father of William, had preceded him to Lawrence County two years. He settled about six miles south of Mercer, and William died there. William married Mary Elder, by whom he had eight children: John, David, Elizabeth (married John Sankey, a relative of the great evangelist, Ira D. Sankey), Margaret (married David Summerville), James, Mary (married John McCandless), William, Jane (married James Small). John Young was a minister of the United Presbyterian Church, and went to Illinois in 1840, where he soon after died. His widow died in 1864, and had blessed him with five children: Nancy, married David Munnell; Jane, married Robert Elder, and lives in Lawrence County; William, died in 1861; James W. and John, the latter a resident of Lawrence County. James W. was educated in the common schools, and married Mary McGoun, and had eight children, seven of whom are living: Maria, married Andrew Fox; Margaret, married Aaron Hingston; John, Fannie, Robert, Isabella and Sarah. James Young settled on his present farm in Findley Township in the spring of 1867. He and his wife belong to the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. His son, John, who assists in the management of the farm, was a soldier in the One Hundred and Third Pennsylvania Volunteers, enlisting in 1864. He and his father are Democrats, and among the enterprising citizens of the township.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

BIOGRAPHIES OF COOL SPRING, FAIRVIEW, LAKE AND JACKSON.

COOL SPRING TOWNSHIP.

MARTIN L. ALEXANDER, farmer, was born July 15, 1837, to John C., born in 1804 in Fairview Township. The latter was a son of Joseph and Sarah (Barndollar) Alexander. John Alexander married Martha Rose, and with her lived in Fairview Township until his death in 1876. His widow went West in 1878, and lives with her daughter, Mrs. James A. Shout, of Salina, Kas. Their children were: Sarah, married R. C. Clark; Martha, died small; M. L., Maria J., married James A. Shout; John I., Martha, married Joseph Nelson; Rachel E., married Barton Mishler; James E., died April 16, 1875. John, the twin brother of Martha, enlisted in Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died in Salisbury Prison March, 1865. The parents were members of the old Cool Spring Presbyterian Church. Martin L. Alexander was educated in the country schools, and was trained to rural pursuits. He was engaged for thirteen years manufacturing wagon lumber in Sandy Creek Township. He was married September 29, 1863, to Margaret C. Vaughn, daughter of Jacob and Eliza J. (McFatrigh) Vaughn. Jacob Vaughn was born March 13, 1815, to John and Rebecca (French) Vaughn, the parents of Jacob, Sarah, Phoebe, William, Susan, Nancy, John and Eli. John Vaughn was a soldier in the War of 1812. Jacob Vaughn's wife died May 21, 1886, and had blessed her husband with Margaret C., George S., Hugh M., Emma, married Samuel Steele, and Zidania, married Minor Vernon; William B., and John, married Emma Eckels, who is dead, and he has two children, George and James B. Jacob Vaughn learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for fifteen years. He made wagons and buggies for years, and then engaged in the manufacture of wagon material. He invented a machine for cutting out felloes. In 1876 he retired from his trade, and now resides with the subject of this sketch. M. L. Alexander came to his present farm of 100 acres in 1884. His children are: Clara D., married Ed R. Eckels; John H., a teacher; Marvin M., Martha E. He and his family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Fredonia. He is a Republican, and was elected poor director on November 6, 1888.

J. W. ALLISON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 29, 1840, in Hickory Township, to James and Elizabeth J. (Gettis) Allison, natives, the father of Westmoreland County, and of Scotch extraction, and the mother of Ireland, an immigrant to America at the age of six years with her father, Archibald Gettis. They settled in Pittsburgh, where he merchandised for a number of years. He died in 1840 and his widow died in 1854. James H. Allison was engaged in cabinet-making in Pittsburgh when he was married in 1832, and the following year he came to Hickory Township, where he remained for many years. In 1835 he and a Mr. Lightner began a search for coal on their respective farms. The first shaft was sunk on Mr. Lightner's farm, with no success, and the next was on Mr. Allison's farm, which was with good result. His son claims that these were the first coal shafts sunk in Mercer County. Mr. Allison subsequently sold his farm, and died at his home in Illinois in 1863. His widow died August 7, 1885, at the home of J. W. Allison. They had eighteen children, nine of whom grew up: James C., enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers; Thomas C.; J. W., Mary J., married S. J. Wier; Henry J., a merchant at Pittsburgh; Margaret, married John Nelson; Fannie, married F. Bastress; Emma, married Abner Rice, and Joseph. Our subject attended the common schools and Allegheny College, at Meadville, and taught eight terms of school, two of which were in Shelby County, Ind. He enlisted in Company I, Eighth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. Three months afterward he enlisted in Rabb's Light Artillery, but was rejected owing to a wound received in service with Company I. He was married in 1861 to Elizabeth Wilson, and has by her James, Homer, Robert, Edith, Jennie, Mary and Benjamin. Mr. and Mrs. Allison are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Republican. He and his boys are extensively engaged in the dairy business, running a milk wagon to Mercer. They are all farmers, and give especial attention to raising small fruits.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, farmer, post-office North's Mills, was born November 11, 1830, in County Tyrone, Ireland, to Thomas and Elizabeth (Elliott) Armstrong, natives of the same country, where the father died July 2, 1838. His widow came to America in 1842, with her eight children: Elizabeth, married John McCoy; Mary, married Robert McCoy; Jane, married John Walker, and died December 25, 1857; Margaret, married Thomas Mitcheltree; Ann, married Richard Hutchinson; John; Elliott, married Sarah McKay; Matilda, married John Keister. The mother never married again, but died January 20, 1853. She and her husband belonged to the Church of England. Our subject was educated principally in Mercer County. He was married October 1, 1857, to Mary E., a daughter of Malcolm and Jane (Summerville) McComb, natives of Washington County, Penn. Her parents came to Mercer County in an early day, and their children were John, Robert, David, Sarah, Martha, William and Mary E. Mrs. Armstrong was born November 21, 1831, in East Lackawannock Township. Her union with John Armstrong has given her two children: Thomas E., born July 17, 1858, married Florence E. Bromley, a daughter of Michael and Margaret (McCormick) Bromley, by whom he has three children: Margaret S. (Jane died small), John B. and William E. Mr. A. came to his present farm of seventy-three acres in 1866. He and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Democrat.

DANIEL BACKUS, farmer, post-office North's Mills, was born August 31, 1845, in Mercer County, Penn., to Daniel and Mary A. (Kauffman) Backus, natives of Allegheny County, and of Scotch extraction. The parents settled in Delaware Township, this county, about 1837, and there the father died in 1845, and his widow subsequently removed to Fredonia, where she died in 1884. She was the mother of two children: Mary J., married James White, and resides in Fredonia, and Daniel. The father was a farmer and owned 200 acres of land before his death. He belonged, with his wife, to the Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and worked on a farm until 1881, when he sold his farm and bought a saw-mill in Perry Township. This he operated for five months, sold and bought another mill in Cool Spring, ran it four months, then operated a mill in Butler County for six months, thence to Cool Spring, and pursued the same business for nearly two years, after which he ran another mill in Lake Township for two months, and then went to Fredonia and cut a large amount of staves, afterward going to Butler County, and operating a mill, which he sold June 10, 1887, and on December 1, 1887, he located on his farm of fifty-six acres, in Cool Spring Township, which he had purchased in 1884. He married Cyrena Keen, daughter of Reuben and Paulina (Mitchell) Keen, and by her has three children: Mintie, Mary P. and Fred. He was a member of the council of Fredonia Borough for three years, auditor and street commissioner of the same for two years each. He is a Republican, a member of the I. O. O. F., and, with his wife, belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JOHN BESTWICK, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born June 26, 1848, in Mercer County, son of John and Ann (Godsby) Bestwick. He was educated in the common schools, and brought up on a farm. He was married in 1880 to Sadie Moon, daughter of Lewis Moon, of Jackson Township, by whom he has two children: Plummer and Sennett. He settled on his present farm in 1882. It consists of 100 acres, a part of the old Stokely farm, upon which the famous old pioneer sleeps his last sleep. He is a Republican, and an enterprising young man, who always does his share in every public enterprise that has a tendency to build up Mercer County or the community in which he lives. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His brother, Thomas Bestwick, was born November 13, 1841, in Jackson Township, and was married April 5, 1866, to Mary J., daughter of George McEwen, by whom he had John, Charles, George (deceased), Anna, Thomas (deceased), Jennie, Bert and Lester. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and re-enlisted in December, 1863, and served until the close of the war. At the battle of Bull Run he was shot in the right shoulder, and was shot through the clothing several other times. A part of the time he was a sharp-shooter, and bears a record of a brave soldier.

W. D. BOYD, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born December 1, 1842, in Cool Spring Township, son of Joseph and Nancy (Weese) Boyd. The father was a native of Ireland, and came to this county when small, with his parents, Henry and Rebecca Boyd, and was one of five children: John, Henry, Joseph, Catharine, married John Ford, and Elizabeth, married Stephen Horn. Henry and Rebecca were Methodists. Joseph Boyd had by his marriage seven children: W. D., Sarah and Jennie are dead; Mary E., married John Myers; Henry P., Andrew J. and Anna, deceased. Our subject attended the common schools, and was married December 28, 1871, to Mary, daughter of Charles and Rebecca (Porter) McClain, natives of this county, and the parents of the following children: Milton, David, Isabella, Amelia, Martha, Thomas, Arkana, Mary, Julia and John. The mother of Mrs. Boyd is dead, and her father lives in Mercer, married to Jane Jamison. W. D. Boyd had one child by his first marriage, Nannie B., who married Rev. W. P. Graham, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. By his present wife he has one child, Charlie. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. He enlisted in Company D, Two Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served about one year, at the close of the war. He was in the battles before Petersburg and Fort Steadman. He is a staunch Republican, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ROBERT BUXTON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born February 4, 1846, in what is now Jackson Township, this county, to Robert and Ann (Howell) Buxton, natives of England, and who came to America with their respective parents and settled in Mercer County. The children of Robert and Ann Buxton were: Charles, was in the war from Lawrence County; Albert, Robert, Lizzie, married Thomas McKinney, and Henry. The mother died, and the father was again married, to Ellen Levey, by whom he had five children: Anna, married Harvey Umphrey; Blanche, married William Riley; Thomas, John and Nellie, deceased. The father resides with his last wife in Lawrence County. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was brought up at farm labor. His father gave him about $1,500, to which he has added until he is worth $15,000. He and brother Albert, and sister Lizzie, began for themselves on a farm in Cool Spring Township, which they divided many years later with entire satisfaction. Mr. Buxton was married September 28, 1871, to Miss Maggie Filson, by whom he has three children: Welma I., Harry and Robert, all attending the Mercer public schools. Mr. Buxton is the owner of ninety-five acres in Liberty Township, and fifteen acres, well improved, near Mercer, where he now resides. He is a Republican, with his wife belongs to the Second Presbyterian Church at Mercer, and is one of the enterprising, public-spirited citizens of this county.

J. L. BYERS, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born June 15, 1823, in the portion of Mercer County which is now included in Lawrence County. His parents, Samuel and Mary (Gundy) Byers, had eight children: Margaret, married William Robison, and is deceased; Rebecca, Elizabeth, married Robert Atwell; J. L.; Mary A. became the second wife of William Robison; Elitha, married J. P. McKinley; Daniel C., Christina, married Marshall Couch and Rufus Yard. J. L. Byers was educated in the common schools in this and Venango Counties. He was married August 19, 1846, to Sarah Steel, daughter of William and Esther (Ewing) Steel, and by her he has had six children: Josephine

S., the wife of D. R. P. Zahniser; Mary L., married William Sloss; Hedessa M., married Charles Ayer; Margaret M., married William Gilbert, and she was fatally burned by the explosion of a lamp at her home in Mercer, on the evening of November 12, 1887; Daniel O. and Eletha S. Mr. Byers is engaged in farming and keeping hotel. He kept hotel at Waterloo, Venango County, for three years, and extensively at his present place for five years. In politics he is a Democrat. His brother, Daniel C. Byers, who makes his home with him, was for four years a member of the lumber firm of Thorn, Byers & Co., of Mercer. He is now in his seventh year of employment by the Shenango & Allegheny Railroad as a carpenter. Mrs. Sarah Byers died March 26, 1888, at the age of sixty-three years.

GEORGE H. CALDWELL, steward of County Poor Farm, was born December 9, 1845, in Deer Creek Township. His father, Perry, was born in Crawford County, Penn., where his father, Charles Caldwell, settled when he came from Ireland. Perry Caldwell first saw the light of day in 1818, and came to Mercer County about the year 1838. He died in 1883, and his wife, Marilla, whose maiden name was Stright, died June 3, 1886, the mother of the following children: Oliver, Norman, deceased; Hudson D., deceased; George H., Jennie, married Robert J. McClure, and is dead; Eva, married John Vaughn; Ella became the second wife of Robert J. McClure; Lewis, and Lillie, married Frank Moyer. The parents were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the father was once a director of the poor, and was a staunch Republican. Amzy Stright came from Washington County at an early day, and settled on the farm where M. D. Scurry lives, in Cool Spring Township. He afterward became a resident of Deer Creek Township, and his home was a station of the Underground Railroad. He died three days before Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation took effect, thus being deprived of the realization of the ambition of his earnest life. He had six children who grew up: Sarah, married Nathan Axtell, and is now a widow in Athens, Ohio; Ithiel, Marilla, deceased; Joseph, Levina, deceased, and Terrissa is dead. Amzy Stright married Mary Dodd, daughter of Ithiel Dodd, who gave the ground on which the old Presbyterian Church was built at Fairfield. Lawrence Stright, a brother of Amzy, preached at the New School Presbyterian Church, which was built about one and a half miles north of New Vernon; he helped to build up the organization, and the old church was afterward moved away by James Stright, and is used for a barn. In this church a Rev. Burchard preached who was a cousin of the famous "R. R. R." Burchard. Lawrence Stright organized a church in Sunville, Venango County, where he preached until his death. George H. Caldwell was educated in the common schools, and was brought up at hard farm labor. He enlisted in Company H, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three months. He owns a part of the old Stright homestead, and was married October 18, 1877, to Miss Mina Cubbison, daughter of Josiah and Mary (Gamble) Cubbison, who live in Fairview Township. He was engaged for a number of years in building bridges in Mercer County by contract. He was elected steward of the poor-farm in 1886, and so satisfactorily did he attend to the duties that he was re-elected in 1888. He is a staunch Republican, and lends his influence to the best interests of the party.

W. A. Cook, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born October 30, 1839, in England, to John and Sarah (West) Cook, natives of the same country. The mother was a cousin of Mr. West, late British minister to America. The parents of Mr. Cook came to Canada in 1846, bringing their seven children, Jonathan, John, Henry, W. A., James, Hannah and Emma. The father died in 1872 and the mother in 1877; they were members of the Methodist Church. W. A. Cook was educated in the common schools and at an academy taught by Peter Mc-Tavish, by whom he was taught book-keeping with the view of following it for a profession. He was employed by John A. McDonald & Co., wholesale dry goods men at Toronto, Canada, as book-keeper from 1855 to 1858, when he withdrew on account of declining health. He subsequently resumed his profession, but found each time that the confinement would not agree with him. He came to Mercer County in 1871, and was employed by Benjamin Henlein, of Greenville, in the lumber business for six years. He then engaged in the saw-mill business on his own resources, in Cool Spring Township, for a successful period of four years. In 1884 he sold some land in Canada, and bought ten acres where he now lives in Cool Spring Township. He was married in 1874 to Nancy E., daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Shaffer) Livermore, and has four children: John W., Arthur W., Elizabeth J. and Edith M. He and wife are members of the Jackson Centre Methodist Episcopal Church.

ISAAC HOMER, farmer, post-office Otter Creek, was born December 25, 1837, in Delaware Township, Mercer County. His parents were Peter and Margaret (Rose) Homer, natives of the same township. The subject's father died in 1856 and his mother in 1883; both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Their children were: Isaac, Catharine, both living; Jacob, a member of Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, died in service; Henry, Harriet and Elmira, the last deceased. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and worked on a farm. He began for himself when twenty years old. He was married October 28, 1858, to Sophia L. Keen, daughter of Reuben and Paulina (Mitchell) Keen, natives of Maine, who were the parents of eleven children: Hannah L., Lorana A., Sophia L., Nancy J., William R., Irena, Cyrena C., Cordelia P., Oliver O., Hezekiah O. and Polly A. The father is dead, and the mother lives near Fredonia. In 1860 our subject, with his wife, went to Illinois and worked in a stone quarry for one year. He then enlisted in Company F, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war. On his return from the war he joined his wife in Pennsylvania, and engaged in farming. They have had six children: Mary M., Oris W., both dead; Paulina M.; Arthur W., teacher; Elsie J. and Ellis H. Mr. and Mrs. Homer are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Fredonia, and he is a Republican.

JOHN JOHNSTON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born May 20, 1816, in Mercer County, to Zachariah and Jane Grace (Todd) Johnston. The father was born in County Derry, Ireland, came to America in 1798, and settled on the farm where our subject now lives. His union with Miss Todd gave him eight children: Robert, Jane, Mary, Zachariah, John, Grace, Margaret and James. He died in 1828 and his widow in 1867, both members of the United Presbyterian Church. John Johnston was educated in a log cabin at the time when the Indians were yet to be seen. He learned carpentering, and during a winter or two he worked in the construction of locks on the Erie Canal. He has 130 acres, 100 of which he cleared. He was married in 1838 to Mary A. Jennings, who bore him one child, who with the mother died in 1839. He was again married in 1841 to Sarah J. Todd, daughter of John Todd, Jr., and had by her five children: Margaret; Frances, married Samuel Landis; Zachariah; John, married Caroline Parkes; Rebecca A., married George Crouser; Nellie, married Marvin Gildersleeve. Mr. Johnston was captain of a militia company for nine years, and at the time of the Mexican War. He and wife are members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer, and he is a Democrat. He erected a steam saw-mill in 1872 on his farm, which is still in operation. Mrs. Johnston is a daughter of John and Margaret (Smith) Todd, the parents of James, Smith C., Margaret, Sarah J., Andrew, Elizabeth, Mary A., Rebecca, Rachel and Frances. Margaret Smith was born in 1795 in Montgomery County, Penn., to Valentine and Mary M. (Spies) Smith, who came to this county about 1803. They had two children: Jacob and Margaret. Valentine was in the War of 1812. Mrs. Johnston says that she, her sister, Margaret, and two brothers, James and Smith C., went to the cranberry region near where William Paxton now lives, just east of Pardoe, and one day they killed fifty rattlesnakes. She also says that in the year 1845 she was attending to the cows, and looking for the calf she found it lying near the house in terrible agony, and when she came close to it the dog warned her of danger by biting her heels several times. She went to the calf, stooped over it to raise its head, and there, to her astonishment, found a large hoop snake with its stinger fastened in the little animal. She says she had an old shoe on, with a hole in the toe, and the reptile bit at it and left teeth marks on her toe nail. She killed the snake, and a short time afterward her husband killed its mate in the wheat field.

GEORGE KELSO, farmer, post-office Otter Creek, was born November 4, 1838, in Lawrence County, Penn., to John and Ann (McWilliams) Kelso, natives of Lawrence County, and of Scotch and Irish extraction, respectively. The parents resided ten years near Hadley, this county, and then removed to Lawrence County, where the father died in 1879 and the mother in 1877. Their children were: Mary, married Haslet Miller; George, Letitia, Joseph, Rebecca, married William H. Pasco, of Nebraska; Jane, married David Hadley; John, Olive, married James Cooper, who is dead, and she resides in Nebraska; three others died when young. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up on a farm. He enlisted in Company G, One Hundred Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years; was in the battles of his regiment and wounded in the right temple in front of Petersburg. His brother Joseph enlisted in the same company and served nearly four years; he was also wounded in the head. On his return from the war our subject worked on his father's farm until married, February 8, 1865, to Sarah M. Walker, born April 4, 1844, daughter of Samuel and Eliza (Nelson) Walker, who are mentioned elsewhere. He and wife settled on a farm in Lawrence County until they came to their present one, known as the "Matthew Thompson farm." Here they have a beautiful home. They have had eleven children, nine of whom are living: Robert O., Samuel, Joannah, Elizabeth, Joseph H., Mary, George, Nelson O. and William D. He and wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church, and he is a staunch Republican.

JOSEPH KENT, deceased, was born in Staffordshire, England, August 7, 1807, and immigrated to America in 1833. The same year he, in company with a number of others, went down the rivers on a canal boat to New Orleans. During this trip he had the pleasure of shaking hands with Mohawk, the great Indian chief. Mr. Kent was overseer of a company of laborers while at New Orleans for a short period. He returned to Cincinnati, remained some time, and in 1835 he came to what is now Wilmington Township, Mercer County, where he was employed as a farm laborer. He subsequently purchased land in territory now included in Perry Township. This he soon sold and bought the land in Cool Spring Township where his family reside. Mr. Kent was one of eight children, of whom two survive: John, a local Methodist minister, and Henry is a manufacturer of needles and other articles, both residents of England. Joseph Kent was married to Jane, daughter of James and Mary (Richard) Colleyer, and with her settled first in Pittsburgh, where he was engaged in business for some time. From there he removed to the farm spoken of in this sketch in Perry Township. Mrs. Jane Kent, the granddaughter of Charles and Mary Richard, died May 20, 1888. She emigrated from England, her native country, to America with her parents when about ten years old. She was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and was highly esteemed by all of her acquaintances. Mr. Kent died April 22, 1884; was an attendant of the Methodist Episcopal Church, an upright citizen, a good husband and father. His children were seven: Ellen, married Andrew B. Hosack; Hannah, Henry J., Mary, Cassie, Thomas J. and one (deceased) young.

CHARLES LEES, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born October 16, 1822, to James and Charlotte Lees, natives of England. The family came to Mercer County about 1828, and settled where John H. Lees now lives, in East Lackawannock Township. James Lees was engaged for many years in his native country in weaving silk, and his wife was overseer of 500 girls in the same factory. Their children were William, James, Mary, Charles, Anna, John H., Samuel and Robert. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church, and are buried in the old grave-yard at Mercer. Our subject was married to Jane Donaldson, born February 23, 1821. She is a daughter of Isaac and Rebecca (Shannon) Donaldson, who became acquainted while reaping wheat together. They subsequently became engaged, and published their intention of marriage two weeks prior to the wedding day, in the pulpit, with the "text," "And here Isaac sent for Rebecca." Other mention is made of them in the sketch of S. S. Donaldson, of Jackson Township. Charles Lees and wife have had five children: Charles R., deceased; William D., married Melda Ray, daughter of Robert and Lydia (Carnes) Ray, and has by her four children, Charles C., Fred W., Hazel R. and Capt. Howe; Mary E., married Charles Clark; Sarah E., married A. H. Clark; infant is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lees settled at marriage in Venango County, where they remained until April 21, 1853, when they left, and in 1854 came to this county and rented for two years in Wilmington Township. April 2, 1856, they moved to the farm where they now reside. He has improved about eighty-two acres; has been township treasurer two terms and supervisor. He and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Jackson Centre, and he is a Republican. The following is from Everts' History of Mercer County, which we give space for that it may be preserved by the family: "A story is told of the grandmother of Mrs. Charles Lees and S. S. Donaldson, which is worth preserving. The lady's name was Martha Reed (generally known as Rebecca), and her father was one of Gen. Forbes' soldiers, who, in company with a number of others, left the army in its western expedition, in 1758, and settled in the Ligonier Valley, in Westmoreland County. Mr. Reed had a family of four children, of whom Martha was the eldest, a son named George being second in age. Miss Reed, like other women at the time, living at the fort they occupied, frequently indulged in out-door sports with the male members of the settlement, and became noted for her extraordinary fleetness of foot. A young man named Samuel Shannon was the only one who could successfully compete with her in a race, and the two were afterward married. On a certain day, just after harvest was over, in 1778, Miss Reed and a lady friend, accompanied by George Reed and another male companion, started for a blackberry patch two miles away. On the way they met a Mr. McDowell on horseback, carrying a gun, and they had hardly recognized him before they were fired on by a party of Indians from an ambush near by. At the fire young Reed fell mortally wounded; the other young man was made a prisoner, and Miss Reed's lady companion killed. McDowell escaped in one direction, and Miss Reed started for the fort on a run, with the fleetest Indian of the band at her heels, determined to make her a prisoner. She led him a race of three-quarters of a mile, and was met by young Shannon, who observed her plight, and started to her rescue, reaching her just outside the fort. The Indian, seeing his prey escape him, turned and ran back, and was ever afterward looked upon with contempt by his brother warriors. Even the chieftain's daughter, to whom he was shortly to have been married, gave him the cold shoulder, and would have no more to do with the brave who had let a 'pale-face squaw' outrun him.'

CHARLES MADDEN, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born August 15, 1825, in Beaver County, Penn., near Darlington, to William, born in Northumberland County, and Elizabeth (Flickinger) Madden. They came to Darlington after the War of 1812, and began making a home in the woods. The father died in Lancaster County, Penn., in 1871, at the age of ninety years, and his wife died some time prior, at the ripe age of eighty-five years. William Madden was in the War of 1812, and was at Buffalo and Erie. His father, Joseph Madden, was seven years in service under Washington; was with him at the capture of the Hessians at Trenton, N. J.; during some battle was shot in the ankle, and died near Danville, Penn. He was of Scotch-Irish extraction, while his wife came from the Highlands of Scotland. William Madden married Elizabeth Flickinger, and had William, Mary, Daniel, Martha, James, Charles, Montgomery, Elizabeth and George. The father had by a former marriage Joseph and Sevilla. He and his last wife belonged to the Church of England. Our subject was educated in Enon Valley, and was brought up on a farm. In 1853 he married Mary J. Shively, of Lewisville, Ohio, and by her had six children: Margaret, married Almon Young; Martha, married Hiram Cozad; Eva L., Alice S. and two who died young. In 1862 Mr. Madden came to his present farm of forty acres, in Cool Spring Township. He has also sixteen acres in Jefferson Township. He has always taken a deep interest in education, and gave his children the best advantages of learning his means would afford. He and his family are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. He is a Republican.

CHARLES McDUGALL, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born May 5, 1830, to Charles and Mary (Dever) McDougall, natives, the father of Edinburgh, Scotland, and the mother of Mercer County. The father came to America when twenty-six years of age, and settled in Franklin County, Penn., where he was for a few years engaged in weaving woolen goods. After the death of the father of Mrs. Mary (Dever) McDougall, her mother went to Franklin County, where Mary and Charles were married, and it is believed that they walked soon afterward to Pittsburgh, and thence to Pine Township, to land owned by her father. Charles died February 4, 1875, and Mary in December, 1879. Their children were: Infant, William, George, Charles, John, James, was shot at the battle of Fredericksburg; Thomas, served three years in the late war; Joseph, died at the age of eighteen months; Joseph (2); Jane, married William White, and Mary deceased. The parents were United Presbyterians. Our subject was educated in a log cabin of the most ancient style, and was brought up at farm labor. He began for himself when twenty years old, with 25 cents of his own and $2 which he borrowed from his brother. He was employed by Abraham Fisher on a farm, at $11 per month during the summer, and $8 during the winter months. His vocation, after one year with Fisher, was various, such as hauling coal, working on the railroad, etc. He was married to Eveline Magee November 22, 1855. She was born February

6, 1838, in this county, and was the daughter of Patrick and Sables (Gill) Magee. Her father was a native of Path Valley, Franklin Co., Penn., and there married Nancy Fagan, who came with him to Mercer County, and later died, being the mother of four children: John, Mary, James and George. Her father subsequently married Sables Gill, a native of Butler County, and had five children: William, Eveline, Nancy, Adam and one who died young. Mr. and Mrs. Magee died in Wolf Creek Township, and the latter was a member of the Seceder Church. Our subject enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three months. His children are: Mary J., married George B. Paxton; William V., married Lizzie Bentley; Nancy, is single and at home; Ida married Henry Barber September 1, 1886; Catharine E., married Charles Pew; Lizzie, married Henry Steingrabe March 29, 1888; Emma, James A., George M., Charles and Adda, deceased. Mr. McDougall is interested in the Grove City College, and was one of the first projectors of the same. By strict economy, hard labor and frugality he increased his $2 and 25 cents to the value of a farm which he sold for $8,000, and bought his present one in Cool Spring Township. When young he naturally imbibed the Democracy of his father; but one day, when listening to a conversation between two men on the subject, "Of how little darkies are bought and sold," he renounced his early political proclivities, and, when the Republican party came into existence, he was found among its most earnest advocates. His family are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and he used to go bare-footed to church to listen to Rev. Edward Small preach.

GEORGE McEWEN, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born November 16, 1818, in Mercer County, Penn., to John and Jane (Moore) McEwen. John McEwen, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born in Scotland, was sent to Ireland on missionary business, and was attacked by twelve persons, who cut his wife's breasts off, which inhuman act so enraged the reverend gentleman that he sailed into them and succeeded in killing ten of the twelve, and escaped with his wife to Maryland, and soon after to Adams County, Penn., where his wife recovered and bore him ten children, one of whom, named Samuel, came to Mercer County about 1805 and settled on the farm where John McEwen now lives, in a log house, in which it has been claimed that the first court was held in Mercer County. Here Samuel died December 4, 1819, and his wife July 24, 1825, the parents of the following children: Thomas, Samuel B., John, Sarah, married Henry A. Anderson; Betsey, married Samuel Scott; Margaret, married John Moore. Samuel McEwen was a Revolutionary soldier from Adams County. John McEwen, the father of our subject, was married in 1815 to Jane Moore, resulting in eight children: Samuel, Thomas, George, William, Mary, Elizabeth, John and Thomas (2). John McEwen was famous for his skill in bleeding people in this county, and his son John has the instruments used by him for that purpose. George, whose name heads this memoir, was educated in the common schools and brought up at rural pursuits. He was married to Jane, a daughter of John and Mary (Legg) King, natives of England, and who came to America in 1829 and settled in the State of Delaware. They came to Mercer County in 1836 and settled in Cool Spring Township. Her mother was thrown from a wagon against a large stone by the side of the road on what is known as Ball Hill, on the Franklin and Mercer road, her head striking the stone and injuring her so badly that she expired thirty minutes afterward. The children of her parents were: Robert, James, Hannah, Jane, Edward, John, William, Nancy, John Joseph, Mary A. and Newark. The children of George McEwen are: Mary, married Thomas Bestwick; John, married Mary J. Kennedy; Nancy, Amanda, Hannah, William, married Fannie Grace; George and Thomas are dead. He is a Republican, and he and wife are members of the Cool Spring Church. John McEwen, the brother of our subject, was born March 14, 1827, and was married in 1848 to Jane Hartley, resulting in nine children: Frances, Mary, George, Joseph, Ida and four deceased in infancy. His second marriage was to Christina Kirker. Mr. John McEwen enlisted in Company D, Two Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was slightly wounded by a piece of shell striking him over the right eye.

SAMUEL McMILLAN, deceased, was born June 13, 1814, in Mercer County, to John and Isabella McMillan, the parents of Samuel and Mary, the latter of whom married Israel Forker. His grandfather was John McMillan, deceased, of Cool Spring Township. Samuel McMillan was educated in the country schools, learned stone-cutting, and worked at it and on canals together with farming. He was married to Mary Hosack October 22, 1844. She is a daughter of Col. Thomas and Margaret (Johnston) Hosack, of Adams County, Penn. Her parents had: Elizabeth, married Isaac Patterson; Martha, married John Armstrong; Henry H., Mary, Jane, married Isaac Downs; Thomas, lives in Logan County, Ohio; Margaret, married Adam Forker; James J., Nancy, deceased wife of A. J. Zahniser; William, deceased. The parents were United Presbyterians. Samuel McMillan was blessed with five children by his marriage: Thomas H., Margaret, died at the age of three years; Elizabeth, married Alexander Hunter and lives in Virginia; Isabella, a school-teacher of fine reputation, and Nancy, who died young. Mr. McMillan died May 17, 1876, and was a Democrat. His widow resides on the home place, was born July 16, 1815, and is a member of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. Further mention of the Hosack and McMillan families appears in the historical chapters of this work.

WILLIAM MILLER, deceased, was born in Wolf Creek Township (now Pine Township), Mercer County, March 15, 1801. His father, John Miller, was born near Glasgow, Scotland, immigrated to the United States in 1789 or 1790, and set locks on the Union Canal in the eastern part of Pennsylvania. In 1792 he removed to Pittsburgh, and cut stone for the first courthouse built in Allegheny County, and for many years afterward furnished cut stone for building purposes. The deceased removed with his parents to Pittsburgh in 1806, and in 1817 the family again settled in Wolf Creek Township, and in 1824 he located on the Magee farm, in Fairview Township (then Cool Spring). Here he remained until 1834, when he settled on the farm in Cool Spring Township now owned by Mrs. Mary Miller and A. S. Reed, and carried on farming in connection with merchandising and the manufacture of potash until 1865, from which year until 1874 he lived in Venango County, and then resided in Allegheny County until 1884, when he came to Cool Spring Township, there lived until December, 1887, when he established his home in Jonestown, N. Y., where he died November 17, 1888. He was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church for many years. He served a term as county commissioner, one as county auditor, and was postmaster at Petroleum Centre, Penn.

JOHN MILLER, deceased, was born November 18, 1829, in Fairview Township, Mercer County. He was a son of William Miller and a brother of Hon. S. H. Miller, of Mercer. He was brought up at rural pursuits, and was married to Mary E. Tait in 1854. She is a daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Smith) Tait. Her mother survives, and is the daughter of Furgus and Agnes (Giffin) Smith. Furgus Smith was born in County Derry, Ireland, in 1763, and immigrated to Westmoreland County, this State, in 1783, where he married

Agnes Giffin, a native of Westmoreland County. He came with his wife to Mercer County in 1801 or 1802, and settled for a short time in the forks of the Shenango, and in 1808 they located on the farm now owned by Charles Vernon, where he died January 1, 1853, and she July 15, 1854. They were the parents of eight children: Eleanor, married Alex. McCullough; Martha, married William Stinson; Hannah, died young; John, Nancy, married Rev. James McKean; Rebecca, married Samuel Tait, and had four children: William B., Samuel W., Mary E. and Furgus S.; Mary, Amelia T., married Henry Burton. Samuel Tait was a son of the distinguished Rev. Samuel Tait, the founder of the old Cool Spring Church. He died in 1837, and his widow survives at the ripe old age of eighty years. Mrs. Miller reared only one, an adopted, child, whose name was changed by law to Anna G. Miller, and who was married October 12, 1887, to J. C. North. Mrs. Miller is a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, in the faith of which her husband died September 21, 1871. Mention of the Tait and Miller families will be found elsewhere.

S. G. MILLER, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 4, 1820, to Robert and Nancy (Dean) Miller. The parents came to Mercer County in 1833, and settled on a rented farm for five years, when they became able to purchase a farm in Wolfe Creek Township, where they lived a number of years, but finally moved to Butler County, where they died. Their children were: Robert, Mary, S. G., Nancy and James A. Our subject attended school in the country, and began for himself when twenty years of age, with just 10 cents, with which he bought a handkerchief. He hired to Matthew McLean for $10 per month to labor on a farm. Ten years later he bought a farm in Wolf Creek Township where he remained for twenty-six years, and in connection with his farm labor ran a huxter wagon through the oil regions for three years. He was married in 1850 to Eliza Cross, daughter of Samuel and Letitia Cross, and has had no children. She died in 1878, and he was again married, to Minerva Emerson, a daughter of Ira and Delia (Chapman) Emerson. They came to Cool Spring Township in October, 1877, and bought sixty acres of good land where they now reside. He is a Republican, and has been assessor and collector four years. He and wife are members of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mercer. They have reared two children: Mary Moore, who married M. C. Holland, and George W. Cathers, born October 13, 1861, son of B. W., and Rosannah (McMullen) Cathers, both of whom died when George was young. George married Lottie B., a daughter of William and Elizabeth Chambers, and has one child, Leslie M. He farms with Mr. Miller as a partner.

JOHN NORTH, farmer, post-office North's Mills, was born February 18, 1831, in Cool Spring Township, on the farm where he now lives. His father, William North, was born in 1777, in Derbyshire, England, and was there married to Mary Davile, a native of the same country. They immigrated to America about 1819, and settled for three years in either Worth or Sandy Lake Township, thence removed to where John North now resides. William died March 6, 1860, and his widow died in 1865. He improved about 325 acres from the green woods, and at one time owned over 500 acres. He, of course, was content to use the oxen in the early cultivation of his farm. He and his wife were members of the Cool Spring congregation of Presbyterians. Their children were: Samuel, married Jane McFarland, and after her death he married Lizzie J. Brockleyhurst; Sarah, married James Miller; William, married Catharine Zahniser in 1844; Elizabeth, married David Zahniser; Lucy, married John L. Zahniser; Mary, married Rev. Samuel Bowman; Maria, deceased, and John. Our subject attended the common schools, and was married to Rebecca Zahniser in 1859. She is a daughter of Jacob and Melinda (Smith) Zahniser, whose sketch appears in Jackson Township. By this union he has had six children: William T., married Eva C. Supple; Mary G., married D. L. McMillan; Melinda S., married to W. W. Runkle; Jacob Z., Ira C. and John N. Mr. North has been school director for twelve years. He helped to defend the cause of his country by hiring a substitute for the war. He and wife are members of the Cool Spring Presbyterian Church, and he is a staunch Republican and a strong temperance advocate.

S. B. PAGE, farmer, post-office North's Mills, was born June 22, 1840. His father, John B. Page, was a son of Joseph Page, and was born November 11, 1789, in Philadelphia, and married Sarah S. Steele February 14, 1812. She was born March 14, 1793, and died January 30, 1837, after blessing her husband with the following children: Deborah M., born November 8, 1812; John M., born May 1, 1814, died February 29, 1817; William M., born February 29, 1816; Anna E., born August 22, 1818; Sarah S., born January 1, 1820; Hiram R., born December 13, 1821; Washington B., born August 16, 1823; Elias H., born January 21, 1825; Henrietta F., born December 24, 1826; Nancy W., born August 15, 1829; James B., born October 22, 1831; Margaret J., born September 6, 1833, and Adam P., born March 1, 1836. The father was again married, to Susannah Engle, born August 27, 1800, by whom he had four children: Joseph W., born January 15, 1839; S. B., born June 22, 1840; Thomas T., born December 31, 1841, died in 1841, and Mathias L., born July 24, 1843. This last wife died March 22, 1825. The father was a merchant for many years in Angelica, county seat of Alleghany County, N. Y., and was sheriff of that county for twelve years. About the year 1830 he came to Mercer, and for a short time was in partnership with Andrew Patterson in the mercantile business. He sold to Mr. Patterson, and removed to a farm of 212 acres in Cool Spring Township, where he lived until he sold the farm in 1866. He died March 8, 1873, was in the War of 1812, from Warren County, and was a Democrat. S. B. Page was educated in the common schools and learned carpentering. He spent nine years in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. He bought fifty-five acres, where he now resides, in 1868, and was married April 28, 1869, to Miss Emily M. Service, by whom he had two children: Adda A., born December 22, 1872, and Engle, born March 22, 1880. He was elected a justice of the peace for Cool Spring Township in 1883, and is still serving. He is a Democrat, and, with his wife, belongs to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Jackson Centre.

W. H. REED, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born May 3, 1822, in Trumbull County, Ohio, to William and Martha (Thompson) Reed, natives of Allegheny and Fayette Counties, Pa., respectively, and the parents of five children: John, Elizabeth, married Moses Brownlee; Mary, married David Brownlee; W. H., and Nancy, married James Milligan. The parents are dead, and were Presbyterians. William H. Reed was educated in the common schools, and was brought up at rural pursuits. He began for himself with but little means. He was married in 1845 to Anna Hoskins, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary Hoskins. Her mother died when she was ten years old, and she lived with her aunt, Mrs. Thornton, of New Castle. Mr. and Mrs. Reed settled at their marriage in Trumbull County, Ohio, until 1847, when he bought 100 acres in Cool Spring Township, and moved to it. He engaged then more extensively in putting out sheep to various farmers on certain terms. He was only preceded in this business in this county by Wilson Thorn, of Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. Reed continued to deal in the sheep business extensively until after the close of the war. His children are: John T., married Emma Boyd, and has three children: Gertrude, W. H. and Boyd; W. F., married Isabella Babcock, and has four children: Alice M., Edward B., Harry S. and Rebecca M.; A. S., married Loretta, daughter of James McEwen, and has three children: Stella I., Frank C. and Mary. William Reed and wife are members of the Cool Spring Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican.

WILLIAM RODGERS, farmer, post-office Otter Creek, was born February 11, 1807, in Mercer County. His father, Samuel, was born in Ireland, and came to Delaware County, Penn., about 1780, and later to Fayette County, where he married Mary Henry, and in 1798 with her settled in Greene Township, this county, where they bought a tract of 400 acres. Here he died in 1839, and his widow September 20, 1865. They had nine children: Betsey, married John Brooks and afterward Joseph Mathers, and she died November 26, 1887, at the home of our subject; Nancy, married Charles Love; Sarah, died July 22, 1879; William, Mary, Jane, Margaret, Robert and James. Mrs. Samuel Rodgers rode to Mercer County on horseback, while her husband walked and drove a cow. They packed their household goods and hired two men to bring them in a boat down the Monongahela and Ohio, up the Beaver to New Castle, and then up the Shenango to near their cabin, in what is now Greene Township. Robert and Samuel Henry, brothers of Mrs. Rodgers, had previously come to Crawford County, and on the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers they walked six miles, and in one day, with the assistance of Mr. Rodgers, they built a cabin 16x16 feet. Here Mr. Rodgers did a large amount of weaving. William Rodgers was educated in a log cabin school-house, which became so cold at times that the ink froze on the goose-quill pen which he used. He settled in Cool Spring Township in 1833, and was married March 27, 1834, to Nancy Bowman, daughter of Robert Bowman, which resulted in five children: Mary J., Robert, Margaret E., Samuel R. and Nancy B. Mrs. Rodgers is dead, while he resides on the old place. He was baptized in the Reformed Presbyterian, or Covenanters, Church when a child, and made a public confession when twenty years old. His wife was a consistent member of the same church. Their oldest son, Robert, was born October 12, 1839, in Cool Spring Township, and was married October 14, 1869, to Eunice Alexander, daughter of Samuel and Ruth (Dodd) Alexander, the parents of the following children: Samuel, Elizabeth, Joseph and Jennie. The children of Robert and Eunice are: William A., Minnie E., Nancy R., Albert W., Samuel B., Robert W., Myrtle and Norris L. Samuel R. Rodgers married Mary Godfrey, and has six children: Edward J., Mary E., Nancy E., Jennie R., Clara A. and Alice B. P. Nancy Rodgers became the second wife of John B. Maxwell, of Findley Township, and is the mother of seven children.

M. D. SCURRY, farmer and contractor, post-office Otter Creek, was born March 25, 1824, in County Kilkenny, Ireland, his parents, James and Eleanor (DeLahanty) Scurry, natives of the same country, and also parents of John, Walter, Mary and William D. John published a newspaper in the Irish language in Waterford, Ireland; Walter, a dry goods merchant in Waterford; Mary is the widow of Michael Dunphy, and resides in Peoria, Ill.; William D. is a ranchman in Victoria, Australia. James Scurry, the father of the above named children, died in his native country in 1824. He was educated in the college at Kilkenny, and was the author of several works in the Irish language, and translated a number of works from the English, Latin and Hebrew into the Irish language. He was for many years employed in the Four Courts, Castle and Royal Irish Academy, in Dublin, on the translation of old Irish documents. Mr. Scurry and all his family were pronounced Catholics in their religious belief. Our subject was educated in a general literary school in Waterford, Ireland, and brought up on a farm and clerking for his brother Walter. He came to Rochester, N. Y., in 1849, and soon afterward took contracts on the construction of the New York & Erie Canal, New York Central, Erie & Lake Shore Railroads. In 1860 he came to Mercer County, and took a contract on the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, and built the greater part of it from Jamestown to New Castle. He then built the Bear Creek, now the Pittsburgh, Shenango & Lake Erie, from Greenville to Pardoe. He subsequently built the Sharon Railway and other short branches in this county, also built the second track on Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad, in the State of New York. Mr. Scurry was married in 1853 to Mary Sharpe, daughter of Daniel Sharpe, a farmer and contractor, now deceased, but who then lived in Monroe County, N. Y. His union was blessed with ten children, seven still living: Daniel M., Rose E., William M., James B., Mary, Michael J. and Alice. Mr. Scurry is a staunch Democrat, and though an American first, is an ardent Irish nationalist and home ruler.

JAMES SIMPSON, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born February 18, 1848, in Cool Spring Township, to Robert and Mary (Johnston) Simpson. Robert and Mary were married in 1835, and their children were: Robert, Mary, James, Almira, Alexander and Celia. The father died May 24, 1865, and his widow lives with her daughter, Mrs. Albert Buxton. Their oldest son, Robert, left home when fifteen years old and has never been heard of since. Our subject was educated in the common schools and was brought up at farm labor. He was married June 13, 1877, to Clara Collier, daughter of Simon and Elizabeth (Swarts) Collier, natives of the State of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Simpson have had the following children: Perry, deceased; Freddie, Eva, deceased; Mary, deceased, and Bertha. He owns fifty acres of good land, is a Democrat, and he and wife attend the Second United Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

BENJAMIN STOKELY.—The subject of this memoir, Benjamin Stokely, was born in the State of Delaware in October, 1766. The family of which he was a member moved to the western side of the mountains in 1776. A short time afterward the western settlements were very much disturbed by murdering and plundering inroads of the Indians, incited by the British Government, the policy of which was so severely denounced by the Earl of Chatham in the British Parliament. The forts at Red Stone, Grave Creek, Catfish, etc., were the places that the settlers fled to for safety in Westmoreland, Fayette and Washington Counties. It was in these troublous times that young Benjamin Stokely received his early training in the life of a backwoodsman. Between 1779 and 1784 he learned to be both a shoemaker and a tanner, improving every opportunity in the meantime to go to school. In 1785 he found and embraced an opportunity to make a surveyor of himself, and in the fall of that year was employed as an assistant under Griffith Evans, of Philadelphia, who was then engaged in surveying the Third District of Donation Lands. From 1786 to 1789 he was a clerk in the office of the register and recorder of Washington County, during which time he studied Latin, and at the close of which he married Miss Esther Alexander, full sister of Benjamin and Joseph Alexander, and half-sister of William and John Alexander, all of whom afterward settled in this county, in the neighborhood of Mr. Stokely. In the year 1792 he was appointed surveyor of the Fourth and Fifth Donation Districts, which were united and called the Third, and which lie in the southern part of the county. In the fall of 1794 and the spring of 1795 a number of warrants were put into his hands in his office at Pittsburgh, and on the 1st of May he started to survey his district and to locate the warrants put in his hands. This surveying expedition came to a speedy end on the 8th of June, in consequence of a letter from Capt. Heath, of Fort Franklin, informing him of the murder of two white men, near Conneaut, by the Indians, and advising him that he and his party were in great danger of being cut off. This letter was dated June 6, 1795, and sent by a friendly Indian, who delivered it on the 7th. In August of this year Wayne's treaty with the Ohio and other Indians was effected, after which it was deemed safe for the surveying party to return, which they did in October, continuing at their work until the first week in December, when, their provisions being exhausted, they set their faces for Pittsburgh. They sought what was to them a new route, starting from near where Mercer stands, and proceeding by way of the Shenango and Mahoning country, over streams swollen by recent heavy rains, wading swamps and suffering considerably from cold, hunger and drenching rains, until they reached the town of Beaver, previously known as Fort McIntosh, where they first got the great comfort of bread at their meals. The next spring saw Mr. Stokely and his party again at their surveys. The survey of the Third District had been completed the year previous, and his work then was to levy the warrants in his hands. This was completed in June, 1796, when the party returned to the settlement on the other side of the river. In the fall of this year, October, 1796, he moved his family to the farm he settled on the banks of the Cool Spring, in the township of that name, where he resided until his death in 1843. There had been several others who came out that year, but they all returned to the settlements when winter set in, so that Stokely and his family were without other society than the Indians and wild animals of the forest, until about the middle of February, 1797, when a number of settlers came out and took up their abode with him until they had picked out places for their own settlement. Mr. Stokely seemed to have somewhat of an eye to trade. In a manuscript left behind him it is stated that, in December following his removal, he got 600 pounds of flour and 300 pounds of corn meal brought out to him—that during the same winter he purchased about 3,000 pounds of venison from the Indians at 1 cent per pound, paying for it chiefly with powder at $2 per pound, lead at 50 cents per pound, and flour at 1 shilling a quart, also rough tallow at 6 cents per pound; dressed buck-skins were purchased for $1, and doe-skins for 50 cents. The venison hams he sold at Pittsburgh for $1 per pair, or 6 cents per pound, and for the tallow, when rendered, he got 20 cents per pound. Stokely also relates that his cows and oxen started off on the 7th of December, when the snows were deep, returning on the 17th, and that three of them lived through the winter by his cutting small trees for them to eat; that about the last of March one of the cows was far gone for the want of food, but was saved through the use of straw found in the pads of an old pack-saddle, which was given to her in small quantities and eaten with great avidity, helping her along until spring came with its relief. In the fall of 1797 he sowed three bushels of wheat, which is claimed to have been the first sown in this county, and from which he harvested a good crop the following season. The spring of 1798 he planted twenty-one bushels of potatoes, which cost him $1.33 per bushel, the proceeds of which were sold, but at what price is not related, although it may well be concluded that he was no loser in the operation, for the incoming settlers would be sadly in want of them for planting. It was along about this time, or the year following, that he built his first double barn, a log structure, with threshing floor in the center. The great trouble in this was to get enough men who could handle the ax, and were conversant with the mode in which structures of this kind were put up. White men were not numerous enough; he could get but six of such together, one of his corner men coming all the way from Franklin for the special purpose of assisting. The Indians around, however, were willing—it was a frolic they desired to enjoy—and between twenty and twenty-five of them assembled on the occasion. As a matter of course, whisky was used by both white and redskins, care being taken that its consumption did not reach the danger limit, but enough to exhilarate and keep the party in good working humor. The following night, however, was nearly a sleepless one from the hilarity and fun kept up during most of it by the Indians, whose appetites had been gratified in an unusual luxurious manner by the food prepared for the occasion. They were in no hurry to leave when the barn was up, like the whites, but stayed most of the next day to help cut out the doorways and to get in the sleepers for the threshing floor, besides other necessary work in the finishing up.

In the manuscript alluded to as having been left by Mr. Stokely, mention is made of a heavy frost occurring on the 19th of August, 1800, which killed all the corn and most of the potatoes, causing a very great deal of distress among the early settlers. It was in this year, and the year previous, that the first missionaries made their way into the county. Messrs. Stocton, McCurdy, Wick and Tait, of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. McLean, of the Secession. Stokely, although then a doubter, had previously been a member of the Methodist Church, and continued to entertain a friendship for its organization. This, however, did not prevent his accepting a trusteeship, along with William McMillan and John Alexander, to receive the voluntary contributions of others, in the shape of butter, sugar and some other kinds of trade, for the support of the pious missionaries, and handing over to them their value in money out of his own funds. It was in 1800 that the first Presbyterian Church was put up for Mr. Tait, in the neighborhood of Stokely's residence, when he rendered so valuable a service to the builders by taking his ox team, the only one in the neighborhood, to haul the prepared logs into position for the raising, crying out as he was seen approaching, as related by Eaton, in his History of the Presbytery of Erie, "with his great merry voice, 'Here comes the devil with his oxen to help you build your meeting-house.'" Stokely was undoubtedly an original man, and by many deemed eccentric, and hence his indulgence in the habit of speaking irreverently of things held sacred by most of his neighbors. Nevertheless he was always fond of entertaining the preachers of any persuasion that called upon him, treating them with great kindness and a liberal hospitality. Although priding himself in unbelief, he was yet the regular patron of the itinerant Methodist as well as the helper of other organizations. Many anecdotes are told of him in this relation, some of which will bear recital here. For a year or two he had been entertaining a certain Elder Bronson (who, by the way, organized the first Methodist class in Mercer, in 1819), who found it convenient to stop with him, as the nearest house to his place of preaching. When the last appointment was filled, on the Monday morning following, on rising from the breakfast table he was informed that the time had come when a settlement of their business must be made. Young Bronson was astounded—he had not expected to be charged, having little or no money with him, and he accordingly made known his inability to pay for the accommodations he had received. Stokely could not be put off in this way, and with a serious and determined face said to him, "D—n it, sir, we must settle anyhow before you leave," and proceeded to read to his astounded and distressed hearer his bill of items, so many meals at 25 cents each, so much for the different nights' lodging, and so much for horse feed, the whole amounting to a sum in the neighborhood of $10 or $15. "Well, Mr. Stokely," said poor Bronson, "I am unable to pay this bill now, but as soon as I can do so, I will discharge the debt." Stokely replied that there was another side of the account to read, and proceeded with the credits he had entered. He allowed so much for each blessing asked, so much for leading in family prayer each time, so much, according to his estimated value, for each sermon, and when the sums were added together, to his feigned chagrin and disappointment, he found himself indebted to the preacher just $2.75. The joke was then out, the heart of the preacher relieved, the money paid over, and the parting made with the best of feeling on both sides. On another occasion he engaged a needy local exhorter to preach in his barn to such an impromptu gathering as could be assembled on the occasion, for which he agreed to give him fifty pounds of flour. The sermon was duly delivered in the noisy fashion of the speaker, and when Stokely came to pay therefor he weighed out a hundred instead of fifty pounds of flour. The exhorter, in the innocent honesty of his heart, suggested that he was getting too much, that his only claim was for half that amount. "You preached so well and so loud, that you scared all the rats away from my barn, and as this was not in the contract, I give you the extra fifty for that service." In 1802 Mr. Stokely was elected lieutenant-colonel of the Mercer County regiment of militia; in 1808 he was appointed a justice of the peace by Gov. McKean, acting in that capacity afterward for over thirty years, when the office was made elective by a change in the State constitution; in 1825 he was elected one of the county commissioners.

Two camp-meetings were held on the plantation of Mr. Stokely, the first in the year 1827, and the second in 1834. On these occasions he prepared the grounds and entertained all of the clergy in attendance. On some of the clergymen expressing some surprise at his choice of location, he told them that he had a particular purpose to serve in that matter. A gentle pressure to arrive at a knowledge of this purpose elicited the fact that the woods in which the selection was made was the resort of foxes, skunks, owls and other vermin, that stole his poultry, and he thought the noise made in a good rousing camp-meeting would drive them out and give him comparative security in the future, to effect which he hoped the preachers, who loved to feed on chickens and ducks as well as himself, would aid him to the best of their ability. When the second camp-meeting was held he selected a different place, the reason for which was that he then wanted the vermin driven back to their old quarters. The first wife of Mr. Stokely died in May, 1814. She was the mother of ten children. He was married the second time, in 1817, to Mrs. Elizabeth Snyder, of Pittsburgh, formerly Miss Stephenson, of Salem Township, Mercer County, by Bishop Roberts. The second wife, who died in the year 1876, was the mother of seven children. Mr. Stokely was an independent thinker, and original, if not eccentric, in his ways. He was well read, and far in advance of the most of his neighbors in his knowledge of history and general learning. He was a ready and correct writer, and, after a newspaper was established in Mercer, contributed a great deal to its columns. Before physicians had established themselves in the country, his advice and assistance were often solicited. He would bleed and prescribe for the sick. On one occasion, when there was a general alarm, he inoculated thirty persons in five families for the small-pox in one day, every one of whom passed safely through the disease. This was before the introduction of vaccination into this country. The persons thus treated were previously prepared by a proper dieting, so that the danger of inoculation was not deemed very great.

In a paper dictated a short time before his death, in 1843, he left the following account of his religious experience. He says: "It is seldom, if ever, any person writes their own obituary notice, but the subject of this, being somewhat eccentric in opinion and habits, has thought proper to say that in a long life he has passed through three or four different conceptions of religion. First, when a lad between seventeen and eighteen he took the opinion of others near to him as correct, without noticing technical distinctions. Second, he, at the period above stated, became fully convinced of the necessity of a reformation in principle and practice, and that through the merits of the Saviour only was salvation to be obtained. Third, at the age of twenty-one or twenty-two, or perhaps from twenty to twenty-five, he gradually became sceptical in most things of a religious nature; in this state he continued for upward of forty years. Fourth, in the latter part of 1839, or at the age of about seventy-three, in a state of indisposition of body and nervous affection, he began to see the approaching prospect of temporal dissolution, which excited an inquiry what was best to do to prepare safely for the change. And now he feels fully persuaded that to die in a full reliance on the mercy and merits of the Lord Jesus Christ is the best and only sure and peaceful way to leave the world. He will not conceal according existing difficulties to his judgment in the plan of redemption, but in this interesting crisis he dares not to raise any direct opposition to it, and therefore yields up his breath and his all to Almighty God who gave him existence." Such was the life of Benjamin Stokely, the first settler in Mercer County.—By Garvin.

SAMUEL TAIT.—The subject of this memoir came into Mercer County in the summer of 1800. He, too, graduated from Dr. McMillan's log cabin, starting on a missionary tour through the northwestern counties immediately thereafter. After preaching in various places, wherever he could get a hearing for his messages, he accepted calls from Cool Spring and Salem, and in November of that year was ordained pastor in each. The town of Mercer had then no existence, and hence his churches at first were purely backwoods institutions. Eaton's history of the presbytery of Erie contains a very interesting account of the construction of the church in Cool Spring for his accommodation. Mr. Tait had said to his hearers on Sunday: "If you will build a meeting-house I will come and preach for you." The offer was accepted, and a day appointed for a meeting of the people with their axes for that purpose. They attended in sufficient numbers to effect their purpose. Some went to work at cutting logs of the proper length for the building; others in preparing clapboards for the roof and puncheons for the floor, and wherewith to fit up the pulpit. When the logs were cut it was found that they were too heavy to be brought into position by manual labor, in time to finish the building on that day, and here was a very serious dilemma. Says Mr. Eaton: "There was but one tear in all the settlement, and that was a yoke of oxen belonging to a professed infidel. It would not do to ask him to bring his team for such a purpose. Just as the necessity became pressing Mr. S. was seen approaching with his oxen, crying out with his great merry voice, 'Here comes the devil with his oxen to help you build your meeting-house.' The work then went gaily forward. The next important thing was the appearance of Thomas McLean, with a small, flat keg of whisky under his arm. This was placed in Mr. Tait's hands, when all took a drink, beginning with the minister, and ending with the donor himself. Three cheers were then given for Thomas McLean, with the promise that when the church was organized he should be the first elder. This promise was afterward fulfilled, and Mr. McLean was the first elder that was elected. By sundown the church was built, covered with clapboards, floored with puncheons, and round logs rolled in for seats. The house was so located that a large stump answered the purpose of a pulpit, with two puncheons set upright in front, and one across secured to the uprights with pins, on which the Bible might be placed." It will thus be seen that Mr. Tait literally took the stump, in his advocacy of the cross, and did not despise the means used at that time to enliven and exhilarate social and political gatherings of the people. In after times, a quarter of a century later, when the temperance question had been agitated and discussed, he banished the liquor from his own harvest field, and entered very heartily into the crusade then commenced against the social use of intoxicating drinks. It is related by Eaton that luxury soon began to creep into the Cool Spring Church, threatening trouble. William McMillan placed in the meeting-house a puncheon seat, supported with legs, for self and family to sit on, while all the others were using the round logs originally placed in the building for that purpose. Here was pride and innovation that many held to be deserving of rebuke, as the innovator and family were held to be no better than others. But McMillan was not without friends; possibly they were of those who selfishly contemplated a similar improvement for their own comfort. Here was division and contention that could only be settled by the authority of the pastor, who, doubtless after prayerful consideration, decided on the side of progress and comfort by declaring that every one should be permitted to put in for himself such a seat as he chose. This difficulty happily settled, the congregation increased so rapidly that the building had to be twice enlarged for its accommodation, which was done by cutting out logs on the sides and adding "leantoos." In 1806, a Presbyterian Church having been organized in Mercer, Mr. Tait relinquished his Salem charge to assume the duties of pastor in the county town. In 1813 the Cool Spring people agreed to come to town, and the time previously given to them was extended to Salem. In 1826 the church at Salem was finally relinquished by Mr. Tait, and his time afterward wholly given to Mercer until his death in 1841.

Mr. Tait was a man of commanding presence, being over six feet high, erect in his carriage, and grave and determined in general demeanor. He was devoted to the cause of Christianity, and was a very Paul in his efforts to vitalize and gather into the church all with whom he came in contact. To his friends, to whom he unbended, he exhibited such a warm and loving sympathy that gratitude, confidence and veneration were all blended in the reciprocity invited and returned. To those outside of this circle he was deemed austere, illiberal, and a kind of Calvinistic monk, and the result was that, while he had warm, trusting and devoted friends, his opponents were numerous, decided and active. Along about 1809 a difficulty occurred between William Johnson and John Bowman, both of Cool Spring, the latter a member of Mr. Tait's church, which caused much excitement and a great deal of litigation afterward, Mr. Tait becoming one of the principals. Bowman contracted to deliver sixteen bushels of rye at the mill of Arnold & Hackney for the use of Johnson. When Johnson applied at the mill for the rye its delivery was denied; when he went to Bowman its delivery according to contract was affirmed. Unable to get the rye, he brought suit against Bowman before 'Squire Rambo. In the trial Bowman swore that he delivered the rye according to contract, while both Arnold and Hackney swore that they had never received it. The justice, presumably on the weight of evidence, gave judgment for the plaintiff. The church then took up the matter, the decision of the justice being assumed a practical charge of perjury against one of its members. The investigation here exonerated Bowman. This was looked upon as a whitewashing report, and a communication published in one of the Pittsburgh papers followed, the author of which indulged in a libelous and abusive attack on Mr. Tait. The authorship was assumed by Johnson, although generally suspected to have been written by his neighbor, Benjamin Stokely. Mr. Tait prosecuted and Johnson entered a counter-prosecution—the community took sides in nearly equal parts, and became very much excited over the matter, but the result in the court was a complete victory to Mr. Tait, he obtaining a verdict of over $2,000 against Johnson, and wholly defeating the cross-prosecution. Beyond the fee of his attorney, Mr. Baldwin, and the costs, Mr. Tait refused to allow anything more being collected from Johnson. It was not money that he sought in the courts, but vindication of his character. There followed this a singular series of mishaps among several of those that were supposed or understood to have taken sides against Mr. Tait, which a portion of his congregation and friends were disposed to attribute to the interposition of Providence for the punishment of their wickedness therein. The powder-mill of Arnold & Hackney was blown up, the eldest son of the latter, named Larken, losing his life thereby, their grist-mill afterward being destroyed by fire. Mr. Johnson was killed by a limb falling from a dead tree while passing under it on a load of hay. This tree was cut down, and falling across a little swale alongside of the road, was used by foot passengers to avoid the mud. Mr. Thomas Bingham slipped on it, and had three of his ribs broken by the fall. The horse of Miss Sarah Beckwith, while riding past, became frightened, and threw her against it, breaking a thigh. Misfortunes of other families among Mr. Tait's opponents are recited, all as occurring within the space of two years after the legal conflict with him. It is worthy of the passing remark, however, that most of these afflicted families belonged to other churches, and were pious and respectable people, while no accident happened to Benjamin Stokely, the recognized commander-in-chief in the war against Mr. Tait, and at that time an avowed infidel. Mr. Tait had afterward to contend with some difficulties in his church, but his people always stood by him faithfully. His face was always set against innovators, and his support undeviatingly given to the orthodox side of all questions that came up. He unquestionably did a great deal of good.—By Garvin.

THOMAS VANATTA, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born December 20, 1833, in Lawrence County, Penn., to John, born June 5, 1803, and Mary (Crawford) Vanatta, born May 25, 1802. The parents were natives of Beaver County, and the father was of German and the mother of Scotch-Irish extraction. They came to Mercer County in 1838 and settled in Lackawannock Township, where he engaged at his trade, that of a carpenter. While working on a building he fell and broke three ribs loose from the backbone, and two in front. He served as a justice of the peace in Lackawannock Township for five years. He died July 25, 1885, and his wife died June 9, 1865. They were married March 30, 1826, and were members of the Presbyterian Church. Their children were Benjamin, died January 17, 1857; Hannah, married Mitchell Roland; Ruth, married Martin Davis; Thomas, Margaret J., married William Clark; Mary A., died October 18, 1884; John, and Eliza, married William Ransom. The father was a Democrat until the breaking out of the war, when he became a stanch Republican. The subject of this sketch was educated in the common schools and was brought up at rural pursuits. He began for himself when twenty-four years of age, at which time he rented the old home place, where he remained until 1881, when he bought the farm he now lives on. He was married April 13, 1858, to Elizabeth, daughter of William and Nancy (Boyd) Clark. Her father was born April 27, 1802, in Ireland, and came to America when twenty-one years old. Her mother was born January 14, 1801. Her parents were married in Lawrence County, September 27, 1832, the result being seven children: Mary, Agnes, Elizabeth, William, Rebecca, Margaret and Samuel. Her father died November 18, 1882, and her mother, April 26, 1884, and were members of the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Vanatta was born May 25, 1835, and has blessed her consort with eight children: Nancy J., John W., a farmer in Kansas; Robert, Frank, Maggie E., deceased; Elizabeth A., Sarah E. and Clara M. Mr. and Mrs. Vanatta and their three oldest daughters are members of the Cool Spring Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican, and is one of the honest, upright farmers of Mercer County.

R. O. WALKER, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born October 10, 1851, in Shenango Township, Mercer County, to Samuel and Elizabeth (Nelson) Walker. George Walker, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, and settled at an early day in Shenango Township. He was the father of nine children: George, Hugh, Robert, Samuel, John, Sarah, married Joseph Kitch; Betsey, Jane, married James Baird; Mary J., married William Mayrs. The father of R. O. Walker was blessed with nine children: George, Nelson, Margaret, R. O., Smith, Amanda, Elizabeth, and two others who died young. The mother died in 1887, and the father in 1888, in his native township. He and his wife united with the United Presbyterian Church, many years ago, at West Middlesex. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married in 1875 to Mary M. Ewing, daughter of Thomas and Mary Ewing, one of eight children: Mary M., Frank, Elizabeth, Carrie, Jennie, Emma, Willie and Lulu. Her parents live in Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have three children: Harry W., Beulah B. and Mable V. They settled on their present farm of 100 acres in 1876. He and wife are members of the Cool Spring Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican.

SAMUEL M. WEBB, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 16, 1863, on the farm where he now resides. His father, James Webb, was born on the farm now owned and occupied by B. A. Williams, in East Lackawannock Township. He was a brother of Mrs. Daniel Nelson, of Mercer. He married Belle McKay, who died in 1864, leaving one child, Samuel M. After the death of his mother our subject lived with his aunt, Eliza McLain, of Mercer, until five years old, and until eight with his father, when he was sent to Pittsburgh, where he attended school for four years, making his home with his aunts, Jane and Amelia, sisters of his father. He then joined his father on the farm, they doing their own housework, until November 24, 1884, when the father died, and our subject was married December 25, the same year, to Mary Hunter, daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth (Alexander) Hunter. Her mother died when she was six months old, leaving four children: Ida, George, Mina and Mary. Her father was again married, to Elizabeth McMillan, and had four children: Mattie, Louis, Bertha and Clara. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Webb have two children: Nannie and Elva. Mr. Webb is a Republican, a good farmer, and buys and sells stock.

THE WILSONS, of East Lackawannock Township, were early settlers. John Wilson, Sr., was born in Dublin, Ireland, August 15, 1765, and was married to Grace Miller. He came to Mercer County in 1800, bought the farm on which he lived in 1804 from Hendricks and Bready, administrators of the John Gold estate, of Allegheny. He paid $200 for 200 acres, the old deed bearing date of March 29, 1789. The issue of this marriage were seven children: James, Grace, John, William, Nellie, Charles and Margaret. He was one of the early members of the old Cool Spring Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Samuel Tait was pastor. He walked through the woods a distance of six miles every Sabbath to attend the services, taking a lunch and remaining all day. James Wilson, the eldest son of James, Sr., was born in Ireland August 11, 1790, and came to America with his father when about eight years old. He was married March 8, 1820, to Esther Harris, of Mahoning County, Ohio, and reared six children: William H., Margaret C., Isaac Newton, Phoebe C., Almon B. and James L. Almon B., of Coitsville, Ohio, and Phoebe C., of Marshalltown, Iowa, are the only surviving members of the family. Newton Wilson, father of W. H. and George H. Wilson, was born in Mercer County October 9, 1824, and married Cynthia A. Hoagland, daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth Hoagland, of Brookfield, Ohio, April 3, 1851. He followed dairying for over a quarter of a century, was a stanch Democrat, and one of the surviving members of the First Presbyterian Church at the time of the split mentioned elsewhere in this work. They reared two children: William H. and George H. The former was born April 3, 1852, and the latter was born March 21, 1859. Newton Wilson died July 8, 1877, and his widow, Cynthia A., died March 8, 1884. William H. Wilson was married to Laura A. Snyder October 9, 1883. She was a daughter of Joel and Elizabeth Snyder, of Hempfield Township. He bought the farm formerly owned and settled by William Alexander in 1797, and who was probably the second settler in the township. William H. Wilson moved to this their present home on April 1, 1884, and has one son, Jay Clyde, born October 2, 1887. George H. Wilson, of East Lackawannock, was married to Kate D., daughter of Jesse and Sadie Hoagland, June 26, 1884. He has one child, Jesse, and owns and lives on the old original homestead of his father. Jesse and Jay Clyde Wilson are the fifth generation, their great-great-grandfather having come from Ireland almost 100 years ago.

HIRAM WORLEY, farmer, post-office Mercer, was born March 24, 1848, in Wilmington Township, the son of Henry and Susannah (Moon) Worley. The father of our subject was born near Hagerstown, Md., in January, 1809, and came to Mercer County in 1822, with his mother and step-father, Jacob Ruthrauff and Barbara (Tice) Ruthrauff. He learned the mill-wright's trade with James McGrath, working on the famous old Crill mill in Findley Township, and others in the county. He followed his trade for some years, married Susannah Moon in 1832, moved to his farm in Wilmington Township, Mercer County, in 1835, and lived there, clearing up his farm, which was nearly all woods at that time. In his latter days he devoted his entire time to farming, and died in August, 1871. His children were: Uriah, Ruth A., Mary J., Angeline, Emeline, Seth, enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, was wounded at the battle of the Wilderness, and died in a hospital at Washington one month later; Hannah J., Hiram, Hugh, Charlotte, Ira, Amanda, Milton, Elmer and Susan. Our subject was educated in the common schools in his native township, and was brought up at farm labor. He began learning the carpenter business in 1866, with James S. Collins, and followed that for twelve years. He worked nearly six years on pattern work in the machine shop at Mercer, and one year at Hamlin, Sons & Co., at Greenville. He came to his present farm of 108 acres in 1878. He was married in 1873 to Mary Crill, a sister of John T. Crill, whose family is mentioned elsewhere. His children are: Susan J., Frank G., John H. and Lewis A. He is serving as supervisor of Cool Spring Township, is a Republican, and his wife is a member of the Cool Spring Presbyterian Church. Some of the troops belonging to Col. Hosack's regiment, while on their way to Erie, in the War of 1812, encamped for a short time on the farm now owned by Mr. Worley. Near his house, the site of the camp, he found two coins, dated 1772 and 1809, which were no doubt lost by some of the soldiers. These coins are still in his possession.

FAIRVIEW TOWNSHIP.

SAMUEL B. ALEXANDER, farmer, post-office Hathegig, is a son of Samuel T. and Ruth (Good) Alexander, the latter a daughter of Thial Good, of French Creek Township. The grandfather, Joseph Alexander, was a native of Ireland, who came to this country with his parents when four years old. They settled near Philadelphia, Penn. Joseph came to Mercer County in 1799, and settled on the farm where his grandson, Joseph W. Alexander, now lives. He died in 1841, and his wife in 1857. Their family consisted of four sons and four daughters: Eliza, Mrs. Robert Bowman; Sarah, Mrs. Samuel Bowman; Jane, Mrs. John McLain; Mary A., Mrs. Samuel Campbell; Irwin, John, Samuel T. and Martin; all deceased except Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. McLain. Samuel, the father of our subject, was a farmer. His family were: Samuel B., Sarah, Mrs. George McClure; Eunice, Mrs. Robert Rogers; Joseph W., Chloe, wife of S. R. Robins, deceased. He died in 1883. His wife survives him, and lives with her son, Joseph W. Our subject was born August 27, 1839, grew up in the township, and at the age of twenty-three enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and participated in all the engagements from Antietam to Spottsylvania, where, on May 12, he received a wound in the left wrist, which necessitated the amputation of his hand. After his return he was engaged in various occupations until 1873, when he located upon his present farm. Our subject served as school director and tax collector for several years. In 1875 he was elected county treasurer, and was the first treasurer to fill the three years' term. He married, January 18, 1872, Miss Mary J., daughter of Sears Morford, of Fairview Township, and by this marriage they have six children: George, Jennie, Willard, Elsie, Sears, Walter. His wife died January 20, 1886. Our subject is a member of Wesleyan Methodist Church of Fairview.

AARON H. ARNOLD, deceased, was born in Fayette County, Penn., June 13, 1803, and was a son of Levi and Elizabeth (Hackney) Arnold, the former a native of Virginia, the latter of Philadelphia, Penn. They reared a large family, and about 1830 came from Fayette County to Mercer County, where they settled in Cool Spring Township, on a tract afterward known as the "Donaldson farm." They here built a distillery, a powder-mill and a grist-mill. In 1834 they sold out, and removed to the site of Fredonia, where they built a grist and saw-mill in 1837-38, for many years known as "Arnold's Mills," which was operated for several years by Aaron H. and his father. The parents both died in that vicinity. Our subject was married December 25, 1835, to Julianna Grove, of Centre County, Penn., who reared six children, all of whom are living: Curtis, of Shenango; Maria E., wife of George W. Washabaugh, of Westmoreland County, Penn.; Leslie F., of Jackson Centre; Martha M., of Denver, Colo.; Lydia V., of Jackson Centre, and Hiram N., of Denver, Colo. Aaron H. Arnold was a miller by trade, and was engaged in that line of business in Mercer County up to his death, which occurred May 16, 1862. His widow resides with her son, Leslie F., at Jackson Centre. Mr. Arnold was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics was a Republican. He was a very well read man, especially in Theology, and was an upright, honest citizen.

HON. PHIPPS J. BOYD, farmer, post-office Hartheigig, Penn., is a son of Henry and Ann (Phipps) Boyd. His father was a native of Ireland, and is spoken of in the Boyd family history to be found in New Vernon Township. His children were twelve in number, and the following are living: Julius; Jane married Calvin Clark, of this county; Helen M., William H., John F. and Phipps J. Our subject was born March 3, 1840, in New Vernon Township, where he was reared and educated. He was taught the wagon-maker's trade. At the death of his eldest brother he returned to the homestead, where he remained engaged in farming until 1863, when he located in Venango County, Penn., and engaged in the oil business until 1866, when he returned to Mercer County, and entered into the lumber business in New Vernon Township with his brother-in-law, Andrew McClure. In 1872 he removed to his farm in Fairview Township, which he had purchased in 1864, and engaged in farming, an occupation he has since followed. He has always taken an active interest in public matters, and has served as a school director of his township and in other offices. In 1886 he was elected a member of the State Legislature. In 1887 he was elected a justice of the peace for Fairview Township, which office he now fills. Our subject was married in 1862 to Miss Mary G., a daughter of James and Hannah McClure, of Lake Township. They have one daughter by adoption, Matilda V. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he has been a class leader for thirty years. Mr. Boyd is a self-made man, and by his energy and integrity has gained the respect and confidence of business men, and the esteem of the people of his community. In politics there is not a more earnest and enterprising Republican in the township or county.

DR. CORNELIUS BYLES, deceased, son of Ebenezer and Betsey (Marcy) Byles, was born in 1815 in Connecticut. His parents moved to Pleasantville, Venango Co., Penn., where he was reared and educated. He subsequently entered Jefferson College, at Cannonsburg, Penn., and after his graduation spent five years teaching in the schools of Central Alabama. He then returned home, commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Gillette, of Franklin, Penn., and completed his education at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Penn. In 1851 he located at Delaware Grove and commenced the practice of medicine. He remained there until 1874, when he removed to Fredonia, Penn. He died in 1886. His widow survives him and resides at Delaware Grove, Penn. He married, in 1850, Eleanor, daughter of the Hon. Walter Oliver, of Lawrence County, Penn., and by this marriage they had four children: Elizabeth, Frederick G., Jennie and Julia J., deceased. The Doctor was United States Examining Surgeon for Mercer County from 1864 to 1881. Frederick G. Byles, post-office Fredonia, was born in 1853, in Delaware Township, and received his early education at the schools of the township. In 1876 he entered LaFayette College, of Easton, Penn., and was graduated in 1879. He studied medicine with his father, was graduated from Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, Penn., and commenced the practice of medicine in connection with his father at Fredonia, Penn. He married, in 1886, Miss Kate R., daughter of the late Rev. J. W. McCune, for many years pastor of Cool Spring congregation, this county, and by this union they have one daughter, Marion Agnes. The Doctor has filled the office of burgess of Fredonia and school director. He is a member of the Mercer County Medical Society.

PROF. LEMUEL R. ECKLES, post-office Fredonia, Penn., is a son of Asa and Amelia (McDonald) Eckles, natives of Lawrence County and Mercer County, Penn., respectively. The grandfather, George Eckles, was a native of Lawrence County, Penn., and settled in Fairview Township in 1842. He married Elizabeth Henan, and their children were: John, James, Joseph, Asa, George, Abraham, Mary, Mrs. Wilson McDonald, Jane and Mrs. Benjamin Stilling, all of whom are dead except George. Asa's family consisted of eleven children, of whom nine are living: William, Hesther, Mrs. Milton Slater, Monroe, George, Asa, Phoebe, Wilson and Alexander. "The father of our subject died in 1887. His wife survives him, and resides in Fairview Township. Our subject was born in 1860 in Fairview Township. His early education was received at the common schools of the township, and he afterward attended the Sheakleyville Academy, Thiel College, of Greenville, Grove City College, and was a graduate from the Edinboro Normal School, of Erie County, Penn., in 1886. He was appointed to the charge of the public schools of Fredonia that year, which position he now fills in connection with his select school. He was married in 1883 to Miss Lizzie E., daughter of John and Sarah Kerr, of New Vernon, and by this union they have three children: Laporte, Mable and Georgeanna. Mr. Eckles is a member of the A. O. U. W., Lodge No. 13, of Fredonia, and also of the P. H. C. He is a member of the Christian Church.

GEORGE GAISER, proprietor of flouring mills at Fredonia, was born in Greenville November 5, 1847, and is a son of David Gaiser, mention of whom appears in the sketch of his brother, Fred H., of Greenville. At the age of seventeen George went west and spent three years in Illinois and Wisconsin. Before leaving home he had begun learning the miller's trade in the old Mathers Mill, and continued the business in the west. In 1868 he returned to Mercer County and entered the New Hamburg Flouring Mills, where he was a miller for seven years. In 1875 he obtained an interest in the mill at Jamestown, Penn., which he operated five years. The succeeding two years he ran a mill in Linesville, Crawford Co., Penn., whence he came to Greenville and became a member of the firm of Gaiser, McClure & Co., general merchants. This firm dissolved in September, 1887, Mr. Gaiser retiring from the business. In 1888 he commenced the erection of his present mills at Fredonia. He was married to Miss Sarah, daughter of J. F. Wheeler, of New Hamburg, Penn., September 30, 1872. She died January 23, 1874, and he was again married, April 15, 1885, to Miss Mattie, daughter of Benjamin Pfeiffer, of Jamestown, Penn. Mr. Gaiser is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Masonic order.

JOHN HARSH, farmer, post-office Fredonia, Penn., is a son of Phillip and Christina (Streckert) Harsh, natives of Washington County, Penn. Our subject was born in 1810 in Washington County, Penn. At the age of twenty-one Mr. Harsh came to Mercer County, located in what was then Cool Spring Township, one mile north of where he now resides, and engaged in farming, an occupation he has always followed. In 1833 he settled upon his present place. Mr. Harsh has served as justice of the peace, being elected to fill that office in 1867, and served ten years. He has served one term as poor director of the county, and has also occupied all the important offices of the township. He married, in 1831, Miss Lucy, daughter of James Simmons, of Delaware Township, who died in 1852, leaving six children: Ira, deceased, served in the Twenty-first Illinois Volunteers; Lenard, a member of the Twenty-first Illinois Volunteers, and was drowned at Stewart Creek, in Tennessee; John, deceased, also served in the army during the late war; Lucinda, Mrs. Richard Suttiff; Eliza, deceased, and Robert, of Fredonia. Mr. Harsh married for his second wife Mary E., daughter of William Orr, of Fairview Township, in 1853. By this union they had seven children: William, Jennie, Mary, Mrs. John Bear; Ida, Mrs. Edward Rose; Sherman, Charley and Eddy, deceased. Mr. Harsh has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for fifty years and fills the office of steward.

W. P. JOHNSTON, physician and justice of the peace, post-office Harthegig, is a son of Ephraim and Mary Ann (Peart) Johnston. William Peart, the grandfather on the maternal side, was a lieutenant-colonel in the British army, and at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War joined the Continental army and held a commission until the close of the war, when he settled in Armstrong County, on the Allegheny River above Kittanning, where Peart's Eddy now is, it being named after him. He died at this place. The father of our subject was an officer in the United States army; participated in the War of 1812, and was afterward treasurer of Crawford County, where our subject was born on September 29, 1831. He has been a resident of the State most of his life. He commenced practicing medicine in Fairview Township in 1865, where he has since resided. In 1885 he was elected justice of the peace for Fairview Township, which office he now holds. The Doctor is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JOSEPH M. McLAIN, postmaster and dealer in agricultural implements, Fredonia, Penn., is a son of John and Jane (Alexander) McLain. Thomas McLain, the grandfather of our subject, was one of the earliest settlers in what is now Jackson Township. Our subject was born in Fairview Township, December 13, 1833, where he was reared and educated. He was reared a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1868, when he engaged in his present business. In 1885 he was appointed postmaster for Fredonia, which office he still fills. Our subject married, March 13, 1856, Miss Elizabeth, daughter of James Morrison, of Lackawannock Township, who died November 14, 1856. His second wife was Elizabeth G., daughter of Rev. Thomas Lamb, of Worth Township, who died February 20, 1888, leaving three children: George S., Sarah M. and Eva L. Our subject is a member of the P. H. C. of Sharon, Penn., and also of the Presbyterian Church of Cool Spring Township. Mr. McLain is one of Fredonia's most enterprising citizens, and a man of upright integrity. In politics he is a Democrat.

MORFORD FAMILY.—Among the early settlers of Mercer County were James and John Morford, who came from the vicinity of Trenton, N. J., about 1804. John married Mary Cox, of New Jersey, and settled in Hickory Township. Their children were: Richard, Thomas, James, John, Joseph, William, Rebecca and Betsey. Thomas, the second son, was born in 1790 in New Jersey. In 1812 he enlisted in Capt. Mann's company, of Greenville. He married Susanna, a daughter of Jeremiah Hazen, of Westmoreland County, Penn. Their children were: Jeremiah, Mary, Mrs. Josiah Brown, of West Salem, and Sears. Mr. Morford, Sr., died in 1874, his wife having died in 1862. After his marriage Thomas settled in Pymatuning Township, and was one of the early pioneers of that township. Sears, his youngest child, was born in 1819, in Pymatuning Township, where he was reared and educated. In 1870 he purchased his present residence in Fairview Township. He married, in 1844, Lucina, daughter of Ira Sperry, of New York, and their children were: Ursula A., born in 1845, who died at the age of four; Ira C., who was born in 1848, is engaged with his father in farming, and is married to Maria, daughter of William North. Their children being Mary A., William S., Catherine L. and Clarence J.

WILLIAM NORTH, deceased, was the second son of William and Mary (Davile) North, born February 20, 1816, in England, and died February 26, 1882. He came to this county with his parents, whose sketch appears in Cool Spring Township. He was reared in Cool Spring Township, where his early life was spent. In 1842 he purchased the place where his widow now resides, in Fairview Township. He was twice chosen justice of the peace, and filled the office for ten years. He also served as school director twenty years. He was married February 22, 1844, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Michael Zahner, of Cool Spring Township. Their children are: Samuel, married Margaret Moore; Mary E.; Michael, married Elizabeth Long; William, married Amanda Cross; Maria, wife of Ira C. Morford; John C., married Anna G. Miller. Mr. North was an elder and life-long member of the Cool Spring Church, and it is befitting that mention should be made of the honorable name he left to his posterity for honesty and sterling integrity. Politically he was an earnest Republican, and always took a deep interest in the success of that party.

WILLIAM L. ROBERTS, hotel and livery, Fredonia, Penn., a son of Joseph and Margaret (Leech) Roberts, was born November 17, 1848, in Hempfield Township. His grandfather, Nathan Roberts, settled in Mercer County at an early date. He was twice married. His first wife was Susan Kaufman. His second wife was Margaret Patterson, by whom he had nine children, the father of our subject being the third son. He died in 1863. His widow survives him, and lives in Delaware Township. His family consisted of two children: Henrietta, and our subject, who was educated in the common schools. William's early life was spent in farming until he was twenty-four years of age, when he located in Fredonia, and engaged in teaming business. He was married in 1871 to Miss Nancy, daughter of Coit and Hannah (Cole) Failes, of Fredonia, Penn. By this marriage they have three sons: Charlie, Hiel and Floyd. Our subject is a member of the council, the present borough treasurer, a member of the A. O. U. W. and also of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

LAKE TOWNSHIP.

JAMES F. BASKIN, clothing merchant, Stoneboro, Penn., is a son of Benjamin F., of Selins Grove, Penn., and Mary J. (McBurney) Baskin, of Mercer, Penn. The father was a lawyer, and located in Mercer, this county, and practiced his profession for many years in Mercer, Greenville and Meadville. Our subject was born in Mercer County in 1850, and received his education at the public schools of that borough, and in 1863 engaged with P. J. Pierce in the book business. In 1864 he engaged with T. R. Sheriff in the clothing business and remained with him seventeen years. In 1880 he moved to Sandy Lake and established a clothing store, and purchased an interest in another store in Jackson Centre. In 1882 he closed his connection with these stores and entered upon his present business, which he has since conducted. He is a member of the Good Templar society, and one of the stockholders of the Mercer County Agricultural Society and has acted as auditor of the same for three years. He is also one of the school directors of Stoneboro. In 1877 he married Miss Eve S. Clary, daughter of Joseph Clary, of Sandy Lake. By this union they have five children: Nellie C., Lillie, Mamie, Joseph Franklin, William McKane. Our subject is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Sandy Lake, and holds an exhorter's license in that church and also in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Stoneboro, of which his wife is a member.

ALEXANDER BONNER, merchant, Stoneboro, Penn., is a son of Jeremiah and Eliza (Hutchison) Bonner, of Armstrong County. In 1872 Jeremiah Bonner and his family moved to this place, and in 1873 he, in connection with our subject and his cousin, Robert Bonner, established a general store. He was instrumental in purchasing the right of the New Castle branch of the W. N. Y. & P. R. R., and built the first two miles of the road, furnished thirteen flat cars and one passenger coach for it, and served as director, treasurer and vice-president of the same until a short time before his death. He purchased a farm in this township in 1866, and was one of the original stock owners of the Mercer Iron and Coal Company. He and our subject afterward purchased the Lake House, in which his estate now owns one-half interest. Mr. Bonner died in 1883. He was twice married. His first wife was Martha McCollums, who died in 1846, leaving four children: Margaret, Mrs. J. C. Cornwell, of Stoneboro; William H., deceased; Martha, Mrs. G. W. Robinson, of Forest County, Penn., and Mary, a maiden lady, who lives with her sister, Mrs. Robinson. His second wife, Eliza Hutchison, is still living and occupies the homestead in Stoneboro. By her he had five children, one died young and the others are: Charles, manufacturer of brick in Chicago; Alexander, our subject; Elizabeth E., Mrs. J. P. Hines, of Stoneboro; Malena B., at home. Alexander was born in Armstrong County, Penn., September 27, 1851, was educated at the public schools, and has always been engaged in the mercantile business, coming to Stoneboro with his father and establishing the business which he has continued since the death of the latter. He also conducted two farms and a coal bank. In 1874 he married Miss Margaret A., daughter of John Hall, of this borough. By this union they have five children: Lydia, Alexander, Bessie, Jeremiah, Margaret. Mr. Bonner votes the Republican ticket, as did also his father.

WILLIAM CALDWELL, farmer, post-office North's Mills, is a son of William and Martha (Montgomery) Caldwell. The father was a native of Allegheny County, Penn., and was one of the early men to locate in this county, having settled a tract of land in what is now Lake Township, and made several improvements; in 1833 he settled on it and lived there until his death in 1841. He was a blacksmith by trade, voted the Democratic ticket, and was a member of the Old Seceder Church, and afterward of the United Presbyterian Church. His widow died in 1873. Their family consisted of seven children: Martha, deceased; Margaret, widow of Daniel Shawhan, who lives in Allegheny County, Penn.; Mary, Mrs. Joseph Caldwell, deceased; Sarah, Mrs. John Hill, deceased; Joseph, lives in Cleveland; William; Eliza Jane, Mrs. Henry Cole, of Mill Creek Township. JACKSON TOWNSHIP.

LEMUEL BLACK, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born May 12, 1839, on the farm where he now resides. The old house, now almost sixty years old, is still standing. His father, John Black, was born January 31, 1786, in England, and married Dorothy W. Winson, born October 9, 1799, in England. They immigrated to this country in 1829, and settled on the farm where Lemiel now lives. They were the parents of twelve children: John, the eldest, was born January 15, 1819; Hannah, born August 24, 1820; Stephen, born October 8, 1821; Jesse, born July 20, 1823; Jeremiah, born August 29, 1825; Sarah, born April 6, 1827; Mary, born February 16, 1829; Joseph, born October 24, 1830; Lydia, born July 9, 1833; Sarah, born August 15, 1835; Priscilla, born March 30, 1837, and Lemuel, born May 12, 1839. Stephen Black died in England; Sarah died in New York; John died in Illinois; Jeremiah was in Company I, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died in the service with the fever; Joseph was in Missouri at the breaking out of the war, and was never heard of by his family afterward; Mary died in January, 1863, at the old home; Priscilla married John B. Maxwell, March 30, 1862, and died in August, 1863; Hannah married Rev. Richard Peat and is still living; Jesse resides in Iowa; Lydia and Sarah are still living on a part of the old homestead. John Black, the father of the above named children, was a sailor for fourteen years, and was under command of Lord Nelson in the battle of Trafalgar, October 21, 1805, and the scars which he received in this famous struggle were ever afterward visible. He was killed April 17, 1839, by a log falling on him at the raising of a barn for a Mr. Forker, in Cool Spring Township. His widow subsequently married John Peat, and died in October, 1881. Lemuel Black was brought up at farming, and is the owner of a fine farm of eighty-eight acres, well watered by living springs. He was married May 30, 1862, to Jane McCurdy, daughter of James F. McCurdy, who was for many years a captain of a steamboat, which ran on the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers. Mr. McCurdy and family are mentioned in a sketch of J. H. McCurdy, on another page of this work. Our subject has four children: James M., John W., Olive L. and David L. Mr. and Mrs. Black are members of the Cottage Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the A. O. U. W. of Fredonia, and is a Prohibitionist in sentiment. He is one of the upright, intelligent and enterprising citizens of Mercer County, who lends his aid to everything that has a tendency to advance and improve the community in which he lives.

CHARLES BROMLEY, clerk, post-office Jackson Centre, was born July 17, 1851, in Mercer County, to John Bromley, who was born in England, immigrated to America about 1826, subsequently married Sarah Montgomery, and by her had Francis, married Hiram Stufflebeam; James M., was a soldier from Mercer County, and was killed; Montgomery, was in the war from Venango County, and died on his way home on the train between Syracuse, N. Y., and Oil City; George, was a soldier from Mercer County, and starved to death in a rebel prison; Archibald, was in the war from Venango County, and was killed in battle; William C., was a soldier from Venango County; Leonard M., was also a soldier from Venango County; Adaline, died at the age of four years; Charles, David H., Elizabeth, married Stephen Vanderlin. The father died in 1858, and the mother in 1857, both in the Presbyterian faith. Charles, after the death of his father, was with the family of Henry Chaffee, of Venango County, for two and one-half years. He then lived with Samuel Kee, of Lake Township, and attended school until 1862, when he selected a permanent home with William Jeffrey, of Jackson Township, with whom he remained until twenty-one years old. He then took a course in the Iron City Commercial College, and in the fall of 1872 engaged in the general merchandise business with Samuel North, Sr., at North's Mills, subsequently with G. W. Worrell. He suffered great loss by the panic, and finally retired from the business and worked for a while in mills and on farms. In 1879 he was employed by D. L. Nisbet, with whom he has continued. He married, in 1874, Elnora Zahniser, and by her has six children, viz.: Sarah J., Margaret C., William J., John Z., Charles M., James A. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Jackson Centre, and he and wife are members of the Cool Spring Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican.

S. S. DONALDSON, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born August 25, 1818, in Westmoreland County, Penn., to Isaac and Rebecca (Shannon) Donaldson, natives of the same county. The family came to Mercer County August 25, 1823, and settled about four miles north of New Castle. They subsequently moved to Wilmington Township. May 25, 1835, the father died, and the mother September 17, 1865. They had Elizabeth, deceased; Martha, deceased; S. S.; Jane W., married Charles Lees; James A.; Robert N., deceased; infant, died small; Ebenezer F.; Robert M.; Sarah, married Robert Johnson; Rebecca, married David Young; Harriet, married John Bogardus. Isaac Donaldson was born December 15, 1791, and was married June 29, 1813, to Rebecca Shannon, born March 26, 1793. He taught school and worked at the carpenter's trade for a number of years. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church. S. S. Donaldson attended the common schools, and for awhile Wilmington College. He was married October 29, 1845, to Minerva Dunn, born March 1, 1821, in Crawford County, Penn. When quite young she settled on Indian Run, in East Lackawannock Township, with her parents, Joseph and Mary Dunn, where the parents died. Their children were Minerva, Daniel, Nancy, John, Stewart, William, Mary J., Arthur, and an infant, deceased. The parents were United Presbyterians. Our subject's union gave him six children: Leander W., Sebina J., Ann, Ettie, James A., died at the age of four years; William L., a teacher in the Jackson Centre schools. Mr. Donaldson remained in East Lackawannock Township until 1855, when he moved to where he now resides. Here he bought 100 acres of land, and subsequently added to it, until he is the owner of a large property, as a result of strict economy and hard labor. He was for many years president of the Western Agricultural Association held at Mercer, and was one of the three school directors elected by the Republicans of Jackson Township within the last twenty years. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. A mention of his ancestors is given in Cool Spring Township, in connection with a notice of Mrs. Charles Lees, his sister.

LEANDER W. DONALDSON, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born August 15, 1846, in East Lackawannock Township, and is a son of S. S. Donaldson, whose sketch appears previously. He was educated in the common schools. He made brick for a few years, and was married April 18, 1872, to Maggie E. Williams, a daughter of John and Ruth (Bradley) Williams, natives, the father of Ireland, born in 1818, and the mother of Mercer County, born August 17, 1815. Her father came to America, or Mercer County, about 1835. The mother of Mrs. Donaldson was a daughter of George and Mary (Blair) Bradley, natives, he of Ireland and she of Virginia, and the parents of Elizabeth, Samuel, Thomas H., Mary, Margaret, George, Nancy, John and Ruth. The parents of Mrs. Donaldson had four children that grew up: James H., Mary J., married Thompson Patterson; Maggie and Maria M. Mrs. Donaldson was born December 9, 1846, and has blessed her husband with three children: Ralph B., Laura E. and Carl S. He is a Republican, and settled on his present farm of fifty acres in 1873.

REV. J. M. GALLAGHER, Jackson Centre, was born April 28, 1821, in Uniontown, Fayette Co., Penn., to John Gallagher, a native of the same place. Our subject was one of seven children: Eveline W., Rev. J. M., Jane K., Elizabeth D., Mary, Jacob B., John A. The last named practiced law, and was a surveyor. The father was a farmer, and at one time owned part of the land now the present site of Uniontown. Rev. Gallagher was educated at Madison College, Uniontown, and Beverly, Ohio, studying at the last named theology under Rev. J. P. Wethee. He taught school six months. He was licensed to preach at State Lick, Armstrong County, by the Union Presbytery in 1845, and was sent out by that body to preach. He made his journey on horseback, and was supply at Harlensburg, Franklin, Cranbury, Rockland and Scrubgrass. He preached in school-houses at the last three named places, and his pastorate church buildings were erected at Cranbury and Rockland. At these two he continued for eleven years. He was then supply for the Scrubgrass and Sandy Creek congregations until 1861, when he moved to Jackson Centre, and preached for that congregation until recently. He is yet pastor of the Bethany congregation, a branch of the Jackson Centre organization. He was pastor for thirty-two years for the "Irvin congregation," which is composed of citizens of Mercer and Venango Counties; this he resigned in 1887. During his pastorate at Jackson Centre some of his congregation moved to Sandy Lake, and he following them organized a church and preached in a hall until under his administration a church edifice was erected and he had helped in the dedicatory services. The Hickory Grove congregation, now attached to Jackson Centre, was organized under his pastorate. He was married, September 19, 1848, to Miss Ellen Whann, a native of Venango County. This union resulted in two children: John F., died at the age of eighteen years, and Mary J., married H. T. Hess, deceased, by whom she has three children: Nellie M., Stella J. and James Raymond. Our subject owns two farms, has property in Jackson Centre, and is an earnest Prohibitionist.

JOHNSON GRAHAM, retired farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born August 20, 1807, in what is now Worth Township. His father, William Graham, was born in either Scotland or Ireland, and came to America after having married his second wife, Sarah Boyle, and with her and daughter, Jane, and William, a son by his first wife, he came to America in 1800. Their children born in this country were Sallie, Hugh, Thomas, Mary A., John, Johnson, Susan, James, all of whom are dead but our subject, the parents of whom were members of the Seceder Church. Johnson Graham was educated in the log cabin school-houses of his day, going bare-footed a portion of his attendance. He began with only a willing heart and strong hands. About the first money he obtained to apply on the purchase of land was secured by cleaning and digging a mill-race, at 10 cents per yard. His first purchase was the old homestead of 150 acres. He was married, in 1837, to Jane E. Williamson, born in this county to Jacob Williamson, and by her he had two children: Isabella, married Henry Smith; William J., married Mary Johnson, of Youngstown, Ohio, and has Jennie, Fannie and George. Mrs. Graham died in 1872, and was a member of the Seceder Church. Our subject came to Jackson Centre in 1862, and bought 110 acres, a portion of which he laid off in town lots. He was a judge at the first borough election, and was once a member of the I. O. O. F. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and is a Republican.

JESSE HARRISON, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born September 19, 1843, on the farm where he resides. His father, William, was born in England, and came to America when thirty years old. He settled on the farm now owned and occupied by Jesse Harrison, and married Sarah Johnson, who was born in England and came to America with her mother and sisters, Ann, Mary, and brother John. William Harrison had eleven children: Joseph, Ann, Mrs. Hugh Evans; George, Isaac, was in the late war; John, died in the war; Elizabeth, Mrs. Thomas McKay; Sarah, married James Allen; Jesse, Thomas, Mary, William H. The parents were Methodists. Jesse received a common school education; he enlisted in Company I, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was discharged from Company D after a service of seventeen months. He was married, November 5, 1878, to Mary McElree, a daughter of John McElree, and has by her: Eddie E., John E. and Elva M. He owns 125 acres of well-improved land, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Republican.

JOHN INFELD, hotel keeper and butcher, post-office Jackson Centre, was born February 2, 1836, in Jackson Township, to Daniel, born in Somerset County, and there married Sarah Ringer, and came to Mercer County October 18, 1829, settling in Jackson Township. He had by his marriage: Joseph, Catharine, Hiram, Mary I., John, James, Daniel, Emeline. The father followed farming, and took charge of a hotel, which he named the "Infield House," in 1862, which was the second house of the kind in Jackson Centre. He had kept hotel on the Satterfield farm, known as the "Old Wash McKee Stand." He died September 11, 1874, and his widow still lives with the subject, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. She is one of the original members of the Jackson Centre Cumberland Presbyterian Church, to which her husband belonged. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was brought up at farm labor. He was married to Mary N. Nuneymaker, a native of this county, and by whom he has had ten children: Jennie, Charles, Lizzie, George, Eva, Daniel, Kate, Samuel, Myrta, Frank. Mr. Infield took charge of the hotel in 1868, and in 1882 he added butchering. He has been a member of the borough council. His wife is a member of Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He lived in Franklin from 1862 to 1868. He is a Democrat.

PEARSON LYTLE, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born January 22, 1840, on the farm where he now resides. His father, John, was a native of Ireland, and came to America when a boy, and to Mercer County in 1824, settling where our subject lives. He married Sarah Kane, of Fayette County, Penn., and had the following children by her: David, Mary, married William Reese; James, Joseph, George, Pearson and William, who was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. The father died in 1852, and the mother July 3, 1867. They were members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Pearson Lytle was educated in the country schools, and began life for himself at the death of his mother. He was married October 24, 1871, to Melissa Pearson, daughter of Samuel and Matilda (McConnell) Pearson, and has had by her Edwin, Bertha and DeWitt. He and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He is a Democrat.

J. H. McCURDY, farmer, was born October 24, 1852, within about four miles of Norristown, Montgomery Co., Penn. His father, James F., was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1808, and immigrated to Montgomery County in 1837, where he married Rosannah McMullen, born about 1821 in County Antrim, Ireland, and who arrived in Montgomery County later than her husband. The family came to Mercer County in 1860, settling on the farm where our subject now lives; here the father died January 24, 1883, and the mother, February 8, 1880. Their children were: David, died at the age of seventeen years; Jane, Mrs. Lemuel Black; John, died when young; Mary, was burned to death by her clothes catching on fire; Rosannah, is a maiden lady; J. H., Kate A. and one died when young. The parents died members of the Cottage Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject was principally educated in the common schools of Mercer County, and was brought up at farm labor. He was married December 19, 1876, to Mary J. Patterson, born September 15, 1853, a daughter of William and Elizabeth J. (McDowell) Patterson, the parents of the following children: John, Mary J., Sadie and Martha. Mrs. Patterson died in 1861, and, with her husband, belonged to the Springfield United Presbyterian Church. J. H. McCurdy has five children: James W., William R., Ira L., Nellie M. and Kate A. Mrs. McCurdy is a member of the Cottage Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a staunch Republican, as well as a worthy, upright farmer and citizen, who is to be found with his influence on the side of public advancement in the community where he lives. He is the owner of a finely improved farm, to the cultivation of which he gives his personal attention.

DR. JOHN McELRATH was born in County Down, Ireland, on the 17th day of May, A. D. 1813. He was the second child of Archibald and Mary (McWilliams) McElrath, immigrated to America with them in the fall of 1822, and settled in Beaver County, Penn. He received a thorough education in Beaver Academy, and after completing his course of studies, followed teaching as an occupation, and at the same time prosecuted the study of medicine, under the tutelage of the late Dr. George Allison, of Beaver, Penn. He was married in 1842, to Jane Brandon, second daughter of the late James Brandon, of Pine Township. He attended the Western Reserve Medical College, at Cleveland, Ohio. In the fall of 1852 he located in what is now Jackson Centre, Mercer Co., Penn. He again attended medical lectures in the winter of 1867-68, at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. He died on the 24th of February, 1872. In his profession and in the sick room he was a cool, calculating and, in an eminent degree, thorough physician, possessing that rare faculty of cheerfulness which gave to the patient strength, encouragement and hope, and that gentleness which could apprise them of their approaching dissolution without excitement or dread. He left a widow and four children: Dr. James B., of Jackson Centre; A. H., of Mercer, Penn.; Mary E., of Jackson Centre, and Ida N., now intermarried with A. M. Clawson, of Sandy Lake Township, Mercer Co., Penn.

JAMES B. McELRATH, physician and surgeon, post-office Jackson Centre, was born September 18, 1843, in Mercer County, Penn., to Dr. John and Jane (Brandon) McElrath. He was educated in the public and private schools and the Mercer High-schools under instructions of Prof. Warner, now congressman from Ohio. He taught school at the age of eighteen years. He read medicine with his father, and attended Jefferson Medical College for over three years, also Charity Hospital. He graduated from the medical college in 1871, and began his practice with his father at Jackson Centre, where he still continues. He married Miss Emma L. Smith, daughter of H. K. Smith, superintendent of the Philadelphia & West Chester Railroad, October 21, 1877. His union has given him two children: John C. and Henry K. The former is deceased. His wife died January 12, 1881. The Doctor is secretary of the Board of Pension Examiners for Mercer County, and is vice-president of the Mercer County Medical Society. In politics he is a Republican. He served in Company F, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, and afterward in Company M, Sixth Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, until the close of the war.

JOHN MCKAY, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born August 10, 1829, in County Antrim, Ireland, to James and Sarah (McElroy) McKay, natives of the same county. In 1834 the family, consisting of parents and sons, John and William, came to a portion of Beaver County now included in Lawrence County. Here they remained until 1843, the father being employed as a stone mason and school-teacher. In the last year named they came to Mercer County, built a shanty in the green woods of Lake Township and improved a farm of 125 acres, where the father died March 24, 1857, and the mother July 8, 1858. They were the parents of John, William, Thomas, Isabella, Sarah J., Mary M., Catharine, Melissa and Therressa. The parents at their death belonged to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, of which organization at Jackson Centre he was a ruling elder. John McKay was five years old when he came to America, and was educated in the common schools and by his father at home. He was brought up at farm life, but learned the carpenter trade, and has for many years done his own blacksmithing. He was married in 1853 to Jane Hill, born August 23, 1828, in Mercer County, Penn. Her father, Capt. William Hill, of the War of 1812, enlisted when twenty years of age in a company commanded by Capt. Junkin. He was under Gen. Harrison in Ohio one campaign, and was two campaigns at Erie, being there when Commodore Perry gained his celebrated victory. Her mother, Jane (Lowry) Hill, gave birth to John, Adam, James, Margaret, Hannah, Jane, William and three others who died when small. The father of these children died June 12, 1851, and the mother died January 19, 1868. Both were originally connected with the Seceder Church. Two of their sons, John and James, were in the late war. John served nine months, and two of his sons, Joseph C. and Robert C., were also in the war. Robert was wounded in the shoulder, and James served three years; was in Company I, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers; was wounded in the thigh at the battle of the Wilderness on May 5, 1864; was taken to Libby Prison, and afterward sent to Belle Island. His two sons, Summerville and Washington, were in the same regiment. Capt. Hill's father, Adam Hill, served in the Revolutionary War seven years and six months under Gen. Wayne, and was wounded in the thigh at the battle of Stony Point. He came to Mercer County in 1800, and settled in Sandy Lake Township, near where the Stoneboro fair is now held. Madison Davis, son of Margaret Hill, served in the late war; was taken prisoner and died in Andersonville Prison. The children of John and Jane McKay are: Margaret R., born August 14, 1854, married Simon Moon March 13, 1878; James W., born August 11, 1857, married Mary J. Kemm August 11, 1882, was graduated at Waynesburg College, Greene County, Penn., in June 1884, then entered the theological seminary at Lebanon, Tenn., and was graduated in June, 1886, in 1887 he completed the post-graduate course in theology prescribed by the Lebanon, Tenn., institution, which conferred the degree of Ph. D. upon him. For the past two years he has been pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Carmichaels, Greene Co., Penn., and September 1, 1888, he removed to Pittsburgh to take charge of the First Cumberland Presbyterian Church at East Pittsburgh; Jessie A., born August 7, 1858, married W. W. Taylor May 9, 1879; Blackford, born October 14, 1860, died February 4, 1861; John L., born July 26, 1862, married Emma J. Supplee July 2, 1884; Sarah A., born August 15, 1865; Myra J., born October 30, 1867; Mary A., born May 9, 1870, died May 11, 1872. Our subject lived at the old homestead until 1863, and in Pine Township till 1870, when he located on a farm in Dixon County, Tenn. One year later he bought and settled on the old Pearson farm in Jackson Township, where he now resides. He and his son John L. own and operate a steam saw-mill on his farm. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and of the Royal Templars of Temperance. He and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Jackson Centre, in which he has been acting elder for over twenty-five years. He is a Prohibitionist, and in 1888 was nominated by that party for poor director.

D. L. NISBET, merchant, post-office Jackson Centre, was born August 7, 1852, two miles north of Greenville, to James, born May 31, 1824, near Greenville, and Maria (Loutzenhiser) Nisbet, born April 6, 1831, and died April 9, 1881. She was the mother of Sarah L., born January 16, 1851, married John Irwin, of Crawford County; Albert, born February 4, 1854, a cattle dealer in Arizona; Felicia, born September 19, 1856, married Rev. George Critchlow, a Lutheran minister at Prospect, Butler County; Frederick L., born March 5, 1862, a physician of Meadville. The parents belonged to the Presbyterian Church of Greenville. Our subject was educated in the country schools. He began clerking in Greenville in 1872. In 1875 he opened a store at Orangeville, Ohio, and subsequently at Neshannock, this county. In 1877 he located at his present place, buying out William Porter, who had started the store in 1876, in the neighborhood of the Jackson coal banks. Here he has been very successful. He was married to Rosa L. Reimold, born June 20, 1855, in Pymatuning Township, and has two children: Ray B. and Vida A. He and wife are members of the German Reformed Church.

GEORGE W. PEARSON, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born August 10, 1844, where he now lives, to Joshua, born July 4, 1801, near Philadelphia, and Hannah (McNutt) Pearson, a native of the same place. They came to Mercer County in 1829, and the father died January 20, 1846, the mother May 9, 1885. They were consistent members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Jackson Centre at their demise, and were the parents of six children: Rachel, born July 13, 1830, married Hiram McConnell; Jane, born May 5, 1832, married Mordecai Taylor, died March 17, 1888; Margaret, born July 10, 1836, died October 13, 1878; Elizabeth, born August 5, 1839, and died December 8, 1861, at the home of William Stewart; Anna, born March 11, 1841, died June 4, 1858, and George W. The last named was educated in the country schools, and was compelled to sustain himself when quite young, because of the death of his parents. He was married May 31, 1871, to Sabina Donaldson, born July 11, 1848, and by her has one son, John S. Mr. Pearson has served as school director, and is now in his second term as township constable. Both he and his wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and in politics he is a Democrat, as was also his father.

SAMUEL PEW (deceased).—Longevity is characteristic of certain families. Constitutions of native strength endure the toils and ills of life with such effectiveness that they seem to be exceptions to the operations of natural law. Of them it may be said, as it was in the days of Nimrod, the mighty hunter before the Lord, "there were giants in those days," or of Saul, the son of Kis, he stood from his shoulders above his fellows. The vigor and longevity of these pioneers may be attributed to several causes: First, their ancestry were, as a rule, noted for the simplicity of their modes of living. Late hours for retiring, thin soled shoes, exposed arms, tight lacing, paints and powders, fear of sun and storm, spices and other condiments for food, etc., were then comparatively unknown. Second, outdoor exercise, fresh air, simple food, regular habits, clear consciences and freedom from sensational literature were conducive to health and long life. Third, heavy clothing of home-made material, cut for comfort rather than according to fashion plates, assured an active circulation of pure blood that carried growth and development everywhere. Samuel Pew, the subject of this sketch, died December 15, 1887, in his ninety-fifth year. He was born in Washington County, Penn., October 22, 1793. He was the eldest son of John Pew, with whom he came to the site of the present town of Mercer on the 1st of May, 1797, when the boy was in his fourth year. At the time of this removal to the "new country" but one structure, and that a rude log hut, marked the site of the present beautiful and prosperous city of Allegheny. With his father he lived in Mercer until 1804, when the family removed to what is now Jackson (then known as Cool Spring) Township, settling on the farm since and until his death owned by Samuel.

John Pew, his father, had a family of thirteen children, seven sons and six daughters. Of this number one son, Joseph, still lives in West Virginia, and three daughters, Hannah, Amelia Ann and Nancy, live respectively in Michigan, Washington Territory and Mercer. John Pew was one of the first settlers in that portion of Jackson Township in which he located. North and east of him were the Zahnisers, the Wilsons, the Forkers and others, who had preceded him by some seven or eight years. Of John's other sons, brothers of Samuel, the second, Abraham, was well known in Mercer County. He died May 1, 1882, at the advanced age of eighty-six years, and his remains lie in the old dilapidated and neglected grave-yard back of the First Presbyterian Church of Mercer. John died May 4, 1884, aged eighty-three years. His remains rest quietly in the Findley grave-yard, a mile east of Mercer. Prior to his going to the farm Samuel Pew, though but a boy ten years of age, held the first stake set in the laying out of the town of Mercer in 1803. Even three years earlier than that, viz., 1800, he carried water for the men who built Rev. Samuel Tait's meeting-house, in Cool Spring Township. At that time he was about seven years of age. While the family was still living in Mercer, the Pews were intimately acquainted with the Indians living in the neighborhood. The latter frequently visited the frontier cabin and fondled the children. Among these Indians was the well known Hartheigig, son-in-law of the old chief Petty. He was ugly in physical appearance, and his disposition partook of the characteristics of his body. He was addicted to the use of intoxicating drinks, and, when under the influence of the poison, was particularly quarrelsome and disagreeable. Then he was a terror to the children. On one occasion Hartheigig, accompanied by two other Indians, Peter and John, came to the Pew cabin. Samuel, then a frolicsome boy, was sitting on one end of the logs that had been rolled into the huge, open throated fire-place, warming himself. Hartheigig, the ugly Indian, approached him and seizing him by the hair, said: "I will scalp you." This language and the corresponding action so terrified the other Indians and James Jeffers, a neighbor who had accompanied them, that they all sprang to their feet and caught the drunken man, instantly disarming him. Then the three Indians left. Next morning Jeffers, who greatly disliked Hartheigig, passed the Pew place, with his gun on his shoulder. Seeing young Samuel in the yard, he inquired whether Hartheigig had passed up the hill that morning. Answered in the affirmative, Jeffers passed up through a skiff of snow which then covered the ground. Nothing of the Indian was subsequently seen, and his disappearance was enveloped in mystery. Nine years afterward a large skeleton of a human being was discovered near "Yankee Ridge," by a man named John Johnston. It was supposed to be the frame of the ugly and pugnacious Indian. The inference was that James Jeffers could have solved the mystery connected with the Indian's disappearance. Samuel Pew and his brother Abraham were both out in the War of 1812. In July of that year they went in the company of Capt. Samuel Clark. They were at Erie, ready to give their services to Commodore Perry if he needed them. On their return, it is said, Abraham, who was but a boy of about seventeen, was so wearied with marching that he tied strings to his big toes to enable him to lift his feet more easily. This joke illustrates to every one the hardships connected with military life. While at Erie Samuel is said to have been detailed to assist in getting out the timber for the flag-ship, Lawrence, from which Commodore Perry fled to the Niagara after the former was disabled. These brothers went with Clark a second time, and the third with Capt. John Junkin. Owing to the threatened condition of the northern frontier they proffered their services a fourth time to Lieut.-Col. Thomas Hosack. For their services they both drew pensions from the government. Samuel was married twice, the first time to Miss Mary Vaughn and the second to Elizabeth Condit, daughter of David Condit, an early settler near Sheakleyville. The last wife died March 24, 1875, aged seventy-one years ten months and twenty-three days. Her final resting place is in the Findley grave-yard. By the first wife he had five children, viz.: James, Elizabeth, Lydia, Rebecca and Amelia. All are living except the last. By the second he had eight, viz.: David, John (died in the army), Joseph, Mary, Abram P., William, Thomas and Samuel, twins. Politically Samuel Pew was an old-time Whig, and by consequence a Republican. He was a member of the Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches. His constitution was strong and active, and even to a period of a few weeks prior to his death he was seen on the streets of Mercer. He lived to see the development of this nation from 4,000,000 to 60,000,000, and witnessed every presidential election after the first term of Washington. Steamboats, railroads, telegraphs, telephones, coal as fuel, natural gas, power printing presses, mowers, reapers, binders, threshing machines, and nearly every form of invention have been bequeathed to the world during his life-time.

ALEXANDER PORTER, farmer, post-office Pardoe, was born March 25, 1811, on the farm now owned by D. M. Porter in Sandy Lake Township, to Alexander, born in County Derry, Ireland, who married Mollie Holliday, with whom he came to Berks County before 1800, and to Mercer County in 1805, by team. He died on the farm about 1847, and his widow died about 1851. They were the parents of James, Margaret, Eliza, Jane, William, David, Alexander and Mary. The father was in the War of 1812, and with his wife belonged to the Reformed Presbyterian Church. Our subject attended the schools of his early boyhood and was brought up at farm labor. He was married in 1849 to Eleanor Mouck, and by her had three children: Alexander C., Mary E. and Amanda C. He was married again June 7, 1861, to Nancy Montgomery, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Barnes) Montgomery, one of twelve children: William, John, James, Mary, Nancy, Esther, Sarah J., Martha, Elizabeth, George, Thomas and Samuel. Her parents are dead. They were members of the Seceder Church, and her father was in the War of 1812. By his last marriage Mr. Porter has one child, Thomas E. They are members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church.

ANTHONY SILVEUS, burgess and retired farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born October 19, 1831, in Greene County, Penn., to David, born in Lancaster County, and when two years old he removed with his father, whose name was also David, to Rockingham County, Va., and at the age of twenty-one years he went to Fayette County, where he married Mary Bowman, daughter of Henry Bowman, and soon after moved to Franklin Township, Greene County, where he bought 300 acres. Here he reared a family of eleven children: Nancy, Mary, Susannah, Henry, David, Catharine, Elizabeth, Joseph, John, Anthony and William. The father came with his wife, John, Anthony and William to Mercer County in 1849, and settled in Lake Township, on the farm now owned by John and Thomas Kemm; he died at the home of his son, Anthony, in 1876, his wife having died in 1862. Both were members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, until eighteen years old, when he devoted his entire time to farming. He was married June 14, 1855, to Emma Vernam, daughter of John Vernam, by whom he has four children: William F., born in 1856; Sarah, born March 23, 1859; John G., born November 15, 1863; Mary B., born June 20, 1865; Sarah E. The elder son, William F., attended school at Waynesburg, Greene County, and is now preaching in Washington County, Penn. John G. is attending school at Waynesburg, and is reading law at intervals with A. F. Silveus, at that place. Our subject owns the Matthew DeFrance farm, in Jackson Township, from which he retired in 1884. He was elected burgess of Jackson Centre in 1885, 1887 and 1888. He was once a member of the I. O. O. F. He and wife are members of Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Jackson Centre, and he is leader of the choir in the same. He is a Democrat, has read the Western Press for over thirty years, and has been a member of the Central Committee of his party and a delegate to the conventions.

JOHN VERNAM, retired farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born November 10, 1824, in England, to John Vernam, who was born in Philadelphia, and went to England, where he married Sarah Bott, and with her and children: William, Thomas, John, Mary A., Charles and Emma, came to America in 1831, and settled where William Orr now lives. He had only $10 left when he settled in this wild country. He and his wife died in this township, and were members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Our subject attended the common schools but a short time. He began for himself at the age of twenty-four years, buying at that time fifty acres of land in Worth Township. He bought small tracts at various times, and now owns nearly 300 acres, the result of his own labors. He has been a remarkably strong man, having cleared about 300 acres, worked at 62½ cents per day, hauled tan-bark to Mercer with ox teams, and has gone through the many hardships that surround the struggles of the early settlers. He and his brother, Francis, cradled, bound and shocked 100 dozen sheaves of wheat in one day, and repeated the act a second time. He at one time engaged in burning lime for Jacob Jones, and fired every other night for twelve consecutive nights, which was ample test of his strong constitution. He married Elizabeth Clark, daughter of Abram Clark, a soldier of the War of 1812, and by her has William, married Melinda Zahniser, two children, Myrtle and Mary; Ann, married William Orr, and has three children, Charles, Alfred and Lily; John H., married Ann Garvin, three children, John, Wendall and Nellie; Lucinda C., married Wilbert Wharton, two children, Burdell and Winnie; James L., Thomas, married Ella Hess, and has one child, Ray. May, the daughter of James L., lives with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernam. Our subject has given each of his four boys a farm worth $3,000. He has bought and sold stock with success. He and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and he was a trustee of the same when the present elegant edifice was erected. He, A. Silveus and brother Francis took the contract to burn the brick for same. He is a Democrat.

THE WILSONS OF JACKSON TOWNSHIP.—William Wilson, the ancestor of the Wilson Family, of Jackson Township, came to Mercer County in 1796, and settled on the farm where his grandson, William Wilson, now resides. His family consisted of wife and five children: William, Samuel, Betsey, Peggy and Rebecca. William married Ellen Downs; Samuel married Rachel Meel; Peggy married Henry Guess; Rebecca married Joseph Turney; Betsey never married. When William Wilson located in Jackson Township the red men were their nearest neighbors, and passed their cabin every day on their way to Sandusky to trade. Mr. Wilson was a Revolutionary soldier, and witnessed the execution of Maj. Andre. His son William was born in 1792, and came with the family to this county when four years of age. He underwent the various hardships that made up the life of the pioneers, not the least irksome of which was a large amount of clearing which fell upon him because of the inclination of his brothers to hunt the numerous deer and other wild animals that abounded in the forests. He was married, in 1833, to Ellen Downs, by whom he had the following children. William, John, Samuel, Mary, Margaret. Seven others died in childhood. William married Amanda M. Wingard; John married Elizabeth Mowry; Samuel married Margaret Kerr; Margaret married John W. Maxwell, and Mary married Simon Wingard. William Wilson cast his first vote with the Democratic party, and continued to do so until 1860, when he joined the Republican party and gave it his hearty support till the time of his death, which occurred September 18, 1878. He was a soldier of the War of 1812. His son, William, who resides on the old homestead, was born December 25, 1836, on the farm now owned and occupied by him, and was married September 7, 1871, to Amanda M. Wingard, by whom he has four children: Henry E., William R., Myrtle M., Nelson F. He went to California in 1864. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has since been identified with the Republican party.

THE ZAHNISERS.—One of the prominent families in the development of Mercer County is the Zahnisers. Valentine Zahniser, the progenitor of all these, lived in Germany. Being in poor health, his physician advised an ocean voyage. He concluded to come to America with his family, which consisted of his wife—Julia Ann Clemens—and two children, Matthias (born in 1749) and the other unnamed. The father and the nameless child died on board the ship, but the mother and Matthias came to America, landing at Philadelphia in 1753, and thence going to Lancaster. Matthias was then four years of age. Mrs. Zahniser married in Lancaster a man named Henry Stout. In 1789 she (a widow a second time) removed to Allegheny County with Matthias, who had married, in 1774, Mary Lint; in 1797 she landed in Mercer County. Matthias arrived in the summer of that year, and made an improvement, consisting of the clearing of five acres. This was on the farm (250 acres) now owned and occupied by William A. and John Ira Zahniser. At the time of his arrival, in the spring of 1797, the only neighbors were John McMillan, John McDonald, George Myers, Daniel Harper, James Rice, Joseph Alexander, Thomas McClain, Benjamin Stokely (came in 1796), Francis Huey, Thomas and Charles McBride, Andrew and Robert McClure, Thomas and Jabez Coulson, William Wilson, Peter Wilson, William Parker, Thomas and William McMillan. These all settled within a radius of four or five miles of the site occupied by Zahniser. Stokely was the only one that came in 1796, the others arriving in 1797 and perhaps in 1798. Matthias Zahniser had seven sons and one daughter that came to Mercer County: Matthias, Michael, John, Valentine, William, Jacob, David and Mary. They all lived in Mercer County, and reared families, except John, who died about 1800. Matthias, Michael and John settled farms in what is now Lake and Jackson Townships. Matthias lived in Jefferson Township after 1807 (prior to that time in Jackson). His family consisted of his wife Dorothy (Fry) Zahniser and these children: John, Matthias, Michael, Mary, Henry, David, Samuel, Julia, Ann and Susan. Michael married Mary Mourer April 29, 1806. Their children were: Jacob, born May 28, 1807; Mary, born December 24, 1808; William, born January 26, 1811; John, born May 25, 1813; David, born August 1, 1815; Catherine, born October 28, 1821. Valentine married Elizabeth White in 1806. Children: May, John W., Sarah, James, Jacob N., Rebecca, Andrew Shulze and Mary. William married Eleanor Stopler in 1814. Children: John L., Andrew J., Michael, William North, Catherine, Valentine, Bythinia and Richard M. J. Jacob married Catherine Wright in 1816. Children: Margaret, William, George W., Jacob, Michael and Mary. David married Nancy Coulson in 1818. Children: Matthias, Lint, Jacob W., Eleanor, Aaron, Thomas, Mary and David R. P. Mary married Joshua McCracken April 1, 1817. Children: Alexander, Mary, Isabella and David.

JACOB ZAHNISER, post-office North's Mills, son of Michael and Mary (Mourer) Zahniser, was born May 28, 1807, in Lake Township, Mercer County. He married Melinda Smith, daughter of George Smith and Rebecca (Cole) Smith, on the 21st of October, 1834. From this union have sprung these children: Henry Martin, married to Elizabeth De France; Rebecca Cole, married to John North; William Fleming, married to Martha Magee; George Michael, married to Margaret J. Rambo; Mary Mourer, married to Richard Hess; Milton Bird, married to Rose McCurdy; Margaret Jane, married to James W. McCullough; Melinda, married to William H. Vernam; Jacob Murphy, married to Jennie

Runkle. Three also died in infancy. Mr. Zahniser has held several places of public trust. He was county auditor in 1831, a justice of the peace from 1840 to 1850, and the county surveyor in 1857 and 1858. Besides he has acted as township assessor, clerk and judge of elections, and been a member of the board of school directors. His leading occupation has been that of a farmer, though he has been a successful teacher of the youth in public schools. In 1827 he was a clerk in Hackney's store in Mercer, and in 1828-29 held a similar position at Williamsfield, Ohio. Politically Mr. Zahniser was a member of the Anti-Masonic party, then a Democrat, but since the organization of the Republican party in 1855 he has been identified with that organization. He was identified with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church from 1842 to 1865, since which time he has been connected with the Cool Spring Presbyterian. Mrs. Zahniser was born May 6, 1816, near Big Bend, in Delaware Township. Her father and mother came from Virginia to Hubbard, Ohio, thence to Delaware Township, then to Fairview, and subsequently to Worth. Mr. and Mrs. Zahniser are still living, in good health, upon their farm in Jackson Township, respected by all who know them.

A. J. ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office North's Mills, was born July 27, 1818, in Mercer County, to William, born in Lancaster County, Penn., who came to Mercer County, and subsequently married Eleanor Statler, a native of the same county. She came to Allegheny County with her parents, Rudolph and Barbara (Scroggs) Statler. There she was married to William Zahniser, and settled with him in what was then Cool Spring. He died May 7, 1856, and she March 17, 1852. Their children were: J. L., A. J., Michael, W. N., Katharine, Valentine, Bithynia and R. M. J. The father of our subject was in the War of 1812, and made several trips to Erie and Fort Meigs. A. J. Zahniser was educated in a log school-house, with split puncheon floors, greased paper windows, open end fire-place and log or split puncheon seats. He worked on the farm till he was twenty years of age. He then taught school in the winter seasons, and worked on farms in the summer, for a time. He afterward worked in a still-house making whisky in the winter, and wooded plows in the summer, for three years. He bought 105 acres of land in 1842, known as the Warden farm, and now owns 185 acres. He then went to improving his farm, and has continued on it to the present time. He was married in 1848 to Nancy J. Hosack, daughter of Col. Thomas Hosack, and by her had one child, who died in 1851. Its mother died the same year. He was never married again, his sister, Mrs. James J. Hosack, having kept house for him since. She has three children: Eleanor, Thomas and W. J. Our subject has filled all the important offices of the township, and has filled other posts of trust.

JOHN L. ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office Jackson Centre, was born April 11, 1816, in Mercer County, Penn., to William, who married Eleanor Statler, mentioned in the sketch of A. J. Zahniser. Our subject was educated in the pioneer log cabin sufficiently to teach nine terms, the first term being conducted in an old dwelling known as the Craig house, in 1836. June 4, 1846, he was married to Lucy North, a sister of John North, whose sketch appears elsewhere. She was born October 16, 1822, in Sandy Lake Township, and has blessed her husband with eleven children: Amanda M., William N., Elizabeth, R. J., John M., Samuel S., Mary E., Kate M., Daniel W., Eva L., and George A., a teacher. Mr. Zahniser has served as county auditor one term, township assessor, auditor, school director twenty-nine years, and was thirty years a justice of the peace. His estimable wife is a consistent member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Jackson Township Live Stock Insurance Company, and is a Democrat.

D. R. P. ZAHNISER, farmer, post-office North's Mills, was born July 8, 1838, in Mercer County, to David and Ann (Coulson) Zahniser. The former was born April 19, 1795, and died October 14, 1874; the latter was born May 21, 1796, and died June 20, 1850. Their children were: Matthias, born September 20, 1819; Lint, born December 2, 1821; William W., born September 16, 1823; Jacob W., born June 22, 1826; Eleanor, born June 24, 1829; Aaron, born July 10, 1831; Thomas, born May 6, 1833; Mary M., born December 9, 1835, and D. R. P. The parents were members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and the father was a Democrat. D. R. P. received a common-school education, and was married February 9, 1875, to Mrs. Josephine Osborn, the widow of William Osborn, who died July 9, 1872, and was the father of James, born November 13, 1866; Plummer, born August 18, 1867; John, born December 10, 1869, died in 1870, and William F., born January 28, 1872. Mrs. Zahniser is a daughter of J. L. Byers, and was born February 9, 1847. The father of our subject was for many years a blacksmith by trade, and by economy was able before his death to give his son 100 acres of arable land, on which he now resides. He and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

BIOGRAPHIES OF WOLF CREEK, PINE AND LIBERTY.

WOLF CREEK TOWNSHIP.

MICHAEL BARDON, farmer, post-office Centretown, is a son of William and Catherine (Sadlen) Bardon, natives of Lawrence County. About 1848 they came to this county, and located on the farm now owned by our subject. The father died January 17, 1888, and his wife in 1879, leaving two children: Catherine, Mrs. James Sterrett, of Deer Creek Township, and our subject, who was born in Lawrence County in 1842. He has never married, and since the death of his father has continued to live on the farm. He is a member of Amity Presbyterian Church.

SAMUEL COLEMAN, deceased, was a son of Ephraim and Annie (Albin) Coleman. Nathaniel Coleman, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of New Jersey and settled near Millbrook, in Worth Township, some time previous to 1800, where he engaged in farming. The father of our subject was born in New Jersey, and was quite young when brought to this county by his parents. After marriage he settled on a tract of land now in Wolf Creek Township, where he died in 1826. His family consisted of two children: Jane, Mrs. D. F. Courtney, of Liberty Township, and our subject. His wife survived him, and afterward married Valentine Giebner, of this township, and had by him several children. She died July 24, 1874. Our subject was born in 1822, on the homestead, and received his education in the public schools of that period, and by his own efforts at home. He taught school during the winter, and worked at farming in the summer for a number of years. In 1849 he married Mary Ann, daughter of Hon. Robert and Nancy (Coleman) Patterson, of this township, and by this union had six children: Emeline, Mrs. J. C. Montgomery, of Pine Township; Mary Bell, Mrs. William C. Miller, of Pine Township; Ephraim V., Robert J., Jason G. and Stella are living with their mother on the homestead. Our subject held several township offices, and for many years was a justice of the peace. About 1854 he was appointed postmaster of Centretown and held that office until 1872. He was identified with the old Whig party, and for many years was the leading spirit of the Republican party in his neighborhood. He belonged, with his family, to the Amity Presbyterian Church. He died November 10, 1886, and is buried in the Union Home Cemetery. His family live on the homestead, near Centretown, in an elegant residence with beautiful grounds, and possess an ample greenhouse filled with the choicest plants. It is all the result of the labor of a man who took pride in surrounding himself and family with the pleasant things of life.

JACOB T. CRAIG, farmer, post-office Pardoe, is a son of Francis and Annie (Powell) Craig. James Craig, the grandfather of our subject, was of Scotch-Irish descent, and he and four of his brothers were early settlers of Delaware, and about 1798 they all removed into this county and settled on Wolf Creek. The father of our subject was born in this county about 1798, and served in the War of 1812. He was always engaged in farming, and died in 1857. His widow died in 1872. They reared a family of six children: Isabella, married Jacob Patterson, of Butler County, Penn., and died in 1861; James B. and Francis S., of Grove City; William, of Butler County, David P., of Australia, and our subject, who was born in what is now Pine Township September 21, 1829. He was educated in the log school-houses, and has always been engaged in farming. In 1857 he married Hannah Hosack, daughter of James and Sarah (Rose) Irwin, and widow of Thomas Hosack, of Findley Township. By her first husband Mrs. Craig had two children: Mary Adeline Hosack, Mrs. John Campbell, of Grove City, and Harriet Rebecca Hosack, Mrs. Harry Brigham, of Franklin, Venango County. Our subject has six living children: Sarah Martha, David Francis, Matthew Irwin, James Taylor, Charles B. and Homer Griffith, all at home. He and family are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Hazzard, of which he is steward. In 1873 he moved onto his present farm, where they have since resided.

ARCHIBALD CRAWFORD, farmer, post-office Pardoe, is a son of Luke and Sarah (Donaldson) Crawford. The father was a native of Ireland, an early settler in Allegheny County, Penn. The mother was born in the eastern part of this State. Her father was one of the earliest settlers in Allegheny County, Penn., and brought a colony with him. In 1836 Hugh D. Crawford, an older brother of our subject, located on a tract of land in this county, three miles south of Mercer, and in 1838 the other members of the family followed, and located on a tract of land purchased from Joseph Kerr. They engaged in farming, and the father died a few years afterward. His wife died in January, 1872. They reared a family of fifteen children, six of whom are living: Hugh D., of Mercer; Jane; Swickley; Samuel, of East Liberty, Allegheny County; our subject; Irwin, of Franklin, Venango County. Our subject was born in Allegheny County, Penn., December 23, 1820, came to this county with his parents in 1838, and has always been engaged in farming. In 1878 he was elected commissioner of the county and served three years. Has held the office of justice of the peace of Wolf Creek Township for ten years, school director for over twenty-one years, and has served in other township offices. He was married in 1852 to Miss Mary J. McChesney, daughter of Samuel and Esther (Barnes) McChesney, of Findley Township. They have by their union five living children: Samuel M., living on a part of the homestead, married to Sadie M. McMillan, daughter of John McMillan, of Grove City, and has two children, Mamie and Plummer; Prof. Robert D., principal of the Tidioute schools, Warren County, Penn., married Hattie Blystone, of Edinboro, and has three children: George and Florence (twins) and Josephine; John H., of this township, married Sadie Giebner, daughter of J. T. Giebner, Esq., of Sharon; Esther, Ella and Sadie A. are at home. Our subject and family are members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church. He held the office of elder of said church for twenty years. Mr. Crawford's father was a Democrat, but he and sons and brothers vote the Republican ticket.

D. C. EAKIN, merchant, Centretown, is a son of James and Adeline (Murdock) Eakin, of Venango County, Penn., where our subject was born in 1842. In 1864 he enlisted in Company B, Eighty-third Regiment, and served until the close of the war. He was reared on a farm, and followed lumbering for many years. In 1870 he purchased an interest in the mercantile business at Centretown, with John Hughes, and two years afterward his partner retired from the firm, and he has since continued the business alone. In 1873 he was appointed postmaster of Centretown, and has since held that office. In 1868 he married Mary, daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Black, of Pine Township, and they have no children. He and wife are members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church.

JOHN A. GILL, farmer, post-office Centretown, is a son of Hugh and Annie (Anderson) Gill. The father was born in Washington County, Penn., in 1782, and came here in 1798 with his father, William Gill, a native of Ireland, and a soldier in the Revolutionary War. They settled near Courtney's Mills, in what is now Liberty Township, and William died there in 1832. The father of our subject was a soldier in the War of 1812. He finally settled near Harrisville, Butler Co., Penn., and died there in 1866. His widow died in 1872. Their family consisted of six children, four of whom are still living: Margaret, Mrs. Joseph Humphrey, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; John A., our subject; Elizabeth A. and Hugh, living on the homestead. The father voted the Democratic ticket in his early days, and afterward joined the Republican party. He paid for his farm by teaming. He hauled the timber for the first bridge across the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and for the first steamboat run down the Ohio River. Our subject was born on the homestead March 22, 1823, received his education at the pioneer school-house and a few terms at the public schools. In 1857 he married Sarah E., daughter of Caleb and Sarah Russell, of this township, and by her has eight children: Samuel S., of Butler County; Hugh R. and William J., merchants of Pittsburgh; M. G., of Kansas; Newton; Otis A., of Pittsburgh; Ira H. and Harry L., at home. In 1847 he came to this county and purchased his present farm of 100 acres, then mostly woodland. He built a saw-mill on Wolf Creek, which he ran for twenty years. He has held the offices of county auditor, supervisor and school director of the township. In 1856 he was elected justice of the peace, which office he has since held with the exception of one or two terms. He votes the Republican ticket, and he and family are members of Amity Presbyterian Church.

JAMES GRACE, farmer, post-office Centretown, is a son of Burchfield and Rebecca (Albin) Grace. The father was born December 1, 1804, in Worth Township; was a member of Fairview Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Republican party, and very temperate in principles. He died in May, 1869. Rebecca Albin was his first wife, born in 1805, and died in 1858, leaving six children: John, of Worth Township; Henry L., of Middlesex; William R., of Fairview Township; James, our subject; E. C., was a member of Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, was lieutenant of same company, and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness; S.

C., member of Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, and died in New York after participating in Sherman's march. This family were intensely loyal, there being five brothers in the army at one time, and the eldest, John, was drafted, but was let off on account of having so many brothers there. The second wife of the father was Mrs. Margaret Henderson, who died in 1862, leaving no children. His third wife was Mrs. Hannah Laughlin, and by her he had one child, G. G., now living on the old homestead with his mother. Our subject was born April 17, 1842, received his education at the township schools, and has since been engaged in farming. In 1861 he enlisted in Company G, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, and served three years; received a severe wound in his breast at the battle of Gaines Mill. In 1866 he married Sarah Giebner, daughter of Valentine and Mrs. Annie Albin (Coleman) Giebner, of this township. By this union they have five children: Ephraim E., Harry E., Dewitt G., Annie R. and Ruth May; all at home. Our subject moved onto the present farm in 1868, and has held the offices of school director and assessor of township. For the last six years he has been secretary of the school board. He is a member of Marion Craig Post, G. A. R., and he and family are members of Fairview Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he is steward and has been Sunday-school superintendent for many years. He votes the Republican ticket, but is for temperance come which way it will.

ROBERT E. HOUSTON, farmer, post-office Pardoe, is a son of Thomas and Nancy (Adair) Houston, natives of Ireland, who now reside in Findley Township. Our subject is their fourth son, and was born in Findley Township March 16, 1842; received his education at the township schools, and in 1863 enlisted in Company H, Second Battalion, and served seven months. He has mostly been engaged in farming, and in 1874 moved onto his present farm in Wolf Creek Township. In 1873 he married Lizzie M., daughter of James and Margaret (Allen) Montgomery, of Findley Township. By this union they have four children: Montgomery A., Samuel T., James R. and Maggie A. Our subject votes the Democratic ticket, has held the office of assessor of the township, and he and family are members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church.

GILBERT JOHNSTON, farmer, post-office Pardoe, is a son of Samuel and Ann Eliza (Page) Johnston. Samuel Johnston, Sr., the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, and one of the early settlers of Cool Spring Township, this county. His wife was Ruth Alexander, by whom he had thirteen children, four of whom are still living: Charlotte and Ruth, maiden ladies, of Cool Spring Township; Elizabeth, Mrs. Richard Smith, of Jefferson Township; Annie, Mrs. William Johnston, of Crawford County, Penn. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and he and wife both died on the homestead in Cool Spring Township. The father of our subject was born in 1809, and died in 1854. His wife was born in 1818, and still resides near the old homestead. They reared five children: Sarah Jane, Mrs. William Mitchell, of Jefferson Township; William, in Iowa; Marshall, in Colorado; Lucy M., who died at the age of twenty-one years, and our subject, who was born April 27, 1845, and received his education at the common schools until nine years of age, when the death of his father occurred, compelling him to remain at home and help to support the other members of the family. In 1869 he purchased his present farm, where he has since resided. He has been elected to various township offices, and has served as a justice of the peace since 1881. He was married in 1864 to Margaret A., daughter of John and Jane (Patton) Paden, of Delaware Township. By this union he has eight children: Jennie E., Sarah M., L. Rebecca, Mrs. E. A. McDowell, of this township; Mary M., Ester A., Will iam M., Robert N. and Annie C. Our subject is one of the trustees of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church, of which he and family are members. He has always been a supporter of the Republican party. In 1879 he established a general store on a part of his farm, and has since conducted that in connection with farming.

THOMAS McDOWELL, farmer, post-office Centretown, is a son of Hugh and Mary (McFarlin) McDowell, and was born in Venango County, Penn., July 13, 1823, and in 1824 his parents came to this county and located in Worth Township, on the farm now occupied by Gilbert Baker. The father was in the War of 1812; the mother died in 1832, leaving five children. Our subject and Sarah (Mrs. Joseph Brown, of Butler County) are the only ones living. The second wife of the father was Miss Elizabeth McCann, and two of their children are still living: William and Hugh. His third wife was Mrs. Tilfor. By her he had Francis (Mrs. Dunlap), of Butler County, and Hugh, of that county. Our subject was reared in this township, and received his education at the log school-house, and after the death of his father remained on the homestead. He was married in 1843 to Miss Magdaline, daughter of Thomas Montgomery, of this township. By her he has four children: Mary, Mrs. William R. Gaily, of Lawrence County; Sarah E., of Grove City; Martha Ann, Mrs. Alexander Hannah, of Dodge City, Ford Co., Kas.; E. A., living with subject, married Rebecca Johnston, daughter of Gilbert Johnston, Esq., of this township. In 1864 our subject enlisted in Company M, Sixth Heavy Artillery, and served until the close of the war. He is a member of Marion Craig Post, G. A. R. In 1844 he located on his present farm. He and family are members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church, of which he has been deacon. He has held the offices of school director and constable of the township, and votes with the Republican party.

JOHN A. MCFARLIN, farmer, post-office Centretown, is a son of James and Melissa (Hard) McFarlin, natives of Ireland. His grandfather, John, immigrated to America in 1797 with his wife, Margery, and six children. He was killed east of the Mountains, and his widow with her children visited her brother at New Bedford, Penn., for about one year, and then moved to Trumbull County, Ohio, where the father of our subject was reared and engaged in farming and distilling. His wife was a native of Vermont, and by her he had nine children, five of whom are still alive. He died in 1838 and his widow in 1886. Their living children are: Mary, widow of William Breckenridge, living in Illinois; Louisa, Mrs. Daniel Jacobs, of Kansas; Sarah, Mrs. Leonard Hogg, of Illinois; Robert W., of Illinois, and our subject, who was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, June 3, 1823, and was educated at the public schools. In 1852 he went to California and engaged in gold mining for three years. In 1861 he purchased his present farm, where he has since resided. In 1855 he married Lovina W., daughter of Isaac and Annie K. (Wick) Kimmell, of Ohio, and by this union has seven children: Grant W., of Worth Township, married to Mary, daughter of Henry and Jane Howe, of Worth Township, and has two children, Alice and Luella; William J., of Springfield Township, married Mary Sopher, daughter of John Sopher, of this Township, and has two children, John L. and Lewis C.; Elmer, of Kansas, married Belle Blakely, of Clyde, Kas.; Lizzie, Lillian, Frank O., Annie M. and Louise-Blanche. Our subject has held the offices of supervisor, school director and assessor of the township. He and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fairview, of which he is class-leader and steward, and has been trustee.

JAMES PATTERSON, deceased, was a native of Ireland, and came to America about 1829, and first located in Lawrence County, Penn., with his parents, William and Isabella Patterson. He received his education at the public schools of that county, and in 1844 moved to this county, located in what is now Wolf Creek Township, and engaged in farming. He served the township as school director and supervisor for a number of years. He married Rebecca Jane Kelly, daughter of John and Margaret Kelly, of Butler County, and had by her seven children: James and Emma, who died when young; George E., an attorney of Mercer, died in 1887; and the four others still living are: Robert, of this Township, married Nancy, daughter of Daniel and Peggy (Aldman) Gildersleeve, of this township, and has one child, Emma Estella; John W., Thomas M. and Margaret Elizabeth. Our subject died in 1869, and his widow, John W., Thomas M. and Margaret E. occupy the homestead and are engaged in farming. They are members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church.

PINE TOWNSHIP.

SAMUEL R. ALLEN, M. D., Grove City, is a son of Samuel and Mary (Gilmore) Allen. The father was born in Ireland, and immigrated to America with his father, Robert Allen, when he was eight years old. Robert Allen settled on a farm in Springfield Township, this county, where the father of our subject was reared and educated at the schools of that period, and where he has since lived. His wife, Mary Gilmore, bore him seven children, five of whom still live: Rev. R. C., now located in Canada; Dr. S. R., Ann Jane, died at the age of twenty-two years, a promising young woman; infant daughter, died at the age of two weeks; Julia Mary, Mrs. Robert Wilson, of Nebraska; William J. C., at home, and Ambrose M., D. D. S., of Philadelphia. Our subject, who is the second, was born on the homestead December 5, 1850. Mrs. Allen died in 1874, and the father of our subject was again married, to his present wife, Mary Porter. By this union he has one child, Lillian, living at home. Our subject received his education at the schools of Grove City and Wilmington, Lawrence County, and graduated from the medical department of the Western Reserve University, of Cleveland, in 1881, and soon afterward located at Grove City, where he has since practiced. He married, in 1882, Harriet, daughter of J. C. and Harriet (Heydrick) Shaw, of this county. They have three children: Mary Jane, Newton Rutherford and Samuel James. Our subject and family are members of the Covenant Church of Findley Township, of which he is an elder.

THE BLACK FAMILY.—Adam Black was born in Adams County in the year 1763. He married Polly Allegan in 1786. Both were supposed to be of Scotch-Irish descent, his father being Henry Black. Adam and his wife lived in that county until 1803, when they removed to Washington County, Penn., and in the following year to Mercer County, settling on the farm where David Gilren now lives. This he cleared, and upon it erected a log tavern, which he kept for some years. At that time there was, comparatively speaking, no settlement anywhere about, but all was dense forest. Mr. Black died in 1816, his widow living until 1841; both, however, died on the farm they had first located upon. Their eldest child was Elizabeth Chambers, who was born in 1787, and died in Mercer in 1818. Following her were born Henry, 1789–1860; Joseph, 1791—; Alexander, 1794–1853; Ibbey, 1795–1862; Adam, 1797–1864; Robert, 1800–1848; Maria, widow of Maj. John K. Harris, 1802, and Peggy, 1805–1826. Henry and Joseph both served in Harrison's army in the War of 1812, Henry being afterward captain of the Mercer Blues. Adam was also at one time commander of that organization, and at a later date became major of the volunteer battalion. Robert was the captain of the Springfield Light Infantry when it was first organized. In civil service Henry was a presidential elector in the campaign of 1840, when Gen. Harrison was elected President. Alexander, besides serving as a soldier at Erie for two terms, was chosen justice of the peace, a position which he creditably filled two terms; Adam, also, for a similar period, served as justice, and Robert was elected to the Legislature, and died in Harrisburg at the close of his second year of public life. In religious faith the members of this family inclined toward the Presbyterian Church, and were its zealous defenders and supporters. Three of the brothers, Alexander, Adam and Robert, were elders in the Centre Church, of which their sister's husband, Rev. John Munson, was for a long time pastor. Of the sisters, Ibbey was married twice, first to Thomas Brandon, and later to Rev. John Munson; Maria was the wife of J. K. Harris, and Elizabeth became the spouse of John Chambers, and by him the mother of R. B. Chambers, editor of the St. Louis Republic.

ROBERT G. BLACK, grocery and feed store, Grove City, is the eldest son of Alexander and Elizabeth (Glenn) Black, and was born on the homestead, in Springfield Township, March 2, 1821, where he was educated, and followed farming for a number of years. In 1859 he was elected county commissioner, which office he held for six years. In 1873 he moved to this borough and established his present business. He was married in 1847 to Miss Mary Park, daughter of Joseph Park, of Pine Township, and natives of York County, Penn. They have two children: Ada, Mrs. Dr. Martin, of Grove City, and Laura, Mrs. J. P. Dougherty, of Omaha, Neb. Mr. Black and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church of this borough.

A. T. BLACK, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of Alex. and Elizabeth (Glenn) Black. Adam Black, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Adams County, Penn., and moved into this county about 1804, and settled on a farm in Springfield Township. The father of A. T. was born in Adams County, Penn., in 1794, and was reared and educated in this county. At the age of eighteen years he enlisted in the American army, and served through the War of 1812. Afterward settled near Blacktown, where he lived until his death, in 1853. His widow died in 1869. They had a family of nine children, seven of whom are still living: Robert G., James H. and Joseph C., of Grove City; A. B., of Springfield Township; Maria E., who married the Hon. Robert Patterson, of Beaver County; Elizabeth, a maiden lady of that county, and our subject, who was born in Springfield Township in 1822, educated at the schools of that period, and learned the trade of blacksmith, which he followed for twenty-five years in Grove City, having moved here in 1846. In 1861 he enlisted in Company F, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war; was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, and held as prisoner in Belle Isle and Libby Prisons for three months. In 1846 he married Margaret Christley, daughter of William Christley, of Springfield Township. She died in 1874, leaving two children: Emilla, Mrs. Charles Jagers, of Michigan, and George M., who died in 1876. Subject was again married, to Miss Margaret McDowell, daughter of Robert McDowell, of Pine Township, his present wife. In 1866 Mr. Black was elected sheriff of the county, and held that office for three years; has also held township offices of supervisor, school director, etc. He is a member of Marion Craig Post, No. 325, G. A. R., of Grove City. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of this place.

AUGUSTUS P. BUCKHOLDT, hardware merchant, Grove City, was born on board an American vessel in the Port of Havre, France, September 10, 1842. His mother was a native of France. Her maiden name was C. E. Clementine, and his father was William J. Buckholdt, a captain in the United States Navy. After the close of the late war he retired from service and engaged in oil operations in Venango County, Penn., being among the early oil operators of that county. Our subject was reared and received his education at New Orleans, La. In 1861 he enlisted in the United States Navy and served until the close of the war, when he moved to Venango County with his parents and carried on a number of oil supply stores there for several years. In 1882 he moved to Grove City and established a general hardware business, and at the present time operates two stores in order to accommodate his extensive patronage. In 1867 he married Miss Annie Rosenleaf, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and by this union has four children: William A., Augustus P., DeWitt C. and Lillian. Our subject has been in the borough council for three years, and is now first lieutenant and quartermaster of the Fifteenth Regiment National Guards of Pennsylvania. He was a member of Clinton Commandery No. 14, K. T., of Brooklyn, N. Y. He is a member of Marion Craig Post No. 325, G. A. R., Grove City; of Grove City Lodge No. 35, K. of P.; Grove City Assembly No. 5689, K. of L., and Eureka Lodge No. 64, A. O. U. W. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of this borough. He is manager for the Western Union Telegraph Company at Grove City.

BUCHANAN FAMILY.—The first of the Buchanan family to locate in this county were William and Mary (Ward) Buchanan, natives of Donegal County, Ireland, who immigrated to America in 1791, and first located in Lancaster County, Penn., where they remained until 1798, when they removed to this county and purchased a tract of land in what is now Pine Township. Their family consisted of five children, of whom Elizabeth was born in Ireland and afterward married John Graham, of this county; the other four were George, William, James and Mary. George was a soldier in the War of 1812, and afterward married Hannah White, daughter of Alex. White. Five of their children still live: Samuel and Rachel, of this township; William, of Butler County; Rev. James, of Illinois; Mary, Mrs. Daniel Ross, of Michigan. William married Catherine Reeves, of this county, and four of their children are still living: F. William, the oldest son, was a member of Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served through the war, married Susan, daughter of Mathew Black, of this township, and his children are Catherine J., Mathew H. and Margaret Eliza. He is now engaged in farming in Dickson County, Tenn.; Alexander, born in this township in 1837, and has always remained on the homestead, served the township one term as constable, and is a member of the Harmony United Presbyterian Church of Butler County; Josiah was born on the homestead in 1843, married Harriet, daughter of Joseph Emery, of this township, who died in 1882, leaving three children, William S., Charles H., James A. His present wife was Lucinda, daughter of John Elder, of Butler County. They have one child, Clyde, and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Grove City. Mary was the youngest, and married Robert Shaw, of this township. They and their three children are dead. James was next to the youngest, and was born in Lancaster County August 23, 1797, and in 1840 married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis and Martha (Boyd) Ramsey, of this township. He was always engaged in farming, and died February 27, 1876, leaving his widow with eight children: Mary W., Mrs. Henry Durstein, of Tennessee; Matilda B., Sarah, Mrs. Adam Richel, of Butler County; Elizabeth J., Mrs. John Diger, of Lackawannock Township; Francis, of Butler County; Nancy, Mrs. J. C. Wick, of this township; Susan Kerr, Thomas M., married Jane Douglas, of Hickory Township. James Buchanan was a man who was active in public affairs, and held about all of the township offices. He was a member of Harmony United Presbyterian Church. Since his death his widow and son, Thomas M., occupy the homestead, which is underlaid with coal and limestone. They are also members of Harmony Church.

J. BORLAND, dentist, Grove City, was born in Westmoreland County in 1840, and received his education in the public schools of that county, and at Wilksburg Academy, near Pittsburgh. After completing his education he went with a surveying party on the Hannibal & St. Joe Railroad. He returned in 1859 and completed his profession, and in 1861 came to this county, located at North Liberty, and practiced dentistry there and in Centreville. In 1863 he moved to the oil country, and founded the Telephone at Karns City. He remained there until 1882, when by a request of the citizens of this place he moved the paper to Grove City, and published it with good success until he sold it to A. B. Ray, of Mercer, in July, 1884, and has followed his profession, and is also connected with the Pittsburgh Leader and Western Press as correspondent. Dr. Borland was the originator of the Editorial Association of Northwestern Pennsylvania, which is still in existence. He is a son of Capt. J. Borland, a soldier of the War of 1812, and Eliza (Dunwoody) Borland, a native of Ireland. The family consisted of nine children, eight still living: Margaret, Elizabeth, Hannah, Isabella, Sarah, Robert, died at the age of twenty-two, and had acted as assistant superintendent of the Union Hotel of Pittsburgh for a number of years; James, the youngest, lives with his mother at Pittsburgh. Our subject was married in 1862, to Jane Dunwoody, of Butler County, and has four children: Frank, Edward, Florence May and John. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Grove City.

JAMES M. COULTER, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a representative of one of the early families of this county. The first of the Coulter family to settle in this county were Richard and Catherine Coulter, natives of County Donegal, Ireland, near the town of Killabeggs. They immigrated to America in 1793, with one child, Andrew, and settled in Franklin County, Penn., where four more children were born to them: John, Samuel, James and William. John died at the age of five years. About 1804 they removed to this county, and settled in Wolf Creek Township, which is now the northern part of Liberty Township, purchasing a farm of Abraham Snyder, which is now owned by Edward Denniston and Joseph Moore. They afterward purchased another tract of 300 acres in what is now Pine Township, and embraces the farm owned by our subject, James Hunter and Orlando Connor, but continued to live on the first settlement until their death. Richard died in February, 1839, and his wife in December, 1841. Andrew Coulter, their eldest son, was born in Ireland in 1793, and inherited the homestead after the death of his parents. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. He married Sarah McCoy, and reared two children: Mary J., Mrs. Edward Denniston, and William A., who lives in London, this county. He died February 22, 1867; his widow died December 14, 1885. Samuel, the second son, inherited 150 acres, one-half of the second tract of land, and married Jane Moore, by whom he had three children: James, Catherine and Martha. This family are all dead. William, the youngest of the family, married Sarah Bush, and settled in Armstrong County. He and his wife are both dead, and their children who are living are Catherine, married William McCoulisters, of Armstrong County (their children are Jane, Elizabeth, Annie and Robert); Jane married George Grinder, of Armstrong County, and has one child, Henry. Maria, the second daughter of William, married Henry Peters, of same county, and have seven children. Frances, the third daughter, married Lewis Benson; they have six children. Elizabeth, the fourth daughter, married Mr. Gibson, of Armstrong County, and has three sons. James, the father of our subject, was next to the youngest of Richard's family, and was born in Franklin County July 1, 1798, and in 1823 married Cynthia Rose, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Clark) Rose, of this county. He inherited the other half of the second tract of land owned by his parents, and in 1821 built the house now occupied by our subject. They spent the remainder of their lives in this house, and died there, the father October 19, 1882, and mother December 18, 1881. Their family consisted of eleven children, three of whom died quite young: Nancy, married Henry Mechling, and had eight children, died in 1878, at the age of fifty years; the other seven are living, and are Samuel, of Marshall County, married Maria Bash, of Iowa, and has eleven children; Rebecca J., Mrs. James M. McCoy, of this township, had six children; Richard, of Grove City, married Mary J. Stoughton, and had six children; James M.; Henrietta, Mrs. John Hess, of Missouri; Andrew J., of Butler County, married Mary Black, and has eight children; Amanda, Mrs. David Dale, of Liberty Township, has one child. James M. Coulter, our subject, was born June 9, 1838, in the house which he now occupies; was educated at Harrisville, Beaver Academy and Pine Grove Normal School, and for several years engaged in teaching district schools in this and adjoining counties in this State, and in Pike County, Ohio. Also taught vocal and instrumental music, and, for the past several years, he has been engaged in farming. In 1863 he enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Fiftieth Ohio, and served until his honorable discharge. In 1867 he married Mary Leighty, daughter of John and Harriet (Worthington) Leighty, of Fayette County. They have two daughters, Cora and Eugenie.

SAMUEL J. COVERT, section foreman on the P. S. & L. E. R. R., Grove City, is a son of William and Catherine (Adams) Covert, of Pine Township, and was born October 4, 1856, educated in the public schools and engaged in railroad-ing, which he has since followed. He was married, in 1884, to Miss Nancy, daughter of Miller Cornelius, of Pine Township. They have three children: Harry Cleveland, Ira Clyde and Lilly Esther. Mr. Covert's family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Grove City, and he has been a citizen of Pine Township since birth.

EDWARD DENNISTON, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of Alexander and Nancy (Hannah) Denniston. The father was a native of Ireland, and immigrated to America with his parents when he was seven years of age. His father, Robert Denniston, located in Franklin County, Penn., where he died a few years later, and the family moved to Washington County, Penn. In 1805 Alexander, the father of Edward, and his brother William, moved into this county, and Alexander located in Springfield Township, where Leesburgh now stands, and his brother located on a tract of land adjoining. In 1854 Alexander started to Iowa and died before reaching his destination. He was sixty-nine years of age; his widow died in 1856 at the age of sixty-eight. He served in the War of 1812 under Gen. Harrison. Their family consisted of eight children, five of whom still live: Mary, married David Bower, who was a cabinet-maker, and for many years a merchant, both died in New Lisbon, Ohio, he in 1880, and she in 1883, her death occurring while in her pew in the United Presbyterian Church. They had six children: John, the eldest, is a merchant in Pittsburgh, and David C., the other son, is a merchant in New Lisbon, Ohio. The other four are daughters; Alexander, of California; William and Sarah (Mrs. Ralph Hunter), of Jackson County, Iowa; Nancy (Mrs.

S. P. Reed), of Kansas, who died on the 29th of May, 1888; and Edward, who is the eldest of the sons, and was born in Springfield Township, this county, January 22, 1816. He was educated in the public schools of Washington County. He learned the trade of a mill-wright, and followed that occupation for years in connection with farming. In 1855 he located on his present farm, where he has since resided. In 1843 he married Miss Mary J. Coulter, daughter of Andrew and Sarah (McCoy) Coulter, of this township. Their family consisted of five children: William C., married Ada Cameron, daughter of Joseph A. Cameron, of Buffalo, N. Y., and had two children: Maude and Benjamin B. William C. died in 1884 at the age of thirty-eight, and his family reside with subject. Francis M., married Andrew Schumaderfer and lives in Clarion County, and has two children, Carrie J. and Edward. Andrew F., married Nancy, daughter of J. J. Kelly, Esq., of Centreville. They have two children, Ida and Bessie. Charles W. and Edward A. are at home. About 1834 our subject was a member of a military company called the "Mercer Cavalry," and held the commission of major. He has held the offices of school director, supervisor and auditor of the township, and justice of the peace for five years. He is an elder in the Reformed Church of Amsterdam, Liberty Township. Robert Denniston, a brother of subject, was a soldier in the Mexican War. After its close he embarked for Nicaragua, with Col. Walker, and is supposed to have died on his way home between Vicksburg and Mercer, from the effects of a bayonet wound in his hip.

JOHN DAUGHERTY, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of John and Elizabeth (McCoy) Daugherty. William Daugherty, the grandfather of subject, was a native of North Carolina, and came to Pennsylvania and settled near Pittsburgh some time previous to 1787. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and afterward located in the county in what is now Pine Township. His wife was Polly Watson, a Quaker lady of South Carolina. They reared a large family of children, all of whom are dead. John, Sr., was their oldest son, and was born near Pittsburgh in 1787, and was brought to this county by his parents when he was quite young. He was reared here, and afterward moved to Butler County, where he remained ten years, and then returned to this county and located on the homestead now owned by our subject, where he lived until his death in 1848. His wife died in 1847. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and earned the commission of first lieutenant. He was one of the early constables of Pine Township for many years, and in 1845 was elected justice of the peace, and served until his death. His family consisted of seven children: Catherine, Mrs. Hugh Gilmer, of Illinois; William W., farmer, of Pine Township; Mary Ann, Mrs. Samuel Montgomery, of Illinois; Joseph, of Bovard, Butler County; John, our subject; Thomas M., who went to Australia in 1854; Mary, Mrs. John Dunn, of South Oil City. Our subject was born in this township February 14, 1827, received his education at the schools of Harrisville, and has been an extensive lumber operator and farmer. In 1851 he married Julia Ann McCoy, daughter of Thomas and Jane (McConnell) McCoy, of this township. She died in 1858, leaving four children: Emily Jane, married William Wilson, of Wolf Creek Township, and has two children, Charles H. and Lester; Horace, lives with subject, married Ada Z. Gill, daughter of James and Sarah L. (McDowell) Gill, of this township, and has two children, Earl and Cliff; Annie, living at home; Austin Dewitt, in Omaha, Neb. Our subject was again married, to Mrs. Emily Braham, daughter of Thomas McCoy. She died in 1873, leaving five children: Lizzie Inez, Mrs. David J. McCord, of Armstrong County, who has two children, Earl and Edna Olive; Olive, Lula, Maud and Hattie. Subject's present wife was Maggie J.

White, daughter of James White, of this township. They have no children. Mr. Daugherty has held all of the township offices, and in 1853 was elected justice of the peace, and has held that office since without a break. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Grove City.

JOSEPH FILER, proprietor of the Filer House, Grove City, Penn., was born in Staffordshire, England, February 5, 1828, and when a boy engaged in mining coal. In 1850 he immigrated to America, and has been engaged in many of the largest mines of Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. His wife was Rachel, a daughter of Samuel Oakes, of near Greenville, and they have five children: William, a mechanic in Pine Township; Amos, located in Sharon; Elizabeth, at home; Charles, livery stable proprietor at Grove City, and James. In 1882 Mr. Filer retired from the coal business and purchased his present hotel, and by his geniality and courtesy has made it one of the best hotels in the county.

JAMES GILL, farmer, post-office Centretown, is a son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Kelly) Gill. William Gill, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Scotland, and immigrated to America about 1795, and settled in Liberty Township. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. His children were Samuel, Hugh, William, Isaac, Sarah, Mary and Fannie, all of whom are dead. Isaac was born in Liberty Township in 1810, and always followed farming. He afterward settled in Wolf Creek Township, where he died in 1877, and his widow in 1886. They reared five children: David, died in 1874; Isaac, a farmer in Wolf Creek Township; John, of Jackson Centre; Elizabeth, Mrs. John McCord, of Butler County, and James, who was born in Liberty Township in 1829, and was reared and educated in Wolf Creek Township. At an early age he learned the trade of carpenter, and has since worked at that in connection with farming. In 1862 he enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nine months, holding the rank of corporal. In 1856 he married Sarah McDowell, daughter of Samuel and Prescilla (McDowell) McDowell, of Wolf Creek Township. They have seven living children: Jennie (Mrs. F. G. Masson, of Pine Township, who has two children, Martha U. and Aura G.), Ada Z. (Mrs. Horace Daugherty, of this township), Elmer (who married Nancy Yates, and lives in Lawrence County), John E., James P., Euphemia B., Sarah E. Mr. Gill has held offices of school director and constable of Wolf Creek Township, and in 1870 moved onto his present farm, and has since been supervisor and school director of Pine Township, and is a member of Marion Craig Post No. 325, G. A. R. He and family are members of Scotch Hill United Presbyterian Church, he being an elder of that body.

ALEXANDER E. GRAHAM, banker, Grove City, is a son of Mark and Nancy (Reed) Graham. Arthur Graham, the grandfather of subject, was a native of Ireland, and settled in what is now Findley Township, in this county, some time prior to 1800. The father of our subject was born in that township in 1811, and followed farming until his death, in 1857. His widow died in 1886. His sister Isabella, Mrs. William Cummings, is the only child living of their family. Mark and Nancy Graham had six children, three of whom are still living: James and Arthur, on the homestead, and Alexander E., who was the second child and born on the homestead near Mercer in 1839. He was educated at the public schools and the Commercial College of Pittsburgh. For several years he engaged in farming, afterward worked at book-keeping in various places of this county, and in 1873 entered the Sharon Savings Bank in that capacity, and remained there some years. In 1884 he located in Grove City, and succeeded the Gealey Bros. in the Grove City Bank. In 1887 he built his present fine building, and January 1, 1888, associated with him Mr. W. C. Alexander, of Mercer. In 1870 Mr. Graham married Charlotte Heald, daughter of Joseph Heald, of Wisconsin. They have two children: Mark and Emma. Mr. Graham is a member of Hebron Lodge No. 250, A. Y. M., of Sharon. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Grove City.

JOSEPH HUMPHREY, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of Henry and Harriet (Rose) Humphrey. The father of our subject was the second son of David Humphrey, and was born in County Armagh, Ireland, immigrated to America in 1803, and lived in Chester County, Penn., for some years, and afterward moved to Delaware County, N. Y., where he married and where our subject was born in 1820. In 1828 they moved to this county and located in Findley Township. They afterward moved to the farm now owned by our subject, where the father died. Five of their children still live: Sarah, Mrs. Daniel Gregg, of this township; Martha, Mrs. William Buchanan, of this township; James R., of Kansas; Maggie, Mrs. Robert Hyslop, of Xenia, Ohio, and Joseph. The last named received his education in the public schools, and has since been engaged in farming. He was married in 1847 to Elizabeth Acher, daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Ryard) Acher. They have five children: James V., farmer near Mercer; David R., of New Brighton; Margery, Maggie and William H. He and family are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Grove City.

ISAAC CONRAD KETLER, president of Grove City College, was born at Northumberland, Penn., January 21, 1853. He was one of twelve children born to Adam and Mary (Kyle) Ketler. The father was a huckster, was born at Barren Hill, Montgomery Co., Penn., in 1818, and died in 1885. The mother was born in Northumberland County in 1826, and is still living. Isaac was educated at the National Normal School, Lebanon, Ohio, and at the University of Wooster, and was graduated from the Western Theological Seminary in 1888. He was married, December 24, 1878, to Miss Tillie Gibson, of London, Penn., a daughter of David, born at Derry, Westmoreland County, in 1812, and Rebecca (Courtney) Gibson, born in 1812. He has one child, Willie G., and is a Presbyterian. He commenced teaching as early as 1871, and began work at Grove City April 11, 1876. The strides forward that have been made by Grove City College under his administration are remarkable, and are largely due to his energy and ability.

JOSHUA KINDER, merchant, Grove City, was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1831, came to America and located in this borough in 1853, and first engaged in the boot and shoe business, which he followed until 1870, when he opened his present store, where he deals in general merchandise. In 1855 he married Malinda, daughter of John Smith, of Northumberland County, Penn. They have two children: Ella A., who is a professor of chemistry, etc., in Grove City College, and Martha Edith. Mr. Kinder is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and holds the office of trustee in it.

ALBERT A. LITTLE was born near Millbrook, Mercer County, Penn., April 13, 1861, and is the third son of Joseph J. and Ruth Little. His father was born in Ireland in 1831, and immigrated to the United States in 1839, and was married in 1854 to Miss Ruth Bradley, of Jackson Township, Mercer Co., Penn., who was born in 1835. Albert A. Little received his common school education at Millbrook, and while attending school corresponded to some extent for local papers, and soon formed a liking for this kind of work, but subsequently attended Grove City College for two terms, when he entered the Western Press office, at Mercer, in 1881, to learn the printing trade. He afterward worked on the Sandy Lake News and Oil City Derrick. In August, 1884, he purchased a half interest in the Grove City Telephone, which he yet retains, and is now editor and business manager of that paper. He was married September 24, 1885, to Miss Cassie B. McElwaine, of Sandy Lake, and the union has been blessed with one son. Mr. Little and family are identified with the Methodist denomination. He has risen to his present place through force of character, enterprise and integrity, and is a young man of promise. While attending college at Grove City Mr. Little conceived the idea of establishing a paper in Grove City, the Pine Grove, and before the Telephone had been started, but little then thought that his ambition would afterward be realized.

J. M. MARTIN, M. D., Grove City, is a son of James and Sarah (Mills) Martin, the father a native of Lawrence County, Penn., and the mother a daughter of John Mills, of Pine Township, Mercer Co., Penn. Dr. Martin was born near Wilmington, Lawrence County, in 1849; was educated at the college in that place; read medicine with Dr. John Hamilton, of Allegheny City, and Dr. W. R. Hamilton, of Pittsburgh, for a number of years; was graduated from the medical department of Bellevue College, of New York City, in 1874, and in the same year located in Grove City, where he has since practiced, and now enjoys a very extensive practice in this end of the county. In 1876 he married Miss Ada Black, daughter of R. G. and Mary (Park) Black, of this borough. At the present time he is a member of the borough council, and a Republican in politics. He was one of the founders of the Pine Grove Normal Academy, and one of the original trustees, but subsequently withdrew his support.

THOMAS McCox, stone mason and farmer, Grove City, is a son of William and Jane (Gilmer) McCoy. Thomas, Sr., the grandfather of subject, was a native of Virginia, and moved into what is now Pine Township when the father of Thomas was a child. He took up a large tract of land from the Government, which is inhabited by many of the McCoy family, and the settlement is known as McCoy Town. The father of our subject followed the occupation of farming; died in 1866, and his widow in 1887. They reared ten children: Joseph, was a member of the Ninth Wisconsin Regiment, and was killed at Hatch's Run in 1865; John, of Pine Township; Catherine, Mrs. David Mortimer, of Butler County; Mary Ann, Mrs. James T. Graham, of Pine Township; Lucinda Jane, Mrs. Lemon Mortimer, Clarion County; Thomas; Jackson, on the homestead; Elizabeth, Mrs. Robert McBride, Pine Township; William, of Bradford, and James, of Grove City. Our subject was born in Pine Township in 1835, and was educated at the common schools. In 1861 he enlisted in Company I, One Hundred and Third Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war, receiving wounds at the battles of Fair Oaks and Kingston, N. C. After the close of the war he returned and worked at stone masonry for a number of years; followed the oil excitement through various counties of the State, and for the last seven years has been engaged in conducting his farm and working at his trade. In 1880 he was married to S. Angie Thomas, daughter of Lewis Thomas, of Westmoreland County, Penn. They have one child—Lewis Earl. Our subject is a member of Marion Craig Post No. 325, G. A. R., and the A. O. U. W. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

PROF. J. B. McCLELLAND, Grove City, Penn., was born February 28, 1853, in Findley Township, this county. His parents are James and Janet (Brown) McClelland, natives of Ireland, who immigrated to America about 1848, and settled on a farm in Findley Township, where they still reside. Their family consists of Alexander, of New Wilmington; David, a carpenter of Pittsburgh; Robert and Wilson, living on the homestead; Mary, who married C. J. Crawford, register and recorder of Venango County; Annie, living at home, and our subject, who is the eldest, and received a common school education, and graduated from Westminster College at New Wilmington in 1878. In 1884 he received the degree of A. M. in Allegheny College, and in the same year was offered the chair of Greek in Westminster College of New Wilmington, which he refused to accept. He also graduated from the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Allegheny in March, 1887; was licensed by Butler United Presbyterian Presbytery September 14, 1886, and ordained sine titulo by same presbytery September 18, 1888. In 1878 Prof. McClelland became connected with the Grove City College, and has since held the chair of Greek in that institution. For three sessions he has had full charge of the college, and is its head in the absence of Dr. Ketler. In 1880 our subject married Miss Melissa, daughter of James and Margaret Montgomery, of Findley Township. By this union they have three children: Mont Waldo, James Homer and Margaret Janet.

J. A. McCUTCHEM, merchant tailor, Grove City, is a son of William and Lettice (Watt) McCutchen. Henry McCutchen, grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, and came to America about 1804 and settled in this township near Shaw's mills, being a blacksmith by trade. The father of subject was born at that place in 1818, and always followed blacksmithing. He died in 1849 and his widow in 1850. Two of their children still live: William P., of Titusville, Penn., and our subject, who was born on the homestead near Mercer in 1847, and educated at the schools of that period, and the select schools of this borough, and is a graduate of Eastman's Commercial College of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. After finishing his education he learned the painter's trade, which he followed for many years. In 1886 he engaged in mercantile business in Grove City. In 1868 he married Mary E. Grace, daughter of Aaron Grace, of Worth Township. They have eight children: Effie M., Lizzie M., Hattie R., Sarah E., Vera Grace, William J., Fred. H. and Charlie. Mr. McCutchen has held the offices of auditor and school director of the borough, and was elected justice of the peace in 1886, which office he still holds. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

W. J. McKAY, farmer, post-office Grove City, was born in Hamburg, Delaware Township, Mercer Co., Penn., September 15, 1838, to William and Eliza (Lenigan) McKay, both of whom were natives of Ireland. The parents had eight children, seven of whom are living, and are mentioned in the history of the family in Findley Township. The father and mother were both members of the Springfield United Presbyterian Church, of which he had been an elder for several years preceding his death. Our subject attended the country schools as much as possible after attending to his farm duties. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirtieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and remained in service until the second battle of Vicksburg, where he was wounded and discharged. Returning home he resumed farming, and was married in 1866 to Eliza S. McCleary, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. (Kerr) McCleary, natives of Lawrence County, where they still live. By this marriage he has two children: Ida M. and Lester M. In 1884 he was elected county treasurer by the Republican party, of which he has always been an active member.

A. B. McKAY, manufacturer of carriages, Grove City, is the second son of William McKay, and was born at Pardoe, this county, in 1844, where he was reared, and in 1867 he engaged in his present avocation at Pardoe, and continued for nine years. In 1876 he removed to Grove City, and established his extensive business, and employs sixteen men, and manufactures about 300 wagons per year. February 27, 1864, he enlisted in Company H, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war. He married in 1870 Miss Annie M. Paxton, daughter of Thomas Paxton, of Pardoe, and has two children, William S. and Stella M. Mr. McKay was a member of the first council of Grove City, and was burgess in 1879. He is a member of Marion Craig Post No. 325, G. A. R., and of the R. T. of T. He and family are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican.

JOHN McWILLIAMS, retired, post-office Grove City. Is a son of Robert and Hannah (Wilkey) McWilliams. His father was a native of Ireland, and first settled in this State in that portion of Beaver County which is now Lawrence County. His wife was a native of Chester County, Penn. In 1838 they moved into this county and located near Mercer, in what is now Findley Township, and engaged in farming. He was drafted in the War of 1812, but failed to pass the examination. Their family consisted of nine children, five of whom still live: Dorcas, Mrs. John Boyd, of Butler County; Elizabeth, Mrs. George Morrow, of Armstrong County; Hannah, Mrs. Edward Elder, of Lawrence County; Alexander, of Liberty Township, and our subject, who was born in Beaver County in 1824, and was engaged in farming until 1884, when he retired and moved into Grove City. In 1848 he married Miss Margaret J. Albin, daughter of William and Martha (Walker) Albin, of Findley Township. She died in 1883, leaving eight living children: Martha, Mrs. Robert McCune, of Pine Township; Robert, of Illinois; Sarah, Mrs. John T. McConnell, of Pine Township; Almira, Mrs. William G. Hays, of Crawford County; John, of Chicago; Seymour, of Illinois; Edward, of Chicago; Anna, living at home. Subject's present wife was Mrs. Richard Smith, daughter of Robert Kile. He and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Grove City. NOTE.—Since the above was written John McWilliams has died, leaving a large circle of friends to mourn the loss of a most worthy and respected citizen.

M. W. MOORE was born May 17, 1854, near New Alexandria, Westmoreland County, Penn., was the youngest son of John and Margaret Moore. His father died at the age of seventy-two years. His mother is still living. In infancy his left leg was partially paralyzed, in consequence of which he was destined to be a cripple for life, and began his walk through the world with crutch and cane, both of which were his inseparable companions until about a year ago, when he discarded his friend crutch, and now walks by the assistance of a steel brace on his paralyzed leg, the work of an ingenious artificial limb manufacturer, of Pittsburgh, Penn. Mr. Moore attended public school near Saltsburg, Indiana County, and in Kittanning, Armstrong Co., Penn., until sixteen years old, when he entered the office of the Kittanning Sentinel, where he learned the "art preservative." After serving three years he began the career of a journeyman printer on the Oilman's Journal, at Parker's Landing, Penn., and acted as foreman on many other papers in the State. He has had a large and varied experience in the journalistic line, as his education has been chiefly that of the newspaper office. On September 8, 1884, he married Mrs. Maggie C. Black, daughter of B. McDowell, of Grove City, Penn., and moved to Sandy Lake, where he opened a job office, which was carried on quite successfully for about a year, when the opportunity offering he purchased the interest of Mr. A. C. Ray in the Grove City Telephone, December 1, 1885, moving to this place, where he has been successfully engaged in the newspaper business ever since. Mr. Moore is a sober, industrious citizen, a genial Christian gentleman, especially esteemed for his social qualities. He has made for himself a host of friends, who all rejoice in his deserved prosperity.

M. J. MONTGOMERY, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of James C. and Nancy (Irwin) Montgomery, of Wolf Creek Township, was born in that township in 1840, receiving his education at the public schools, and in 1860 he engaged in oil operations, which he followed for four years. In 1864 he moved with his parents to Wolf Creek Township, and farmed for his father until 1866, when he was married to Nancy Kerr, daughter of Thomas and Jane (McKee) Kerr, of this Township. They have four children: James Luther, Jennie, Edna and Thomas. Our subject removed to his present farm in 1867, and has held the office of school director, supervisor, etc., of the township, and he and family are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Grove City. He has been an elder of said church for the past ten years.

JOHN C. MONTGOMERY, farmer, post-office Harrisville, Butler Co., Penn., is the second son of James C. and Nancy (Irwin) Montgomery, of Wolf Creek Township, and was born in that township in 1843. He received his education at the public schools, and has always been engaged in farming. In 1869 he married Miss Emeline Coleman, daughter of Samuel and Mary Ann (Patterson) Coleman, of Wolf Creek Township. They have four children: Mary A., Jessie A., Estella V. and an infant. In 1870 he purchased his present farm, and has since been a resident of Pine Township. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church in Venango County, of which he is a trustee.

D. M. MORROW, postmaster of Grove City, Penn., is a son of Jesse and E. A. (Swogger) Morrow, natives of Lawrence County, who settled in Lackawannock Township, in this county, in 1854, and engaged in farming. They still reside there, and have a family of six children: Wealthie J., Preston W., Levenia E., Nicholas H., John A. W., of Oil City, and our subject, who is the second child, and was born in Lawrence County March 19, 1851, and reared and educated at the public schools of this county. In 1869 he learned the carriage-making trade, which he followed for a number of years, and in 1876 moved to this borough. In 1878 he and his brother, P. W., associated themselves with Mr. McKay, and engaged in the manufacture of carriages, under the firm name of McKay, Morrow & Co. In 1881 Mr. McKay retired from the firm, and J. A. W., the other brother, took an interest, and the name was changed to Morrow Bros. This firm continued until 1887, when they dissolved. October 1, 1885, our subject took charge of the post-office of this place, it being a fourth-class office, and was raised to a third-class office October 1, 1887, he being appointed postmaster by President Cleveland. In 1877 he married Jessie, daughter of J. H. Black, of this town. They have five children: Claudius H., Leon J., Jesse E., Austin D., Jennie M. Our subject was a member of the first council of this borough, a member of Eureka Lodge No. 60, A. O. U. W., and of the R. T. of T., Grove City Council No. 56. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Grove City.

T. W. ORR, professor in the public schools of Grove City, is a son of John and Annie (Squibb) Orr, natives of Westmoreland County, where our subject was born in 1853. He received his education at Edinboro Normal, in Erie County, Penn., and has since been engaged in teaching, having had charge of schools in Erie, Crawford, Allegheny, Clarion and Mercer Counties. In 1883 he took charge of the public schools of Grove City, and by his efforts it now ranks as one of the best schools in the county. In 1876 he married Miss Kate Munn, daughter of Dougald Munn, of Pittsburgh. They have three children: Alexander Munn, Anna Isabella and Mary Elizabeth. Prof. Orr leads the choir of the United Presbyterian Church, of which he and his family are attendants.

FRANCIS RAMSEY, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of Francis and Martha (Boyd) Ramsey, natives of Ireland, who emigrated from County Antrim, in 1830, and located on the farm which is now owned by our subject. They engaged in farming, and brought with them seven children: Mary, married Joseph Nutt, of Venango County, and is dead; Robert, married Mary Cummins and is a resident of Springfield Township, this county; Thomas, died in 1854, was a soldier in the Mexican War under Gen. Price; Matilda, married Samuel McCutchen, of Pittsburgh, and died in 1883; Elizabeth, married James Buchanan and lives in Pine Township; Sarah, married Robert Barr, of Allegheny. The parents of our subject both died in 1859. Our subject was the youngest of his father's family, was born in 1825 and has been extensively engaged in lumbering and farming. October 9, 1851, he was married to Jane D. Cochran, daughter of Charles and Ruth (Johnson) Cochran, of Butler County. By this union they have eight children: Charles C., married Lovina M. Wilson and has two children, Luther F. and Flora M.; R. T., a farmer of this township, who married Julia A. Richmond and has two children, Mabel L. and D. Alford; Martha, married William C. Work, of Crawford County, and has one child, Frances R.; Mary E., married L. F. McCoy, of Wolf Creek Township, and has one child, Jennie U.; Cole J., Sadie R., David J. and Luella M. Mr. Ramsey and family belong to the United Presbyterian Church of Scotch Hill.

G. W. STEVENSON, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of Charles and Ann (Miller) Stevenson. Richard Stevenson, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, immigrated to America some time previous to 1788 and settled in Franklin County, Penn., where the father of G. W. was born, and in 1800 they moved into this county and located in that part of Wolf Creek Township which is now Liberty. His family consisted of two sons and three daughters, all of whom are dead. The father of subject was born in 1790, and was a soldier in the War of 1812. He afterward moved to this township and settled on a tract of land on which our subject now lives. He died there in 1851 and his wife in 1882. Five of their children still live, and are William J., of New Castle, Lawrence County; Charles M., of North Liberty; Nancy R., Mrs. William Winchester, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mary M., Mrs. Joseph Gregg, of this township, and our subject, who was born in Liberty Township in 1829, and moved into this township with his parents, where he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for several years. In 1880 he was married to Lucina, daughter of William George, of Liberty Township. She died in 1885, leaving no children. The present wife of subject was Maggie, a daughter of John Mechlin, of Butler County. Mr. Stevenson has held the office of school director, and he and wife are members of the Centre Presbyterian Church of this township.

JOHN N. WHITE, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of George W. and Susan (Wallace) White. Alexander White, the great-grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, immigrated from County Down in 1750, and finally settled on Turtle Creek, at Braddock's Fields. In 1774 he married Rachel Henderson, daughter of Rev. Matthew Henderson, of Revolutionary fame. John White, grandfather of our subject, was their oldest son, and in 1798 his father sent him to this county to locate land for him. He took up the claim of one McGuffin, which embodied the farms now owned by O. P. McCoy, W. A. Young and James Simpson, and agreed to clear the tract for one-half interest. He married, in 1799, Margaret Query, daughter of Charles Query, a Revolutionary soldier, and he and his father's family lived on that claim for several years. Owing to the necessity of more land for his growing family, John bought a separate claim, which contained 400 acres, in the same neighborhood. This place he made his home and reared his family, which consisted of Rachel, John B., James, Jane, Elizabeth, Samuel, George W., Hiram C. and Henderson. The father of our subject was born on this homestead in 1812, and learned the trade of a stone-mason, which he worked at for many years in connection with farming. He was killed by the cars at the crossing of the Shenango & Allegheny Railroad, near his home in 1882. His wife died in 1872. They had Mary A., Mrs. V. Z. Ball, of Sherwin, Kas.; Maggie A.; Ella J., Mrs. Rev. J. E. Roberts, of Kansas; Susan, Mrs. Ezra Koonce, of Venango County; Narcissa A., the famous temperance lecturer; Dr. Maria, a missionary in India. John N. was born on the homestead which he now owns in 1840, and received his principal education at the Grove City Academy, being one of the first students of that institution. He engaged in teaching for twelve years in Salem, Westmoreland County, Lawrence and Armstrong Counties. Finding this work too confining he returned to the farm, and has since been engaged in fruit raising and bee culture. In 1868 he married Mary J., daughter of Josiah S. Stevenson, of Lawrence County. They have five children: Annie A., John Wilber, George S., Sarah N., Arthur C. Mr. White was one of the original members of the Prohibition party in this county, and has always been prominently identified with it, having held the office of county committeeman for ten years. For five years he was one of the trustees of Grove City College. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Grove City.

G. W. WHITE, farmer, post-office Grove City, is a son of James and Elizabeth (McClintock) White. The first of the family to settle in this county was John White, a native of Ireland, who settled in this township some time previous to 1800, and engaged in farming. His family consisted of nine children: John, James, Samuel, G. W., H. C., Henderson, Rachel, Jane, Elizabeth, all of whom are dead, except Hiram, who lives at Mercer. The father of our subject was born in this township in 1800, and learned the trade of a stone-mason, which he followed in connection with farming. He died in 1852 and his wife in 1864. They had six children, Margaret, Mrs. John Dougherty, of this township, being the only one living except our subject, who was born on the old homestead, which he now owns, in 1837, and was educated at the district schools, and has followed the occupation of a farmer. In 1861 he enlisted in Company H, Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years. He was married in 1869 to Margaret Donaldson, daughter of John and Mary (Reed) Donaldson, of this township. They have five children: Elizabeth, Mary, Minnie, Leroy and Harry. Our subject is school director at the present time. He is a member of Marion Craig Post No. 325, G. A. R., and he and family are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotch Hill.

WILLIAM A. YOUNG, proprietor of Grove City Tannery, and dealer in harness, etc., is a son of Robert and Mary (Adams) Young, natives of Beaver County, Penn., who came to this county in 1835 and located in what is now Findley Township, where the father died about two years afterward, and the mother died at Washington, Iowa, in 1878. They had six children, all of whom are dead except Margerie (Mrs. John Wilson), of Kansas, and our subject, who was born in Beaver County in 1832, and was reared and received his education in this county. At the age of eighteen years he entered the tannery of Robert Reynolds at New Castle and served an apprenticeship, and has since been engaged in that business. In 1853 he located in Pine Grove and purchased the tannery, which was established by James Tilball, which he has since operated, and in 1881 he and his son, Will V., established their present harness business. In 1853 he married Miss Clara A. Vescelius, of Seneca County, N. Y. They have six children: Alsameda, Mrs. Wilson Moon, one child, Clara; Ernest L., of Cowley County, Kas.; Will V., Seymour R., Mathew A., of California, and Robert D., printer, of Mercer. Our subject has held the office of school director and is a member of the borough council. He was one of the organizers of the Grove City College, and has been a trustee of the same since its erection. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church. Ernest L. Young married Eva Mason, of Iowa, and has two children, Clara and Alice; Will V. married Clara Bell, of this county, and has two children, Mabel and Eva; Seymour R. Young married Ella Struthers, of Grove City.

LIBERTY TOWNSHIP.

D. F. COURTNEY, farmer, post-office North Liberty, is a son of Thomas and Catharine (McDowell) Courtney. The father was born in Chester County, Penn., and came to this county about 1810, purchasing a farm now occupied by our subject at the land office in Philadelphia. The mother was a native of this county. They were always engaged in farming, and he was in the War of 1812, and held the commission of captain of his company. His first wife was Ester Robinson, of Centre County, Penn. Two children by that union are still living: Thomas, of Findley Township, and Rebecca, Mrs. David Gilson, of London. His second wife was Catherine McDowell; they had five children: Sarah, died when young; Nancy, Mrs. Hugh Miller, of Findley Township; Catherine, Mrs. Alexander McCoy, of Erie County, Penn.; Amanda, widow of James Uber, of this township; and our subject, who was born on the homestead August 1, 1822, and has always been engaged in farming. His wife was Jane, daughter of Ephraim and Annie (Albin) Coleman, of this county. They have seven children: Dewitt G., of Grove City; Nancy R., Mrs. Curtis Uber, of Butler County, and has one child, Dewitt; Mary C., Amanda L., Samuel P., Thomas E. and Bertie J., all at home. Our subject and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Grove City.

W. H. DIGHT, county commissioner, was born April 14, 1839, in Cool Spring Township; is the son of Richard Dight, who was born in Philadelphia and came to this county when twenty-five years of age, with his parents, John and Margaret Dight. Their children were John, Martha, William, Richard and Ann. They bought a part of the old Stokely farm, on which John Dight died, and was buried in the new grave-yard at Mercer. His wife and sons, John and William, were also buried in this cemetery. Richard married Matilda Downs, a daughter of Isaac Downs, and an early settler of Mercer County. The children of Richard and Matilda were Sarah, married Hugh Wallace; Mary, married John Greenlee; Jane, W. H., Isaac L., John M., a minister of the United Presbyterian Church; Charlotte, married Charles Nunemaker; Anna, married E. W. Graham; Matilda and Margaret, died young. Richard Dight followed farming and stone-masonry. He was a Methodist, while his wife was a United Presbyterian. Our subject attended the old Stokely School, and when nineteen years of age learned the trade of a brick-mason, which he has followed the greater portion of his life. He was married to Sarah A. Shearer March 1, 1859. She is a native of Crawford County, and has blessed him with Melvin J., married Maggie Pizor; Dawson, married Lizzie Pizor, a daughter of William and Harriet (Rodgers) Pizor; Isaac L., Maggie L., Minnie J., Sadie, Ella, Cloa, John and Ines. Mr. Dight enlisted in 1862 in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years, and was wounded at Cold Harbor. He has been justice of the peace fifteen years; was commander of Company F, Fifteenth Pennsylvania National Guard, and promoted to major. Has been school director; is a member of Centreville Post No. 305, G. A. R. He and wife are Presbyterians at North Liberty, and he is a Republican, and by that party was elected county commissioner in 1887.

J. D. KIRKPATRICK, farmer, post-office North Liberty, is a son of Dr. George and Sarah (DeWolf) Kirkpatrick. The father was born in Washington County, Penn., September 14, 1791. He received a common-school education, and his professional education at Darlington and Cannonsburg, Washington County, reading medicine under the celebrated Barney Dustan. In 1816 he located near Moor's Crossing in Butler County and began the practice of medicine. Afterward he moved to Harlansburg and remained two and one-half years, and about 1836 purchased the farm now occupied by our subject, where he resided the rest of his life. He was a member of one of the military companies of that period and served as assistant surgeon in the War of 1812. He died in 1847. His death was hastened by an injury which he received by his horse falling. His widow died in 1875. Our subject was their only child, and was born in Butler County November 18, 1828; received his education at the public schools, and read medicine with his father for a number of years. The death of his father caused him to turn his attention to farming, which he has since followed, and for the last twenty years has been engaged in handling heavy machinery in connection with that occupation. He bought and used the first steam engine for farm use only in Mercer County. He was instrumental in procuring the right of way for the branch of the West Pennsylvania & Shenango Railroad from Butler to Branchton, and has been engaged with that company for the past five years. In 1850 he married Mary, daughter of George and Mary (Holmes) Wilson, of Jackson Township. She died January 10, 1853, leaving two children: George W., who is engaged in the manufacture of grain drills at Massendon, N. Y., and married Mrs. Hoffman, of that place, and have one child, Lyman Bickford; John Sheldon Kirkpatrick, living in Iowa, unmarried. Our subject married his present wife, Annie, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (McNight) Taylor, June 1, 1854. Her parents were natives of Ireland, who first settled in Philadelphia and afterward located in this township. By this union he has six living children: Sarah Jane, Mrs. Dr. Robert M. Hope, of Mercer; Mary W., Mrs. T. S. Uber, of this township, who has four children: Bertha, Clarence, Annie and Edna; Thomas T., station agent on the S. & A. Railroad, Grove City, married Hortense, daughter of Alexander and Lydia Hanna, of this township, one child, Fred; Edward H., living on a part of the homestead, married Laura, daughter of James Thorp, of this township, one child, infant; Charles S., of Greensburg, Penn., telegraph operator on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Joseph R., stenographer, Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Kirkpatrick has been connected with the State Agricultural Society for many years, and vice-president of that organization for the past fifteen years. He is a prominent Mason, being one of the oldest members of that society in Mercer County, belonging to Hebron Lodge of Mercer No. 251. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church of North Liberty.

JACOB SNYDER, deceased, was a son of Jacob, Sr., and Eva (George) Snyder, natives of Westmoreland County, who settled in what is now Liberty Township, this county, about 1806, patenting a tract of land. They reared a family of thirteen children, only three of whom are still living: David, lives near Hamburg; Solomon, of Sharon, and Michael, in Butler County. The father of our subject was in the War of 1812. He died in 1837. Our subject was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., March 24, 1824, and was brought to this county when two years of age. Attended the school of that period, and learned the blacksmith's trade, which his health did not permit him to follow. He married Anna E. Myers, daughter of Peter and Mary (Grove) Myers, of French Creek Township, this county, settled at North Liberty, and engaged in the drover business, which he followed until within a few years of his death. About 1843 he established a general mercantile business, and continued it for fourteen years. In his younger days he was connected with the German Lutheran Church, but afterward joined the Presbyterian Church of North Liberty. He was always identified with the Republican party until a few years prior to his decease, when he voted the Prohibition ticket. Mr. Snyder had no children, and died March 27, 1887. The cause of his death was a general breaking down of the system, caused by injuries received by being thrown from his carriage by a runaway horse a few years prior to his death. His widow still lives on the old homestead, and is a strong advocate of temperance, and a member of the Presbyterian Church at North Liberty.

WILLIAM SMITH was the first of the Smith family to settle in this county. He was a native of York County, Penn., and moved into this county about 1800, and located on a tract of land in Liberty Township, which is now occupied by his grandson. His wife was Margaret Gilmer, and their family consisted of five children, only one of whom is living, James W., of French Creek Township. William W. Smith was their third son, and was born on the homestead in 1802, and was always engaged in farming. His first wife was Catherine Black; she died in 1847, leaving eight children, five of whom are living and three dead: Robert G., was a member of the One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, served until the close of the war, and died in 1886; Elizabeth, married John Craig, of Pine Township, and she and Joseph T. have since died. The five living are: Margaret, a maiden lady; Mary Ann, Mrs. Harrison McCoy, Grove City; Kezia, Mrs. John H. Lees, of Lackawannock Township; James M., and William A., farmer, Grove City post-office, is the eldest son, and was born on the homestead March 12, 1838; received his education at the schools of the township, and has always been engaged in farming. September 17, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, Seventy-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until November 7, 1864, and was with Gen. Sherman in his march through Georgia. In 1881 he married Sarah Ella, daughter of James and Penelope (Long) McElwain, of Sandy Lake, and has two children: Harry and Nellie C. He has served the township as constable for two terms, and has been assessor, etc. He and family are members of Harmony United Presbyterian Church. The second wife of William W. Smith was Mary McCoy, and by this union they had one son, John T., farmer, Grove City post-office, and was born on the homestead in 1851, received his education at the schools of that period, and has since been engaged in farming; was married in 1879 to Miss Lizzie Redmond, daughter of H. H. Redmond, of this township. No children. He and wife are members of Harmony United Presbyterian Church of Butler County, he being trustee of the church.

MICHAEL R. UBER, farmer, post-office London, was born August 27, 1810, on the farm where he has since lived. His parents were Michael and Magdaline Uber, natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., and who settled on the farm now occupied by our subject in 1798, and lived there until their death. His wife preceding him, he was re-married to Magdaline Hearly. By his first wife he had three children: Polly, Elizabeth, Michael R., all died young. By his second wife he had six children; two died when young, and the others were Mary, Sarah, Hannah and our subject, who was educated at home and in the log school-houses of his early days. Our subject was married in 1830 to Magdaline Kumer, who died April 3, 1883. Their children are George, of Springfield Township; Daniel, deceased; Elizabeth, Mrs. Wallace Breckenridge, of Springfield Township; Magdaline, Mrs. Alex. McWilliams, of Liberty Township; Catherine, Mrs. C. C. Winder, of Liberty Township; Jacob, Peter, John, Cyrus, Andrew, all of Liberty Township; Michael, of Crawford County, and Sarah, of Grove City. Our subject owns 290 acres of the old homestead. He votes the Democratic ticket, and was school director of the township for many years. In his early days he went to church bare-footed, and has been a member of the German Reformed Church since he was twenty-one years of age, holding church offices all of his life until he became too old.

MRS. AMANDA M. UBER, farmer, post-office North Liberty, was a daughter of Thomas and Catherine (McDowell) Courtney, of this Township. In 1849 she married James Uber, a son of Daniel and Rebecca (Denniston) Uber, of this township, who was born in 1825, and was always engaged in farming. In 1850 they moved to the present farm now occupied by our subject, where he died in 1886, leaving six children. He held offices of school director, etc., and was a member of the Presbyterian Church of North Liberty. His children are: Curtis C., who lives in Butler County, married Nancy R., daughter of D. F. Courtney, of this township, and has one child, Dewitt; Cassius A., married Ida M., daughter of Nathaniel C. and Lucinda (Rogers) Cooper, of this township, and lives in Grove City; they have one child, Charles E.; Thomas S., married Mary W. Kirkpatrick, daughter of J. D. Kirkpatrick, of this township; he lives on part of the homestead and has four children: Mary A., Clarence S., Annie T. and Edna; Daniel W., married Sarah M., daughter of Jesse Smith, of Leesburgh; they live in this township, and have one child, James E.; Jennie A., Mrs. John Barber, of Lawrence County, one child, James H.; Clyde, living at home. The second daughter of our subject was Catherine R., who married Robert L. McMillan. She died in 1879, leaving one son, James U., who lives with our subject. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Uber has carried on the business of the farm. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church of North Liberty.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SANDY LAKE, WORTH, MILL CREEK AND FRENCH CREEK.

SANDY LAKE TOWNSHIP.

HUGH BAIRD, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born December 27 1815, in Venango County, Penn. His father, Thomas Baird, and Judge Thomas McKee were among the early settlers in Clinton Township, that county. Judge McKee owned the land where Clintonville now stands. John Baird, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Franklin County, Penn., and was the father of seven children: Thomas, John, Hugh and four daughters. Thomas Baird married Martha, a sister of Judge McKee, and died in Venango County. He and his wife were buried on the old homestead, and recently their bodies were removed to the Clintonville cemetery. They had eight children: Susan, married John Van Dyke; John; Mary; Elizabeth, married Dr. John Coulter; William, Thomas, Hugh and Matilda, married Gibson Vincent. Our subject was educated in the common schools and was brought up on a farm. He was employed by William Cross, who was the owner of three furnaces and a store. He collected, bought grain and clerked in the store for him. He was married November 22, 1847, to Margaret Jones, a native of Philadelphia, and who came to Jackson Township, this county, many years ago. Mr. Baird had by her three children: Martha, who married Hugh McCullough, and died leaving four children, Ella, Margaret, Edward and Marshall; Mary, married E. P. Thorn, and Matilda, who is still at home. He is ex-past-master of the A. F. M., is an elder in the Presbyterian Church at Mt. Pleasant, of which his wife is also a member. He is a Democrat, the possessor of a good farm, which he rents, and lives in a little cottage just outside of the limits of Sandy Lake Borough.

T. S. BAILEY, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born on the farm where he now resides June 29, 1846. His parents, E. W. and Susan (Barber) Bailey, were natives, the father of Connecticut and the mother of Lawrence County, Penn. The father came to this county about the year 1825 with his parents, Theodore and Lorain (Watson) Bailey, and the family settled on the farm spoken of above, where Theodore died in 1844, and his widow in 1854. They had nine children: Myron, Homer, Theodore, Moses, Desire, Lorain, Free-love, Lois and Harriet. They were members of the Presbyterian Church. The father of our subject was educated in the common schools, was brought up at farm labor, and died in 1866. His widow is living, and blessed him with three children: T. S., Mary (married to Charles Powers) and Angeline (who died at the age of fourteen years). The father took an active interest in the Republican party. T. S. Bailey received a common-school education, and was married in 1872 to Maggie, daughter of ex-Sheriff W. S. Eberman, by whom he has two children: Fred and Donald. His wife died in 1880, and he was again married, to Melissa Patterson, daughter of William Patterson, of Allegheny City, by whom he has one child, James. Mr. Bailey settled at his marriage on the old homestead, and is the owner of 130 acres of the same. He is a staunch Republican, and he and wife belong to the Presbyterian Church.

HENRY B. BAILEY, coal operator, Sandy Lake, was born June 1, 1842, in Mahoning County, Ohio, to Bariah and Anna B. (Kincaid) Bailey, natives of the same State, and the parents of Horace (killed at Pittsburgh Landing, was a member of Company C, Nineteenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry), James G. (lives in Ohio, and is in partnership with our subject), Henry B., William, Lydia A. (married Warren Van Fleet) and Hiram R. The parents were members of the Disciples Church. Henry received a common-school education in Austintown Township, Mahoning Co., Ohio. He enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served three years. He was wounded in the right arm at the battle of Chaplin Hills, Ky., and was with his regiment in all of the battles. On his return from the war he resumed mining in the vicinity of Sandy Lake. He and his brother, James G., opened the present Bailey Mines in 1876, and employ from ten to twelve men during the busy season. He was married September 11, 1872, to Miss Jennie, daughter of John and Margaret Patterson, of Venango County, Penn., by whom he has four children: John D., Anna B., Edna M. and an infant. Mr. Bailey is serving as school director, and is a member of the G. A. R. of Sandy Lake. He and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of the same place. His brothers, James, William and Horace, were in the war, Horace and James in one company, and William and Henry in another.

P. P. BARNES, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born October 3, 1845, in Sandy Lake Township, to James and Elizabeth (Patterson) Barnes, natives, the father of Mercer, and the mother of Venango County. The parents settled in Sandy Lake Township at their marriage, where the father died in 1853, and his widow in 1887. They were blessed with the following children: Elizabeth, married Albert Reagle; John, lives in Illinois; P. P., W. J., T. H., of Franklin, and Samuel. The mother was a member of the Covenanter Church, and the father was a Democrat. Our subject was educated in the common schools and has always been a farmer. He was married March 30, 1865, to Eliza M. Reagle, and has been blessed with four children: James, Samuel, Sadie and John R. Mr. Barnes is the owner of 108 acres of land, known as the Hunter Farm, which is one of the best in the township. He and wife are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics he is an earnest Democrat. He is one of the public spirited citizens who always lends a helping hand to all enterprises that go to advance the interest and retain the good name of Mercer County.

HON. H. S. BLATT, hardware merchant, Sandy Lake, was born August 26, 1845, in French Creek Township, this county, to James and Hannah (Grove) Blatt, natives, the father of Snyder County, Penn., and the mother of Union County. The father came to Mercer County about the year 1835, and the mother a few years prior. The former settled in French Creek Township with his parents, Peter and Rachel (Beidler) Blatt, who had James, Abram, Absolem, Daniel, Catharine and Peter, all of whom are living but Daniel, who was killed in the battle of the Wilderness, and Peter, who died when young. Hannah Grove came with her parents, Abraham and Elizabeth Grove, to this county, and the parents died in Mill Creek Township, and their children were Jacob, David, Catharine, Elizabeth, Barbara, Hannah, Rachel and Elizabeth. James Blatt followed the trade of a carriage maker in Sandy Lake, establishing that business there in 1852, and continued until 1866. They had four children: Rachel, married R. S. Hogue, of Cochran, Crawford County; H. S., Mary C., married Albert Glenn; Isabella, married F. D. Muse. The father, James Blatt, was the first burgess of Sandy Lake, and held various offices in the place. He and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church. Our subject was educated at the common schools and at the New Lebanon Academy. He taught one term of country school. He learned the trade of a carriage maker, which he followed until 1871, when he engaged in the hardware business at Sandy Lake. He carries a stock of about $12,000. He was married in 1863 to Hannah M. McClure, daughter of James and Hannah McClure, and has by her six children: Charles H., James J., both in the store with their father; Elfrida, married S. D. Parker, a grocer of New Castle; William R., Kate and Frank. Mr. Blatt was elected to the Legislature in 1874, and served with credit. He was elected a justice of the peace at the age of twenty-two years, and has served as school director for fifteen years. He was burgess of Sandy Lake, and a member of the council one term. He is a member of the A. F. M., I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W., K. L. H., and he and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In politics he is an active and enthusiastic Republican.

THE BROWNS, OF SANDY LAKE.—The first to come to this county was Alexander Brown, a native of Cumberland County, Penn., the time of his arrival being about the year 1805. He settled at what was known as "The Falls" of Big Sandy Creek, and was the first to erect a mill in what is now Sandy Lake Township. He was a surveyor, and surveyed a considerable portion of Mercer County. Soon after the organization of the county he removed to Mercer for the purpose of educating his children. While there he was engaged in the mercantile business with Bevan Pearson. He was the first man to card wool in the county, which he did at Mercer, by the use of a horse-tread power. He and Pearson dealt some in stock, and the fall of the market caused them to fail in business at a time when they had a large amount invested in stock. He was first married, in Cumberland County, to Mary Jacobs, a native of that county, by whom he had the following children: Eliza, married Andrew Patterson; James F., Thomas J. and Alexander. James F. was a printer, and worked a short time in Madison, Ind., and was offered a lot in the newly laid town of Indianapolis for every day he would work on the paper at Madison. He finally came back to his home and joined his brother, Thomas J., in the construction of a stone dam across the stream where the mill-dam of the McClure brothers is now located. This was the first stone dam that was constructed in Mercer County. Thomas J. was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., May 2, 1801, and came to Sandy Lake in 1805, and in 1808 removed to Mercer. In 1818 or 1819 he was elected captain of a militia company, and subsequently was elected captain of an artillery company. In 1821 he married Caroline, daughter of Dr. Christopher Heydrick, and located on Sandy Creek, near Sandy Lake, where he subsequently laid out the town of Brownsville. He was the first postmaster of this town. He erected woolen-mills, flax seed oil-mills, flouring-mills, turning lathes and manufactured lumber. In all of these he was assisted by his brother, James F. He was also engaged extensively in merchandising. In 1840 he was appointed a justice of the peace to fill a vacancy, and was elected to the same in 1845. In 1855 he was appointed associate judge to fill a vacancy, and was elected to that office in 1856. He was appointed justice of the peace in 1875 and elected in 1876, and re-elected in 1881, and filled the office up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1883. His wife died March 2, 1874, and was the mother of eight children: Alexander F., Harriet H., James, Charles, Christopher, Mary E., Benjamin F. and Albert G. Alexander, Sr., was one of the first associate judges of this county. At a time he and three other acquaintances were captured by the Indians while on a tour down the Ohio River, where they had established a trading post. Two of the company were killed by the red men, and while they were holding a consultation to determine what to do with Alexander and the other, an Indian squaw agreed to take them for her husband and adopted son. She finally helped them to get away, but they were soon captured by another tribe, which traded them to a Scotchman, who released them, and finally they reached home, dressed in Indian costumes. The original Alexander Brown was married a second time, his last wife being Mary Weekly, who bore him two children: Mary, married Alfred Norton, and Sydney, married James Moorehead. James F. Brown, whose portrait appears in this work, through the enterprise of his widow, was one of the respected and worthy citizens of the county, and is an excellent representative of the Brown family, which figures largely in the history of Sandy Lake.

JOB BUCKLEY, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born March 27, 1856, on the farm where he now lives, to John and Harriet (Slater) Buckley, the mother a native of England, and the father of Sandy Lake. They had six children; George, of New Vernon Township; Samuel, of the same place; Job, Alice, who married D. G. Perrine; Mary, married Cyrus Perrine, and Luke. The father belonged to the Zion Church, and died in July, 1863, at the battle of Gettysburg; was a member of Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers from Mercer County, and enlisted almost at the beginning of the war. In politics he was a Republican. Our subject received his education at the common schools, has always farmed, and owns one-half of sixty-five acres of the old homestead. He was married in 1879 to Mary, sister of Mrs. C. S. Wright, and by this marriage they have two children: Homer S. and Ralph A. Mr. Buckley has been supervisor, and is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Episcopal Church.

C. CARVER and JOSEPH BOWER, carriage-makers, Sandy Lake, are among the best known manufacturers of this county. Mr Carver was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, August 10, 1840. His parents, John and Mary (Nesbit) Carver, were natives of Franklin County, Penn. They removed to Ohio when they were both young. In 1843 they settled in Lackawannock Township, this county, and subsequently the father followed his trade, that of blacksmith, at Clarksville for about fourteen years. They then moved to West Salem Township, where the father died in 1875 and his widow in 1882. They had eleven children born to them: James, a resident of Beaver County; Margaret, married Jesse McQuiston; Emily, is dead; Eliza, married James Watson; Mary, died in Erie County; Sarah, married to William Means; Calvin; Anna, married James McMillen; Seldin, died October 9, 1888; John F. and Mirancy. Of these, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. McMillen, Mrs. Means and Mirancy have taught school. Mr. Carver was educated in the common schools, and began to learn his trade when quite young. At the age of twenty-two he had completed his trade, having learned the carriage manufacturing business with H. C. Beldon, of Warren, Ohio. He formed a partnership under the firm name of Sisley & Carver, at Sheakleyville, and did general blacksmithing and wagon and carriage-making. In 1869 he withdrew, and formed a partnership under the firm name of Waid & Carver, at Sandy Lake, and did the same kind of work. In 1880 he was joined by Joseph Bower in their present business. Aside from their manufacture of buggies and wagons they sell these vehicles of other manufactories. Mr. Carver was married September 26, 1865, to Caroline Beatty, only daughter of David M. Beatty, of Sheakleyville, and by her has six children: Frank B., William W., in a dry goods store at Burlington, Iowa; Edwin F., Jesse H., Kate I. and David M. The oldest is employed by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad at Burlington, Iowa. Mr. Carver is a member of the K. of H., K. & L. of H., and he and wife belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

Joseph Bower was born August 9, 1845, in Venango County, Penn., to Peter and Catharine (Earhardt) Bower, the parents of four children, who grew up: John J., Daniel, Joseph and George W. The father was married a second time, his last wife being Elizabeth Lash, by whom he had Cyrus D., Mary, William A., Sarah B., Anna, Addie and Emma. Mr. Bower was educated in Cooperstown, Penn., and began to learn his trade when young. He finished with William Dickson, at Clarksville, began for himself in 1872, and continued until he formed his present partnership. He was married November 7, 1870, to Amanda E. Seiple, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Sherr) Seiple. She was born in Lehigh County, and has borne him two children: Jesse A. and Frances V. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and he and wife belong to the Presbyterian Church. He is a Democrat in politics.

W. H. CLAWSON, butcher, Sandy Lake, was born January 1, 1836, in Trumbull County, Ohio, to William and Melinda (Hummison) Clawson, natives, the former of Virginia and the latter of Connecticut. The parents settled in Trumbull County in 1834, and at Jackson Centre in 1843, where the father followed the tannery and harness-making business, a part of the old Infield Hotel constituting a portion of the tannery. Six years later he moved his tannery a short distance eastward in the same township. His tannery having burned down about 1863 he removed the next year to Trumbull County, Ohio, where he farmed. Here his wife died in 1876. She was the mother of W. H.; Elizabeth, married John J. Giebner; Cylvia, married T. D. Mackey; A. M.; Charles; Luca A., married Austin Silliman; Lewis; Calvin; Melinda, married Lester Clark; Almira, married Charles Trowbridge, and Emerson. The father was married again, to a lady named Gates, by whom they had one child, Mina. The father was a staunch Republican. At an early date he, Benjamia Ride and Messrs. Harrison and Savage formed a Wesleyan Methodist organization at Jackson Centre, and held services in a school-house, near where Mr. Vernam's store stands. He naturally drifted into the current of opposition to slavery, and because of this those in authority on the other side refused them the use of the school-house to worship God, and Mr. Clawson tendered the use of his dwelling for some time. W. H. Clawson was educated in the common schools, and early learned the tanning and harness-making trades, which he followed until the age of twenty-six. He was a partial owner of the tannery when it was destroyed by fire. He was for four years engaged in farming and stock raising with A. G. Egbert, and afterward removed to Sandy Lake, where he engaged in the manufacture of harness with the same gentleman for two years. In 1869 he purchased the old Egbert homestead in Sandy Lake Township, and farmed the same until 1885, when he purchased the meat shop where he now prosecutes the butcher's business. He owns the old farm of 175 acres. He was married to Patience Egbert, a daughter of Lewis Egbert, by whom he has two children: A. M. and Lucy, the former married Ida, a sister of Dr. J. B. McElrath. Mr. Clawson has been school director three terms. He is a member of the E. M. B. A., of which he was one of the charter members. He also belongs to the A. O. U. W. and P. H. C., and he and wife are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. He is a Republican, and sent a substitute, Harvey Squires, who was killed in the defense of his country at Fort Steadman by the side of Charles Clawson. The gallant fighting of these two at this battle formed one of the most romantic episodes of the war.

DR. T. M. COOLEY, Sandy Lake, was born January 19, 1846, in French Creek Township, to William and Elizabeth (Paden) Cooley. The parents were natives of Pittsburgh. They came to Mercer County about 1838 and settled in French Creek Township. The father was a blacksmith, and erected a shop on his farm of 125 acres, which he had bought soon after locating there. He died in 1849, and his children were: Matilda, married Hugh Patton; James, a merchant at Cochranston, Crawford County; T. M., Robert, the chief police officer at Texarkana. Mrs. Cooley survives. The father was married prior to his union with Elizabeth Paden. His first wife was Matilda Paden, by whom he had John, deceased; Jane, married Joseph Smith and is deceased; William, lives near Meadville, Penn.; Eleanor, married James Smith and is deceased, and another child, who died in infancy. Dr. T. M. Cooley was educated in the common schools at Cochranston, and at the Edinboro Normal. He taught three terms of country school. At the age of seventeen years he began reading medicine with Dr. Bates, of Cochranston, and later read with Dr. Johnson at the same place. He attended the Cleveland Medical College, where he was graduated in March, 1868, and began the practice of his profession the same year at Utica, Venango County, where he remained until 1875, when he located in Sandy Lake, forming a partnership with Dr. E. X. Giebner, which lasted until April 1, 1888. He served one year in Company E, One Hundred and Twelfth New York Volunteer Infantry. He was married in 1872 to Miss Sarah A., daughter of James Dickey, of Venango County, by whom he has had two children: Judson C., a student at the New Lebanon Academy, and Robert B. D., deceased. The doctor has been a member of the town council and school director. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., of which he was master for four years. He belongs to the Mercer County and the State Medical Associations, is medical director of the E. M. B. A. and was one of the charter members of that institution. He is united to the K. L. H., and is a Democrat. A few years ago, while driving to see some of his patients, his horse took fright at the train, ran away and threw his arm across the track so that it was crushed by the cars. His escape from sudden death was a miraculous one, and the after struggle was one that but few could have stood.

LUKE IRWIN CRAWFORD, editor and proprietor of the Sandy Lake News, was born in Allegheny County, Penn., August 3, 1834. He attended the common schools, then the old Mercer Academy in 1850, and taught a select school in Fairview, Guernsey Co., Ohio, in 1860. He was graduated at Westminster College July 1, 1858, studied theology at Allegheny City, was licensed to preach April 4, 1861, by the Mercer Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church, and ordained June 16, 1864, by the Le Claire Presbytery. He was pastor at Wyoming, Jones Co., Iowa, June 16, 1864-68. From January to April, 1870, he supplied the congregation of Sandy Lake, Utica and North Sandy, Mercer Co., Penn. He was installed July 1, 1870; resigned Utica in 1873, North Sandy July, 1874, and Sandy Lake August 12, 1879. He has been editor of the Sandy Lake News since June 23, 1876. He was married, October 31, 1861, to Miss M. J. Anderson, of Fairview, Guernsey Co., Ohio. Her father, Rev. John Anderson, was born in 1791 in Ireland. When he came to this country he identified himself with the "McCoyites," was educated under their auspices, and ordained about 1822 by the Reformed Dissenting Presbytery of Ohio. He was for many years pastor of the Reformed Dissenting congregation of Clear Ridge. In August, 1853, he and his congregation united with the Second Presbytery of Ohio, Associate Reformed. He remained its pastor until his death, September 1, 1855, when his congregation joined the Associate Reformed, now United Presbyterian, congregation of Fairview, Guernsey Co., Ohio, with the families of which it was intermixed.

J. L. Cross, furniture dealer, Sandy Lake, was born in Butler County, Penn., May 27, 1846, to Samuel and Jane (Leggett) Cross, natives, the father of Butler and the mother of what is now Lawrence County. The parents had but two children: J. L. and S. B. The father was married three times, his third wife being Hannah Cornelius, a native of Mercer County, by whom he had one child, Julia, who married John Manning. His first wife was Jane Adams, by whom he had five children, three boys and two girls. Our subject was educated in the common schools and one term at Prospect, Butler County. At the age of seventeen he began to learn the trade of a cabinet-maker at Harrisville with William P. Brown, with whom he continued for two years and six months. In the spring of 1865 he enlisted as a private in the Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war. Returning he finished his trade with Sam Brown. In 1868 he opened a general furniture and undertaking store at Sandy Lake, and by attention to business and square dealing has established a paying business. He was married to Margaret J. Sawyer, a native of Venango County, by whom he had five children: Angus P., died at the age of eight years; Charles, died young; Gertrude M., Lee B. and Jay G. Mr. Cross has been burgess of Sandy Lake three terms, a member of the council and school director. He is a stockholder in the Stoneboro Fair, belongs to the K. L. H., is a stanch Republican, and he and wife are members of the Christian Church. He is one of the leading citizens of Sandy Lake.

WILLIAM S. DEAN, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born March 12, 1825, in Butler County, Penn. His parents, Aaron and Leah (Steal) Dean, were natives, the father of Maryland, and the mother of Huntingdon County, Penn. They came to Butler County about 1800, to Mercer County about 1837, and settled in Fairview Township, where the mother died in 1875, and the father in 1862. Their children were Hannah, married John Vogan; Ellen, married Aaron Dean; Jane, married John Allison; Jonathan, married Susan Wintz; Leah, married Martin Wintz; Polly, married Jacob Van Meter; William; Aaron, married Elizabeth McClain; Jacob, married Sarah Eckles; Isabella, married Benjamin Slater; Phoebe, married James Riley, and Nancy, married William Van Meter. The parents were Baptists, and the father a Republican. Our subject was educated in the common schools and brought up at rural pursuits. He began for himself by cleaning land by the acre at $9. He bought and paid for seventy-nine acres in that way, in Fairview Township. He was married March 27, 1849, to Mary Canon, of Lake Township. Her parents, Samuel and Nancy (McClure) Canon, had seven children: Mary; Margaret, married John McCoy; Nancy A., married Erastus Clark; LaFayette, deceased; Elmira, married Caleb Higbey; Elvina, married Riley Hosack; Fianes, married Elisha Bearce. Her mother is dead and her father lives at Stoneboro. Mr. Dean settled at marriage on his Fairview farm, which he sold in 1856 and bought 100 acres where he now lives. They lived for many years in a log house on this farm, and in 1878 a fine house which they had previously built was burned while they were in Franklin on business. This incurred a heavy loss, as everything was destroyed. With sorrowing hearts, but indomitable will, they set to work to rebuild, and now have a pleasant home. They have only one son, Edward W., who married Rebecca, a daughter of Samuel McClelland, by whom he has had three children: William C., married Nettie Cutchall; Cora A. and Charles M. Aside from his farming, Mr. Dean is engaged in selling choice nursery stock in Mercer County, from the well known Paynesville, Ohio. Nursery. He has served as school director and assessor. He and his wife believe in the doctrine of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is a Prohibitionist and one of the honest, upright citizens of the country.

WILLIAM K. DE FRANCE, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born on the farm where he now lives, February 11, 1840, to William and Jane (Kilgore) De France, natives of this county. The grandfather of our subject was a Frenchman, and came to America about the time that La Fayette came here. William De France died here in 1850, and his widow survives him at the age of seventy-six. They had six children: Sarah A., who married A. J. Patterson, of Iowa; Boone, deceased; William K.; Elizabeth, married J. D. Powell, a contractor, residing at Sandy Lake; J. E., deceased; and H. T., a druggist of Johnstown, Penn. The mother is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and the father was a Democrat. The father owned 115 acres of land, eighty-five of which our subject now owns. William K. is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and has been trustee for over six years. In politics he is a Democrat.

DEVORE & STEVENSON.—W. S. Devore, of the firm of Devore & Stevenson, general merchants, Sandy Lake, was born in Washington County, Penn. His parents were Samuel and Mary (Sampson) Devore, who had four children, of whom the subject only survives. After the death of his wife the father was again married, to Miss Margaret Warner, by whom he had four children: Taylor, is a merchant at Parkersburg, W. Va.; Margaret, married Charles W. Smith, who is a prominent man and politician of the same city; the other two are dead. The father was a Whig at the time of his death, which occurred in 1859. He was for years a justice of the peace. W. S. Devore was educated in his native county, and at the age of fifteen years he began clerking in a store at Pittsburgh, where he remained four years, and then was employed by Thomas Stevenson, of Mercer, for about three years. He then went into business at Louisville, Ky., on a small scale. He subsequently engaged in business at Franklin, Venango County, and later at Utica, in the same county. He was fifteen years at the latter place, having a Mr. Nesbit as a partner for a portion of this time. He came from Utica to Sandy Lake, and in 1873 formed a partnership under the firm name of Devore & Stevenson, which continues. Mr. Devore is a director and stockholder in the Sandy Lake Banking Company, and is one of the wealthiest and most enterprising gentlemen in Sandy Lake. He is a Republican. W. T. Stevenson, of this well-known firm, died May 24, 1887, of erysipelas and pneumonia, after about two weeks' severe illness. If medical skill and careful nursing could have prolonged his life, he would have been spared, as he had the best of both. Mr. Stevenson was a native of Mercer County, having been born at Mercer, Penn., in 1843. When a young man he worked at the printing trade in the Franklin Spectator office, for one year, when his eye-sight failed, compelling him to quit. Subsequently he volunteered in and served as a soldier of the Union army during the Rebellion. After the war he engaged with his uncle, William Devore, in the mercantile business at Cooperstown, Venango County, and thence removed their extensive business to this town, about fifteen years ago. Mr. Stevenson was a careful accountant, a popular salesman and successful merchant, and liked by all for his sociability. He was married October 7, 1873, to Harriet Egbert, a native of this county. She blessed him with four children: Sarah D., Edgar T., Mary M. and Harry, all of whom survive. The parents of Mrs. Stevenson were James and Harriet J. Egbert, natives of this county, and who had two children: Jane and Harriet. Her mother died September 3, 1855, and her father went west, and Mrs. Stevenson was reared by her grandparents, Egbert. In politics Mr. Stevenson was a pronounced Republican. In religion he had been for many years a member and trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sandy Lake, to which organization his estimable widow is attached.

J. N. EGBERT, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born December 2, 1823, in Sandy Lake Township. His father, Lewis Egbert, was a native of the eastern part of Pennsylvania, and came to this county with his father, William Egbert. William Egbert was a shoemaker, the first in what is now Sandy Lake Township. He was the father of the following children: Job, was a very prominent man in his day, was for many years a justice of the peace, and finally went to Kentucky, where some of his relatives still live; Clarissa, married Charles Shields; Charlotte, married Daniel Perrine; Ursula, married Enoch Perrine; Elizabeth, married Nathaniel Hazen, and Lewis. The family settled on the farm in Sandy Lake Township that is owned by W. H. Clawson, and William and his wife were consistent members of the Baptist Church. Lewis Egbert obtained his education mostly in the old log school-houses, with their slab seats, puncheon floors, slab writing desks and big fire-places. He was brought up to hard labor on his father's farm, and was married in Virginia to Miss Aseneth Nixon, and settled on the old homestead, where he died in 1872, and his widow died in 1880. They were the parents of the following children: Edwin, John N., Albert G., Prudence, married John Lamb; Patience, wife of W. H. Clawson, whose sketch is given elsewhere; Harriet, married James Coleman; Thaddeus, Milton, Lewis, Aseneth, Levina, married Edward Taft. Lewis Egbert, whose portrait appears in this work, and the father of the children just named, was for many years a justice of the peace, and was a director of the poor; was a Whig, a strong anti-slavery man, later a Republican, and he and his consort were earnest and active members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Edwin, the eldest of his children, was born February 14, 1822, was educated in the common schools, and was married in 1847 to Milcah Grace, a native of Mercer County, and daughter of Bennett Grace, by whom he had two children: Rufus A. and Nancy J. The former is a practicing physician at Bradford, Penn., and the latter married Prof. J. J. Wasson. Mrs. Egbert died in 1855, and he was again married, to Ruth S. Dorchester, born November 2, 1835, daughter of M. C. and Nancy (Tuttle) Dorchester, natives of Connecticut and Mercer County, respectively. Mrs. Egbert's parents died when she was four years of age, and she was reared by her grandparents, Tuttle, who were early and prominent citizens of this county, they being two of the four to form a Methodist Church in the neighborhood in which they lived. This union has given Edwin the following children: Lillian, Lucy, Newton, Mark, Ezra, Milo, Lizzie, Prudence, Arthur, Lewis, Edwin, Benjamin and Chester. J. N. Egbert received a common-school education, and was married in 1846 to Ann Fowler, and settled on the farm where he now lives, which contains 100 acres, and was given to him by his father. He and his son William have 300 acres of well-improved land. His union blessed him with seven children: Elizabeth, born January 7, 1847, married R. G. Morrison; William, born July 28, 1848, married Sarah Kelley, and has three children, Kate, Thaddeus and Echa; Eliza, married T. Wright; Sarah; Eveline, married Veet Porter; Aseneth, married L. L. McClelland, and Ruth, married Rev. H. H. Wallace, of the United Presbyterian Church. J. N. Egbert has from time to time been elected to the various township offices, and has served as a justice of the peace, which office his son is now filling. Albert G. is a retired physician of Franklin, and one of the most worthy citizens of that place. He is known all over Northwestern Pennsylvania as a quiet, unostentatious man, good to the poor, and a liberal contributor to various public enterprises. In the history of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Jackson Centre it is mentioned that Dr. Egbert gave several thousand dollars toward the erection of the present elegant brick edifice, and it cannot be out of place to herein mention what led to this unsolicited and liberal contribution. When the Doctor was a small boy he and his eldest brother, Edwin, went to a meeting to listen to the preaching of a Rev. Murphey. On this occasion the sacrament was administered, and the reverend gentlemen excluded every one who did not belong to his church. Edwin was an earnest Christian boy, and was deeply affected by this seemingly unchristian act, while the future doctor treasured up a lasting impression. Long afterward Albert attended another meeting, which was presided over by this same Rev. Murphey. He took a seat well up to the front of the church, and when the minister came into the church he suddenly halted just as he reached the pulpit, and, after a few moments of solemn reflection, he said: "My friends, I am going to preach a different sermon than any I have ever preached. While coming to this pulpit I heard a voice telling me what to say, and that this was my last sermon. I want everybody to commune with us today." It was a glorious meeting, and proved to be the last sermon from Rev. Murphey, for on the next day he was stricken with paralysis, and soon died. This new church at Jackson Centre was to supplant Rev. Murphey's old church, and this last liberal sermon caused Dr. Egbert to subsequently make the unsolicited and liberal contribution of $4,444 to assist in the erection of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Jackson Centre. Thaddeus was a graduate of medicine at both the Ann Arbor and Cincinnati medical colleges, and practiced in Oil City for nineteen years. Milton C. was graduated from the Cleveland Medical College, and retired to Pittsburgh after many years' practice. The Egberts are one of the most respected families of Sandy Lake Township, and are mentioned in the historical portion of this work.

S. L. EGBERT, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born September 2, 1852, in Mercer County, to Justice and Eliza A. (Hunter) Egbert, both of whom were born in Sandy Lake Township. He died July 12, 1880, and his widow survives him. By this marriage there were seven children: Joseph; Margaret, married Isaac Dight, who lives near Sheakleyville; S. L., Rhodan, Frank, Anglice and Warren. The father was a Democrat. Our subject was educated at the common schools, and always farmed. He was married September 5, 1878, to Jennie, daughter of Rev. William Thompson, of Lake Township, and by this marriage they have had two children: Anna M., born July 6, 1883, and Joseph, born July 12, 1886. Our subject settled on a farm of 122 acres, where he still lives. He is a member of the K. & L. H., also of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Sandy Lake. Politically he is a Democrat.

ALEXANDER ELDER, farmer, post-office Henderson, was born September 21, 1812, in Westmoreland County, Penn., to William and Elizabeth (McManus) Elder, natives, the father of Edinburgh, Scotland, and the mother of the State of New Jersey. They were married in Westmoreland County, and were the parents of eleven children, of whom our subject was the youngest. He was educated in the common schools, and under his brother. His father taught school for over forty years in Legonier Valley, part of the time in his own house. He was a graduate of Edinburgh, Scotland, and was master of thirteen languages. The children of William and Elizabeth Elder were: Elenor, wife of Andrew Henderson; Elizabeth E., Mary E., Jane E., William, a Greek and Hebrew scholar, settled in Union County, Iowa; James, also a teacher, settled in Union County, Iowa; Joseph, a teacher and surveyor from youth to old age, in Westmoreland County; John, married a daughter of James Major, of Venango County, resides in Wells County, Indiana; David E., married Margaret Braden, of Derry Township, Westmoreland County, a farmer; Jacob E., married Rebecca Howell, of Fairfield Township, Legonier Valley, Westmoreland County. A. H., a son of Joseph Elder, is a graduate of Westminster College, and a United Presbyterian minister in Cleveland, Ohio. Another of Joseph's sons, J. G., is a physician in Fisher, Ill., and the youngest son, R. S., lives on the old homestead in Westmoreland County, Penn. Our subject began for himself, teaching school, and taught twenty-four winter terms, nearly all in Mercer County. He clerked three years in Venango County, was married in 1838 to Margaret, daughter of John Carmichael, and had nine children: Mary J., married John Phipps, who is dead; Charlotte, married John Wilson; Eliza, married Samuel Carroll, is dead; Sadie, married John Carroll; John C., married Sadie McClelland, and has three sons, Fulton, Harry and William A.; William, married Emma, daughter of A. J. Jacobs; Alfred, attended medical college in Cincinnati, studied medicine under Dr. Galbraith, of Franklin, took a course at Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., practiced in Defiance, Ohio, some time, and is now practicing in Hubball, Neb.; Eveline, deceased; Edith, married John L. Jacobs. Our subject settled upon his present farm about 1839. It was then in the woods. He began clearing and has improved 115 or 120 acres, besides building a fine brick house. He has always been a Democrat. His wife died February 17, 1888. She was a member of the Holiness Band, or Saints of God, a society in Hendersonville, of which he is a member. Mr. Elder has followed surveying at intervals in Mercer County since 1840.

EDMUND FARRAH, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born December 9, 1833, in Trumbull County, Ohio, to Isaac and Hannah (Webster) Farrah, natives, the father of New Jersey and the mother of Massachusetts. They came to Ohio when small. They were married in Trumbull County, Ohio, where they lived until 1838, when they settled in Sandy Lake Township. The father died in Michigan at the home of his son, Isaac Farrah. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary struggle, and served under George Washington and Mad Anthony Wayne. The children of Isaac Farrah were: Sallie, married Henry Leonard; Abram, dead; Webster, lives in Ohio; Isaac, Hazzard, Edwin and Edmund, twins; Hannah, married John McEnallen. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and has always been a farmer. He was married in 1855 to Eliza DeFrance, by whom he has five children: Mary, married A. T. McElwain; Jefferson, at present treasurer of Stark County, D. T.; Clara, married George Beggs; Jessie M. and Nannie, a teacher. Mr. Farrah is a stockholder of the Stoneboro Fair. He has taken an active interest in the Democratic party. Mrs. Farrah was born August 29, 1833, in Mill Creek Township, to John and Mary (Dailey) DeFrance, the former of whom was a native of France. The Daileys were of Irish descent, and served in the Revolutionary War under Anthony Wayne. The first to come to this country was the great-grandfather of Mrs. Farrah. Her parents had five children who grew up: R. M., dead; John, dead; Nancy, married John M. Galloway; Eliza J. and James A. Her grandparents, James and Elizabeth (Arthur) DeFrance, had twelve children: Robert, Allison, John, James, Charles, Abram, William, Arthur, Matthew, Boon, Anna and Eliza, who died when small from the bite of a rattlesnake. The maiden name of the mother of Elizabeth Arthur was Boone, and she was a niece of the renowned Daniel Boone. Robert was at a time a prominent officer at Burlington, Iowa, and both he and John were in the War of 1812. Robert fought in the battle of Lake Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Farrah are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church of Sandy Lake. In this work appears a further mention of the DeFrance family.

DR. IRA CONDIT FEATHER, deceased surgeon, Seventy-second New York Volunteer Infantry, eldest son of John and Phoebe Feather, was born in Perry Township on August 7, 1829. His grandfather was one of the earliest settlers and pioneers of Ohio and Pennsylvania. His mother was a descendant of John Condit, master and warden of the mint in England during the time of Sir Isaac Newton, and important in the history of the colonies since 1678, and rich in lore of education and distinguished men of unassuming worth. Both sides of the house were patriotic defenders of freedom during the War of 1776, and, ever true to the cause of humanity and freedom, were not wanting in the dark days of internecine war, 1861. Ever a deep, diligent and thoughtful student, Ira C. Feather made the best possible use of early educational means—first with a view of the ministry in the Presbyterian Church, but afterward studied and practiced medicine under the instructions of Dr. Cossitt, of Greenville, Penn. On October 27, 1853, he was married to Miss Josephine Coulter, daughter of Dr. Coulter, of Scrubgrass Township, Venango Co., Penn., well known for many miles around as a physician of great renown for over thirty years, and closely connected with the history of Venango County. On July 29, 1854, John Coulter Feather was born, who for many years was a companion, partner and trusted confidant of his father, Dr. Feather, whom he now succeeds as head and principal of a large practice peculiar to itself, which he had assisted to build up. On August 4, 1858, Francis Floyd Feather was born, who, as junior member of the firm of Drs. J. C. & F. F. Feather, is assisting his elder brother. On December 19, 1860, a daughter, Lizzie Feather, was born, but died of lung fever on February 6, 1861. In 1861 Dr. Feather joined Company K, Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry Volunteers, but was afterward transferred as regimental surgeon of the Seventy-second New York Infantry Volunteers. In 1862 he was detailed to act as surgeon-general of the hospitals at Yorktown, Va. It was at this time he suffered from yellow fever for first time, from which so few northern men recover; in 1865 he sent north for his family, he still serving as medical director of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands, besides having a large private practice. On August 20, 1867, his wife died of typhoid fever, and, his own health being wrecked ever since the war, he returned north in 1868, and, in 1869 was married to Miss Hannah C. L. Bell, daughter of William and Lovina Bell, of Sandy Creek Township, Mercer County, whose lives form part of the history of Mercer County for a period of over fifty years. In June, 1875, Dr. Feather commenced the practice of his profession in Sandy Lake, Penn., where he remained until death. Dr. Feather was burnt out on February 26, 1880, without insurance, and in 1882 built the three-story building used as a dwelling until the completion of the building known as Dr. Feather's Block, corner of Main and Lacock Streets, constructed of stone, brick and marble. In 1882 he suffered a stroke of paraplegia, caused by the disabilities and injuries sustained while in the military service. On November 11, 1887, he was again taken sick from the same cause, but his power of resistance had decreased as his disease had increased, and death came on November 18, 1887, at the age of fifty-eight years.

L. P. FOSTER, post-office Sandy Lake, breeder of Standard breed horses, was born in Venango County, Penn., May 10, 1849, to John and Mahala (Byers) Foster, natives, the father of Venango and the mother of Pulaski, now Lawrence County. The parents lived after marriage in Franklin, where the father followed rafting lumber and boat building. He died on the ground where the United States Hotel of Franklin now stands, in 1851. His widow died in 1853. They had only one child. The parents belonged to the Methodist Episcopal Church. The father owned, at death, the farm that Foster's Station is located on, which was named for him. At the death of his father our subject was taken by his grandfather, Byers, who then lived in Venango County, but who now lives in Fairview Township, Mercer County. He stayed with his grandparents until 1870, and was educated in the New Lebanon Academy, Sheakleyville schools and Jamestown Seminary. He then, in 1870, came to Sandy Lake and engaged in the livery business with J. W. Byers, continued for three years, and then sold the business to the Barnes Brothers. This stable is now owned by S. P. Turner. He then entered into the dry goods business with Devore & Stevenson, and continued nearly three years. He erected a fine bank building, and July 1, 1876, opened a private bank under the firm name of Brown & Foster. Mr. J. F. Brown, of this firm, died in November, 1876, and was in the bank but once. Mr. Foster continued to operate the bank for seven years, and finally concluded to close up the business; he notified his depositors, paid them their money and withdrew his stock. He then bought one-third interest in the dry goods store of Paden, Patton & Co., of Greenville, and lived there for two years, when he withdrew, came back to Sandy Lake, and engaged in stock breeding, being in full partnership with R. R. Wright in the same. He was married September 3, 1872, to Jessie Brown, and had four children: Brown, deceased; John, deceased; Katie, deceased, and Jessie. His wife died March 8, 1881. She was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. He was again married, to Lizzie Whitting, September 5, 1883, and has two boys: Charles W. and James B. He is a member of the A. F. M., K. of H., A. O. U. W. and K. & L. of H. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is a Democrat. Mr. Foster is a real representative of a self-made, thorough-going business man, who has won the esteem of every one with whom he has had dealings, by his faithful fulfillment of business agreements. He began in life by working out by the month, and is the artificer of his present little fortune.

RICHARD FOWLER, SR., deceased, was a native of Staffordshire, England, immigrated to America in 1830 with his wife, Margaret Mears, by whom he had nine children. He died in 1867, aged eighty-one years. His wife, Margaret, died in 1859, aged sixty-seven years. Of the nine children Margaret Perrine (deceased) was the oldest, wife of John Perrine, Esq.; she was the mother of sixteen children, nine of whom are still living. The second daughter, Sarah Wright (deceased), wife of Thomas Wright, Sr., Esq., was the mother of nine children, six of whom are still living. Mary Mears, wife of Richard Mears, the third daughter, was the mother of ten children, five of whom are living. The fourth daughter, Ann Egbert, wife of John Egbert, Esq., was the mother of seven children, all living. The fifth daughter, Elizabeth Carmichael, wife of Hiram Carmichael, was the mother of twelve children, all living. The sixth daughter, Eliza Carmichael (deceased), wife of John Carmichael, Esq., was the mother of two children, one living. The oldest son, Richard Fowler, Jr., married Mary E. Buckley, by whom he had five children, all living. The second son, Simon Fowler, was never married, and is the owner of considerable property, which he still enjoys. The third son, William Fowler, married Ellen Buckley, by whom he had four children: John, Emma, Alfred and Eliza; John married Sadie Hosack; by her he has three children: Jennie, Mary and Ansley; Emma, married Walter Huey; Alfred, married Clara Barker, by whom he has two children; Eliza married Lewis Perrine, and died leaving one child. Richard Fowler, Sr., is the father of the Fowler family in this county.

C. B. FULTON, secretary of the Economical Mutual Benefit Association, Sandy Lake, is a son of Dr. T. H. Fulton, a native of Hillsboro, Highland Co., Ohio. The Doctor studied medicine with Dr. G. W. Baskin, once a prominent physician of Mercer, but who is now dead. He attended the Cleveland Medical College, and began practice at Sandy Lake, where he built up a large practice, and became one of the leading physicians in the county. He married Eva Brown, a native of this county, by whom he had four children: C. B., Belle, W. B. and Thomas H. Dr. Fulton resides in Nebraska, and other mention is made of his useful career in another part of this work. C. B. Fulton was educated in the common schools and at Sandy Lake. He began for himself as a clerk in a drug store for DeFrance & Zeigler. He was appointed assistant cashier of the Sandy Lake Banking Company in 1873, and in 1880 was made its cashier, which important position he held until 1884, when he resigned the cashiership, having previously been elected secretary of the E. M. B. A. He was married to Miss Lina Gumfory, daughter of John Gumfory, by whom he has one child, Julia C. He is a member of the town council, and treasurer of the same; is a director of the bank, auditor of the Stoneboro Fair, is interested in the Excelsior Stock Company, is a member of the A. F. & A. M., K. of H., K. L. H., is a Republican, and he and his estimable wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Sandy Lake.

E. X. GIEBNER, physician and surgeon, Sandy Lake, was born July 5, 1830, in Mercer County. His father, Valentine Giebner, was a native of the eastern part of Pennsylvania, and came to this county at an early day. His mother, Anna (Albin) Giebner, was born on the ocean, to John and Jane Albin, in 1804. Charles A. Giebner died in this county, and was buried about four miles south of Sandy Lake. He was the father of the following children: Jacob, John, was drowned at Galena; Augustus and William, both died in Mercer County; Polly, married James McCloskey, and died in Sandy Lake; Valentine and Samuel. Valentine died in 1874, and was the father of four children: E. X., J. T., an attorney of Sharon; Mary A., married Samuel Waldron; Sarah B., married James Grace. The parents were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools and Allegheny College, Meadville, and during intervals he taught in the country, and two years at Franklin, Venango County. He began reading medicine at that city in 1851, with Dr. B. Gillett, and attended medical college at Harvard, where he graduated in 1854, and at once began the practice of his chosen profession in Franklin, Penn., in partnership with his preceptor, for one year. He then went to Blair County, where he remained until 1856, when he located at Sandy Lake, where he has taken high rank as one of the best physicians and surgeons in this part of the State. He had Dr. T. M. Cooley as a partner from 1876 to 1888. He was married, in 1856, to Mary A. Dunn, a native of Sandy Lake, and daughter of Robert and Anna (McKean) Dunn, and by this union has two children: Annette and Ida E., married William Harvey, who is dead, and she is the mother of one son, Earl. The Doctor has been burgess of Sandy Lake, and at various times a member of the council of the same. He has also served as school director. For many years he was identified with the Republican party, but is now an adherent of the Greenback party. He is a member of the F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W. and K. of H. He and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

C. W. GIEBNER, deceased, farmer, was born July 8, 1832, in the house where his widow now resides. He was a son of William Giebner, who is mentioned elsewhere. He was one of four children, two of whom grew up, C. W. and Sarah J., who married Abram Farrah. The deceased was married October 9, 1857, to Miss Amelia Vath. He enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and a short time after his return from the war he was returning from town in a wagon, when his horse took fright and threw him out, breaking a leg, from the effects of which he died April 23, 1865. He was the father of three children: Georgie E., married E. W. Thompson; C. W., at home with his mother, and John E., who married Nellie Robinson, and is a prosperous merchant of Sandy Lake. Mr. Giebner believed in the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which organization his widow is attached. Dr. J. P. Vath, the father of Mrs. Giebner, was born in Germany, where he was educated. His father and brother Philip were prominent physicians in that country. His sister Maria married George Albright, and subsequently settled in Mercer County. She died leaving six children: Barbara, Margaret, Amelia, Cassie, Mary and Susan. Dr. Vath left Germany during a war, and practiced in New York City, and there was married to Frances Webber, and subsequently removed to Buffalo, practiced there and in Norwalk, Ohio, for some time, and then came to what is now Sandy Lake, in 1838, and built a house on the site of A. P. Rose's residence. Here he died July 19, 1854. His widow died about twenty years later. Their children were: J. P., Amelia, Theresa, married Alexander Lowrey; Louesa, Lewis P., Harriet, married James Smith, and Joseph, who is dead. Dr. Vath formed a partnership with Dr. Giebner a short time before his death. He and his wife were members of the Catholic Church, and were buried in the grave-yard of that organization a short distance north of Mercer. Their daughter Louesa married Samuel Bowers, by whom she has two children: Della, married Newton Holland, of Youngstown, Ohio, and Lewis P., a printer, of the same city.

JAMES GORDON, retired farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born May 23, 1813, in Venango County, Penn., to John and Polly (Cooper) Gordon. The father was born in Westmoreland County, and removed to Venango County in 1798. He had purchased land in that county one year earlier. He died on this farm February 14, 1847, and his wife died in 1819, the mother of Samuel, Margaret, William, Nancy, John, Jane, John (2), James, Joseph, Robert C. and Josiah. The father was married again, to Mary McMasters, and by her he had Samuel and Rebecca. Mrs. Gordon was the mother of five children by her union with Mr. McMasters: Isabella, Margaret, Elizabeth, John and Mary. Joseph Gordon came to Mercer County in the spring of 1837, and was the father of John I. Gordon, of the Dispatch and Republican. Robert E. Gordon came to the county in 1853, and died February 4, 1856. William Gordon settled for awhile in this county. The father of our subject was auditor of Venango County three years, and also held other small offices. He and wives were members of the Presbyterian Church, and helped to build the church for that congregation, near his residence. James Gordon was educated in the log cabin schools, and the first two houses where he sought for information had no floors. The first work he did for himself was to put in a crop for a neighbor. In December, 1834, he began in the woods to clear up a farm. His father gave him a piece of land, unimproved, and there was his beginning. He was married in 1836 to Charlotte Smiley, born February 13, 1817, to Thomas and Mary (Duffield) Smiley, natives of Pennsylvania, who were early settlers of Venango County, and the parents of Armstrong, William, James, John, Charlotte and Philip. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon settled at their marriage in a cabin on a farm, and have gone through the hardships that go to make up the life of the real pioneers. He was engaged in the mercantile business at New Lebanon with his brother and James Muse for about three years. He was also engaged in a steam mill with the same parties. He also dealt in oil for a period. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon had no children by their marriage, but they have reared the following persons: Mary A. Jewell, who married D. C.

Montague; Nancy L., daughter of R. C. Gordon, she married Isaac Suydam, of Glendora, Colo., and Joseph A., married Emma Smiley, lives in Nebraska. During the time of the war Mr. Gordon raised flax, which sold at large figures. He hired girls to pull and spread it and men to skutch it. For many years after his marriage he and his wife made their own clothing. He united with the Presbyterian Church at the age of twenty and his wife at the age of seventeen years. He is a Republican, and one of the respected citizens of Sandy Lake. [Both he and wife died since the above was written.]

J. W. HAWTHORN, miller and farmer, post-office Stoneboro. Among the prominent, enterprising business men of Sandy Lake Township is the gentleman whose name heads this biography. He was born July 26, 1849, in Jefferson Township. His parents, John and Elizabeth (Ross) Hawthorn, were natives, the father of Mercer and the mother of Allegheny County, Penn. The father is dead and the mother lives in Findley Township. Their children were: J. W., A. J., of Jefferson Township; Samuel H., of Pymatuning Township; George R., John F. and Joseph, of Findley Township; Alexander S. and Charles E. The parents worshiped at the Baptist Church, and the father was a Republican. Our subject was educated principally at the Pearson school-house, in Jefferson Township. He began for himself when reaching his majority. He was married April 14, 1875, to Mary A., daughter of George I. Slater, of Fredonia, by whom he has had three children: Lizzie M., deceased; infant, deceased, and Montie, living. He settled at his marriage in Fredonia, where he worked in a saw-mill two years. He then rented a mill in Fairview Township, which he operated two years, after which he purchased a mill, moved it to New Vernon Township, ran it two years, and the following eighteen months operated the same in Lake Township. In 1883 he located his mill in Sandy Lake Township on his farm, and employs a number of men in the manufacture of lumber. He is a member of the A. F. M. of Sandy Lake. He and wife belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is an earnest, energetic Republican, a clever gentleman, a public-spirited, intelligent and honorable citizen.

A. G. HOOVLER, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born March 8, 1836, in what is now East Lackawannock Township, Mercer County, son of Jacob and Nancy (Hurry) Hoovler, born, the former June 5, 1805, and the latter July 26, 1815, both in Beaver County, Penn. John and Catharine Hoovler were for many years residents of the vicinity of Darlington, Beaver County, and their four sons came to Mercer County: Eli resides in the northern part of the county; Samuel lives in the southern part; Joab is a resident of Venango County, and Jacob. Jacob was married to Nancy Hurry April 22, 1825, settled on a farm in East Lackawannock Township, remained until 1842, when they bought and settled on a tract of 200 acres in Mill Creek Township, where they lived until 1873, at which time they retired to Sandy Lake. Here Jacob died July 13, 1887. His children were ten: A. G.; Mary L., married Lucius Jackson; Francis M., married Margaret G. Canon, both deceased, he having died from the effects of a wound received in the battle of the Wilderness, as a member of Company B, Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers; Edward H., served three years in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, is married and lives on a farm in Iowa; Catharine, married Ansley Canon March, 1851, and died September 22, 1869; John C., married M. E. Firster, and served in the One Hundred and Thirtieth Pennsylvania Volunteers; Jacob T., married Mary Lynch, and resides on a part of the old homestead; Nancy J., is a maiden, and resides with her mother in Sandy Lake; J. Mason, married Elsie Kitch, and died October 16, 1879, and William, died small. Jacob Hoovler was a Republican and a member of the Presbyterian Church, to which his widow belongs. A. G. Hoovler was educated in the common school, and was married May 13, 1862, to Mary U. Law, born May 3, 1841, in Sandy Lake Township, daughter of William E. and Julia A. (McClain) Law, natives of Ohio and Cool Spring Township, respectively, and the parents of ten children: Ephraim, married Sarah E. Denwoody; Thomas M., married Elizabeth Grove; Mary U.; Eveline, married Solomon Zedaker; Minnie J., married David B. Wilhelm; Caroline, died small; Amelia and Amanda (twins), the former lives with her mother and the latter is dead; Julia A., married James H. Gilliland, and an infant, deceased. William Law owned 200 acres of good land at his death February 29, 1876. He was a Presbyterian, to which organization his widow is attached. Our subject settled at marriage on his farm in Sandy Lake Township, composed now of 130 acres. He is also the owner of two houses and three lots, the brick block partially occupied by Scott's hardware store, all in Sandy Lake Borough, and a house and one acre in Zedaker town, all of which he made by his own labors except the value of a colt, the gift of his father. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W., K. & L. of H.; is a stockholder of the Stoneboro Fair and a director of the Mercer County Live Stock Association. He is a Republican, and he and wife belong to the Presbyterian Church, of which he is a deacon. His brother, Jacob M., died, leaving two children: Blanch and Catharine, of whom our subject is guardian, and they with their mother reside on his farm in Sandy Lake Township.

ARCHIBALD McBRIDE, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born December 19, 1820, in Cool Spring Township, to Thomas, born in 1779, and Mary (Gill) McBride, the father being a native of Scotland and the mother of Pennsylvania. Her father, William Gill, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, from Pennsylvania, and lived near Courtney's Mill, Liberty Township. Thomas McBride came from Scotland in 1787, and with his father, Charles, settled in Pennsylvania. They came to Cool Spring Township about 1803. The land where they settled is now owned by John McCurdy. The mother of Thomas is buried at the old Cool Spring church-yard. He died in 1834, and she about ten years later. There were twelve children born to them: William, died in Ohio; Thomas, killed by the cars in the oil region; Charles, died in Ohio; James, died in Butler County; Robert, died in Ohio; Mary, died in Cool Spring Township; Archibald; Sarah, died in Butler; Margaret, single, lives in Butler; Samuel, lives in Nebraska; Isaac, died in Cool Spring Township, and John, lives in Trumbull County, Ohio. The parents were members of the Springfield Church, and the father was a Whig. Our subject was educated in the common schools, was brought up on the farm, and worked four months at the carpenter trade. He was married in 1845 to Susanna, daughter of George Barnes, and settled in Cool Spring Township, where he remained three years. In 1848 he came to where he now lives, buying 100 acres, sixty of which he still owns. By this marriage they have had twelve children: Maggie, married Thomas Powell; George, deceased; Melissa, a teacher at Knoxville, Freedmen's Mission School; Mary A., married James Wallace, of Mercer; Sadie, married A. C. Reagle; George E., of Westmoreland County; Mattie, Thomas, at home; John, attending Grove City College; Myrtie, at home; Ella, at home, and Bella, married A. C. Horn. Our subject was elected justice of the peace, and held that office for two terms, about 1860-70. He has also been assessor two terms. He is a member and elder in the United Presbyterian Church, and was superintendent of the Sabbath-school of Sandy Lake. In politics he is a Prohibitionist.

W. T. McBURNEY, postmaster Sandy Lake, was born June 27, 1852, in Mercer, a son of Thomas McBurney, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He was educated in the Mercer public schools, and began learning the jeweler's trade in 1868 with Hinkley, of Mercer, with whom he remained six years. In 1877 he opened up a jewelry store in Sandy Lake, and continued the same until 1888, when he sold. In 1886 he took an interest in the dry goods firm of M. L. Zahniser & Co., now Giebner & Co. He and M. L. Zahniser have been dealing in horses for about four years. He was married April 13, 1871, to Rachel Ride, daughter of B. A. Ride, and has two children: Benjamin and Harry. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., A. O. U. W., P. H. C. and I. O. O. F. He is a Democrat, and was appointed postmaster of Sandy Lake in 1888 by President Cleveland. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sandy Lake.

R. J. McCLURE, miller, Sandy Lake, was born May 28, 1831, in Old Cool Spring Township. The farm is now in Lake Township, and was settled by Robert McClure, he having a settler's right. James and Hannah (Gamble) McClure, the parents of our subject, were natives of this county and England, respectively, the latter having come from that country when nine years of age, and settled with her parents in Cool Spring Township. Her parents had Hannah, Henry, William, Sarah, Ruth, Mary, Elizabeth, Maria and Charles. James McClure died July 4, 1845, and his widow is living. They had R. J., Henry, Andrew, Mary, married P. J. Boyd; Sarah, married Lemuel Bristol; Ruth, married T. Egbert, and is dead. The father was a farmer, and owned at one time 210 acres. R. J. McClure was educated in the common schools and was brought up on a farm. He taught seventeen terms of school in Mercer County. He was married in 1872 to Mary J. Caldwell, a sister of George P. Caldwell, at present connected with the management of the poorhouse. His wife died leaving one son, Robert. He was again married, to Ella, a sister of his first wife, and has three children: James B., Frank T. and Clara. He and brother, Henry, bought a mill at Sandy Lake in 1879, and in 1881 it burned. The same year the dam went out, and they rebuilt the mill and dam in 1882, and began running five buhrs. The mill is three stories, and cost about $7,000. February 2, 1882, the dam again gave away, and they were compelled to spend $1,000 more to repair it. In 1887 they put in the full roller process, at a cost of $5,000, and the mill is in good order and is running continually during the day. He is also the owner of a large farm in this county. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of L. He has represented his lodge at the grand lodge of I. O. O. F. He served as school director of Lake Township for twenty-three years, and is now holding the same position in Sandy Lake. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a Republican.

RICHARD MEARS, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born November 11, 1816, in Staffordshire, England, to Francis and Mary (Cooper) Mears, natives of England. She died in England, and had three children: Richard, Mary and Sarah. Mary came to this country, and married Rev. George Jaquess, who died, and she now lives at College Spring, Iowa. The father married for his second wife Ann Smith, and with her came to this country, his family consisting of Richard, Mary and three children of his second wife: Charles, William and Ann, the youngest then but five weeks old. After coming to this country four more children were born: Sarah, Thomas, Stephen and an infant. William enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died of fever at Spottsylvania, and is buried at Zion Cemetery. He was married to Helen Marvin, who lives at Sandy Lake. Charles lives in Lake Township; Ann married William Nicklin, of Mill Creek Township; Sarah married Joseph Buckley, of Sandy Lake Township. The father died October 14, 1884, and his wife died about 1854. He married for his third wife Ann, widow of William Potter, and she died August 19, 1886. He was a Republican, held the office of treasurer, and at his death was in moderate circumstances. Our subject was educated in the common schools and was brought up on the farm. He began for himself in 1840, by working on the canal along the Shenango one summer, then two years for Thomas Wright on his farm. He was married January 26, 1843, to Mary Fowler, and settled in Sandy Lake Township, and lived in a log cabin, building a small frame house the following summer, and subsequently erecting their present residence. He has been identified with the township offices, having filled the offices of assessor, treasurer, supervisor and school director. His family consisted of ten children: George, married Lizzie Peat and lives in Kansas City; he served three years in the late war, and was wounded at the battle of the Wilderness; Eliza, died May 29, 1846; Margaret M., died July 16, 1864; Richard W., Mary J., Frank, died September 23, 1854; W. F., who lives in Warren, Penn.; Sarah E., died April 28, 1862; Fred, died May 12, 1862, and Tillie E., who married J. P. Ebbert and has one child, Richard A. Our subject is a stockholder of the Stoneboro Fair, is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Episcopal Church, and is a steward of the latter. Politically he is a Republican.

WILLIAM NICKLIN, deceased, was born October 2, 1796, in Staffordshire, England, and married Frances Moore, a native of the same county; came to America in 1833, and settled on the farm where Charles S. Nicklin now resides. Here he died November 11, 1868, and his widow September 16, 1881. They were the parents of eleven children: Mary, married Henry Clulow and lives in French Creek Township, Venango County; Frances, married H. B. Rice, of Greenville; George D., married Mary M. Eberly, lives in Selina, Venango County, where he is engaged in the mercantile business; Joseph, dead; Eliza, remained in England, married Samuel Jackson, died December 5, 1883; William N., lives in Mill Creek, and is mentioned there; D. T., lives in Venango County; Thomas, dead; Simon J., lives in Venango County; Ellen J., married Thomas Arnitt, of Franklin, Penn.; Charles S., born August 9, 1837. The parents were Catholics, and are buried in the grave-yard of that organization, north of Mercer. The father was a successful farmer. Charles S. Nicklin was educated in the common schools and brought up on a farm. He was twice drafted. The first time he paid the amount of money necessary to be released, and the second time a discontinuance of hostilities rendered his services unnecessary. He was married July 23, 1865, to Miss Mary C. DeWoody, born in Venango County in 1842. Her parents, Robert and Elizabeth (McBride) DeWoody, were natives, the father of Venango County and the mother of the State of New York. They had the following children: Crawford, Thomas, Mary C., Alexander and Albert. Mr. and Mrs. Nicklin have four children: Ella J., married William A. Scott; John C., Mary E. and Florence E. Mr. Nicklin has been school director for nine years, and filled various other offices of trust. He was a member of the order of Patrons of Husbandry, and for a time master of Grange No. 393, Sandy Lake. For many years he and his family were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hendersonville, and he was for a long time the superintendent of the Sunday-schools. They withdrew from this organization, and by letter joined the Methodist Church at Sandy Lake. He is a staunch Republican, and always sacrifices a large amount of his valuable time to the interest of that party.

EPHRAIM OSBURN, farmer, post-office Stoneboro, was born June 15, 1832, in Mercer County, to Christopher and Sallie (Coleman) Osburn, natives, the father of New Jersey and the mother of this county. They were the parents of seven children: Joseph, dead; Nathaniel, dead; Nancy, married James Day; Bennett, dead; William, dead; Betsey, married Robert McElheny. The parents of the above named children are dead. Our subject attended the common schools, and was brought up at farm labor. He was married in 1855 to Amelia Osburn, a distant relative, and by her he has four children: William B., Fred L., Elmer C. and Eva, who is married to H. L. Jacobs. Mr. Osburn enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, in 1862, and served nine months. Mrs. Osburn was born May 28, 1825, in Mercer County, on the farm where she now lives, to John and Sarah (Anderson) Osburn, the parents of four children: William A., David M., Melinda and Amelia. Her mother was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which Mrs. Osburn is attached. Mr. Osburn is the possessor of 114 acres of good land, and is a Democrat.

WILLIAM H. PERRINE, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born July 16, 1817, in Worth Township. His parents, Daniel and Charlotte (Egbert) Perrine, were natives of New Jersey, and came to Mercer County in an early day. They had eleven children: John, deceased; Job, deceased; Mary, married James Barker; Rebecca, deceased; Rebecca (2), William H., O. Perry, Lewis, A. Jackson, Samuel and Elizabeth. The parents were Baptists, and the father was in the War of 1812. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up at farm labor. He has also worked at carpentering. He was married Nov. 13, 1838, to Hannah Slater, daughter of George Slater, who was born in England May 22, 1818. Mr. Perrine settled at his marriage on the farm where he now resides. By his wife he has had ten children: Elizabeth, married Jacob H. Bizler, who died, and she was again married, to George Harrison; William, married Harriet A. Perrine, was in the war from this county, took sick and was brought home by his father, and died a few days later; George, was also in the war, serving in the same company with his brother; Julia A., married Charles Smith; Grace, deceased; Henry, married Retta Smith; James, married Mary A. Slater, who died, and he was again married, to Olive C. Winings; Charlotte, married Samuel Nicklin; Daniel, married Alice Buckley, and Mary, married Peter Griggs. They have forty-six grandchildren living and five dead, and have three great-grandchildren. Mr. Perrine has been a member of the Pymatuning Fire Insurance Company for many years. He and wife are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. He has served as a trustee of the same, and has been a substantial supporter of that organization. He is one of the prosperous and enterprising farmers of the township, and other mention of the family is made elsewhere.

DANIEL PERRINE, president of the Sandy Lake Banking Company and farmer, was born June 23, 1834, in Worth Township, to John and Margaret (Fowler) Perrine, natives, the father of this county and the mother of England. She immigrated here with her parents, who are mentioned elsewhere. Their names were Richard and Margaret Fowler, and they had Simon, Richard, William, Margaret, Ann, Betsey, Eliza, Mary and Sarah. John Perrine married in this county, was a farmer, and always resided in Worth Township. He died in 1876 and his widow died in 1881. Their children were Daniel, Simon, Clarissa, John, Mary, Charles, Margaret and Andrew. They are all living in this county. The parents belonged to the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools of his boyhood days. The first money he got for himself was from the hoeing of a patch of potatoes for 25 cents. He next obtained some money by splitting rails at a shilling per 100 rails. He chopped the timber off of at least 100 acres of land, at from $5 to $6 per acre.

At the age of twenty-two he bought 120 acres in the woods, and made a payment of $100, which he had saved from his small earnings. He sold this farm in six years to Dr. A. G. Egbert for $4,000. He then bought land in Worth Township, and soon disposed of it. He located where he now lives in 1864, and has 100 acres. He has 100 acres in another part of the township, all of which is the result of his own efforts. He was married March 25, 1858, to Elizabeth Frost, born October 22, 1836, in England, and immigrated to this country with her parents, William and Anna Frost. Her mother died in 1838, and had but two children. Her father was married a second time, to Charlotte Ralphs, by whom he had three children. He was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and was a class-leader and steward in the same. Our subject was blessed with five children by his union: Hattie, married to H. C. Zeigler; Lottie, married W. S. Watson; Anna, Maggie and Charles. Mr. Perrine has been justice of the peace and held other offices of trust. He was for twenty years a director of the Stoneboro Fair. He has been for eight years the treasurer of the Economical Mutual Benefit Association of Sandy Lake. He was one of the committee and treasurer in the construction of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sandy Lake, which cost about $8,000. He and his wife are members of that organization, and he is one of the leading Republicans of Eastern Mercer County. He has been identified with nearly all the business interests of Sandy Lake, and is one of the foremost men in this section.

D. M. PORTER, farmer and teacher, post-office Henderson, was born August 6, 1850, in Mercer County, son of David and Matilda (Cummings) Porter, natives of this county. His grandfather, Alexander Porter, emigrated from County Down, Ireland, with his wife, Mary, to America, about the year 1794. Soon after they came to Mercer County, where he entered 100 acres of land in Sandy Lake Township. He died in 1842, the father of eight children: James, Margaret, William, David, Jane, Alexander and Mary. The only one now living is Alexander. He and his children were all members of the Covenanter Church. The large two-story log dwelling-house put up by him in early times was long used as a place of worship. The father of our subject was educated in the common schools, and learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for many years. He was married to Anna White, who blessed him with three children: James B., Amanda and Albina M. Mrs. Porter died, and he was married to Matilda Cummings, by whom he had Mary A., D. M., John A., M. W. and M. C. The last named is studying medicine in Kansas. Mary and John died in 1862. The father died May 14, 1881, and his last wife died in 1888. He was for many years a ruling elder in the Covenanter Church. D. M. Porter was educated in the common schools and at Sandy Lake. He also attended the New Lebanon Academy, and took private lessons under Rev. Rice. He began teaching at the age of seventeen years, and has taught twelve terms, the last four at his home district. He now follows farming exclusively. He was married December 31, 1874, to Mary V. Hunter, daughter of John and Mary (Hutchinson) Hunter. Mr. Porter is the possessor of 110 acres of land which were originally owned by his grandfather and father. The dwelling-house referred to above still stands, and is occupied by the subject of the present sketch. He is secretary of a public library which has recently been started in the village of Hendersonville. It already contains over 100 volumes.

AUSTIN POTTER, clerk for the E. M. B. A. Insurance Company at Sandy Lake, was born February 18, 1843, in Kinsman, Ohio. His father, S. A. Potter, was a native of Trumbull County, Ohio, was educated in the common schools, and when a young man was appointed deputy sheriff of that county, when the territory that now comprises Trumbull and Mahoning Counties were one. He formed a partnership with John Kinsman, of Kinsman, Ohio, and conducted a mercantile business there for a number of years. He then came to Sandy Lake, and engaged in the railroad business, being one of the pioneers engaged in the building of the Jamestown & Franklin Railroad, which passes through that place. It was largely through his efforts that the road was built. He was also interested in the Mercer Iron & Coal Company. He married Amelia Austin, of Warren, Ohio, May 18, 1837, by whom he had two children: Austin and Olive, the wife of D. J. Ives, of Ames, Iowa. S. A. Potter died in 1882; was a Republican, a member of the Disciple Church, and one of the most energetic citizens of Sandy Lake. His son Austin was educated in Kinsman and Warren, Ohio. In 1866 he took employment as clerk in the freight department of the Lake Shore Railroad, at Buffalo, and later held the same position at Cleveland, for the same road. He returned to Sandy Lake, and in 1884 he took the position he now holds. He has established a green-house in Sandy Lake, which is a credit to the place as well as a profitable investment to him. He was married in 1873 to Kittie Hamilton, of Cleveland, by whom he has six children: Seymour, Lula, Bessie, Charles, George and Kittie. He is a member of the F. & A. M. and K. & L. of H. His wife is a member of the Methodist Church.

I. H. ROBB, attorney, Sandy Lake, was born in Mill Creek Township, Mercer County, April 18, 1847, to Robert S. and Sarah (Miller) Robb, natives, the father of Allegheny County and the mother of Lisbon, Ohio. The father came to this county in 1806, with his parents, Robert and Mary (Smith) Robb, the parents of Jane, Robert, Mary, Amelia, Isaac, John, Margaret, Eli and Eliza. The children of Robert S. and Sarah Robb were: James, Meribah, Robert, Nancy, Ebenezer, I. H., Mary L., Sarah J., Susannah and Joseph S. I. H. Robb was educated in the New Lebanon Academy, and taught seven terms of school. He read law with Coulter & Martin, of Parker's Landing, and completed his studies with Griffith & Mason, of Mercer. He was admitted to the bar October 23, 1873, and began practice the December following at Sandy Lake. He was appointed notary public in 1877, and still holds that position. He has been burgess of Sandy Lake one term, a member of the council three terms, and school director two terms. He is a member of the K. of L., K. & L. of H. and I. O. O. F. He was married November 5, 1873, to Cassie E. Blair, who bore him three children: Eva L., Maggie B. and Estella (dead). His wife died February 12, 1881, and he was again married, to Maggie A. Blair, and has one child, Theresa M. He and wife belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, of which he is a trustee. He is a Republican.

A. P. ROSE, real estate dealer, Sandy Lake, Penn., was born in Harrisville, Butler Co., Penn., July 24, 1837. His grandfather, Ephraim Rose, was a native of Somerset County, and a resident of Mercer and Venango Counties for many years. He was a foundry-man and furnace manager in early times, his last furnace being at the mouth of Oil Creek, where Oil City now stands. John Rose, the father of A. P., was an ornamental painter and cabinet-maker by trade, was born in Mercer County, and on July 5, 1832, was married to Mary Clark, daughter of Abraham and Catherine (Starr) Clark, of Cool Spring Township. He was a resident of Pine Grove, and afterward of Harrisville, Butler County, where he followed his trade, also serving the public as postmaster and the State as captain of a militia company, holding a commission from Gov. David R. Porter. In 1845 he moved west to Lee County, Iowa, where he and two of his children died in 1846, his widow and his sons, A. P. and E. L., the only survivors, returning to Mercer County, Penn. E. L. Rose, brother of A. P., died at Mercer in 1879, from disease contracted while in the service of his country, the subject of this sketch and his mother being the only survivors of the family. A. P. Rose was educated in the common schools of Jackson Township. At the age of fourteen he was employed by Sennett & Warren, a furnace and mercantile company at West Middlesex, in whose service he remained as clerk and book-keeper for over five years. In the spring of 1858 he went by water route to the Pacific Coast, and spent fourteen years in the frontier gold mining camps of California, Idaho and Montana. He was much exposed to the incidental dangers of that life, but his love of peace, powers of persuasion and "artful dodging" saved his scalp. When in the southern mines of California, in the early days of our late unpleasantness, he was chosen colonel of a home military organization, that was organized to counterbalance a "Golden Circle" of that section. It had a quieting and soothing effect upon the Circle. He was six years a resident of Northern Montana, located at Lincoln Gulch, an isolated mining camp, situated in the territory of the hostile Blackfeet Indians. Before the establishment of post-offices he carried express from Helena to the northern camps. He was afterward postmaster, express agent, merchant and packer at Lincoln; was the Republican nominee for the Territorial Legislature in 1867, and in 1870 for county treasurer of Deer Lodge County. He returned to Mercer County, Penn., in 1872, and conducted a general store at Jackson Centre for several years, when he served also as postmaster. He came to Sandy Lake in 1879, and in 1880, leaving his family at Mercer, went to Arizona Territory, in behalf of the Milner heirs. He returned with his family to Sandy Lake in 1883, where he has since been engaged in the mercantile and real estate business. He was married on September 5, 1876, to Eva Carroll, daughter of W. A. Carroll, of Worth Township. They have two children; Edwin Carroll and Nellie May. In politics A. P. Rose is a Republican; in religion a Liberal, believing in the religion of humanity—of doing unto your fellows as "ye would that they should do unto you."

WILLIAM SIMCOX, merchant, Sandy Lake, was born March 14, 1830, in Venango County, Penn., and is a son of William and Jane (Marshall) Simcox, natives of the same county. The father was a farmer, and for a time kept hotel along the Franklin and Mercer road. He died in 1855 and his widow in 1860. Their children were: Eleanor, married William Amon; Martha, married Josiah Zink; Mary, married A. P. Whitaker, the present editor of the Franklin Spectator; Nancy, died single; John, deceased; William, James, lives on the old homestead; Jane, married Hugh Gibson; Phileas, deceased; John (2), went West and joined an Iowa company, and after the war settled in Washington Territory; Marshall, in the war from Venango County, resides in Missouri; Lester M., also lives in Missouri. The parents were Presbyterians. Our subject was educated in the common schools and in the log cabins, with their slab seats and puncheon floors. He was employed a portion of his early boyhood time around his father's hotel. At the death of his father he was compelled to make his own living. He was married in 1860 to Hannah L., daughter of Samuel Irwin, of Venango County, by whom he had five children: William, died when young; Marshall, deceased; Florence, married O. Carnahan, who is an agent for the North Platte Lumber Company, at North Platte, Neb.; Ralph, with his father in the store, and Fred. Mr. Simcox remained on the farm until 1866, when he sold and engaged, under the firm name of Kirk & Simcox, in the general dry goods business at Sandy Lake. Seven years later he bought the interest of Kirk, and subsequently was joined by J. A. McCormick, who in five years purchased the interest of Mr. Simcox, and three years later sold the entire stock to our subject, who has since conducted a general line of dry goods, groceries, queensware, etc., carrying at the present time a stock valued at $4,000. He possesses other good property in the village, all of which, together with his stock of goods, has been made by his own labors. He has served as burgess of Sandy Lake one term, and has been a member of the village council two terms. He is a member of the A. F. M., A. O. U. W.; is a Democrat, and he and wife belong to the Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches, respectively.

C. W. SMITH, oil producer, Sandy Lake, was born March 9, 1836, in French Creek Township, to Robert and Julia (Myers) Smith, natives of the same place. John and Lydia (Wallace) Smith were the parents of Robert, Williams, Charles, James, Joseph, Sarah, married Thomas Williams; Jane, married John Rockfellow. John Smith and wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was a strong anti-slavery man. Robert Smith was educated in the common schools of French Creek Township, and served as a justice of the peace for over twenty years. He and wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Both are dead, and were the parents of the following children: Peter M., John, C. W., Mary, married Dr. C. M. Stewart; J. S., and Eliza, the wife of J. A. Painter. C. W. Smith was educated in the schools of his native township and was brought up at rural pursuits. At the age of eighteen he began learning the carpenter's trade with David Randall, with whom he remained for three years. He was afterward, for several years, in partnership with Mr. Randall. He followed his trade until 1861. He then, August 15, 1861, enlisted in Company B, Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years, being discharged September 18, 1864, as lieutenant of said company. He was wounded in the left shoulder at the battle of Gettysburg. On his return from the war he resumed his trade, which he pursued until 1868, when he engaged in the oil producing business at Pleasantville, Penn., and has operated in Butler, Armstrong, Clarion, McKean and Crawford Counties. He bought sixty acres of land in New Vernon Township in 1876, and has lived in the borough, on a four-acre lot, since. He was married, in 1857, to Elizabeth Livingston, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (McCullough) Livingston. She was born in Center County, Penn. By her he has four children: Cassie, married S. F. Newkirk; Ella, married Harry Long; Mary, married George Lafferty; Charles S. He was elected burgess of Sandy Lake in 1887 and 1888, and has been a member of the council. He is a director of the E. M. B. A., is a member of the A. Y. M., I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W. and the K. T. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a Republican.

JOHN W. SMITH, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born April 15, 1852, in Venango County, Penn., to Samuel and Eliza (McMillen) Smith, natives, the father of some portion of Eastern Pennsylvania, and the mother of Venango County. The father died August 21, 1880, and the mother is living on the old home in Venango County. They had nine children: John W., Marion V., farmer of Venango County; Willard F., also a farmer of that county; Sarah E., married Lybner Riddle, of Venango County; David, deceased; Clayton, farmer of Venango County; Sherman, a farmer of Venango County; Alice, married Riley McDow; Mary, married D. W. Walters. The father was a justice of the peace, and a member of the Church of God, to which organization the mother belongs. The father was a very successful farmer, and gave to each of his sons 100 acres of land, and to his daughters $1,000 each. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married, in 1872, to Angeline Henderson, of Venango County, Penn., by whom he has four children: George, Laura, Myra and Sherman. He came to Mercer County in 1882, having traded his farm in Venango County for one in this. He is at present one of the school directors of the township. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and with his wife belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Although a new-comer to the county, he is to be found encouraging everything that goes to build up the community in which he resides. He has an excellent farm, and is raising sheep and other good stock. In politics he is a Republican.

JOHN TAYLOR, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born August 4, 1821, in New Jersey, to Thomas and Anna (Elick) Taylor, the father being a native of England and the mother of New Jersey. The parents both died in New Jersey, and the father was a carpenter by trade. They had six children: John, Hugh E., Mary, Eli, Ufamy, married Isaiah Bell, and Maurice H., painter. The parents attended the Lutheran Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools. His father died when he was eighteen years old, and he had to work to support the family. They drove from New Jersey, and a part of the wagon and the buggy in which they came is yet in their possession. In 1856 he came to Mercer County and bought about eighty-five acres, then in the woods. He erected a log cabin, a portion of which now stands. He has since built good frame buildings. In 1848 he married Susan, a daughter of David Heggar, of New Jersey. By this union he has one child, Isabella, who married William Bailey, a physician of East Liverpool, Ohio. He assisted in the defense of his country by hiring a substitute in the late war. Mr. Taylor manages his own farm, and is a quiet, unassuming man, who attends strictly to his own business, pays his honest debts and enjoys the fruits of his early days' labor.

H. W. TROY, deceased, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., in 1804, married Elizabeth Hendrickson, born in 1802, and settled in French Creek Township at an early day. They had twelve children, of whom the following are living: Hon. Cyrus, Dr. S. S., Mrs. S. S. Ross and Mrs. William Burns. Those deceased were John, Gideon, Albert, Hiram, Rev. McVey, Martha, Phoebe and Sarah. H. W. Troy died November 28, 1887, and Elizabeth Troy November 4, 1877. Rev. McVey Troy was born November 12, 1846, in French Creek Township. He was educated at Allegheny College, entered the Erie Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in July, 1868, and was first located at Salem City, where he remained one year. The next two years were spent at Punxsutawney, Jefferson County, and following that he was sent to Rockland, Venango County. Here his health failed in one year, and he was compelled to obtain superannuation relations. He died April 15, 1873, at the early age of thirty-six. He was married to Maggie Perrine August 18, 1866. Three children were born to them: Albert E., born April 4, 1868; Orvill M., born April 7, 1870, died October 26, 1877, and Carrie L., born September 19, 1872. Albert E. Troy started the Weekly Tribune at Sandy Lake February 29, 1888. It only lived a few months; was a six column folio and independent in politics.

H. M. WELTON, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born January 23, 1846, in Venango County, Penn., to Milo and Jane (Morris) Welton, the former a native of New York State and the latter of Venango County, Penn. The father came to Venango County when he was a boy, and became the father of eight children: John A., a lieutenant in Company K, Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry, wounded in front of Petersburg May 6, and died May 12; Matilda, married Lewis Baker, and lives in Venango County; H. M.; George M., of Venango County; Eliza, married Thomas DeWoody, who is deceased; Lorene E., of Venango County; William S., of Venango County; Nancy, married to Elder Major, of Venango County. The father was a member of Company K, Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and died in October, 1863, of chronic diarrhoea. The mother died March 18, 1884. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the father was a Democrat. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married August 19, 1869, to Maggie E., daughter of John and Rachel Brown. He now owns fifty acres of land where he settled in 1872. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a Republican.

JAMES A. WINNER, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born April 24, 1851, in Fairview Township, son of Jesse and Elizabeth (Brest) Winner, natives, the father of Westmoreland County and the mother of Lawrence County, Penn. The father came to Mercer County about 1842; was married in Lawrence County, where he lived some time, and finally settled in Fairview Township, where he lived until 1857, when he moved to Deer Creek Township, and there died in May, 1859. His widow died September 10, 1885. They had the following children: Anna (married William Bowman), Levi, James, Lizzie (married David Weston, a miner at Stoneboro) and Mary (married Henry Rineman, of Mercer). The father and mother were Methodists, and he was a Democrat. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up, principally, on a farm. After his father's death he stayed at home until twelve years old, when he went to live with V. B. Coulson, of Lake Township, for five years. He began at $7 per month, and got $25 at the close. He drove a huxter wagon two years for him, selling produce. At the age of seventeen years he began as a brakeman on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad, running from Oil City to Jamestown and Girard on a freight train. He then engaged in huxtering to Oil City, and continued at it thirteen years. He bought butter and eggs in Cool Spring, Jackson, Sandy Lake and Lake Townships, and also in Venango County. At the end of that period, in 1875, he settled on the farm where he now lives, and has been dealing in horses ever since. He was married, in 1871, to Sarah C., daughter of Jacob Smith, of this township, and has three children: William J., Nannie and Harry. He has been township supervisor, constable, and collector three years, and is a Republican. He is rearing Clara Bell, the daughter of his brother, Levi Winner, whose wife died when the child was three days old. The following reference is given to the mother of Mr. Winner: "Mrs. Elizabeth Winner died very suddenly of apoplexy, at the residence of her son-in-law, David Weston, Main Street, this place, on Friday morning, September 10, 1885. She had been in usual health, and fell dead over a wash-tub without a moment's apparent warning. Mrs. Winner was born August 19, 1818, and consequently at the time of her demise was sixty-seven years of age. She was the mother of Messrs. James and Levi Winner, and Mrs. Elizabeth Weston, this place; Mrs. Mary Rineman, Mercer, and Mrs. Ann Bowman, Stoneboro, Penn., and was a sister to Joseph Brest, Sharpsville; Andrew Brest, Mercer, Penn., and Mrs. Catherine Sweitzer, Cincinnati, Ohio. A large number of relatives showed, by their sorrow at her funeral, the strong hold Mrs. W. had upon their sincere affection. After suitable religious service in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, conducted by Revs. Foster and Crawford, of this place, on the afternoon of Saturday, September 12, the remains were followed to the cemetery at New Lebanon, and there interred beside those of her husband, who a few years preceded her to the mysterious hereafter. The appropriate discourse, delivered by Rev. S. H. Foster, was founded on the words, 'Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his.'"—Sandy Lake News.

G. W. WORRELL, merchant tailor and dealer in ready made clothing, hats and caps, boots and shoes, Sandy Lake, was born October 16, 1836, in Montgomery County, Penn., to Thomas and Elizabeth (Rambo) Worrell, natives of the same county. The family settled on the land in Jackson Township where Dr. J. B. McElrath now lives in the year 1839 or 1840. They subsequently located near where the widow of Thomas Clark now resides, in the same township, and later the father built a two and one-half story log house on the site of Rev. J. M. Gallagher's residence, in Jackson Centre, and there made boots and shoes. After awhile he followed the same occupation at Terrell's Corners, in Trumbull County, Ohio. After another settlement in Jackson Township and a period on Otter Creek Hill, in Cool Spring Township, where he worked at his trade, he finally settled on his present farm in Jackson Township. He and wife are living, and have had four children: G. W.; J. R.; Maggie A., married James McKay, and Lewis A., married Maggie E. Garvin. The parents belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was brought up at hard farm labor. In 1869 he engaged in the mercantile business at North's Mills as a clerk for North & Bowman, subsequently with North & Eberle and North & Bromley. He bought North's interest, and for nearly two years did business under the firm name of Bromley & Worrell. He later bought out Bromley, and after nearly two years moved the stock to Perrine's Corners, five miles south of Sandy Lake. There he remained for five years engaged in merchandising and farming. In 1881 he came to Sandy Lake, and has been in partnership with Watson, Zahniser & Co., Zahniser & Co., and is now doing business under the firm name of G. W. Worrell & Co. They are the leading merchants in the place in that line, and carry a stock of goods valued at from $8,000 to $10,000. He was married August 22, 1865, to Miss S. Jennie McKay, daughter of James McKay, of Lake Township, and has by her four children: J. M., Thomas I., William A. and George B. He is a Prohibitionist, and he and his wife belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the K. & L. of H.

ALBERT W. WRIGHT, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born May 5, 1846, in Sandy Lake Township, to Sampson and Nancy (Egbert) Wright. The father was born in England, immigrated to Mercer County at an early day, and settled in Sandy Lake Township. He was a farmer, and married in this county, which union resulted in eleven children: Lewis, killed at the battle of the Wilderness, as a member of Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers; John C., lives in Crawford County; Albert W., Matilda, married J. S. Wright, a merchant at Hendersonville; Elizabeth, died at the age of three years; Prudence, married A. F. Perrine; Aseneth, married Samuel Buckley; Harriet, married Robert Perrine; Charles S., Patience, single; H. Ellsworth, lives in Franklin, Penn. The mother of the above children died in 1866, and the father was again married, to Harriet Buckley, the widow of John Buckley, by whom he had one child, Priscilla. He was the owner of over 300 acres of land at the time of his death. He was a Republican. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and attended an agricultural college in Centre County, Penn., for sixteen months. He taught two terms of school after returning from Centre County. He was married to Rebecca, daughter of Uriah and Mary (Taylor) Owen. Mr. and Mrs. Wright have six children: Maurice E., Harry S., Mary G., Nancy E., Bessie A. and Albert W. He enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, and served three months.

CHARLES S. WRIGHT, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born January 17, 1859, on the farm where he now resides. The history of his parents appears in connection with a sketch of Albert W. Wright. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and has always been engaged in farming. He was married November 3, 1880, to Miss Belle Smail, daughter of Aaron Smail, and has been blessed with two children: Pearl and Inez. He was elected by the Republican party treasurer of the township, which important office he now holds. He is the possessor of eighty acres, the old homestead. He and wife are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. He is one of the intelligent and enterprising farmers of the township. He is a never-swerving Republican, and always takes a deep interest in the welfare of that great organization.

M. L. ZAHNISER, cashier Sandy Lake Bank, was born October 8, 1846, in Lake Township. His father, David Zahniser, was born in the same township, and married Elizabeth North, by whom he has eight children: William A., M. L., Mary, married Frank Fleming; Catharine, married R. D. Porter; Caroline, married John Hamilton; Ira, Melissa and Maria. Our subject was educated in the common schools and was brought up at rural pursuits. In 1864 he was employed as a clerk by the firm of North & Zahniser, general merchants at North's Mills. This he continued for two years, and then, in partnership with his father, started the first store at Jackson Centre, this being in 1866. They continued here for two years with good results, and then sold, and he, with his brother-in-law, Balliet, opened a hardware store at Sandy Lake. In 1873, when the bank was established, he was elected its first cashier, and filled that position until 1880, when he retired from the bank and became interested in the clothing business. In 1884 he resumed his old position in the bank, and has been of great service to it. He was married in 1867 to Susan, daughter of John Bell, of Mansfield, Ohio, and has been blessed with four children: Harry, a book-keeper in Mansfield; D. Lester, Mabel and Jay. Mr. Zahniser is a director of the bank; is a member of the K. and L. of H.; he and wife belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and he is a Republican and one of the enterprising men of Sandy Lake, one whose name is always found in every movement that goes to build up the place and retain its good name, as well as that of the county.

H. C. ZEIGLER, oil producer and stock raiser, post-office Sandy Lake, was born November 28, 1847, in Trumbull County, Ohio. His parents, Elias and Elizabeth (Misner) Zeigler, had the following children: Mary M., H. C., J. L. and Emma C. After the death of the father, the mother was married to W. B. Smith, by whom she had six children. The father was a carder and spinner, and at one time was interested in the woolen mills at Sharon. H. C. Zeigler received his education in the common schools, mostly in Mercer County, whither he moved when a small boy. He was reared principally in West Middlesex, and the first business he did for himself was "the book agency." In this he was quite successful, and later engaged in a hotel at Foxburg, Clarion County. He also conducted a livery business in connection with his hotel. While thus employed he began to operate in the oil business in Butler County, which he continued for four years. He held prominent positions in the companies connected in the pipe line business. He engaged in the drug business in Sandy Lake, in 1875, with DeFrance, for one year. In 1877 he resumed oil producing, which he has since followed. He is interested in this project in Venango, Butler, McKean and Warren Counties, Penn., and Allegany County, N. Y. He has also an interest in Ohio and Indiana oil fields. He is a member of a stock company at Sandy Lake, engaged in the breeding of fine road and draft horses. He was married to Hattie J. Perrine, daughter of Daniel Perrine, whose sketch appears elsewhere. By her he has two sons: Fred D. and Roy A. He is a member of the K. of H., A. O. U. W., A. F.

M., and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and is one of the self-made, representative young business men of Mercer County.

WORTH TOWNSHIP.

WILLIAM BALL, deceased, was a son of Caleb and Phoebe (Walters) Ball, natives of Washington County, Penn. In 1796 they came to Mercer County, and located on a tract of land in what is now Worth Township. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and died in 1814. His wife lived to be about ninety-five years old, and died in Indiana. They reared eight children, Aseneth, Mrs. Stokely, of Illinois, being the only one now living. Our subject was born in Worth Township in 1808, was educated at the log school-house of that period, and in 1834 he married Sarah, daughter of Valentine Zahniser, of Cool Spring Township, and settled on a part of his father's tract of land. He voted the Republican ticket, and was in sympathy with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died in 1888. His widow and two children still live on the homestead. They reared ten children: Caleb and Henry are dead; Valentine Z., in Kansas; Jacob, of this township; Elizabeth, Mrs. Bennett Hunter, of Venango County; Rebecca, Mrs. William Kenniston, of Meadville; Phoebe, Mrs. Frank Bissell, of Perry Township; Sarah, Mrs. B. Meadbury, of Worth Township; Beriah and Nettie, at home. Jacob enlisted in 1861 in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until June 17, 1864, when he was honorably discharged because of a severe wound. Beriah was the youngest boy, and at the death of his father became possessor of the homestead. He votes the Republican ticket. Henry enlisted in 1864 in Company A, Second Heavy Artillery, and was discharged with his regiment January 1, 1866.

OLIVER BEACH, farmer and merchant, post-office Kilgore, is a son of Stephen W. and Sarah (Simpson) Beach. James Beach, the grandfather of our subject, was of Scotch descent and a settler in Sussex County, N. J., where the father of our subject was born. He learned the shoemaker's trade, and in 1809 married Sarah Simpson, and in 1816 they came to this county, and first stopped in Wolf Creek Township, and remained until 1819, when they settled on a farm in Venango County. The father died there, May 28, 1865. His widow remained on the homestead for a number of years, and then went to live with her daughter in Butler County, where she died in February, 1888. Their family consisted of fourteen children: Morris, in Ohio; Caroline, deceased; Euphema, deceased; James, in Indiana; John, deceased; Susanna, Mrs. Patrick McDowell, of Butler County; Israel, of Venango County; Sarah, Mrs. Samuel Baker, of Venango County; Stephen, in Indiana; William, on the homestead; Jane, deceased; Oliver; Houston, deceased; Daniel, in Butler County. The father was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and voted the Democratic ticket. Our subject was born on the homestead, in Venango County, Penn., November 12, 1829, and when seventeen years old he came to this county and learned the blacksmith trade at Centretown, and followed that for thirty years. In 1860 he purchased his present farm, where he has since resided, and in 1883 established a general mercantile business. He married, in 1851, Miss Anna Mulhulland, daughter of William Mulhulland, a native of County Tyrone, Ireland, and a settler in Venango County. By this union they have six children: James Austin, in Venango County; Delilah Jane, Mrs. Aaron Blair, of Butler County; William M., professor in the college at Waynesburg, and who is studying for a physician; Martin Luther, at home; Sarah A., Mrs. W. W. Park, of Youngstown, Ohio; Nancy K., at home. Our subject has been school director and constable of the township. In 1862 he was appointed postmaster at Kilgore, and held that office a number of years, and in 1883 was again appointed, and is postmaster at the present time. He is an elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and votes the Democratic ticket.

JAMES BESTWICK, farmer, post-office Hazzard, was born in Staffordshire, England, January 1, 1807, and in 1833 immigrated to America and located on a farm in what is now Worth Township, where he has since resided. His parents were James and Hester Bestwick, who came to America in 1834, and located on an adjoining farm. Hester Bestwick died in 1855, and James died in 1882, at the age of ninety-nine years. Our subject, Jane, Mrs. G. W. Brigham, of Franklin, and Esther, Mrs. Hiram Clawson, of Michigan, are the only ones of their children that are living. In 1839 our subject married Miss Mary, daughter of Francis Huey, of Jackson Township. She died July 1, 1887, leaving four children: Ann, Mrs. Alex McKee, of Wolf Creek Township; Samuel C., of Jackson Township, who is an oil operator in Washington County, married Miss M. C. Taylor, daughter of Benjamin Taylor, of Jackson Township, and she, having died in 1868, leaving one child, Minnie A., he again married Mary Jane Crowley, daughter of Timothy Crowley, of Jackson Township, and has by her five children: Laura, Walter, Mary, Samuel, infant; James H., coal operator, Worth Township, married Eliza, daughter of Capt. James Zanhiser; she died September 4, 1887, leaving eight children: Ella, Harry, Myrtle, Valentine, Clyde, James, Mary, Bessie; George, living on part of homestead, married Eliza Lewis, a native of Wales, who died May 4, 1888, leaving five children: Mary Jane, Warren, Charles, Lambert and an infant. Our subject owns the farm on which the Ormsby Coal Mine is situated, and is a member of the Democratic party.

DANIEL BUCKLEY, farmer, post-office Henderson, is a son of William and Milcah (Perrine) Buckley. Samuel Buckley, the grandfather of subject, was a native of England, and settled on a farm in Sandy Lake Township in 1819. Three of his children by his first wife were born in England: William, Mary and Ann. He married for his second wife Hannah Perrine, daughter of John Perrine, and had by her John, Ella, Samuel and Sarah. All of his children are dead except Ella, Mrs. William Fowler, of Sandy Lake Township, and Ann, a maiden lady. He died in 1878 and his widow in 1885. William, the father of subject, was born in England in 1807, and came to this country with parents. He married Miss Milcah Perrine, daughter of John Perrine, and a sister of his father's second wife. They reared a family of eight children: John, of Worth Township; Mary, Mrs. John Woods, of Venango County; Samuel and Enoch, in Venango County; William, of Worth Township; Daniel, of Worth Township, our subject; Perry, deceased; Sarah, Mrs. George Hart, of Venango County. He was a supporter of the Republican party, and died in Venango County in 1868, and his widow died in 1878. Our subject was born on the homestead, in Worth Township, in 1843, and married Hannah Holmes. She died in 1882, leaving seven children: Milcah, at home; Mary, Mrs. Moses Snyder, of Sheakleyville; Sarah, William, Joseph, Daniel, John, all at home. Our subject again married, Mrs. William Thompson, daughter of Peter Boyle, and has by her one child—infant. Our subject and his four brothers, John, Samuel, Enoch and William, were all members of Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, the most of them receiving wounds, and they all served until the close of the war. They vote the Republican ticket, and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Henderson.

lotte (Wible) Carmical. John, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Scotland, and first settled in Allegheny County, Penn., where he was married, and lived until about 1797, when they and their two sons, Duncan and John, came to this county and settled on a tract of land in what is now Worth Township. The grandfather died in 1808. In 1810 Duncan married Catherine Crane, and moved into Ohio near Cincinnati, and afterward moved to Indiana, where they lived and died. John, the father of our subject, was born in Allegheny County, Penn., in 1780, and gained his education mostly at home. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and engaged in clearing up the land on which his father settled. He was an able supporter of the Democratic party, and held several township offices. His wife was born in 1783. They reared a family of eleven children, six of whom are still living: John, our subject, is the oldest; James, in Worth Township; Hiram, in Nebraska; Sarah, widow of James Wilson, Worth Township; Nancy, Mrs. Augustus Giebner, Sandy Lake Township; Phœbe, widow of Elijah Thompson, of Sheakleyville. Our subject was born on the homestead which he now owns February 24, 1803. He attended the old log school-house of that period, and cleared up the greatest part of his farm. In 1836 he married Jane Elder, who died August 6, 1837. In 1838 he married Mrs. Sarah Geddes, daughter of George and Rebecca Smith. She died April 11, 1854, leaving seven children and one step-daughter (Rebecca Ann Geddes): Sarah Jane, married Amos Snyder, and is dead; Charlotte Wyble, living at home; Nancy Laenna, Mrs. William Dunn, of Sandy Lake Township; Mary Eliza, Mrs. Archibald Marshall, Worth Township; John Andrew; Duncan, in Kansas; Clarinda, deceased; Warren, living on the homestead with his father, married Inez, daughter of Alexander and Sarah (Stokely) Miller, and has three children, Hazel, Howard and Harry. Our subject has held the office of supervisor and school director of the township, and votes the Democratic ticket, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hendersonville.

JAMES M. CARMICHAEL, farmer, post-office Henderson, is the second son of John and Charlotte (Wible) Carmichael, and was born in Worth Township June 30, 1818. He received his education at the old log school-houses of that period, and has always been engaged in farming. In 1861 he married Miss Margaret Forringer, of Armstrong County, and located on his present farm. They have reared six children: Martha, Mrs. Thomas McDonnell, of Titusville, Penn.; Alice Ann, Amanda Jane, Sarah, Looie and Ralph E., all at home. Mr. Carmichael has always supported the Democratic party, and he and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hendersonville.

DUNCAN CARMICHAEL, farmer and county commissioner, was born May 4, 1843, in Mercer County, in the house in which he lives when on his farm. He is a son of Aaron and Margaret (Henderson) Carmichael, both natives of Worth Township. The Carmichael family were originally from Scotland, and John Carmichael, the great-grandfather of our subject, fought under Wolfe, and it is believed that he was the third man to climb the Heights of Abraham in the battle of Quebec. John came to Allegheny County soon after this struggle, and he and family were the first of the Carmichaels to come to Mercer County. His two sons who came with him were Duncan, who went to Rushville, Rush Co., Ind., where some of his posterity yet reside; the other was John, who married Charlotte Wible, resulting in ten children: John, Sarah, married Augustus Giebner; James, Margaret, married Alexander Elder; Charlotte, married John Reed of Mill Creek Township, both dead; Phœbe, married Elijah Thompson; Andrew, died in 1865; Hiram, lives in Nebraska. Aaron died in January, 1885, and his wife died about 1873, both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he a Democrat. Duncan, our subject, was married, July 4, 1865, to Harriet E. Covert, of Butler County, who died in 1871, having had three children, all of whom are dead. He was again married, December 12, 1873, to Emily T. Mackey, of Meadville, and has two sons: Clarence G. and Leon A. He was elected county commissioner in 1887; has been school director, and is a member of the I. O. O. F., a stanch Democrat, and he and wife are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Mention of the family is made in former chapters of this work.

GEORGE W. CARROLL, farmer, post-office Millbrook, is a son of David and Elizabeth (Alcorn) Carroll. William Carroll, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, and after immigrating to America first settled in Pittsburgh. He was among the early settlers of this county, and located on a tract of land in what is now Worth Township, and which is owned by our subject. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and he and his wife are buried in the family burying ground on the homestead. Their family consisted of several children, all of whom are dead. The father of our subject was born in 1797, and was quite young when brought to this county. He was reared on the homestead, attended the log school-houses of that period, and built a foundry on his father's homestead, and afterward erected one at Millbrook, and one north of there in Wolf Creek Township. These he conducted in connection with farming during his life-time. He voted with the Whig and afterward the Republican party, and was one of the first anti-slavery supporters in this section. For many years he was an instructor of vocal music. He was first a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but in the latter portion of his life joined the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Millbrook. He died in 1869 and his widow in 1885. Their family consisted of thirteen children: Three died in infancy; Joana, Mrs. James F. Carroll, of Worth Township; William A., died in 1887; Elizabeth, deceased, wife of S. B. Kerr; Rev. Jonathan E., of Cleveland, Ohio; Robert N., of Fairview Township; Mary, deceased, wife of Joseph B. Page, Mercer; Esther A., Mrs. A. J. Kerr, Mercer; Rozetta M., Mrs. Hon. G. W. Wright, Mercer; Jennie, Mrs. Robert McKnight, of Bradford, Penn., and our subject who is the youngest, was born on the farm he now owns December 11, 1850. He attended the township schools, and has always followed farming. In 1879 he married Mary, daughter of James M. and Maria (Brandon) Rose, of Pine Township, and has two children: Clifton Clay and James Rose. Our subject has been clerk of township for several years, and is school director at present time. His wife attended school at the Grove City Academy and normal school of Edinboro, Penn., and was a teacher in the public schools for several years.

JAMES F. CARROLL, farmer, post-office Millbrook, is a son of William and Rachel (Sutton) Carroll, and was born in Worth Township, April 30, 1821. He received his education at the log school-house, and in 1861 enlisted in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until his honorable discharge from disability. His wife was Joana, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Alcorn) Carroll, and in 1858 they settled on their present farm. They have had seven children, all of whom are dead except Newton T., who lives on part of the homestead. He married Myrtle Turner, daughter of Jones Turner, of Worth Township, and has one child, Elma L. Our subject is a member of Sandy Lake Post, G. A. R., and of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and votes the Republican ticket. His parents reared eleven children: John, deceased; Rebecca (Mrs. Nathaniel Hall), deceased; Elizabeth (Mrs. Samuel McGinnis), deceased; Joana (Mrs. Stephen Yard), deceased; William, living in Illinois; Margaret (Mrs. Robert Thorn), deceased; Mary (Mrs. Alexander Campbell), deceased; our subject; Reuben, in New York State; Stephen, in Crawford County; Rachel (Mrs. E. H. Page), deceased. The father was a Methodist Episcopal minister, and in the War of 1812, and came when but a small boy with his father (William Carroll) from near where the city of Pittsburgh now is, and probably made the first settlement in what is now Worth Township.

GRACE FAMILY.—The first of the Grace family to locate in this county was John and his wife, Milcah (Redding) Grace, who came here from Maryland about 1796-97, and located on a tract of land in Worth Township. They reared a family of ten children: William, died when a young man; Nimrod, settled and died in Indiana; John, located and died in Jackson Township; Nancy, married John Perrine, and afterward Thomas Graham, and died in 1849; Bennett, died in 1849; Elizabeth (widow of Rev. Thomas Lamb), is still living at the age of eighty-eight; Priscilla, Mrs. John Albin, of Wolf Creek Township; Burchfield, lived and died on the homestead; Aquilla, died in Lawrence County in 1888; Milcah (Mrs. Elijah Coleman), died in 1843. Bennett Grace married Mary Coleman, and settled in Worth Township. He was justice of the peace for several years, a member of the Methodist Church, and voted with the Whig party. He died in 1849, at the age of fifty-two, and his widow died in 1865. They reared a family of twelve children, four of whom are living: Sarah A., Mrs. Robert W. Hoy, of Michigan; Rebecca, Mrs. Frank Cochran, of Iowa; John J., of Grove City, and Samuel R., of Millbrook. The youngest of the family was Thomas J., who was a member of Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died in 1861. Samuel R. Grace was born on the homestead in Worth Township, June 5, 1839, and received his education at the public schools of the township, and learned the shoemaker's trade, which he has since followed. August 28, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, his company having been formed at Millbrook, and served until the close of the war, he being captain of his company. In 1864 he married Malinda, daughter of Fleming Smith. She died in 1879, leaving two children: Fred A. and Estella M. George S. died in 1867. The present wife of our subject is Jane A., daughter of Benjamin Campbell, of Butler County. She has had two children: Chester A. and Lester K. The latter died in 1887. Since the close of the war Mr. Grace has lived in Millbrook, and worked at his trade. He held the office of school director of the township, is a member of Marion Craig Post, G. A. R., and votes the Republican ticket.

JOHN F. GRACE, farmer, post-office Hazzard, is a son of Burchfield and Rebecca Grace, and was born August 5, 1830, on the homestead. He attended the schools of that period, and has since followed farming. In 1852 he married Emeline, daughter of Philip McConnell, of Jackson Township, and in 1858 they moved onto their present farm. Their family consisted of Wilhelmina, Mrs. Oliver Perrine, of Sandy Lake Township; William B., of Worth Township; Ida Jane, Mrs. Mathew Irwin, of Worth Township; Clarence, Mary L. and Lauris O., living at home. Mr. Grace and family are members of Fairview Methodist Episcopal Church.

SAMUEL GIEBNER, farmer, post-office Perrine, is a son of Augustus and Nancy (Carmichael) Giebner. Charles Giebner, the grandfather of our subject, was a Hessian, and was brought to America by George Washington and family, and located in Westmoreland County, Penn. In 1797 he came to this county and located on a tract of land in what is now Sandy Lake Township, where the father of our subject was born and reared. He went to school but ten weeks, and in 1858 purchased a farm in Worth Township, which is now occupied by Jacob Bixler, where he lived until his death in 1882. He was a member of the Republican party and of the Fairview Methodist Episcopal Church. His widow is still living in Sandy Lake Township. Their family consisted of eight children: Mrs. Sarah A. Rockwell, died April 5, 1870; Charlotte, died August 15, 1859; John J., died March 7, 1886. The living ones are: Samuel, our subject; Wesley, in Erie County; Stewart, in New York City; Margaret Jane, Mrs. D. W. Henderson, of Venango County, and Mary, Mrs. Alexander Wright, of this county. From 1868 to 1875 he engaged in manufacturing lumber, erecting a saw-mill at Milledgeville. Since that time he has followed farming. In 1888 he purchased the general mercantile business of George E. Hamilton, which he conducts in connection with farming. March 24, 1868, he married Eliza J., daughter of John Hamilton, of Allegheny County. By this union they have four children: Charles William, Jean M., John Hamilton and Thomas Logan. Our subject has held the offices of school director, supervisor and constable of the township, and is now serving a second term as justice of the peace, having been elected in 1880 and again in 1885. He votes the Republican ticket, and has been an elder in the Presbyterian Church since 1874.

SAMUEL J. COOPER, farmer, post-office Milledgeville, is a son of William R. and Mary (Thompson) Cooper, and was born on the homestead, where he now resides, February 23, 1852. He was educated in the township schools, and November 8, 1882, was married to Matilda G., daughter of Joseph Stevenson, of French Creek Township, and by whom he has two children: Arthur and Carrie Annabel. Mr. Cooper is engaged in general farming and breeding draft and driving horses and pure Poland-China hogs. He is a stanch Republican.

ISAAC CROWELL, farmer, post-office Milledgeville, is a son of Dennis and Kate Crowell, of Clearfield County, Penn. He was born in Decatur Township, Clearfield County, this State, in 1831. In 1866 he moved to Mercer County, and located on his present farm in French Creek Township. In 1855 he married Miss Elizabeth Baughman, of Clearfield County. By this union they have had five children: Sovilda, born May 9, 1857, died May 13, 1859; Allen, on the homestead, married Eva Grinnold, of Geneva, Crawford County; Lucinda, married A. A. Lasher, of Venango County; H. H., on the homestead, and Ashley W. Our subject has served as a justice of the peace since 1887. He has also held the office of supervisor. He is a trustee of the New Lebanon United Brethren Church, and votes the Republican ticket.

HENRY DEAN, farmer, post-office New Lebanon, is a son of Abner and Susanna (Remley) Dean, natives of Huntingdon County, who settled in that part of Mercer County which is now Lawrence County in 1818. About 1858 they removed to New Lebanon Borough, where the mother of our subject died in 1866, leaving ten children, of whom Allie and Nancy are dead. The living are: Elizabeth, widow of William Corbin, of Akron, Ohio; Henry, William, John, Abner, Eliza, Susanna and Washington. Mr. Dean, Sr., married for his second wife Mrs. Elizabeth Whitman, who is still living. By her he had two daughters: Eula May and Cora. Mr. Dean was treasurer of New Lebanon for a number of years, a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, and voted the Republican ticket. He died in January, 1888. Our subject was born November 11, 1818; he attended the log school-houses of that period, and has always followed farming, moving onto his present farm about 1839. In 1837 he married Elizabeth Duff, of Lawrence County; she died in March, 1852, leaving five children, of whom Susanna and Susan are dead. The living are: Wilson; Elizabeth, Mrs. Solomon McBride; Sarah Jane, Mrs. Robert Mitchell; Martha Ellen, Mrs. Theodore Klingengsmith. His present wife is Susanna McCammant; by her he has two children: Lucy, deceased, and Dessie, Mrs. Urias Jewell. Our subject has held the offices of school director, tax collector and constable of the township, and votes the Republican ticket.

GEORGE E. DILLEY, farmer, post-office New Lebanon, is a son of Lewis and Jane (Elliott) Dilley. His father was born in New Jersey in 1786, and moved with his father, Price Dilley, to Washington County, Penn. About 1800 they came to Mercer County and located on a tract of land in what is now Mill Creek Township. The father of our subject first married a Miss Cooper, of Milledgeville. The children of that union are: William, of Kansas; John, of Illinois; Rev. Samuel, of Kansas; Price, of Lackawannock Township; Sarah, Mrs. William Gordon, of Illinois. His second wife was Jane Elliott. Their children are: Robert E., of Venango County; Mary, Mrs. William Miller, of Mill Creek Township; James, of Venango County; Elliott, in French Creek Township; Jane, Mrs. Christopher Evans, of Mill Creek Township; George E., of French Creek Township; David W., of Mill Creek Township; Adam C., was a member of Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died from the effects of wounds received at Gettysburg. Price and George E. were also members of that regiment. David and James were in the Fourth Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry. He, Lewis, was a member of the Republican party, and a deacon in the Fairfield Presbyterian Church for many years. He died in July, 1863. Our subject was born in Mill Creek Township September 15, 1834, and attended the township schools. In 1862 he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was honorably discharged in 1863. In 1858 he married Eliza, daughter of Abner Dean, of New Lebanon. By this union they have one child, Ona Daisy, living at home. Mr. Dilley has acted as school director and treasurer of the township. He is a member of the Norval Muse Post, G. A. R., and of the Cochran Lodge No. 902, I. O. O. F., and votes the Republican ticket.

ORRIN FARVER, farmer, post-office Milledgeville, is a son of John and Margaret (Stright) Farver, the father, a native of what is now Lawrence County. In 1840 he came to this county and located in what is now French Creek Township, on the present homestead, which was then an unbroken wilderness. For many years he acted as surveyor and justice of the peace; was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically a Republican. He died in 1886, and his wife in 1884. They reared three children: Cerilla, Mrs. Alva S. Bailey, of Oregon; our subject, and Emma, Mrs. Charles E. Stevens, of French Creek Township. The father was born in the Shenango Valley January 11, 1811, and married December 6, 1843. In 1844 he located on the farm now owned by our subject, where he remained until his death. Our subject was born October 27, 1847, attended the township schools, and always remained on the homestead. In 1878 he married Esther, daughter of Charles Buchanan, of French Creek Township. By this union they have four children: Myrtle, Winona, Earl and Fern. They are members of the Presbyterian Church. They are also members of Saunder's Grange, and earnest advocates of Grange principles. Their highest ambition is to assist in the mental, moral and financial advancement of their class. They are also earnest advocates of Republican principles.

HON. JAMES W. MCCONNELL, farmer, post-office Milledgeville, is a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Wallace) McConnell, natives of Beaver County, Penn. William McConnell, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born near Philadelphia prior to the Revolutionary War, and afterward settled near the village of Clinton, in Allegheny County, Penn. His son John, the grandfather of our subject, after his marriage, located on a tract of land across the line of Allegheny County, in Beaver County, Penn. Their home is in the heart of the Shannopin oil fields, and is still owned by the descendants of his family. Joseph, the father of our subject, was born in Allegheny County in 1801. He was reared in Beaver County, and lived there until his death in 1882. He was an elder in the United Presbyterian Church for many years, and voted the Whig ticket. His wife died in 1863. Their family consisted of eight children, two of whom are dead, Agnes and Elizabeth; the living are James W., John, Susanna, Rachel, Joseph W. and Mary Alice. Our subject was born in Beaver County, November 21, 1825, and remained on the homestead until 1849, when he married Jane McCorkle, of Mahoning County, Ohio, and came to Mercer County, and first located in French Creek Township, near Evan's Bridge, which is now known as Carlton. In 1853 he moved onto his present farm. Mr. McConnell has experienced the many hardships of the early pioneers. For many years he engaged in teaching school during the winter months, and in clearing and improving his land during the summer. His first wife died in 1881, leaving five children: Alice, Joseph F., William W., Charles C. and Elizabeth L. He was again married, in 1882, to Mrs. Mary L. Braden, daughter of Samuel McCleary, of Lawrence County, Penn. Mr. McConnell has held the offices of justice of the peace and school director of French Creek Township for ten years. In 1879 he was elected to the Legislature, and filled that position with credit for one term. He has always been a leader in the interest of the Republican party, and is connected with the Stoneboro and Cochranon French Creek Valley Agricultural Societies.

O. P. SHIRK, farmer, post-office Milledgeville, is a son of John and Martha (Mains) Shirk, the father a native of Germany, and reared in Centre County, Penn. At the commencement of the War of 1812 he went to Erie, and volunteered and served during that war on one of the Government boats. He received a silver medal for his bravery in the naval action under Commodore Perry on the 10th of September, 1813, which medal is in the possession of O. P. Shirk. After the close of the war he returned to Centre County, and moved his family to the vicinity of Erie, where they lived until 1824, when they removed to Mercer County, and located in that portion of Shenango Township which is now in Lawrence County. In 1841 they purchased the farm in French Creek Township which is now owned by our subject. Here the father died, December 11, 1864, aged eighty-one years, and his widow April 8, 1869, aged seventy-two years. They were members of the Milledgeville Presbyterian Church, and he voted the Democratic ticket. Their family consisted of twelve children, seven of whom still live: Mary, Mrs. William Bell, of Shenango Township; O. P.; Amelia, Mrs. Robert Bell, of Lackawannock Township; Lafayette, in Shenango Township; Jane, Mrs. Hiram Bell, of Ohio; Joseph, of Kansas, and Walter, of Wisconsin. Our subject was born in Centre County, Penn., August 5, 1821; came to this county with his parents, where he has since resided. In 1847 he married Miss Jane, daughter of George Morstler, of New Vernon Township. They had eight children, six living: Martha Jane, Mrs. John Baughman, of French Creek Township; Efegenett, Mrs. James Melon, of Crawford County; Oliver Jesse, farmer, French Creek Township; George, living at home; Arabella, Mrs. John Cratty, of French Creek Township. Our subject has held the offices of school director, supervisor and constable of the township. He and family are members of the Cochranon Methodist Episcopal Church, and he votes the Democratic ticket.

JAMES S. WILLIAMS, post-office Milledgeville, is a son of Daniel and Eleonora (Smith) Williams. The father was born in Lancaster County, and in 1798 moved to Crawford County, where he remained until about 1825, when he located in Lackawannock Township, this county, and in 1837 purchased a farm in French Creek Township, now owned by our subject, where he died in 1847, and his wife in 1867. He was an officer in the War of 1812. He voted the Whig ticket, and was always connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, joining the Deer Creek Church after locating in French Creek Township. Their family consisted of six children: Sarah Jane, died in 1887; the living are Elizabeth, Mrs. James S. Price; Amanda, widow of Robert Cooper; James S.; Matilda, widow of Samuel Markle; Catherine, widow of Josiah Cratty. Our subject was born in Lackawannock Township September 20, 1831, and was reared on the homestead he now occupies. He learned the carpenter trade, which he followed for a number of years, and for the last ten years has been entirely engaged in the lumber business. In 1880 he entered into copartnership with Gaston & Kline, under the firm name of Gaston, Williams & Kline. In 1859 he married Keziah, daughter of William R. Cooper, of French Creek Township; by this union they have nine children: Joseph E., married Sadie, daughter of Andrew Bean, of Venango County; Mary E., wife of Prof. S. H. Sheakley, of Greenville, now living in Nashua, Iowa; William Grant, now living in Butler County, married Ida M. Braden, and has one child, Hazel K.; Frank J., Robert H., Charles C., Ethel L., Harold J. and Edna K. Our subject and family are members of the Milledgeville Presbyterian Church, and he votes the Republican ticket.

CHAPTER XL.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SANDY CREEK, DEER CREEK, NEW VERNON AND PERRY.

SANDY CREEK TOWNSHIP.

WILLIAM H. AXTELL, physician, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of Dr. Samuel and Mary (Loveridge) Axtell, natives of Washington County, Penn. The father of our subject came to Sheakleyville, then Georgetown, in 1825, and engaged in the practice of his profession until 1853, when our subject succeeded him in the active duties of his practice, and he engaged in farming and mercantile business in New Vernon. He died in 1864 in that place, his widow surviving him until 1886. His family consisted of twelve children, of whom our subject was the third. He was born in 1816, in Morris Township, Washington Co., Penn. His early education was received at the common schools, and he completed his education at the Meadville Academy and Allegheny College. His medical education was obtained in his father's office. He commenced the practice of medicine in Sheakleyville in 1839, and has been in active practice until the present time, in connection with his son, John L., under the firm name of W. H. & J. L. Axtell. Our subject was twice married. His first wife was Mary J., daughter of Moses Findley, whom he married in June, 1841. She died in 1856, leaving six children: Mary E., Mrs. Stephen Morrison; Henry S., deceased; Cynthia, Mrs. Horton Balster; Samuel H., deceased; Anna-M., Mrs. William McElhaney; Mary J., Mrs. William Schnau-ber. His second wife was Miss Sadie, daughter of John S. Showers, of Delaware Township. The result of this union was eight children, six of whom are living: George W., Deer Creek Township; John L., physician, Sheakleyville; Abraham L., Sheakleyville; Grace, Stella, and Nannie. Our subject has filled the office of county coroner; has held the office of school director for twenty years, and has been a member of the borough council. He is a member of the Prohibition party, with Republican antecedents.

WILLIAM BELL, deceased, was a son of Sir William Bell, of Scotland, and grandson of Lord John Bell, colonel of a Highland dragoon regiment of Scotland, and afterward a general. The subject of this sketch was born in the parish of Killade, County Antrim, Ireland. He received a collegiate education, and was a graduate of one of the celebrated institutions of Belfast, Ireland. He was educated as a civil engineer for the India service, but immigrated to this country. His first location was in Quebec, and while there he engaged in teaching school. He subsequently purchased a farm at the head of Lake Chautauqua, N. Y. Afterward he removed to Pittsburgh, Penn., where he engaged in teaching and farming. He also taught and resided in Ohio, and in 1838 he settled in Mercer County, in Sandy Creek Township, on the farm where his sons now live. While in Canada he enlisted in the English army, and served in the War of 1812, and was afterward engaged in the Irish rebellion in 1816, and was wounded by a cannon ball in the leg below the knee. He was an active citizen of Sandy Creek Township, and held all the important township offices. He was married twice. His first wife was Catherine McChain, of Ireland, who bore him four children, three sons: William J., Arthur and James; one daughter died in infancy. All are dead excepting Arthur. His second wife was Lavina Boylan, and by this marriage they had nine children: Charles J.; Samuel T., who was born July 3, 1844, and married September 10, 1867, Miss Ada, daughter of David Amon, and they have eight children: Edith E., Charley A., Florence R., Laura S., Elsie D., J. Garfield, Bessie R. and Albert T. January 14, 1862, Samuel T. enlisted in the One Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, Company K, and served three years and three months. He participated in all the battles from Winchester to Gettysburg; was wounded at Antietam in the knee, and at the battle of Gettysburg was wounded in the right ear, breast, left arm and finger of the left hand; engaged in farming in Sandy Creek Township, and is an enterprising citizen. He is one of the present school directors (also township road commissioner), having filled the office for eleven years; belongs to the Elijah Thompson Post No. 417, G. A. R., of Sheakleyville, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. The balance of Mr. Bell, Sr.'s family were: Hannah, widow of Dr. Feather, of Sandy Lake, Penn.; Mary, wife of Eli Robinson; David, deceased; Joseph, Jane, John, deceased, and Sarah, deceased. Mr. Bell died in 1878, at the age of nine-five years, nine months and fifteen days, and his wife died in 1875, aged sixty-two years, eight months and sixteen days.

CHARLES J. BELL, justice of the peace and insurance agent, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of William and Lavina (Boylan) Bell, natives of Ireland and Mercer County, respectively. The sketch of Mr. Bell, Sr. appears in this chapter. Our subject was born December 21, 1842, on the homestead farm in Sandy Creek Township. He received his education at the public schools. He was apprenticed to the shoemaker's trade at the age of sixteen, which he followed for eighteen years. He then entered the employ of T. K. Cochran, of Sheakleyville, as a clerk, where he was employed for a number of years. He then engaged in the insurance business, and represents the following companies: Allemania Fire Insurance Company, of Pittsburgh, Penn.; City of Pittsburgh; Pymatuning Fire Insurance Company, of Mercer County; Travelers' Accident, of Hartford, Conn., and others. In 1883 our subject was elected justice of the peace for Sheakleyville Borough, and re-elected in February, 1888, which office he now holds. Mr. Bell has served as school director and in various other township and borough offices, and while a resident of Porter County, Ind., was postmaster for Porter Cross Roads, Ind., which office he held for two years, 1866-67. He was married, September 17, 1863, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Justius Meibert, of Perry Township, who died December 23, 1878, leaving three children: William, George and Emma. He was united in marriage, December 24, 1879, to Alice Dearthmont, of Crawford County, and by this marriage they have four children: John, Leoida, Ralph and Bernice. Our subject is a member of the K. of H., Norman Lodge 1640, of Sheakleyville, Penn., and is one of the charter members. He is a prominent member of the Presbyterian Church of Sheakleyville (became a member in March, 1864), of which he has been a deacon for fourteen years. Politically he is a Republican, and first voted for A. Lincoln.

THOMAS J. BRADBURY, retired, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of David Bradbury, a native of Washington County, Penn. In 1828 he came to Mercer County, and settled in Sandy Creek Township. Our subject was born October 18, 1810, in Greene County, Penn. He came to Mercer County with his parents, and was brought up to a farmer's life until 1831, when he began running a boat on the Ohio River from Lawrenceburgh to Cincinnati and New Orleans, which he continued until 1834, when he came home, married and settled on a farm until 1847, when he moved to the Mineral Ridge Furnace, and acted as engineer, and kept a boarding-house until 1851, when he moved to a farm until 1854, and then bought a saw-mill on Pine Run, near the little Shenango. This he operated for three years, and traded for pine land in Crawford County, Penn., which he sold to Thaddeus Simmons, and then went to Illinois, and after four years he returned to this county, and bought a saw-mill on Ball Run, in Otter Creek Township, which he afterward sold, and bought a farm, which he subsequently traded for a mercantile business in Sheakleyville, which he conducted for a number of years. He was married in 1835 to Miss Margaret, daughter of John McLean, of Mercer County, and by this marriage they have had four children: William, a member of the Thirty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, who died at a Philadelphia hospital from wounds received at the battle before Petersburg; Hugh, a member of the One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, now resides in Greenville; Sarah, wife of William Welker, of Erie County, Penn.; Lillie, wife of Joseph Baxter, of Greenville, Penn. Our subject was constable for six years. Mr. Bradbury is one of Sheakleyville's oldest and most respected citizens. He is a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and an ardent supporter of the Republican party.

JOHN BYERS, farmer, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., was born February 1, 1804, and is a son of Ross and Sally (Elliott) Byers. The father of our subject was a native of Cumberland County, Penn., and his mother of York County, Penn. The grandfather, John Byers, removed to Pittsburgh, Penn., and in 1797 the father of our subject came to Sandy Creek Township, and took up a tract of 400 acres of land. He was one of the progressive men of his day, was one of the first county commissioners elected in Mercer County, and was one of the board of county commissioners that erected the county courthouse. He was the father of seven children: Jonathan; Sally, wife of John Thompson; John, Elliott, Polly, Nancy and Peggy, all dead except our subject. Mr. Byers, Sr., died in February, 1843; his wife survived him, dying in 1856. Our subject was reared upon the home farm, where he spent his life engaged in farming. He received such education as the schools of that time afforded. Mr. Byers has always lived a retired life, a plain, unassuming farmer, and is respected for his integrity by the people of his community. He has been a life-long Democrat. He was married in 1839 to Miss Sarah, daughter of John Caldwell, of Sandy Creek Township, who died in 1862, leaving five children: Charles W., deceased; Mary, Mrs. John Davis, of Greenville, Penn.; Nancy J., Sinnus and John S.

THOMAS C. COCHRAN, merchant, Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of Samuel and Mary (Cunningham) Cochran. The grandfather of our subject was Thomas Cochran, a native of Adams County, Penn., who settled in Sandy Creek Township, where our subject now resides, in 1812. He subsequently removed to Crawford County, Penn., and settled one mile east of where the town of Cochranston now stands, which place was founded by his son Joseph. Thomas is deceased. Samuel, the eldest son of Thomas, was born January 5, 1790, in Adams County, Penn., and removed to Mercer County with his parents. He was a farmer, and was also extensively engaged in the lumber business. His family consisted of ten children, five of whom are now living: James, who resides in Sugar Grove Township; William, of Sandy Creek Township; Margaret; Mary J., wife of A. D. McCracken, of Mill Creek Township, and Thomas C., who was born April 25, 1823. He received his education at the common schools. In 1851 he engaged in mercantile business in connection with T. K. Cochran, under the firm name of T. K. & T. C. Cochran, at Sheakleyville. In 1856 he severed his connection with T. K. Cochran, and formed the firm of Cochran & Robinson, which firm remained in existence until 1861, when he went to farming. In 1865 he again engaged in business with T. K. Cochran, and was connected with him until 1874, when T. K. Cochran sold his interest to T. A. Robinson, when the firm again took the name Cochran & Robinson, and remained so until 1879, when he, too, sold to Robinson. He then engaged in farming again, which occupation he followed until 1884, when he was appointed assignee for T. A. Robinson. The business then passed into the hands of Minnis & Thompson, and in 1885 he formed the present company of Cochran, Minnis & Co. Our subject was married twice, his first wife being Miss Sibby, daughter of Thomas Sterrell, of Erie, Penn., to whom he was married March 25, 1852. She died in September, 1877, leaving four children: Wilson H., attorney of Mercer, Penn.; Samuel S., of Sandy Creek Township; Joseph E., of Sandy Creek Township, and John K., of Sandy Creek Township. He married for his second wife Arilla, daughter of Joseph Gordon, of Mill Creek Township, and by this marriage they have one child, Mary E. Our subject has served as school director about fifteen years, is a member of the United Presbyterian Church of Sheakleyville, of which he was elder for many years, and in politics he is a Republican. He was a delegate to the National Republican Convention, at Chicago, in 1884.

WILLIAM P. COUSE, of the firm of Morrison & Couse, stave manufacturers, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., was born in Sandy Creek Township November 26, 1832. He is a son of James and Lydia (Wetmore) Couse, who came to this county from New York, about 1817, and settled one mile north of Sheakleyville. They reared a family of three children: A. W., William P. and F. H. James Couse was an enterprising farmer, was also engaged in the saw-mill and lumber business, and was recognized as a man of sterling integrity. He was an unceasing opponent of slavery, a warm friend of the oppressed race, and a conductor on the underground railroad through this section of the State, and assisted many a poor fugitive slave on the road to freedom. He died upon the old homestead June 14, 1864, his widow surviving him till January 21, 1887. Our subject was reared on the old homestead, receiving a good education, and taught school several terms in his native township. He was engaged in the lumber business with his father, and was one of the pioneer oil operators of Venango County. In 1872 he formed a partnership with Hon. Levi Morrison for the manufacture of shingles and staves, this firm being among the pioneer dealers in the latter commodity. They have carried on the stave business for a number of years in West Virginia. Mr. Couse is also interested in the grist and saw-mills of Sheakleyville. He was married October 14, 1862, to Miss Sarah I., a daughter of Isaac Phillips, whose family sketch appears in this chapter. Three children have been born of this union: Edwin, Emily and Charles. At the time of Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania Mr. Couse joined Company H, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, which was afterward mustered into the United States service. Since reaching manhood Mr. Couse has taken an active interest in the growth and development of the public schools of Sandy Creek. He is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sheakleyville, a class-leader in that body, and superintendent of the Sabbath-school, and is one of the enterprising and respected citizens of his native township.

SOCRATES DUNN, farmer, post-office Sheakleyville, son of James and Maria (Thompson) Dunn. The grandfather, Alex. Dunn, was a native of Eastern Pennsylvania. He settled in French Creek Township, Crawford County. He was a farmer and one of the early justices of the peace, appointed by Gov. Snyder in 1809. The father of our subject was born in Crawford County, and settled where the borough of Sheakleyville is now located in 1828. He entered the service of the United States in the War of 1812, at the age of twelve years. By occupation he was a carpenter, and was engaged for many years at that trade. He was the father of thirteen children: William T., Mary L., Alexander, deceased; Maria B., deceased; Socrates, Euphrates, deceased; Sarah C., Harriet, Hettie, James J., Arvilla, Julia, deceased, and Lucy, deceased. He was burgess of Sheakleyville, and filled the office of postmaster for eight years, and was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of that village. His wife died in 1865, and he in 1874. Our subject was born in June, 1831, and was reared on a farm. At the age of twenty-four he located on his present farm, lying within the borough of Sheakleyville, where he has farmed with good success. He was married in 1856 to Sarah, a daughter of Thomas D. Richardson, of Mercer County, by whom he had the following children: William J.; George E., deceased; Laura A., married Charles D. Ray; Hettie M., Charles T., Frank B., Sarah E. and Mary A. Mr. Dunn is a Prohibitionist, and one of Sandy Creek's progressive farmers.

THE McCracken Family.—Among the early settlers of Mercer County was Alexander McCracken, a native of County Antrim, Ireland. He came to America some time in the last century, and his first settlement was east of the Allegheny Mountains. He came to Mercer County in 1798, and settled in Sandy Creek Township. He married Mary Larimer, and his family consisted of eight children: James, John, Alexander, Thomas, Ann, married Robert Findley; Jane, married Joseph Williams; Mary, married John Cooper, and Martha, married John Williams. The children are all dead except Thomas, of this township. Alexander took up a tract of 400 acres, which has descended to his posterity. He was a public spirited man, and filled all of the prominent township offices, and was a leading member of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was a ruling-elder for many years. The parents are both dead.

Thomas was born on the homestead May 9, 1829, was brought up a farmer, and educated in the common schools. He subsequently erected a saw-mill on Dawson's Run, in Sandy Creek Township, and for many years was engaged in the lumber business. Mr. McCracken has been twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John Williams, to whom he was married in 1831, and to them were born eight children, seven of whom are living: Louesa, wife of Wilson Eells; Mary J., wife of Edward Eells; John, Cyrenus, Thomas A., Sarah C., wife of Herman Dingman, and Frank S. His second wife was Miss Mary, daughter of William Logan, who died in 1866, leaving three children: William L., Martha F. and Margaret E. Our subject is a member of the Sheakleyville Presbyterian Church, and is a Republican and one of Sandy Creek's oldest and most respected citizens.

SAMUEL H. MINNIS, merchant, Sheakleyville, son of Asher and Elizabeth (Newbold) Minnis, was born in Sandy Creek Township in 1840. Hugh Minnis was the first of the family to come to this county. He was a native of Ireland, a pioneer of Washington County, Penn., and settled in Sandy Creek Township at an early period. He died before completing a house in which to locate his family, his death being the first that occurred in that township. His widow came to the county, bringing her six sons and two daughters. Of these children, Samuel was the ancestor of the Minnis family of Sandy Creek Township. He served through the War of 1812, and died on the old homestead. Asher, his only son, and the father of our subject, was born in the township, and became one of the best educated and most efficient school-teachers of that period, he having received his educational training under Prof. Gamble, who was the founder of Jamestown Academy. His children were eleven, nine of whom grew to maturity: Caleb, who died from exposure in the army; Squire, of Salem Township; Thornton A., of Sandy Creek Township; Thomas B., Elmer E., Harry V., Nancy (since deceased), married James Osborn; Sophia, married Oliver McCracken; Clare, married Harvey Hazen, and our subject, who was reared and educated in the township. His early life was spent on the farm, and afterward in stock dealing. In 1864 he enlisted in the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served under Phil. Sheridan until the close of the war. On his return from the war he resumed farming and stock dealing until 1884, when he purchased his stock of goods and has conducted a prosperous business since. He was married in 1867 to Miss Melinda, daughter of James Keen, of Crawford County, Penn. She died in 1884, and he was again married, in 1887, to Augusta, daughter of John Davison, of Crawford County. He is a member of Elijah Thompson Post, G. A. R., of Sheakleyville, and in politics he is a Republican.

HON. LEVI MORRISON, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of Daniel and Julia Ann (Snyder) Morrison, the latter a daughter of Joshua Snyder, of Trumbull County, Ohio. Daniel Morrison, the father of our subject, was a native of Butler County, Penn. In 1835 he came to Mercer County, and located in the southeast part of Sandy Creek, and purchased a farm of fifty acres. He was twice married. By his first wife he had eight children: Levi, Sarah Ann (deceased), Eleanor, Mrs. J. B. Yard, of Hubbard, Ohio; Joseph (deceased), Aseneth (deceased), Dillon P., manufacturer of staves, West Virginia; Julia E., wife of Alpheus Allen, of Hubbard, Ohio; Fannie, Mrs. Sylvester English, of Cochranston, Penn. Mrs. Morrison died in 1864. His second wife was Mrs. Maggie Hamilton, of Sheakleyville, Penn., by whom he had two children: Maggie C. and Phoebe C. He died in 1884. His widow survives him, and lives in Sheakleyville, Penn. Our subject was born August 8, 1839, in Sandy Creek, and was educated at the common schools, completing his education at the Sheakleyville

High-school. In 1860 he engaged in the drug and grocery business at Sheakleyville, in which he was engaged for fifteen years. In 1870, in connection with his brother-in-law, W. P. Couse, he engaged in the manufacture of shingles and staves, manufacturing the first sawed staves in this section of the country, and is at present one of the firm of Morrison & Couse, operating extensively in this line at Elizabeth, Wirt Co., W. Va. Mr. Morrison takes an active interest in the public affairs of his county and borough, having served as school director for many years, treasurer, township clerk, etc., and in 1882 was a member of the State Legislature, being the only Republican elected from the county that year. Mr. Morrison is also a prominent member of the Baptist Church of Sheakleyville; was elected clerk in 1868, which office he has continued to fill until the present time. In 1885 he was elected moderator of the French Creek Baptist Association, held at Greenville, Penn. Politically he is a Republican. He was married May 28, 1867, to Miss Caroline S., daughter of Isaac Philips, of Sheakleyville, and by this union they have had three children: John L., Anna (who died at the age of ten, in 1884) and Nellie. In 1863 Mr. Morrison enlisted in Company H, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, which was transferred to the United States service. Our subject is a member of the G. A. R., Elijah Thompson Post, of Sheakleyville, Penn., also of the Royal Arcanum, French Creek Council 328, of Meadville, Penn.

GEORGE W. MOYER, farmer, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of Daniel and Catherine (Madoria) Moyer. The grandfather of our subject was Philip Moyer, of Kutztown, Penn., who was a native of Berks County, Penn. He married Barbara Ditts, and they had one son, Daniel, who immigrated to Ohio in 1831, and located at Lordstown, Trumbull Co., Ohio. He afterward came to Mercer County, and settled in Sandy Creek Township, two and one-half miles west of Sheakleyville, where he died in 1866, his widow dying in 1883, in Meadville, Penn., at the home of her daughter, Catherine. She is buried in the old grave-yard at Sheakleyville. Our subject was born October 16, 1819, in Kutztown, Berks Co., Penn. He was reared and educated in Berks County, Penn., and Ohio, at the public schools. He learned the trade of a blacksmith and carriage-maker at Warren, Ohio. He followed his trade, working in Philadelphia until 1843, when he located in Sheakleyville, Penn., and established the first manufactory for carriages and wagons in that borough. He conducted the business for some twelve years, when he purchased a farm one mile north of Sheakleyville, where he resided for a short time, when he returned to Sheakleyville, and in connection with W. G. Brown engaged in the banking business, which they operated some five or six years. In 1878 he removed to his farm where he now resides, which he had purchased in 1855, and has since been engaged in general farming. Our subject was the first burgess of Sheakleyville, and filled that office for two terms, and has served as school director. Mr. Moyer was married in February, 1843, to Miss Emeline, daughter of Adam Weir, one of the early hotel-keepers of Sheakleyville, and by this union they have had three children: George, who married Teressa Canon, and has three children, Charley, Eva and Lillie; Emma, Mrs. Prentice Fry, of Meadville, and has one daughter, Anna; James F., who married Lillie Caldwell, and have three children, Lena, Estella and Marvin. Our subject is a member of the F. & A. M., also I. O. O. F. He is one of the enterprising citizens of Sandy Creek Township, and is a supporter of the Prohibition party.

WILLIAM PALM, deceased, was born in 1825, in Austintown, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and is a son of John and Sally (Beil) Palm. The father of our subject was a native of Cumberland County, Penn. He located in Trumbull County, Ohio, and about 1835 he came to Mercer County and settled at Leech's Corners, where he remained for a few years, and then removed to Sandy Creek Township. He was a carpenter by trade, and while a resident of Ohio he was engaged in hotel business. After his removal to Mercer County he purchased the grist and saw-mill at Leech's Corners, which he operated a few years. After his removal to Sandy Creek he built the grist and saw mill on Rinn's Run. He there died, and his widow survived him till 1850. Their family were: Peter, of Chicago, Ill.; Jacob, who died in Cumberland County, Penn.; Mary (deceased), married Benjamin Ross, of Salem Township; Samuel, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; David, deceased; William, deceased; Sarah A., who married James Rook, at whose death she married William Klingensmith, of Crawford County, Penn., and John, of Sandy Creek. Our subject was reared in Mercer County. He was bred a farmer, an occupation he always followed. He located in 1847 on his late homestead, and the same year he was married to Miss Catherine, daughter of William White, one of Sandy Creek's prominent citizens, of which union five children survive: Andrew J., the publisher of the Western Press, of Mercer, Penn.; Milton A., physician of Dwight, Ill.; Emma; Rev. William J., of Omaha, Neb., and Myrta, Mrs. Charles Ogden, of Greenville, Penn. Mr. Palm was one of Sandy Creek's enterprising citizens, and politically he was a Democrat. He died on Wednesday evening, October 10, 1888, after an illness of four months.

THE PHILIPS FAMILY.—Joseph Philips, the ancestor of the Philips family of Mercer County, came to America in 1755. He was born in 1716, but of his birthplace and parentage nothing is known by his family. In 1775, with his wife and three children, David, Josiah and John, he sailed from Pembrokehire, South Wales, and made his first settlement in Chester County, Penn., where he followed the occupation of a weaver. His eldest son, the Rev. David Philips, was the progenitor of the Philips family of Mercer County. He served as a captain in the Continental army under Washington, and was one of the pioneer Baptist preachers of Western Pennsylvania, and is said to have preached at Sharon as early as 1801. He died in 1829, never having had any residence in Mercer County. He had thirteen children, none of whom are living. His descendants are scattered over Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Tennessee. Thomas, his son, settled in Sandy Creek about 1798. He took up a tract of 424 acres of land. His patent calls for the land known as Philipsburg, situated in Sandy Creek. He married Sarah B. Hazen, and by this union they had David, Isaac, Thomas, John, Sarah B., Mary and Martha. Thomas died in 1837, and his widow survived him until 1854. Isaac, the only living representative, now residing in Sandy Creek, was born October 1, 1803. He was reared and educated in the common schools of the day, and learned the trade of a tailor. In 1826 he located in Sheakleyville, and conducted that business until 1853, when he was elected justice of the peace for the borough, and filled that office for twenty-five years, giving his time and attention to the duties of that office. He married, in 1827, Miss Emily, daughter of William Church, of Sandy Creek Township, and by this marriage had eleven children, eight of whom grew to maturity: Clarinda, Mrs. Alexander Dunn; Elvira, widow of W. S. McCoy; Weltha, widow of David McDowell; Sarah, Mrs. William P. Couse; Augusta, deceased wife of Joseph Limber; Anna, deceased; Meranda, Mrs. John Clark, and Caroline, Mrs. Levi Morrison. Mrs. Philips died in 1885. He is a member of the Georgetown Baptist Church, and held the office of deacon for over forty years. Politically he is a Republican.

THE SHEAKLEY FAMILY.—Among the Irish immigrants to the colony of Pennsylvania during the year 1751 were William Sheakley and wife, who settled in what is now Mount Pleasant Township, Adams Co., Penn., then a portion of York County, close to the Maryland line. He was a man of industrious and frugal habits, and at his death, about 1799, had accumulated considerable property. About eight years prior to his death he sold his land, and removed into Franklin Township, four miles north of Gettysburg. During the last two years of his life he was entirely blind, and at his death left a family of two sons and one daughter: John, George and Margaret. In 1803 John Sheakley visited Mercer County, and purchased from William Byers 400 acres of land, on a part of which the village of Sheakleyville now stands. His purchase contained what the pioneers designated an improvement, consisting of an unfinished log cabin, surrounded by a small clearing. He returned to his home, and in the spring of 1804, sold his farm, lying in Cumberland Township, some three miles north of Gettysburg, and with his family of five sons and three daughters removed to his new purchase in the unbroken forest of Mercer County. The farm he sold in Adams County was subsequently the home of Thaddeus Stevens for twenty-five years, and was also the scene of the first bloodshed in the great battle of Gettysburg July 1, 1863, forty-nine years after his removal therefrom. At the time the Sheakley family settled in Mercer County there were no wagon roads in this part of the State, and emigrants were obliged to cut their way through the dense forest to their places of destination. In 1812 one of the sons, Alexander, died, leaving four sons and three daughters to assist the father in clearing the farm. These were William, Moses, George, John, Margaret, Ann and Fannie. The three first mentioned were among those patriotic pioneers who went to the defense of Erie when threatened by the British in the War of 1812. In 1816 the father died, and his land was divided between his sons. The Pittsburgh & Erie Turnpike Road was surveyed through the Sheakley farm, and a town was subsequently laid out at that point. On the 4th of July, 1822, one of the ceremonies of the day was that of naming the village, which was called "Georgetown" in honor of the proprietor, George Sheakley. This was subsequently changed to "Sheakleyville," as a more appropriate remembrance of the family. Of the children of John Sheakley, Sr., we have gathered the following information: William married Easter Wallace and reared three sons, Thomas, William and John, and one daughter, Nancy, who married Thomas White, and died near Sheakleyville. Thomas and William reside near Sheakleyville, while John immigrated to Iowa after the war and there died. The parents lived and died near the village which bears their name. Moses married Susan Limber, and reared four sons and three daughters: Thomas, who died near Pittsburgh; James and W. H., residents of Greenville, the former being now United States Commissioner for Alaska, stationed at Fort Wrangle; Moses, a resident of Grayson, Cal.; Mrs. Malinda Christy, of Greenville; Mrs. Mary Leech, of Salem Township, and Susannah, deceased. The father died on the old homestead in 1840, his widow surviving him until 1884, and dying in Greenville. George married Ann Wallace, who bore him one son, John W., deceased. His wife died, and he was again married to Cynthia Culbertson, and reared five sons and two daughters from this union: Joseph, who died in 1863; Alexander, of Ion City, Cal.; Hiram, of Crawford County; George, a farmer near Sheakleyville; Robert, who died in 1887 near that village, and Mrs. Mollie Tiffany, Mrs. James McNamara, and Mrs. Margaret Brown, all residents of Crawford County. The parents died near Sheakleyville, where the father was justice of the peace twenty-five years. John married Susan Sellers, who died without issue, and he then married Susannah Coulter, and reared two children: Josiah, deceased, and Margaret, of Crawford County. He died near Sheakleyville, and his widow in Putnam County, Ohio. Margaret married James Brush, Anne married Hugh Moore, and Fannie became the wife of Adam Hill, and all died in this county. All left large families, and many of their descendants are living in this part of the State.

JOHN W. SHEAKLEY, post-office Sheakleyville, Penn., is a son of John W. and Jane (Moffett) Sheakley, of Sheakleyville, Penn., and was born January 13, 1845. The father of our subject was one of the early merchants of Sheakleyville, and subsequently removed to Cleveland, where he engaged in the mercantile business. He died there in 1859. His wife survived him, and married David Palm, of Venango County, Penn., where she died in 1875. Our subject was the only child, and was reared and educated in Sandy Creek Township. He learned the carpenter trade, and followed it for an occupation until 1873, when he purchased his present farm, and has since been engaged in general farming in connection with his carpenter business. He was married, in March, 1878, to Miss Emma, daughter of Thomas Morrison, of Perry Township, and by this marriage they have three children: Marshall L., Jennie E. and Mertie E. In politics he is a Democrat.

JOHN and ADAM THOMPSON, natives of County Antrim, Ireland, immigrated to America at an early date. They landed in Philadelphia, and while there purchased 200 acres of land, in what is now Salem Township, from a Revolutionary soldier, and settled upon the same. They subsequently purchased, in what is now Sandy Creek, a farm of 200 acres from David Chess, where David Thompson now lives. John subsequently traded his interest in the Salem farm for the Sandy Creek farm, and it then passed to his descendants. John Thompson married Mary A., daughter of John Findley, natives of Ireland, and residents of Crawford County. He died in 1849, and his widow in 1859. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and elder in the Second United Presbyterian Church. Their family were: John, died in 1878; Rosanna (deceased), wife of Elliott Logan; Mary (deceased); Adam, died in 1845; Rhoda (deceased), who married William Parks; Jane, Mrs. Archibald Montgomery, of Deer Creek Township; David L. (deceased); Eliza (deceased); Sally and Ellen, who died in infancy, and Moses F., who was born September 7, 1824, on the old homestead, where he was reared and educated at the common schools. He was brought up on a farm, and remained at home until twenty-four years of age, when he engaged in the lumber business, which business he conducted at various places until 1884, when he located at Sheakleyville and engaged in the hotel business, which he has since followed. At the time of Lee's raid into Pennsylvania Mr. Thompson enlisted in Company H, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia, and served ninety days. He was married in 1850 to Miss Sarah, daughter of Charles Montgomery, of Sandy Creek Township, and by this marriage they have born to them six children: John, deceased; Charles; Elizabeth, Mrs. Frank Parks; Frank, deceased; James; Mary Ann, Mrs. James White. Mr. Thompson is the present constable for his township, and a member of the borough council, and politically is a Republican.

David, the sixth son, was born February 21, 1826, in Sandy Creek Township, and has always lived there and followed farming. He was married to Miss Martha, daughter of John McCracken, of Sandy Creek Township, in 1850; she died in 1868. By this marriage they had seven children: William, deceased, 1886; Annie, Mrs. Calvin Collner, of St. Petersburg, Penn.; John E.; Sadie J., Mrs. James L. Riley; Emma, Mrs. A. K. Steel; Hattie, Mrs. Charles Drives; Rosie, deceased, who married John Hughs. His second wife was Mrs. Maggie E. Carringer, and by this union, which occurred in 1869, they have one son, Warren C., of Findley, Ohio. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Sheakleyville Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically is a Republican.

Maria, the daughter of John, Sr., married James Dunn, of Meadville, Penn. Emeline, deceased, married Thomas Chess, and Cynthia is the widow of Justus Hall, and resides in Greenville, Penn.

Robert F. Thompson was born December 6, 1818, in Deer Creek Township, and was married in 1842 to Miss Jane, daughter of Charles Montgomery, by whom he had six children: Maria, Elizabeth M., Mary A., Martha J., Sarah and Rhoda. Mr. Thompson served as justice of the peace for ten years, and in 1856 was a county commissioner. He is a member of the United Presbyterian Church at Sheakleyville, and has been treasurer of the same for thirty years. In politics is a Republican.

Hadley, and she died with the typhoid fever, which she contracted while attending her brother, Robert J.; Lilly, Allen L., is now an agent for the Lake Shore Railroad at Reno, to where he was transferred from Hadley, where he had been a clerk for our subject for five years, and Elsie. The parents of our subject were Presbyterians, and the father became a Republican at the breaking out of the war. D. R. Vaughn was educated at the district schools till the age of seventeen years, when he went to Kansas for a period. On his return he began studying telegraphy at Cochran, Crawford Co., Penn. He was soon after appointed an agent for the A. G. W. Railroad at Utica, Penn., and served five years. He was then employed by the Lake Shore at Hadley, where he continued for seventeen years, or until his election to the office of county clerk. He has been school director, auditor and treasurer of Deer Creek Township. He was married June 25, 1872, to Hattie J. Hays, daughter of William and Agnes Hays, of Utica, and has Gertrude L., Blanche, Amy, Nellie (deceased), David R., Lucy, Fred W. and Alice. He is a member of Blue Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Jamestown, and Chapter of Greenville. He and wife are Presbyterians. He is a Republican.

NEW VERNON TOWNSHIP.

DANIEL AXTELL, deceased, was born May 4, 1787, and came to Mercer County with his parents, Daniel, born in 1748, died June 7, 1826, and Ruth, born in 1750, died April 8, 1831. The family settled in what is now Sandy Creek Township, where they died. Their children were Daniel, Eliab, Lincoln, Joseph, Polly, Ruth and Elizabeth. Daniel Axtell, Sr., was one of the first elders of the old Fairfield Church. Daniel, Jr., was educated in the country schools, was married to Euphemia Lynn, a native of New Jersey, and settled where Sylvester Axtell lives. He once owned a saw-mill and tannery on that farm. He was strongly identified with the Fairfield Church. He died September 20, 1858, and his wife December 22, 1870. They had twelve children: Ruth, born August 28, 1808, died November 30, 1883; Hannah, born December 4, 1809, died October 21, 1844; Alexander, born July 5, 1811, died November 8, 1847; Rhoda, born March 30, 1813, died March 21, 1874; Thomas, born October 25, 1814, died January 15, 1852; Eliab, born December 22, 1817, died March 1, 1855; George, born November 10, 1820, died February 16, 1859; Louesa, born May 5, 1822, died June 19, 1855; Mary L., born November 2, 1824, died October 16, 1825; Martha, born December 18, 1826, died May 9, 1861; Andrew, born July 12, 1828, and is living; Loretta B., born June 17, 1831, died August 6, 1832. George was educated in this county, and was married to Isabella McCracken October 30, 1849. Isabella was born February 3, 1822, in French Creek Township, to Joshua and Mary (Zahniser) McCracken, the parents of Alexander, Mary, Isabella, infant, David and an infant. He settled at marriage on the old place, where George engaged in a lumber mill. He had four children: Sylvester; Mary, deceased; Eliab, deceased; Daniel, deceased. George was an elder of the United Presbyterian Church at the time of his death. His widow is a member of the same. Sylvester Axtell was born September 19, 1850, on the farm where he now resides. He was married May 27, 1875, to Eliza E. Jenkins, daughter of M. M. Jenkins, and she died September 16, 1882, leaving three children: Maude L., William N., dead, and Matilda B. He was again married, to Martha R. Condit, October 30, 1884, by whom he has had two children: Infant, dead, and Mary. He is school director, has been township auditor and assessor. In politics he is a Republican.

ISAAC BORLAND, deceased, was born February 25, 1834, on the farm where his widow now lives. His father, Houston, was born August 18, 1803, and his mother, Eleanor Holloway, was born July 12, 1804. They were married March 1, 1827, and settled on the farm mentioned above. They owned 150 acres, which has never been out of the possession of the family. Isaac added to it until the farm contained 212 acres. Andrew Borland, the father of Houston, was the first to come to the county. He was of Scotch-Irish extraction, and married Margaret Houston. She was the first white woman who came to live in what is now New Vernon Township. Houston Borland and wife had eight children: John, born March 15, 1828, studied medicine with Dr. J. R. Andrews, the old pioneer physician of New Vernon, and later practiced in Lawrence County, and is now at Franklin, Penn.; Isaac; Martha, born November 22, 1839, and married Daniel McClure; Anna M., born September 24, 1842, and married Andrew Montgomery, who put up the first house in York, York Co., Neb. The following children are dead: Catharine, born April 15, 1830, and died August 27, 1831; Samuel, born July 8, 1832, and died the same day; Margaret, born November 8, 1836, and died December 29, 1839; Isabella, born June 2, 1845, and died April 13, 1848. Isaac H. Borland was educated in the common schools, and farmed the greater part of his life. He made cheese on his farm for many years. He was married December 24, 1857, to Sarah E. Allen, born June 10, 1835, in Mercer County, to George and Ann (Fisher) Allen, natives, the father of Ohio and the mother of what is now Lawrence County. Her parents had eleven children: Margaret R., died the widow of James McCracken; Anna M., died widow of Robert Stewart; William F., Sarah E., Elizabeth L., Martha J., deceased; George; Harvey, was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, where his body was buried among the unknown, and some time after was taken up and a letter and testament were found in his pocket, which Mrs. Borland has in her possession; James R. was also in the war; John C., Emma and Mary C. The father of the above children died in 1863 and his wife in 1850. His second wife, Mrs. Lydia Stewart, whose maiden name was Gibson, is still living, and bore him one child, Samuel W. Isaac Borland died August 6, 1887, with apoplexy, dropping dead, like his father, while at work. He had nine children: Anna B., married George Infield; William A. and George H. are deceased; James H., married Laura Reihard April 19, 1888; John C., married Belle Boylan, January 29, 1886, and he graduated at the Edinboro Normal School in June, 1888; Robert S., died July 11, 1888, was also a student at Edinboro when taken sick; Edgar A., Lydia E. and Samuel W. Mr. Borland was an elder of the United Presbyterian Church at the time of his death, and was one of the most respected and honorable citizens who ever lived in New Vernon Township. He was a Republican, to which organization his sons are attached.

ANDREW BORLAND, deceased, was born April 15, 1812, in New Vernon Township, and is a brother of Houston Borland, whose sketch appears in this work. Andrew was educated in the common schools, was married March 31, 1835, to Elizabeth McCormick, born April 28, 1815, in Mercer County, to Archibald and Jane (Hill) McCormick, and settled on the farm where Adam Borland now lives. It was then in the green wood. He put up a log cabin 20x24 feet, and later built the house now standing on the farm. In 1844-45-46 he worked in a coal bank near Greenville. He died September 13, 1873, and his widow died September 15, 1880. He was in partnership with Dr. J. C. Andrews, whose office Mr. Borland erected near his own residence. He furnished the means to buy medicine, and was to have half of the income of the practice. Andrews was a man of intemperate habits, and Mr. Borland was a continual loser by the partnership. He studied medicine, and became to some extent a practitioner. He was initiated in the Know-nothing party, but soon after renounced it and became a Democrat, which he continued until his death. He has seven children: Jane, born October 5, 1836, married David Gosnell, lives in St. Louis; Archibald, born June 3, 1838, died in Salisbury Prison; James, born March 18, 1843; Cyrus, born June 11, 1850, died September 19, 1851; Evaleen, born March 18, 1853; Ella, born January 25, 1857, died March 21, 1858. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church. Adam C. Borland, post-office New Vernon, the son of the deceased, was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm. He worked for a while at the harness manufacturing business in Tylersburg, Clarion Co., Penn. He was married September 24, 1874, to Sarah A. Carmichael, who was born December 2, 1852, and was one of nine children: Sarah A., Eliza J., Andrew, Mary, Alanson, Victoria, Ellsworth, Charles and Lizzie. The parents of the above children were Hiram and Elizabeth (Fowler) Carmichael, who were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Borland has two children: Roland and Andrew. He and wife are members of the Fairfield Presbyterian Church, and he is a Democrat.

GEORGE BOYD, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born May 28, 1844, in New Vernon Township. His father, Joseph Boyd, was born in County Cork, Ireland, April 22, 1808, to James and Jane (Haggertie) Boyd. Robert Boyd was the first to settle in this county, and was engaged for some time in the hardware business in Mercer. He was a plasterer and a cooper, and, while on his way to this county from Philadelphia, while employed at his trade, he became acquainted with and married Isabella Butler. He was killed by the fall of his brickhouse in West Virginia. The Boyds and their relatives came to Mercer County in the following order: John Phipps and his wife, Dora Boyd, who settled in Cool Spring Township; Edward Boyd and wife, Betsy Jennings, who located in Fairview Township; John Jennings and wife, Mary Boyd, who settled in Cool Spring Township; and in 1821 came James A. Boyd and wife, and his father and mother, James and Elizabeth (Atkins) Boyd; Archibald Boyd and wife, Elizabeth McGivern; Henry Boyd, and the children of James A.: Thomas, Henry, William, Archibald, Joseph, James, Robert, Elizabeth, Mary and Dora. Isaac Waugh married Frances Boyd, a sister of James A., and came to this county, and later moved to Iowa. Joseph Boyd, a brother of James A., emigrated here from Ireland, and subsequently went back to his native country for a son whom he had left, and was never heard of afterward. His wife, son and daughter moved to Michigan. Joseph Boyd was married to Rhoda Axtell, by whom he had Ezra, Caroline, George, Euphrasy J. (wife of Robert Dunlap), William H. and Milton E. Joseph Boyd was employed on the canal from Franklin to Meadville for three years, and also on a canal near Cleveland. He bought land in New Vernon Township, where he lived for over fifty years. He helped to build the Mercer court-house. His wife, after a lingering illness of twelve years, was relieved of her sufferings by death in 1874. She was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Boyd united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1825, and for twenty years was blind in one eye and is now totally blind. He is a man of exceptionally good memory, pure character and an earnest Christian. He is a stanch Republican, and must be taken to every election. George Boyd was educated in the common schools, and has always farmed and bought and sold stock. He was married December 23, 1875, to Martha J. Elliott, born November 25, 1858, in Pittsburgh, to John and Mary (Smith) Elliott, who came to this county in 1864, and settled in New Vernon Township. Her parents have had the following children: William H., book-keeper in Pittsburgh; John F., engaged in cutting glass in the same city; Lizzie A., married William Young, superintendent of the S. S. Marvin cracker factory, Pittsburgh; Maggie, married Robert D. Kerr; Albert J., a glazer of glass in Allegheny City; Thomas J., Josephine B. and Mary M., who are at home. Her parents are members of the United Presbyterian Church at Sandy Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd have had three children: Fred (dead), Mabel E. and Joseph Elliott. Mr. Boyd has been assessor, and is a Republican. Further mention is made of the family in the general history.

BARBER BOYD, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born April 19, 1833, in Cool Spring Township. His father, Thomas Boyd, was born September 15, 1799, in County Cork, Ireland, son of James, whose father was also called James. The family came to America in 1821 and settled in Cool Spring Township. James, the grandfather of our subject, bought, in 1831, a farm of 200 acres of Lewis Clopper and W. Robinson, and here he lived for many years, and finally died August 15, 1860, on the farm where his son, Thomas, lived, in New Vernon Township. He had ten children: Betsey, Dora, Mary, Henry, Robert, James, Joseph, William, Archie and Thomas. Thomas, the father of our subject, married in Ireland, settled in New Vernon Township in 1844, and died April 14, 1880, his wife preceding August 3, 1871. They had nine children: Catharine, born August 5, 1821, married John Barber, and died May 22, 1842; James, born May 5, 1823, and died October 27, 1837; Robert, born October 18, 1825, and died August 6, 1826; Jane, born July 4, 1827, died February 27, 1855; Mary, born January 19, 1831, married to John Bachelor June 30, 1857, died March 9, 1886; Marmaduke, born January 27, 1836, died August 24, 1882; John, born June 21, 1838; Caroline E., born November 29, 1840, married to Henry Flickner October 10, 1872, died April 30, 1885; John F., married, May 19, 1870, Margaret McGee. The parents were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and has always been a farmer. He was married April 1, 1862, to Isabella Burrows, born February 15, 1837, in Mahoning County, Ohio. Her parents, George and Mary Burrows, had the following children: Elizabeth, William, Sarah, Isabella, James, Margaret, Mary, Ellen, George and John. Her parents settled in New Vernon Township in 1843, and there the father died February 2, 1883, and the mother lives with her son, John. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd have had eight children: Guy, born January 24, 1863; Sylvester, born July 1, 1864; Findlay J., born September 30, 1865; Nancy J., born July 6, 1867; Mary E., born October 4, 1869; Walter T., born February 27, 1873; Lina, born August 4, 1877; Newton G., born November 7, 1886. Mr. Boyd has 115 acres of good land, is a member of the K. L. of H., with his wife and six of his children belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church of New Vernon, has always taken a deep interest in church matters, and is a Democrat.

JULIUS BOYD, farmer and justice of the peace, post-office Clark's Mills, was born April 1, 1837, in New Vernon Township. His parents, Henry and Ann (Phipps) Boyd, were natives of Ireland, and came to this county about 1821. They settled in Cool Spring Township. They were married in this county and finally settled on a farm adjoining the one our subject now resides on, and which is owned by some of the heirs. Here he died April 2, 1866, and his widow died December, 1872; they were the parents of the following children: James C.; Charles, was strangled to death with a grain of corn; Jane J., married Calvin Clark; Melissa, married William James; Wesley, deceased; Julius; P. J., ex Representative Fairview Township; Helen; R. E., deceased; John F. The parents were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was once class-leader. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married, in 1860, to Sarah J. Perrine, daughter of Armon and Eliza Perrine, by whom he has seven children: Emma C. and an infant are deceased; Ettie A., Curtin C., Nathan J., Lula A. and Myrta T. Mr. Boyd settled on his present farm of 150 acres in 1861, bought in pieces at various times, and the most of which he has improved, and has erected thereon fine buildings. He enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served one year. He is engaged in general farming and stock dealing. He has served as school director, assessor and other small offices where pay is not considered. In 1888 he was elected a justice of the peace. He is a member of the K. of H. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he is trustee, class-leader and steward. He was one of the Republican central committee in 1887.

RICHARD FORBES, farmer, post-office Sandy Lake, was born March 1, 1821, in County Cork, Ireland, to George and Sarah (Haggertie) Forbes, natives of the same county, and who immigrated to this county in 1821. They settled first in what is Wilmington Township, and later in Hickory, about three miles from Sharon, where they lived until about 1827, when they moved to the farm where our subject now lives. Here the father bought 400 acres, and here he died in 1847. His widow died September 9, 1873, and had blessed her husband with eight children: Ellen, married John McBride; Thomas; Mary, married John Slater; George; Alice, married Thomas Sweesy; Elizabeth, married William Sweesy; Richard; Jane, married John Burrows; all are dead but Elizabeth and Richard. The parents were members of the Boyd Church, and are buried in the Presbyterian church-yard at Sandy Lake. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and has always been a tiller of the soil. He was married to Hannah Goswell, who died, leaving no issue. He was again married to Maranda Lusher, born December 17, 1842, daughter of Jonathan and Eliza (Smith) Lusher, natives of this State. Her father was an early settler of Venango County. He had twelve children: Jacob, Sarah, John, Martha, Harry, Catharine, Maranda, Lizzie, Peter, Almira, Miles and David. Mr. and Mrs. Forbes have two children: Willie and Harry. When the family settled on this farm it was all in the woods, except a small patch where stood a cabin, on the site of which is an old mill. Wild animals were plenty, and our subject has killed many rattlesnakes. He is the possessor of 280 acres of the best of land, and has recently erected a fine brick building at a cost of over $3,000. He has always been a staunch Democrat, and read the Western Press while William S. Garvin was editor of that paper. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is one of the enterprising farmers of the township.

GEORGE HAGGERTIE, deceased, was born June 22, 1792, in County Cork, Ireland. He came to this American continent in 1827. He settled for about two years in Canada, where he was engaged on canals. He married Mary Shannon, of the same county. In 1829 they came to this county, where he was, for awhile, engaged in working on the canal. He had only $1.50 when he arrived in Mercer County. He bought land in New Vernon Township in 1835, where he farmed until April 22, 1866, when he died. His widow died May 24, 1879. They had the following children: Mary, married Thomas Norris; Jane, is a maiden lady, and lives on the old homestead; Ann, died in Canada; James, died in Ireland; Martha, married John Stout and died in Canada; Elizabeth, married John Haggertie, and had nine children: George, James, Mary, Adam, Marmeduke, Thomas, Anna M., Jane and John; Sarah, married E. C. Clark; John, deceased; William, deceased; Amy A., deceased; Adam, deceased, and George. The parents were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The parents of our subject were possessed of a strong constitution, and endured the hardships that go to make up the life of the early settlers. They were buried at the Little Boyd grave-yard, in New Vernon Township. George Haggertie, who lives on the old place, was born November 12, 1840, and was educated in the district schools in his neighborhood. He was married September 27, 1869, to Maria McGreggor, born July 24, 1840, in Trumbull County, Ohio.

JOSEPH HILL, farmer, post-office Clark's Mills, was born October 26, 1804, in Ontario County, N. Y. His parents were Joseph and Elizabeth (Wait) Hill. He was educated in the country schools and an academy. He learned the art of making stone-ware, which he followed for five years. He lived the greater part of his younger days with his grandfather Wait. He was married in 1825 to Nancy Mitchell, who died in 1854, the mother of nine children: Lovica, married Peter Ross; Jefferson, Cordelia, Elizabeth, married Alexander Carpenter; Christina, Williard, Joseph, who was in the war; Polina and Warren, also in the war. He was again married, to Elizabeth Dickson, born July 9, 1820, daughter of Samuel and Margaret (Caldwell) Dickson. Her parents had six children: Rebecca, Nancy, Elizabeth, Samuel, James and Mary. Mr. Hill came to this county in 1831, and settled where he now lives in a log cabin. He boarded while he was building a cabin, 18x26 feet and two stories. The first night he stayed in Mercer County he had 12½ cents. He made pine shingles and sold a part of them to get glass and nails. He set to work in earnest, and is to-day in excellent circumstances. By his last wife he has two children: H. C. and Florilla. He was baptized into the Christian Church in the State of New York, and when he came to this county united with the Methodist Church. He was a Whig during the existence of that party, and then joined the Republicans. He is one of the reputable citizens of New Vernon Township. NOTE.—Since the above sketch was written Mr. Joseph Hill died, July 31, 1888, aged eighty-three years, nine months and five days.

JOSEPH INFELD, farmer, post-office New Vernon, was born July 23, 1828, in Maryland, to Daniel and Sarah (Winger) Infield. A reference is made to the family in Jackson Township. Joseph Infield was educated in the common schools at Jackson Centre. Three of his early teachers were Henry Hosack, a Mr. Johnson and Elizabeth Supple. He has worked some at stone masonry, but has devoted the greater part of his active life to farming. He purchased his first piece of land in 1856, in Jackson Township, where is now the Hall Shaft. Sixteen years later he sold the farm for coal purposes. March 12, 1873, he settled on his present farm, known as the Ira Condit farm, in New Vernon Township. He was married May 2, 1854, to Mary McGee, daughter of George and Sarah (Cross) McGee. Her father died January 6, 1887, and his children were Mary, John, Eliza J., Emmeline, William, Margaret, George, Melinda and Henrietta. Mr. Infield has had seven children: George W., Sarah, Silvia, Ida M., John, Della and Henry B. Mr. and Mrs. Infield are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Sandy Lake. He is a Democrat, one of the representative citizens of New Vernon Township, and a man of large means, of which he is the artificer. Mrs. Infield's father was born January 12, 1806, in Mifflin County, Penn., and who came to Mercer County in 1812. He had, by hard labor, careful management and frugal dealing, accumulated a large fortune. He died January 6, 1881. He was one of the most respected citizens who lived in Fairview Township, and other mention is made of him in this work.

HUGH LACKEY, farmer, post-office Clark's Mills, was born July 9, 1826, on the farm where he now lives. His parents, Henry and Eunice (Hazen) Lackey, were natives of Crawford County, Penn., and New Jersey, respectively. The ancestor of the Lackeys of this county emigrated from Ireland over 130 years ago, and settled near the site of Pittsburgh. The first of the family to come to Mercer County was Henry Lackey, who settled on the farm spoken of above, and there died in 1878. His wife died in 1855, the mother of Agnes, married David Wolf; Martha, married Joseph Hazen; Margaret H., married S. Hood; Hugh and Joseph. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church, and he was a Republican. Hugh Lackey was educated in the country schools, and in the academy of Greenville, where he studied some of the higher branches. He taught a number of terms of school, perhaps twenty in all. He was married July 1, 1852, to Sallie Ann Snyder, daughter of Jesse and Catharine (Fenstermesher) Snyder, the parents of ten children: Sallie A., Lucinda, Lydia, Mary E., Elmira, Nancy, Caroline, Susannah, Catharine and Joseph. Her parents were members of the German Reformed Church. Mr. Lackey settled, at his marriage, on the old homestead, where he has since remained. He has eleven children: Joseph C., married Maggie Orr;

Celinda; John W., a professor, married Ella Abrams; William I., a professor; Frank, married Maggie Canon; Angelo L., a professor; Fannie E., a student; Mary J., a student, and David H. Two, Jesse and Bert, died when infants. Mr. Lackey served as poor director, to which position he was elected by the Republican party. He was for ten years a justice of the peace, has been township assessor, auditor and school director. He suffers from the loss of one eye, which was put out by a stick striking him while chopping. He was once connected with the Grange lodge. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he has been an elder for twenty-five years. He has been a superintendent of the Sunday-school of their neighborhood, which was organized before any church was near.

JOHNSON McCARTNEY, farmer, post-office Clark's Mills, was born June 11, 1823, in the County Fermanagh, Ireland, son of John and Jane McCartney. In 1839 the family, consisting of father, mother and children, Esther, Rebecca and Johnson, immigrated to America and settled in Coitsville, Ohio, where they engaged in farming. In 1842 they left Ohio and settled in the woods in what is now New Vernon Township, this county, on land which they bought in 1843. Here they erected a log cabin in which they lived for many years. The father died on this farm, also the mother and Rebecca, all of whom were buried in Perry Chapel grave-yard. Our subject was educated in the common schools in the pioneer cabins, and learned the trade of a shoemaker, which occupation he followed during the winters, in connection with his farming, for many years. He learned his trade in Youngstown, Ohio, and was married April 13, 1854, to Rachel Feather, a sister of Dr. Ira C. Feather, late of Sandy Lake. This union has given him nine children: Cynthia, deceased; Bleakley, a lumber dealer in Nebraska; Alva, a carpenter in Nebraska; James H., a postmaster at Ogalalla, Neb.; Stephen, deceased; John; Findley, is a student at the Edinboro Normal, and a teacher; P. L., Louise. Mr. McCartney is the owner of a fine farm of eighty-eight acres, which is the result of his energy, economy and frugal dealings. He is a Republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while his estimable wife belongs to the Presbyterian Church of Sandy Lake. The family is one of the best known and most respected in the community in which they reside.

J. L. McCORMICK, farmer, post-office New Vernon, was born October 15 1836, in New Vernon Township. His father, William H., was a native of this State, and of Scotch-Irish extraction. The mother, Rachel Hogue, was born in Ireland, and came with her parents to Wolfe Creek Township when a child. She was the daughter of John Hogue, whose children were named as follows: Mary, Margaret, Rachel, Jane, William, Alexander, Nancy, James and Eliza. John Hogue and wife died in Jackson Township, and are buried in the old Springfield grave-yard. William H. McCormick, was married in what is now Jackson Township. He was a carpenter, and a number of barns are yet standing which he built. He was born in 1810 and died in 1878. His wife died in 1867. Their children were: Alexander, a carpenter in California; John L.; Euphemia Jane, married William McClain; W. A., an attorney of Mercer; Thomas H., is in the oil business in Clarion County; Rachel Emily, married A. A. McClain; James Harvey, Edward Small and Eliza. The last three died young. William H. afterward married Mary Jane Cambell, of Jackson Township. He was a county commissioner one term. He began poor, and at the time of his death he was the owner of some valuable land and other property. He and his wife were members of the old Rocky Spring United Presbyterian Church, of which he was an elder at the time of his death. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up on a farm. He was married, April 13, 1858, to Susan M. Uber, daughter of John H. Uber, and has by her four children: Charles G. and infant are dead; Ella M., married Robert Nelson, now living in Mercer; Maggie B., married J. D. Mc Caughtery; Thomas F. Our subject was for awhile engaged in the saw-mill business with his father. He is now the owner of the old homestead. He was drafted, and served nine months in the war. Three of his brothers served in the defense of their country. He has been township assessor, school director, and took the census of the township in 1880, also of Mill Creek Township and the borough of New Lebanon. He is a member of the K. and L. of H., the G. A. R., and he and wife belong to the United Presbyterian Church of Sheakleyville. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and gladly devotes a part of his time to the interest of that party at all elections. Alexander McCormick, the grandfather of our subject, settled on the farm now owned by Charles Schmeltzer in 1820, where he died. His children were William H., James, Rosannah, Mary, Adam H., Alexander, Jane and John R. He was a cooper by trade; carried on the business in connection with his farm. He married Euphrenia Hill, whose father was a soldier in the War of 1812. He died about 1853, in the sixty-ninth year of his age, and with his wife belonged to the Seceder Church.

W. J. McCracken, farmer, post-office New Vernon, was born November 25, 1862, in Sandy Creek Township, to A. P. and Mary (Houston) McCracken, who live in Deer Creek Township. He was educated in the public schools, also at Sheakleyville, New Lebanon and Grove City. He was married, February 15, 1883, to Laura J. Canon, daughter of Alfred and Euphania (McClure) Canon, the former of whom is dead. Our subject settled at marriage on his father's farm, and later located on the farm in New Vernon Township now owned by Thomas Carnahan, of York County, Neb. He is a member of the K. of H. at Sheakleyville, and the K. and L. of H. at New Vernon. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he is a Republican, and one of the enterprising young business men of the township.

J. N. McCutcheon, merchant, post-office New Vernon, was born April 29, 1858, in New Vernon, to James and Mary (Montgomery) McCutcheon. The father was born in 1809, in County Tyrone, Ireland, to Porter and Jennie (Johnson) McCutcheon, natives of the same country. The former died in this county October 26, 1869, and his wife about 1861. Their children were Mary, John, Polly, James, John, Robert, Joseph, Andrew, Margaret, George, Thomas and David. James McCutcheon came to this county in 1840, after having followed weaving in Philadelphia awhile. He was married in 1842 to Mary Montgomery, born October 22, 1818, daughter of Capt. James and Sarah (Fulton) Montgomery, natives of Westmoreland County. James Montgomery was a captain in the War of 1812, and did service at Erie. He died in 1860, and his wife November 22, 1859, the mother of Isabella, John, Martha, Sarah, James, Margaret, Archie, Margaret (2), Mary and Eliza J. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church. James McCutcheon and wife had nine children: William (served in the war four years, was in prison fourteen months, and died from the effects of burns received at a fire at North Clarendon, Penn., July 4, 1887, leaving a wife and six children), James (died at Annapolis while in the service), Sarah (died in Philadelphia October 19, 1869), Mary J. (married Jefferson Stright), Almira (married William Breckman), Ellis P., Archibald, John N. and Joseph E. Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and he is a staunch Republican and a protectionist. He has been blind for two years. John N. McCuteon entered his present business September 20, 1887, and carries a general stock of goods. He was married to Maggie, daughter of John and Rachel (Kirk) Gallagher, by whom he has two children: James E. and John C. He has served as township collector and auditor, is a member of the K. and L. of H., and is a Republican. May 1, 1888, the post-office was placed in his store-room, and his brother-in-law, A. J. Gallagher, appointed postmaster. Mr. McCutcheon is one of the progressive young business men of the township.

DAVID McELWAIN, merchant, New Vernon, was born October 24, 1845, in what is New Vernon Township. His father, John, was a native of Mill Creek Township, where his wife, Mary McCracken, was also born. John died January 29, 1883, and his widow survives in New Lebanon. They had eleven children: Cyrus, David, Alexander, Harvey, Watson, Mary, Emma, Adam, William, Anna B. and Melinda. Emma married William Findley, and Anna married Charles Hannah; Mary is single, and Melinda married George Miller. The father entered the mercantile business in New Vernon about 1843, and continued till 1880. He also owned a store at New Lebanon. He and wife were members of the Fairfield Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools. He entered his present mercantile business in 1870, and carried a stock of about $3,000. He was postmaster at New Vernon from 1876 to 1888. He married, July 8, 1869, Elizabeth Ross, by whom he has two children: Maude and John. He is a member of the K. and L. of H., and his wife is a member of the Fairfield Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican, and an enterprising man.

JAMES S. MOORE, farmer, post-office New Vernon, was born July 19, 1843, son of William and Sarah A. (Clark) Moore. William Moore was born July 29, 1800, in Washington County, son of John and Elizabeth (Arbuckle) Moore. William Moore came to Mercer County about 1804, and settled near Sharon. He married Sarah Clark, a native of Albany, N. Y., who came to Ohio with her parents, W. A. Clark and wife. The parents of our subject settled in different parts of the county before they died in Fairview Township. Their children were ten in number: Wesley, Harriet, W. A., John, Mary, Rufina, W. R., James S., Joseph and Sarah. James S. Moore was educated in the common schools and one term at the Mercer union schools. He learned the carpenter's trade with his father, and has followed that the greater part of his life. He was married September 4, 1866, to Zilpha D. Hill, daughter of John and Isabella Hill, of this county. Her parents are dead and had ten children: J. Morton, Nathan, Nancy, Sarah, Dorcas, Hannah, Zilphia, Margaret, James and an infant. Mr. Moore settled at marriage in Fairview Township, and in 1874 he moved to Sandy Lake Township, and lived on the farm where W. A. Moore resides until 1880, when he bought land and located in New Vernon Township. He erected buildings on his pleasant farm, which burned and left him to replace them with others. He was constable and collector of the township for four years, and has served in several of the small offices where pay is not considered. He cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has always been a staunch Republican. He enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was in twenty-two battles and skirmishes. He suffers deafness in one ear because of the service in the war. He has had six children: J. R., who was married September 12, 1888, to Miss Mamie McElwain, grand-daughter of John McElwain; Mary M., Emma M., Sarah A., Hattie B. and Nellie B. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church at Fairfield, of which he is deacon, and has been superintendent of the Sabbath-schools of the same. His father is thought to have cast the first Abolition vote in Mill Creek Township, and his house was a station on the underground railroad.

J. K. Ross, farmer, post-office New Vernon, was born June 17, 1838, in Deer Creek Township, to Stephen and Hannah (Seisley) Ross. The father was born in what is now Deer Creek Township, to Aaron and Sarah (Harris) Ross. of Scotch-Irish extraction. Aaron and his wife are buried in the grave-yard at Fairfield, and their children were, Stephen, John, Jacob, Harvey, Joseph, Jared, Alva, Aaron, Elizabeth, Abigail, Hannah, Mary and Sarah. John, married Louisa Wetmore, and had Almera and John S.; Jacob married Anna Seisley, and had Benjamin, Elizabeth, Sabina, Samuel, Monroe, Edwin, Sarah and John; Harvey married Caroline Custard, and had James, Sarah, Albert, Richard, Wilson, Henry, Stephen and Emily; Joseph married Sophia Ery; Jared married Martha Custard, and has Harris, Sarah, William, Stephen, Mary, Martha, Nancy, Taylor, Eva and Almera; Aaron married Martha Tiffeny, and had Henry, Mitchell, Loretta, Harriet, Elda, Charles, James, Bert and A. Stephen Ross was educated in the country schools of this county, and was married to Hannah Seisley, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Rhodes) Seisley, natives of this State, and of German extraction. By her he had Jacob, Hannah, Anna, Benjamin, John and Mary. He was in the War of 1812. Stephen died April 19, 1871, and his widow is living. His children are Samuel, Elizabeth, Sarah, John, Louisa, Stephen and Maria. He was a stanch Democrat. J. K. Ross was married July 3, 1862, to Julia A. Price, born March 3, 1844, in Worth Township. Her father's history appears in another part of this work. In 1866 Mr. Ross settled where he now resides, in New Vernon Township. He has had seven children by his marriage: Ella, married J. C. Thompson; Anna, married William Custard; Frank T., Harry, Grace, Mary and Maude. Mr. Ross has been constable and collector of the township, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Mount Hope, of which he has been a class-leader and trustee. He is a Democrat.

JOHN SAUERS, farmer, post-office Clark's Mills, was born July 12, 1852, in Otter Creek Township, this county, to Michael, born in 1807, and Josephine (Hinkle) Sauers, born in 1810, natives of Germany, where they were married and came to Greenville about the year 1848. After a short residence at that place they removed to Otter Creek Township, and in 1860 bought seventy-one acres where they now live, in New Vernon Township. The father was a cabinet-maker in the old country, and followed carpentering some in this country. He began here with but little means, and by careful management and hard labor has accumulated a nice little home upon which to live the rest of his life. He has been a sufferer with the rheumatism since 1860. They have had five children: Kate, married D. C. Reed; Christina, married Hiram Feather; Nellie, married Henry Meibert, deceased; John, and Mary A., married Joseph Stewart. The father is a believer in the Catholic religion and his wife is a Lutheran. John, our subject, took charge of his father's farm when a mere boy. He was educated in the common schools and at Hadley. He was married September 11, 1873, to Maggie J. Carnahan, daughter of John L. Carnahan, and by her he has five children: Minnie M., dead; Nellie E., dead; Tena B., William C. and Josie R. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Clark's Mills, of which he is a steward. He spent four years in the oil regions of Clarion and Forest Counties, and owns valuable land in the former, on which there are some good oil wells. He is one of the progressive young Democrats of Mercer County, is strictly honest, a gentleman who has the esteem of all who know him, and was a candidate for poor director on the Democratic ticket in 1888.

REV. ISAAC SCOFIELD, retired Methodist minister, post-office New Vernon, was born September 12, 1812, in Albany County, N. Y., to Daniel and Olive (Brown) Scofield, natives of the same county. The parents had twelve children. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and during his early days he was employed on a farm. He was licensed to preach at the age of twenty-two, and began preaching at Chagrin Falls, Ohio. His regular appointments were at Edinboro, Portage Co., Ohio; Centerville Circuit, Evansburg, Crawford Co., Penn.; Shippensville Circuit, Venango and Clarion Counties; Red Bank Circuit; Cambridge Circuit, Crawford County; Sheridan Circuit, Chautauqua County, N. By this union they have four children: Fred, Basil, Ralph and Frank. He has been school director and supervisor of the township, and is trustee and superintendent of the Sunday-school in the Hadley Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically he is a Republican.

D. C. HADLEY, farmer and stock dealer, Hadley, Penn., is a son of David and Jane (Robinson) Hadley. David Hadley, the father of our subject, was born in Sussex County, N. J., in 1806. In 1817 his father, John Hadley, moved to Columbiana County, Ohio. About 1843 David came to Mercer County and purchased a tract of land in what is now Perry Township. He followed his trade of shoemaking, and he and his family engaged in clearing up and settling the land, erecting saw-mills, etc. He was prominently identified with the building of the village of Hadley, which is named after him, and in getting the railroad station located there, donating the land for that purpose. He also built several miles of the road, and was one of the first stockholders. He held the office of justice of the peace for many years. He was one of the organizers of the Hadley Presbyterian Church, and was ruling elder for many years. Mr. Hadley was thrice married. His first wife, Jane Robinson, died July 15, 1874. Their family consisted of seven children: William R., of Hadley, being the eldest; John D. and Robinson T., of Sharpsville; Robert B., David C., Sophia A. (wife of Ezra Boyd, of Perry Township), Jane (wife of S. H. Lyons, of Ohio). His second wife, Hannah Kelso, died April 15, 1876. David Hadley died December 2, 1884, and his third wife is still living at Grand Island, Neb. Our subject was born in Hubbard Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, March 6, 1843. He was reared in Perry Township, this county, and educated in the township schools. He was bred a farmer, which he has always followed, and in 1873 he engaged in dealing in stock, which he has since continued. In 1865 he married Miss Evaline, daughter of Thomas and Jane Morrison, of Perry Township. By this union they have had two children, one of whom, Edwin T., was killed by accident at the age of fifteen years, and Warren M. lives at home. They also have one daughter by adoption, Josie E. Smock. Mr. Hadley occupied his present farm since 1873. He and family are members of the Presbyterian Church, and politically he is a Democrat, as was also his father.

GEORGE W. HOFFACKER, farmer, post-office Hadley, is a son of George and Mary (Werner) Hoffacker, of York County, Penn., who settled in Mahoning County, Ohio, and in 1853 they came to Mercer County and located on a farm in what is now Perry Township. The father of our subject was a member of the Lutheran and German Reformed Church, and of the Democratic party; also was in the War of 1812, and drew a pension. His wife, Mary, died in Ohio, and six children were born to them, three of whom are still living: Adam and Jacob, of Perry Township, and our subject, George W. His second wife was Mary Oshall. She died in 1886. Four of their children are still living: Juliana, Mrs. Thomas Daniels, of Ohio; Harriet, Mrs. Jesse Ruhlman; Susan, Mrs. S. J. Cleeland, and Lucy, lives with Mrs. Ruhlman. The father died in 1842. Our subject was born in Mahoning County, Ohio, May 28, 1836, and was educated at the public schools. He was drafted in the late Rebellion, and sent a substitute. In 1864 he married Miss Sophia Lippy, of Mahoning County, Ohio. Two children have been born to them: Sylvanus W. and Martha A. Mr. Hoffacker has been school director and assessor of Perry Township. He and family are members of the German Reformed Church of Otter Creek Township, and politically he is a Democrat. He is engaged in general farming and raising fancy horses, cattle and sheep.

THOMAS M. JACKSON, M. D., is a son of Joseph and Jane (Mathews) Jackson. His father was born in that portion of Mercer County which is now Lawrence County, in 1808. His parents were William, brother of Philip Jackson (the praying elder), and Margaret (Little) Jackson, natives of Washington County, Penn., who purchased a tract of land, near where West Middlesex now stands, in 1812. Here the father of our subject was reared and learned the blacksmith trade, which he followed for a number of years. In 1844 he purchased a farm in what is now Mill Creek Township, where he lived until his death, in 1877. He was for many years an elder in the Utica Presbyterian Church. His wife died in 1881. She was the daughter of Thomas Mathews, a personal friend and follower of Robert Emmet, and an officer in the Irish rebellion of 1798. The English Government having offered a reward for his head after the capture of Emmet, he was compelled to flee from Ireland, and found a home in the United States. He finally located in Trumbull County, Ohio, where he died. Their family consisted of nine children: Two died when young; Margaret A., died in 1884; Eliza J., died in 1881; John C., firm of Jackson, Walker & Co., which opened the Bradford oil field, putting down the first well in August, 1875; he afterward moved to Kansas, and died in Hadley, this county, in 1885. The living are: Homer, the eldest, who was born in Mahoning County, Ohio, December 29, 1836. He received his education at the schools of Utica, New Lebanon and Edinboro State Normal School. For a few years he engaged in teaching school, and operated in oil, and afterward engaged in running flat-boats from Green River, Ky., to New Orleans. He studied medicine, and graduated from the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery in 1871, and practiced his profession for four years at Clintonville; he then graduated from the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and returned to Clintonville. He also practiced in Missouri. In 1885 he came to Hadley, and has since been practicing with Dr. T. M., our subject. He is a member of the Mercer County Medical Society, of the Lodge of Craft No. 333, F. & A. M., of New Castle, Penn. In 1876 he married Miss Elizabeth A., daughter of Judge Robert Cross, of Venango County. By this union they have five children: Justina P., Albert B., Levis E., Joseph M. and Charles E. His wife is a member of the Hadley Presbyterian Church; Sarah M., Mrs. W. H. Hanna, of Cooperstown, Penn.; Thomas M., our subject, and William, on the homestead in Mill Creek Township. Our subject was born in Mill Creek Township March 19, 1846. He was educated at the township schools and at New Lebanon Academy. He engaged in teaching for a few years, and in 1870 began the study of medicine under Dr. T. M. Cooley, who was located at Utica, Penn. In 1874 he graduated from the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery, and practiced in Clarion County, Penn., for six months. In 1875 he came to Hadley, the first physician to locate here, and he and his brother, Homer, are engaged in an extensive practice. He is a member of the county and State medical societies, a member of the Eureka Lodge No. 290, F. & A. M., of Greenville. For the past ten years he has been examining physician for Madison Lodge A. O. U. W., of Clark's Mills, and an honorary member of the Hadley E. A. U. December 9, 1875, he married Miss Mary J., daughter of William Sheakley, of Perry Township. By this union they have four children: Thomas C., Jennie P., Joseph W. and Mary E. He has held the office of school director of Perry Township, and is an elder in the Hadley Presbyterian Church. In religion they are thorough Presbyterians, and in politics Democratic.

SAMUEL C. LONG, farmer, post-office Hadley, is a son of David P. and Jane M. (Coulter) Long. Samuel Long, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and first settled in Mercer County about 1805-06. In a few years he returned to Westmoreland County, learned the blacksmith trade, and returned to this county and located in what is now Hempfield Township, where he followed farming and blacksmithing until his death in 1862. He was a member of the Seceder Church, and a soldier in the War of 1812. He afterward voted the Republican ticket. The father of our subject was his oldest son, and was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., in 1806. He located in Hempfield Township in 1837, and purchased the farm now owned by our subject, where he died October 25, 1885, and his wife February, 1886. He was once elected justice of the peace of Perry Township, but refused to serve. He was an elder in the Sheakleyville United Presbyterian Church for many years, and voted the Republican ticket. His family consisted of J. C., who was a member of Company G, One Hundred and Forty fifth Regiment, and died at Washington, D. C., July 2, 1864, from the effect of wounds, and our subject, who was born in Hempfield Township April 15, 1832. He attended the schools of that period, and has since followed farming. In 1854 he married Mary Jane, daughter of Alexander McCleary, of Perry Township. They have had born to them the following children: Miles O., who died young; Annie M., wife of A. D. Beggs, of Sharon, and have two children, Lillie M. and Edith M.; Rachel A., wife of J. A. Roberts, of Perry Township, and have two children, Myrtle B. and Samuel L.; David A., farmer of Perry Township, married Mary N., daughter of Henry Wizner, of Perry Township. Mr. Long was reared in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church, which he attends, and votes the Republican ticket.

JOHN McCLOURE, farmer, post-office Clark's Mills, is a son of Andrew and Mary (Hazen) McClure. Robert McClure, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, who came to Mercer County about 1797, and located on a tract of land in what is now Lake Township, where he lived until his death. The father of our subject was born in Ireland in 1790. He was reared on the farm in Lake Township, and served in the War of 1812. After his marriage he located on the farm now owned by our subject. He was a member of the Democratic party, and died in 1833, and his widow in 1876. Their family consisted of seven children: Eliza, Mrs. Dr. McMeans, of Iowa; John, Martha, a maiden lady; Mary, Jane, Matilda and Ezra, deceased. Our subject was born on the farm he now owns November 1, 1817. He attended the log schools of that period, and has always resided on the homestead. In 1847 he married Mary Jane, daughter of Samuel Kerr, of Salem Township. She died December 12, 1884, leaving seven children: Eliza, Mrs. Hugh C. Wallace, living with our subject; Malinda, wife of William McGee, of New Vernon; she died December 11, 1887, leaving four children: Claud, Maud, Frank E. and Jennie; Samuel A., of Sandy Lake Township; Joseph, of Dakota; Sarah, Richard P., of Perry Township, and Frank I. Mr. McClure served as county commissioner for one term, and has been school director, supervisor, etc., of Perry Township, and justice of the peace for twenty years. He is an elder in the Hadley Presbyterian Church, and votes the Republican ticket.

WILLIAM J. MCCLURE, farmer and carpenter, post-office Clark's Mills, is a son of Robert and Hannah (Axtell) McClure. Robert McClure, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Ireland, who came to America about 1796, and located on a tract of land in what is now Lake Township. His family consisted of John, Andrew, Richard, James, Robert, Nancy, all of whom are dead. The father of our subject was born in Lake Township April 3, 1804. He always remained on the homestead, purchasing more land and adding to it. He died in 1876, and his wife died in 1844. They had born to them: Sarah, deceased; Euphemia, wife of Alfred Canon, of Lake Township; Daniel, of Nebraska; William J., George, of Lake Township; Mary, wife of George Ross, of Lake Township. Our subject was born in Lake Township March 11, 1838. At the age of sixteen years he learned the carpenter trade, and has since followed that in connection with farming, purchasing his present farm in 1880. In 1861 he married Miss Lovina Bissle, of Perry Township. They have six sons: Charles E.; George E., married Miss Dora Scribbens, of Sandy Creek Township, and has one child, Carl; Frank E., James L., William Loyd and John R. Mr. McClure served nine months in Company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He is a member of Elisha Thompson Post, G. A. R., of Sheakleyville, of the K. & L. of H., No. 1640. Politically he is a Republican.

DAVID MORNEWECK, farmer, post-office Hadley, was born March 31, 1861, in Perry Township, to Michael and Catharine (Lippy) Morneweck, natives, the father of Germany, and the mother of Mahoning County, Ohio. They were married in Ohio, and settled soon afterward in Mercer County. The father followed farming and threshing, having operated a machine for over thirty years. The parents have had ten children: Solomon, Ephraim, Sarah, Susannah, Samuel, infant, deceased; David, Harriet, George W. and Obediah. The parents are members of the Lutheran Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and learned the painter's trade, and follows that business, in connection with farming. He also teaches vocal music during the winter, and on Saturday nights during the summer. He was married June 9, 1881, to Sarah E. Snyder, daughter of Charles Snyder, whose sketch appears elsewhere. By her he has had two children: Charlotte, deceased, and Pearl V. He is serving as township auditor, and with his wife belongs to the German Reformed Church. He has been deacon of the same, and is now superintendent of the Sunday-schools of said church. In politics he is a liberal Democrat.

JAMES STRIGHT, retired, post-office Clark's Mills, is a son of Joseph and Olivia (Coulter) Stright, father a native of Virginia. George, the uncle of the father of our subject, was a native of New Jersey, and settled in this township about 1800. At the death of his parents, the father of our subject came to this county to live with his uncle, and after his marriage he located on a farm in what is now New Vernon Township, where he lived until his death in 1877. He belonged to the old Militia companies, and was captain of the Georgetown Rifles, and major of the battalion. He attended the Presbyterian Church, and voted the Democratic ticket. He reared six children: James, Amanda, Mrs. Charles Stewart, of New Vernon Township; George W., Isabella, Mrs. John H. Ross, of Deer Creek Township; Sabina E., Mrs. Samuel McCracken, of Franklin, and Andrew J. In 1860 he formed a copartnership with John McElwain, which continued two years, conducting a general mercantile store. For one year he engaged as time-keeper in the building of the Jamestown & Franklin Railroad, and engaged in manufacturing shingles and lumber on the homestead. In 1872 he formed a copartnership with J. M. McCormick, and established a general mercantile store at Clark's Mills. They dissolved in 1880, and since then he has been engaged in the lumber business. Mr. Stright is an honorary member of the K. & L. of H. and a member of the A. O. U. W., of Clark's Mills. In 1860 he married Miss Mary J., daughter of James McCormick, of New Vernon Township, and has one child: Lizzie, wife of Ira Zahniser, of Perry Township, who has three children: Edna, Mary and Wilber. Mr. Stright is a member of the Democratic party, and has held several township offices.

DAVID T. WHITE, farmer and miller, post-office Clark's Mills, is a son of James and Eunice (Tuttle) White, early settlers of Warren County, Penn., where our subject was born January 6, 1826. He received his education at the public schools, and engaged in lumbering in that county until he became twenty-five years of age. In 1853 he came to Mercer County, and located in New Vernon Township, and engaged in farming and lumbering. In 1873 he purchased his present farm and grist-mill, which he conducted under the firm name of D. T. White & Sons. They have added the roller process, both for wheat and buckwheat, and make it one of the best mills in the county. In 1850 he married Miss Norcissa, daughter of William Stright, of this county. By this union they have three children: Cyrus M., married Emma, daughter of Jeremiah Corll, of Perry Township, and has three children: David, Penelope and Maude; Madison, married Mary, daughter of Gustavus Kattenbough, of New Vernon Township, and have three children: Clara, Norcissa and Nancy; Elmer, living at home. Politically he is a Republican, with prohibition proclivities.

CHAPTER XLI.

SALEM TOWNSHIP.

FRANCIS BEATTY, deceased, was born May 8, 1789, in Westmoreland County, Penn., of Scotch-Irish parentage, and came to Mercer County with his parents, David Beatty and wife, in the year 1802. His father settled on a farm in Delaware Township near where Salem Presbyterian Church stands, and he there grew to manhood. On June 10, 1812, he was married to Isabella Williamson, daughter of Capt. James Williamson, a veteran of the Revolutionary War. She was born in Cumberland County, Penn., June 6, 1792, and came on horseback with her father to Mercer County in 1800. They reared five sons and seven daughters: David M., deceased; James W., Henry W., Samuel B., deceased; Jane, deceased, wife of Stewart Caldwell; Caroline, deceased; Ellen, deceased, wife of Thomas M. Reznor; John A., deceased; Susan, wife of W. K. Fulton, of Illinois; Isabel, deceased; Sarah Ann, of Greenville, and Eliza H., wife of J. A. Fulton, of Nebraska. In 1814 they settled on a farm in Salem Township, where his two sons, James W. and Henry W. Beatty, now reside. He went to Erie as a soldier in the War of 1812. In 1824 he was appointed a justice of the peace by Gov. Gregg, and served till 1836, when the new constitution made the office an elective one. He was elected a county commissioner in 1834. In 1837 he was elected a member of the Legislature, and was re-elected the following two years. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church of Georgetown (now Sheakleyville), in which he was a ruling elder from 1833 up to his death, October 18, 1872, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. His widow died May 31, 1879, in her eighty-seventh year.

JAMES W. BEATTY, farmer, post-office Hadley, was born December 11, 1814, in Salem Township, and is a son of Francis Beatty, previously mentioned. Our subject was reared on the homestead and educated in the common schools. On January 5, 1858, he was married to Mrs. Emeline Brown, whose maiden name was Long, by whom he has one child, Ella A. L. B. Brown, who resides with them, is the son of Mrs. Beatty by her first marriage. Our subject purchased a part of the homestead, upon which they now reside. He is a Republican, and for many years has held the office of justice of the peace, and has served in many of the local township offices. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

BAPTIST BRUSH was one of the early settlers of Salem Township. He was a native of Ireland, and came to this county with his family about 1798. He located on the farm now owned by Samuel North, where he resided until his death. His son, Baptist, was born in Ireland in 1782, and had reached the age of sixteen when the family settled in Mercer County. He married Esther Simpson, whose parents were from Ireland and early settlers of the county, and located on the homestead, where the balance of his life was passed. Eight children were born of this union, four of whom are living, viz.: Simpson, John P., Jane, wife of Nelson Dingman, of West Salem, and Mary, wife of William Allen, of Salem Township. Baptist Brush was a sergeant in Capt. Gilliland's company in the War of 1812. He died June 18, 1857, and his widow October 8, 1860, both in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church.

EDWARD CALLAHAN, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born October 6, 1819, in Fayette County, Penn. His parents, Edward and Jane (Thompson) Callahan, were of Scotch-Irish parentage, and came to Mercer County in 1827, and settled on a farm near Greenville. Of the twelve children born to them seven are still living: David, of Mill Creek Township; Edward; William, of Greene Township; James, of West Salem Township; Nancy, widow of J. Lutton; Margaret, widow of H. Wade; Rebecca, wife of A. P. Hill, of Greene Township. Politically Edward was a Democrat. He and his wife were members of the Associated Reformed Church. Edward died May 19, 1839, aged sixty-three years, and his widow died September 20, 1850, aged seventy years. Edward, our subject, was married January 2, 1840, to Isabella, daughter of Andrew and Catharine (Harfield) Wade, of Crawford County, Penn., and lived on a farm near Greenville one and a half years, when he went to Mercer and worked for Mr. Junkin one year in a grist-mill, after which they purchased a piece of land near Greenville, where they resided for five years. They then purchased a farm, now owned by Jacob Kechler, in Sugar Grove Township, where they lived three years, when they bought the farm now owned by C. Stoll, in Sugar Grove Township, where they lived five years, and then purchased a farm of A. Riley, in Salem Township, where they lived until 1884, when he left the farm to his two sons, John and Frank, and purchased a homestead at Kennard, and retired from farm labors. To Edward and Isabella Callahan were born six children: William, lives in Missouri; James, deceased; John, lives in Salem Township; Frank, of Salem Township; Joseph, of Sugar Grove; Catharine, wife of David Faulk, of Salem Township. On the 5th of January, 1877, Edward's wife died, in the sixty-second year of her age. For many years she had been a devoted Christian and member of the Seceder Church. Edward was again married, August 1, 1878, to Mrs. Hannah Riley, nee McCurdy, of Sugar Grove Township. Politically our subject is a Democrat. He was elected justice of the peace in 1856, which position he filled for five years, and in 1876 he was elected jury commissioner, and served three years. He and his wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

JOHN G. DONALDSON was born March 5, 1789, in Philadelphia. His wife, Ann Roberts, was born April 7, 1789, in Bucks County, Penn., and their marriage was on the 5th of June, 1809. They lived in Frankford (now a ward in Philadelphia) until 1815, where he was engaged as a bookbinder. During this time there were three children born to them: Ann; Elizabeth, widow of William S. McLean, of Salem Township; Josephine. In May, 1815, the parents came to Mercer County, and lived in Otter Creek one year, when they purchased a farm in Hempfield Township, and lived there until 1835, when they purchased a farm in Salem Township, where they lived until their decease. While living in Mercer County there were eight children born to them: James R., Susan, Adaline (widow of J. W. Young, of Hempfield Township), Joseph R., Maria, Penelope, John W., Almira, all of whom are dead except Adaline. While living in Mercer County John G. made several trips on foot to Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and would there work at his trade a few months at a time, to earn money with which to support his family and pay for his farm. He died November 21, 1871, in his eighty-third year. His wife died June 6, 1878, in her ninetieth year. James R. Donaldson, son of John G., was born April 25, 1817, in Hempfield Township. He was reared at home, and married, July 6, 1848, to Jane G., daughter of Robert and Rebecca Roberts, of Sugar Grove Township. They resided on a farm in Salem Township, which is now in possession of their son, John G. Donaldson. To James R. and Jane G. Donaldson were born two children: Robert R. and John G. Politically James R. was a Republican. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died February 21, 1886, in his sixty-ninth year; his wife died September 18, 1877, aged forty-nine years. Robert R. was born June 29, 1849, in Sugar Grove Township. He was reared at home, and was married January 14, 1878, to Ada V., daughter of David and Margaret Linn. He purchased a portion of the Grier farm, in Salem Township, where they settled and still live. John G. Donaldson was born December 6, 1853, in Salem Township. He was reared at home, and educated at the common schools. He was married July 5, 1877, to Felicia, daughter of J. Ross and Elizabeth (Keck) McLean, of Salem Township. They located on the family homestead deeded to him by his father. To them were born three children: Edna J., Burdette and Lizzie. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as also are Robert R. and his wife.

THOMAS J. EUARD, farmer, post-office Hadley, was born August 20, 1827, in Allegheny City, Penn. His father, Thomas Euard, was born in 1795 in Ireland, and was married to Miss Anna Woods. They immigrated to this country in 1820, and located in Allegheny City, where he was engaged in rope making until 1830, when they purchased a farm of 200 acres of James Anderson, in Salem Township, on which they located. The farm was a dense forest, but with his strong arm he felled the trees, cultivated the soil, and lived to see it brought under a high state of production. Nine children were born to Thomas and Anna: Anna, wife of B. Burns; Isabella, deceased wife of Joseph Milner; James, Thomas J., Eliza J., deceased; Jane, wife of Thomas Roberts; John, deceased; Rosanna, wife of E. Harshaw, of Ohio; Irwin, deceased; Mary Althouse, deceased. The first five were born in Allegheny City and the rest in Salem Township. Politically Thomas was a Democrat. He died February 18, 1869, at the age of seventy-four. His wife survived him several years, and lived to be eighty-three years old, dying December 13, 1879. Thomas J. was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca J. McCoombs, of Allegheny County, November 15, 1855, and located on a portion of the paternal homestead, where he followed the occupation of a stone-mason, stock broker and merchant in connection with farming. There were two children born to them, Flora, wife of George Euard, and Levica, the deceased wife of Isaac McKean. Our subject was educated at the common schools. In March, 1863, his wife died, and he was again married, November 1, 1871, to Mary C. Shiner, of Venango County, Penn., and by this union they have two children: Nannie A. and D. Leroy.

PHILIP HOOBLE, retired, post-office Osborn, Penn., was born May 5, 1816, in Allegheny County, Penn., and is a son of Abram Hoobler. Caleb Hoobler, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Germany, and immigrated to this country when a young man, and lived in Allegheny County for several years, and while there he met and married Mary Mantle. They were old pioneer settlers in Mercer County, but the date of their settlement we are unable to learn. There were eight children born to them: Abram, Jacob, Philip, Daniel, George, Martha, Susan and Elizabeth, all of whom are deceased. Abram came to this county in 1820, with his family, consisting of his wife, Catherine Maits, and three children: Mary, widow of E. Davis, of Crawford County; John, deceased, and Philip. They settled on a farm in Sugar Grove Township, where they lived until their deaths. There were four children born to them in this county: Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Flowers, of Allegheny County; Catherine, wife of H. Laferty; William and Jacob, of Sugar Grove Township. Politically Abram was a Democrat. He died June 12, 1829, and his widow in October, 1854. Philip remained at home until he was fourteen years of age, when he went to learn the shoemaker's trade. He was married October 3, 1839, to Elizabeth J. Croco, of Allegheny County. They resided in Pittsburgh for three years, when they came to Sugar Grove Township and lived there until 1855, since which time they have resided in Salem Township. There were six children born to them: John, of Crawford County; James, Henry C., Sarah J., widow of A. Hood, of Venango County; Elizabeth A., deceased, and Joseph L., of Salem Township. Politically Philip is a Republican. He, his wife and his daughter, Sarah J., are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. John was a soldier in the War of the Rebellion, where he lost an arm. James and Henry C. were also there, but were less fortunate than their brother, and were killed on the field of battle.

RICHARD MATTHEWS, farmer, post-office Hadley, was born September 28, 1824, in Poland, Mahoning Co., Ohio, where he was reared and educated at the common schools. In 1845 he came to Deer Creek Township, this county, where he worked as a laborer in various localities. He was married February 15, 1855, to Rhoda, daughter of George and Martha Vosler, of Salem Township. They settled on a farm in Perry Township, which he had previously purchased, and where they lived until 1866, when he purchased another farm in Salem Township, owned by George Vosler, and on which they settled and still live. There were three children born to them: Thomas, died in infancy; Julena, married Warren Flick June 20, 1878; and Lucy, married John Euard, of Hadley, December 25, 1885, who was born in Salem Township, moved to Illinois in 1862, where he lived until his marriage. Politically Mr. Matthews is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have accumulated their property by their own efforts and hard labor. Julena and her husband are living on the Matthews farm, in Salem Township, and are the parents of three children: Richard, Blanch and Elsie. Lucy and her husband live at Hadley, where he is engaged in blacksmithing. To them have been born two children: Mertie May and Josephus.

JACOB YOUNG McLEAN, farmer, post-office Leech's Corners. The subject of this sketch was the youngest son of William and Elizabeth McLean. William McLean was born in Somerset County, Penn., in October, 1770, and was a son of Andrew McLean, of Scotch descent, who served as a soldier in the War of the Revolution. He received his pay in continental money, which depreciated so as to become worthless, and was finally consumed in a bonfire in an old-fashioned fire-place. William McLean was married to Elizabeth Ross, daughter of James Ross, of Ligonier Valley, Westmoreland Co., Penn. They settled permanently in this county in 1798, purchasing a small farm in Salem Township from John Caughey, on which they lived and died. He was a mechanic as well as a farmer. In 1806 he was appointed justice of the peace by Gov. McKean, which office he held until his hearing became impaired. He held the position of class-leader in the Methodist Episcopal Church for nearly forty years, and was active in all the interests of the church. To him were born ten children: James, Andrew, John, William S., Margaret, Cornelius, Jane, Eliza, James Ross and Jacob Young, all of whom are deceased except J. Y. and J. Ross. He died August 5, 1839, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. His wife, Elizabeth, died April 4, 1862, in the eighty-third year of her age. Of the sons, John and William S. were ordained ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church. John entered the Pittsburgh Conference in 1827; was afterward transferred to the Erie, and on the division of that conference fell into the East Ohio, and at the end of an itinerancy of fifty years died at Elyria, Lorain Co., Ohio, in February, 1887, in the eighty-second year of his age. William S. served the church for many years as a local elder, and died at his home, in Salem Township, in December, 1866. Cornelius married Eliza A. Walker, of Greenville, and in 1853 removed with his family to Henry County, Ill. From there he went to Iowa; enlisted in an Iowa regiment, and died at Quincy, Ill., in 1863. Jacob Young McLean, the subject of this sketch, was born November 23, 1820. He received his education at the country schools and at the old Mercer Academy, and for several years taught school in the winter seasons. He was married, October 24, 1847, to Miss P. Donaldson, and settled on a small farm in Salem Township, a part of his brother Andrew's tract, originally purchased from David Leech. To them was born one child, Nellie, wife of J. W. Stevenson. Mrs. McLean died August 5, 1849, at the age of twenty-two. After the death of his first wife, J. Y. engaged in mercantile business for three or four years, and May 12, 1853, he was married to Miss Ada Holcomb, of Trumbull County, Ohio. In politics he is a Republican. In 1855 he was elected justice of the peace, and again elected in 1864. In 1868 he was elected county commissioner for three years, and at different intervals was elected several terms as school director of his township. In 1878 he was a candidate at the Republican county convention for the State Legislature, and lacked but a few votes of receiving the nomination. At the next convention he declined to be a candidate. He is now (1888) living on his farm in Salem Township, which he cleared up from the original forest, and thus far is enjoying the results of a busy life. J. Ross McLean was born July 22, 1818, and was married May 25, 1842, to Elizabeth Keck, of West Salem Township. They settled on the old homestead, which descended to him from his father. To him were born ten children, seven of whom are now living: Esther E., Celia, B. O. Plympton, J. Theodore, Felicia, Chloe J. and Andrew Curtin. Politically J. R. is a Republican, and for some years has been deaf from the effects of chill fever.

STEPHEN A. OSBORN, farmer, post-office Osborn, Penn., was born April 2, 1840, in Jackson Township, Mahoning Co., Ohio, and is a son of John Osborn, who was born December 4, 1806, in Fayette County, Penn., and was married March 31, 1832, to Abigail Allen, of New York State, one of the descendants of Ephraim Allen. John and his wife located on a farm in Jackson, Ohio. There were born to them six children: Hiram B., of Kansas; Almira, wife of L. N. Stephenson, of Wisconsin; Sarah, wife of J. Chess, of Sandy Creek Township; Stephen A., lives in Salem Township; James P., and William, who lives in Wisconsin. John's wife died in 1844, and he married for his second wife, in 1848, Miss Mary M. Lewis, of Jackson, Ohio. They remained in Ohio until 1850, when they purchased a farm of 106 acres of Jacob Foulk, in Salem Township, this county, on which they settled. John obtained his education at the common schools, and taught school a few terms. Politically he was a Whig and Republican. Stephen A. was reared at home until he was eighteen years old, then he was in the South and West for three years and a half, when he returned to Mercer County, and enlisted in the late war under Capt. Wood, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment, Company G, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served three years. He enlisted as a private, and was gradually promoted to the office of second lieutenant. During his soldier life he spent about six months in the various Southern prisons. He was married October 1, 1865, to Malinda, daughter of Lewis and Sarah (Newbold) Rhodes, of Salem Township. They lived in Salem Township one year, in Crawford County two years, and then returned to Salem Township, and settled on the farm where they now live. There were three children born to them: May, Lewis M., and one who died in infancy. His wife died in 1870 at the age of twenty-five, and he married for his second wife, in May, 1871, Hannah M. Rhodes, and by this union they have two children: U. Leon and Ira M. Politically our subject is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

J. LESLIE RILEY, farmer and lumber dealer, post-office Leech's Corners, was born May 6, 1842, in Sugar Grove Township. John Riley, grandfather of our subject, was a native of Westmoreland County, where he was reared and married to Barbara Simons, and came to Sugar Grove, Mercer County, in a very early day, and settled on a farm now owned by David McGranahan, where they lived until their decease. There were eight children born to John and Barbara Riley: James T., John W., Abigail, wife of David McGranahan; Cornelius, deceased; Jane, wife of James Elwood; Hannah, wife of Edward Callahan; Margaret, wife of Lewis Lindsey; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Elwood. James T., father of our subject, was born June 24, 1812, in Sugar Grove Township, where he was reared and educated. He was married to Mary E. Miller, of Crawford County, and settled on a part of his father's homestead, where they spent the most of their days. For many years James T. was a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, as was also his father. To James T. and Mary E. were born six children: Elizabeth, wife of G. H. Dumars; William L., a clergyman in Corry, Penn.; J. Leslie; Lovina, deceased; Emily, wife of George Linn, of Iowa; Lewis L., of Jamestown, N. Y. Politically James T. was a Prohibitionist, with Republican proclivities. He died May 22, 1885, in his seventy-third year, and his wife died in February, 1883, and the age of sixty-six. J. Leslie was reared at home and educated at the common schools. He was married, July 16, 1863, to Melissa, daughter of David and Margaret (Wilson) Linn, of New Vernon Township. They first settled in Sugar Grove Township. J. Leslie was engaged in cooping, and remained there until 1875, when they went to Salem Township and lived on a part of the Caughey farm until he purchased the Dean farm, where they now live. There were two children born to them: Ellis A. and Ada E., wife of A. L. Beil. J. Leslie is a member of the Eureka Lodge No. 290, F. & A. M., and of the I. O. O. F., and is also a member of the State police. Politically he is a Prohibitionist. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

THOMAS RHOADES, farmer, post-office Osborn, was born November 2, 1832, in Salem Township. His father, Jacob, was born December 9, 1779, in Schuylkill County, Penn. In 1796 Jacob came to Salem Township, this county, and made a settlement on a tract of 200 acres of land, and remained there until 1798, when his parents, Caleb and Hannah, also arrived, and made a permanent settlement, the original settlement of Jacob being made for his father. Some years afterward Jacob purchased 200 acres more for himself, adjoining his father's, and at the death of his father purchased the interests of the heirs in the homestead. The entire 400 acres of Jacob Rhoades is still in the possession of the descendants. There were nine children born to Caleb and Hannah Rhoades: Betsey, Martha, Anna, Sebina, Hannah, Sarah, Lewis, Jacob and Polly. All of these are dead. Jacob, the father of our subject, was married September 14, 1813, to Anna, daughter of Philip and Elizabeth (Young) Burrier. Jacob remained on the homestead with his parents until their deaths. He then purchased the farm. Caleb died in March, 1830, aged ninety-one years. His widow, Hannah, died in 1850, aged ninety-seven. To Jacob and Anna were born ten children: John, deceased; Lewis; Susannah E., wife of P. Vosler; Hannah, wife of R. Bates; Martha, wife of N. Simmons; Samuel H., Jacob C., Benjamin, Thomas, and Anna M., wife of A. Boush. Jacob was a Democrat, but never aspired after official positions. He died August 23, 1853. His widow died September 2, 1874. Jacob was drafted twice and served in the War of 1812. Thomas, our subject, was reared at home, and obtained a limited education at the common schools. He was married March 6, 1862, to Charlotte, daughter of Robert and Mary (Critchfield) Roberts, of Salem Township. They settled on a part of the homestead, willed to him by his father. There were seven children born to them: Emily M., wife of W. McCracken; Adolphus M., Mary A., Anna M., Jacob S., Melva F. and Lena D. He is a Democrat.

JOHN R. RHOADES, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born August 7, 1855, in Salem Township. Lewis Rhoades, his father, was born in Salem Township November 23, 1816, and was married September 3, 1841, to Sarah Newbold, of Crawford County, Penn., and settled on a farm of 101 acres, in Salem Township, which was left to him by his father, Jacob Rhodes. Unto Lewis and Sarah Rhoades there were fifteen children born, of whom only seven are living: Anna E., wife of Thomas Roberts; Martha, widow of Levi Gifford; Hannah M., wife of S. A. Osborn; Ira N., of Crawford County; Thomas S., of Salem Township; John R., of Salem, and Ida C., wife of J. D. Tiffany, of Crawford County. John R. was married to Samantha, daughter of J. C. McAdoo, of Kennard, on the 26th of September, 1876. They settled on the portion of the farm which was given to him by his father. Politically John R. is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

CALEB RHOADES, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born February 22, 1841, in Salem Township, on the farm on which he now lives. His grandparents, Caleb and Hannah Rhoades, natives of Schuylkill County, came to Salem Township, this county, in 1798, and settled on a tract of 200 acres selected by their son, Jacob, in 1796, and on which he had remained the two intervening years. There were nine children born to Caleb and Hannah Rhoades, of whom Lewis (father of our subject) was born the year of their arrival in this township, or on the 5th of October, 1798. Lewis was reared at home, and educated at the common schools. At the age of twenty-one he went to learn the carpenter's trade, at which he worked for several years. He was married June 11, 1825, to Elizabeth, daughter of James and Elizabeth (McDowell) Fetterman, pioneers of Crawford County, Penn. They settled on a farm of 150 acres, which he had previously purchased of David Leech, in Salem Township, where he engaged in farming in connection with carpentering. There were seven children born to them: Elizabeth, wife of James Riley; Hannah, wife of George Davenport; James, of Sugar Grove Township; William, of Salem Township; John, of Otter Creek Township; Lewis (deceased) and Caleb. Politically Lewis was a Democrat. He died in March, 1886, aged eighty-eight years. His widow resides on the homestead with her two sons, William and Caleb.

ROBERT R. ROBERTS, deceased, was the son of Thomas and Leanah (Watters) Roberts, and was born May 15, 1829, in what is now Sugar Grove Township. He was reared and educated at home. On the 12th of January, 1858, he was married to Louesa, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Palm) McCorkle, of Salem Township. For fourteen years after marriage they lived on a farm near Kennard, and then moved to another farm in Salem Township, where the family now live. They have had four children: Clare E., Mary J., wife of C. E. Miller, of Crawford County; Thomas M. and William O. Robert R. was drafted in the late war, but, being unable to leave his family, he furnished a substitute. He was a Democrat, and died August 24, 1886. His widow resides on the old homestead with her two sons, Thomas and William. The Roberts' are among the best known and most respected families of the township.

JAMES F. ROBERTS, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born April 12, 1840, in Salem Township. His father, Robert Roberts, was born June 11, 1793, in the southeastern part of this State, and was there united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mary Critchfield. They came to Salem Township, Mercer County, in 1818, and purchased a portion of the Bishop Roberts tract, on which they settled. For several years he was in the employ of Bishop Roberts, in conducting business at his grist-mill, and when the milling business was abandoned, Robert gave his attention to farming. There were thirteen children born to them, all of whom grew to maturity, and were all, excepting one, the heads of families, viz.: John, lives in Wisconsin; Joanna, wife of Mr. Tiffany; Phoebe, deceased; Martha, deceased; William C., deceased; Mary, deceased; Sarah, wife of Mr. Cook, of Washington Territory; Susan, wife of N. Kline, of Wisconsin; Robert, deceased; Jane, widow of J. Partridge; Charlotte, wife of Thomas Rhoades, of Salem Township; James F.; Emily, deceased. In politics Robert was a Whig, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Robert died July 22, 1844, in his fifty-second year. His widow died January 30, 1879, in her eighty-fifth year. She spent the latter years of her life with her son, James F., on the homestead on which she first settled. James F. was reared by his widowed mother, and educated at the common schools. He was married February 18, 1863, to Susan, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (White) Mackey, of Sandy Creek Township. They located on the paternal homestead, and purchased the interests of the heirs. There were seven children born to them: Sophia, William, John, Nettie, Milton, Sherman, Hattie. In politics Mr. Roberts is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

GEORGE STEVENSON, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born August 22, 1832, in Salem Township, this county, and is a son of Findley Stevenson. James Stevenson, the grandfather of our subject, was born October 18, 1760, in the County Down, Ireland, where he was reared, and married to Jane Caughey on the 13th day of July, 1782. They immigrated to this country in 1790, and settled in Chester County, Penn., and lived there and in Westmoreland County until 1798, when they came to Salem Township, Mercer County, and made a final settlement on the lands now owned by D. M. Stevenson. James was a blacksmith, which occupation he followed through life. There were three children born to them in Ireland: James, William and Mary; one born to them in Chester County, Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Stokely, of Cool Spring Township, and two born to them in Mercer County, John and Findley. James died March 5, 1813, aged fifty-three, and his widow in August, 1847, at the age of eighty-seven. Findley, the father of our subject, was born September 3, 1804. He was reared at home, and was married June 29, 1826, to Elizabeth, daughter of John and Nancy (Roberts) McGranahan. They settled on the old homestead, where he and his brother John lived for over twenty years, with all of their interests undivided. There were eleven children born to Finley and Elizabeth Stevenson: John, James E., George G., William, Robert (deceased), Jane, wife of J. Wick; Margaret, widow of G. Hunter; Findley (deceased), Nancy, wife of H. Dick; David M., and Elizabeth E., wife of E. A. Jones. In after years, when their families grew to maturity, John and Findley divided their interests with perfect satisfaction to all concerned, each one remaining on their respective portions until death. Politically Findley was a Whig, and afterward an Abolitionist. He died September 28, 1847, aged forty-three, and his widow October 17, 1887, in the eighty-first year of her age. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church from youth, and he had been class-leader and Sabbath-school superintendent for many years. George G., our subject, was married, June 22, 1852, to Martha A., daughter of Leonard and Catherine (Fritz) Watters. They located on a portion of the Bishop Roberts farm of seventy acres, purchased by the father and deeded to him, and to which our subject has added seventy more adjoining, where they still live. To George G. Stevenson and Martha A. (Watters) Stevenson there have been born eleven children: Almira J., widow of Francis M. McDowell; John L. (deceased), Ida T., wife of Robert A. Christy; Findley R., Electa K. (deceased), Elda E., Vista L., Alta A., Judson L., Adelbert G., Clyde C. Politically our subject is a Republican. He was drafted in the late war and furnished the means to procure a substitute.

SUGAR GROVE TOWNSHIP.

LEWIS N. BENNINGHOFF, farmer and oil operator, post-office Greenville, was born August 13, 1850, in Cherry Tree Township, Venango County, and is a son of George and Julia (Baney) Benninghoff. Our subject was reared at home, and in 1866 moved with his parents to a farm near Meadville, Crawford Co., Penn. In the following year Lewis returned to Venango County to oversee some interests for his father, where he remained until 1877. He was married in 1873 to Miss Mary M., daughter of A. J. McClintock, of Cherry Tree Township, Venango Co., Penn. In 1877 they removed to Tarport, McKean Co., Penn., where he followed contracting and operating for oil until 1882, when they removed to Meadville, where they lived two years. He then settled on a farm that he had previously purchased of the Benninghoff heirs in Sugar Grove Township. He still follows contracting and drilling oil wells, and still has some undeveloped territory. There were six children born to them: Harry, Comer, Wilbur, Buss, Laura and Earl. Our subject obtained his education at the common schools, and attended one term at the Commercial College at Meadville. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and politically is a Republican.

WILLIAM F. BURTON, farmer, civil engineer and surveyor, post-office Leech's Corners, was born in Delaware Township, this county, in 1846. William Burton, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Tyrone County, Ireland, where he was reared and married to Jane Stinson in 1794. By this union they had five children: Mary A., Ellen, James, William and Henry. In the year 1824 the family immigrated to America and rented a farm of Gen. Scott, in what is now Sugar Grove Township, where they remained for two years, when they moved to Delaware Township and purchased a farm of 200 acres, in the Fourth Donation District, No. 698, issued to a soldier of the Revolutionary War, on which they resided until their deaths, he dying in 1851, at the age of ninety-seven, and she in 1854, at the age of eighty-four. Henry Burton, the father of our subject, was born in 1806, and was reared and educated at home. He was married November 3, 1843, to Amelia Tait, daughter of Fergus and Agnes (Giffen) Smith, of Cool Spring Township. They located on a portion of his father's farm, where they remained until 1852, then rented the Byron Hull farm one year, and then bought a farm of ninety-five acres of Asbury Leech, in Salem, now Sugar Grove, Township. There were five children born to them: W. F., Nancy J., Martha E., wife of W. Hardy; Mary A., deceased, and Elizabeth, wife of F. D. Bary. Politically Henry is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. William F., our subject, was married December 26, 1876, to Clara C., daughter of John and Sarah Ellis, of Jackson County, Iowa. They settled in Eastland County, Tex., where he followed surveying and stock raising on a farm of 600 acres, which he still owns. There was one child born to them, John McKean. His wife, Clarissa, died May 29, 1878. In the fall of 1878 he returned to Mercer County, and is now living on the old homestead. Politically he is a Democrat, and a member of the United Presbyterian Church.

EDWARD M. CAMPBELL, farmer, post-office Leech's Corners, was born November 9, 1827. The Campbell family are among the pioneer families of Mercer County. Edward Campbell, the grandfather of our subject, and his wife, Margaret (Satterfield) Campbell, settled on a farm in Hickory Township in 1800. Margaret was a sister of the Rev. James Satterfield, of Hickory Township. They had seven children: William, James, Anna, Margaret, Jane, Mary and Eliza, all of whom are deceased. James, the father of our subject, was born in Washington County, Penn., in 1800, and was reared in Hickory Township, this county. He was married to Nancy Thompson, of Hickory Township, and located on a farm in Hickory, where he remained about ten years, when he purchased a farm near Wheatland, on which the Sharon fair grounds are now located. There were five children born to them: Edward M., Rev. David T., Margaret J., wife of J. M. Pettit; William B. and Adeline, deceased. He was a Democrat, and was also a member of the F. & A. M., and of the Mercer County Agricultural Society. They were identified with the Presbyterian Church. James died March 7, 1885, in his eighty-fifth year, and his wife died June 22, 1869, aged sixty-one years. Edward M. was married in 1851 to Martha Conover, of Brookfield, Ohio. They located on a farm in Pymatuning Township, this county, and remained there until 1854, when he purchased a stock of goods from J. A. Waugh at Greenville, where they resided until 1859. They then went to the Indian Territory, Choctaw Nation, and engaged in the dry goods trade, also in stock shipping. After remaining there one year they returned to Greenville, leaving his brother William in charge of the goods and stock. At the breaking out of the war the Confederates took the stock, paying $17,000 in Confederate scrip, none of which was of any value. Edward M. then purchased a farm in Sugar Grove Township, this county, of John Reznor, where he still resides. Two children have been born to Edward M. and Martha Campbell: James M. and Albert, deceased. Politically he is a Democrat, and has filled the office of justice of the peace for fifteen years, and school director for twenty-three years. He was president of the Shenango Agricultural Society one term and treasurer three years. He was master of the P. of H. of Mercer County for several years, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Greenville.

JOHN M. DUMARS, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born July 12, 1816, in what is now Sugar Grove Township, and was a son of Noble Dumars. Timothy Dumars, the grandfather of our subject, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1745, and came to America in 1800, with his family, consisting of his wife and seven children: Adam, Joseph, Claudius, Margaret, Sally, Noble and Nancy. In 1812 the family located in Mercer County, but of their exact location we are unable to learn. Noble Dumars, father of our subject, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1794, and came to America at the age of seven years. He was married October 27, 1814, to Margaret, daughter of John and Sarah (Hart) Kline, of Crawford County, Penn. They located on a farm near Leech's Corners, in what is now Sugar Grove Township, it being a portion of the Riley lands. They lived there until 1822, when they purchased a farm of 130 acres near Kennard, in the same township, where they lived until their decease. To them were born eight children: John M.; Sarah, wife of B. F. Unger; Joseph H., deceased; Timothy R.; Nancy M., wife of W. F. McAdoo; George H.; Fannie, wife of Jesse Stephenson; Mary G., wife of John Parks. Politically Noble was a Whig and Republican. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. He and his wife were connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church in their earlier days, and lived a long life of devotion to the cause of Christ. Their children all espoused the cause of Christ in their youthful days, and have not departed therefrom. Noble died December 19, 1880, in his eighty-seventh year. His wife died February 20, 1864, aged seventy years. John M., our subject, was reared at home, and on the 9th of December, 1841, was married to Nancy, daughter of John and Nancy (Roberts) McGranahan, after which he settled on a farm of forty acres, left him by the will of his father, to which he has added thirty-five acres by purchase, and on which they still reside. To their marriage have been born six children: John C.; Marilla, wife of George Ball; Noble W., Joseph M., Lewis K. and Emma. Our subject is a Democrat. He has been justice of the peace for fifteen years, and has held the offices of school director and assessor of his township. He and wife are members of the United Brethren Church.

BALSER GRIM, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born September 24, 1824, in Beaver County, Penn. At the age of three years he came to Mercer County with his parents, Adam and Mary Grim, who settled in Wilmington Township, where they lived until their decease, excepting a year or two in Lackawannock Township. Adam was a miller, which occupation he followed through life. To their union were born nine children: Abraham, Polly, Adam, Andrew, John, Jacob, Catherine, Balser and Elizabeth, of whom only Jacob and Balser are living. Adam died in 1844; his widow died in 1871 in her ninety-fourth year. Balser was married, in 1871, to Margaret A., daughter of Thomas and Sarah Donaldson, of Sugar Grove Township. They settled on a farm in Sugar Grove, which he had previously purchased, and on which they still live. To them have been born three children: Mary, deceased; John H. and Clara A. In politics Mr. Grim is a Democrat. He and his wife are members of the Baptist Church.

JOHN LEECH (deceased). Few pioneer families of Northwestern Pennsylvania are more widely representative than the Leechs. Their immediate ancestor, John Leech, was born in York County, Penn., November 29, 1767, and was a son of Thomas and Phoebe Leech, of that county, and grandson of William Leech, who came to America with William Penn. He there grew up, and married Miss Jane Morrison November 25, 1788. She was born in that county January 16, 1769. In October, 1792, they moved to Somerset County, Penn., and ere their removal to Mercer County she was the mother of six sons: David, Thomas, William, Joseph, John and Samuel. Mr. Leech was a practical surveyor, and in the spring of 1802 he removed with his family to this county and settled at the place since known as "Leech's Corners," on the Little Shenango, in what is now Sugar Grove Township, where he arrived on the 4th day of May. The whole country was then a vast forest, with a cabin here and there at long intervals, while game of every sort was far more abundant than the necessities of the pioneers demanded. Four sons and two daughters were born to John and Jane Leech after coming to Mercer County: Phoebe, James, Morris, Joshua, Jane and Asbury, who, with the four born in York County, constituted one of those old-fashioned families of ten sons and two daughters. Every one of these grew to maturity, and a remarkable fact is that all lived to be over sixty years of age, the last survivor, Morris, dying in September, 1884. John Leech was first a Whig, then a Democrat, and afterward a Republican. He and his three eldest sons went to Ohio in the War of 1812. In 1821 he ran for the Assembly and was defeated, but in 1825 he was elected to the State Senate and served four years. In 1828 he was the Adams and Rush elector for this district, then composed of Mercer, Crawford and Erie Counties, James Duncan, of Mercer, being the opposing elector on the Jackson and Calhoun ticket. Mr. Leech was a good scholar and a fine conversationalist, and after serving in the Senate he represented the county in the Legislature. He was justice of the peace over thirty years, and throughout the pioneer days was one of the most influential citizens of his adopted county. He lived to see his ten sons and one of his daughters, Jane, who married Jesse Smith, settled on farms in the vicinity of the old home, while the other daughter, Phoebe, married Rev. Charles Elliott, a Methodist preacher, and shared his itinerant life. Mrs. Jane Leech died October 16, 1841, her husband surviving her till May 1, 1864, passing away at the ripe old age of nearly ninety-seven years. The ancestors of the Leech family were Quakers, and came to Philadelphia with its great founder, Penn, but soon after Mr. Leech's marriage he and wife united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and all of their children were life-long members of that denomination. Three of their sons, John, Samuel and Joshua, were Methodist preachers. The memory of this pioneer couple will be revered among the hills and valleys of Mercer County as long as the history of pioneer life finds a sympathetic chord in the hearts of their numerous descendants.

JOSEPH LEECH, deceased, was the fourth son of John and Jane (Morrison) Leech. He was born in Somerset County, Penn., December, 7, 1797, and grew to manhood on the old homestead at Leech's Corners. He married Miss Bethana Hazen, November 7, 1818, and settled on an adjoining farm to the old Leech homestead. Mrs. Leech was born in Crawford County, Penn., November 7, 1799, and reared a family of nine children: Isaac, Mary, William B., Jane, Thomas, Jerome, Joseph, Harrison and Sarah. Of these, William P., Mary, wife of David Linn, and Jerome are the only survivors, and all are residents of Mercer County. Joseph Leech spent nearly his whole life in the vicinity of Leech's Corners, and died June 2, 1863. His widow survived him until October 3, 1872, and both died in the Methodist Episcopal faith. Mr. Leech maintained through life an unblemished character, was an industrious, enterprising citizen, and liberal in the support of every worthy cause.

WILLIAM F. McADOO, farmer, post office Kennard, was born January 27, 1829, in County Donegal, Ireland. His parents, George and Sarah (Fletcher) McAdoo, came to America in 1846, with their family of five children: William F., Mary J., Sarah, Catherine and Esther. They located on a farm near Jamestown, Penn., where they resided for three years, and then went to Crawford County, where they lived five years, after which they purchased a portion of the Donaldson farm in Sugar Grove Township, where they lived until his decease. Politically George was a Democrat. He and his wife were members of the United Presbyterian Church. He died September 9, 1872, in his seventy-first year. His widow still lives with her son, William F., in her eighty-fifth year. William F. was reared at home and educated in the common schools. He was married January 29, 1861, to Mrs. Maria Minnis (nee Dumars), and lived for two years on a portion of the Donaldson farm, when they bought a farm of 100 acres near Kennard, on which they still live. There have been two children born to them: Fannie E., wife of I. J. Lackey, and George K. Politically our subject is a Democrat. He has filled the offices of school director and road commissioner, and is a member of the United Presbyterian Church. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

SAMUEL McCLIMANS, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born February 5, 1814. His father, Hugh R., was born in Virginia, September 22, 1777, and was of Scotch descent. He came to Pennsylvania in his earlier years, and was married about 1793 to Elizabeth Ferguson, of Indiana County, Penn. They first located in Butler County near North Washington. About 1828 they came to Mercer County and located on a farm of 100 acres, in West Salem Township, which was known as the Sheriff Scott farm. To them were born fourteen children: William, James, Margaret, John, Elizabeth, Hugh, Mary, Robert, Samuel, Jane (wife of William J. McClimans, of West Salem Township), Elliott, Isabella, David and Haynes, of whom only Samuel, Jane and Haynes are living. Hugh P. was a Democrat. He and his wife were members of the United Presbyterian Church. He died about 1854. Samuel was reared at home, and was married April 26, 1838, to Jane, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Canon, of Salem Township. They settled on a farm in Salem Township, where they remained about twelve years, and then lived in various places in the county until 1869, when they made a final settlement in Sugar Grove Township. There were ten children born to them: Margaret L., deceased; Martha, wife of Lewis Roberts, of Sugar Grove; David A.; James B.; Elizabeth, wife of David M. Stevenson; Matthew E.; Sarah M., wife of W. H. Hill; William E., Samuel A. and Thomas M. Two of the sons, David A. and James B., were in the service in the late war. Samuel is a Republican, and a member of the United Presbyterian Church. His wife died November 23, 1883.

JACOB C. McGRANAHAN, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born January 10, 1811, in Sugar Grove Township. His father, William, located here about 1800, on a farm of 106 acres. He was married to Mrs. Margaret Covodor, to which union there were born five children: Jared, Jacob, John, John (2nd) and Susanna, of whom Jacob is the only surviving one. William was a soldier in the War of 1812, where he served three months. Politically he was a Democrat, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in 1863 in his eighty-second year, and his wife died in 1851 in her eighty-second year. Jacob, our subject, was married, in 1835, to Nancy A., daughter of Samuel Walker, of Sugar Grove Township. They located in Salem Township, where they lived two years, when they moved to Adamsville, Crawford County, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was elected justice of the peace, which office he filled for ten years. In 1852 he located on a farm that was left to him by his father in Sugar Grove Township, where he still resides. There were two children born to them: Eliza J., wife of P. Boltner, and William. Jacob's wife died November 18, 1842, and he was married the second time, July 6, 1843, to Miss Ellen, daughter of John Irvine, of Crawford County. To them were born six children: John, Alonzo, Lewis C.; Emeline, wife of David Callahan; Amanda, wife of K. M. Wright, and Andrew. Lewis C. was killed instantly, on the second day of May, 1888, by a plank falling from a derrick and striking him on top of the head. Politically our subject is a Democrat, and he and wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for thirty years. His wife died November 18, 1885, at the age of sixty-two.

JOSEPH McGRANAHAN, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born August 7, 1831, in Sugar Grove Township, on the premises where he now lives. His father, Smith McGranahan, was a native of Westmoreland County, was married in Crawford County, and came to Mercer County about 1800. He located on a farm of seventy acres, in what is now Sugar Grove Township. To Smith McGranahan and wife were born the following children: Ellen, wife of D. Luce; Robert, William, Mary, wife of T. Canon; Margaret, wife of William Bates; George, Nancy, wife of J. Andrews; Martha, widow of R. Martin; Sarah, deceased; John, deceased; Rebecca, wife of John Riley; Susanna, wife of William Lackey; Betsey, deceased. Mr. McGranahan was a Democrat, and served at Erie in the War of 1812. He was a man of irreproachable character, whose word was as good as his bond. He was always bearing the burden of some local township office. He died October 1, 1869, and his widow March 6, 1870. Joseph was married July 3, 1860, to Margaret, daughter of John and Betsey (Patterson) Callahan, of West Salem Township, and settled on the paternal homestead, where his aged parents spent their declining years. They have no children, but two have been reared by them: Edward B. McGranahan and Emma Beighle. In politics Mr. McGranahan is a Democrat, and one of the respected citizens of the township.

JOHN McGRANAHAN, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born January 15, 1849, in Sugar Grove Township. His grandfather, John McGranahan, was one of the pioneers of Salem Township, and located there about 1800. He was married to Nancy, a sister of Bishop Roberts. They settled on a farm near Kennard, in what is now Sugar Grove Township, on which they lived until their decease. There were eleven children born to them, of whom George, the father of our subject, was the eighth, and who was born on the 4th of March, 1811. He was reared at home, and was married to Sarah A., daughter of William Leech, and settled on a farm, part of which descended to him from his father. To this union were born ten children, two of whom died in infancy. Those living are: Jane, wife of Robert Courtney; Amanda T., wife of R. C. Faulk; Amelia, John, William L., Beriah, Thomas E. and George R. Politically George G. was a Democrat. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. George G. died January 15, 1876, in his sixty-fifth year. His widow is living on the old homestead. John, our subject, was married June 16, 1873, to Louisa J., daughter of Jeremiah and Eveline (Arthur) Ralston, of Sugar Grove Township. They settled on a farm in Sugar Grove Township, a portion of which was deeded to him by his father. There have been four children born to them: Sarah E., Jeremiah V., Blanch and Richard A. He is a Democrat, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

LEVI W. McGRANAHAN, oil producer, post-office Summit City, McKean Co., Penn, was born in Sugar Grove Township, Mercer Co., Penn, November 5, 1841, and is a son of David and Abby (Riley) McGranahan, pioneers of that portion of the county. Levi W. grew to manhood in Sugar Grove Township, and Venango County, Penn., and was married April 22, 1873, to Flora J., daughter of Samuel W. and Mary A. (Hunter) McDowell, of West Salem Township. Two sons have been born of this union: Harry L. and Ralph B. Mr. McGranahan has followed the oil business in the Pennsylvania oil country since the early excitement, and has been fairly successful. Politically he is a stanch Democrat, and belongs to the K. T. M., K. of L. and the Columbia League.

HUGH RAY, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born October 3, 1853. His father, James Ray, was born in County Down, Ireland, in 1804. In his younger days he immigrated to America and located in Greenville, Penn., where he engaged in contracting on the Erie Canal, which was being built at that time. He was married to Christena Snyder, a native of Union County, in 1837. After the completion of his contracts he purchased a farm in Greene Township, where he settled and remained until his death. There were seven children born to them: William, Oscar, Margaret, wife of J. Donaldson; Rebecca, deceased; James M., Hugh and Emma, deceased. James was a Democrat. He died February 4, 1860, and his widow died April 21, 1867. Hugh, our subject, was married October 30, 1879, to Rachel, daughter of Godfrey and Catherine Stroup, of Otter Creek Township, natives of Germany. They located on a farm in Sugar Grove Township, purchased from George Donaldson. They have three children: Henry O., Harriet and James B. Hugh is a Democrat, and his wife is a member of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN W. RILEY, farmer, post-office, Kennard, was born September 16, 1814, in Sugar Grove Township, this county. His father, John Riley, was born in Maryland in 1780, came to Mercer County in 1798, and purchased the farm now owned by David McGranahan, in Sugar Grove, formerly Salem, Township. John Riley was married about 1802 to Miss Barbara Simons, of Westmoreland County, Penn. They settled on the farm that he had previously purchased, and where they spent the remainder of their lives. There were ten children born to them: Cornelius, Catherine, Margaret and James, all deceased; John W., Abigail, wife of David McGranahan; Jane, wife of J. Elwood; Elizabeth, deceased; Hannah, wife of E. Callahan, and George, deceased. John and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was a local preacher for many years. Politically he was a Whig up to the time of the late war, and afterward voted with the Democrats. John died March 16, 1864, aged eighty-four, and his wife died in February, 1864, aged seventy-seven. Our subject, John W., was married November 6, 1851, to Christina, daughter of Thomas and Lena (Watters) Roberts, of Sugar Grove Township. They located on a portion of the family homestead given to him by his father, and on which they still live. They have four children born to them: Amanda L., born August 1, 1852, was scalded to death April 22, 1858; Thomas Jefferson, born September 28, 1859; Westley McKendre, born August 1, 1859, drowned June 10, 1880, and George B. Politically our subject is a Democrat, and his wife belongs to the United Brethren Church. George B. was born March 9, 1864, and reared and educated at home. He was married September 29, 1885, to Susanna, daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Battiger, of Sandy Creek Township. They are living with his parents on the family homestead.

ALEXANDER D. ROBERTS, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born September 29, 1836, in Sugar Grove Township, this county. Thomas Roberts, the grandfather of our subject, was born in 1764. He was married to Miss Margaret Covode. They settled in Salem Township, now Sugar Grove, in company with his brother, Bishop Roberts, at a very early date, on a tract of 400 acres, near Kennard, which Thomas purchased. There were four children born to Thomas and Margaret Roberts: Mary, Betsey, Robert and Thomas. The daughter, Mary, is believed to be the first white female child born in this part of Shenango Valley, her birth dating in 1798. Her life was one of single blessedness. She spent the latter part of it with the family of John McGranahan, dying October 15, 1882, at the age of eighty-four years. Thomas was stricken down in the prime of life, dying May 3, 1804, and his widow June 27, 1851, at the age of seventy-nine. Robert, the father of our subject, was born February 12, 1802, in Salem Township, now Sugar Grove. He was reared at home and received a limited education at the common schools. He spent two years in Indiana with his uncle, Bishop Roberts. He was married July 12, 1827, to Rebecca L., daughter of Alexander and Jane (Griffin) Dumars, of Salem Township. They located on a portion of the paternal homestead and engaged in farming. There were five children born to them: Jane, deceased; Susan, deceased; Thomas B., living in Kansas; Alexander D. and Robert M., deceased. Robert and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for many years and lived very exemplary lives. He died March 20, 1868, at the age of sixty-seven, and his widow June 18, 1871, in the sixty-seventh year of her age. Alexander, our subject, was married April 2, 1871, to Nancy, daughter of John M. and Betty (Patterson) Callahan, of West Salem Township. They settled on the paternal homestead, a portion of which was willed to him by his father, and the rest of which he purchased of the heirs. There have been two children born to them; Betty and Rebecca L. Our subject was educated in the common schools. He has been extensively engaged in buying and selling stock in connection with farming. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the United Workmen.

CHRISTIAN STOLL, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born March 6, 1840, in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, and is a son of Jacob and Christina (Beard) Stoll. Our subject was reared and educated in Germany. He was married May 10, 1863, to Christina Roof. They immigrated to America in 1865, and located in Delaware Township, where he worked as a laborer for eight years. He then purchased a farm of Eli George, in Hempfield Township, where they lived five years, when he purchased the Joseph McKean farm, in Sugar Grove, where they still live. There have been five children born to them: Lewis, Elizabeth, wife of George Riley; Philip, Anna and Margaret. Politically our subject is a Democrat. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church.

JAMES WALKER, deceased, was one of the very earliest settlers of Mercer County. He was a native of Ireland, and about 1793 immigrated to Ligonier, Penn. In the fall of 1797 he settled in the forest half a mile west of Leech's Corners, in what is now Sugar Grove Township, purchasing the improvement of William Lindsey. He was accompanied by his wife and three sons, and April 27, 1798, a daughter, Martha, was born, who is said to have been the first white child born in that part of the county. His wife died in 1811, and soon afterward he married Catharine McFetridge, also a native of Ireland, of which union one daughter, Mary Ann, was born March 13, 1812. This daughter married Marvin Loomis in 1829, and he took charge of the Walker homestead, the parents making their home with Mr. Loomis until they died. Mr. Walker died February 20, 1834, and his widow January 10, 1849. All of their children are dead, the two daughters and two of the sons dying in this county, and one son in Minnesota. The Walker family were Whig and Republican in politics, and Methodists in religious belief. They were upright, industrious, respected citizens, and did their full share in developing the interests of Mercer County. When James Walker built his cabin in Sugar Grove Township the whole country was one vast, unbroken forest, and during his life-time he often illustrated the density of the forest by relating how he once got lost in the woods within twenty rods of his own cabin door.

SAMUEL YOUNG, farmer, post-office Kennard, was born August 23, 1824, near Greenville, Penn. His father, William Young, was born in Cumberland County in 1780, and came to Mercer County in 1801, soon afterward purchasing a farm near Greenville. On March 21, 1805, he was married to Ann, daughter of John and Jane (Irving) Williamson, and settled on his farm. He was drafted in the War of 1812, and supplied his place with a substitute. They had twelve children: Elizabeth, John, Ellen, Eliza, Sarah, James W., Lacy, Samuel, Nancy, Maria and two others who died in infancy. The survivors are Samuel, and Maria, wife of William Baker, of Otter Creek Township. William obtained his education in the common schools of Cumberland County, and politically he was a Democrat. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church. He died October 12, 1860, aged eighty years, and his widow died April 18, 1864. Samuel, our subject, was married June 5, 1851, to Emily, daughter of Thomas and Prudence (Gibbons) Leech, and settled on a farm of fifty acres in Hempfield Township, where they resided about four years, when they removed to the Thomas Leech homestead, in Sugar Grove Township, where he now resides and where Mr. and Mrs. Leech spent their declining years. Four children were born to Samuel and Emily Young: Lydia, who married Reuben Beil; Prudence, wife of J. C. Hare; Phoebe, wife of J. C. McMichael, and Endora. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and politically is a Democrat. His wife, who died January 5, 1874, was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HEMPFIELD TOWNSHIP.

HENRY ALDENDERFER, farmer and carpenter, post-office Greenville, was born May 20, 1844, on the farm where he now resides. His parents, Benjamin and Sarah (Heckman) Aldenderfer, were natives of Lehigh County, Penn., and came to this county with their respective parents about the year 1830, George Aldenderfer being the father of the former and Conrad Heckman the father of the latter. Benjamin and Sarah had the following children: James, deceased; Henry, Samuel, George, Reuben and Mary. The eldest of these children was in the service of his country, in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died in a hospital with typhoid fever. The father died in 1854, and the mother married James Hecker, whose sketch appears elsewhere. The parents were Lutherans. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and at the age of twenty learned the carpenter's trade with his uncle, Jacob Aldenderfer, who resided where the late James Hecker lived. Our subject has continued the carpenter business, and also follows slate roofing. He was married, in 1868, to Lucinda Kosier, by whom he has one son, Anson, who attends to the farm. He is a member of the Carpenter and Joiners' Lodge No. 398, of Greenville, is a Republican, and he and wife belong to the Old Salem Presbyterian Church, of which he is a trustee.

COL. ANDREW CHRISTY, deceased, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., December 22, 1775. He was a son of John Christy, a native of Ireland, who immigrated to the colony of Pennsylvania prior to the Revolutionary War, and with that love of freedom inherent in the Irish race served in that struggle for liberty as a scout on the frontier. Andrew grew to maturity in his native county, and in the fall of 1796 joined a party of land prospectors, among whom were the Loutzenhisers, Klingensmiths and Kecks, and visited the country now embraced in Mercer County. He selected land in what is now Hempfield Township, began an improvement, and then returned to Westmoreland County. The following spring, 1797, accompanied by his father, brothers John and Samuel, and two sisters, he again made the trip to Mercer County, and settled permanently on his land. The balance of the family located about one mile south of the site of Greenville, where his father died, on the farm now known as the Thomas Callen place, in Hempfield Township. Soon after coming, the father, John Christy, was appointed justice of the peace for this portion of Allegheny County, and was no doubt one of the first pioneers to fill that office in what is now Mercer County. Andrew built a cabin on his land, and devoted his energies to clearing away the forest then covering the soil. In May, 1803, he was married, by Rev. Samuel Tait, to Miss Sarah Williamson, a native of Centre County, Penn., who bore him a family of fifteen children, nine sons and six daughters, of whom six sons and five daughters grew to maturity: Margaret, James W., Samuel L., John G., Eliza J., Andrew J., Susan, William W., Nancy A., Oliver B. and Isabel. All of these are dead except James W., of Greenville; Nancy A., wife of Samuel Long, and Isabel, widow of John K. Sheakley, both residents of Iowa. Andrew Christy and wife were Presbyterians, and lived and died on the old homestead, the latter April 16, 1856, aged seventy-three years, and her husband March 27, 1865, in the ninetyeth year of his age. During the War of 1812, when Erie was threatened by the British, Lieut. Col. Christy marched at the head of his regiment of Pennsylvania Militia, largely composed of the pioneers of Mercer County, to assist in repelling British invasion. He was also brigade inspector of the Mercer District five years, and was one of the best known men in this part of the State. In early life he was a warm political adherent of Andrew Jackson, but subsequently became a Whig and then a Republican. Col. Christy was elected sheriff of Mercer County in 1827, and served one term. Coming to the county among the very first settlers, he lived to see its lands converted from a wilderness into a garden of agricultural prosperity, and did his full share toward accomplishing this result. Like many of the pioneers he was very fond of hunting, and was never more happy than when following the chase. He died full of years and honor, and possessed of a comfortable competence, the result of his own unaided efforts.

JACOB BAER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born May 1, 1841, in Mercer County, to Daniel and Elizabeth (Snyder) Baer, natives of Pennsylvania. The parents were married in this county, and their children were Jacob, David, Levi, James, Sarah, Mary, Hettie, Caroline, Kate and Melinda. The father was a tailor by trade, began for himself with $12, and at his death was worth $40,000. Our subject was educated in the common English schools, and was brought up at farm labor. He was married to Anna Aldenderfer, by whom he has had six children: George, Lila, John, Harvey, Mary and Lizzie. He and wife are members of the German Reformed Church. Mr. Baer is the owner of a fine farm, and is one of the prosperous farmers of the county. Joseph Aldenderfer, the father of Mrs. Baer, was born October 7, 1816, in Berks County, Penn. His parents, George and Kate (Mowry) Aldenderfer, were natives of Lehigh County, came to this county in 1834, and settled in a log cabin in the woods. George was a gunsmith, and made axes, chisels, sickles and other necessary articles. He died in 1868, and his wife died in 1837. They had seven children: George, Jacob, Henry, Polly, Joseph, Benjamin and John. George was married again, to Miss Elizabeth Shaffer. The parents were Lutherans, and the father helped to build the church edifice where they worshiped, and was an elder in the same. Joseph was educated in the log school-house, and began learning the trade of a gunsmith with his father at the age of sixteen years. He has followed that business the greater part of his active life. He was married in 1841 to Sarah Moyer, by whom he had six children: George, lives in Wichita, Kas., and is engaged in the mercantile business; Louesia, married John Hawes, and has two sons, Anderson J. and James H.;

Elizabeth, married Rev. William Busch, and Anna B. The other two are dead. Mr. Aldenderfer started out in the world a very poor man, and by hard labor, strict economy and frugal dealing accumulated a large fortune. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, to which his deceased wife belonged. In politics he is a Democrat.

GEORGE BEAVER, farmer and carpenter, was born April 2, 1847, on the farm where he now lives. His father, Peter Beaver, was a second cousin of Gov. James A. Beaver, and came to this county about 1828. He married Julia A. Stenger, who bore him five children: William, a physician in Colby, Kas.; Reuben, a Presbyterian preacher, died in 1884; Alice, married Frank Huber; Drucilla, married William Reichard, and George. The father's first wife was a Miss Wasser, by whom he had five children: Valentine, Edwin, Maria, Polly, Eliza. The parents of our subject were members of the German Reformed Church, and he was a Democrat. George Beaver was educated in the common schools, and began to learn his trade in 1878, with John Koser, and has followed it since. He was married in 1874 to Emma Koser, a daughter of John Koser, and has one child, Ralph Stuart. Mr. Beaver owns and lives on twenty acres of the old homestead. His wife was born in Mifflin County, and some of her brothers and sisters were classmates of Gov. Beaver. Her father married Sarah Shellenberger, who blessed him with seven children: Mary J., Sarah A., A. L., Lucinda, Levi, Melinda and Emma. Her parents came to Lawrence County in 1852, and the father died January 15, 1886. The mother resides in Hempfield Township with her daughter. Her brother, A. L. Koser, was in Company D, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and is a member of the G. A. R. Our subject and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church of Greenville, and he is a Republican. His brother William spent fifteen years in a drug store at Greenville, and then went west and studied medicine, practiced in Iowa and Nebraska for some time, and is now in Colby, Kas. Another brother, Reuben, was educated at the common schools, Mount Pleasant Academy, and took a theological course at Allegheny City.

D. T. BELTON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born April 6, 1832, in Philadelphia. His parents, Israel and Elizabeth (Pacy) Belton, were natives of England, and immigrated to Philadelphia about the year 1828. Four years later they settled in Columbiana County, Ohio, and subsequently moved to Stark County, the same State, where the father died in 1852, and his widow several years later. The children were Mary, Caroline, John, Samuel, Elizabeth, Nancy, Daniel and Joseph. The father had, by a prior marriage in England, two children, Israel and Eliza. Israel is a Disciple minister of South Bend, Ind. Joseph entered the war from an Indiana company, and died in camp. The parents were consistent members of the Baptist Church, and he was a Whig. Our subject received his education at the common schools and at Mount Union, Ohio. He was married in 1857 to Angeline Leet, a sister of Dr. Leet, of Greenville, whose sketch appears in this work. Two years after his marriage he left Stark County, Ohio, and settled in Otter Creek Township, this county, where they remained until 1871, when they settled on the farm they now occupy in Hempfield Township. They have had four children: William F., deceased, was educated at the Edinboro Normal School, taught several terms, including terms at West Middlesex and Sharon, married Elizabeth Conner, who died, and he again married, Clara Ames, and had one child, Jessie; Atlas L., married Lula, a daughter of Esquire Hofius, of Hickory Township; Mary, died August 11, 1886, at the age of twenty four, and Jesse C., engaged in the manufacture and sale of the Pollard Improved Patent Barrel Swing and Counter Support. He owns the exclusive right of this valuable patent. Mr. Belton is the possessor of a good farm in Otter Creek Township, is one of the worthy citizens of the county, is a stanch Republican, and he and his estimable wife are members of the Baptist Church of Greenville.

SIMEON BETTS, who died in 1888, was born March 6, 1830, in Crawford County, Penn., son of Abraham and Chloe Betts, the parents of thirteen children: Johnson, Erastus, Nancy, Elizabeth, Simeon, Lorinda, William, Peter, Mary, Orena, Abram, Theodore and Leonard. The parents reside in Minnesota. Our subject received a common-school education, and was employed on a farm during his boyhood days. He was engaged in boating on the canal for sixteen years. In 1865 he turned his entire attention to farming, and was very successful. On his farm of forty acres he averaged 150 bushels of wheat, 300 to 600 of corn, 150 to 600 of potatoes, 100 of oats, other vegetables in proportion, and from sixteen to twenty-four tons of hay. He was married to Elizabeth Hill in 1848. She was born in 1827, and had one infant, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Betts reared Charles Betts, who married Elizabeth Roseberry, a daughter of Jasper and Isabella (Callahan) Roseberry, and the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, John, George, Martha, Zella, Henry, Trixy and Isabella. Charles Betts is a carpenter on the P. S. & L. E. R. R., and is a Republican. Richard Hill, the father of Mrs. Simeon Betts, was born in Ireland in 1794, served seven years at the printer's trade in England, and also learned the book-binding business. He was employed as a printer for three years in the king's office. He came to Mercer County at an early day, worked in the Western Press office in Mercer, later at Warren, Penn., and Ellicottville, N. Y. He was the first printer to work in Greenville, a mention of which appears in the sketch of the newspapers of the place. He was married about the year 1825 to Jane Hill, who blessed him with three children: Allen, infant, deceased, and Elizabeth. He died in 1841, and his widow died June 7, 1876. He was once identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, but at the time of his death was a member of the United Presbyterian organization.

T. W. BROWN, deceased, was born December 6, 1822, in Centre County, Penn., son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Hayes) Brown, natives of Northumberland and Northampton Counties, Penn., respectively. Elizabeth was born July 21, 1788, and removed with her parents, Robert and Mary Hayes, to Northumberland County in 1790. She married Thomas Brown in 1814, and lived in Centre County until 1832, when they removed to Venango County, Penn., and engaged in farming, and where he died in 1864. In 1865 Mrs. Elizabeth Brown came to the home of her son, T. W., and one year later went to Cochran, Crawford County, where she lived with her daughter, Amanda, till her death, January 24, 1884. She retained her memory to the last, although she lost her eyesight seven years before her decease. Her children were William, Robert, John, Joseph, Elizabeth, Jane, Sarah, Amanda, T. W. and an infant. Thomas and Elizabeth Brown were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated principally in the common schools of Venango County, learned the trade of a carpenter, and followed house-building for many years. He was married December 16, 1852, to Sarah J. McCalmont, born July 14, 1831, in Venango County, Penn., daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Linn) McCalmont, natives of Centre and Union Counties, Penn., respectively. Joseph McCalmont came to Venango County with his parents, John and Elizabeth (Conrad) McCalmont, when a boy, and died April 22, 1874. His widow died February 7, 1873, having been the mother of the following: Emily, Jemima, Sarah J., Fleming, Murray, John L. and Elizabeth, all living except Jemima. The McCalmonts were Presbyterians. T. W. Brown, when married, settled in Conneautville, Crawford Co., Penn., where he followed carpentering. He bought a farm of sixty acres in Hempfield Township, this county, in 1865, where he at once settled, and died June 27, 1886. He has two sons: George H., who married Alma Davis, of Cleveland, Ohio, where he engaged in the clothing business, and Charles M., at home. The Advance-Argus said in a notice of his death, that "Mr. Brown, by a life-long course of honorable dealing, had gained the confidence of all who knew him, as was attested by the regret expressed on all sides when the news of his death came." He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, to which organization his widow belongs.

W. E. DAVIDSON, farmer, was born May 9, 1845, in Mahoning County, Ohio. His parents came to Mercer County in 1865, with their children: Ramsey, engaged in the lightning-rod business in Pittsburgh; Carmillus, employed in an implement house of Pittsburgh; Frances, married D. D. Linn, and lives in Sugar Grove Township, and W. E., who is the second son. The family moved from Ohio to Venango County in 1850, where the father made $16,000. He retired to Greenville in 1875, where he and his consort enjoy the fruits of their early labors. They are members of the United Presbyterian Church of that place. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and has devoted his life to rural pursuits. He was married in 1869 to Rhoda, a daughter of David Linn, whose sketch appears elsewhere. She was born October 6, 1851, in this county. Mr. Davidson remained on the old homestead of his father until 1876, when they purchased a part of the old Beaver farm, in Hempfield Township, where they have remained since, with the exception of nearly two years, when they lived in Greenville. He and his wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville, while the daughter, Della M., belongs to the Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican.

ALEXANDER DUMARS, an Irish school-master, was born in the County Tyrone, Ireland, December 3, 1769, and immigrated to America in 1793, where he married Jane Gilliland, a native of County Donegal, Ireland, in 1795. At the time of marriage both resided in Westmoreland County, Penn., whence they removed to a tract of land east of Greenville, Penn., in what is now Hempfield Township, in the spring of 1800. After coming here he taught school in the winter and the balance of the year engaged in farm labor. About the year 1810 Gov. Snyder appointed him a justice of the peace, which office he held until the adoption of the constitution of 1838. In the War of 1812 he went to Erie, but being near-sighted he was not accepted. The sword he carried is yet in the possession of his grandson, A. D. Gillespie, of Greenville. Seven children were born to Alexander and Jane Dumars: Nancy M., born August 1, 1796; Jane, August 3, 1798; Hannah (in Mercer County), June 15, 1800; Susannah, December 16, 1802; Rebecca L., November 22, 1804; Samuel S., March 9, 1807, and David G., October 8, 1808. Nancy married Alexander Donnell; Jane married John Bean; Hannah married David Gillespie; Susannah married Samuel Lowry, and Rebecca became the wife of Robert Roberts. All of the children lived to have families, but are now dead. Of their descendants residing in the county, there are A. D. Gillespie and sister, Mrs. Sarah J. Turner, Alexander D. Roberts and Mrs. Sarah Nelson, while several of Mrs. Lowry's children reside near Sandy Lake. His wife died in 1811, and her husband survived her until May 25, 1854, and both are buried in the old United Presbyterian Cemetery in Greenville. Mr.

Dumars was one of the organizers of the Seceder Church of Greenville, and a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was a man of strong convictions, of firm opinions and good judgment; hospitable and kind to friends, he never tried to conceal his animosity from his enemies. His defective sight was a great drawback to him all his life, yet by his habits of economy and sound judgment he acquired a nice fortune. At the time of his death he owned about 500 acres of land and money securities, amounting in all to at least $40,000.

SAMUEL FRITZ, JR., farmer, post-office Greenville, was born November 30, 1859, on the farm where he now lives. His father, Samuel, was born August 26, 1822, in Lancaster County, Penn., son of John and Polly Fritz, natives of the same county, and the parents of twelve children, ten of whom grew up: Elizabeth, Daniel, William, Samuel, Susannah, Mary A., Sarah, Jacob, John and Isaac. Samuel, Sr., was educated in the common schools and brought up on a farm. He began for himself by hiring out. He was married in 1842 to Maria Bouch, born January 10, 1817, in Lancaster County, Penn., to Ephraim and Elizabeth (Kiskel) Bouch, the parents of ten children: Elias, Maria, Susannah, Rebecca, Aaron, Elizabeth, Levi (deceased), Leah (deceased), Urias and Catharine. Mr. and Mrs. Fritz have had seven children: Salinda (deceased), Ephraim, Susannah, Albert, Urias, Elizabeth and Samuel. The family came to this county in 1856, and have been residents of Hempfield Township since. Samuel, our subject, received a good common-school education, and was married in 1880 to Mary E. Benninghoff, by whom he has four children: Stella, Cora, Delos and Winnie. He is a Democrat, and has been township auditor for several terms, and he is a Lutheran, while his wife belongs to the United Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM GIBSON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born June 15, 1834, in Jefferson Township, to James and Mary (Stewart) Gibson, natives, the father of Lawrence County and the mother of Hickory Township, this county. The parents settled in Jefferson Township on a farm, where the mother died in 1839. They had three children: William, Stewart and an infant. The father afterward married Mary Sample, by whom he had five children, who survive: Alfred, Almira, Jane, Sadie, Eve. He died June 15, 1884, and was buried at Unity Church. With his first wife he was a member of the Seceder Church, but with his last wife became a Presbyterian. Our subject was educated at the common schools, and began for himself when he was nineteen years old, working for $9 a month. He then helped his father for two years, and in 1856 went to Iowa and worked on a farm. Finally, in 1861, he located in Venango County and worked in the oil business one year, afterward working for his uncle, Vance Stewart, near Greenville. In 1864 he was married to Margaret McMillen, born January 22, 1834, in what is now Hempfield Township, to Alex. and Margaret (Thompson) McMillen, the parents of two children: Wilson and Margaret. The father married for his second wife Elizabeth Blair, by whom he had: Nancy, married John Reznor; Jennie; William, belonged to Company K, Fifty-third Regiment, and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness; Henry, died when four years old; Thomas. The father died in 1886; was a member of the Greenville United Presbyterian Church, and a Republican. His last wife still survives. In 1873 our subject settled on his present farm of seventy-five acres, known as the McFetridge farm. He has one son, Delos W., who married Melinda Hittle, daughter of George Hittle, and has two children: Carrie and Sadie. His wife is a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican. He operated the old mill which McFetridge built on this place at an early date.

JACOB HECKER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born March 19, 1850, in Hempfield Township. His father, James Hecker, was born September 13, 1812, in Northampton County, Penn., to Jacob and Mary Hecker. James was the only son, and was educated in a German school. He married Eliza Moyer, daughter of Casper Moyer, of Lehigh County, and had by her Dianna, John, Jacob, Reuben, Henry and George. He was married a second time, the last wife being Sarah, the widow of Benjamin Aldenderfer, and daughter of Conrad Heckman. James came to this county in 1834. Our subject was educated in the common schools, the select school at Jamestown and the Greenville schools. He began teaching at the age of seventeen years, and taught twelve terms, all in Mercer County, except two in St. Clair County, Ill. He was married in St. Clair County, Ill., in 1877, to Augusta Pfadler, only daughter of Philip and Maggie Pfadler, and soon after settled on the farm where he now lives. He has in all seventy-six acres of good land, a part of which he inherited. His two children died in infancy. He is a Republican, and takes a deep interest in the welfare of that organization. He and wife are members of the German Reformed Church, to which his father and present wife belong. Mr. Hecker is one of the representative farmers of Hempfield Township. James Hecker, who has been a respected citizen of Hempfield Township, died at his late residence, September 8, 1888, at the age of seventy-five years, eleven months and twenty-six days.

PETER HITTLÉ, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born July 20, 1826, in Berks County, Penn. His parents, George and Mary (Wetzel) Hittle, were natives of Lehigh County, Penn., where they were married, and moved soon after to Berks County, from where they came to this county in 1833 by teams. They finally bought 100 acres, and settled in a log cabin on the farm where our subject now lives. The father died here about 1849, and his widow died in 1873; they had twelve children: Catharine, married Peter Wageman; Anna, married James Reichard; George; Caroline, married Jonathan Moyer; Elmira, married Joseph Stoyer; Peter, William, John; the others died small. The parents were Lutherans, and helped to build the little church near by. Peter Hittle received a common-school education. Aside from farming, he worked at shoemaking for over thirty years. He also worked at stone masonry. He was married in 1855 to Mary Haas, a daughter of John and Sarah Haas, the parents of Charles, Eliza, John, Stephen, Thomas, Henry, Mary, Sarah and Daniel. Her parents are dead, and were Lutherans. Mr. Hittle settled at marriage on his present farm, which is now in a state of good improvement. He is the possessor of over 200 acres of arable land, of which he is the artificer. Near his residence there are six springs, all on less than one acre. He has dealt considerable in horses. His union blessed him with twelve children: Edwin, Eliza, Elias, Sarah, Daniel, Ellen, George, John, Reuben, Louesa, Charles and James M. Mr. Hittle has served as school director twelve years, treasurer of that board for three years, auditor three years, assessor and assistant assessor each three terms, and treasurer of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company for ten years. His property is worth about $20,000, including twelve acres of a sandstone quarry. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and is a Democrat.

BYRON S. HULL, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born August 3, 1843; is one of ten children born to Hiram and Lucinda Hull. He was married April 29, 1879, to Carrie, daughter of Robert Fruit, and has one child, Jennie F., a graduate of the Greenville High-school in the class of "'88," and is now a student of the State Normal School at Edinboro, Erie Co., Penn. Mr. Hull's fine farm of 116 acres is situated one and a half miles east of the Greenville Borough line, and is somewhat noted on account of Greenville's magnificent water works being located on it. Over-brook farm is well named, as the two reservoirs form two lovely little lakes or brooks just below the residence. Mr. Hull is a successful farmer, a strong Republican, and a good citizen.

BENJAMIN KAMERER, deceased, was born July 31, 1831, on the farm where he died in the fall of 1888, to Samuel and Elizabeth (Lininger) Kamerer, natives, the father of Westmoreland County and the mother of Maryland. The father came to this county in 1812, and with his brother Jacob bought land. The mother came to the county with her parents, and when married settled with her husband in a log cabin in the wilderness. She died in 1840, after having blessed her consort with ten children: David, died in Delaware Township; Esther, married Frank Cooper; Elizabeth, lives on the homestead; Mary, married Reuben Bortz; Joseph, Leah, Benjamin and John. The father died December 28, 1863. He held some small offices, and he and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church of Good Hope. He was a friend of William S. Garvin, and took the Western Press for many years. Our subject was educated in the log cabin schools, and brought up on a farm. He began for himself when twenty-one years old, with but little means. He inherited a portion of the old homestead and bought the balance. He was married in 1862 to Elizabeth House, daughter of Henry House. He took his bride to a log cabin, and there remained until he constructed the present fine residence. They had three children: Clara E., Loretta and Laura (twins). The latter is the wife of Lon E. Roberts, grocer, of Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. Kamerer was assessor, with his wife was a member of Good Hope Lutheran Church, and held office in the same, and was a Republican, although the first newspaper he ever read was the Western Press of Mercer.

JOSEPH KAMERER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born January 30, 1826, on the farm where Benjamin Kamerer died. He was educated in the common schools, and learned the shoemaker's trade with Reuben Bortz, at Leech's Corners. He followed that business about ten years, and got his start that way. The first land that he owned was a gift from his father. He was married, in 1853, to Miss Levina Dieffenderfer, daughter of Solomon and Nancy Dieffenderfer, and settled on his farm of 125 acres in Pymatuning Township, which he now rents, having moved to where he now lives in 1874. He has here thirteen acres and building, worth $3,000, which are the fruits of his own industry. He has three children: Mary A., at home; Benjamin F. and Charles M., twins, the former dead, and the latter, married to Anna Vigrass, lives at Hilliard, Butler Co., Penn., and is a conductor on the S. & A. R. R. Our subject has been supervisor of roads, and is a Republican. He is an elder in the Greenville Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM LAIRD, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born January 1, 1825, near the site of the old Greenville fair grounds. His father, Alexander, was a native of Ireland, and immigrated to America when seven years old, with his parents, and settled in Chester County, Penn. When twenty-one Alexander came to the forests of Mercer County. His wife, Jane Donnell, came from Ireland to America in 1812, in company with her sister, Isabella, and brother, John. Her parents came here about the year 1817, and are buried in the old Salem grave-yard. The parents of our subject were married in this county, and settled in what is now Hempfield Township, and died on the farm where our subject resides; he, December 1, 1880, and she, October 11, 1875. They had the following children: William, Susan, married Henry Melvin; John, Rebecca J., married John Stewart. The mother was married prior to her union with Mr. Laird to John Youngblood, and has one son, Isaac. William Laird was educated in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm. He was married, in 1851, to Jane Whittick, who died in October, 1853, and he was again married, in 1860, to Lizzie Oakes. She was born December 15, 1833, in Staffordshire, England, to Samuel and Hannah (Bolton) Oakes. Her parents settled in Greenville in 1850. The father soon after went to farming, and died August 2, 1884, and was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Her parents had the following children: Robert, Lizzie, Isaac (deceased), Rachel, Leah, Emma, Rhoda, Eliza, Sarah and Samuel. Mr. Laird owns seventy-five acres where he now lives, well improved. He and wife reared Isaac A. Youngblood from the age of five years. Mr. and Mrs. Laird are members of the Salem Presbyterian Church, of which he is a trustee. He is a Democrat, and one of the substantial farmers of Hempfield Township.

JOHN LOVE, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born November 11, 1816, in Mercer County, Penn., to James and Anna (Gault) Love, natives of Fayette County, Penn., where they were married. They came to this county about 1800, and located in a log cabin in what is now Lackawannock Township. In partnership with his brother-in-law, James Gault, he bought a tract of 300 acres. Mr. Gault died here, his wife, Margaret Chain, having blessed him with the following children: Polly, William C., Matthew, Margaret, John, Sarah, Nancy, Benjamin, Elizabeth and Rufina. James Love, who was born November 19, 1777, died in 1856, and his wife died the same month. Their children were: Mary, born September 14, 1806, married William Hutchison; Hugh, born October 26, 1807; Matthew, born June 28, 1809; Margaret, born March 11, 1811; James, born February 3, 1813; Agnes, born September 15, 1814; John, born November 11, 1816; Jane, born October 4, 1818; Robert, born September 7, 1820; Betsey, born September 13, 1822; Benjamin, born February 13, 1825; Sarah, born March 16, 1828; Lovina, born April 1, 1830. The parents were Presbyterians. Our subject was educated in the schools of his native township. He learned and followed the tannery business for many years. He was married in 1840 to Margaret J. Carmichael, born December 17, 1817, in Hickory Township, to Thomas and Mary (Pollock) Carmichael, natives, the former of America and the latter of Ireland. They settled in Mercer County about 1798. Their children were John, Anna, Thomas, James, William, Mary, Daniel and Margaret. The mother died in 1814, and the father was afterward married to Margaret Bean, this union resulting in one son, Alexander. Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael were Presbyterians, in which church he was an elder. He died in 1835. John Love farmed in Lackawannock Township until 1869, when he bought seventy-five acres where he now lives. His union has given him six children: Myra, Mary; Hugh C., deceased; Lizzie, died November 18, 1863; Benjamin, died July 13, 1884; Zettie, died November 21, 1863. In 1869 Emma, infant daughter of John Carmichael, of Hartford, Ohio, was taken into the family, and still resides with them. Mr. Love enlisted in Company B, One Hundredth Regiment, served nearly one year and was injured while hauling timbers. He was elected a justice of the peace, but did not take out a commission. He is a Republican, a member of the G. A. R., and with his wife belongs to the Presbyterian Church, in which he has been elder for several years.

WILLIAM MCCAFFERTY, deceased, was born March 22, 1811, in Butler County, Penn. His father, Charles McCafferty, immigrated to America in 1794, from the parish of Raphoe, County Donegal, Ireland, and settled in Fairview, Butler Co., Penn. The deceased was married April 22, 1838, to Maria Johnston, born December 6, 1812, in Butler County, Penn. Her parents, James and Nancy (Best) Johnston, had the following children: Mary, Eliza, Jane, Maria, James, John and Robert. Mr. and Mrs. McCafferty settled for a short time in Pittsburgh after their marriage, where he engaged in the cabinet-making business. They remained there but a short time, and removed to Fairview, Butler County, where he continued his trade. They subsequently engaged in the hotel business in the latter named place for nineteen years. After a period of farming in Butler County, and a residence in Westmoreland County, he sold and bought 240 acres of land in Hempfield Township, on which he put up a residence costing about $15,000. He was the father of fifteen children, five of whom are living. A friend says the following in the Advance-Argus, June 17, 1880: "More or less accustomed to hard work from his youth, he was no idler, and the handsome fortune he amassed was ample proof of his industry, enterprise and business tact. In his dealings with his fellow-man he was scrupulously honest, conscientiously fulfilling his promises, and thus might one at any time place the most implicit confidence in his word. Of an even temper, genial and sociable, he won golden opinions from all with whom he became acquainted, and great will certainly be the regret of his host of friends when they learn that he is no longer in the flesh. With an ear ever willing to listen to the appeal of the needy and destitute, and a hand ever ready to assist them, his generosity was unbounded, and of that laudable kind about which there was no loud talk or boasting. As an instance of his beneficence, attention need not be called to his recent donation of $1,000 to the Catholic Church in Murrinsville, and also to a donation lately given to St. Michael's in this place. But, lest the reader grow weary of further eulogy of the deceased, let us close this poor tribute to his memory by adding that the many good qualities which William McCafferty possessed, and which shed such a beautiful luster on his life, will long be remembered by the many to whom he had endeared himself. To mourn his departure out of this world, he leaves a wife and five children, for whom he always entertained the greatest love and affection. To them, in this the dark hour of their affliction, is tendered the sympathy of the entire community, with the assurance that their loss, immeasurably great though it be, is his eternal gain. The obsequies were performed on Sunday, June 13, in St. Alphonsus Church, Murrinsville, Butler Co., Penn. His remains were conveyed thither by special train; and there, in the cemetery attached to the aforesaid church, buried beside all that is mortal of several loved children, lies the body of William McCafferty, awaiting the resurrection. May he rest in peace." His death occurred June 11, 1880, at 7 o'clock in the morning, surrounded by his faithful and beloved wife and children, and fortified with the last sacred rites of the Catholic Church, which were administered to him by Rev. Bernard Donahue. His surviving consort is a consistent member of the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville.

JEREMIAH H. MORFORD, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born November 28, 1814, in Pymatuning Township, to Thomas and Susan (Hazen) Morford, natives, the father of New Jersey and of Scotch-Irish extraction, and the mother of Mercer County. Thomas Morford was a son of John and Mary (Cox) Morford, who immigrated to New Jersey from England prior to the Revolutionary War, and to Mercer County about 1803 or 1804, and were the parents of Richard, Rebecca, Thomas, Betsey, James, John, William and Joseph, all of whom are deceased. They were Baptists. Thomas Morford was thirteen years old when he came to this county, and received his education in a log cabin school-house. He married Susan Hazen, daughter of Jeremiah and Dorothy (Sears) Hazen, and settled with her in Pymatuning Township, where she died in 1866. He died in 1873, at the home of our subject, in West Salem Township. Their children were Jeremiah, Mary (married Josiah Brown) and Sears. Thomas was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, while Susan belonged to the Baptist organization. Our subject received a limited education in the log cabin schools, early learned the trade of a stone-mason, and was married June 20, 1839, to Lovina Brown, born March 6, 1818, in this county. Her parents, Andrew and Mary (McLaughlin) Brown, settled in West Salem Township about 1800, where he died in 1828 and she in 1873. Five children were born to them: Sarah, Nancy, Josiah, Lovina and Maria. Mrs. Brown was married after the death of her first husband to Richard Morford, and had by him four children: Emeline, Eliza, Andrew and Richard. Our subject settled with his wife in a log cabin in Salem Township, where they remained for twelve years. They then sold and bought land in West Salem, where they lived until 1881, when they moved to Greenville. They have had seven children: Thomas, Susan, Mary, Sarah, Vina, Reuben and Lina. Mr. Morford served as a justice of the peace in both West Salem and Hempfield Townships. He went out, at the time of Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, in Company C, and is a member of the G. A. R. He is a Republican in politics. His wife is a Baptist.

JACOB MOWRY, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born November 10, 1820, in Lehigh County, Penn., to John G. and Elizabeth Mowry, natives of the same county. The parents came to Mercer County in 1830, and settled in Greene Township, but later moved to Hempfield Township, where the father died in April, 1875, the mother having died about 1858. They had twelve children: George, John, Caroline, married Michael Grover, and died; Jesse, Polly, married Benjamin Fornick; Jonas, Lucy, wife of Benjamin Grimm; Elizabeth, married William Grimm; Jacob, Sarah, married Mandis Bortz; Mary, married Samuel Beil, and Benjamin S. The parents belonged to the Lutheran Church, and he was a Republican. Our subject was educated in the common schools, brought up on a farm, and was married in 1855 to Lucy A. Bigler, born July 16, 1835, in Mercer County, Penn., a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Haupt) Bigler, natives of Lehigh County, Penn., who came to Mercer County at an early day, and had eight children: Eli, Polly, Reuben, Jonas, Sarah, John, Lucy A. and Sullivan. The parents belonged to the Reformed Church, and he was a Democrat. Our subject, when married, settled on his present farm of 107 acres, well improved, which he bought from his father. They have had twelve children, eleven of whom are still living: Levi G., Benjamin, Edwin H., Milton, deceased; Jane, married George Hecker; Helen, married Elmer Dingman; Louesa, Elizabeth, Martin, Fred, Ida and Lillie. Levi married Jennie Trenon, and lives in Buffalo, where he is engaged in the carriage making business. He got up and had patented a pole for steamers, for the patent of which he has been offered $20,000. Benjamin married Aggie Reinhart, and lives in this county; Martin lives in Buffalo with his brother. Our subject and wife are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, and he is a Republican.

BENJAMIN S. MOWRY, post-office Greenville, was born August 30, 1855; was educated in the common schools, brought up on a farm, and was married May 27, 1880, to Aggie Reinhart, daughter of David and Sarah (Balic) Reinhart, residents of Delaware Township. He has been school director, constable, collector of taxes and inspector on election board. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church, of which he was trustee one term. He is a strong Republican, and a member of the county committee.

He is farming for his father, and has very fine horses. His children are Della and Anna.

LEVI A. MOYER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born July 22, 1855, son of Adam and Mary A. (Snyder) Moyer. He was married, March 14, 1878, to Eliza J. Hittle, daughter of Peter and Mary A. (Haas) Hittle, whose sketch appears in Hempfield Township. They settled on a farm of seventy-six acres in Pymatuning Township. They have four children: George F., Mary A., Laura L. and Alvin R. His education was obtained at the common schools in Hempfield Township. He sold his farm in the spring of 1888 and moved on a farm in Hempfield Township. It comprises 135 acres, which was purchased by his grandfather, Casper Moyer, and it has ever since remained in possession of sons of the family. He is a Democrat, and he and wife are members of the Reformed Church.

STEPHEN M. PAINE, deceased, was born January 11, 1814, in Rhode Island, to Tyler and Alice (Bassett) Paine, natives of the same State. The father was a tanner, and died in that State in 1830-31, and his widow died four years later. Their children were: Albert, Mary, Stephen, David, was a school teacher in Massachusetts, having charge of a department in the Worcester schools for sixteen years, and followed the foundry business awhile prior to his death; Aseneth, died young; William, Tyler, Addison; Lydia, a teacher a number of years, and is now a missionary in Salt Lake City. Tyler was a lieutenant of a Massachusetts company in the late Rebellion. The father of our subject was of Quaker stock. Stephen M. Paine was educated in the common schools and received instructions one term at an academy. Because of the early death of his father he was compelled to do for himself when quite young. He therefore applied himself at any kind of labor he could get to do. He worked awhile in Michigan, Ohio and Covington, Ky. He boated on the Johnstown and Pennsylvania Canal, and then came to Mercer County, taught a few terms of school and afterward took charge of a company of Irishmen, who were working on the canal. He and James Young built a small-sized canal boat and followed boating one season. He was married June 10, 1849, to Elvira McKean, born March 30, 1832, in what is now Otter Creek Township, to James and Eliza (Hazen) McKean, the parents of Elvira, Robert, Mary, Jane, Bethena and Isaac. Mr. Paine settled at marriage in what is now Otter Creek, and after a time he sold and resided for awhile in Salem Township, and in 1868 he bought his late homestead, in Hempfield Township, where he died in December, 1888. The following are the names of his children: Jane, born December 10, 1850, married November 6, 1883, Jacob Waggoner; she died February 13, 1887; Alice, born July 18, 1853, married October 8, 1870, to Charles Ludwig; Tyler, born February 28, 1856, is a teacher and farmer in Adair County, Mo.; Charlotte H., born June 26, 1859, and was married July 23, 1880, to A. G. McKean; Sarah B., born February 20, 1858; Addie B., born May 28, 1862, married Thomas Foley May 26, 1880; James U., born July 28, 1865, married April 5, 1885, to Alice Tanner, of Adair County, Mo.; he is engaged with his brother Tyler, and is carpentering a part of his time; Nora G., born May 9, 1868; Maude M., born February 14, 1872, and Stephen M., born May 24, 1874. Mr. Paine served as path-master, school director, constable and collector; was a Republican, and believed in the doctrines of the Quaker Church.

SIMON REIGELMAN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born February 8, 1844, in Berks County, Penn. His father, John Reigelman, was born February 19, 1819, in the same county, and was a son of Conrad and Magdalena Reigelman, the parents of six children: Polly, Solomon, Betsey, Benjamin,

John and Jonas. John Reigelman attended the German schools, and has always been a farmer. He was married March 6, 1847, to Teressa Hines, a native of Berks County, and by her he has had four children: Maria, married Samuel Moyer; Simon, Kasiah, Sarah A., married Daniel Mowry. John Reigelman settled in Mercer County in 1851, and has followed farming. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and a Democrat. Our subject was educated in the English schools and brought up at farm labor. He came to Mercer County in 1851 and settled in Hempfield Township. He was married in 1869 to Kate Bower, of Delaware Township. By her he has one child, Ida Jane, who received a good education at the Fredonia and Greenville schools. Mr. Reigelman picked up the trade of a blacksmith, which he follows in connection with the cultivation of his farm of 100 acres. He has held some of the small township offices, and he and wife are members of the Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

GEORGE J. REIMOLD, a retired farmer, post-office Greenville, was born June 4, 1814, in Germany; son of J. G. and Eva B. Reimold. The parents were members of the Reformed Church, and died in their native country. Our subject was educated in the German schools, baptized in his infancy, and joined the Reformed Church in 1829. He was married May 8, 1838, to Eva B. Derr, born May 12, 1818. They came to America in 1846, and settled in Mahoning County, Ohio. They brought with them $2,000, bought 100 acres of land at $16 per acre, and sold out in 1850, when they moved to Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., and bought 170 acres. He was a prosperous farmer, and kept adding to his farm until he had 400 acres. His wife died January 23, 1877, and in 1883 he sold all his land. Since then he has made his home with his eldest son, John G. P., a farmer and stock dealer. About this time he divided $29,000 among his eight children, who were Dorothea B., born April 14, 1839, married August 13, 1867, to Rev. J. H. Stepler; John G. P., born June 19, 1841, married March 26, 1867, to Eva E. Rummel; Christena E., born October 19, 1843, married May 28, 1863, to George Horning; Jacob, born May 29, 1847, married in 1874, to Sarah M. Tininger; George H., born October 12, 1849, married in 1881 to Ella J. Miles; Philip, born May 14, 1852, married June 9, 1881, to Mary M. Templeton, died April 25, 1888; Rosana T., born June 20, 1855, married September 23, 1875, to D. L. Nisbet, and August, born April 13, 1859, married September 20, 1888, to Jennie T. Hum. Our subject has had twenty seven grandchildren, five of whom have died. He was an elder in the church of his choice for many years, and has been executor of several estates. He is one of the most respected citizens of the county, and is a Democrat in politics.

SAMUEL RIDGEWAY, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born August 26, 1812, in Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., to John and Susannah (Titus) Ridgeway, natives, the father of New Jersey and of Quaker and German parentage, and the mother a native of Pennsylvania and of Irish extraction. John Ridgeway located in Venango County, in the year 1800, with his father, Nore. They built the first saw-mill in Venango County, along the "Broken Straw" stream. They subsequently went to Brownsville, Penn., and later Nore built a combined grist and saw-mill about two miles northeast of Franklin. John Ridgeway was married, near Titusville, to Susannah Titus, daughter of Peter Titus, whose son, Jonathan, was the founder of Titusville. Susannah came to Crawford County in 1799. John Ridgeway followed building flat and keel boats for many years. These boats were used on the Allegheny River. He and his wife had the following children: Samuel, Titus, Harriet, Susannah, Thomas S. and John. The father was a Whig and Republican. Samuel Ridgeway was educated in the Franklin schools, and learned the trade of a tanner, beginning at the age of eighteen years, at Franklin, with William Brown, with whom he continued two years, when his employer failed, and Mr. Ridgeway went into the rolling mills at Franklin, where he labored for ten years, and lost $1,500 through the dishonesty of his employers. He was then appointed street commissioner of Franklin for one year, after which he went to hauling goods from Franklin to Oil City, at which he made money. In one year he sold out, and in 1865 came to Greenville and bought sixty acres, which afterward became valuable property and is mostly owned by Thiel College. In 1876 he bought the J. W. Christy farm of 185 acres, in Hempfield Township, where he now resides and enjoys the fruits of his hard labors. He was married, in 1848, to Isabella Wilson, of Venango County, by whom he had nine children: John W.; Jane, married Robert Moats; Wilson; Susannah, deceased; Staunton S.; the others are dead. Mr. Ridgeway is a Republican, and one of the respected citizens of the community in which he lives.

JOSEPH ROBINSON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born August 10, 1824, in Cheshire, England, to William and Mary (Frith) Robinson, both of whom are dead. The father was a wealthy farmer, and, with his wife, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Neither of them ever came to America. Their children were: Thomas, Matthew, William, John; Mary, married George McGorgle, and is dead. Joseph was educated in the common schools of his native country, and learned the blacksmith trade, beginning at the age of twelve years. He was bound out for seven years, but after working four years left and went to Scotland, where he worked at his trade two years, and then, in 1844, came to Philadelphia and worked in a machine-shop one year, making spindles. In 1845 he came to Mercer County, traveling by rail, stage and canal. He started his first blacksmith shop at Greenville, and after running it for several years, in 1844 went to Wisconsin, where he worked in a carriage shop. In 1854 he went to California, mined a short time, and then resumed his trade. He returned to Mercer County in the fall of 1852, went back to California and worked at his trade about one year, returned to Mercer County again in 1864, went once more to California, and after a few months returned to Mercer County to stay. He was married in 1846 to Nancy Law, daughter of James Law, born November 19, 1829, in Mercer County, and they have ten children: James, grocer in Greenville; John, a farmer in Washington Territory; George, William, a farmer at home; Andrew, attending school at Edinboro, and has taught school; Emma, married A. D. Gillespie, Jr.; Mary, wife of George Allen, of Washington Territory; Josephine, married J. Melvin; Cora and Eva, at home. He is a Democrat, and has been supervisor. He owns 160 acres of land, and devotes much time to breeding improved draft horses, having brought the first heavy draft horse to Mercer County. His wife is a member of the United Presbyterian Church, and has one brother, Addison, who lives in the West. Her father and mother were Presbyterians, and he was a Democrat. Her father, James Law, and his four brothers, Thomas, Andrew, Wilson and William, came to Mercer County from County Tyrone, Ireland, with their parents, Richard and Ann (Hunter) Law, and settled on a farm in Jefferson Township, where the parents died. The children are also probably all dead. William went West, and has not been heard from for years.

ISAAC RUTTER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born June 3, 1828, in Dauphin County, Penn., to George and Susannah (Leopold) Rutter, natives of the same county. They came to this county in 1856, and the father died December 18, 1884, and the mother died June 9, 1886. They had the following children: Jacob, Daniel, Isaac, Henry, George, William, Elizabeth, Rachel, Sarah, Mollie and Maggie. The parents were members of the Lutheran Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools and taught three terms. He was a clerk for a period in Halifax, Dauphin County, and Greenville, Penn., and St. Louis, Mo. In 1854 he went to California via steamer and the Isthmus. He mined for nine years with poor success. He kept hotel for a period with J. N. Hudson at Marysville, Cal., and at Los Angeles, same State, with Henry Brubaker. He spent about sixteen years in the West, and soon after his return he made a trip to Kentucky, Kansas and Texas, and in the latter he, in partnership with his brother, Henry, and brother-in-law, Giles Walker, bought a herd of cattle, which they drove to Kansas and wintered them with a loss of 274 of the herd of 369. He came home and was married, in 1882, to Susan Moyer, and has three children: James C., Julia and Chauncey. He resides near Greenville, is a staunch Democrat, and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM SAUL, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born July 9, 1831, in Lehigh County, Penn., to Daniel and Polly (Reichard) Saul, natives of the same county. The parents came to this county in 1833. The father was a tailor, and followed that business after locating here. Greenville comprised only two houses when Mr. Saul began his labors. He made clothing for laborers on the canal, and in that way obtained the means to buy land, which afterward brought him a fortune. He died May 1, 1887, and his wife died August 10, 1887. Their children were: Henrietta, married Simon Kamerer; Aaron, Daniel, William M., Mary, married George Kremm; Nancy J., married Levi Kamerer; James A. and an infant. The father was once overseer of the poor, was a strong Abolitionist, a Whig and Republican, and with his wife belonged to the Reformed Church, in which he was an elder. Our subject was educated in the common schools, mostly in the log cabins, with its slab seats, punchoon floor and big fire-place. He began for himself by learning the tanner's trade, with Simon Kamerer, for whom he worked for fifteen years. He finally located near his residence, and continues the business. He began with no means, and by frugality, hard labor and economy he has become the possessor of a snug little fortune. He was married November 3, 1852, to Sarah Lane, born September 29, 1832, in the State of New Jersey, to Mathias and Susan (Linebarger) Lane, natives, the father of New Jersey and the mother of Lehigh County, Penn. Her parents came to this county in 1839, and settled in Hickory Township, where they died, he July 6, 1861, and she in 1855. They had the following children: William C., Frank J., both deceased; Mary M., married Samuel Fry; Sarah, Charles L., Peter and Fred H. Mr. and Mrs. Saul have two children: Simon A., married Emma Mowry, and has one son, George W.; Mary, married George Benninghoff. Our subject and wife belong to the Reformed Church of Greenville, and he is a Republican.

JAMES A. SAUL, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born March 28, 1841, in what is now Hempfield Township, son of Daniel and Polly (Reichard) Saul, natives of Pennsylvania, and of German extraction. They came to Mercer County about 1833, and settled on a farm in Hempfield Township. Daniel was a tailor by trade, and made clothing for laborers on the canal. He was worth about $30,000 at his death, which occurred in May, 1887, and his widow died August 10, 1887. They had eight children: Henrietta, Aaron, Daniel, William, Mary (married G. W. Kremm), Nancy J. (married Levi Kamerer), infant, dead, and James A. The parents were members of the Zion Reformed Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and brought up at farm labor. On reaching his majority he set out for himself. He was married September 10, 1863, to Susannah Beil, who died in 1870, leaving two children, Harry and Lottie. He was again married, in 1873, to Mrs. Melinda Hamlin, the widow of James E. Hamlin, died November 21, 1870. Mrs. Saul was born November 20, 1845, and had by her union with Mr. Hamlin two children: William H. and Lillie E. Her parents, Jonathan and Elizabeth (Groover) Mowry, had three children, of whom Mrs. Saul and Jonathan survive. Mr. Saul has by his last wife Fred. W., James E. and Edna G. He and his wife possess 154 acres of fine land, are members of the Zion Reformed Church of Greenville, in the construction of which edifice he was one of the building committee. In politics he is a Republican.

HENRY SNYDER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born December 25, 1835, in Lehigh County, Penn., son of George and Mary (Smith) Snyder, natives of Germany. The father came to this country by himself, worked for the money to bring his family, sent it to his wife, who brought their only son, Peter, and joined him in this country. She was forty-one weeks on the ocean. It was not until she arrived he learned that two of his three children, born to them in the old country, had died. They had seven children born to them in this country: Henry, George, Jacob, Mary, Joseph, Samuel and Catharine. After a short residence in Lehigh County they came to this county by team and on foot, bringing a small amount of household goods. They arrived among strangers with only 25 cents, and settled in a house owned by Alex. Dumars, of whom he rented five acres, for two years, at $25 and $30. He then moved into a house of Daniel Saul, and rented of him for one year. In partnership with his brother, Jacob, he bought twelve acres where Henry Snyder lives, where he settled until his death, in 1887. His widow survives, and makes her home with our subject, as per the request of him on his death-bed. He was a German scholar, wrote in German; was a member of the German Reformed Church, and was a Democrat. Henry Snyder was educated in the common English schools. He began for himself by hiring to Samuel Goodwin to labor for six and a half years in a combined saw and grist-mill. He saved $100 of the $120 he received the first year, $110 of the $140 the second, $130 of the $150 the third, and in the fourth, fifth and sixth years he saved $132, $165 and a colt, and $175, respectively. He then went to working on the Eastern Pennsylvania Railroad, helping to lay track. Later he hired to William Gibson, then of Jamestown, but now deceased, and drove a team, doing labor on the railroad for nearly one year. He worked in the foundry for Heath & Hamblin, at Greenville, for two years. The following two seasons he was a hod-carrier, and after three years more in the foundry he retired for two years on account of ill health. He then came to his farm and lived until 1883, when he moved to the old homestead. He was married July 5, 1863, to Louisa Blank, by whom he has two children, Charles and Hattie. He and family are members of the German Reformed Church of Greenville, to which he has belonged since fourteen years of age, and is a Democrat in politics.

EDWARD H. STENGER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born March 19, 1829, in Lehigh County, Penn. His parents, Philip and Mary M. (Greenermoyer) Stenger, were natives of Northampton County, and of German extraction. The family came to Mercer County in 1831, and settled on the farm now owned by George Beaver and W. E. Davidson. The father bought thirty acres where our subject lives, and here he died September 11, 1855. His widow died fourteen years later. They had eleven children, all of whom survived them: Susan, married Joseph Hecker, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Baker; Mary, married Benjamin Bush, and remained in Lehigh County until her death; John;

Rebecca, the widow of Aaron Blank; Catherine, died at her son-in-law's, J. E. Millhouse, in Greenville, in 1875; Lydia, married Adam Seiple; Julia, the widow of Peter Beaver; William, dead; Samuel H. and Edward H. The father was a Lutheran, and his wife was a Presbyterian. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was married January 25, 1856, to Mary J. Ford, born June 30, 1834, in Clinton County, Penn. Her father, Hiram, died in Centre County in 1838, leaving two children: Mary J. and D. H. Her mother, Barbara E. (Ream) Ford, came to Mercer County in 1853 with her second husband, John Durst, by whom she had six children: Frances, Peter A., Luther, Charles, Robert and Claude. Mrs. Durst died June 25, 1886, and Mr. Durst January 24, 1887. They were Methodists. The children of Mr. Stenger are Philip, Mollie E., married Charles Adamson; Joseph, George E., William H., now attending Allegheny College, where he expects to graduate; Vinnie G., Lottie M. and Allie. He has followed farming, buying and selling stock. He at one time sold beef in Greenville. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church at Salem, of which he has been trustee for fifteen years, and has collected and made all payments to the ministers. He has also been superintendent of the Sabbath-schools. He was secretary of the school board for twenty years, and has served the township as judge, inspector and auditor. In politics he is a liberal Democrat.

JAMES C. STEWART, deceased, was born September 12, 1834, in Hickory Township. His father, James Stewart, was a son of Vance and Mary (Sample) Stewart, who were married in Huntingdon County, Penn., and settled in Hickory Township, this county, and their children were James, Josiah, Vance, Robert, Samuel, Nancy, Mary, Elizabeth, Sallie and Julia. James Stewart was married in 1832 to Jane Thompson, born in 1812 in County Derry, Ireland, daughter of James and Jane (Courtney) Thompson. The parents of Jane came to America in 1813, and after a short residence in New Jersey they settled in Hickory Township, Mercer County, and were blessed with six children: John, Robert, Mary, Betsy, Jane and Sarah. James Stewart, Sr., died April 22, 1838, was a member of the United Presbyterian Church and the father of three children: James C., born September 13, 1834; Vance, born February 21, 1836, and John, born November 3, 1837. His widow, Mrs. Jane (Courtney) Stewart, survives. Our subject was married to Elizabeth H. Watt, a native of Mifflin County, Penn., born June 10, 1828. Her parents, Andrew and Eliza (Clark) Watt, had two children: Anna and Elizabeth. Her father's second wife was Sarah Rudy, by whom he had five children: Andrew C., Maggie, Hugh, Bessie and John. In 1865 the old Stewart homestead in Hickory Township was sold by the heirs, and James C. (our subject) located on a farm near New Hamburg, which his widow yet owns. Six years later they purchased a farm of thirty-eight acres in Hempfield Township, where he died April 14, 1888. His four children, Jennie T., Clara A., Warren W. and James C., are all at home. Mr. Stewart was a Republican, and served in all the township offices. Early in life he united with the United Presbyterian Church, and was always a consistent member. His widow is a member of the same church, and by his death she and the children sustained a great loss. The community feels heavily his taking away, and all with one accord sympathize with the family in the irreparable calamity.

THE STINSON FAMILY.—The ancestor of the Stinson family in this county was James Stinson, a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Westmoreland County, Penn., when about eighteen years of age. There he married Hannah Donaldson. In 1797-98 he visited the Shenango Valley as one of a party of twelve land prospectors. He selected a tract of land at "the Rocks," some two miles east of Greenville, in what is now Hempfield Township, and spent the first night under the shelter of a tree, near where he subsequently built his cabin. Eight children were reared by James and Hannah Stinson: Betsey, married King Caldwell; Polly, married John Bean; Jane, married Robert Martin; William, James, Samuel, Hannah, married Joseph Gibson, and Julia Ann. The parents died upon the old homestead, and none of their children are now living. James was born August 12, 1803, and on reaching manhood located on a part of the homestead. He was married January 19, 1826, to Amelda Bean, also a native of Mercer County, and a daughter of James and Mary Bean, who came here from Westmoreland County at an early day. She bore him the following children: John W., Mary A., wife of W. R. Baird, of Crawford County, Penn.; James, Alexander, Hannah, Harriet, married Alexander McCullough, of this county; Wilson B., Amelda, Alonzo, Eliza J., married Samuel C. Dickey, of Greenville; Melissa, Emma J., married W. A. Keck, of Greenville; I. D. and J. M. In 1867 Mr. Stinson removed to Greenville, and purchased an interest in the Keystone Mills. He was also interested in the Mathers Mill. Some four years prior to his death he retired from active business. His wife died March 9, 1871, and he survived her till November 13, 1879. Both had been Presbyterians for over half a century. Politically he was ever a staunch Republican, and an ardent supporter of the Government throughout the dark days of civil strife. Mr. Stinson was an active, enterprising man, possessed of a kind and honest heart, and was always recognized as a worthy citizen.

H. W. TROY, deceased, was born January 8, 1803, and his wife, Elizabeth Hendrickson, was born October 26, 1800. Their children were Mary A., born November 5, 1822, married William Burns; John, born March 4, 1824, died in Wisconsin; Gideon, born March 3, 1826, died in California; Martha, born February 11, 1828, married Fantly Muse, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Cyrus, born June 27, 1830, lives in Wisconsin; Sarah J., born June 24, 1832, died when young; Samuel S., born June 24, 1832, lives in Nashua, Iowa, is a doctor, and was a doctor in the army; Albert, born October 17, 1834, dead; Catharine, born August 27, 1836, married Samuel Ross, lives near Sheakleyville; Phoebe, born December 23, 1839, married Rev. William Clark, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Hiram, born April 19, 1842, dead; Sarah C., born February 6, 1845, died when young; McVay, born November 12, 1846, was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Troy died November 3, 1877, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Troy traveled for awhile after the death of his wife. He was married again in October, 1878, to Susie Wolford, born in Butler County, Penn. She is the daughter of Henry and Susie (Rolson) Wolford, natives of Butler County, and the parents of ten children, nine of whom are living: Mary E., married William Wadsworth; John; Maude, married Warren Lindsay; Henry T., an attorney at Davenport, Iowa, a graduate of the Edinboro Normal, Ithica, N. Y., and the law school at Ann Arbor; Sadie, single; Susie; Amy, married A. E. Pearson; G. W., owns and operates two mines in New Mexico; and Jennie, married G. S. Rodgers. Mr. Troy settled near Salem Church about the year 1838, and later in Deer Creek, where he followed farming. He finally settled where his widow resides, where he died November 15, 1887. He was buried in the Deer Creek Cemetery. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for over sixty years, and held all of the offices of the same. He was a man highly respected for his goodness of heart and uprightness in intercourse with his fellow men. He began in the world with only a willing heart and strong hands, but by economy, frugality and careful management accumulated a good share of this world's goods, and left his widow, who cared for him in his declining years, in moderately fair circumstances. In politics he was a Republican.

WILLIAM S. WASSER, farmer and stock dealer, post-office Greenville, was born September 1, 1846, on a part of the farm where he now lives, to Thomas and Eliza (Christman) Wasser, natives of Lehigh County, Penn. Tobias Wasser was the first to come to this county. His children were Eli, Thomas, Edward, Charles, Ellemina, Eliza and Catharine. He was an active member of the German Reformed Church, an officer in the same, and was a strong Republican. Thomas was married in this county, and his children were Catharine, William S., James O., Maria, Emma J., Eliza N., Charles, Ellen, Frank, Alice, Sadie and George. Thomas died in 1874, and his widow resides in Greenville. They were members of the German Reformed Church at Good Hope. Our subject was educated in the common schools, was brought up at farm labor until thirteen years of age, when he began clerking in the drug store of Allen Campbell, of Greenville, and later clerked for Charles McMichael and G. W. Achre, at Clarksville; Winternitz, at Greenville, Penn., and Rouseville, Venango County. He then clerked in a restaurant at Oil City, and subsequently bought one-half of the same and continued to operate it for two years. He was married December 31, 1868, to Harriet J. Dieffenderfer, by whom he had one child, Frank S. His wife died in 1871, and he was again married to Henrietta Goubeaud, and has by her one child, Willie W. He remained on his father's farm for some time after marriage, then engaged in the butcher business for two years, and settled permanently on his farm in 1871. In 1874 he began buying horses for his brother-in-law, Charles Goubeaud, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and so continues. He has been school director, is a Democrat, an officer of the Good Hope German Reformed Church, to which he and wife belong, and is also superintendent of the Sabbath-school of that organization.

DAVID YOUNG, farmer, was born April 26, 1816, in Huntingdon County, Penn. His parents, John and Sophia (Burns) Young, were natives of this State. They came to Mercer County in 1833, and settled in East Lackawannock Township. Here the mother died in 1845, and the father in 1850. Their children were Catharine, Elizabeth, Mary, Margaret, Susan, John, Jacob and David. Our subject was educated in the schools of his boyhood days, and learned carpentering, beginning the trade at the age of eighteen years. He followed this vocation for thirty-five years. He was married in 1836 to Mary Duncan, of Stark County, Ohio. Three children were born of this union: James, Nancy, and Elizabeth, who was married to William Stanton in 1871. His wife died, and he was again married, to Margaret Anderson, of Ohio, who has borne him three children: John, William and David C. Our subject came to this county in 1836, and for several years was engaged at his profession in Wilmington Township. He bought and settled on his present farm of 100 acres in 1866. His son, James D., served three years in Company D, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, was wounded at the battle of Cold Harbor, and married Miss Fannie Durst, of Pittsburgh, April 3, 1888. William A. is engaged in the feed business in Leadville, Colo.; married Miss Catharine Thompson April 22, 1885, who died June, 1887. David C., born 1864, married April 12, 1887, to Mary Anderson, of Lawrence County, is a horse-shoer by profession, having learned his trade under Isaac Peters, who had over forty years' experience. Nancy married William Shaw and resides in Mercer County. John A. is in the grocery business with James D., at 28 Fulton Street, Pittsburgh, having located there in the spring of 1888. Mr. Young was a strong Abolitionist and a Republican.

OTTER CREEK TOWNSHIP.

HENRY W. BEATTY, farmer, was born October 7, 1816, on the old homestead, and is a son of Francis Beatty, whose sketch appears elsewhere. He was educated in the common schools. He went to the Southern States in 1843, where he spent five years. He was married, November 22, 1849, to Nancy L., daughter of James and Mary (Philips) Limber, of Sandy Creek Township. They settled on a part of the old homestead, which he bought from his father, and where he now lives. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and his wife of the Baptist. His only child, Frank, was born September 15, 1850, and was reared and educated at home. He also attended the Normal schools at Edinboro and at Steubenville, Ohio. He spent three months in Akron, Ohio, learning telegraphy, afterward going to California, where he spent two years in the mines. He was married October 20, 1887, to DeEtte, daughter of James and Mary A. (Jackson) Campbell, of Jamestown, Penn.

WILLIAM C. EICH, farmer, was born February 2, 1823 in Oberstedten, near Frankfort on the Main, Germany. His parents, Frederick and Elizabeth (Steckel) Eich, were natives of Germany, where the father died in 1844, and the mother in 1849. They had fourteen children: Mary, married Peter Matley, and settled in West Salem Township; William C., Eva, married Alexander Wood, of Greenville; Stephen, lives in West Salem Township; Fred, is dead; Margaret, married John Ramb; Catharine, is a widow in New York State; Lottie, married Fred Brown, of Albany, N. Y.; Lewis, lives in Hartford, Ohio; Louesa, married Philip Knice; Elizabeth, married to Henry Fischer, New York City; Jane, married George Deitz. Our subject was educated in Germany, and learned to read English. He early learned the trade of a miller, and followed it both in his native country and this. He came to America in 1847, leaving his family behind, and engaged in the mill of Henry Miller, of Greenville, for a few months. After working awhile in the mill of Hildebrand, of the same city, he was employed in a coal bank. He was a miller for Robert Fruit for eleven years. In 1848 his wife, Justina Bender, joined him, and is the mother of thirteen children: William, is a miller at Conneaut Lake, Crawford County; Fred, deceased; Kate, Stephen, Lewis, Elizabeth, Mary, Theodore, Simon, Augustus, Lydia, Austin and Martin. In 1862 Mr. Eich settled in Otter Creek Township, and now owns a farm of 125 acres, the result of his own labor. He is distinctively a self-made man, and to illustrate his beginning we note that, when on his way to this country, he bought a ticket at Buffalo, for a passage on the canal to Cincinnati, and at Erie he sold a jacket to pay for his lodging, and at Greenville he sold his ticket for 25 cents, which was all the money he had when he arrived at Greenville. He is now worth about $7,000. He has been assistant assessor of Otter Creek Township and school director. He and wife are members of the Lutheran Church, and he is a Democrat.

J. C. HAGGERTY, farmer and school-teacher, post-office Greenville, was born October 9, 1856, in County Hastings, Ontario, Canada. His grandfather, James Haggerty, emigrated from Ireland to Canada in 1829, where he resided until his death. His wife, Nancy Morley, and seven children, accompanied him from his native country to where he settled. John, the father of our subject, was the fifth child, and was born June 22, 1822. He married his cousin, Elizabeth Haggerty, November 3, 1854, and came to this county in 1864. They resided in New Vernon Township one, Mill Creek five, Jackson five, and East Lackawannock Township four years, and finally purchased a farm of 105 acres, a portion of land once given to Mad Anthony Wayne for services rendered in war. Their children were George W., Mary, Adam, Marmaduke, Thomas M. and Anna M. James C., our subject, attended the common schools, and one term at the Edinboro Normal, also at the Sheakleyville Academy. He was married June 1, 1882, to Miss S. E. Corll, daughter of Jeremiah and Mary E. (Cramer) Corll, of Perry Township. James and his wife settled on the farm of M. E. Pauley, in Otter Creek Township, which they rented from him in the opening of 1883, and where they still live. During the winter months he is engaged in teaching school. They have one child, Lewis L. Our subject is a Democrat, and has been auditor and assessor three years each, and assistant assessor one year. His wife is a member of the Baptist Church.

JONAS KASNER, farmer, post-office Greenville, Penn., was born in August, 1813, in Columbia County, Penn.; is a son of Peter Kasner, who died when Jonas was but an infant. Jonas was reared by his widowed mother until he was twelve years of age, when he went out into the world to earn his own living and seek his own fortunes. In 1834 he went to Ohio and purchased a farm, and was soon afterward married to Abigail Smith, of Trumbull County, Ohio. There were eight children born to them: Henry, Reuben, Daniel, James M., Hattie, wife of Levi Moyer; Catherine, wife of William Beatie; Mary, wife of Samuel Royal, and Susan, wife of Charles Wiles. At their marriage they settled on their farm in Ohio, and remained six years, when they sold and purchased a farm in Delaware Township, Mercer County, where they lived until 1855, when they purchased a farm of 100 acres of Joseph Kitch, in Otter Creek Township, where they now reside. His wife died in 1882, at the age of sixty-one. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and politically a Republican.

SETH KOON, farmer, post-office Hadley, was born December 26, 1834, in Pymatuning Township, to Israel and Joannah (Johnson) Koon, natives, the father of Westmoreland County, Penn., and the mother of the same State. The family records were burned a few years ago, and it is not in the power of the subject of this sketch to learn where she was born. Israel Koon was brought up in Westmoreland County by William and Betsey Koon, his parents, and settled in Pymatuning Township about the year 1838, where he engaged in blacksmithing and farming. He bought 200 acres, put up a shop on said farm, made augers and did other smithing. He died about 1865. He was married in Mercer County to Joannah Johnson, daughter of John and Jane (Hayes) Johnson, who were early settlers of Hickory Township, and natives of New Jersey. David Hayes, the father of Jane, was a Revolutionary soldier. Israel had by his marriage seven children, five of whom grew to manhood: William J. (was a minister of the Wesleyan Church, and died in 1848), Johnson (died in infancy), Absalom (resides on the old home place), John (resides in Nebraska), Alva (deceased), Seth and Joseph S. (deceased). The widow of Mr. Koon died in 1863, and she and her husband were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, having united at or before the time of their marriage. He was a Whig and Republican, was strictly opposed to slavery, and was highly respected by his neighbors and acquaintances. His father, William, was taken prisoner in the War of 1812, and held as such for some time; and his father, Benjamin, was a soldier in the Revolutionary struggle, and made augers, scythes, and even swords for the American soldiers. At a time the British army came along, found him in bed sick, and made demonstrations to murder him, when his brave wife sprang forward with the remark 'that while they were killing him she would slay a few of them.' They finally destroyed his tools and left him unharmed. Our subject was educated in the common schools of Mercer County, and received some instructions by Prof. Scott at an academy at Clarks-ville. He taught one term of school, and has devoted the remainder of his life to farming, and has improved two farms. He inherited a part of the old homestead, improved it somewhat, and sold it to his brother, Absalom, and in 1864 he bought a farm of 100 acres in Otter Creek of Hon. J. C. Brown, a portion of the old farm known as the Harry West property. There he settled in 1866, and lived upon the same until 1888. He was married in 1856 to Florena Bower, daughter of Stephen Bower, and by her he had four children: Hannah J., William J., Flora B. and Emma (deceased). His wife died April 14, 1877, and he was again married, to Eliza Pearson, who died April 14, 1887. Mr. Koon has been school director. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which his deceased wives were attached. He is a member of the Grange lodge. He united with the Cadets of Temperance when a boy. In politics he is a Republican, and is the owner of a good farm and other personal property.

JAMES R. McMILLEN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born May 16, 1825, in the portion of Salem Township that is now in Hempfield Township. His father, William McMillen, was born in New Jersey, and came to this county from Fayette County, Penn., in 1800; subsequently returned to Fayette County, there married Nancy Parker, and brought her and his entire household goods on horseback, and settled for awhile near the present site of Jamestown. They finally located on land where the P. S. & L. E. Railroad crosses the Greenville and Mercer road in Hempfield Township. Here Mrs. McMillen died about the year 1816 or 1817, and was the mother of Mary, married Rev. William Smith; Alexander, Thomas and an infant. Mr. McMillen was again married, to Margaret McClimans, a native of Pennsylvania. He died in 1855, and his widow December 25, 1869. They had seven children: Nancy, William M. (deceased), Sarah, married David McKnight; James R., Hugh P., Thompson and Margaret (deceased). William McMillen was a prominent man, a Democrat, and with his wife belonged to the United Presbyterian Church. Our subject was educated in the common schools and was brought up on a farm. He was married, in 1848, to Eliza Errel, daughter of George and Jane Errel, and by her has eight children: William E., Margaret J., married David Wier; Chauncey L., Mary E., married William Metzler; Leander, James L., Reuben and Laura I. Mrs. McMillen died in 1870, and he was again married, to Anna Carver. He settled on his present farm of sixty acres in 1853, and has been successful. He has served as school director eleven years, and is a Republican and one of the enterprising citizens of Otter Creek Township. He and his wife belong to the Presbyterian Church.

EZEKIEL H. SANKEY, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in 1823 near New Castle, Penn., son of John R. and Cynthia (Espy) Sankey. Ezekiel, the grandfather of our subject, came to Mercer County in about 1800, and settled in that portion which has since been subdivided and is now in Lawrence County. He was an officer in the War of 1812, and soon after his return from the war died, comparatively a young man. He was married to Miss Jane Cubbison, who survived him many years, and died in the one hundredth year of her age. John R. settled near New Castle, where he and his wife, Cynthia, both died in the prime of life. To them were born seven children: Mary A., wife of R. R. King; Ezekiel H., John E.; Sarah J., deceased; one daughter scalded to death at the age of four or five years; Ruth; Rebecca, widow of S. McMillen. Politically John R. was a Democrat. He was postmaster at the Old Harbor on the canal for many years. Ezekiel H. was married in 1845 to Nancy Espy, of Crawford County, and they settled near Linesville, Crawford County, where they lived about sixteen years, when they purchased a farm in Otter Creek Township, and settled thereon. They were the parents of seven children: Nancy, wife of W. F. Braden, of Greenville; Cynthia, Mary A.; Sarah, wife of H. Bishop; Emma, deceased; George F.; James H., deceased. His wife died August 15, 1873. He was again married in 1875 to Bathenia, daughter of James and Eliza McKean. There have been two children born to them: Enoch F. and Eliza. Politically our subject is a Democrat.

CHARLES SNYDER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born June 30, 1826, in Lehigh County, Penn., to Jacob and Elizabeth (Keistler) Snyder, natives of Lehigh County. The parents came to Mercer County in 1836, and after one year's residence in what is now Otter Creek Township they removed to Delaware Township, and seven years later returned to Otter Creek, where the father died in 1846, and his widow died in 1870. They were the parents of thirteen children: Charles, deceased; Catharine, Sallie, Jacob, David, Betsey, Mary, Priscilla, Charles (2), John, Caroline, Lucy A. and Susan. The parents were members of the German Reformed Church, and the father a Democrat. Our subject was educated in a log cabin school-house. He was brought up at farm labor, and was married in 1859 to Emeline Miller, daughter of George Miller, of Jefferson Township. By her he had two children: Reuben S., married Hattie Fellnagle, and has two children, Irvy and Elmer; and Sarah E., Mrs. Morneweck. Mr. Snyder settled on his present farm in 1860. He possesses 124 acres of excellent land, all of which is the result of his own labors. He is a Democrat, and a member of the German Reformed Church.

HENRY WAGNER, farmer and carpenter, post-office Greenville, was born December 20, 1842, in Jefferson Township, this county. His father, Philip, was born in Lehigh County in 1805, where he was reared and married to Lucinda Reinhart. They came to Mercer County about 1828, and lived on the Richard Tunison farm, near Greenville, one year, when they moved on a forest farm in Jefferson Township, where, for some time, they occupied a hut built by the Indians. They remained on this farm about fifteen years, then went to Delaware Township and remained until his death. To them were born fifteen children, nine of whom are still living: Moses (of Jeffersonville Township), Adam (Delaware Township), Aaron (of Greenville), Henry, Elizabeth (wife of J. Reimold), Catharine (wife of B. Reimold), Daniel, William, Savina (wife of J. Will). Politically, Philip was a Democrat. The sons are all Democrats, and the daughters all married to Democrats. Philip died in April, 1879, aged seventy-four years. His widow is still living in Delaware Township. Henry, our subject, was married June 4, 1868, to Eliza, daughter of George A. Miller, of Jefferson Township. Henry lived in Jefferson Township one year, when he rented his father's farm, in Hempfield Township, containing 126½ acres, and at the death of his father he purchased seventy-six acres of the farm. There were nine children born to them: Cynthia, Jennie, Luella, Maria, Creola, Mable, Georgia, Cora and Edith M. In the spring of 1888 he traded his farm for a farm in Otter Creek Township, near Kitch's Corners, where he now resides. Politically he is a Democrat. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church.

CHAPTER XLII.

WEST SALEM TOWNSHIP.

MAHLON B. S. ARNER, farmer, post-office Orangeville, Ohio, was born in Lawrence County, Penn., April 12, 1836, and is a son of John and Mary (Myers) Arner, the former a native of Westmoreland County, and the latter of Columbia County, Penn. They were married in Lawrence County, and reared seven children: Lavina, Mary Ann, Magdalena, Mahlon, Lydia H., deceased; John, deceased, and Sarah, deceased. In September, 1849, the family came to West Salem Township, where the father resided until his death. His widow returned on a visit to her daughter in Lawrence County, and there died. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Mr. Arner was a Democrat. With the exception of six years in the coal business, our subject has resided on the old homestead since 1849. He was married August 7, 1858, to Anna M. Mohr, a native of Germany, who has borne him eight children: Alpheus C., Margaret E., wife of Frank Aubel; Emma J., Philena, Lorinda, Belle L., George and Anna L. Politically Mr. Arner has always been a Democrat and a stanch adherent of Democratic principles.

JOSEPH AUBEL, farmer and proprietor of saw-mills, post-office Greenville, was born in Union County, Penn., March 19, 1826, and is a son of Jacob and Catharine (Walbon) Aubel, natives of Lancaster and Union Counties, Penn., respectively. In the spring of 1835 they came to West Salem Township, and died in Delaware Township, whither they had removed. They were the parents of ten children: Julia A., deceased; Mary, Joseph, Elizabeth, Daniel, Barbara, Henrietta, Samuel, Catherine and Sarah, deceased. The parents lived and died in the Lutheran faith. Our subject has resided in West Salem Township for the past fifty-three years, and was married in the fall of 1853 to Fiana, daughter of Abraham and Ann Ludwig, of West Salem Township. Mrs. Aubel was born in Lehigh County, Penn., June 23, 1831, and came to West Salem Township with her parents in 1833. She is the mother of eight children: Levi, deceased; Franklin, Armina, wife of James Ash; Charles, John W., Henry, Alvin and Emanuel. Mr. Aubel and wife are members of the Lutheran Church. Politically he is a stanch Democrat, and one of the successful farmers of his township, and what he has to-day is the result of his own industry and energy.

SAMUEL BEIL, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Northampton County, Penn., July 14, 1823, and is a son of John and Rosanna (Frankenfield) Beil, natives of Pennsylvania. In 1828 they crossed the mountains to Mercer County, and settled in what is now the southeast corner of West Salem Township. John Beil served in the War of 1812. He was twice married, his first wife dying before he came to this county, and leaving three children: David, Sally and Susan, who came to Mercer with their father, and here spent their lives. His second wife, Rosanna Frankenfield, reared four children: Samuel, William H., Clarissa and Lydia, deceased. The parents both died in this county, in the Lutheran faith. Our subject grew up in West Salem Township, and learned the carpenter trade, which he followed about forty years. In the meantime he bought his present farm, upon which he has resided for over thirty years. Mr. Beil was married in December, 1845, to Mary Ann, daughter of George Mowry, of Hempfield Township, and has reared three children: Edwin W., Reuben G. and Sarah E. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and politically Mr. Beil is an unswerving Democrat.

MARTIN L. BENNINGHOFF, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Cherry Tree Township, Venango Co., Penn., August 31, 1856. His father, Martin Benninghoff, is a native of Clearfield County, Penn., born March 16, 1828, and a son of John Benninghoff, a sketch of whom will be found in the chapter on Greenville. Martin Benninghoff grew up in Venango County, and was there married, October 10, 1855, to Anna Mary Gahring, a native of Germany, who is the mother of nine children: Martin L., George H., Jacob G., Anna E. (deceased), Julia A., John M., Joseph L., Frederick W. and Jeremiah. In the spring of 1865 Mr. Benninghoff purchased his present homestead in West Salem Township, upon which he settled the following October, and where he has since resided. Our subject grew up in West Salem, and received a common-school education. He was married September 19, 1878, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Levi and Nancy (Saul) Kamerer, a native of this county, who has borne him one child, Eva E. Mr. Benninghoff and wife are members of the Reformed Church, and in politics he is a Republican. In 1882 he located on his present homestead on the Greenville and Orangeville road, and has since been one of the leading young farmers of West Salem.

LEVI BORTZ, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the site of Shenango August 7, 1830. His father, Henry Bortz, was a native of Lehigh County, Penn., where he grew up and married Magdalena Litzenberger, of that county, who bore him four sons and two daughters: Salome, deceased wife of Henry Miller, deceased; Mary, widow of John Shoemaker; Solomon, of Crawford County; Charles, of Greenville; Mandis, of Pymatuning Township, and Dennis, deceased. His wife died, and he married Susannah Litzenberger, a sister of his first wife, who bore him one son, Reuben, of West Salem Township, prior to their coming to Mercer County. In 1828 they crossed the Mountains, and settled on the site of Shenango in West Salem Township, where three children were born to them: Levi, of West Salem Township; Eli, deceased, and Tilghman, of Greenville. The parents died in West Salem Township in the Lutheran faith. Like all the pioneers they underwent the trials and hardships of early days, and did their full share toward the development of Mercer County. Our subject grew to manhood on the old homestead, and learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed about fifteen years. He then engaged in farming, and has since followed that vocation. Mr. Bortz was married April 28, 1853, to Miss Eliza, daughter of George S. and Mary (Reichard) Eisenhart, natives of Lehigh County, Penn., who came to this county in 1851, where the father died June 23, 1870, and the mother July 17, 1888. Mrs. Bortz is a native of Lehigh County, and is the mother of five children: Marietta U., wife of Frank Taylor, of Shenango; Alice R., wife of W. H. Wilkerson, of North Vernon, Ind.; Louisa, deceased; George, deceased, and Carrie A. P. Mr. Bortz and family are members of the Reformed Church. Politically he is a Republican, and takes a deep interest in the public affairs of his native township.

REUBEN BORTZ, shoemaker, post-office Greenville, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., February 1, 1821, and is the eldest son of Henry and Susannah Bortz, who settled on the site of Shenango in 1828. Our subject grew up in this county, and February 18, 1844, was married to Mary Magdalena, daughter of Samuel Kamerer, of Hempfield Township. Four children are the fruits of this union: William Allen, Helen, Wilhelmina and Marcus. Mr. Bortz followed shoemaking up to within a few years ago, when he retired from the business. His wife died March 20, 1864, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has been a life-long member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics a Democrat. In 1862 he enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Militia, and served nine months. William Allen, eldest son of Reuben Bortz, was born in Hempfield Township February 17, 1846, and, excepting two years spent in Kansas, he has always lived in Mercer County. He was married, May 4, 1865, to Elvina, daughter of Abraham and Anna Ludwig, early settlers of West Salem Township. Mrs. Bortz was born on the old homestead, and has had twelve children, five of whom are living: Marna M., Mahlon D. La., Epaphroditus, Eva and Milburn. Mr. Bortz and wife are members of the Evangelical Association, and in politics he is a Democrat.

LEVI G. BORTZ, farmer and carpenter, post-office Greenville, was born on the site of Shenango, August 20, 1850, and is a son of Mandis and Sarah (Mowry) Bortz, both natives of Lehigh County, Penn. The former came to West Salem Township with his father, Henry Bortz, in 1828, and here grew to manhood. He married, November 1, 1849, Sarah, daughter of George Mowry, of Hempfield Township, who blessed him with ten children: Levi G., Edward H., Ellen, deceased; Amelia, Martin C., Eliza J., wife of Philip Snyder, of Pymatuning Township; Emma, wife of Charles Sponsler, of Delaware Township; Frank, Emanuel and Lydia. The parents located at Shenango after marriage, and five years afterward settled on their present homestead in Pymatuning Township. Our subject was reared in Pymatuning, and learned the carpenter and painter's trade, at which he has worked about twenty years. For the past fifteen years he has followed farming in connection with his trade, purchasing his present homestead in the spring of 1883. He was married in December, 1873, to Margaret A., eldest daughter of Charles Benninghoff, of Pymatuning Township, who has had four children: Harry W., Clarence A., Ellen, deceased, and Oliver O. Mr. Bortz and wife belong to the Lutheran Church, and politically he is a stanch Republican, and one of the progressive citizens of the township.

JAMES BROCKWAY, farmer, post-office Jamestown, Penn., was born in Kinsman, Ohio, February 22, 1831. His father, George Brockway, was a native of Hartford, Conn., and about 1814-15 his father, Elias Brockway, removed with his family to Ashtabula County, Ohio, where George grew to manhood. About 1823 the latter came to West Salem Township, where he married Christiana Smail, daughter of John and Mary Smail, natives of Germany, who settled in this township in 1812-13. She reared the following children: David W., Joseph and Jeremiah, of Kansas; James, of West Salem Township; Emeline, deceased wife of Samuel Livingston, of Crawford County; Alvin, Amos and Levi, of Greene Township, and Eliza J., deceased. The seven sons are all living and heads of families. George Brockway and wife resided for a few years on Big Run, in West Salem Township; thence removed to Kinsman, Ohio, where they lived about seven years. In the spring of 1834 they returned to Mercer County and took up their residence in Greene Township, on the farm where their son Levi now lives. They spent the remaining years of their lives on this place, dying June 28, 1852, and June 1, 1884, respectively. The mother died at the home of her son James, in West Salem. George Brockway was a Baptist from youth up to 1840, when, being a strong anti-slavery man, and disliking the position assumed by his church on that subject, he severed his connection therewith and subsequently became a "Free-thinker." James Brockway was reared on the old homestead, and attended the district school. He was married January 27, 1852, to Caroline, daughter of Richard and Barbara (Greiner) Brown, pioneers of West Salem. Mrs. Brockway was born in this township, and has had three children, viz.: William O., Richard E., deceased, and James S., deceased. In the spring of 1852 our subject located on the farm where he yet lives. He is an unswerving Republican, and one of the enterprising, progressive farmers of Mercer County, where he has lived more than half a century.

JAMES R. BROWN, retired farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township March 27, 1812, and is a member of one of the oldest families of the township. In the year 1800 James, William, Richard and Andrew Brown came to Mercer County, Penn., and, after exploring the country, the two last mentioned located in West Salem Township, while James and William settled across the line in Trumbull County, Ohio. They were natives of Eastern Pennsylvania, of Irish ancestry. A few years after coming Richard Brown married Barbara Grenier, a resident of West Salem Township, and a native of Pennsylvania, of German extraction. They reared a family of nine children: Andrew (deceased), James R., Sarah (deceased), William (deceased), Lorinda, Eliza (deceased), Cunningham R. (deceased), Emeline (deceased) and Caroline. The parents both died in West Salem Township, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at ripe old ages. Politically Richard Brown was first a Whig, and afterward a Republican, and served in the War of 1812. Our subject has always lived in West Salem, and was here married, March 11, 1834, to Elizabeth, daughter of John and Ann Speir, who was born in West Salem Township February 8, 1808. She bore him four children: Richard C., Erwin, Malinda (deceased) and Robena, wife of William Lininger. Mrs. Brown died March 6, 1880, in the Baptist faith. Mr. Brown is a staunch Republican, and one of the oldest citizens of the township.

ERWIN BROWN, farmer, post-office Greenville, son of James R. Brown, was born on the old homestead, where he yet lives, January 22, 1837, and has always lived in Mercer County. He was married September 26, 1859, to Sarah, daughter of Rev. Nimrod Burwell, of West Salem Township, who has borne him eight children: Etta (deceased), Ina C., Elizabeth, Curtin, Malinda, Nora (deceased), Arthur and Cora. Politically Mr. Brown is one of the leading Republicans of the county, and is also one of its most prominent farmers and stock dealers.

WILLIAM BROWN, deceased, was born in West Salem Township in 1816, and was a son of Richard and Barbara Brown, spoken of in the sketch of his brother, James R. Our subject grew up and spent his whole life in West Salem Township. He was twice married. His first wife was Maria, daughter of Andrew Brown, by whom three children survive: Clorinda, wife of J. W. Woods; Eliza J., wife of Alfred Moats, and Mary L., wife of Grover Fetterman. His wife died, and July 12, 1866, he was married to Mrs. Mary Ann Brown, daughter of Alexander Nelson. She was born in Sandy Creek Township, and November 25, 1852, married James Brown, by whom she had two children: Irwin C., and Emily L., wife of Augustus Kamerer. By her second marriage one son, William S., was born. Both the sons reside with their mother in West Salem Township. Politically Mr. Brown was a Republican, and one of the respected citizens of the township, where he died June 25, 1868.

JOSIAH BROWN, deceased, was born on the old homestead, in West Salem Township, January 20, 1816, and was the only son of Andrew Brown, who settled in this township in the year 1800. [See sketch of James R. Brown.] Andrew Brown married Mary, daughter of John and Nancy McLaughlin, natives of Ireland, who came to West Salem Township in April, 1800, where her father died the following year. They reared five children: Sarah, widow of Alexander Nelson; Nancy, deceased wife of James Speir, deceased; Josiah, deceased; Lovina, wife of Jeremiah Morford, and Maria, deceased wife of William Brown, deceased. Andrew Brown died in July, 1823, and his widow afterward married Richard Morford, and died July 20, 1873. Our subject spent his whole life on the old homestead in West Salem Township. He was twice married, first to Mary, daughter of Thomas and Susan Morford, and reared four children by this union: Thomas, deceased; Andrew, deceased; Mal-lissa, wife of Dr. Cushman, and Mrs. Susan Brooks. His wife died, and he was again married, August 21, 1849, to Permelia O., daughter of Osman and Mary Williams, of Trumbull County, Ohio. Mrs. Brown was born in that county, and is the mother of eight children: Emma J., wife of Samuel K. Parker; Emerson O.; Ransom J.; Nancy A., wife of A. M. See; Minerva; Philura, wife of A. F. See; Milo and Manley, all of whom are living. Mr. Brown was a member of the Baptist Church many years, and died in that faith August 2, 1868. Politically he was a Republican, and served as justice of the peace two terms. He was an affectionate father and husband, and accumulated through the passing years a competence for himself and family. He was an honest, enterprising, public-spirited man, took a leading interest in the public affairs of his township, and was one of its trustworthy and most respected citizens.

REV. NIMROD BURWELL, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in North Shenango Township, Crawford Co., Penn., September 13, 1814. He is a son of Samuel and Hannah (Paden) Burwell, the former a native of England and the latter of Maryland, of Irish and Scotch parentage. They were married in Maryland, and after the birth of their first child removed to Crawford County, Penn. They were the parents of twelve children, eleven of whom grew to maturity, only four of whom are now living. They died on the old homestead in Crawford County. Our subject grew up in his native township, and learned the tailoring trade in Sheakleyville, Penn., where he located in 1831. He was married September 13, 1835, to Sarah B., daughter of Thomas and Sarah B. Phillips, old settlers of Sandy Creek Township. Two children survive this union: Sarah A., wife of Erwin Brown, and Emma T., wife of John B. Alexander. Mrs. Burwell died September 3, 1854, and he was again married April 10, 1855, to Lovina, daughter of David and Christiana Arner, of West Salem Township, and a native of Armstrong County, Penn. Four children are the fruits of this marriage: Nimrod Wayland, Ella (wife of Dr. R. H. Duff), David H. and John L., all living. Mr. Burwell united with the Baptist Church in 1834, and January 29, 1845, he was ordained, in Vienna, Ohio, a minister of that denomination. He took charge of three churches in Trumbull County, Ohio, where he remained about two years, and subsequently was pastor of West Salem Baptist Church two years, and the Greenville congregation about three years. He resided in West Salem Township most of this period, and has since been one of its well-known citizens. Politically he is a Prohibitionist, and deeply interested in the success of the temperance cause.

JAMES B. CALLAHAN, of P. L. Kimberly & Co.'s Iron Mills, post-office Greenville, was born in Fayette County, Penn., January 1, 1825, and is a son of Edward and Jane (Thompson) Callahan, natives of Ireland, who immigrated in youth to America. They were married in Eastern Pennsylvania, and soon afterward removed to Fayette County. In the spring of 1827 they came to Mercer County, and after a short stay in Pymatuning Township they purchased a tract of land in West Salem Township, whereon they spent the balance of their lives, dying in the faith of the Seceder Church, in 1839 and 1850, respectively. Politically Mr. Callahan was a Democrat. They reared twelve children: Elizabeth (deceased), John N. (deceased), Mary (deceased), Solomon (deceased), Jane (deceased), David, Nancy, Margaret, Edward, William, James B. and Rebecca. Our subject has lived in Mercer County since the spring of 1827, and followed farming up to January, 1882, when he commenced working in the rolling mill. He was married July 27, 1843, to Mary Ann, daughter of Adam Miller, who came here from Maryland in 1802. Mrs. Callahan was born in West Salem Township October 24, 1819, and is the mother of eight children, six of whom are living, viz.: Edward D., Sylvester C., Celestie, Jane, Frank P. and Etta. Mr. Callahan and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics he is a Democrat.

ROBERT P. CALLAHAN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township June 3, 1829, and is a son of John N. and Elizabeth (Patterson) Callahan, natives of Lancaster County, Penn. They were married in Fayette County, Penn., and in the spring of 1827 came to Mercer County, and settled in Pymatuning Township. Some two years afterward they removed into West Salem, where both resided until death, which occurred in 1871 and 1882, respectively. They reared four children: Edward W., deceased; Robert P., Margaret, wife of Joseph McGranahan, and Nancy, wife of A. D. Roberts. Politically Mr. Callahan was a Democrat, and one of the well-known, respected citizens of West Salem. Robert P. has always lived in this county, and the greater portion of his life in West Salem Township. He was married June 3, 1858, to Miss Eliza J., daughter of Adam and Frances Hill, of Greene Township. Mrs. Callahan was born in that township, and is the mother of six children, all of whom are living, viz.: Elizabeth, wife of Ransom J. Brown; Hiram W., Frances A., John N., Maggie and Mary A. Mr. Callahan is a stanch Democrat, and has filled several of the township offices. He has always taken an active interest in local public affairs, and is now serving as school director.

JOSEPH W. CALVERT, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Cortland County, N. Y., February 21, 1819, and is a son of Nathaniel Calvert, a native of Ireland, who immigrated to New York State in boyhood, where he grew up and married Betsy E. Gamble. They reared a large family, and in the fall of 1820 settled in Mercer County, afterward removing into Crawford County, Penn., where they spent the balance of their lives. The following children survive: Mary Ann, widow of William Mossman; James, Joseph W., Martha, widow of Aaron Kale, and William. Our subject grew up in Crawford County, and there married Mary, daughter of John Andrews, a pioneer of that county. In the fall of 1850 he purchased his present homestead in West Salem Township, upon which he has since resided. Six children are the fruits of his marriage: Elizabeth, wife of James McNeilly; Margaret, wife of James McBroom; John N., Joseph A., Mary and Emma. Mr. Calvert and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and politically he is a stanch Republican. He began life comparatively poor, but is to-day one of the prosperous farmers of West Salem Township.

SAMUEL CANON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Fayette County, Penn., August 7, 1805. His parents, Matthew and Jane (McMillan) Canon, were natives of Ireland, who immigrated to Fayette County, Penn., in the latter part of the eighteenth century, where they engaged in the mercantile and hotel business, which proved quite successful for a number of years, the dry goods being purchased in Baltimore, Md., and hauled over the Allegheny Mountains by six-horse teams, which required six weeks to make one trip and incurred many hardships. He reared a family of fourteen children, Samuel, the subject of this sketch, being the youngest. He died in 1829, aged seventy-four years; his wife survived him six years. Samuel grew to manhood in his native county, and was there married, in March, 1832, to Mary Gibson, a native of the same county. In February, 1833, they removed to Mercer County, Penn., and settled on the farm where he now resides, it being uncleared at that time. Here they reared a family of seven children, four daughters and three sons: Martha, wife of T. A. Williamson, of Greenville, Penn.; Margaret, widow of Joseph Andrews; Mary, Sarah, John, Samuel and Loverayne. Mrs. Canon died March 10, 1884, aged seventy-four years; she was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, to which denomination Mr. Canon also belongs. Politically he has been a life-long, unswerving Democrat. He cast his first vote for Jackson in 1828, and has never missed voting for the presidential nominee of the Democratic party during the past sixty years. He is one of the few living early settlers of West Salem Township, where he has resided over fifty-five years.

JOHN CANON, farmer, post-office Greenville, is the eldest son of Samuel Canon, and was born on the old homestead July 12, 1843. He has always resided in West Salem, and was married August 14, 1870, to Elizabeth, daughter of John Blair, of that township. She is the mother of seven children: Lindsie, Anna M. (deceased), Addie, Samuel, Mabel, Blanche and Gertrude. The family belong to the Baptist Church, and politically Mr. Canon has always been a Democrat, and is a member of the R. T. of T.

DR. HENRY D. LA. COSSITT, a deceased pioneer physician of Mercer County, was born in Granby, Hartford Co., Conn., May 3, 1803, and died at his homestead, in West Salem Township, March 1, 1877. His great-grandfather, Rene Cossitt, was a native of Paris, France, who immigrated to America and married Ruth Porter, of Waterbury, Conn. They settled in Granby, Conn., and reared a family of ten children, Rene, the grandfather of our subject, being the eldest son. He was born in 1722, and married Phoebe Hillyer, who bore him four sons and four daughters, Capt. Silas Cossitt, an officer in the Revolution, being one of the number. Capt. Cossitt was born June 22, 1756, and married Sarah Shepard, born July 15, 1764, and about 1805 removed from Connecticut to Vernon Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. They were the parents of seven sons and two daughters. Three of the sons, Epaphroditus, James S. and Henry D. La., subsequently became well-known physicians of Mercer County. Capt. Silas Cossitt died May 7, 1819, and his widow again married, and survived him till February 14, 1832. Henry D. La. grew up in Trumbull County, Ohio, and received his education at the Mercer Academy. He began reading medicine with his brothers, Epaphroditus and James S. Cossitt, then practicing physicians of Mercer. After the former went west he continued under his brother James, who finally removed to New Castle, Penn. Dr. Cossitt attended his first course of lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Fairfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y., in the class of 1824-25. He afterward attended lectures at Geneva, N. Y. He was married at Winfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y., June 9, 1825, to Miss Lydia Crandall, a native of Plainfield, Otsego Co., N. Y., born September 23, 1803. In August succeeding his marriage Dr. Cossitt opened an office in Greenville, where he practiced his profession for more than half a century. Seven children were born to him of this union: Harriett J., Isaac (deceased), Lydia A., Sarah E. (deceased), Henry D. La. (deceased), Julia E. (deceased) and one died in infancy. In August, 1826, Dr. Cossitt was commissioned, by Gov. Shulze, captain of the Greenville Infantry; was commissioned major of the regiment by Gov. Wolf, in March, 1830, and in August, 1835, lieutenant-colonel. In July, 1833, Dr. Cossitt was appointed justice of the peace by Gov. Wolf, for Salem and West Salem Townships, including Greenville, but he never exercised the duties of the office except at weddings, and usually returned the fee to the bride. His wife died September 25, 1857, and he was again married, July 22, 1858, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of William and Margaret McClimans, of Salem Township. Mrs. Cossitt was born in that township March 1, 1831, and is the mother of six children, all of whom are living: Henry D. La., Sarah Elizabeth (wife of J. A. Doyle, of Tarentum, Penn.), William Epaphroditus, Duran Shepard, Fred Silas and Carrie Julia. Dr. Cossitt became a member of the Rush Medical Society of the Willoughby University, of Lake Erie, Ohio, now Starling Medical College, of Columbus, Ohio, February 17, 1845, and on the 25th of the same month that institution conferred upon him the degree of M. D. He became a member of the State Medical Society in 1871, and in 1872 was elected its vice-president. He joined the American Medical Association in 1872, and was also a member of the Mercer County Medical Society. Dr. Cossitt was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church from boyhood, and one of the early supporters of the Greenville congregation. He was a life-long Democrat, and in 1862 was the choice of his party for the Legislature, and though defeated, in a strong Republican County, he polled a very large vote. From the time of locating in Greenville up to within a few days of his death he continued his professional duties with unabating vigor, except a few years while engaged in mercantile and coal business. His name was familiar to the people of every part of Mercer County, and he was recognized as one of the most successful medical practitioners of this section of the State. After practicing alone for about ten years he formed a partnership with Dr. R. E. Breiner, which continued till August, 1842, when he entered into a partnership with Dr. D. B. Packard. This existed until the fall of 1857, when he took in Dr. Fielding Donaldson, yet a practicing physician of Greenville. This business relation was severed after about two years, and Dr. Cossitt continued alone until 1874, when he formed a partnership with Dr. B. E. Mossman, which existed up to his death. He died at his home southwest of Greenville, where he had been residing for about twelve years. Dr. Cossitt was a man of deep convictions and strong individuality, but always courteous and generous toward his fellow men. He possessed wonderful energy and enterprise, was generous and charitable to the needy, and stood high both as a citizen and a physician. Ever kind and affectionate in his home relations, his death was an irreparable loss to his family, to whom he left a handsome estate, the legitimate savings from more than half a century of professional toil.

CHARLES DIEFENDERFER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., August 30, 1831, and is a son of Jacob and Maria (Bear) Diefenderfer, natives of Lehigh County. In the spring of 1836 the parents crossed the Mountains to Mercer County, and settled on Big Run, in West Salem Township, where their son Charles now resides. They brought with them five children: Mary, deceased; Henry, of Pymatuning Township; Reuben, deceased; Charles, and Elvina, wife of Levi Moyer, of Pymatuning Township. Jacob and wife resided in West Salem Township up to their decease, the mother dying in 1856, and the father in 1868, both in the faith of the Lutheran Church. Charles grew up on the old homestead, which he subsequently inherited. He was married January 4, 1846, to Miss Catharine, daughter of Jacob and Margaret Kamerer, pioneers of what is now Hempfield Towship, where Mrs. Diefenderfer was born February 22, 1826, and there grew up. They have reared nine children: William, deceased; Harriet, deceased; Levi, Louisa, Jacob, George, deceased; Charles, Julia and Catharine. The family belong to the Lutheran Church, and in politics Mr. Diefenderfer is a Democrat. Mr. Diefenderfer and wife have been living on the old homestead since 1856, and he has always taken a deep interest in the growth of his township.

NELSON DINGMAN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Montgomery County, N. Y., July 13, 1818. His parents, Jacob and Polly (Bosler) Dingman, were natives of New York State, where both spent their lives. They had ten children, eight of whom grew up, viz.: John, deceased; Peter, Mahitable, Luke, Nelson, Alonzo, Hiram and Charlotte. Our subject was reared in his native county, and in the spring of 1846 he came to Salem Township, Mercer County, where he resided till the fall of 1865, when he located on his present homestead in West Salem. Mr. Dingman was married November 5, 1846, to Jane, daughter of Baptist and Esther (Simpson) Brush, natives of Ireland, and pioneers of Salem Township, in which chapter a sketch of the family will be found. Mrs. Dingman was born in Salem Township May 7, 1826, and has reared seven children: Oliver H., Mary A., wife of Linus Billig, Andrew S.; Emma, wife of Sylvester Hoge; Sanford W., Elmer E. and Clara J. Mr. Dingman and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics he is a Republican. Beginning life poor he has by rigid industry accumulated a nice property.

MARK DOYLE, deceased, was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, May 12, 1813, and was a son of William and Anne (Dowd) Doyle, natives of that county. His mother died in Ireland, and her husband followed his children to Mercer County, where he died at the home of his son Mark. Six sons and one daughter were born to William and Anne Doyle: Patrick, Mark, William, Bridget, Peter, John and James. William and Peter are the only survivors, and are both residents of Wisconsin. Mark Doyle grew to manhood in his native land, and in 1836, in company with his brother Patrick, he immigrated to Canada. He worked about one year in Hamilton, Ontario, when the Canadian rebellion of 1837-38 broke out, and he was notified to report for duty. Not relishing the idea of fighting for England, the hereditary foe of his native land, he quietly left Hamilton on foot, and by traveling all night and the following day finally reached the Niagara River in safety. After considerable difficulty he was allowed to cross that stream to the American side, and felt very much relieved when at last he stood under the protecting folds of the stars and stripes. He made his way on foot to Trumbull County, Ohio, where he began working at farm labor for $6 per month. His brother Patrick joined him a few months afterward, and they worked in that vicinity about four years. They then returned to Ireland for the purpose of obtaining helpmates to share their homes in the New World. They there met Anne and Bridget Collin, who came with them to America in the spring of 1842, accompanied by John and Bridget Doyle. Patrick was married, on his arrival at New York, to Anne Collin, and they then came westward to Kinsman, Ohio. Mark was married, in September, 1843, by Rev. Father Mitchell, in the Mercer Church, to Bridget Collin, who bore him the following children: Mrs. Anne Connelly, William F., Eliza J., wife of W. T. Phelan; Mary A. and Patrick H., all of whom are living. Mark and Patrick Doyle lived on rented farms in Ohio until the spring of 1851, when they settled on the homesteads in West Salem Township, where the balance of their lives were passed. Mrs. Bridget Doyle died February 26, 1880, and her husband survived her until May 7, 1888. They were practical members of the Catholic Church, and lived and died in that faith. Politically Mr. Doyle was an ardent Democrat, and took a deep interest in the public affairs of his township. He was one of the most energetic and successful farmers of Mercer County, and left at his death a large estate. Mark Doyle was recognized as a man of unbounded hospitality, and his door was ever open to friend and stranger alike. He was a well-read man on various subjects, and a fluent conversationalist. He was a lively, good-natured man, ever fond of a joke, and never at a loss to tell one. His death was not only an affliction to his family, but a loss to the community where he had lived nearly forty years.

PATRICK DOYLE, deceased, was born in the County Wicklow, Ireland, January 6, 1812, and immigrated to Canada with his brother Mark in 1836, removing to Ohio the following year. He returned to Ireland four years later for a wife, who came with him to New York in the spring of 1842, where Patrick Doyle and Anne Collin were married, in the Catholic Cathedral of that city, May 15, 1842. The brothers came westward to Trumbull County, Ohio, where they rented farms till the spring of 1851, when they located in West Salem. Through the passing years our subject accumulated a large property, and at his death, which occurred November 20, 1884, he was one of the wealthiest farmers of Mercer County. Both he and wife were practical members of the Catholic Church, and he was a staunch supporter of the Democratic party. No children blessed their union, and his widow still resides upon the old homestead. Patrick Doyle was a quiet, unassuming man, upright and honest in all his dealings, and was a hard working, energetic and successful citizen throughout his business career. He had hosts of friends, and was thoroughly respected by all who knew him.

WILLIAM FELL, deceased, was a son of John and Elizabeth (Hartley) Fell, and was born in Bucks County, Penn., April 2, 1756, removing to Westmoreland County, Penn., after reaching manhood. He there married Agnes Anderson, born February 15, 1761. He followed weaving in summer, and teaching school in the winter. In the fall of 1796 he and his son, George W., came to Mercer County, and selected a piece of land in what is now the southern part of West Salem Township. In the spring of 1797 they came back to the land, built a log cabin, and commenced a settlement in the dense forest. Mr. Fell returned to Westmoreland County early in July, leaving his son, George W., then a boy thirteen years old, to continue the settlement, and he remained seven weeks longer before joining his father in Westmoreland County. Mr. Fell moved his family to Mercer County in the spring of 1798, and lived upon the same farm through all the hardships and privations of pioneer days, up to his death, July 16, 1841. His wife had died twenty-one years before, August 8, 1820. They reared a family of five children: Mary, who married Timothy Dumars; George W.; Miriam, who became the wife of James Stevenson; Jonas, and Agnes, who married William McKnight. All of these are dead, but each left numerous descendants.

GEORGE W. FELL, deceased, eldest son of William and Agnes Fell, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., August 31, 1784, and came with his father to Mercer County in the fall of 1796. They made a permanent settlement in the spring of 1797, and the whole family removed thereto the following year. He was married April 14, 1806, to Nancy Ann Dumars, and located on a portion of the old homestead. She was born in April, 1787, and reared eight children: Mary, who still resides upon the old homestead in her eighty-second year; Sarah, who married Frank Merry; William G., deceased, by profession a civil engineer; Jonas, a deceased physician of Lexington, Ill.; Amos D., a surveyor of Trumbull County, Ohio; Fannie, deceased, who married Aaron M. Clark; Hannah, wife of William Jaxtheimer, of West Salem Township, and residing upon the old homestead, and Roxanna, deceased. Mr. Fell was appointed justice of the peace in 1822, and served in that office for eighteen years, consecutively. He followed farming all his life, and died August 15, 1849, upon the farm which he settled in 1797. His widow survived him till September 21, 1871. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically Mr. Fell was a Democrat and belonged to the Masonic fraternity. He lived through all the early settlement of Mercer County, and endured the hardships and trials incident to pioneer life.

WILLIAM S. FELL, farmer, post-office Orangeville, Ohio, was born on his present homestead, in West Salem Township, October 22, 1820. His father, John Fell, was born in Bucks County, Penn., April 11, 1781, and came with his parents, Nathan and Ann Fell, to Mercer County, Penn., in the spring of 1798. They settled in what is now Pymatuning Township, where their grandsons, Aaron and Mahlon, reside. John there grew to manhood and married Catharine, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Miller) Campbell, who settled in the southwest corner of West Salem Township toward the close of the last century. After marriage John Fell located on a farm in West Salem Township, where the balance of his life was spent. He reared a family of seven children: Elizabeth, deceased; John, deceased; Rachel, widow of Francis Trunkey; George, deceased; Anne, widow of Harvey Trunkey, who died September 20, 1888; Sarah, deceased, and William S. The parents lived and died in the Methodist Episcopal faith. In politics Mr. Fell was a Whig, and died in 1837, his widow surviving him until 1857. He was an enterprising, energetic, successful farmer, and was recognized as one of the leading citizens of Mercer County. Our subject has spent his whole life in his native township, and was married September 24, 1845, to Catharine, daughter of Ezra Marvin, of Trumbull County, Ohio. Mrs. Fell was born in that county November 24, 1824, and is the mother of six children: Ellen, wife of D. W. Fuller; Henriette, wife of R. A. Luce; Alice, wife of W. E. Drake; Irene, William W. and Lillian. Mr. Fell and wife have been members of the Baptist Church nearly forty years. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and one of the prominent, enterprising citizens of the county.

AYLETT R. FELL, farmer, post-office Orangeville, Ohio, was born on his homestead in West Salem Township May 8, 1829. His father, George Fell, was born in Bucks County, Penn., September 7, 1783, and came with his parents, Nathan and Ann Fell, to Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., in the spring of 1798. George there grew to maturity, and in 1807 married Rachel, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Miller) Campbell, a pioneer of West Salem Township. Soon after his marriage he settled on the farm where our subject now lives. Ten children were born to George and Rachel Fell: Elizabeth, Jesse (deceased), Nathan (deceased), John (deceased), Andrew, George (deceased), Julia A. (deceased), Rachel, Fannie M. (deceased) and Aylett R. The parents spent their whole married life on their homestead in West Salem. George Fell was a member of the Baptist Church, and a Whig in politics. He was justice of the peace eighteen years, and during his term of service married 118 couples. He was a veteran of the War of 1812, and died June 12, 1853. His widow survived him until 1879. He was one of the leading farmers of Mercer County, and at his death was the owner of over 550 acres of land, all of which he made excepting 100 acres given to him by his father. Our subject was reared on his present homestead, and was married October 4, 1850, to Clarissa, daughter of Samuel Follett, of Pymatuning Township. Mrs. Fell was born in New York State, and is the mother of three sons: Chalmers, Walter J. and Charley. Politically Mr. Fell is a Republican. For eight years he was engaged in the lumber business, and is one of the most successful farmers of the county.

JOHN FERGUSON, SR., deceased, was a native of Ireland, who immigrated to Westmoreland County, Penn., in the year 1790. He brought with him his wife, Ann (Johnston) Ferguson, and two sons, John and James. Two children, Martha and Kennedy, were born in Westmoreland County. His wife died in that county, and in the spring of 1798, with his sons, John and James, he came to Mercer County, and located in what is now the northeast corner of West Salem Township. In 1804 he married Jane, daughter of Alexander and Mary (Murphy) McMillen, natives of Ireland, who left at her death one daughter, Mary, now residing in Sharpsville. All of the children by the first marriage are dead. John Ferguson died on the old homestead in 1842, and his widow in 1853. They were attendants of the Seceder Church of Greenville.

O. NEWTON FLETCHER, farmer and fruit grower, post-office Greenville, was born in Crawford County, Penn., May 26, 1833. His grandfather, Hugh Fletcher, was a native of County Donegal, Ireland, who immigrated to Westmoreland County, Penn., about 1795. In the summer of 1797 he visited Northwestern Pennsylvania, selected a tract of 200 acres in the southwest part of Crawford County, where he erected a cabin, made a small clearing in the dense forest and raised crops, which he secreted for preservation from the roving bands of Indians. Returning to Westmoreland County, he there married Sarah Fullerton, and in the spring of 1798 brought his wife to his new home in the wilderness. They reared thirteen children, only two of whom are now living, and the parents spent the balance of their lives in Crawford County. Hugh Fletcher was one of the organizers and first elders of the Seceder Church of South Shenango, Crawford County, which had its inception in 1801. Samuel Fletcher, the father of our subject, was the eldest son of Hugh and Sarah Fletcher, and was born on the old homestead January 2, 1802. He there grew up and married Polly, daughter of Gershom and Nancy Hull, pioneers of Crawford County. Mrs. Fletcher was born in Washington County, Penn., August 6, 1800, and reared three sons: A. Milton, O. Newton and Hugh A. The father died near Greenville October 28, 1881, and his widow resides with her son, O. Newton. The latter was reared in Crawford County, Penn., and in 1868 located on his present homestead, situated on one of the most beautiful sites near Greenville. He was married February 4, 1868, to Miss Laura, a daughter of Harvey Trunkey, of Trumbull County, Ohio. There are three children: Harvey Trunkey and Anna Grace, both accomplished and promising students of Thiel College, and Mary Pearl, the youngest of the family. The family is one of the best known families in Greenville. In church they are Presbyterian, and politically Mr. Fletcher is one of the well-known Republicans of West Salem Township.

WILLIAM M. FLETCHER, farmer and veterinary surgeon, post-office Greenville, was born in what is now Greene Township, Mercer Co., Penn., March 5, 1835. His father, Alexander Fletcher, was born in Crawford County, Penn., and was a son of Hugh and Sarah (Fullerton) Fletcher, natives of Ireland, and pioneers of Crawford County. Alexander grew to manhood in his native county, and afterward worked for Thomas Kinsman, of Kinsman, Ohio, for several years. He then purchased and settled on a farm in Greene Township. He married Jane, daughter of Joseph McClurg, a native of Ireland and an early settler of West Salem Township. They reared five children: William M., Lemuel A., who died from disease contracted in the army; Sarah M., wife of Hugh Bean; Mary A. and Leander, deceased. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church, and died upon the old homestead. Politically the father was a Democrat. William M. has always made his home in this county. He was married December 24, 1857, to Mary E., daughter of Samuel and Margaret McBroom, natives of Brooke County, W. Va., and early settler of West Salem Township. Mrs. Fletcher was born in that township, and is the mother of five children: Samuel A., deceased; Lizzie, wife of Dr. A. O. Moreland, of Jamestown, Penn.; Orran M., James C. and William A. The family belong to the United Presbyterian Church, and politically Mr. Fletcher is a Democrat. He removed from Greene Township to his present homestead in the spring of 1881. For forty years he has been a veterinary surgeon, and devotes most of his attention to that business.

SAMUEL FOULK, deceased, farmer of West Salem Township, was born in Virginia June 22, 1818, and was a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Foulk, who removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, when Samuel was a boy. The subject of this sketch grew to maturity in that county, and was there married to Leah, daughter of David and Christina Arner, April 16, 1842. Her parents were natives of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Foulk was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., and is the mother of three children: Alvin, deceased; Elizabeth J., wife of Robert McMurray, of Pymatuning Township, and John H. In the spring of 1854 Mr. Foulk and family came from Ohio to West Salem Township, where he resided up to his death, April 17, 1887. He was a Democrat, a Methodist in belief, and an upright, honest man, kind and affectionate to his wife and family, to whom he left a comfortable competence, the result of his own industrious habits.

JACOB GAHRING, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, December 4, 1824, and is a son of Martin and Anna (Elsiser) Gahring, both of whom spent their lives in Germany. Jacob grew to manhood in his native land, and in 1852 immigrated to Venango County, Penn., where he was married August 31, 1859, to Amelia, daughter of John Benninghoff, of that county. She was born in Clearfield County, Penn., December 25, 1830, and had four children by this marriage: Lucy A., Sadie E., Christina and Wilson J., all of whom are living. In the spring of 1870 Mr. Gahring purchased his present homestead in West Salem Township, upon which he then settled and has since resided. His wife died in the Reformed faith, March 28, 1882. Mr. Gahring and family belong to the Lutheran Church, and politically he is a Democrat. He is one of the wealthy farmers of West Salem.

ABRAHAM K. HARNIT, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township December 25, 1825. His parents were Peter and Catharine (Everhart) Harnit, pioneers of Mercer County. The former was born in Beaver County, Penn., March 22, 1798, and was a son of Samuel and Barbara A. Harnit, who were married August 9, 1795, and both of whom died in Beaver County. Peter grew to manhood in that county, and then came to Mercer County, where he was married January 23, 1823, to Catharine, daughter of Frederick and Catharine (Keck) Everhart, a pioneer family of West Salem Township. Her father carried on the first pottery in this part of the county. Mr. Harnit first located on the Cossitt farm, but soon afterward purchased a place nearer Greenville, which he sold to Daniel Knappenberger in the spring of 1836, and removed into the borough. He subsequently purchased and settled on the Joseph B. Nelson farm, in West Salem Township, which he also sold and again moved to Greenville. He finally bought and settled on the farm where his sons, Abraham K. and Madison, live. He died in Greenville January 15, 1864, his widow surviving him until February 24, 1878. They reared eight children: Samuel, Abraham K., John, Maria, Linus, Marvin, Madison and Ann, all residents of the county except Samuel, who lives in Michigan. Abraham K. was reared in his native township, and married June 10, 1856, Mrs. Sarah Smith, nee Lawton, a native of Yorkshire, England, who has borne him five children: Silas, Catharine (wife of Oscar Brockway), Peter, Daniel and Anna S., all living. Politically Mr. Harnit is a staunch Democrat, and one of the oldest native residents of the township.

JACOB HASENPLUG, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Centre County, Penn., October 20, 1830. His grandfather, Henry Hasenplug, emigrated from Germany to America during the Revolution, and after the war married a Miss Siebold, of Union County, Penn. His father, Jacob Hasenplug, was born in Union County July 16, 1796, there grew up and married Annie Lichty, a native of the same county. They afterward removed to Centre County, where Jacob operated a tannery and brewery. In the fall of 1834 they removed to West Salem Township, Mercer County, and reared six children: George E., deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Jonathan Showers; Jacob; Maria, widow of William Dillon; John H. and Daniel. They settled in the forests of West Salem, in a hewed log house which Mr. Hasenplug erected after coming. The mother died in 1871, and her venerable husband, at the ripe old age of ninety-three years, resided on the old homestead, peacefully awaiting the call to join her in that home beyond the grave, until his death August 7, 1888. Both died in the faith of the Evangelical Association, of which church they were members many years. Politically he was a Republican. Our subject has resided in West Salem since the fall of 1834. He learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed at Maysville for twenty years, but since the spring of 1882 he has been engaged in farming. In the fall of 1862 he was drafted, and enlisted in Compay D, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, and served nine months. Mr. Hasenplug was married in April, 1855, to Mary Ann, daughter of Jeffrey and Ann (Morford) Bentley, of West Salem Township. She was a native of Mercer County, and reared nine children: Elizabeth, wife of Charles Buell; Emma, wife of Squire Jewell; Elmer E., Arminta, Ida, Charles, Ella, Sadie and Lorinda, all of whom are living. Mrs. Hasenplug died in the Baptist faith May 7, 1875. Our subject is a Republican, and one of the well-known citizens of the township.

THE HOMMER FAMILY.—Jacob Hommer, a native of Germany, and a Revolutionary soldier, was one of the early settlers of West Salem Township. He grew up in Maryland, and was twice married. His first wife was Mary Siler, who bore him three sons and four daughters: John, Joseph, Jacob, Polly, Lena, Susan and Elizabeth. The mother died in Maryland, and he married Mrs. Hannah (Booth) Schaffer, and with two sons, John and Jacob, and his four daughters, by his first marriage, immigrated to Mercer County in 1809 (Joseph remaining in Maryland), where he purchased and settled on a tract of land partly lying within the present limits of Greenville. Two daughters, Hannah and Rachel, were born of his second marriage. His cabin stood on the west side, where Samuel West now lives. The parents both spent the balance of their lives on this farm, upon which they were interred. John, the eldest son, married Catharine Harsh, in Maryland, and after coming to Mercer located at the Big Bend, in Delaware Township, where his father purchased him 100 acres. He died there, and his sons still live on the old homestead.

Joseph, the second son, was born in Maryland May 15, 1791, there learned the shoemaker's trade, and came to West Salem Township about two years after the rest of the family. He married Magdalena Everhart, who was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., October 18, 1800, and came to Mercer County early in the present century. They located on a part of his father's farm, where he followed the shoemaking trade. They reared seven children: Catharine, wife of Thomas Boles, of this county; Josiah, Uriah, Mary, wife of Martin Woodford, of Kansas; Julia A.; Paul, deceased, and Felecia, deceased. The parents were originally Lutherans, but afterward joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. They died in Greenville February 28 and September 5, 1864, respectively, and are buried in the family grave-yard. Joseph was a Whig, and then a Republican in politics, and was at Erie during the War of 1812.

Jacob, the third son of Jacob Hommer, Sr., was also a native of Maryland, and came with his parents to West Salem Township in 1809. He served at Erie in the War of 1812, and subsequently married Mary, daughter of John and Hannah (Booth) Schaffer, born in Maryland March 15, 1798. Her father died in that State, and her mother married Jacob Hommer, Sr. Jacob and Mary Hommer reared the following children: David, Jacob, William M., Hannah, wife of Charles H. Fry; Joseph, deceased; Elizabeth, widow of Benjamin Loutzenhiser; Mary L., deceased, wife of Samuel West, and four died in infancy. All of the living children are residents of Greenville. After marriage Jacob settled on a part of the old homestead, where his daughter, Mrs. Loutzenhiser, now lives. He died May 5, 1837, and his widow afterward married Levi Gravat, and died April 6, 1875. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics he was a Republican. Of the daughters of Jacob Hommer, Sr.: Polly, first married Jacob Rusher and afterward John Boston; Lena, married David Haun; Susan and Elizabeth, married Irvin and Richard Carr, respectively, of Mercer County; Hannah, became the wife of Paul Everhart, and Rachel married William Best.

ROBERT S. HOWE, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born near Oil City, Venango Co., Penn., June 25, 1834, and is a son of Samuel and Sarah (Sproule) Howe, natives of Venango and Crawford Counties, Penn., respectively, and of Irish parentage. They were married in Mercer County and settled near Oil City, and they spent the balance of their lives in Venango County. They reared four sons and three daughters, Robert S. and two of the daughters being the only survivors. Our subject grew up in his native county, and went to school in the typical log building of the pioneer days. He was married March 2, 1854, to Elizabeth, daughter of John Benninghoff, deceased. She was born in Cherry Tree Township, Venango Co., Penn., September 3, 1831, and is the mother of six living children: Emma, wife of John McElheney; Elmer E., Curtin J., William B., Catharine and Eva. In March, 1868, Mr. Howe located on his farm in West Salem Township, where his son Curtin J. now lives. In 1883 he erected his residence near Greenville, and has since resided there. The family are attendants of the Lutheran Church, and in politics Mr. Howe is a Republican.

ALEXANDER and MARGARET HUNTER, natives of the County Tyrone, Ireland, were among the early settlers of West Salem Township. The former was born November 13, 1761, and the latter in April, 1768, and they were married in the County Tyrone, Ireland, October 2, 1786. They left their native county for America June 16, 1788, and arrived at Philadelphia August 22 following. They remained there till August, 1790, and then removed to Cumberland County, Penn., and in November, 1793, to Fayette County. Here they lived till April, 1812, when they came to Mercer County and settled on a tract of 400 acres of land in West Salem Township, still principally owned by their descendants. Alexander Hunter was a pioneer surveyor of Mercer County, and a man of fine education and extensive knowledge. He was the principal surveyor of this locality from 1812 up to his death, and devoted nearly his entire attention to that profession. He reared a family of nine children: Jane, who married Thomas Gilliland, and remained behind in Fayette County; James, Matthew, Betty, who married James Mossman, and at his death Robert Brion, and subsequently David Parker; Peggy, who became the wife of John Mossman; Ebby, who married Hugh Mossman; Alexander, Hiram and Elliott, all of whom are dead except Hiram, a resident of Wisconsin. The eight youngest came to this township with their parents, the eldest son, James, being then in his twenty-third year, and the youngest, Elliott, in his fifth year. The mother died on the old homestead April 8, 1838, and her husband survived her till March 24, 1847. They were life-long members of the Covenantan Church, and Mr. Hunter was an elder in the Greenville congregation many years. Politically he was a Whig, and one of the prominent men of pioneer days.

COL. SILAS HUNTER, farmer, post-office Jamestown, Penn., was born on the homestead where he now resides May 26, 1832. His father, James Hunter, was born in Philadelphia, Penn., December 5, 1789, and had reached manhood ere the coming of the family to Mercer County in the spring of 1812. He was married February 23, 1815, to Sarah Dowlin, who died without issue April 5, 1817. He was again married July 27, 1820, to Isabella, daughter of Christopher and Elizabeth North. She was born in Maryland in June, 1793, and came to Mercer County with her parents when a small child, her mother carrying her on horseback across the Mountains from Westmoreland County, Penn., whither they had removed from Maryland. They settled in what is now Greene Township, on the farm where her nephew, Samuel North, resides. She grew to womanhood on that farm, and upon her marriage took up her abode on the old Hunter homestead, in West Salem Township, where the balance of her life was passed. She had the following children by this union: Alexander, deceased; Margaret, wife of James J. Christy, of Kinsman, Ohio; Harrison, of Jamestown; David A., of Emporia, Kas.; James, deceased; Silas, Matthew C., deceased; John M., deceased, and Anderson McLean, of Emporia, Kas. James Hunter followed farming all his life, and died May 4, 1869. Both he and wife were members of the United Presbyterian Church. In politics he was a Whig and afterward a Republican, and together with his brother Matthew served in the War of 1812. He was an upright, honest man, and left to his descendants the record of a spotless reputation. His widow survived him over nineteen years, and died June 5, 1888, at the remarkable age of ninety-five years. She retained her memory up to the last, and was always happy when relating pioneer reminiscences. She was kind and motherly, and her long life was a blessing to her children and descendants. Our subject, Silas, grew to manhood on his present homestead, and in the spring of 1856 removed to Kansas. In 1861 he enlisted in the First Kansas Infantry, subsequently serving as first lieutenant in the Second Regiment Indian Home Guards, and major of the Eleventh Regiment United States Colored Infantry, from which he was transferred with the same rank to the Fifty-seventh United States Colored Infantry. He afterward filled the ranks of lieutenant-colonel and colonel, successively, of the last mentioned regiment, and was mustered out December 20, 1866. He was then, for meritorious services, commissioned first lieutenant of the Thirty-eighth United States Infantry, with eighteen months' advance pay, but declined the position. Upon the sickness of his father he returned to Mercer County, and on his death took charge of the old homestead. Col.

Hunter was married February 9, 1871, to Sarah C. Sinclair, of Jamestown, Penn., who is the mother of five children: James, Charles, Mary, Stanley and Alice. The family belong to the United Presbyterian Church. Politically Col. Hunter is a staunch Republican, and in 1878 was elected sheriff of Mercer County, and served one term. He has always taken a deep interest in the growth and prosperity of his native county.

ALEXANDER HUNTER, deceased farmer, was born in Fayette County, Penn., September 20, 1801, and came with his parents, Alexander and Margaret Hunter, to West Salem Township in the spring of 1812, where he ever afterward lived. He was married June 8, 1827, to Catharine, daughter of Adam and Catharine Miller, who came to West Salem Township from Maryland in the fall of 1802, and settled on a farm now owned by Joseph Calvert and W. H. Johnston. Adam Miller was a soldier in the War of 1812, and both he and wife died in this township. Mrs. Hunter was born on the farm previously mentioned, July 6, 1807, and has reared a family of twelve children, eleven of whom are living: Alexander and Adam, of Crawford County, Penn.; Margaret, deceased; Albert, of Crawford County; Isabel, wife of James Johnston, of Canada; Lydia, wife of John Amons, of Venango County, Penn.; Esther, wife of Lyman Jackson, of Tennessee; Amos, of Lawrence County; Jane, wife of John McMurray; Sarah, wife of Truman Hall, of Orangeville, Ohio; Alvin and Marilla. Mr. Hunter followed farming and resided on the old homestead from the spring of 1812 up to his death, January 2, 1886. His widow survives him, and has been a life-long member of the Seceder and the United Presbyterian Church, and has lived in Mercer County eighty-one years. Politically Mr. Hunter was a Republican, a straightforward, honest man, and has left a large and respected family.

MATTHEW HUNTER came to Mercer County with his parents, Alexander and Margaret Hunter, in the spring of 1812. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. After coming to Mercer County he married Elizabeth Atchison. To them were born eight daughters and one son: Margaret, deceased; Deborah, deceased wife of James Tompkins; Jane, deceased wife of William Angelo, deceased; her second husband was Hiram McCormick; Alexander, of California; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Morford; Mary A., widow of Samuel W. McDowell; Isabel, wife of Philip Templeton, of Battle Creek, Iowa; Sarah, deceased, and Esther, wife of Lyman Powers, of Wisconsin. Mrs. Hunter died May 22, 1873, in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church. Her husband survived her till December 18, 1880, when he, too, passed away.

WILLIAM HARRISON JOHNSTON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in what is now Lawrence County, Penn., September 29, 1819, and is a son of Edward and Nancy (Coleman) Johnston, the former a native of Mifflin County, Penn., and the latter of New Jersey. They were married in Lawrence County, Penn., and in 1803 came to West Salem Township, where they settled and lived about twelve years. Mr. Johnston was a soldier in the War of 1812. He was a man of good education, and during his residence in West Salem he taught school several terms, first in a log building on the farm still owned by his descendants. He returned to Lawrence County, and leaving his family he crossed the Mountains and followed school-teaching in Eastern Pennsylvania. In the spring of 1835 he again came to West Salem Township and located on his land. His wife died here in July, 1838, and he survived her until November, 1858, both dying in the Seceder faith. They reared five children: Polly, deceased, wife of William Wiley, of Trumbull County, Ohio; Jane, widow of William Reed, of Lawrence County, Penn.; James M., deceased; John C., of Lawrence County, and William Harrison. Our subject has lived in West Salem Township since his sixteenth year. He was married April 18, 1844, to Margaret J., daughter of George and Margaret (Ewing) Moore, one of the pioneer families of Mercer County. Mrs. Johnston was born in New Bedford, Penn., September 18, 1824, and is the mother of five children: Nancy J., wife of Silas Laughlin; Marilla, wife of Clinton Hobart; Emma, wife of Henry Hyde; Lurancy, wife of Andrew Storer, and Ella, who died April 28, 1879, in her nineteenth year. Mr. Johnston is a member of the Baptist Church, and his wife of the Presbyterian. Politically he is a Republican, and one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the township.

PETER KLINGENSMITH was one of the first settlers of West Salem Township. He was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., December 2, 1776, there grew up, and in the fall of 1796 accompanied his father, Daniel, and the Loutzenhisers, Kecks and Christys to the Shenango Valley on a prospecting tour. It is claimed by his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Lininger, that he built a cabin on the tract he selected (now the William Bortz farm, in the southeast corner of West Salem Township), and remained in the valley with a few others through the winter of 1796-97, hunting and trapping, while the balance of the party returned to Westmoreland County. Mr. Klingensmith was married in 1798 to Catherine Smith, also a native of Westmoreland County, born February 3, 1777. They reared twelve children, the eldest, Susan, being born in the cabin on the Shenango October 17, 1799. She became the wife of William McLaughlin. The remaining children were: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Catharine, who married Daniel Lininger; Elizabeth, became the wife of John Merritt; Hannah, wife of John Bowman; Peter, Isaiah, Mary Magdalena, widow of Joseph Lininger; Philip and Daniel, all of whom are dead except Mrs. Bowman and Mrs. Joseph Lininger. All were born on the old homestead, settled by Mr. Klingensmith in 1796. He served in the War of 1812, and was one of the well-known and most successful hunters of pioneer days. He bore a very strong antipathy to the Indian race, firmly believing that the only good Indians were dead ones. About 1827 he sold his homestead and removed into Pymatuning Township, where both he and wife spent their declining years. They are interred in one of the old pioneer cemeteries of that locality, and many of their descendants are residents of the county.

DANIEL KNAPPENBERGER, one of the oldest living residents of West Salem Township, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., April 12, 1813, and is a son of Henry Knappenberger, who died in that county. Daniel grew up in his native place, and there married Miss Mary Rumpfelt, a native of Lehigh. In the spring of 1836 he and wife, with two children, James and Daniel, came from Lehigh County to West Salem Township, where he purchased and settled on the farm upon which he still resides. He reared the following children: James, Daniel, deceased; Reuben F., Maria, wife of Samuel West, of Greenville; Catharine, Lydia, wife of C. Eckeroads; John, Caroline, wife of O. Miller; Emeline, deceased wife of Clarence McQuiston, and Sarah, wife of Frank Callahan. Mrs. Knappenberger died April 22, 1881, in the Lutheran faith, to which church the whole family belong. Mr. Knappenberger has been a life-long Democrat, and, though old and feeble, bids fair to live several years yet. Reuben F. Knappenberger was born on the old homestead April 10, 1840, and has always made his home in West Salem Township. He learned the wagon-maker's trade in Greenville, and in the fall of 1882 started his present wagon shop, where he has since carried on quite a successful business. He was married January 4, 1866, to Miss Alavesta R. Biery, a native of Lehigh County, Penn., who is the mother of two children: Wilson N. and Mary L. The family are Lutherans, and Democratic in politics.

DAVID LININGER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township October 18, 1818. His parents, Henry and Catharine Lininger, were natives of Virginia. Henry's father died when the former was a small boy, and he subsequently learned the shoemaking trade. He was married in Virginia, and removed to Mercer County early in the present century and settled on the farm in West Salem Township, a part of which is embraced in the homestead of his son Jacob. Henry and Catharine Lininger reared four sons and five daughters, viz.: Daniel, deceased; Polly, deceased wife of Isaac Klingensmith, deceased; Sarah, deceased wife of Abraham Klingensmith, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Lambert Haun, of Hickory Township; Lydia, deceased wife of Justus McLaughlin, deceased; Joseph, deceased; David; Rebecca, wife of David Sherbondy, of Greene Township, and Jacob. After Henry Lininger located in this township he worked occasionally at shoemaking for the pioneers, but devoted most of his energy toward clearing up his land. Both he and wife were members of the Reformed Church, and died on the farm where they first settled. David grew to maturity in this township, and received very meager educational advantages. He married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Sarah Artherholt, early settlers of Pymatuning Township. She was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, March 11, 1818, and has reared the following children: Lorinda, wife of C. Hum; Joel; Ransom, deceased; Samuel; Sarah, wife of Jacob Reimold; Catharine, deceased; Dianthy, wife of Wendell Brockway; Ellen, wife of Sumner Brockway, and Cora, wife of Norman Blackstone. Mr. Lininger is an adherent of the Republican party, and is one of the prosperous farmers of his native township.

JOSEPH LININGER, deceased, was born in West Salem Township March 15, 1816, and was a son of Henry Lininger, one of the earliest settlers of the township. Joseph grew to manhood in his native township, and in October, 1838, was married to Mary Magdalene, daughter of Peter and Catharine Klingensmith, natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., and pioneers of West Salem. Mrs. Lininger was born on the old homestead, in the southeast corner of the township, now the home of William Bortz, November 17, 1817. She has reared a family of eight children: Elmira, Nelson, Austin, Philena, Amos, George (deceased), Thomas and Mary C. Mr. Lininger died November 23, 1863, and his widow is still a resident of the township. He was always a Democrat in politics, and an upright, honest man, a good husband and kind father.

JACOB LININGER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the farm upon which he now lives, January 4, 1824, and is a son of Henry and Catharine Lininger, previously spoken of. In early boyhood he received a few months' schooling in the primitive log school-house of those days. He was married in July, 1844, to Mary Ann, daughter of Jacob and Catharine Auel, natives of Union and Lancaster Counties, Penn., respectively, who settled in West Salem Township in the spring of 1835. They spent the balance of their lives in this county, and died in the Lutheran faith. Mrs. Lininger was born in Union County, Penn., in December, 1824, and is the mother of ten children: Harmon, Henry, William, Conrad, Irvine, Evi, Angeline (wife of Daniel Titzel), Herbert, Andrew C. and Lestie. Politically Mr. Lininger is a staunch Republican, and one of the best known citizens of the township. He began life comparatively poor, and has accumulated a comfortable competence for himself and family.

WILLIAM LININGER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the old homestead, in West Salem Township, May 4, 1848, and is a son of Jacob Lininger, previously spoken of. Our subject has always lived in this township, and received his education in the district schools. He was married January 19, 1871, to Miss Robena, daughter of James R. and Elizabeth Brown, a pioneer family of West Salem. Mr. Lininger has always followed farming, and in politics is a staunch Republican. He is one of the enterprising, progressive young farmers of his native township.

THE LOUTZENHISERS were among the earliest settlers of West Salem Township, as their descendants are also among its most numerous inhabitants. In the spring of 1800 Peter and John Loutzenhiser, accompanied by their father, Joseph, removed from Westmoreland County to Mercer County, Penn., whither their brother Jacob had preceded them about three years. They were natives of Germany, and had immigrated to Westmoreland County with their parents in early youth, where their mother died when John was quite young. Their only sister married a Frenchman named Probst, of Westmoreland County, and remained there. Her husband was a member of the Lodge, Probst & Walker Land Company, who owned a large amount of lands in the Shenango Valley, including that on which Greenville was afterward laid out. Peter Loutzenhiser was unmarried, and settled immediately west of the site of Greenville, on the farms now owned by James McElheney and John Loutzenhiser, Jr., which lands have ever since been in possession of the family. His brother John settled in what is now the southwest corner of West Salem Township, northeast of Orangeville, at which point his brother Jacob had located in 1797. About two years after his settlement was effected Peter died, and willed his land to his father, who soon after traded it to John, and the latter located upon it, and resided there up to his death. His father spent the balance of his days at John's home. The latter married Margaret Harnit before coming to Mercer County, and had then a family of three children: Mary, who married John Smail, and afterward John Mattocks, and reared four sons and two daughters, and died in West Salem; Jacob, deceased, and John, deceased. The following children were born in West Salem Township: Ann, deceased wife of James Leech, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Solomon Callahan, deceased; Samuel, deceased; William, deceased; Joseph, of West Salem Township; Sarah A., deceased wife of David Callahan; David, deceased, and Margaret, wife of James McElheney, of West Salem. Mrs. Loutzenhiser died December 29, 1840, aged sixty-two, and her husband survived her till November 12, 1861, reaching the remarkable age of ninety-two years.

JACOB J. LOUTZENHISER died at his home in West Salem Township on Wednesday morning, November 8, 1888. He was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., April 15, 1796, and was the eldest son of John and Margaret Loutzenhiser. Jacob grew to manhood on the old homestead west of Greenville, and lived in West Salem nearly eighty-nine years. He was twice married, first to Salome Miller in 1821, who bore him ten children, eight of whom grew up. His wife died in 1844, and he was again married March 31, 1847, to Maria J. Paul, who is the mother of ten children. Mr. Loutzenhiser cast his first vote for Monroe, then voted for Jackson, and since that time was a Whig and Republican, casting his vote for Blaine in 1884. He served as county commissioner one term, and deputy sheriff two terms, once under his cousin, Jacob Loutzenhiser.

JOHN LOUTZENHISER, deceased, was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., December 15, 1799, and was a son of John and Margaret (Harnit) Loutzenhiser, who settled in West Salem Township, Mercer County, in 1800. Our subject here grew to manhood, and April 9, 1846, was married to Catharine, daughter of Andrew and Catharine Wade. She was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., October 25, 1811, and her parents settled in Crawford County in 1813, where both spent the balance of their lives. Her husband had previously purchased the land and erected the brick residence still occupied by their son, David, which she took possession of immediately after marriage. Three children were born to John and Catharine Loutzenhiser: David, John A., and Margaret C., wife of John Speir, of West Salem Township. Mr. Loutzenhiser operated a small distillery for a number of years, which he carried on in connection with farming. Politically he was a life-long Democrat, and was county commissioner one term. He served one term as major of a regiment of militia, and bore the title of major among the pioneers up to his death, which occurred September 19, 1877. His widow resides with her daughter, Mrs. Speir. He was strictly honest and upright in all his dealings, and was recognized as a kind-hearted, generous man. He was industrious and energetic, and accumulated considerable property, which his children inherited at his death.

JOSEPH LOUTZENHISER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township September 9, 1811, and is a son of John Loutzenhiser, who settled in West Salem in 1800. Joseph was reared on the old homestead, and followed farming up to early manhood. He then went to Greenville, where for many years he was engaged in the mercantile business, and also in the foundry and coal trade. He then purchased his present farm and flouring mill, in which business he has till recently been engaged. Mr. Loutzenhiser has a brick-yard on his farm, which he carried on for several years, now operated by his son, Charles. The latter is also proprietor of the mill. Mr. Loutzenhiser was married February 23, 1841, to Lucinda, daughter of Jacob and Kesia Woods, of West Salem Township. Her father was a native of Lehigh County, Penn., and her mother of New Jersey, and were married in this State. Mrs. Loutzenhiser was born in Fayette County, Penn., October 28, 1819, and removed to West Salem Township with her parents when seven years old, where she has since lived. Her parents both died in this township. Five children have been reared by Mrs. Loutzenhiser: John H., Jacob T., James S., Maggie, wife of Isaac Keck, and Charles D., all living and heads of families. Mr. Loutzenhiser has been a life-long Democrat, and is one of the oldest living pioneers of West Salem Township.

DAVID LOUTZENHISER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in the house he now occupies, November 1, 1848, and is the eldest son of John Loutzenhiser, deceased. He grew to manhood in his native township, and was married September 8, 1876, to Miss Arminda, daughter of Bartlett and Sarah McLaughlin, of West Salem Township. Two children have been born to them: Clara M. and Ralph (deceased). Mr. Loutzenhiser is a Democrat, a member of the West Salem Township School Board, and one of the prosperous farmers of the township.

JOHN A. LOUTZENHISER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the old homestead, in West Salem Township, October 13, 1850, and is a son of John Loutzenhiser, deceased. He was reared in this township, and September 10, 1874, was married to Miss Maggie, daughter of Joseph and Nancy Lutton, of Mill Creek Township, who is the mother of one daughter, Clara M. Politically Mr. Loutzenhiser is a Democrat, and is now serving his second term as justice of the peace of West Salem Township. He resides on one-half of the old farm settled by his grandfather, and is one of the progressive young farmers of the community.

JAMES S. LOUTZENHISER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township August 5, 1845, and is a son of Joseph Loutzenhiser, of this township. He was reared in this township, and has always lived in Mercer County. He worked at the stove business about ten years, and about twelve years at manufacturing brick. He was married September 23, 1867, to Sarah A., daughter of David Sherbondy, of Greene Township, where Mrs. Loutzenhiser was born and reared. She has had seven children: Alfred J., Ida M. (deceased), Harry D., Cora M., James S., John C. and Gib A. The family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics Mr. Loutzenhiser is a Democrat.

JAMES A. McBROOM, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township May 2, 1847, and is a son of Samuel and Margaret (Henry) McBroom, natives of Brooke County, W. Va., who settled in West Salem Township more than fifty years ago. They reared three sons and three daughters: Sarah, wife of H. F. Boyd, of Nebraska; Mary E., wife of William M. Fletcher, of West Salem; William H., Robert H., James A. and Martha M., deceased. The parents spent their lives in this township, where the father died June 2, 1868, and the mother December 18, 1883, both in the Presbyterian faith. Mr. McBroom was a Democrat in politics, a sober, industrious, successful farmer, and a man who was highly respected by those who knew him best. He accumulated a valuable estate, which his children inherited at his death. James A. has always lived in West Salem Township, and was married January 30, 1879, to Margaret, daughter of Joseph W. and Mary Calvert, of West Salem. She was born in Crawford County, Penn., but was only an infant when her parents settled in this township. Politically Mr. McBroom is a staunch Democrat, and one of the enterprising young farmers of West Salem.

SAMUEL W. McDOWELL, deceased, was born in Crawford County, Penn., May 1, 1821, and was a son of Samuel and Mary Ann (Frame) McDowell, also natives of Crawford County, where both spent their lives. Our subject grew up in that county, and received a good education. On the 12th of May, 1846, he was married to Miss Mary A., daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth (Atchison) Hunter, and granddaughter of Alexander Hunter, the pioneer surveyor of West Salem. Matthew Hunter was a soldier in the War of 1812. He opened the first blacksmith shop in Jamestown, Penn., and his eldest daughter, Margaret, was the first child born in that village. Mr. McDowell was a carpenter and school-teacher, also followed surveying, and practiced law in Greenville several years. In 1852 he settled in West Salem Township, where the balance of his life was spent. Thirteen children were born to Samuel and Mary Ann McDowell, only six of whom grew to maturity, viz.: Margaret L., wife of Sylvester Callahan; Flora J., wife of L. W. McGranahan; Thomas A., Ella M., wife of R. B. Flint; Effie A. and Minnie B. Mr. McDowell adhered to the Seceder Church, and died in that faith May 30, 1871. His widow is a believer in the same faith. He was a well-educated man, a staunch, unswerving Democrat, and an enterprising, public-spirited citizen. He was upright and honest in all his actions, and was ever kind and affectionate in his home relations.

ANDREW J. McDOWELL, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Steuben County, N. Y., May 1, 1827. His parents were James and Catharine (McCutchen) McDowell, natives of Scotland, who emigrated from Ireland with a family of six children about 1823, and settled in Steuben County, N. Y. Three children were born after their coming. About 1835 the family removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, where the father died in June, 1844. This broke up the home, and the mother afterward died at the home of her daughter in Clarksville, Mercer County. Andrew J. came to Greenville from Ohio in April, 1844, and began working in Samuel Goodwin's Saw-mill at $11 per month and board himself, all of which was paid in orders on Goodwin's store. He afterward worked eight years in a foundry as a molder, and then went boating on the canal for three summers. He subsequently opened a livery stable, which he carried on successfully nearly seven years. In April, 1864, he purchased the farm upon which he has since resided, and erected his present residence in 1879. Mr. McDowell was married September 10, 1856, to Miss Phebe J., daughter of Thomas and Agnes (Dumars) McFarland, the former a native of Washington County, Penn., and the latter of Mercer County, both of whom died in Trumbull County, Ohio. Mrs. McDowell was born on the McFarland homestead, in Trumbull County, and is the mother of three children: Charley E., Willie A. and Minnie A. M. Mr. McDowell and wife are members of the Evangelical Association, and politically he is a stanch Republican. He is one of the successful, enterprising farmers of West Salem Township.

JAMES McELHENNEY, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born about one mile north of Jamestown, Penn., in Crawford County, May 31, 1818. His father, James McElheney, was a native of the County Donegal, Ireland, and immigrated to Crawford County in 1801, where he married Jane Steen. She, too, was a native of County Donegal, and came to America with her parents when three years old. In 1824 James McElheney and wife removed to West Salem Township, Mercer County, and located where their son Steen now lives. They reared four sons and two daughters: William, deceased; Jane, deceased; James, David, Charles Steen and Rebecca. The parents died on the old homestead in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church. The father was a soldier in the War of 1812. Our subject was reared in West Salem Township, and was married April 20, 1848, to Mrs. Margaret Stinard, daughter of John Loutzenhiser, a pioneer of 1800. Mrs. McElheney was born on their present homestead March 31, 1819, and married George Stinard, by whom she had one daughter, Elizabeth, wife of David Grim, of Greenville. By her second marriage five children have grown to maturity: Mary J., wife of Robert Phillips, of Sandy Creek Township; Margaret, wife of John Knappenberger, of Sandy Creek; John, Anne, wife of Alvin Fry, of West Salem, and Oleva B., wife of James Clark, of Greenville. Mr. McElheney and wife are members of the Baptist Church, and in politics he is a Republican of strong temperance views. He commenced life poor, but by rigid industry and close attention to his business affairs he has accumulated considerable property. He and wife reside upon the farm settled by her father early in the present century. Mr. McElheney is one of the prosperous, enterprising farmers of the township.

JOHN McLAUGHLIN, son of James and Mary McLaughlin, was born in Ireland about 1758, and was there married May 12, 1790, to Nancy, daughter of Patrick McLaughlin. One child, Patrick, was born in Ireland March 28, 1792, and the following year the parents immigrated to Mifflin County, Penn., where three children were born to them: Mary, February 8, 1794, first married Andrew Brown and afterward Richard Morford; Henry, who reared a family, and went west and died, and William. In 1799 the family removed to Beaver County, Penn., where another son, John, was born the following spring. In April, 1800, John McLaughlin and family settled in West Salem Township, where he died August 9, 1801. He was the first pioneer who died in that township, and he was interred in the neighborhood. His widow married Peter Lossee, December 4, 1802, and removed to Kinsman, Ohio, where she died. Their eldest son, Patrick, grew up in West Salem Township and at Kinsman, Ohio, and was married September 8, 1814, to Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary Smail. She was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., July 18, 1792. After his marriage he located at Kinsman, Ohio, but soon returned to West Salem, where he reared nine children: Jemima, widow of John W. Woods; Mary, widow of J. C. Morford; Sarah M., widow of James M. Johnston; Phoebe, widow of William Morford; Simeon, George, deceased; Enos, Cyrus and Alva. The mother died in West Salem August 23, 1830, and her husband again married and removed to Iowa, where he died April 20, 1859.

STEWART McLAUGHLIN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the old homestead, in West Salem Township, February 1, 1847. His father, Justus McLaughlin, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, there grew to manhood, and afterward came to West Salem Township, where he met and married Lydia, daughter of Henry and Catharine Lininger, pioneers of this township. Mrs. McLaughlin was born in West Salem, and after their marriage they settled on the farm where they both died. They reared four children: Electa, wife of Jacob Boger; Louisa, wife of P. Dilley; Addison and Stewart. The mother died May 5, 1851, and her husband survived her till October 22, 1874. Politically Justus McLaughlin was a Republican, and a highly respected citizen. Our subject has lived upon his present homestead all his life. He was married January 11, 1883, to Miss Sadie, daughter of James W. Wise, of Hickory Township. Mrs. McLaughlin was born in that township, and is the mother of two children: William C. and Opal E. She is a member of the United Presbyterian Church. Politically Mr. McLaughlin is a Republican, and one of the enterprising citizens of his native township.

ALBERT R. McMahan, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Lordstown, Trumbull Co., Ohio, January 24, 1846, and is a son of Thomas and Lovina (Thorn) McMahan, the former a native of Trumbull County, Ohio, and the latter of Morgantown, W. Va. They were married in Trumbull County, Ohio, and were the parents of fifteen children, only ten of whom grew to maturity, viz.: Henry, Joseph, deceased; Lemuel, Mary, James; Benjamin, deceased; Angeline, deceased; Lewis, Albert R. and Jerusha. In the spring of 1846 the parents removed with their family to West Salem Township, Mercer County. The father erected a saw-mill at Maysville, which he ran two years. In 1848 he purchased the farm whereon our subject lives, and erected a steam grist-mill, the first in this part of the county. He operated this mill nearly twenty years, and then sold it to Philip Schuster, who ran it until it was burned down. Mr. McMahan afterward built and operated a saw and planing-mill in Greenville about four years. He died on the homestead, in West Salem, October 15, 1875, and his widow August 29, 1887. He was a Republican in politics, and one of the most enterprising citizens of the township. Albert R. has lived in Mercer County since he was three months old, and grew up under the parental roof. He was married January 17, 1878, to Miss Linda, daughter of Matthias and Mary Weinland, of West Salem Township. Five children have been born of this union: Harry, Eva, Matthias, Thomas and Benjamin. Mr. McMahan has followed farming principally as an occupation. Politically he is a Democrat, and one of the energetic citizens of the community.

HUGH P. McMILLEN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in what is now Hempfield Township, Mercer Co., Penn., February 1, 1829, and is a son of William and Margaret (McClimans) McMillen, the former a native of New Jersey, and the latter of Bedford County, Penn. William McMillen was twice married, first to Nancy Parker, of Fayette County, Penn., and with his wife came to Mercer County in 1800, where she died about 1816, leaving four children: Mary, John, Alexander and Thomas, all of whom are dead. His second wife was Margaret, daughter of William and Mary (Ritchy) McClimans, of West Salem Township. The former was a soldier in the Revolution, and settled in West Salem Township in 1798-99. They reared the following children by this union: Margaret J., deceased; Nancy, William Mc., deceased; Sarah, James, Hugh P. and Thompson. William McMillen died in Hempfield Township, and his widow in Otter Creek, both in the United Presbyterian faith. He served in Capt. Gilliland's company in 1812. Our subject has spent his life in this county, and has always followed farming. He was married October 5, 1854, to Anna Maria, daughter of Peter and Hannah (Wasser) Beaver, of Hempfield Township. Mrs. McMillen has reared seven children: Mary H., William P., deceased; Elizabeth, wife of David Kitch, of Franklin, Penn.; Alma, Addison C., Ada J. and Velzora. The family belong to the United Presbyterian Church, and in politics Mr. McMillen is a Democrat, and a descendant of one of the oldest families in Mercer County.

JOHN MCNEILLY, deceased, was born near Baltimore, Md., February 11, 1798, to John and Agnes McNeilly, natives of Ireland, and there grew up and learned the cabinet-maker's trade. About 1827 he came to Mercer County, but soon afterward returned to Maryland for his mother, whom he brought back with him, and who died October 23, 1845, aged seventy-five. He worked for the Mossmans a few years, and then purchased a part of the tract of land on which his sons, James and John P., now live. He married Sarah Bowman, a native of West Salem Township, whose parents, Samuel and Mary Bowman, were pioneers of this township. Eight children were the fruits of this union: Mary Ann, wife of Christopher Moats, of Greene Township; Sarah J., wife of Absalom Arner, of Missouri; Agnes, widow of Franklin Melvin; Jemima, wife of Richard McLaughlin, of West Salem Township; Jeremiah, deceased; John P., James and Elizabeth. After locating on his land John McNeilly followed farming, which he continued until a short time preceding his death, which occurred April 18, 1886, in the eighty-ninth year of his age. Politically he was a life-long Democrat, and filled most of the township offices, being justice of the peace many years. He was an industrious, honest man, and was quite successful in the accumulation of property. His widow resides on the old homestead, at the ripe old age of eighty-six years. John P., his eldest son, was born on the old homestead October 31, 1844, and has always lived in the township. He is a stanch Democrat, and a member of the K. of P. His youngest son, James, was born March 22, 1847, and has always dwelt on the home farm. He was married, June 29, 1871, to Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph W. and Mary Calvert, of West Salem Township. One son, James, is the fruit of this marriage. Politically Mr. McNeilly is one of the leading Democrats of the township, has filled most of the township offices, and is an enterprising, progressive farmer.

JOHN R. MELVIN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township, upon the farm where his son, Lester, now lives, August 15, 1802, and is a son of Richard and Agnes (Watson) Melvin, natives of Ireland. They immigrated to Wilmington, Del., in 1792, whence they removed to the Red Stone Settlement, in Westmoreland County, Penn. In the spring of 1798 Richard Melvin came to Mercer County and selected a tract of land in West Salem Township, upon which he built a cabin, and then returned to his home. In 1799 he brought out his family, then consisting of his wife and one son, James R., and took up his residence in his cabin home. Four children were born after their coming to the Shenango Valley: Agnes, who died in girlhood; Sarah, who married William Hollingsworth; John R., and Mary, who became the wife of Michael Reed, all of whom are dead except

John R. The father died December 19, 1824, aged fifty-six years, and his widow survived him till 1848. Our subject grew to manhood on the old homestead, and was married November 26, 1829, to Elizabeth, daughter of William Woods, a pioneer of West Salem Township. She bore him eight children, only three of whom grew to maturity: Lester, Emeline, wife of John Laird, of Greene Township, and Franklin, deceased. Mrs. Melvin died June 2, 1846, and he was again married, April 2, 1850, to Rebecca, daughter of Thomas Woods, of Pymatuning Township. No children survive of this union, his second wife dying April 10, 1855. Mr. Melvin was then married to Mrs. Harriet Fell, nee Sponsler, who bore him one son, Charles, of West Salem. He was again married, May 10, 1870, to Annie M., daughter of George and Sarah Logan, of Greene Township. Mr. Melvin has spent his whole life in West Salem Township, and both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. He has always supported the Democratic party; has filled the office of justice of the peace fifteen years in succession, and united seventy-five couples in marriage. He has been one of the most prominent supporters of the public schools since their establishment, and has won and retained the respect and confidence of the best people of his native county.

LESTER MELVIN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on his present homestead September 15, 1831, and is the eldest living child of John R. Melvin, a pioneer of West Salem Township. Our subject here grew to manhood, and received his education in the district school of his neighborhood. He was married May 31, 1855, to Miss Mary, daughter of Henry and Salome (Bortz) Miller. The former was born in West Salem Township, and was a son of Adam Miller, who came here from Maryland in 1802, where he died. Henry Miller and wife died in West Salem, in the Lutheran faith. Mrs. Melvin was born in West Salem Township, and is the mother of seven children: John, Herman, Allen, George, Ida, Susie and Lomy. Politically Mr. Melvin is a staunch Democrat, and in 1882 was elected justice of the peace, and served one term. He was again chosen to the same office in 1888. He has served seventeen years on the school board of West Salem Township, and has always taken a deep interest in the growth and prosperity of his native county. He is recognized as one of the prominent, and most prosperous farmers of West Salem.

CHARLES H. MELVIN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the old homestead, in West Salem Township, March 14, 1860, and is the youngest child of John R. Melvin. Our subject has passed his life in Mercer County, and received his education in its public schools. He was married September 9, 1880, to Eva, daughter of Joseph B. and Mary (McLaughlin) Nelson, natives of Mercer County. Mrs. Melvin was born in West Salem Township, and is the mother of two children: Harry Clifford and Joseph Plummer. Politically Mr. Melvin is a Democrat, and one of the progressive young farmers of the township.

FREEMAN L. MILLER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, October 17, 1848, and is a son of Jeremiah and Salome (Smith) Miller, the former a native of Mahoning County, Ohio, and his wife of Lehigh County, Penn. They were married in Mahoning County, and reared four children: Augusta A., Freeman L., Laura A. and Felley M., all of whom are living. The parents were members of the Evangelical Association, and died in Trumbull County, Ohio, the father March 18, 1877, and the mother May 9, 1884. Freeman L. grew up in his native county, attended school at Farmington, Ohio, and taught in that county two terms. He was married December 29, 1869, to Miss Olive Craig, of Trumbull County, Ohio, who bore him one son, Claudius E. In 1874 he came to Mercer County, where Mrs. Miller died, at Shenango, January 10, 1878, in the Evangelical faith. Mr. Miller was again married December 14, 1880, to Miss Mary A., daughter of George S. and Mary Eisenhart, who settled on the farm where our subject now lives in 1851, and where both died. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his wife of the Reformed. Politically he is a Republican, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity. Mr. Miller was a telegraph operator for fourteen years, three years at Fredonia and eleven at Shenango, but gave up that business in the spring of 1888, and has since devoted his attention to farming and stock raising, being interested in a stock farm in Nebraska.

MORFORD FAMILY—Joseph Morford, deceased, was born in New Jersey in 1774, and there grew to manhood. In the last decade of the eighteenth century, he came into the Shenango Valley and settled on a tract of land in what is now West Salem Township, Mercer Co., Penn. He built his log cabin where his grandson, Dr. Ralph D. Morford, now lives. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Morford, a cousin, who died without issue. In 1804 he was again married, to Elizabeth Fell, born September 25, 1785, and daughter of Nathan and Ann Fell, pioneers of Pymatuning Township. With her he began improving his farm while the Indians were yet their neighbors and deer and other wild game roamed at will through the now beautiful Shenango Valley. They were the parents of ten children, seven of whom grew to maturity: George, the eldest, was married to Sarah Brown, of Vernon Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, and subsequently removed to Illinois, where he lived to rear a family; Martha, born in 1809, was married to Robert Woods, of Pymatuning Township, and moved to Illinois, where she died in 1876; Rachel, married Elisha Fox, of Pymatuning Township, and removed to Illinois, where she resides, a widow without issue; Benjamin, married Rebecca Stem, of Pymatuning Township, and removed to Illinois, and there died after rearing a family; Nathan, further notice of whom is given in this sketch; Joseph, married Hannah Dunbar, of Trumbull County, Ohio, where he died in early manhood, after being very successful in the practice of medicine; Rebecca, married Andrew Burnett, who at the time of marriage was a dealer in coal in Hubbard, Ohio, and afterward removed to Greenville, where they died, leaving one son, James, who resides in that town. All of the children are dead except Mrs. Rachel Fox, of Youngstown, Ill. Joseph Morford was a very successful farmer, and accumulated a large estate. Politically he was first a Democrat and then a Republican, and filled offices of trust several years. He was a quiet, unobtrusive man, upright and straightforward, of strict integrity in all his dealings, and one whose opinions and judgment were held in high esteem by all who knew him. He died March 4, 1861, his widow surviving him until July 27, 1868, being in their eighty-seventh and eighty-third years, respectively. All of their children were born on the old homestead, and seven of them became heads of families.

Nathan Morford was born on the homestead May 14, 1817, and grew up and spent his whole life on the home farm, which he purchased of his father. He was married January 10, 1841, to Miss Mary Ann Smith, a native of Cumberland County, Penn., who had been teaching school in the neighborhood a few years prior to her marriage. She is a daughter of John and Sarah Smith, natives of Cumberland County, Penn., and reared a family of three children: Nathan A., of Phoenix, Arizona; Ellen, wife of W. H. Ruhlman, of North Lima, Ohio, and Dr. Ralph D., a practicing physician, living on the old homestead. Politically Mr. Morford was a Republican, and represented this county in the Legislature in 1872-74. He was a man of enterprise and public spirit, and always took a deep interest in the public affairs of his native county. He was a Universalist in religious belief, and highly esteemed by those who knew him best. He died February 8, 1881. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. His widow and youngest son reside on the old homestead where the husband and father passed his whole life.

JOSEPH MORFORD, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., December 30, 1819. His father, Richard Morford, came to Mercer County with his parents, John and Mary Ann (Cox) Morford, about 1803-04, who settled in Hickory Township, where both died. John Morford was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. After coming to this county Richard was married to Elizabeth Morford, a sister of Joseph Morford, then living in the south part of West Salem Township, of which union five sons and one daughter grew to maturity: James, deceased; John, William, deceased; Ann, deceased wife of Jeffrey Bentley, of Hickory Township; Joseph and Isaac. Mrs. Morford died July 26, 1826, and her husband married Mrs. Mary Brown, nee McLaughlin, widow of Andrew Brown, and removed to West Salem Township. She bore him four children: Emeline, deceased; Eliza, deceased; Andrew and Judson. She died July 20, 1873, and her husband September 1, 1874, both in the faith of the Baptist Church. Politically Richard Morford was first a Whig and afterward a Republican. Our subject was reared in West Salem Township, and has always followed farming. He was married August 14, 1845, to Elizabeth, daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth (Atchison) Hunter, and granddaughter of Alexander Hunter, a pioneer surveyor, who settled in West Salem Township in the spring of 1812. Mr. Morford and wife are members of the Baptist Church, and politically he is a Republican.

JOSEPH NELSON, deceased, came to Mercer County in 1797 and settled in Sandy Creek Township. He had married Jane Armstrong before coming here, who bore him ten children: Isabel, Jane, Samuel, Betsy, James, Joseph, Alexander, Margaret, John and Irvine, the two last mentioned being the only survivors. The parents both died in Mercer County. Alexander was born in Sandy Creek Township August 12, 1801, and spent his whole life in Mercer County. He was married, March 12, 1829, to Sarah, daughter of Andrew and Mary Brown, pioneers of West Salem Township, where Mrs. Nelson was born March 26, 1812. They reared six children: Mary Ann, widow of William Brown; Joseph B., Sarah J., wife of Dr. L. N. Woods, of Oregon; Margaret (deceased), James W., and Clara, wife of Monroe Saul, of Greenville. After his marriage Alexander settled on a part of his father's homestead, near Sheakleyville, where he resided till the spring of 1835, when he purchased the old homestead in West Salem Township, where he spent the balance of his life. He was a member of the Baptist Church for fifty-three years, and politically he was a Republican. He died September 11, 1886, being then one of the oldest settlers in the county. He was an honest, upright man, and bore a high character among all who knew him. He was a good neighbor and a kind husband and father. His widow resides on the old homestead with her son, James W., and enjoys good health. She has been a member of the Baptist Church for nearly half a century. James W. was born on the old homestead August 11, 1849, and has always resided here. He married, December 20, 1877, Amanda Etzweiler, of Harrisburg, Penn., and have three children: Freddie E., Maggie B. and Frank A. Politically Mr. Nelson is a Republican.

JAMES NELSON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on his present homestead February 2, 1838. His father, James Nelson, was born in Maryland, and came to this county with his parents, James Nelson and wife, when a boy, and settled in West Salem Township. Here he grew up and was married to Isabella, daughter of James McCullough, of Sugar Grove Township, and settled where his sons, James and Samuel, now live. They reared seven children, all of whom are living: John, Deborah, wife of W. G. W. Porter, of West Salem Township; Hannah J., wife of John Grover; James, Samuel, Nancy A., wife of William McBroom, of Greene Township, and Amanda, wife of Robert McMichael, of Meadville, Penn. The parents died on the old homestead, in the United Presbyterian faith. The father was a soldier in the War of 1812, and in politics a Democrat. He died February 27, 1867, his widow surviving him until December 17, 1887. Our subject has passed the most of his life in Mercer County. He was married, February 27, 1862, to Sarah E., daughter of Samuel and Anne E. (Moffett) Dumars, and granddaughter of Alexander Dumars, one of the earliest and most prominent settlers of what is now Hempfield Township. Mrs. Nelson was born in that township, and has had six children: Annabel (deceased), James B., Maude, Sarah J., William D. and an infant. Politically Mr. Nelson is a Democrat, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of the county.

ISAAC PARKER was a son of Samuel and Mary Parker, and was born in West Salem Township February 24, 1815. He was a hardy pioneer boy, who delighted in the pastimes of hunting and playing in the dense forest that surrounded his father's log cabin. At an early age he attended the district school, and obtained what knowledge he could, but as he grew older he was obliged to assist in his father's saw-mill. His thirst for knowledge was great; books at that time were scarce, and his father's library contained but few volumes. Such as they were he read and re-read, every spare moment being spent in study, and by this course he mastered the rudiments of a good education. At the age of twenty-three he married Miss Priscilla Burnett, of Hubbard, Ohio, who was the daughter of Enos Burnett, an old pioneer, who was born in the year 1763, and was but thirteen years old at the time of the Declaration of Independence. He frequently saw Washington and his wife. After he grew to manhood he immigrated from New Jersey to Trumbull County, Ohio, and settled in Hubbard Township. There were but three white families in the vicinity, though Indians were numerous. Priscilla Burnett was the youngest daughter by his second marriage. She was married to Isaac Parker, April 1, 1838. By this union were born two daughters. Esther M. A. S. Parker, eldest daughter, was born February 24, 1839. She studied very hard at school, and at the age of twelve years had finished geography, astronomy, philosophy, and was making rapid progress in other branches. At the age of sixteen years she commenced teaching, and ultimately between each term of teaching she attended the best normal schools. She had a good knowledge of all the higher branches and fine arts. Her correspondence was large. Five years before her death she destroyed 2,300 letters, besides postals. Her correspondence continued until her death, which took place March 5, 1886. Mary A. T., youngest daughter, was born December 18, 1844. She was about ten months old at the time of her father's death, which occurred November 9, 1845. She was reared and educated by her mother, and attended different seminaries. She is well versed in the common branches, and studied many of the higher ones. On the 1st of January, 1866, she was united in marriage to A. J. McMurren, of Brookfield, Ohio, who was a soldier in the late Rebellion. In politics he is a Republican. By this union Mrs. McMurren is the mother of two children: Duward B. P. and Durant E. L. Mrs. McMurren still resides on the old farm that was willed to her by her father.

WILSON PARKER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born upon the farm where he now resides, October 20, 1821. His father, Samuel Parker, was born near Mount Holly, N. J., where his parents died when he was an infant. He there grew to manhood, and in 1804 came to Trumbull County, Ohio. He married Mrs. Mary Bowman, nee Shetler, whose husband, Samuel Bowman, died March 4, 1807. She reared the following children: Harriett, wife of Abraham Artman, of Greene Township; David, deceased; Isaac, deceased; Eliza, wife of James Burnett, of Ohio; Wilson, and Margaret, wife of Alexander Wade, of Greene Township. After his marriage Samuel Parker settled in West Salem Township, and a few years later located on the farm where his son, Wilson, lives. Here he died, September 22, 1859, in his eightieth year, and his widow March 2, 1875, in her ninety-seventh year. Mr. Parker was a Democrat in politics, and filled a number of the township offices. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and a respected citizen of the township. Our subject has passed his whole life on his present homestead. He was married November 27, 1843, to Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Mary Waid, of Kinsman, Ohio. Mrs. Parker was born at Kinsman, November 27, 1822, and reared two children: Mary L. and William L. She died in 1851, and he was married again, October 9 of that year, to Mary Waid, a sister of his first wife, and also a native of Kinsman. Three children are the fruits of this union: Robert, Samuel K. and Elizabeth R. The family belong to the Baptist Church, and in politics Mr. Parker was formerly a Democrat, but is now a Prohibitionist. He has filled several of the local offices of his township, and has been quite successful through life.

SAMUEL K. PARKER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born on the old homestead, in West Salem Township, January 25, 1855, and is a son of Wilson Parker, of that township. He was married September 22, 1874, to Emma J., daughter of Josiah and Permelia O. Brown, of West Salem. Mrs. Parker was born on the old homestead where her mother now resides. She has three children by this marriage: Millie M., Alice E. and Royal J. W. Mr. Parker and wife are members of the Baptist Church, and in politics he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM T. PHELAN, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in County Kilkenny, Ireland, February 6, 1838, and is a son of Michael and Mary Phelan, who spent their lives in Ireland. Our subject grew to manhood in his native county, and in the summer of 1859 immigrated to the United States. After visiting his brother, Rev. Richard Phelan, of Armstrong County, Penn., (now bishop of Pittsburgh), he went to Dayton, Ohio. He spent about four years in that portion of the State as book-keeper and clerk in wholesale and retail grocery houses. In 1864 he returned to Pennsylvania and spent about one year in the oil country. He came to Greenville in the spring of 1866, and in partnership with William Shields opened a grocery store. He continued this business until March, 1871, when he located on his present homestead, in West Salem Township, and has since been engaged in farming. Mr. Phelan was married June 15, 1869, to Miss Eliza J., daughter of the late Mark Doyle, of West Salem Township. She was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, and is the mother of eight children: Mary R. J., Elizabeth T., Richard M., Mark F., Bridget C., Annie J., Johanna I. and Florence. The family belong to the Catholic Church, and in politics Mr. Phelan is an unswerving Democrat. He is one of the well-known and respected citizens of West Salem Township.

WILLIAM G. W. PORTER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Hickory Township, Mercer Co., Penn., July 24, 1833. His father, Luke Porter, was born in Eastern Pennsylvania, and was a son of William Porter, one of the earliest settlers of that township. Luke grew up in his native county, and married Jane, eldest daughter of William Welch, a pioneer of Hickory Township. After marriage he settled near Sharon, and removed to the farm now occupied by our subject in 1835. He reared one son and eight daughters, and three of the latter have since died. His first wife died here, and he was again married and removed to Virginia, where he was killed by the cars in 1883, being then in his eighty-ninth year. Our subject has lived on his present farm for the past fifty-two years (it being the old homestead), and has always been engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was married March 6, 1860, to Deborah E., daughter of James and Isabel Nelson, deceased pioneers of West Salem Township. They have reared six sons: Clifford C., James L., Victor W., Vincent M., Bion W. and Curtis L., all of whom are living. Mr. Porter is a Democrat, and one of the leading farmers of the township.

CHARLES RICE, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., July 26, 1819, and is a son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Bear) Rice, natives of Lehigh County, who came to West Salem Township in the spring of 1837, and here passed the remaining years of their lives. They belonged to the Reformed Church, in which faith they died. They were the parents of the following children: Maria, Charles, Sarah, deceased; Emma, deceased; Julia, Elizabeth, Lestie, Catharine and Henry. Our subject has lived in this township for the past fifty-one years, and has always been engaged in farming. He was married October 2, 1842, to Abigail, daughter of Daniel and Polly (Hummel) Goode, natives of Lehigh County, Penn., where Mrs. Rice was also born. She has had eleven children, eight of whom are living: Sarah, Lydia, Samuel, Malinda, Henry, Charles, George and Elizabeth. Mr. Rice and wife are members of the Evangelical Association, and politically he is a Republican.

EDWIN RICHARDSON, master mechanic on the P. S. & L. E. Railroad, post-office Greenville, was born in Stoddard, Cheshire Co., N. H., June 17, 1835, and is a son of Franklin and Harriett (Wilson) Richardson, natives of the same town. His mother died in 1878, and his father resides in Kansas, at the ripe old age of eighty years. Our subject began railroading in 1853, on the New York Central, and in 1862 came to Meadville, Penn., where he was connected with the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad till 1869. The next five years were spent in Kansas and Texas. In 1875 he took a position on the S. & A. Railroad, and two years afterward became master mechanic at Shenango, which position he has filled for the past eleven years. Mr. Richardson was married April 26, 1864, to Miss Sarah J. Powell, of Corry, Penn., who has borne him three children: Frank C., Charley C., and Edwin. Both he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. Politically he is a Republican, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and one of the well-known railroad men of Mercer County.

JAMES SAY, farmer, post office Greenville, was born in Butler County, Penn., August 22, 1812, and is a son of John and Sarah (Martin) Say, natives of Pennsylvania. His maternal grandfather, John Martin, was born in Ireland, and served through the Revolutionary War. His parents died in Butler County, Penn. Our subject grew up in his native county, and was married April 12, 1849, to Nancy, daughter of Samuel and Nancy (Story) Steel, natives of Pennsylvania, and of Irish ancestry. Her grandfather, Isaac Steel, emigrated from Ireland to Pennsylvania, served in the Revolutionary struggle, and fought the Indians on the western border of the State. Mrs. Say's father is dead, and her mother resides in Armstrong County, Penn., at the advanced age of ninety-two years. Mrs. Say was born in Armstrong County, April 27, 1824, and has reared nine children: Samuel N. (deceased), Sarah J. (wife of D. C. Shull), John P., Malinda (wife of Alfred Bales), R. L., William, Elizabeth, Belle and Tillie. Mr. Say resided in Butler County until April, 1873, when he purchased and removed to the farm north of Greenville, where he has since resided. The family are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Greenville. In politics he has always been a Republican, with temperance proclivities.

PETER SIMPKINS, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, March 11, 1819, and is a son of Peter and Martha Simpkins, natives of Eastern Pennsylvania, who removed to Ohio some years before the birth of our subject, crossing the Mountains in a six-horse wagon. In 1827 they removed across the line into West Salem Township, Mercer County, where the parents died. The father was a member of the Disciple Church, while his wife was one of the organizers of West Salem Baptist Church. They reared the following children: John, William, Catharine, David, Martha, Enoch, Rebecca, Peter and Mary Ann. William and Peter are the only survivors of the family. The latter was left an orphan at the age of thirteen, and was then thrown upon his own resources, obtaining only a few months' schooling in the old fashioned log school-house of pioneer days. He grew to manhood in West Salem Township, and for over sixty years has made his home therein. He was married September 6, 1838, to Emily, daughter of Joseph Dille, of Pymatuning Township. She was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, and has had twelve children, eleven of whom are living: Juliett, William, Hasen, Mary, Joseph, Eliza, Linus, George, Almon, Perry and Florence. Mr. Simpkins has resided on his present homestead since his marriage. For over thirty years he was principally engaged in operating a coal mine on his farm, where it is believed the first coal in Mercer County was mined. He also devoted his attention to farming in connection with his coal business. Both he and wife have been members of West Salem Baptist Church since July, 1844, and in politics he has been one of the leading Democrats of his township since early manhood.

FREDERICK SMITH, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Germany January 20, 1828. His parents were Jacob and Magdalena Smith, natives of Germany, who immigrated to Allegheny County, Penn., in 1830, where they resided until the spring of 1844, and then settled on the farm in West Salem Township where our subject now lives. They reared eight children: Frederick, John, deceased; Mary, wife of Peter Yeager, of Perry Township; Elizabeth, widow of William Whitney, of Greene Township; Magdalena, wife of Andrew Kechler, of Kansas; George B.; Christina, wife of Edward Courtright, of Trumbull County, Ohio, and Caroline, wife of John Snodgrass, of Iowa. The parents were Presbyterians, and died on the old homestead, the father April 20, 1875, and the mother November 18, 1886. Frederick has lived on his present farm since the coming of his parents in 1844. He was married August 25, 1887, to Emeline, daughter of James and Jemima Gillis, pioneer residents of West Salem Township, where Mrs. Smith was born. Politically Mr. Smith has been a life-long Democrat, and reveres the memory of his parents, who settled here forty-four years ago.

ALEXANDER SNODGRASS, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in what is now Greene Township June 28, 1828, and is a son of John Snodgrass, a native of Ireland, who came to Mercer County about 1825. In 1827 he married Anna, daughter of Thomas and Isabella (McClellan) Listen, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of Crawford County, Penn., and who settled north of Greenville, in West Salem Township, at an early date, where both died. John Snodgrass located in Greene Township after his marriage, and there reared six sons and four daughters: Alexander, John, deceased; Thomas, Margaret, Isabella, Amos, Mary, William, deceased; Robert and Jane. His parents died on the old homestead in Greene Township, in the faith of the United Presbyterian Church. Alexander has passed his whole life in Mercer County. He was married June 28, 1859, to Jane, daughter of John and Rachel (McMillen) Ferguson, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter of Fayette County, Penn. John Ferguson immigrated to Westmoreland County, Penn., with his parents, John and Ann (Johnston) Ferguson, in 1790, and removed with his father to this township in the spring of 1798. He served as captain in the War of 1812, and spent the balance of his life in this township. Mrs. Snodgrass has reared three daughters: Mary E., wife of John Reed, of Hempfield Township; Rachel J., wife of Charles Reigle, of Sugar Grove Township, and Annabel, deceased. Mr. Snodgrass and wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and in politics he is a Democrat. He and wife are descendants of two old families, and are well-known citizens of this county.

SPEIR FAMILY.—Among the early settlers of West Salem Township was John Speir, Sr., a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, and the only son of John Speir, a wholesale merchant of that city. At the age of twenty-one his father set him up in the mercantile business in Edinburgh, which he carried on about two years. In 1788 failing health compelled him to sell out his stock, and he immigrated to Baltimore, Md., soon afterward removing to Pittsburgh, Penn., where he went into business. The dishonesty of his partner forced him to again give up business, and he removed to Little Beaver, Beaver Co., Penn. While in Pittsburgh he was married, in 1796, to Miss Ann Harnit, who was born and reared near Baltimore, Md. During the Revolutionary War Mrs. Martha Washington boarded at the tavern of her parents, at Warm Springs, Va., where Washington occasionally visited his wife. At that time Mrs. Washington presented to Miss Harnit an eight-gallon iron kettle, which is now owned by her grandson, Erwin Brown, of West Salem Township. John Speir and wife, with their three eldest children, removed from Beaver County to West Salem Township in the fall of 1801, locating about one mile west of the site of Greenville. They reared the following children: John H., born April 3, 1797; Polly, February 2, 1799; Margaret, May 29, 1801; Annie, September 5, 1803; Samuel S., September 9, 1805; Elizabeth, February 8, 1808; Robena, June 22, 1810, and James, April 26, 1813. All were reared and died in Mercer County. The father died March 26, 1813, and his widow afterward married Alexander Nelson, and died September 2, 1841. They were Baptists in faith, and old-line Whigs in politics.

John H. Speir, the eldest son of John Speir, was born April 3, 1797, at Little Beaver, Penn., and grew up in West Salem Township. He was married in 1820 to Sarah, daughter of John Smail, a native of Germany, who came from Westmoreland County to West Salem Township in 1812-13. They reared twelve children: Mary Ann, deceased wife of David Artherholt, deceased; Seth, of Greenville; Silas, deceased; Cordelia, widow of Joseph McMahan; Marilla, deceased wife of Henry McMahan; Sidney, of Missouri; Evi, of Illinois; Ely, deceased; Lynn S., of Greenville; Lyman B., of the same borough; John S., of Kansas, and Sarah, widow of Benjamin McMahan. The father was a prosperous farmer of West Salem Township, and one of the local organizers of the Republican party. He died August 11, 1860, and his widow survived him until August 14, 1878.

JAMES SPEIR was born in West Salem Township April 26, 1813, and was the youngest child of John Speir, who settled in the township in 1801. James grew to manhood in West Salem, and married Nancy, daughter of Andrew and Polly (McLaughlin) Brown. She was born in this township, and reared eight children: Elon, Eliza, deceased wife of Eri Calvert; Polly, wife of Jacob Reed; Irene, Smith, Sadie, Elmina and John H. Mr. Speir learned the carpenter's trade, and in connection with undertaking followed that business many years. He afterward settled on the farm where the remaining years of his life were passed, and where he died July 8, 1888. His wife died September 5, 1886, in the Baptist faith, to which denomination Mr. Speir also belonged. Politically he was a Republican, and throughout his mature years was recognized as one of the most successful farmers of his native township. Though a quiet, unassuming man, he was nevertheless progressive and enterprising, while his character and every-day life were strongly marked with the golden stamp of charity and integrity.

ELON SPEIR, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township September 1, 1835, and is the eldest son of James Speir, previously spoken of. Excepting seven years spent in Ohio, our subject has always lived in his native township. His principal vocation has been farming, though he was engaged in the meat business one year in Ohio and six years in Mercer County. Mr. Speir was married, March 5, 1861, to Miss Catharine, daughter of Rev. Jacob Morris, who bore him two children: James and Catherine A. Mrs. Speir died March 16, 1867. He was again married, March 15, 1869, to Miss Emma, daughter of Joseph and Mary M. (Bigler) Kitch, early settlers of Otter Creek Township. Four children are the fruits of this union: Osta, Albert, Orra and Grace. Mr. Speir and wife are members of West Salem Baptist Church. He is an ardent Republican, and does what he can toward furthering the educational and religious interests of his township.

JOHN H. SPEIR, farmer, post-office Greenville, youngest son of the late James Speir, was born in West Salem Township. He was married, March 1, 1877, to Maggie C., daughter of John and Catharine Loutzenhiser, early settlers of West Salem Township. Mrs. Speir was born in West Salem, and is the mother of two children: Myrta and Elda. Politically Mr. Speir is a Republican, and one of the enterprising farmers of the township.

JOHN TEMPLETON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Armstrong County, Penn., January 24, 1824, and is a son of William and Rachel (Starr) Templeton, natives of Pennsylvania, and grandson of Philip Templeton, one of the first commissioners of Armstrong County. They were married in Armstrong County, and in 1845 came to Greenville, and for two years kept the Exchange Hotel. They then bought a farm in West Salem Township, where they resided until death, the father dying in 1865, and the mother in 1877. They reared nine children: Philip, Robert, who died at the age of sixty years; John, Chambers, William, Culbertson, James Y., Margaret, who married J. W. James, and Mary E., who became the wife of A. R. Davis. The parents were members of the United Presbyterian Church, and died in that faith. Our subject was reared in his native county, and in 1846 followed his parents to Mercer County. In the spring of 1849 he crossed the plains to California, where he was successfully engaged in the mines nearly two years. He then returned to Mercer County and purchased his present homestead, where he has since resided. Mr. Templeton was married, January 5, 1852, to Sarah, daughter of Jeremiah and Margaret (Steele) Bates, of Greene Township, Mercer County. She was born in Crawford County, but removed to Greene Township with her parents in childhood. Five children are the fruits of this union: Chambers, William, John, Mary M., widow of Philip Reimold, and Grant. Mrs. Templeton died April 2, 1884, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Templeton is a Republican, and one of the largest land owners and leading stock dealers of the county.

J. Y. TEMPLETON, county commissioner and farmer, was born July 25, 1833, in Armstrong County, Penn., and is a son of William and Rachel Templeton, spoken of in the sketch of his brother John. Our subject was educated in the district schools and in the Greenville public schools. In 1851 he was married to Melvina Bates, daughter of Jeremiah and Margaret (Steele) Bates. Her father was in the War of 1812, and Robert Steele, her grandfather, was a soldier under Gen. Harrison in the same war. Our subject's union gave him four children, but only two survive: Margaret, married J. F. Turner, son of Allen Turner, and has three children, Mary E., Frances M. and Julia; and Francis M., who married May McLaughlin, daughter of Richard McLaughlin; Lizzie and Charles are dead. Mr. Templeton owns 118 acres of good land in West Salem Township, on which his son resides. He was census collector of the township in 1880, and was assessor of the same for two terms. In 1887 he was elected county commissioner, which position he is now filling. He belongs to the R. T. of T., and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Republican. In 1849 William Templeton and four sons went to California with the view of mining. The father, Philip and William traveled by water, while John and Chambers went overland with a mule team. The two last remained about two years, and the others for one year, and all were quite successful.

FRANCIS TRUNKEY, deceased, was born in Hartland, Conn., December 1, 1803, and was a son of Charles and Mary (Ganyard) Trunkey, the former a native of France, and the latter of Connecticut. Charles Trunkey died in Connecticut, and his widow subsequently came to Vernon Township, Trumbull Co., Ohio, where she spent the remaining years of her life. Francis was reared in Connecticut, but ere reaching his majority he came to Trumbull County, Ohio. He was married, January 1, 1828, to Rachel, daughter of John and Catharine Fell, pioneers of West Salem Township. She was born on the old homestead, in West Salem, July 6, 1807, and is the mother of the following children: John, Charles, Ursula, Francis, Orilla, Cyrus and George, all of whom are dead excepting Orilla, who resides with her aged mother on the old homestead. Soon after marriage Francis Trunkey located on a portion of his father-in-law's land, which he cleared up and improved, enduring the usual trials and hardships incident to pioneer life. He was a plain, practical, Christian man, upright and honest, and thoroughly respected by the community in which he resided up to his death, August 1, 1875. He died in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which denomination his widow has been a life-long adherent. He was an ardent Democrat, and the political and judicial eminence to which his eldest son, John, attained, has made the name of Trunkey familiar in nearly every home in Pennsylvania.

*HON. JOHN TRUNKEY, late supreme judge of Pennsylvania, was descended from an honored ancestry. On the paternal side he was of Huguenot descent, dating back to the Revolution, his ancestor being one of the soldiers who came over with LaFayette to take a part in our struggle for freedom. The name was originally Tronquet. John Trunkey was born October 26, 1828, in Trumbull County, Ohio, very near the Mercer County line. His father's farm was partly in Mercer County, Penn., and partly in Ohio. Here he grew up a quiet, silent young man, not giving himself much to social pleasure, but intent on doing his duty in the home and in the community. Feeling within himself that there was some better thing in store for him than cultivating the soil, honorable and dignified though that employment may be, he sought and obtained what preparation was within his reach for professional life.

In the year 1849 he entered the office of Samuel Griffith, Esq., in Mercer, and commenced the study of the law. Here the same quietness and peace characterized him as in the home. He did not mingle much with society, but gave diligent attention to study, striving to master the principles of law, and make himself familiar with the rules of practice. He was admitted to the bar in 1851, and became associated with Mr. Griffith, his preceptor, in the practice of the law. But his reading and study continued. He was very careful in the preparation of his cases. No matter what the case was, before a justice of the peace or the court of common pleas; whether there was involved the matter of a few dollars or thousands, or the liberty and life of his client, every case was most carefully and conscientiously prepared. On the 29th day of September, 1853, he was united in marriage to Miss Agnes, daughter of the late Hon. William S. Garvin, who was ever the light of his dwelling, and his advisor and comforter in the days that followed. Three children were born to them while they resided in Mercer: William Garvin Trunkey, a member of the bar of Warren County; the other two are not living. God took them early to his home above.

In 1866 Mr. Trunkey was elected to the office of president judge of the Twenty-eighth Judicial District, then composed of Mercer and Venango Counties. In 1876 he was re-elected to the same office. Venango County, to which he had in the meantime removed, then, and since 1874, constituted the twenty-eighth district. In 1877 he was elected a justice of the supreme court of this commonwealth, and entered upon its duties in January, 1878. On the common pleas bench he was most patient and generous, listening to the tedious details of business, hearing the arguments of counsel, giving every possible opportunity to the parties in controversy, and saturating his own mind with the spirit of the case, and striving to deal truly and impartially with all parties involved. At the time of Judge Trunkey's elevation to the bench business had greatly increased in the courts, growing out of the great impetus given to trade by the oil discoveries. The number of cases entered on the appearance docket, at the August term 1866, being more than ten times greater than the number entered at the corresponding term this year, 1888, and the business of the criminal courts was correspondingly larger. The result of this increase of business was the accumulation of cases awaiting trial when the new judge came upon the bench. A herculean task was before him, for the statute required that all actions should be reached and have a fair opportunity of trial at least within one year after they had been commenced. But the Judge girded himself for the work, opening the courts at 8 o'clock in the morning, and sitting until six in the evening, and often holding night sessions. The amount of work performed therefore was prodigious. During his first year on the bench he tried in Venango County no less than 120 indictments in the Quarter Sessions and Oyer and Terminer, and 136 cases in the Common Pleas, and he heard and decided 244 cases at argument courts, besides doing a vast amount of work at Chambers, and keeping the business of the populous and important county of Mercer well in hand. With all this pressure of business there was no undue haste. Every man who had business with the courts felt that he was fully heard, and his cause carefully considered. Such was the confidence of the bar and of the people in both his disposition and ability to mete out exact justice between litigant parties, that but few writs of error were taken to his judgments, and such was the correctness of his rulings in the main, that, notwithstanding the great number of novel and difficult questions which grew out of the mining industries of this county in the earlier years of his service in the Common Pleas, but eight of his judgments were reversed during the eleven years that he sat in that court. As a justice of the supreme court he manifested the same patient care and industry that had characterized his work in the court below, listening to the arguments of counsel, making himself familiar with the entire case, reading the "paper books," and then carefully, thoughtfully and conscientiously preparing the opinions assigned him, in good, terse English, that will be a monument of his judicial acumen in the days to come. He did not so much seek rhetorical ornament, or strive to embellish his style by tropes and figures, as to set forth the truth and get at the gist of the matter in hand. He did not even seek to parade his knowledge of books, but to set forth the principles of the law and their application to the matter in hand. He loved justice and truth and righteousness, and brought them to bear in all his official work. But the last two or three years of his labors on the bench were years of suffering and affliction. An insidious disease was sapping the foundations of health and life, and causing the strong man to feel the burden of his daily toil. This disease was developed in the nasal passages, and soon approached the citadel of life, with most dangerous complications. Yet the gravity of the situation was known to but few, even of his friends. He worked on, yet never complained, not a murmur ever escaped his lips. On the bench hearing arguments, or in his study preparing opinions, there seemed to be the same close mental application, although physical suffering was wearing out his life's energy.

In the month of June, 1887, by the advice of his medical counsel, he went to London, England, to be treated by a medical expert. The time spent in London was a period of great suffering, yet he was patient, resigned and trustful, feeling that he was in the hands of a wise and kind Providence, and that all would be well. But the time came when he felt and knew that the end was near. He did not fear the change. Placing his hand in that of his life partner, he spoke kindly of distant friends, and then engaged in prayer for loved ones on that side the water, and on this side; for the church in Franklin, the church of his love; thanked God for the gift of his Son, and his hope of eternal life through him, and for the forgiveness of all his sins. A little later he folded his hands on his bosom; closed his eyes for the last sleep; a little while and the change came; the angels escorted him up to the home, and he passed in to "see the King in his beauty." "Softly as the shadow of a summer cloud death fell on him." As a religious man Judge Trunkey was eminently careful and conscientious. To him there was a yet higher duty he owed to the church and to its great Head, than to all secular affairs. Religion was an active principle in his life, and all he said or did was influenced by it. After his removal to Franklin he was elected a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church, and at once entered upon the active duties of that office. He delighted in visiting the poor and the afflicted, and was generous, almost to a fault, in alleviating the wants of the destitute. At that great convocation, the Pan Presbyterian Council, representing 20,000,000 of adherents, which opened its sessions in London in July, and in which Judge Trunkey was to have sat as a representative from the New World, Rev. Dr. Blakie, of Edinburgh, arose in his place, and, in a feeling announcement, declared that "the death of Judge Trunkey is a great loss to Presbyterianism in America." He was a successful Sabbath-school superintendent. During the two years of his incumbency of that office, he never entered the school without the most thorough preparation of the lesson of the day. Indeed, the secret of his success in life was, that he made a point of being thoroughly prepared for the matter before him by careful reading and patient thinking.

In person Judge Trunkey was about six feet tall, slender, erect in his carriage, and deliberate yet quick in his movements. In manner he was always courteous, and as approachable as a child. He had a wonderful amount of charity and good feeling toward others. No words of bitterness or quick censure ever escaped his lips, but, on the contrary, he always had words of apology and excuse for the evil words and deeds of those around him. There is this crowning fact in his life: from his boyhood until he laid him down to die, in a strange land, he led a pure, sweet and virtuous life. No one ever heard him utter a word, or a sentence, that might not have been uttered in the presence of any company. With all the high positions to which he had attained and adorned, there were, in the judgment of his friends, still greater possibilities before him. But these possibilities were not to be realized in this life, but they are and will be in the blessed life on which he has entered, where the redeemed of the Lord shall be made kings and priests unto God. Such a man was John Trunkey. As a star rises to the zenith without haste, without rest, he rose to a high and higher manhood. He strove for the best thought, the truest speech, the sincerest action. He dealt justly, loved mercy, and walked humbly with God. Surely his life was a successful and happy one. He was happy, too, in his death. It came in the fullness of his mental vigor, before his clear sight was darkened, or his natural force abated. To him it could not come amiss. He lived in the knowledge that life here is a part of life hereafter, and death a transition. Immortality was not with him a theory, but a fact, of which he was conscious. He strove to live as an immortal, and death has consummated his life.

JOHN TUNISON, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in West Salem Township, two miles north of Greenville, July 12, 1833, and is a son of James and Hannah (Miller) Tunison, deceased pioneers of West Salem. In the last decade of the eighteenth century, Richard Tunison, a native of New Jersey, came from Westmoreland County, Penn., with a family of three children: Zebulon, Sarah, who married John Klingensmith, and James, and settled northwest of the site of Greenville. The mother died ere their coming, when James was an infant. Richard Tunison passed the balance of his days on the farm which he settled. James, the father of our subject, was five years old when his father settled in this county, and he spent the rest of his life in West Salem Township. He served in Capt. Gilliland's company in the War of 1812. He married Hannah Miller, a native of Westmoreland County, Penn., and a daughter of Christopher and Sophia Miller, who settled in West Salem Township at an early date. They reared twelve children: Seovelia, Amos (deceased), John, Elizabeth (deceased), Sophia, Mary, Martin, Rebecca, Reuben, Sarah, Jennie and Samantha. The parents were life-long members of the Lutheran Church, and in politics Mr. Tunison was a Democrat. He was killed in Greenville, by his horses running away, October 11, 1854, and his widow survived him until March 16, 1886. Our subject was reared on the old homestead, and learned the blacksmith trade, at which he worked seven years. On the death of his father he returned to the old home and took charge of the same till the younger children had grown up. Mr. Tunison was married July 4, 1859, to Miss Margaret J., daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth Holler. She is a native of West Salem Township, and the mother of five children: Robert E. (deceased), Alice A. (deceased), James S. (deceased), Addie J. and Harry J. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Mr. Tunison is one of the leading Democrats of West Salem Township, as well as one of its most enterprising farmers.

AMOS TUNISON, deceased, was a son of James Tunison, and was born in West Salem Township January 13, 1830, and here grew to manhood and was married to Eliza Hubble, who bore him one son, William F. She died, and he was again married in 1858 to Mrs. Elizabeth (Esslin) Stevenson, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Mowry) Esslin of Allegheny County, Penn. Mrs. Tunison had by her first husband, John Stevenson, two children: Elizabeth A. and John E. By her marriage with Mr. Tunison she was blessed with four children: James H., Chambers R., Samuel, deceased, and Amos. Mr. Tunison was a Democrat, and was highly respected as an upright, honest man. He dealt considerably in horses, and was known all over the county. He died suddenly April 11, 1885, and was buried by the Lutheran minister, of which faith his widow has been a life-long member.

THE WOODS FAMILY were among the earliest settlers of West Salem Township. William and Mollie (Laird) Woods, natives of Ireland, immigrated to Philadelphia and thence to Westmoreland County, Penn., about 1792. In 1797 William took up the tract of land in West Salem whereon his grandson, Willis O. Woods, now lives, upon which he settled permanently the following year. Four children were born ere the removal of the family to this county, viz.: Jane, Alexander, Thomas and Rebecca. William, now a resident of Page County, Iowa, was the first born in their new cabin home, his birth occurring in January, 1800. Mary, John W. and Betsy were born subsequently. John W. was born on the old homestead in 1804, and grew to manhood under the parental roof. He was married January 6, 1835, to Jemima, daughter of Patrick McLaughlin, a native of Ireland, whose parents settled in this township in April, 1800. Mrs. Woods was born in Kinsman, Ohio, May 15, 1815, but came to West Salem in infancy. She is the mother of thirteen children: Laird, Electa J., deceased; Wilson, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; John W., Alexander, Simeon, deceased; Oscar, deceased; Lyman B., Emeline, Willis O., Charles S. and Hattie. Mr. Woods always followed farming, and died on the homestead March 17, 1869. He was a deacon of West Salem Baptist Church many years, and his widow has been a life-long member of the same organization. He was a Republican in politics, and an upright, honest and liberal-hearted citizen, whom everyone respected. He was a kind father and husband, and his memory is revered by numerous descendants.

DAVID ZIEGLER, farmer, post-office Greenville, was born in Lehigh County, Penn., March 17, 1822. His parents were John and Sarah (Bortz) Ziegler, natives of Lehigh County, where both spent their lives. David came to West Salem Township in the spring of 1841, and about seven years afterward purchased the farm whereon he has since resided. He was married January 14, 1849, to Miss Julia, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Bear) Rice, of West Salem Township. Mrs. Ziegler was born in Lehigh County, Penn., March 27, 1827, and came to Mercer County with her parents in the spring of 1837. Mr. Ziegler and wife are members of the Reformed Church, and in politics he is a Democrat. For forty-seven years he has lived in West Salem, and is one of the prosperous farmers of the township.

GREENE TOWNSHIP.

ABRAHAM ARTMAN, farmer, post-office Jamestown, Penn., was born in West Salem Township October 17, 1811. His parents, Jacob and Hannah (Fry) Artman, were natives of Westmoreland County, Penn., where both grew to maturity. They came to West Salem Township, where they were married about 1809. In 1813 they returned to Westmoreland County, and resided there five years, when they again came to West Salem Township. They reared the following children: Abraham, Michael, deceased; Savilla, deceased; John, Elizabeth, deceased; Catharine and Jacob, deceased. The parents resided in Mercer County up till death, the father dying at the home of his son Abraham in Greene Township, and the mother some years afterward at her son John's home in West Salem. Jacob served in Capt. McCord's company in the War of 1812, and both he and wife were members of the Lutheran Church. Abraham has spent nearly his whole life in West Salem and Greene Townships, and has always followed farming. He was married November 9, 1834, to Harriett, daughter of Samuel and Mary Parker, pioneers of West Salem. Mrs. Artman was born in that township April 27, 1811, and is the mother of ten children, eight of whom are living and heads of families: Samuel, Hannah, Sophia, Abraham, Jacob, Wilson, Mary Ann and John. In November, 1834, Mr. Artman settled on his present home farm, taking up his abode in a small log cabin, into which he moved with his young wife two weeks after marriage. From that time up to the present this venerable couple have resided on the same farm, and are among the most respected pioneers of Greene Township. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and though Mr. Artman has been a life-long Democrat, he has recently allied himself with the Prohibition party. He is one of the successful and upright farmers of Mercer County.

SAMUEL A. CHRISTY, farmer, post-office Jamestown, Penn., is a son of Samuel and Jane (Hannah) Christy. The father of our subject was a native of Westmoreland County, Penn. He came to Mercer County about 1831, and settled on the place where his son Samuel now lives. He purchased a tract of 100 acres, and engaged in farming. He died in 1849, his wife surviving him until 1884, dying on the old homestead. Their family consisted of five children: Andrew R., James H., Robert, Samuel A. and Margaret J., all of whom are dead excepting our subject. James H. was the only one of the family who married. His wife was Miss Margaret J., daughter of John Richey, of Greenville, Penn. By this marriage they had five children, of whom two are living: Lizzie, who resides with our subject, and Frank R. Our subject was born in 1840, on the old homestead, where he has always resided, and is engaged in farming. He received his education at the common schools. He is unmarried, and is one of the progressive farmers of Greene Township. Politically Mr. Christy is a Republican.

JOSEPH L. DENNISON, merchant clothing and gents' goods, post-office Jamestown, Penn., is a son of John and Sarah (Troutman) Dennison, and was born December 16, 1847, in Jamestown. The father of our subject is a native of Hickory Township, and came to Jamestown in 1842, where our subject was reared and educated. Mr. Dennison at the age of fifteen entered the employ of Joseph Carr, with whom he remained until he entered into partnership with him in 1867. In 1888 he severed his connection with Mr. Carr, and engaged in his present business. In 1880 our subject was appointed postmaster for Jamestown, which position he filled until 1885. He is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge No. 424, of Jamestown, Royal Arch Chapter No. 212, of Greenville, Penn., and Mount Olivet Commandery No. 30, of Erie, Penn. Our subject is also a member of the Presbyterian Church of Jamestown, Penn. He was married in 1870 to Miss Alana M., daughter of the late James G. McLean, of Pittsburgh, Penn., and by this union they have two children: James Mc. and John D. Mr. Dennison takes an active interest in educational matters, and politically he is a Republican.

DAVID GAMBLE, physician and justice of the peace, post-office Jamestown, Penn., was born July 31, 1831. His father was a native of Ireland, and was twice married, his wife dying in Ireland, leaving three children, one of whom, John D., still lives, and is a farmer of Crawford County. His father came to America in 1821, as a missionary for the Presbyterian Church of Ireland, and, being a classical scholar, turned his attention to the profession of teaching for a part of his time. He first landed in Newfoundland, next came to Boston, Mass., and then to Jamestown, where he taught a classical school for many years. His second wife was Elizabeth Parr, a native of Ireland, and by this marriage they had eight children: Mary A., wife of James Snodgrass; Martha, Caroline, Dr. William J., who died in 1888; Robert, who died in 1857; Andrew J., Hugh M. and David, our subject. Mr. Gamble was professor of languages in the colleges of Greenville and Franklin. He died January 30, 1845, in Crawford County, Penn., his widow surviving him till October 13, 1871. Our subject was educated by his father, and commenced the study of medicine with his brother, Dr. William J. Gamble, and was graduated from the Cincinnati Medical College in 1859. He established himself in Jamestown, in 1860, and was actively engaged practicing for ten years. In 1867 he engaged in the drug business, and has confined his practice to his office on account of his health. The Doctor was elected county coroner in 1876, which office he filled for three years. In 1872 he was elected justice of the peace for Jamestown, and is now serving his fourth term. He is one of the present school directors, and secretary of the school board. He was married in 1862 to Miss Samantha, daughter of William G. Mossman, of West Salem Township, and by this marriage they have three children: Clara, born in 1863; Frank, born in 1866, and Jesse, born in 1869.

JOHN MARLEY, deceased, was born in County West Meath, Ireland, and there grew to manhood. In 1839 he immigrated to the United States, and became engaged on public works in Eastern Pennsylvania. In 1841 he located in Greene Township, Mercer Co., Penn., on the farm where his son James now lives, and which his brother Richard purchased in March, 1840. He was married in Greenville, in 1849, to Ann Cullen, a native of County Wicklow, Ireland, who reared three children: James, Mary, wife of Peter Burns, and Rosanna, wife of John Cullen. They began life in the forest of Greene Township, and endured the hardships and trials of pioneer days, but by steady, persevering industry and energy he accumulated nearly 200 acres of land, which he cleared up and brought to a high state of cultivation. Mr. Marley and wife were members of the Catholic Church, and reared their children in that faith. In politics he was a stanch Democrat, and one of the prosperous farmers of Mercer County. His wife died January 28, 1878, and he was again married, in September of the same year, to Elizabeth Harrison, who survives him. Mr. Marley was an upright, honest man, whose word was ever as good as his bond, and he resided on the old homestead until his death, March 3, 1883. James, his only son, was born on the homestead November 20, 1850, and has always lived in the county. He was married October 31, 1876, to Margaret, daughter of Patrick O'Donnell, of Crawford County, Penn. She was born in Jamestown, Penn., and is the mother of three children: John, Patrick and Laura A. James Marley is a Democrat in politics, and inherited the old homestead settled by his father forty-seven years ago.

ROBERT McLAUGHLIN, farmer, post-office Jamestown, Penn., was born in Pymatuning Township, Mercer Co., Penn., January 6, 1828. His grandparents were Henry and Nancy McLaughlin, natives of the County Derry, Ireland, who settled in what is now Greene Township toward the close of the last century, where both died. They reared six children: John, Mary, Thomas, William, Nancy and Michael, all of whom are dead. William, the father of our subject, was born and reared in Greene Township. He married Rebecca, daughter of Robert McCord, a pioneer of Pymatuning Township (whose son, Robert, was a captain in the War of 1812), and reared a family of twelve children: Thomas, deceased; Robert, Walker, Perry, Eleanor, Nancy, Henry, Washington, deceased; Jonathan, Allie, Jane, deceased, and Michael, deceased. The parents were members of the Methodist Protestant Church, and died upon the old homestead, where their son Robert now lives. Our subject has passed most of his life in this county, and was married June 24, 1866, to Martha A., daughter of George and Elizabeth Brown, natives of England, who settled in Mercer County in 1844, where both died. Mrs. McLaughlin was born in England, and is the mother of seven children: William (deceased), Orrin A., Rollin O., Hermer R., Ralph S., John O. and Earl R. Politically Mr. McLaughlin is a Democrat, and one of the well-known farmers of his township.

WILLIAM B. PLANT, commission and produce merchant, post-office Jamestown, Penn., is a son of James M. and Mary A. (Bailey) Plant, and was born August 24, 1848, in Wayne, Ohio. He received a common-school education. He was bred a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1877, when he located at Jamestown, Penn., and engaged in the produce and commission business. Mr. Plant is one of Jamestown's enterprising citizens. He is at present one of the members of the council and a school director. He has been twice married. His first wife was Josephine, daughter of Alonzo Moorse, of Andover, Ohio, who died in 1873, leaving three children: Mary, May and Plummer. His second wife was Miss Amy E., daughter of James Scott, of Kinsman, Ohio, and by this marriage they have four children: Scott, Grace, Bessie and Sarah.

PORTER FAMILY.—Samuel Porter and his brother Joseph, natives of County Armagh, Ireland, immigrated to this country about 1825. Samuel purchased a farm of 100 acres of land one mile southwest of Jamestown, Penn., where he lived till his death, which occurred May 31, 1875. He married Elizabeth Cochran, daughter of Samuel Cochran, a native of Ireland, who came to this country and settled in Greene Township. Mrs. Porter died May 1, 1875. Their children were: Nancy, who died at the age of fifteen; Robert, who was a member of the One Hundred and Fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died from a wound received at the battle of the Wilderness; Samuel C., William, Esther, deceased, and John, deceased. Samuel C. was born July 25, 1840, in Greene Township, where he was reared and educated. In his early life Mr. Porter for a number of years was engaged in teaching school in his native township. At the time of Lee's raid into Pennsylvania, in 1863, he enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania State Militia Volunteers. He is one of the present school directors of his township. He married Mary L., daughter of Samuel and Nancy (Henry) Calvert, and by this marriage they have six children: Frank C., Robert B., William L., Nancy E., Jesse and Samuel. William, the fourth child of Samuel, was born December 30, 1844, upon the homestead where he was reared. He was educated at the common schools of the township and the Jamestown Seminary, and completed his education at the Iron City College of Pittsburgh.
