THE gradual collection of the papers brought together in this volume has been a task extending over many years. In presenting it to the Members of the SCOTTISH RECORD SOCIETY I have to express my indebtedness to several friends for valuable co-operation and help. In the first place my gratitude is due to Mr. GEORGE NEWTON, who has been for many years factory clerk with Messrs. DAVIDSON and SYME, W.S., for permission given in 1896 to the late Rev. WALTER MACLEOD to make, on my behalf, a copy of the INVERLYNE INVENTORY. At that time I contemplated writing a "Book of the Clan LAMONT," and the inclusion of the Inverlyne Inventory was essential to my plan. It has now seemed better to let the original documents speak for themselves, but the importance of the Inventory remains. It is entitled "AN INVENTARIE OF THE WRYTES AND EVIDENTS BELONGING TO ARCHIBALD LAMONT OF THAT ILK," and appears to have been compiled about the year 1750. Its contents cover the period between 1309 and 1735. In 1902 Mr. NEWTON further granted to my reverend friend access to the Inverlyne Charters themselves, for comparison with the Inventory, and for making fresh abstracts where desirable. Like all the work of that most competent antiquary, these commissions were admirably carried out. Abstracts of the more important documents were made, and checked with the corresponding entries in the Inventory. Mr. MACLEOD reported, "The Inventory is pretty full and exact, and contains descriptions of some papers not now in the collection. The bulk of the Charters are, however, in utter confusion, and not at all in the order of the Inventory. Some of them, moreover, are not quite legible, and some of the dates have been wrongly given."

In the present volume, where any of the Charters have been printed in an extended form, the corresponding excerpt from the Inventory has been omitted, and its existence indicated by the number of the shuttle, bundle and series. Thus—(Inv. I. ii. 8.)

In arranging the papers for this collection, it seemed expedient to depart from the system adopted in the original Inventory, wherein all writs relating to any particular parcel of land are classified seriatim. The majority of those who have occasion to use this book will do so for purposes connected with genealogical research, and to them chronological sequence facilitates work. The minority interested in studying the progress of lands, on the other hand, may achieve their object by reference to the Table on page x., and to the corresponding headings in the text.

The Knockdow Inventory was made for me by Mr. MACLEOD from the charters themselves; he sent me the abstracts of the Argyre Sasines, and in many other ways assisted me in my work.

As to the contents of the papers, perhaps the most important result of their examination is the discovery of the missing Clan Sorley or Somairle. SKENE, on page 340 of vol. iii. of his "Celtic Scotland," remarks that this clan, whose genealogy he quotes on page 474 from the MSS. of 1467, "has not yet been identified." It may now be definitely placed as that sept of the Clan Lamont which had settled in the district of Glassary, to the north of Loch Gilp. The sept comprised two principal families, viz. the MacSorles or Lamonts of Monydrain, and of Auchinbreck. For fully five hundred years the family of Monydrain held the lands which had belonged to their ancestor Duncan, son of Ferchar, who in 1270 granted to the Monastery of Paisley the penny-land of Kilmory, near Loch Gilp. Of Somairle or Somerled, the eponymous ancestor himself, we have no charter evidence, but he was almost certainly the son of Angus, son of Duncan, who are both omitted from the MSS., though they appear in the Paisley charters. In the Charter of 1410 (No. 22, infra) of the lands of Achachois, forming part of the Monydrain estate, the name Celestin Augustij is an obvious misreading for Celestin Angusij, who is identical with the Gyllaspic Angusson mentioned in No. 24. These names tally with those in the MSS. of 1467; while Donald M'Cowirlee (Exchequer Rolls of 1451, No. 34, infra) is evidently the son and successor of the said Celestin. The full genealogy of Clan Sorley would then run:—Donald (1451) son of Celestin, son of Angus, son of Donald, son of Somerled [son of Angus, son of Duncan], son of Ferchar, son of Dunslebhe. Next to Donald of 1451 we find Ewen M'Sorle, dead in 1511, after which every step is proved.

The Duke of ARGYLL, writing on this subject in the "Celtic Review" for April, 1914, points out that the M'Sorleys "knew well enough that they were descended from a common ancestor with the Lamonts, and both for some generations bore the patronymic MacFhearchair, from Ferchar the son of Dunslebhe, son of Aedh Alain, yet when Lamont or Lawmont crystallised as the clan name" the M'Sorleys, "even though derived from a generation older than Sir Lagmann of 1269, did not hesitate to adopt that surname ultimately, however long they may have clung to their sept-name before doing so."

The Norse etymology of the name Lamont may now also be considered as definitely established. If anyone, undaunted by the initial obstacle of making a feminine article agree with a masculine noun, be still disposed to follow THOMAS SMIBERT in deriving Lamont from the French La Mont, the cogent reasoning of HENDERSON'S "Norse Influence on Celtic Scotland" should convince him of error. The derivation from the Norse Lagman is finally confirmed by the retention of the letter G in the name in documents so late as 1290 (No. 6, infra), 1295 (No. 10), 1356 (No. 16), 1358 (No. 17), 1397 (No. 19), and even 1440 (No. 26).

This collection in no way claims to be exhaustive. Mere legends and traditions have been omitted as more suitable to a "Book of the Clan" than to an "Inventory of Papers." The departures, arrivals, and other trivial incidents of every-day life, recorded in JOHN LAMONT'S "Diary," have not been included. The long and generally accurate pedigree in MACFARLANE'S "Genealogical Collections" could scarcely be entered under any particular date. It was deemed discreet not to drag the doings of certain members of the Fife branch of the clan from the decent darkness of the St. Andrew's Kirk-session Register. In later times the "Scots Magazine" and the "Gentleman's Magazine" provide a rich harvest of births, deaths, and marriages. SCOTT'S "Fasti Ecclesiæ Scoticanæ" indicates a wide field of research, even now being more deeply tilled. And there are many other sources of information.

My justification for venturing to present this collection to the Scottish Record Society is the scantiness of public records relating to the West Highlands, as compared with other regions nearer to the great centres of Scottish national life. There is, indeed, a considerable mass of County Records in the Court House at Inveraray. Their contents are largely unknown; and they have never even been catalogued. Apart from them, the material for the future historian of Argyllshire lies hidden in the charter-chests of the old territorial families. This fact, and the long period during which the Clan Lamont have held land in Cowal and Glassary, may perhaps lend a continuous thread of interest to my lengthy series of documents.

To the Duke of ARGYLL I am indebted for sending to me, from his great collection at Inveraray, abstracts of many and important papers relating to the history of my clan, and appearing in the present volume. And I am grateful for having been permitted constantly to consult His Grace's unrivalled knowledge of Argyllshire genealogies and topography.

To the Authors and Publishers of "The Castellated and Domestic Architecture of Scotland" I am indebted for permission to reproduce the instructive description, appearing on page 408, of the ruins of Toward Castle.

Members of the Scottish Record Society will not need to be told of the ready help and courtesy accorded to me by our Secretary, Mr. JOHN MACGREGOR. I fear that I have made unusual drafts upon his patience, by reason of the slow progress of these papers through the press. Those drafts have always been met in full. And I now thank him.

An Index will be printed and circulated as soon as possible.

NORMAN LAMONT.

GRANT of the Church of St. Finan by Duncan, son of Fercher.

1. "To all the sons of Holy Mother Church both now and in time to come, Duncan, son of Fercher, and Lauman, son of Malcolm, nephew of the said Duncan, eternal salvation in the Lord:—

"Know ye that we have given, granted, and by this our present charter confirmed to God, and to Saint James and to Saint Mirin of Paisley, and to the monks there serving God, in pure and perpetual alms, the church of Killinan, with all its just pertinents, and with the whole right which belonged to us, in respect of the patronage. We have also given and granted to them that penny land of Kilmor, which lies above Lochgilp, with the chapel of Saint Mary, built on the said land. Further, we have given and granted to the aforesaid, from motives of piety, the three-halfpenny lands which we and our ancestors had at Kilmun, with the fishings, and all other their just pertinents and pendicles, and with the whole right which belonged to us in the church of Kilmun in respect of the patronage. To be held and possessed freely and peaceably as they hold and possess other charitable bequests given to them.

"These being witnesses:—Sir Walter Fitz Alan, Steward and Justiciary of Scotland; Sir Malcolm, son of the Earl of Lennox; Sir Simon Fleming, and Sir Hugh, his brother; Luke, chaplain of Paisley; Roger, Seneschal of Paisley, Nechten, rector of the church of Killinan; Roger, vicar of Kilbarchan; Alexander of Smalham; and William of Caliou, clergyman; John of Perthec (Partick); and many others."

ALEXANDER III. (1249-1286).

Register of the Monastery of Paisley, p. 308.

3 “Clement, Bishop, servant of the servants of God, to his beloved sons, the Abbot of the Monastery of St. James, and St. Mirin, Confessor of Paisley, and the brethren there, and in all time coming, following the monastic life,

“It is proper that the Apostolic protection be given to those choosing a religious life, lest, perchance, any indiscretion either draw them off from their purpose or—which heaven forbid—impair the strength of their sacred vows. Wherefore, beloved sons in the Lord, we mercifully assent to your just demands, and receive the Monastery of St. James the Apostle, and St. Mirin, the Confessor of Paisley, in the diocese of Glasgow, in which you are vowed to divine obedience, under the protection of St. Peter and our own, and fortify this ordinance by the present writing. In the first place, we ordain that the monastic order which, it is known, was instituted in that Monastery according to God, the rule of St. Benedict, and of the Cluniac brethren, be observed there inviolably in all time coming. Moreover, let whatever property and whatever goods the said Monastery may at present justly and canonically possess, or can in future acquire by the concession of Popes, the bounty of kings or princes, the oblation of the faithful, or in other just methods, by the favour of God, remain sure and inalienable to you and to your successors: of which things we have reckoned the following worthy of express mention:—The place in which the said Monastery is situated, with all its pertinents, and the chapel of Lochwynoc, with its pertinents; the Churches of Innerwyc, of Lygadwod, of Katcart, of Rughglen, of Curmanoc, of Polloc, of Merness, of Neilston, of Kylberhan, of Hestwod, of Howston, of Kylhelan, of Harskyn, of Kilmacolm, of Innerkyp, of Largyss, of Prestwic burgh, of the other Prestwic, of Cragyn, of Turneberry, of Dundonald, of Schanher, of Haucynlec, of Kypatrik, of Neyt (Rosneath), of Kyllynan, of Kylkeran, of St. Colmanel of Scybinche, with chapels, lands, and pertinents; the Chapel of Kylmor, at Kenlochgilpe, with its pertinents; and the land which umquhile Duncan, son of Ferchard, and Lauman, his kinsman (consanguineus), gave to the Monastery there; and that whole land lying on both sides of the Kert, as the late Walter Fitz Alan, Steward of the King of Scotland, founder of the Monastery himself bestowed it.

Let no one presume to demand or extort from you tithes of your newly-reclaimed lands which you cultivate with your own hands, or at your own charges, of which no one has hitherto received tithes, nor from your animals' food. It shall be lawful also for you to receive as converts, free and unfettered, clerical or lay, persons fleeing from the world, and to retain them without any contradiction. However, we forbid any of your brethren, after making his profession in your Monastery, to depart thence without leave of his abbot, unless he join a stricter Order. But let no one dare to detain a person departing without authority of your common letters. It also shall be lawful for you, when a general interdict is laid on the land, provided that you yourselves do not give cause of interdict, to perform divine services, with shut doors, and having excluded excommunicated and interdicted persons, but with suppressed voice and without ringing of bells. You will receive also chrism, holy oil, consecration of your altars and churches, the ordination of priests for administering rites, from the bishop of the diocese, if he is Catholic and has the favour and communion of the Holy Roman See, and is willing honestly to give them to you. We forbid anyone to dare to build chapel or oratory within the bounds of your parishes without your consent and that of the bishop of the diocese, reserving the privileges of the Roman Pontiffs. We prohibit entirely to be made against you all new and unjust exactions by archbishops, bishops, archdeacons, deans, and all ecclesiastical or secular persons. We decree also the burial ground of that place to be free: that no one resist the burial of those who, in their devotion or by their last will, have desired to be buried there, unless they are interdicted, or excommunicated, or public usurers, saving the just rights of those churches by whom the bodies of the dead are claimed. You are also permitted by our authority to recall to the use of the churches to whom they belong the tithes and possessions pertaining to your churches, which are detained by laymen, and to redeem and lawfully to free them from their hands. And when you, Abbot of this place, or any of your successors, go away, no one shall be placed there by cunning or by violence, except by consent of the majority of the brethren or wiser part, according as the election is provided by God and the rule of St. Benedict. We, wishing with paternal solicitude for the future to provide also for your peace and tranquillity, prohibit by apostolic authority, within the enclosures of your places or granges, all rapine or theft, fire-raising, blood-shedding, rash seizure or slaying of men, or exercise of violence. Moreover, we confirm all the liberties and immunities made to your Monastery by our predecessors, the Roman Pontiffs; also liberties and exemptions from secular exactions granted you for good reason by kings or princes, or by others of the faithful, and we fortify this privilege by this writing. We therefore decree that it shall not be lawful for anyone soever rashly to disturb the said Monastery, or to take away any of its possessions, or to retain them when taken away, to diminish them, or to annoy it by any vexatious acts; but that all things which have been granted for any future purpose whatsoever, shall be preserved entire for the discipline and maintenance of its inmates, reserving the authority of the Holy See and the bishop of the diocese. If, therefore, in future any secular or ecclesiastical person, knowing this writ of our constitution, shall attempt rashly to contravene it, let him, after being twice or thrice admonished (unless he shall atone for his fault by a suitable satisfaction), be deprived of the dignity of his power and honour, and let him know that he stands charged by Divine justice with the iniquity so committed, and let him be cut off from the most sacred Body and Blood of our God and Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ, and let him lie under his severe vengeance at the last judgment. But on all who shall preserve for the said place its rights let the peace of our Lord Jesus Christ rest, so that here they may receive the fruit of their good deeds, and obtain at the hands of the Righteous Judge the reward of eternal peace. Amen."—Bull of Pope Clement IV., 1265.

CONFIRMATION of the Church of Kyllinan by Engus, son of Duncan.

4. "To all the faithful of Christ who will hear of, or see, this present deed. Engus, son of Duncan, son of Ferkar, eternal salvation in the Lord.

"Know all of you, that I have examined the charter of the said Duncan, my father, and Lauman, his nephew, sealed with their seals not erased nor vanished nor become illegible from age—without defect—without damage in any of its parts as follows:—

"To all the sons of Holy Mother Church, as well present as future, Duncan, son of Ferkar, Lauman, son of Malcolm, and nephew of said Duncan, eternal salvation in the Lord. Know ye that we have given, granted, and by this our present charter confirmed, to God and Saint James and Saint Mirin of Paisley, and to the monks there serving God, in pure and perpetual alms, the church of Kyllinan, with all its just pertinents, and with the whole right which belonged to us in the said Church, in respect of the patronage. We have also given and granted to them the penny land of Kilmor, which lies above Lochgilp, with the chapel of Saint Mary, built on the said land. Further, we have given and granted to the aforesaid, from motives of piety, those three half-penny lands which we and our ancestors had at Kilmun, with the fishings, and all other their just pertinents and pendicles, and with the whole right which belonged to us in respect of the patronage. To be held and possessed as freely and peaceably as they hold and possess other charitable bequests given to them.'

"This gift and bequest I, Engus, holding to be firm and valid, grant, and, by this my present charter, confirm to the aforesaid Abbot and Convent all the foresaid things or premises, for me and my heirs, so far as they relate to us or may relate to us. Those things being excepted which belong to the foresaid Lauman, or to his heirs, or may belong to them, of the foresaids. To be held and possessed in all time in pure and perpetual alms, free and released from all secular service and demands, as freely and peaceably as any alms in the kingdom of Scotland may be held and possessed. Both I and my heirs shall warrant and defend our grants, as far as belong to us, or can belong to us, for the forenamed Abbot and Convent as afore written, in all, through all, and against all. And, lest that should perish in dark oblivion which has been done by me in holy devotion, for greater testimony I have caused the seal of the venerable father Lord Laurence, Bishop of Argyll, together with the seals of Mr. Walter Mortimer, Dean of Glasgow, of Sir Robert, Treasurer of the same place, with the impression of my own seal, to be attached to this present document.

"Given at Paisley, on the Tuesday succeeding the invention of the holy cross in the year of Grace 1270, these being witnesses:—Mr. Adam, of Lochmaben; Mr. Alexander MacKennedy; Sir David, chaplain, son of Ferkar; Maurice, of Luss; Richard, of Dumdomur; Malmur, son of Lauman; and others."

A DEED of SASINE and POSSESSION of the Penny Land of Kylmor, by Engus, son of Duncan, son of Ferkard.

16. Robert, Steward of Scotland, to Duncan, son of John Maclagmayn, his baillie of Kerelve, greeting : whereas we have found by inquest lately made within your bailiary by trustworthy men, sworn by the sacred evangels, and diligently examined, according to the tenor of our letters, that the pennyworth of land of Achagangaill in the tenement of Kerelve, was bought by Sir Murchard, Earl of Mentbeth, from Sir Walter of Mentbeth, for 100 merks of good sterlings, faithfully and regularly paid and assigned for finding and sustaining for ever one chaplain to celebrate divine service for the soul of Ewen, son of Fynlay, in the Kirk of St. Fynan there, and that the said land was for many years in possession of the chaplain there celebrating, by no just title, beyond the said possession alienated, straitly commanding and charging thee, that thou do without delay cause Issabella, daughter and heir of James, son of the said Ewen, to be put in heritable and peaceable possession for ever of the said pennyworth of land of Achagangaill, with the commodities and pertinenes thereof, for finding and sustaining by her and her heirs one chaplain for ever to celebrate mass in the said Kirk of Saint Fynan for the soul of the said Ewen, as was before ordained only. In doing whereof let us not hear any just complaint by thy defaultant these things. Register of the Monastery of Paisley, p. 149.

5 August 1466:

46. INSTRUMENT of the Church of Saint Finan, between the Abbot and Convent of Paisley, and John Lawmund.

“In the name of God. Amen.

“By the tenor of this public document, to the everlasting remembrance of the matter, lest by the lapse of ages that perish from memory, which from motives of charity has been piously bestowed on the holy places and the ministers of God successively by the faithful in Christ, and by the posterity of these faithful confirmed, strengthened and newly approved and ratified to the praise of Almighty God, and to the extension of divine worship, in order that the servants of God themselves may the more quietly rejoice in the things which they have justly acquired.

“Be it evident and known to all, both now and in time to come, that in the year 1466, from the incarnation of our Lord, on the 5th day of the month of August, in the 14th indiction, in the 2nd year of the most holy pontificate of our Lord and Father in Christ, Paul II., by the providence of God, Pope, in the presence of our notaries and witnesses hereinafter subscribed: Henry, the reverend Father in Christ, by the will of God abbot of the monastery of Paisley and the convent thereof, of the one part, and a noble man John Lawmund of that ilk, of the other, being met together, as is written below, and personally set together, between which parties a law suit was carried on for a long time in former days, concerning the right of the patronage of the Church Saint Finan of Killenan, in the diocese of Argyle, in virtue of the Commission and of the Papal Rescript addressed to certain delegated judges, and lately obtained by John himself from the Papal See, and the question arising being still undecided, and certain evidence, allegations, and strong reasons which these parties themselves wish to use, having been already produced in court: At length the Father having offered the first-fruits in Christ, to set at rest and to terminate the aforesaid question, that had sprung up, without the noise of trial, lest the parties themselves making themselves miserable in the premises, should be wearied with too much labour and expense, and lest hurtful differences and future disagreements should follow between them: set forth and produced each and every letter, charter, muniment, grant, donation, and confirmation of the foresaid church of Saint Finan of Killenane, given, made, and disposed by the predecessors and forefathers of worthy memory of the foresaid John Lawmund, to the abbot and convent then serving God, and that will serve Him for ever, for the praise of God, and the extension of divine worship: and moreover, he set forth and exhibited the confirmations, royal, papal and episcopal, of certain popes of the Holy Roman Church, of ordinary bishops, and renowned and illustrious Scottish kings, all to the foresaid John Lawmund to consult and inform himself more effectually for ending litigation and strife, as a true lover of peace: all which having seen and understood fully, after mature deliberation, having taken counsel of his honourable and wise friends, the said John Lawmund has considered, fully weighed and acknowledged that he himself, and his heirs have no right nor any title of right, nor any interest whatsoever, in the patronage of the said church of Saint Finan, nor can aspire to nor aim at it. Wherefore John himself, no wise entrapped, but as is right to believe, piously and healthfully reflecting and revolving in his own mind how wicked it is to harass the servants of God unjustly, by toils and expense or otherwise to deprive them of their just possessions, has of his own pure and free will, yielded up and renounced forever, entirely, and wholly, this suit and cause between himself and the said Abbot and Convent, regarding the right of patronage of the said Church with each and all its pertinents and pendicles, and with every right and semblance of right, which John himself did, or does, or may in future possess, in and to the patronage of the said church of Saint Finan, entirely and altogether. And if right has fallen or may fall in time coming to John himself, or to his heirs and successors, he has given, granted and transferred it from himself to the foresaid abbot and convent. And further, the said John Lawmund has approved, confirmed, and ratified all and sundry the charters, letters, evidences, gifts, and confirmations, as aforesaid to the above abbot and convent in respect of said things given, granted, and disposed by his predecessors and forefathers in name of himself, and of his heirs. Of all which Henry the abbot, the reverend father in Christ, having given the first-fruits, has sought from us the public notaries mentioned hereinafter, that public instrument and instruments should be made for himself and for his convent. These were made in the chief church of the-monastery of Paisley in the year, month, day, indiction and pontificate, as above stated, in presence of the reverend, noble and wise men :—Robert the prior, Andrew the sub-prior, and several other brethren, monks of the monastery of Paisley, James Hammylton of Torrens, George Walcott of Elyrslic (Elderslie), John Knok of that Ilk, John Hammylton of Kyngishalche, James Campbell, son and heir apparent of Sir John Canbell, Lord of Lowdon ; John Sympill, Patrick Lawmund, Duncan Lawmund, brother of said John Lawmund, and Duncan, son of Gilbert, Esquires, witnesses to the foresaids, with many others equally called and required, and myself, John Miryngton, a presbyter of the Diocese of Glasgow, a public notary of imperial authority, who was present at the foresaid right, litigation, cause, cession, and renunciation, gift, grant, and transference of right, and at the ratification of these letters and charters, and all others, while they were done and carried on as said above, as forewritten, along with the aftermentioned notary and the forenamed witnesses, and saw and heard these things so done, took them to note, from which I have completed, written, and published the present public instrument, and have reduced it to this public form, and signed the same with my usual seal and subscription and name, as required in testimony of what is aforewritten.

“And further, whereas I, James Learmonth, vicar of Renfrew, in the Diocese of Glasgow, a public notary of imperial authority, was personally present while all and sundry of the foresaids, as aforewritten, were being transacted, said and done, along with the notary and witnesses underwritten, and whereas I saw them so finished and heard, and took a note of them, therefore the present instrument faithfully written by the hand of the preceding notary, I have, when called on, finished with my usual seal, subscription and name, in proof and testimony of the truth of all the foresaids.”

"Robert Steward of Scotland, to Duncan son of John Maclagmayn, his bailie of Kerelve, greeting : whereas we have found by Inquest lately made within your bailiary by trustworthy men, sworn by the sacred evangels, and diligently examined, according to the tenor of our letters, that the penny worth of land of Achagangaill in the tenement of Kerelve, was bought by Sir Murchard Earl of Mentbeth from Sir Walter of Mentbeth, for 100 merks of good sterlings, faithfully and regularly paid and assigned for finding and sustaining for ever one chaplain to celebrate divine service for the soul of Ewen son of Fynlay in the Kirk of St. Fynan there, and that the said land was for many years in possession of the chaplain there celebrating, by no just title, beyond the said possession alienated, straitly commanding and charging thee, that thou do without delay, cause Issabell, daughter and heir of James son of the said Ewen to be put in heritable and peaceable possession for ever of the said pennyworth of land of Achagangaill with the commodities and pertinents thereof, for finding and sustaining by her and her heirs one chaplain for ever to celebrate mass in the said Kirk of Saint Fynan for the soul of the said Ewen, as was before ordained only. In doing whereof let us not hear any just complaint by thy default anent these things. Given under our seal at our Castle of Rothesay on the Saturday next after the nativity of the Lord, from his Incarnation the one thousand three hundred fifty sixth year" [1356].

<sup>1</sup> Cursing or excommunication was the first step in a process whereby creditors were subjected to legal execution against person and property. The procedure and its effect are graphically described by Dr. J. Hill Burton in his History of Scotland, vol. iii. p. 316 et seq. At the dawn of the Reformation the censures of the Church were beginning to lose weight, and in 1535 an Act of Parliament (c. 3, p. 342) was passed to secure stringent enforcement of the civil penalties against transgressors. The Act proceeds on the narrative that "the dampnable persuasions of heretickes and their perversit doctrine gevis occasioun to lychtly the processe of cursing and utheris cursuris of haliekirk."

188. Charter by Mary Queen of Scots, narrating that by a Decreet of the Lords of Council in the time of her Majesty's late father, it was found that by reason of non-entry from the decease of the late Robert Lawmond of Inneryn, for the space of ninety years or thereby, the fermes, profits and dues of the estate had fallen to the crown, and were found to pertain to Mr. Archibald Lawmond, son of John Lawmond in Inneryn, Knight, his majesty's donator, extending yearly the eight merk lands of Ardlawmont to £40, the four merk lands of Glenane to eight merks, the 20 shilling lands of Auchcorkybeg to five merks; the  $5\frac{1}{2}$  merk lands of the two Carriks to £10: the 20/- lands of Auchinbewy to six merks; the 50/- lands of Ardinhallery to 12 merks: the 3 merk lands of Kilmichaelbeg to 12 merks; the 3 merk lands of Ballemoir to £10: the 4 merk lands of Blarbowe to 12 merks: the  $3\frac{1}{2}$  merk lands of Doupin, to 10 merks: the three merk lands of Lyngartane to 12 merks: the four merk lands of Duncallen to £8: the two merk lands of Knoekdow to seven merks: the four merk lands of Innerquhallane to ten merks; and the 5 merk lands of Colstane and Strone to twenty merks, as was clearly proven to the aforesaid lords: and that in virtue of their letters directed to Cuthbert George, messenger, in the first year of her Majesty's reign, the goods of John Lawmont of Inneryn Knight, of John Lawmont called of Ardlawmont, John Lawmont called of Knoekdow, and of John Lawmont called of Colstane, pretended possessors of the lands aforesaid, were distrained, according to the form of an Act of Parliament and the decret of the said lords and the aforesaid Mr. Archibald Lawmont donator, and in default of movable goods of sufficient value, the lands were ordered to be appraised to pay the sums aforesaid. Other letters by the deliverance of the said lords were therefore directed to the said messenger, of date at Edinburgh 5th July 1552, making mention that whereas there was neither force nor confluence of erudite men within the sheriffdome of Argyle where the aforesaid lands do lie, for the deduction and apprising of the said lands, by reason that the sheriff principal of Argyle with many honourable men of the same shire, were in the northern parts of the kingdom, with James Duke of Chatellherault, Earl of Arran, governor of the kingdom, the said sheriff principal of Argyle should dispense with holding of the aforesaid apprising within the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, or of the sheriffdom of Renfrew, or in whatever other place convenient they agreed upon; and therefore the said messenger, as sheriff in that part, was directed to proceed with the apprising within the burgh of Renfrew: The said messenger therefore went on the 11th and 12th days of July of the year aforesaid, to the ground of the said lands, and then to her Majesty's burghs of Dunnoun and Kilmon, which are the head burghs of Argyle, and there by public proclamation made known that the aforesaid lands were denounced to be appraised for the sums aforesaid, and that the apprising was to take place within the Tolbooth of Renfrew on the 4th day of August then ensuing: which was accordingly done, the said Mr. Archibald Lawmont being personally present, and the persons of inquest to whose knowledge the apprising was referred being these, viz. John Lawmont of Eschoke, John Lawmont of Auchtyeven, Angus Lawmont of Dargrew, Duncan Leche of Auchinsky, John Makeloy of Thollerauchstoun, George Corry of Kelwod, Mr. John Portarfield of that ilk, Robert Maxwell of Balros, John Crawford of Kirkwod, James Grahame of Henderstoun, Robert Stewart of Neilstounsyde, John Lindesay of Blackbonie; Patrick Crawford of Cartisburne, William Lyndesay of Syde, James Fleming of Kilmacolme, John Campbell, and Michael Lyndesay burgesses of Glasgow; who being sworn, found the lands aforesaid to be lawfully appraised from the said possessors thereof for the sums respectively due by them during the space of ninety years of non-entry, amounting in whole to £13,260 with the sum of £663 of sheriff's fee: which whole lands, so appraised are hereby granted to the said Mr. Archibald Lamont donator thereto; To be holden to him and his heirs and assignees, as hereditary tenants of the Queen and her successors, in fee and heritage, for the rights and services due and wont before the said apprising: Ordaining also that the heritable possessors aforesaid, viz. John Lawmont of Inneryn, Knight, John Lawmont of Ardlawmont, John Lawmont of Knokdow, Patrick Lawmont of Colstane and Duncan Makfersoun of Dupyn shall have free ingress and regress to their respective lands on payment of the sums for which they were appraised within seven years from the date of this charter. apparent heir, and Lauchlane M'Lauchlane of that Ilk for them their friends and partakers on the one part and John Lamont of Innerin for him his friends and partakers on the other part, anent all claims, controversies, etc., moved by either of the said parties against the other in any time bygone before the date hereof, and especially anent the slaughter of Archibald Lawmont, brother german to the said John Lawmont committed by the said Archibald, Dowgall, and the said Lauchlane, as is alleged: And also anent the unkindly pursuit of the heritable Infetment of the lands and lordship of Innerrin pursued by the said John Lawmont, alleged by the aforesaid Archibald, Dowgall, and Lauchlane to have pertained to them as at more length is contained in the "compromit" made thereupon. The saids Judges convening in the Castle of Dunoon, and there receiving the cause above written Decern that the said John Lawmont has done no wrong nor unkindness in purchasing the heritable "Intres" of the Lordship of Innerin or any part thereof and absolve him from their petition and claim simpliciter: And that because it is known to the said Judges that the said John Lawmont, his father and goodsir have been and are in continual possession of the said Lordship and lands of Innerrin in virtue of the Infetment and Charter of Taillie made to the said John's goodsir, ratified, approved and confirmed and of new given by umquhile King James the Fifth in his perfect age: And also because they know that after long Process and Disputation before the Lords of Session betwixt the saids parties anent the Reduction of the said Tailzie, and the Retours whereby the said John's goodsir, father, and he himself were served of the lands and lordship of Innerin both property and tenandry and service of free tenants; whereupon the saids Lords of Session gave their Decreet for the part of the said John Lamont, decerning him to have full right in and to the saids lands and lordship of Innerin both property and tenandry, and absolving the said John from the said Archibald and Lauchlan's Petition: which notwithstanding, because the said Judges know perfectly that the said Archibald and Lauchlane's mothers were heritors of line to umquhile Duncan Lawmont, goodsir's brother to the said John, and other considerations moving them, the said Judges all in one voice with consent of Party, Decern, Deliver and ordain, and for final Decreet Arbitral Give that the said John shall content and pay to the said Arch<sup>d</sup> Campbell of Auchinbrek and to Lauchlane M'Lauchlane of that Ilk the sum of 2000 merks to be divided equally betwixt them. And as anent the slaughter committed by them upon Archibald Lawmont brother german to the said John, because the said Judges consider it was done through hasty motion, and for sober causes they ordain that the said John<sup>1</sup> M'Lauchlan, principal striker and committer of the said slaughter, to pass furth of this realm within one month after the date hereof, and be banished during the will of my Lord Earl of Argyle. The said arbiters ordain also that the said Lauchlane M'Lauchlane and Dougal Campbell shall come in presence of the said Earl and other noblemen in the parish Kirk of Dunoon on the 4th<sup>2</sup> of May instant, and there in their most humble manner, ask the said John Lawmont's forgiveness and deliver to him their swords by the hilts as use is for their assythment to be done anent the said slaughter by the saids Lauchlane and Dougal and their accomplices. And anent the claim of the lands of Ardcalmisaig, which M'Fersoun occupied, claimed by the said John Lawmont, the arbiters ordain that the said Arch<sup>d</sup> Campbell of Auchinbrek shall allow and "defaik" of the aforesaid sum to the said

John the sum of £72 for 3 years maills and duties of the said lands, which they Find should pertain to the said John Lawmont. Item Decern all manner of "Habershunnis" taken by them the time of the slaughter of the said Archibald to be restored again to the said John Lawmont. Item as to the claim by the said John against them for holding the 5 merk land of Ennochane the arbiters ordain the same to stand over until the said John Lawmont obtain himself entered to the same. And anent the Reversion made by the said Lauchlane to John Lawmont of Askog for the redemption of the 4 merk land of Askog the said arbiters, with consent of party ordain, because the said Lauchlane denied the sealing of the said Reversion, that my Lord Argyle take cognition in the cause by the deposition of the living witnesses, mentioned in the said Reversion, whether the same was sealed by the said Lauchlane or not, and minister justice therein as effeirs. The said arbiters, moreover, ordain the said Lauchlane to deliver to the said John Lawmont the writs and Evidents of the 2 merk land of Maldeloucht wadset to him and redeemed by the said John Lawmont : also certain Evidents of the lards of Steillage. <sup>1</sup> "The meaning of the Latin word carnalis when applied to a son or brother has often been matter of dispute. The use of the English words, 'carnale brethire' in the text, clearly meaning 'brothers german,' may help to elucidate the true meaning of carnalis, in some cases hitherto doubtful." Orig. Par. Scot. (Quoting Bute Inventory.)

1560.

230. In 1560 John Lamont of Inveryne granted the 25/ lands of Row, in Bute, to his second son, Archibald Lamont of Stilaig, in life-rent, and to John Lamont, his son, in heritage, for yearly payment of the feu-duty to the King, and a yearly rent of £4 to the granter.

(1 Circa 1560.)

231. Gregor Mor MacGregor of Breachly, in Glenurchy, second son of John MacGregor lived circa 1460-1513. His third son, Malcolm MacGregor, married a daughter of Dugal Lamont of Stiolaig, by a daughter of the family of Bute, and had several children.

Douglas' Baronage.

232. Confirms the above, adding that Malcolm "was in great esteem with the Earl of Marr. He raised his patrimony, and acquired the lands of Inveray, with several others, in Braemar, where he settled." (A marginal note states that this marriage is quoted from an MS. History of the MacGregor families settled in Braemar by Mr. John Gregory: [probably the Rev. John Gregory of Drumoak, who died in 1652.] )

As the only Dugald Lamont of Stilaig married Margaret Stuart of Bute in 1695, the lady who married Malcolm MacGregor can only have been a daughter of Archibald Lamont, first of Stilaig, who married Elizabeth Stewart circa 1540. But I have found no evidence of the MacGregor-Lamont marriage.—Ed.

11 January 1603.

377. At Holyrood, in presence of the King and Council.
Complaint by Johnne Steuart of Ardmoleis, sheriff of Bute, for himself and the feuars and tenants of Bute;—After many reifs committed on the complainers by Dougall Campbell of Auchinbrek, assisted by a number of sorners of clans of the highlands and isles next adjacent, they had obtained letters charging Dougall to answer before the King and Council. He had not appeared. On 18 May last the King had urged both parties to subscribe a submission. This had been done with all the solemnities requisite, and with appointment of days and places of meeting for settling their quarrels. But Campbell, “resolving to persist in his accustomat wicked trade,” had not only suffered the diet to desert, but had, in November last, convocated 1500 men in arms, furnished with hagbuts and pistolets, most of them Archibald, Earl of Eryll’s men, and had come with them to the coast side, opposite to the isle of Bute, intending to invade the complainers with fire and sword. He had sent across into the island 30 of the “maist disordourit lymmaris of his haill oist,” who shot certain sheep, and committed other insolenceis.” The complainers then sent to the Earl. The Earl had then commanded Campbell to dissolve his forces, and had promised that there should be no new attack on the complainers till matters were otherwise “packit up.” But, upon 19 November last, the said Laird of Auchinbrek, accompanied by Donnald Campbell of Duntrune, Coline Campbell of Parbrek, Archibald Campbell (? Lamont) of Silvercraigis, — Campbell younger of Inverlevair, Coline Campbell apparent of Kilberrie, Donnald Campbell brother of Auchinbrek, Johnne Lawmont, son of the late Watty Lawmont of Achogill, and others, with convocation of “brokin heyland men,” to the number of 1200 men in arms, most of them being Eryll’s men, and specially instigated by the Earl, entered the said Isle at night, armed with hagbuts and pistolets. Once in the Island, they began their reif upon the premises of Marione Stewart, a poor widow, whose husband had been before slain by some of their friends. They raised fire on her ground, burnt her corns, spuliyed from her and her tenants all the goods on her lands, including the £10 land of Wester Kames, so that she and her tenants were “dampnifeit” in 1000 merks. They then passed to the Sheriff’s lands of Ardmoleis, where they burnt a great part of the corns thereof, destroying corns in Myris, assaulting the tenants, spuliyng their houses, and killing 7 or 8 sheep. They also reft furth of the Sheriff’s lands of Inchemernok ten sheep, a fat cow, and plenishing worth £20; from Johnne Stewart, tenant, plenishing worth £20: and from Donnald Drenzie victual worth £20. They took away with them the “haill plew irnis,” intending thereby to lay the lands waste. They reft from the King’s own feuars and tenants in Bute their whole insight, victual, and "plew irlis," together with 100 sheep; and they took from Mr. Robert Steuart, minister at Rothesay, 3 chalders of victual, and left him nothing whereon to live. In short, their reifs and depredations have been such that, unless complainers have protection, they will not be able to pay the maills and fermes due to his Highness, and will have to leave their lands waste.

Charge had been given to the defenders above-written (except Duntrune and Parbrek) to answer, and to the Earl of Eryll to enter Campbell of Auchinbrek; and now, the Sheriff of Bute appearing for himself and the other complainers, but none of the defenders appearing, the order is to denounce the Earl of Eryll and the other defenders.

548. Mémoire sur la manière d'interroger le garde des Sceaux.

Note <sup>2</sup>.—Cette pièce, sans suscription, fut envoyée au Sieur de L'Amont (on écrit aussi Lamon : nous adoptons l'orthographe de la signature) le même, sans doute, qui, en qualité d'exempt des gardes écossaises, avait figuré dans le procès de Chalais, à la garde duquel il avait été préposé, comme il le fut l'année d'après à celle du duc de Vendôme. Au moment où Richelieu lui mettait Châteauneuf entre les mains, il recompensait son dévouement par une nouvelle faveur : il le faisait nommer enseigne des gardes du corps. La lettre de remerciement de L'Amont est du 30 mars.

Note <sup>3</sup>.—L'Amont n'avait pas qualité pour faire subir un interrogatoire judiciaire au Châteauneuf : mais comme il était commis à sa garde, il devait avoir avec son prisonnier des entretiens de confiance : il était chargé de le faire parler, afin de surprendre quelque aveu de nature à le compromettre.

6 February 1638.

601. Letters of Suspension at the instance of Archibald Lord of Lorne superior of the lands underwritten against James Lamont of Inverrin, alleging himself to be served and retoured heir to the late Sir Coill Lamont of Inverrin, Knight, his father, in the six merk land of Auchti-thewine and four merk land of Kames of old extent, with their pertinents, lying within the parish of Killinane, lordship of Cowal, and sheriffdom of Argyle, has thereupon purchased precepts of Chancery, by virtue of which he has caused require the said Lord Lorne or his deputes as sheriff deputes of Argyle, to infest and seize him as heir aforesaid, in the aforesaid lands, holden of the crown: and for alleged nonobedience of the said requisitions the said James Lamont intends to cause purchase warrants to be directed to the director of Chancery for giving Precepts and Warrants to the said sheriffs and his deputes to infest the said James Lamont in the lands aforesaid: most wrongously for these reasons, viz:

1. Because, the said James Lamont in October last dealt with the said lord to infeft him in these lands, as heir foresaid, and promised to produce and show to him his whole old infeftments of the lands, and show them to the said sheriff before he should crave the King's precept of Clare Constat, yet the said James Lamont refuses and postpones to show the said infeftments. 2. The requisitions aforesaid are wrongly made, because they are formed by way of Instrument, but the notary therein had no precutory from the party, so the requisitions are null of the law. 3. Because the said requisitions are wrongly made, because the ground whereon they proceed is a service led before the Lords of Council and their macers, at the instance of the said James Lamont which service was quietly conveyed and stolen through without lawful warning or compearance of a defender, whereas if the briefes of service had been proclaimed the said Lord Lorne would have compeared by his procurators, with sufficient reasons to have stopped the same, the said Lord Lorne himself standing infeft in the said lands. On which and other accounts, summons is hereby given, charging the said James Lamont, and the director and clerks of Chancery to compear before the Lords of Council at Edinburgh on 20th February instant bringing with them the aforesaid Precepts and requisitions and instruments, taken thereon, to be seen and considered by the said Lords, and to hear and see the same simpliciter suspended. Signed 6th February 1638.

He states his desire, and that of the Sheriff of Bute, to be free of the Earl of Argyll's Justiciary; about which he had spoken to "the Commissioner," who had promised that when this country was settled, His Majesty would take order as to "the enormities," and desired him to be ready to speak against Argyll. He further refers to a division of the Earl of Argyll's offices, as he had seen a patent appointing "Sir Donald" Lieutenant of the Isles, and was told that the Justiciary was promised to Seaforth. "And'lykewyse the said Sir Donald assured me that he had heard the King sweare that if he brookit the Crowne, he should ruin the Earl of Argyll, and all that would stand by him. I heard the Commissioner say that he would never be ane advyser to His Majestie to invaid us by hostilitie, bot to make show upon our borderes, that thereby we might be ever in armes, and thereby consume our meanes and so be impoverished, that so the King might the more easily obtaine his endes." That Sir Donald had undertaken to furnish his Majesty with 2000 men "to make service against Scotland," if supplied with 1000 stand of arms. He further states that Sir Donald had "sworne Sir Lauchland Makleane, having layed the Bible upon his head." He concludes "I heard the Commissioner say that for the wronges the Earl of Argyll had done to his Majestie in this business, that if ever he could overtake him in law or otherwayes, that his Majestie should be equall with him." Not dated, but refers to proceedings which took place in 1639 (the Earl of Traquair being then Lord High Commissioner).

No. 95. LETTER, D. CAMPBELL of Inveraw to Mr. GEORGE NORWORUALL, Advocate, Inveraray, 14 July 1651.

740. Complains of an order passed by the Committee of Estates for citing the Laird of Ardkinglas and others before them for alleged contravention of some articles granted to Lammount at the "intaking" of his house of Toward without any proper summons or charge. The writer warrants Norworuall to appear for Ardkinglas and the others (the writer includes himself, though he supposes he was not cited) and urge on the Committee to allow them a legal summons and proper hearing. He thinks it extremely hard that men, who had faithfully served the public, should be called in question by the public for anything they had done against the rebels. This action appeared to him to be a great discouragement to honest men.

TESTIMONIAL of Nobility given to Sir John Urry's Children.

772. Charles etc., the Most Serene etc.

Inasmuch as it is known to Us that the highly esteemed John Urry, a Scotsman by birth, a noble knight, Captain of Soldiers and Commander of the Watch in the armies of our most serene King, etc., and made known to Us by reason of his strenuous exertions on Our behalf against the rebels in Our kingdoms of England and Scotland, by whom he was savagely killed, has left five children driven from the soil of their fathers and exiles in Germany: Lest to the injury of the said children of the noble man there may be a failing of the Letters affirming the evidence of the native nobility of the father, such as were wont to be set forth in the Chancellery of Scotland before the laws were silenced by the rebels: We, at their request, after enquiry and of Our certain knowledge, declare the aforesaid John Urry, noble knight etc., to have been the son, lawful, of John Urry of the most ancient and noble family of the Urrys of Pitsligo, chief in the county of Aberdeen in Scotland, and of Marjory Chamberlain of the most noble and ancient family of the Chamberlains of Coultres in the same county; and We commend his children as noble, to all to whom they may have joined themselves, requesting that they may deem it worthy to allow to them the free enjoyment of the privileges usual with other nobles, and to concede to them the esteem conformable with their own merits and with those of their ancestors. PROCEEDINGS in Scotland against Archibald Marquis of Argyle, for High Treason: 12 and 13 Charles II. A.D. 1661.

786. On January 23, 1661, there was exhibited to the Parliament of Scotland a Charge of High-Treason, etc. against Archibald Marquis of Argyle, which was as follows:

"Charles, by the grace of God, king of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To heraulds, pursuivants, and messengers of arms, respective, conjunctly and severally, specially constituted, greeting. Forsomuch as it is humbly meaned and complained to us, by our trusty and well-beloved counsellor, sir John Fletcher knight, our advocate for our interest, in the action under-written; and by sir James Lamond of Inneryne knight for himself and in the behalf of his kindred, friends, vassals, tenants and servants, parties grieved and damnified in manner after specified, upon Archibald marquis of Argyle; George Campbell, his justice and sheriff deputy; James Campbell of Ardkinglas, officer under the said marquis's command; Colin Campbell of Straquhir, Duncan Campbell of Ellangreg, officer under the command of the said marquis; John Campbell fiare of Dunstafneich, officer also under the said marquis's command; Dougal Campbell alias Mackconnochie of Innerraw, officer under the said marquis's command; Duncan Campbell, uncle to the laird of Lochnell, officer under the said marquis's command; Robert Campbell of Auchinwilling, John Campbell of Ardtariche, Hew Campbell his son; Colin Campbell of Otter, Patrick Campbell his brother; Campbell of Derburgh, Charles Campbell of Ballachyll, Ewer Campbell of Kilbryd his brother; Duncan Glassel alias Campbell in Glendarowell, John Ger Campbell, there; John Mackeroes, officer to the said George Campbell, Donald Mackeroes of Glenselloch, Andrew Macklauchlane, uncle to Archibald Macklauchlane of Lethimoore, Angus Mackehoernock<sup>1</sup> son to Ewer Mackewernock<sup>1</sup> of Obb, James Campbell of Ormsay; Dowgald Mackleriche of Bralychane, Duncan Macknileishe in Escog, Archibald Campbell in Evinnochane, son-in-law to the said laird of Otter, Mr Colin Macklawchlane, minister at Lochgaylisheid: All or the most part of them, being the said marquis of Argyle's friends, followers, or complices under his command, and such as he might have stopt or let.

As also, by the 50 act of the 11 parliament of king James the sixth, it is statute and ordained, that in case it shall happen, any landed man to be convicted of the crime of common theft, resort of theft, or stealth, reift in time coming, they shall incur the crime and pain of treason; that is to say, tinsell and forfeiture of life, lands and goods. Likeas, by the common law and practice of this nation, all committers of murder, manslaughter, robbery, rapine, or reif, is punishable by death; and who are art or part of any such crimes. As also by the same laws, all private imprisoners, keepers of private prisons, and false imprisoners, and all oppression whatsoever, are punishable in the like manner.

"Nevertheless the persons above-named complained upon having laid aside all fear of God, loyalty and obedience to their sovereign lord and king, natural affection and reciprocal duty to their countrymen and fellow subjects, have most traitorously, treacherously, perfidiously and cruelly committed the crimes of high-treason, and other crimes, murders, oppressions, robberies, misdeeds and malversations under-written, contrary to our said laws and acts of parliament; and thereby have incurred the respective pains and punishments therein contained.

"Seventhly, Our said deceased sovereign lord, and dearest father, having granted commission upon the                    day of March, 1643 years, under his said majesty's hand, authorising and giving express order to the said Sir James Lamond to prosecute a war, and levy forces in his majesty's name, against those in rebellion, and particularly against the said marquis of Argyle, and to invade his bounds and lands, as he was the principal promoter of these odious and rebellious practices against his majesty's authority, as the said commission by way of a missive letter directed to the said Sir James at more length bears. In obedience whereunto the said Sir James, according to his allegiance and bound duty, levied all his friends and followers, and accordingly acted as became a good subject in his majesty's service, for promoting whereof, until the year 1646. That after his majesty's coming to Newcastle, and casting himself upon the trust of his army lying there, the said Sir James did then lay down arms, and with his friends retreating in a peaceable manner to his own houses of Towart and Escog, there being no other houses for the shelter of his friends, the country having been formerly wasted and burnt. After which, in the month _____ or thereabout, in the same year, the said defendants, or one or other of them, being commanded by the said James Campbell of Ardkinglas, Dougall Campbell of Innerraw, and others their officers, and others under the said Marquis his command, did in a hostile manner lay siege to the said two houses, using all manner of violence. And the said Sir James, after all legal means used for his own defence, did bring them to a treaty wherein by articles of capitulation they did grant to him, and his said friends and followers, indemnity in their persons and fortunes, with power to pass freely where they pleased; as the said articles, subscribed by the hands of the said James Campbell of Ardkinglas, Colin Campbell of Straquhir, John Campbell fiare of Dunstaffneich, Duncan Campbell of Ellangreg, Dougall Campbell of Innerraw, Duncan Campbell uncle to the laird of Lochinell and John Macklauchlane fiare of Craigintareiff, of the date the 3rd day of June, at more length bear; Nevertheless the aforesaid persons complained upon, or one or other of them, did most perfidiously, treacherously, and treasonably, shortly after the said capitulation, plunder the said houses of their whole furniture and goods therein; and did rob and take away from the persons within the same, their whole money and cloaths, did drive their whole cattle of all sorts, which together with the wastations formerly done by them, to the said Sir James, his friends, vassals and tenants, did exceed the sum of £50,000 sterling. And in a most cruel and barbarous way, whilst some of his poor friends were rescuing their own goods, they barbarously murdered and massacred a number of innocent women, as namely, Marie Gilaspie, Marione Mackleish, a young maid, Caleoch Breedmachfoyne, Margaret Crawford, and certain others; and inhumanly left their bodies, as a prey to ravenous beasts and fowls. At the least, the said persons, or one or other of them, and particularly the said marquis of Argyle, were authors, actors, aiders, abettors, assisters, contrivers, and art and part of the said cruel and bloody murders, robberies, oppressions, and other deeds and malversations above libelled.

"Eighthly, The said persons defendants, shortly after the said capitulation, and contrary to the same, or one or other of them, and especially the said James Campbell of Ardkinglas, Dougall Campbell of Innerraw, Colin Campbell, of Straquhir, Duncan Campbell of Ellangreg, Duncan Campbell uncle to the laird of Lochnell, John Campbell, fiare of Dunstaffneich, did most treacherously, perfidiously, and traitorously fetter and bind the hands of near two hundred persons of the said Sir

James his friends and followers, who were comprehended within the said capitulation; detaining them prisoners with a guard, their hands being bound behind their backs like thieves, within the said Sir James's house and yards of Towart, for the space of several days, in great torment and misery, they being his majesty's free lieges and people. Likeas most traitorously and perfidiously, contrary to the said capitulation, they did carry the said Sir James Lamond prisoner to the said house and castle of Escog, and by that means and for fear of the said Sir James's life, the keepers of the said castle being the said Sir James's friends and vassals, they did surrender the said house, upon capitulation of life, fortune and goods; which capitulation was most traitorously and perfidiously broken. And in pursuance of their further villany, after plundering and robbing of all that was within and about the said house, they most barbarously, cruelly and inhumanly murdered several, young and old, yea suckling children, some of them not one month old. And further, the said defendants, or one or other of them, and particularly the aforesaid subscribers, of the said capitulations in the month of 1646 years, did most traitorously and perfidiously carry the whole people that was within the said house of Escog prisoners, with a guard, to the said Sir James's house of Towart; and shortly after their removal from the said house of Escog, the said defendants, or one or other of them, caused burn the same, destroying the whole orchards and plantings about the said house of Escog. And not being content with their former cruelties, they shortly thereafter carried all the said persons who were prisoners in both the said houses of Escog and Towart, bound prisoners (being his majesty's free lieges) to several boats, sending the said Sir James Lamond, his two brethren, Robert Lamond of Escog, Patrick Lamond his only son, Duncan Lamond his brother, and John Lamond of Auchingyle, prisoners to the said George Campbell sheriff-deputy to the said marquis's house of Innerarey, at which time the said persons, or one or other of them, most villainously contrary to the said capitulation, laws, and acts of parliament aforesaid, burnt the said Sir James Lamond's mansion-house of Towart: Of the which cruel crimes of treason, murders, fire-raising, burnings, oppressions, robberies, and other crimes above mentioned, committed contrary to our said laws and acts of parliament, and the capitulation above-written, the said defendants, and particularly the said marquis of Argyle, at least one or other of them, were aiders, abettors, assisters, countenancers, contrivers, promoters and counsellors of the same.

"Ninthly, the said persons defendants, or one or other of them, contrary to the aforesaid capitulations, our laws and acts of parliament, upon the day of June, 1646, most traitorously and perfidiously did carry the whole people, who were in the said houses of Escog and Towart, in the said boats, to the village of Denoone, and there most cruelly, traitorously, and perfidiously cause hang upon one tree near the number of thirty-six persons, most of them being special gentlemen of the name of Lamond, and vassals to the said Sir James, viz. Neill Macpartrick alias Lamond, Archibald Lamond son to baron Machpatrick of Cowstoune, Robert Lamond his brother, Duncan Lamond brother to the said Robert and Hugh Lamond their other brother, Duncan Ger Lamond in Kilmarnock, Gocie<sup>1</sup> and John Lamonds his sons, Ewen Lamond in Midtowart, Gilbert Lamond, Duncan Lamond, John

Mackquein alias Lamond, Archibald Mackquein alias Lamond his brother, Donald Macquein alias Lamond, Duncan and John Lamonds, sons to Walter Lamond brother german to the laird of Escog, Hugh Lamond in Corro of the Carrie, Robert Lamond in the Carrie, Duncan Lamond there, Angus Lamond there, Donald Lamond there, Walter Lamond there, Duncan Lamond called Macwalter there, Alexander Lamond, in Ardyne of Nethercowall, William Lamond, John Mackquein younger alias Lamond, Patrick Boigle son to the deceased Mr. John Boigle minister at Rothesay, Dougall Harper alias Mackalaster, servant to the said Sir James Lamond, John Lamond son to Gilbert Lamond of Knockdow, Gilbert Mackley<sup>1</sup> in Glendarowall, James Lamond in Ardyne, Donald Lamond, James Macquein alias Lamond in Neither-cowall, James Lamond his son, and John Mackpatrick alias Lamond in Ardyne. And also the said persons defendants, or one or other of them, upon the aforesaid day of June 1646, most cruelly, barbarously, inhumanly and unchristianly murdered with durks and cut down with swords and pistols the persons following, viz. John Lamond in<sup>2</sup> Auchinshallech, who being about the age of fourscore years, having a flux upon him, and being also pined away with hunger and thirst, they most cruelly and barbarously stabbed him with durks and skanes at the ladder foot: and did also most barbarously murder, stab and cut down the persons following, viz. Thomas Brown, Neill Mackneill, Meldanich Mackmaw, John Mackmaw his brother, Archibald Hamilton, Meldonich Mackilmichael, Robert Michael, John Mackinlay, John Hendry, Alexander Hendry, Patrick Hendry, John Lamond, Angus Mackilmune, John Mackinnes, John Mackdougall, John Henry, William Mackwilliam, alias Wilson, Hew Mackcrow, John Mackcrow his brother, John Mackperson, Donald Mackperson, Duncan Mackperson, Donald Mackilbreid Lamond, Duncan Lamond, Duncan Mackalaster, Thomas Menchryd, John Michaelson, John Moodie, and John Jamieson, then provost of Rothesay, who being shot thrice through the body, finding some life in him, did thrust severall durks and skanes in him, and at last did cut his throat with a long durk; the said John Jamieson not only representing his majesty's authority, as a prime magistrate of his burgh royal, was so cruelly murdered in contempt thereof, and of the statutes made in that behalf. And to manifest their further cruelty, they did cast some of the aforesaid persons into holes made for them, who were spurning and wrestling, whilst they were suffocated with earth; having denied to them any time to recommend themselves to God; albeit earnestly desired and begged by the said murdered persons. Insomuch that the Lord from heaven did declare his wrath and displeasure against the aforesaid inhuman cruelty, by striking the tree whereon they were hanged, in the said month of June, being a lively fresh growing ash-tree, at the Kirk-yard of Denoone, amongst many other fresh trees with leaves, the Lord struck the said tree immediately thereafter; so that the whole leaves fell from it, and the tree withered, never bearing leaf thereafter, remaining so for the space of two years: which being cut down, there sprang out of the very heart of the root thereof a spring like unto blood popling up, running in several streams, all over the root, and that for several years thereafter: until the said murderers or their favourers, perceiving that it was remarked by persons of all ranks (resorting there to see the miracle) they did cause houc out the root, covering the whole with earth, which was full of the said matter like blood. Of the which cruel murders, the said persons, and especially the said marquis of Argyle, or one or other of them, were authors, actors, aiders, abettors, assisters, contrivers, countenancers and promoters, many of the said persons defendants being officers under the command of the said marquis of Argyle.

"Tenthly, upon the month of 1646, the said sir James Lamond, his said brethren and friends, being detained prisoners at the said Marquis's house of Innerary, the said George Campbell sheriff and justice-deputy to the said Marquis, James Campbell of Ardkinglas, colonel under the command of the said Marquis, Dougall Campbell alias Mackonnochie of Innerraw, major under the command of the said Marquis, and certain other persons being met in a kind of conventicle, who did enquire of the said sir James, whether he would submit his life and fortune to them, or not? Who answered, That he would not, pleading upon his majesty's commission, the capitulation given to him, and that he being the king's baron could not be judged by them, none of them being such. Whereunto the said George Campbell replied, that the said sir James was a false knave, and that he would judge him whether he would or not, and hang him as justice-deputy of the said marquis of Argyle; at which time the said George Campbell did rob and seize upon the sum of £1,000 belonging to Archibald Lamond, brother to the said sir James; and having within a little time hereafter searched the said sir James for the said capitulation, finding that he had it not, and they considering the prejudice that might follow to them thereby, they caused the said Sir James to subscribe a paper penned by the said George, declaring therein that his quarrel was unjust, and that he repented thereof, as also that he did pass from the capitulation; which paper with certain other articles therein was subscribed by the said sir James, he being compelled thereto for fear of death, having gotten notice at that very same time that his said friends and followers were cruelly murdered by them at Denoone, as is above-mentioned; after subscribing of the which paper, two days after the said sir James, his two brethren, and four friends aforesaid, were committed prisoners, in several houses, appertaining to the said marquis of Argyle, the said sir James remaining prisoner in the house of Dunstaffnagh for the space of four years, thereafter being carried to the castle of Inchoneill, where he remained prisoner for the space of two years or thereabout, until he was carried from thence to Sterling, by virtue of an order from us and our estates of parliament, they having not time to take trial of the matter at that time, by reason of our marching into England, sending the said sir James up to the castle of Sterling, for fear of the said Marquis's cruelty; in regard he often threatened, that if ever the said Sir James came in his power, the world should not save his life, and that he repented nothing more, than that he took not that bloody knave's life, whilst he had him in his power; saying likewise, that all was but one fault: the which cruel crimes of oppression and others above specified, the said defendants, particularly the marquis of Argyle, one or other of them, were actors, aiders, abettors, contrivers, countenancers or promoters.

"Eleventhly, The said persons defendants, their cruelty against the said sir James is manifest, in so far as the said month of 1651, Donald Campbell sent John Campbell of Ardtarich, of the special causing, hounding out, and or under their command or direction, came accompanied with 30 men, all armed with guns, swords, pistols, and other weapons, invasive to the coast side of the sheriffdoms of Aire and Renfrew, where they heard that the said sir James had his residence, and did search the house of Southanon belonging to my lord Sempell, and the house of Corsby belonging to the laird of Auchnames, where the said persons did make search for the said sir James, two of them coming early in the morning to the said house of Auchnames, the said Donald running upstairs with a drawn dirk and bended pistol in either hand, making search through the whole house and beds, to have murdered the said sir James, who by providence was in the wood, not knowing anything of the intended murder. And the said persons being disappointed of their intentions, did retire to their boats, the said sir James flying at that time to the Isle of Arran, to shelter himself under the protection of the now duchess of Hamilton, who did reside there for the time. Like as immediately thereafter the said marquis of Argyle and his accomplices, failing of their said intended murder, the said Marquis did desire a warrant from the committee of parliament, in the said year, 1651, for apprehending the said sir James Lamond, intending thereby to prosecute the aforesaid murder; which warrant was then refused to be granted to him: at least the said defendants, and particularly the said marquis of Argyle, or one or other of them, were authors, actors, aiders, abettors, assisters, contrivers, countenancers, of the aforesaid crimes of murder and oppression, and others aforesaid.

"Twelfthly, and further to evidence the aforesaid persons defendants, and particularly the said marquis of Argyle, their cruelty and oppression against the said sir James, the said Marquis in the month of 1647, or thereabouts, came to our house of Dunstaffneich, where the said sir James had been kept most unjustly and unwarrantably prisoner several years before, and sending to him the late deceased Archibald Campbell keeper of our said castle under the said Marquis, Colin Campbell of Lochnell, and Dowgall Campbell alias Mackconnachie of Innerraw, as commissioners, with certain proposals following, viz. First, that the said sir James should renounce and for ever overgive all right, title and interest he had to his own property, and his vassals superiority: and upon condition also, that the said sir James should under his own hand abjure Scotland, and never to be seen therein: Which being done, the said Marquis said he would give to sir James a considerable sum, threatening also that if the said Sir James would refuse the said offer, so long as the said Marquis had an house in the world, the said sir James should be prisoner therein, and should torment him with pain and misery, until the marrow should rot within his bones. The said Marquis declaring also, that he hath already possessed himself of the said sir James and his vassals' estates, which he said he and his should possess, in despite of those who would or would not. Whereupon the said sir James considering with himself, within some few months thereafter, that what a prisoner did was null in law, and being most desirous of his liberty, from so miserable and so long imprisonment, professed to be willing to grant some of the former desires; the said Marquis hearing thereof, caused carry the said sir James with a guard to the town of Innerarey, where the said sir James did write some few lines, the substance whereof contained the most part of the Marquis's desires. Notwithstanding whereof, and the said paper was delivered to the said Marquis, he persisting in his former cruelty and oppression, did send back the said sir James to prison, where he remained at our said house of Dunstaffneich, so that the said papers so subscribed and delivered to the said Marquis and George Campbell his justice and sheriff-deputy, for which they and their accomplices ought to be punished as oppressors and as actors and art and part of the aforesaid crimes, and all following upon the said writings and papers ought to be declared void and null.

“Thirteenthly, the said persons defendants, and particularly the said Archibald marquis of Argyle his friends and accomplices, persevering in their further oppression, in the month of 1649 years, caused the said deceased Archibald Campbell, then keeper of our said castle of Dunstaffneich, under the command of the said Marquis, compel the said sir James to grant a band to the said Archibald, his heirs, executors, and assigns, for payment of the sum of 4,400 marks or thereabouts, for alledging four years entertainment in our said castle, where the said sir James Lamond was violently, traitorously, and illegally detained prisoner: Unto the which band the said Marquis be assigned, he did intend action thereupon before the English judges, and for that and certain other pretended debts, which were paid, the said Marquis took forth caption against the said sir James, intending thereby to prosecute his forethought cruelties and oppressions, and to incarcerate him, for obtaining his former designs. And so the said Marquis by acceptance of the said assignation, pursued thereupon his imprisonments, threatenings and others above and after specified.

“Fourteenthly, The said George Campbell justice under the said Marquis, still continuing in his former cruelties and oppression, in the month of 1647 years, or thereabouts, not only contrary to his said majesty’s commission, but also contrary to the articles of capitulation,<sup>1</sup> our laws and acts of parliament, having taken Patrick Lamond fiare of Escog, and John Lamond of Auchingylle out of the said castle of Escog, after they had rendered the said castle upon the capitulation<sup>1</sup> above-mentioned, having detained them prisoners, the one in the castle of Carrick, and the other in the castle of Inchoneill, for the space of a year and three quarters, until the day of January, 1648 years. At the which time the said Marquis, and the said George his deputy, caused call a pretended court of justice, at the said town of Innerrarey; where having convened the said Patrick Lamond fiare of Escog, and John Lamond of Auchingylle, at the said town did call an assize, consisting of highland men, under power of the said Marquis, and his deputy their justiciary, being also their dependants and followers, and of the said George his making use of, for the most part, for murders and oppressions. Which assize having convicted the said Patrick Lamond fiare of Escog, and having absolved the said John Lamond, in respect to some favours done to them, the said George Campbell nevertheless caused the said pretended inquest thereafter to meet, contrary to the express law and act of parliament; the said George saying, that it was not fit that one young man should die alone: Conform to the which unjust and illegal command and direction, the aforesaid persons of the assize did meet again, and did convict the said John Lamond also, who by virtue of the said George’s unjust and unlawful sentence, the said two gentlemen were hanged to death at Innerrarey. Like as the said marquis of Argyle his concurrence, countenancing and promoting of the said cruel murders and oppressions, the said Marquis by himself, James Campbell of Ardkinglas, and their complices, have still possessed the lands of Escog, and Auchingylle, belonging to the said two murdered gentlemen; whereof they are yet still in possession to this same very hour: The said John Lamond leaving two children behind him, the eldest of them not two years old, to whom the said Marquis refused to give any supply or entertainment; they living still as yet upon the charity of the people. Like as the said marquis of Argyle doth most violently, illegally and unjustly, possess the lands belonging to John Lamond of Auchinshelloch, who for age and infirmity, as said is, was cruelly murdered at the ladder-foot in manner above-written. At least the said persons defendants, and particularly the said marquis of Argyle, George Campbell his justice and sheriff-deputy, James Campbell of Ardkinglas, or one or other of them, were authors, aiders, abettors, assisters, promoters, counsellors, contrivers and art and part of the said wicked murders, oppressions, burnings, robbery, and other deeds, and malversations above-written. And further, to manifest the said marquis of Argyle, George Campbell his said justice and sheriff-deputy, and their complices, their cruelty and oppression, they or one or other of them in the month of 1648 years, having at that time murdered the said Patrick Lamond younger of Escog as aforesaid, they caused immediately thereafter bring before them Duncan Lamond of Stronbanoch his uncle, an old man, being then prisoner at Castle Lauchlane, to the town of Inneirarey; threatening him, that if he would not renounce and dispose his right of the whole lands of Keames, which he held of the laird of Lamond, then they would cause hang him, as his nephew was immediately before. Like as for safety of his life, the said Duncan Lamond did grant a disposition of his said lands of Keames to the said marquis of Argyle, and did deliver to him the whole writings thereof, conform whereunto the said Marquis remains still in possession. And in like manner the said marquis of Argyle, George Campbell his justice and sheriff-deputy, and their said complices, by their power and warrant have possest and do possess the lands belonging to the said James Lamond, viz. The lands called Archibal<sup>1</sup> Roy-Stewart, the sixth-mark land of Oehrechewne,<sup>2</sup> the lands of Craignifeoche: on which lands of Craignifeoche the said Marquis had his own bowmen and heards, keeping thereon a number of his own proper goods several years: The said Marquis possessing also several other lands both in property and superiority belonging to the said sir James, the Marquis having no right thereto, but possessing the same by mere opposition. Of the which crimes of oppression and others above specified, the said marquis of Argyle, George Campbell justice and sheriff-deputy to the said Marquis, James Campbell of Ardkinglas, officer under the said Marquis's command, and remanent defendants, were authors, actors, aiders, abettors, assisters, contrivers, promoters and art and part.

“And in like manner, Duncan Campbell of Ellangreg most treacherously, traitorously and perfidiously, after subscribing of the capitulation by him granted to the said sir James, his friends and followers, being a member of the conventicle and meeting at the aforesaid cruel and wicked murders committed at Denoone, was a main author, actor, abettor, assister, contriver and promoter of the said wicked murder committed there. Like as thereafter the said Duncan Campbell did take unlawful possession of Leymont<sup>1</sup> Lamond of Cowston's lands of Stroan and Cowston, and also the lands of Trowstonne and Ardbeg, belonging to the said sir James and Leymount.<sup>1</sup> And also the said Duncan Campbell with certain of his complices, in the month of March 1646 years, came from his own house to the said lands of Cowston and Stroan, and there murdered early in the morning of men and children to the number of forty persons, viz. Archibald Lamond in Auchinfoure, John Lamond there, Lamond son to Ewen Lamond there a child, Archibald Lamond of Rive,<sup>2</sup> Coll Lamond his only son a child, Ewen Lamond in Midtown, Duncan Lamond his brother, Donald Mackneill servant to the said sir James Lamond, Donald Macklauchlane in Kilmichael, Finlay Mackilbreid, Donald Mackilbreid his brother, two of the name of Mackalasters sons to Archibald Mackalaster in Killennane, Macklelland in Knockmillie, Robert Moodie in Castle Towart, John Mackiller servant to the said sir James, Harry Lamond, Archibald Mackperson, John Mitchelson, John Leith, Dougall Leith, and several others. As also the said Duncan Campbell most traitorously, treacherously and perfidiously with the said defendants his complices, were main actors, abettors, assisters, and art and part of the burning of the said sir James his house of Towart, taking away the goods and plenishing therein, destroying of the said sir James his own men, tenants, vassals and servants; robbing and taking away of their goods the fore-said years 1645, and 1646, in one or other of the months thereof. Of the which treasonable deeds, murders, fire-raising, oppressions, robberies, and other cruel acts and malversations above-mentioned, the said persons defendants, and particularly the said marquis of Argyle, the said Duncan Campbell an officer under the said Marquis's command, George Campbell sheriff and justice-deputy, or one of them, were authors, actors, aiders, abettors, assisters, contrivers and promoters of the same. And to make the premises manifestly appear, the said John Campbell, by mere oppression having possessed the lands belonging to the deceased Duncan Lamond a murdered person, particularly the lands of Knockdow, Innerchellane, the lands of Lettingall<sup>1</sup> and Towart-fleeming; and in like manner having by oppression also possess himself of the lands of Gortanlesk, Kilmarnock and Brackleys, pertaining to the said sir James; taking away also, before the burning of his said house, several of the household stuff and plenishing therein. "And further Mr Colin Macklauchlane, minister at Lochgolishedd, being present at the meeting in the said village of Denoone, in the said month of June 1646, most villainously and treacherously, contrary to the said capitulation, was a main counsellor, actor, author, aider, assister, abettor, promoter, and art and part of the foresaid cruel murders, committed at the said village of Denoone. And further the said James Campbell of Ardkinglas officer under the said marquis's command, accompanied with his regiment in the lowlands, at the village of the Largis, in the month of 1645, adding to his former cruelties, Campbell being accompanied with his said regiment in the lowlands, there being brought to him by Angus Mackilvernock, Dermount Campbell, and the deceased Francis Campbell his brother, one John Machpatrick alias Lamond, the said James Campbell of Ardkinglas, and remanent defendants aforesaid, or one or other of them, caused cruelly murder and hang the said John Machpatrick alias Lamond, and that without any ground or warrant. "And also, Alexander Campbell of Pennymoir, with certain of his followers and complices, upon the month of 1645 years, did seize and apprehend, in the Isle of Comeraw,<sup>2</sup> one Robert Lamond merchant residenter in Ireland, from whence having come about his lawful occasions, to the said Isle of Comeraw,<sup>2</sup> the said persons did most cruelly and villainously murder and shoot the said Robert Lamond to death, at the said Isle: of the which cruel murder the said Defendants, or one or other of them, and particularly the said Alexander Campbell of Pennymoir, were authors, actors, aiders, abettors, assisters or art and part.

“As also Archibald Campbell [of] Evinnochlan, son-in-law to the laird of Otter, in the month of _____ or one or other of the months respective above-written, in the year 1646, was accessory, art and part, and aider, abettor, and assister of the aforesaid cruel and wicked murders, committed at the lands of Stroane, and at the foresaid village of Denoon, being accessory also to the robbing and taking away of the household-stuff and plenishing of the said sir James his said house of Towart, and of the burning of the same. Of the which cruel acts of murders, robberies, and fire-raising, the said Archibald Campbell was actor, author, abettor, assister, contriver, counsellor, promoter, and art and part thereof.

“Of the which treasonable crimes, murders, robberies, oppressions, and all other crimes, misdeeds, and malversations above-mentioned, or one or other of them, the forenamed persons above complained upon, and every one of them, at least one or other of them, were actors, authors, abettors, assisters, contrivers, devisers, consulters, advisers, or art and part. And thereby they and each one of them, at least one or other of them, have incurred the respective pains and punishments prescribed by our said laws, and acts of parliament, viz. The forfeiture of life, lands, dignity, estates, and goods, the benefit thereof to be applied to our use, or such use as we and our said estates of parliament, or those impowered by us for that effect, shall appoint; at the least have incurred such other censure and punishment, in their bodies, names, fames, estate, and goods, as we and our said estates of parliament, or those impowered or authorized by us for that effect, shall think fit, to be applied, as said is, according to the nature and quality of their several crimes, misdeeds, and malversations, done and committed by them, which ought and should be inflicted upon them with all rigour, in example of others.

“Our will is herefore, and we charge you that you lawfully summon, warn, and charge, the whole forenamed persons, defendants, abovenamed as followeth, viz. so many of them as are within this our realm of Scotland, personally, if they can be apprehended, and failing thereof, at their dwelling-places, and by open proclamation at the market-crosses of the head boroughs of our sheriffdoms, or other jurisdictions within the which they dwell; and so many of them as are without the same, by open proclamation at the market-cross of our burgh of Edinburgh, pier and shore of Leith, upon three-score days warning, to appear personally before us and our estates of parliament, or those impowered or authorized by us for that effect, at Edinburgh, or where it shall happen then to be for the time, the _____ day of _____ with continuation of days to answer at the instance of our said advocate, for our interest, and at the instance of the said sir James Lamont, for himself, and in name and behalf aforesaid, for his interest above-written. That is to say, the said defendants, to hear and see it found and declared, verified and proved, in presence of our said estates of parliament, or such as shall be authorized by us and them, that the said defendants, and every one of them, at least one or other of them, have committed, and are guilty of, the crimes of high treason, and other crimes, murders, robberies, oppressions, misdeeds, and malversations respective above specified, or one or other of them; at least they, and every one of them, or one or other of them were authors, abettors, contrivers, devisers, or art and part thereof: and the same being so verified and proved, to hear and see it found and declared, by us and our said estates of parliament, or those impowered or authorized by us for that effect, that the forenamed persons, and every one of them, have thereby incurred the respective pains and punishments prescribed by our said laws and acts of parliament; and to hear and see the sentence and doom of forfeiture, pronounced against them for the same, viz. the forfeiture and loss of life, lands, dignities, estates and goods, and the benefit thereof to be applied to our use, or such as we or our said estates of parliament, or those authorised by us for that effect shall appoint; at least to hear and see themselves adjudged to be censured in their persons, names, fames, estates and goods, as we and our said estates of parliament, or those impowered or authorized by us for that effect, shall think fit, according to the nature and quality of their several crimes, misdeeds and malversations, committed and done by them; and to hear and see the foresaid pains and punishments decerned to be executed, and inflicted upon them, with all rigour, in example of others, at the arbitrement and determination of us and our said estate of parliament, or those impowered and authorized by us for that effect: With certification to the disobeyers, if they be contumacious and appear not, we and our said estates of parliament, or those impowered and authorized by us, for that effect, will then instantly proceed against the said defendants, and every one of them, who does not appear, as rebels and traitors, and guilty of high-treason against us and our crown, and the estates of this our ancient kingdom; to the forfeiting of their lives, lands, estates and goods, to be applied, as said is; and that their absence and contumacy shall be holden as a manifest probation of their guiltiness, without necessity of any further probation. But if they appear and remain present at the whole diets of the procedure, that then we and our said estates of parliament, or these impowered and authorized by us for that effect, will proceed against the said defenders upon lawful probation, to the forfeiting of their said lives, lands, estates, and goods, to be applied as said is, or otherwise by punishing and censuring of them, according to the nature and quality of their crimes, misdeeds, and malversations, in their persons, estates, goods, name and fame, or some other manner of ways, as we and our said estates of parliament, or those impowered or authorized by us for that effect, shall think fit and appoint, conform to our sentence, decreë and determination to be given and pronounced by us against the said defenders therein, according to justice, to be called summarily without diet, table or continuation of other summons; because the aforesaid action is for crimes of high-treason, and other acts, misdeeds and malversations, committed and done by the forenamed persons against us, and the estates of this our ancient kingdom, and the public good and peace of the same; at least, whereof the forenamed persons defendants were aiders, abettors, assistants, consultants, devisers, advisers, or art and part. And therefore merits summary process, conform to daily practice, used in the like cases, and a deliverance granted by our committee of estates thereanent. Moreover, that you lawfully summon, warn, and charge to appear before us, and our estates of parliament, or those empowered or authorised by us for that effect, the said day and place, with continuation of days to bear leill and soothfast witnessing, in so far as they know, or shall be asked at them, in in the said matter, under all highest pain and charge that after may follow: as you will answer to us thereupon. The which to do we commit to you, conjunctly and severally, our full power by these our letters, delivering them by you duly executed, and indorsed again to the bearer.—Given under our signet at Edinburgh, the twenty eighth day of December, and of our reign the twelfth year, 1660.—“Ex deliberatione Commissionis Parliamenti sic subscribitur.—Jo. A SHORT ANSWER to the Libel and Dittay given in upon the 28th day of January.

787. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25. “To all these answers Arch. Kinglas<sup>1</sup> had his commission as colonel from the parliament, or committee, and not from him, and if he pursued Lamond, doubtless it was as a rebel at that time to the estate of the kingdom, according to act and declaration of parliament, approved of by his majesty, and his royal father, and predecessors; so what Arch. Kinglas<sup>1</sup> or any other did to Lamond, let them answer for what they did unwarrantably, it cannot reflect on him, but he hopes they will clear themselves.

26. “The defender was in England when Lamond was brought out of his house, and knew nothing of the business, until he received letters shewing what had past, and that Lamond had refused to return [to] Alexander Mac-Donald, according to his capitulation, chusing rather to remain a prisoner with the defender, the paper itself may be found if he deny, whereupon he was detained prisoner, having no security to give; and having so often sworn and promised, and after failed, which will be shewn under his hand, and having murdered so many people, men, women and children, several of them after quarter given, beside the burning of many gentlemen his neighbours houses, and destroying their goods and their lands, and going in to Alexander Mac-Donald, notwithstanding he was in service against him with the defender, not having fairly exonerated himself; this can be all clearly instructed, and if this was not cause to keep him a prisoner, let any judge.

27. “He knew not nor remembers not any such things, so it is but forged against him.

28. “He caused no such thing, it was a thing done for his own entertainment, and the defender being to secure Lamond for some just debts due to himself, the captain of Dunstaffage desired his bond likewise to be pursued in the defender’s name, which the gentleman himself can shew.

29. “The Marquis is in possession of none of their lands to his knowledge; if he were, it is a legal civil process.

30. “He never knew any such thing.

31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44.” To all these let every man answer as he is concerned, as he hopes they will clear so; but this he must say for himself and his depute, that it cannot be said they murdered any of these men with their own hands, neither did they judge any man to die by the hand of justice, but such who were notoriously guilty according to standing law; and no man can justly say any man was ever processed before them who had received any articles, though it was never conceived by any judicatory in Scotland that any man taking a rebel could pardon him, except the person doer of it had particular warrant for that effect, otherwise the committee after Philliphaug had been much to blame for ordaining so many to be processed, at which committee were the sentencing of such who died at Glasgow shortly thereafter, at which the defender was not present.

THE GRAND INDICTMENT of High Treason, exhibited against the Marquis of Argyle, by his Majesty's Advocate, to the Parliament of Scotland.

788. Sixthly, In the year 1646, you by yourself, or those under your command, or for whom you were answerable, or whom you might have stopped or impeded, did take in the house of Toward, belonging to the laird of Salmond,<sup>1</sup> and the house of Oscoge, belonging to Lamond of Oscoge, and after articles of capitulation drawn and subscribed by the laird of Ardkinglas, and other officers under your command, did most treasonably, in manner aforesaid, under trust and assurance, as is said, burn the said house of Oscoge, cruelly hang, kill and murder a great many of the said lairds of Salmond<sup>1</sup> and Oscoge's friends and followers; as is more fully expressed in the summons raised at their instance and mine, for his majesty's interest against you, and which is repeated in a part of this articles.

792. The Marquis of Argyle's Defences against the grand indictment of High-Treason exhibited against him to the Parliament in Scotland.

Item, In the sixth article a capitulation alledged, made and subscribed by the laird of Ardkinglas and other officers under the defender's command, with the laird of Lamond and Escoge.

(p. 1459)

As to the sixth Article, anent the taking of the house of Towart, belonging to the laird of Lamond, and the house of Oscoge, belonging to Oscoge; and after articles of capitulation drawn and subscribed by Ardkinglas, and others under his command, trust and assurance, murdering a great many of Lamond's and Oscoge's friends: as this is no way true, (the defender being altogether innocent thereof) so it is no ways relevantly libelled. For, 1. Neither day nor month of these deeds are condescended on. 2. The alternity, by others under his command, not relevant to infer a crime, far less treason against the defender, for the reason contained in the first answer to the former article, viz. That there is neither act of parliament libelled, nor common law, ordaining a man to be liable to a pain, far less the highest of pains, for deeds or crime by those under his command, except he gave them special direction. But every one is to suffer for his own fault, as more at length is contained in the said answer, which is here repeated. 3. Non relevat those for whom he is answerable, for the same reasons, because every one is answerable for his own fault and crime. 4. Non relevat, that others whom he might stop, did it; because there is neither any act of parliament libelled on, ordaining any to be answerable for all the deeds of those he might stop (especially the act against murder under trust, bearing no such thing): nor is there any law nor reason for the same, but 'delicta proprios tenent authores,' as hath been said; and no ways granting the defender could have stopped them: for the truth is, he could not, and was not near them, when what is libelled was done: and albeit indeed, it be 'contra officium charitatis,' not to stop any doing of mischief, if any one may safely do it, yet that it comes under the compass of law to infer a crime, especially treason, cannot be affirmed. 5. Taking of the house of Towart and Escoge, is not subsumed upon any of the acts of parliament libelled, there being none of them, anent the taking in of houses belonging to the lieges, and so is not relevant to infer any of the crimes contained therein. 6. The alledged killing a great many of Lamond's and Oscoge's friends, after the assurance given by Ardkinglas, is no ways relevantly libelled, to infer the crime of slaughter under trust, because by the act of parliament, Jac. 6, par. 11, cap. 51, of slaughter under trust, upon the which it is founded, slaughter under trust, is only when the party slain is under the trust and assurance of the slayer, which is no way here libelled, but that the persons who are libelled to have been slain by the defender, were under the trust of another, to-wit, Ardkinglas; who if he, or any other under the defender's command, have done any thing against their own assurance, they are to answer for it. 7. The defender adhering to these defences, and craving that they being against the relevancy be first discussed, repeats his former answer founded upon his commission of lieutenancy therein mentioned; for they who are designed Lamond's and Oscoge's friends, were the Macdonalds, or their adherents and accessaries, (as is notorious, and the defender, if need shall be, offers to prove it) whom by the aforesaid commission he had power to prosecute with fire and sword, with dispensation of slaughter, and raisings of fire, in manner at length contained in the commission; which amongst the other acts of parliament, 1644, is ratified by his majesty in his treaty at Breda, as is alledged in the said answer, which is holden herein repeated; and therefore the defender ought to be assoilized from this article. And truly what cruelty was exercised, was by the laird of Lamond himself, against the heritors and other inhabitants in the sheriffdom of Argyle; for the which, upon a supplication given in to the king's majesty and committee of estates at Sterling, in August 1651, he was imprisoned within the castle of Sterling, till after trial, justice should have been done upon him; but was released by the English when they took the castle, with the other prisoners. However, the defender is confident, as it is known, so he shall make it appear, if need be, in the other process whereunto this relates, and wherein it will be more pertinent; and yet the day and time of the committing of the deeds mentioned in this article not being condescended on, as it ought to be when required by the defender, that he may propone his alibi, he offers to prove, if need be, that he was alibi the time of the committing of the said deeds, at a very great distance, to-wit in England. Like as his majesty, by his treaty at Breda, hath ratified and approved the acts of parliament; and his majesty, and estates of parliament have ratified the said treaty, and past an act of oblivion, of all former deeds done by the subjects, which secures and indemnifies them for any former actings, in respect whereof he ought to be assoilized.

The Heritors conceive they cannot be liable because Argyle was exempted before August 1648 "for the cause of their being wasted, and that there was no rent payed therein, and therefore could not pay mantinence." They therefore crave to be eased of the payment, or of a portion of it, with time to pay the same; and that certain persons may be authorised to lay it on proportionally like the cess, because the shire had never been valued "by reason of their great vastation." Pont has "Ermine, a lion rampant Azure armed Gules." There is another coat, allusive to the name, given by Pont and other authorities: "Azure, a mound (or globe) with cross Or."

On this was founded the bearing of the Perthshire family of Burden of Auchingarrich and Feddal, said to be descended in the male line from Lamont: Azure, a mound or, cross Gules, between two bourden staves. (or battle-axes) proper. The writer contributed to "The Genealogist"<sup>1</sup> a notice of the pedigree and arms of the Burden whose heir-general in 1878 sold the estates held by his ancestors for upwards of 300 years.

The heads of the families of Lamont and Burden both carried as supporters two savages, but this has not been sanctioned in either case.

4 November 1699.

- 1072 A missive letter be the Laird of Lamond to Bourdon of Feddal about their genealogicall descent; the principall is in the lions office, dated 4th of November, 1699 :—

“Honoured Cousin,—I received yours and I am satisfied to find that ancient inclination in you that was esteemed amongst all nations evin in the Jewesh families, and as I hate ridiculus vanitie, so I love that men class themselves as fare as writ or true tradition can bring them and as to my familie I most deall with both, and to my best knowledge it is the methode that all Scotland most use, that is ancient, and most of all the Highlanders (who, if extant) are the ablest in this Kingdome as you may diserne by our tongue, spoken in the land befor the English tongue incrotched,<sup>1</sup> and as you see by names of places, to this day all over the kingdome, tho someting changed, yet the derivation holds to me known in both speeches; your Relation to this house can ot keep you ignorant of ane late calamitie in Montrosses wars and that our houses being plundered and fired, our writs behoved to be wronged. Befor that time our house of Toward was brunt by the great M'Donald, when Argyl married Lamonts daughter because he took Argyls part against M'Donald and so suffered by which our evidents are lost yet some shadows of our antiquitie remain by marriages with Argyls Castles<sup>2</sup> M'Donalds Semples their daughter and with severall other honourable families. Our descent is from Ireland, a sone of the house of Oneil, who had patronimicks befor sirnames. Our first predecessor was MacClamine, and in time Scotified to Lamont, Lamount, or Lomond, as you will find in the old books of Heraldrie in the lions Office, and our ancient armorial bearing was relative to the name La Mond, i.e. the Glob of the World or Glob imperial, in an blew field, which my predecessors of late hath chainged to a whit lion, being ignorant of Heraldrie and fearing affinity with the kings of Ireland unless they were concerned with the Lion, which I would have altered, and taken my honourable Glob, but the Lamonts of France and England carried the Lion befor my time so that I had no will to differ in coat armour with them least a denayell in after ages. Nou to prove my ancient descent from Oneile, and that older than modestie will allow or my equals will be willing to grant me, I refer it to the old records that is extant in the Colledge of

Feale,<sup>1</sup> in the Island of Man, or to the old tradition of Ireland that is extant in the hands of Esquir Cormick Ornile,<sup>2</sup> the best Antiquarie in Ireland, by whose help Sir George MacKeinzie wrot the race of the kings of Scotland.

"Nou Cousin for your familie, I am so well versed in it, that to my sad experience I want much land by it, and the progress of a plea in my hand with the Lairds of Keams Ballantines till this day and but latlie determined in my favours within this three years which plea began as followes:—The Gouverneur of Scotland who went under the name of Robert the Third the second of the Stewars dwelt in the castle of Boote, our house of Towart being oppositt thereto, the Laird of Kames the Laird of Houston and Flemyng of Wigton being over in Towartland hunting (who then belonged to the court), committed some misdemeanour, and gave offence to the Laird of Lamond, who stirred up his four sones (the oldest being happilie at court) these four sones killed the forsaid Lairds, upon which our familie was rent, and our lands given in requitall of their blood whose successors obtained neu charters from the king of our lands; the most part of which lands my predecessors since recovered, and their charters are nou in my hands narrating their names and the cause of the kings grant. The four bretheren were forced to flee and to change their names for ever, for the foresaid slaughter; your predecessor goeing to the countrie where you nou live in a mean condition by occasion of the disasture of the familie, having nothing in his hand but a foursquare staffe in old highlands called Bourdouch with which he fought gallantlie for Pearths predecessors then Laird of a place called Stopha<sup>3</sup> or hall, so your surname began as my father told me truly and protested to me his father told him the same, and this part I think behooved to com from your predecessors but the rest I have all the paper lying by me, your other Brother took the name of Lamb as being nearest his oun of Lamont, of whom I mett severals in England as respective<sup>4</sup> as anie Lamont would be whom I though(t) had knouen nothing of it the third brother went to Paisly, and was with the Abbot thereof who asked his name and said I am a landless man, it sall not be so longer said the Abbot if you will serve me and so gave him a small piece of land and I spoke with the grandchild of him that last enjoyed that land about fortie year agoe I knou a worthie man still of that name minister of Blantyre who is a lover of you all, the fourth Brother was the origine of the M'Tournors of Luss who wrought at that imployment in that place only to hid himself from his powerfull enemies, which is acknowledged by all the countrie.

"The Earle of Strathmoirs predecessor came of the house of Lamond long before yours he killed the great M'Donald for which he changed his name, and took a neu one from our Ensign the Lion, that M'Donald was his mothers brother; on my conscience I am as near the truth in this relation as I can be and leaves out manie things which old men beleaves which I have not midled with.

"I am, they say, the threttie thrid Laird of Lamont fourteen I can instruct and the rest is by tradition, if you make use of this descent in that book of Heraldrie which is nou writing I shall be content you contain me there conformed to this information and if the author take it I will stand to all that is in this and possiblie he will insert mor untruths or he finish his book, call for Petter Blair who will lay out all the expensess necessar, nou my love to your old father when you come to me you shall see all my papers and shall have welcome I rest your Loving Cousin,

1 ("I" here is, of course, Alexander Nisbet himself) had another account of the origine of the familie of Bourdon of Feddall by a letter from Mr. Harie Bourdon thus:—

"The first of the name of Bourdon lived in the Isle of Skey and efter king Edgar the 4th sone of Malcom Canmoir beat Donald the usurper, who did fle to the Isle of Skey and was there taken and brought to Edgar who asking who did take him was answered Sholto ferr le burden dou for which he had considerable lands there given him, and retained the nam always, the familie long after falling to a Daughter who was heiress she was married to one of Lamounts sones who took on his wifes name, he coming down to Perthshir met with Drummond of Stobhall whom he assist in some quarrel against some of his neighbours for which he did procur a remission to him and did gift him som lands in Perthshire which they retain yet and selling his highland interest did make a pourchas there, But in Queen Marries time for assisting her were faulted but with great difficultie a part of fortoun still remains with them."

<sup>1</sup> Nisbet's MSS. has clearly "J. Lamont," but this may have been his clerical error for "A. Lamont," as the Laird of Lamont in 1699 was undoubtedly Archibald Lamont of that ilk. See passim.—ED.

1134. Gentlemen,—I think my self obliged to return you my thanks for the zeal you have showed in your last meeting for the peace of the country and for the defence of His Majesties Government; I shall not fail to do you the justice to acquaint the King of the alacrity and duty you have expressed upon this occasion against the intended rebellious attempts to destroy our religion and liberties. I don't doubt but it will appear at this time how false those suggestions have been, which have been made of late Years that the Pretender to the Crown of these Kingdoms, and the Usurper of His Majesties royal titles had encreased in his interest in the shire of Argyl, so famed in the worst of times for the supporting the Protestant Religion and the resisting of Tyranny. My family and consequently you have formerly suffered from this cause, I glory in it, and I hope you do so too, but I can with great satisfaction acquaint you, the King has taken such precautions, and is so much resolved to protect his faithful subjects that We cannot run any hazzard but from too great security, Our old, and our new Enemies will soon see their errors, and those who have always been ready in the worst of times to assert the right cause, will now with the greater pleasure follow and support their principles, in the best.

I shall immediatly as your heritable Lieutenant appoint Deputy Lieutenants and other Officers to command our fencible men, and shall neglect nothing which may tend to your safety and prosperity

I am Gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant,

ARGYLL.

"To The Laird of Lamont, Nether Cowhall, N.B.

BELFAST, August 19, 1723.

1168. "Honoured Sir,—I being descended from the ancient name of Black from Scotland for some ages; but my father and many relations being removed by death, and to other countries, God is pleased yet to continue me a survivor, although very infirm, and about 76 years of age.

"I have been an inhabitant of this place for about 60 years, except some intervals when I went abroad to France, Holland, and the West Indies, etc., all which time I have been exercised in merchandising. I was comfortably married to one of the name of Eccles, by whom I have five sons and two daughters yet alive, all the former brought up in France and merchandising. One of them settled a factor, and married in Bourdeaux above 28 years, and hath a family of eight children; another is honoured to be King George's Consul in Cadiz in Spain, where he enjoys both great honours and riches, having a younger brother, a considerable factor with him for a companion; another was brought up at the college in Glasgow, and now abroad; and the fifth with me, and one daughter; the other well married here to a merchant; and we all understanding that we have an interest by alliance in your honourable family, are very desirous, at home or abroad, to demonstrate our dutiful respects to any concerned. My son who is His Majesty's Consul, entreats the favour of you to know the original that the Black hath in the honourable family of the ancient family of Lamont, and likewise your coat-of-arms, which pray afford me by the impression of your seal within a letter, for which I and mine shall remain most thankful. In the interim, pray pardon this question, and upon any occasion command, honoured sir, your obliged, most humble servant,

19 September 1723.

"Mr. John Black, Merchant, Belfast.

1169. "Sir,—I received yours of the date August 19th, which afforded me a good deal of satisfaction to find that neither absence for a long time from the native country of your forefathers, nor the difference between your surname and mine, which is only in sound, hath made you forget the family and stock of people you are truly descended from.

"I am very well pleased Providence has been so kind to yourself and your children as to spare you till you have seen the most of them well provided, and the rest, I hope, in a fair way of being so. You tell me your son who has the honour of being His Majesty King George's Consul at Cadiz, wants to know when the Blacks descended from the family I represent, and how they came to have their name changed, from Lamont to that under which they now go; in compliance to which reasonable request, please take an account of both as follows:—Lamont had a son about 400 or 500 years ago whose hair, as we have it handed down by tradition, was very black, on which account he was called a Ghiolle dugh, which is in English the Black Lad; his son, again, was called Mac a ghiolle dugh, in English the Black Lad's Son, and so was his posterity ever since called with us, of whom there is a pretty good number in Cowhall, and in other parts of the Highlands; but such of them as went to the Lowlands, England, Ireland, or other kingdoms called themselves Blacks, being a literal translation of dugh into English; and this branch of the family of Lamont were so very zealous and careful to preserve its memory, that about 300 or 400 years ago, when it was represented by a man of vast profuseness and extravagance, who had spent the whole interest to one rood of land, they cast him overboard of a boat when he was drinking, and just as he was glorying in his former follies, and promising himself to make an end of the little that remained; this they did lest there should be no memory left of the family they were descended from, and immediately went to the Isle of Man, where the heir was, carried him home, and with their help, together with such others of his friends and well-wishers, as were in the country, dispossessed a son of Argyle's, who had taken possession of his estate, so that I stand very much obliged to my friends the Blacks.

"It only remains now that I give you an account of my coat-of-arms, which is a white lion rampant in a green field; our supporters are two wild men; as for a crest, none with us is allowed that piece of honour but nobility. The motto is Ne parcas nec Spernas.

"I want a seal for my arms at present, having, before I received your letter, complimented a friend at a distance with it; but the first time I go to Edinburgh, I shall cause cut one, and send it to you.

"I shall not trouble you further now, but conclude with my best wishes to yourself and children, assuring you that none can rejoice more at their prosperity and preferment than, Sir, your very affectionate friend,

1339. The regiment (the 42nd) had been only a short time at Winchester, when the men caught a contagious fever, supposed to have proceeded from the prisoners over whom they stood sentinels at the jail. Captain Lamont and several of the men died of the fever. Captain Lamont was an excellent man; he had a considerable dash of eccentricity, combined with the warmest zeal for his profession, and affection for his brother officers and soldiers. Indeed, he fell a sacrifice to his kind attachment to his men; for when the fever was at its height, although he knew its contagious nature, he could not be kept away from the sick. He was always anxious, and always imagining that they were in want of some comfort or cordial. He caught the fever, which carried him off in a few days, lamented by all who knew his worth; and as none knew his value more than his regiment, his loss was proportionally regretted by every individual. His own hopes and happiness seemed to be centred in his corps, from whom he never wished to be absent. Although he had an estate<sup>1</sup> in Argyleshire, and was often offered leave of absence, he would not quit the regiment; and in the year 1795 declined a step of promotion, to which he was appointed, in another corps, preferring an inferior commission among his old friends. He lamented, when dying, that he should go out of the world like a manufacturer, quietly in his bed, when he might so frequently have died a soldier's death. He had served in the 76th, or McDonald's Highlanders, in America, and was put on the full pay of the 42nd in 1787.

The following inscription is copied from a lozenge-shaped stone on the floor of the centre aisle of Winchester Cathedral: "Captain Colin Lamont of the 42nd Royal Highlanders; died 20th February, 1802, aged 51 years. Renewed by the Officers of the Black Watch 1861."

History of Trinidad, by L. M. Fraser, Port-of-Spain, 1896.
Vol. ii., p. 115.

1350. "In the autumn of 1820, an event occurred which it may safely be asserted would not have been so fairly and justly dealt with under the jury system, as it was by the 'despotic' Court of Royal Audience.

"The Adjoint Commandant of North Naparima, Mr James <sup>1</sup> Lamont, considering himself insulted by the Officers of the Militia of that district, sent a challenge to one of them (Mr. Charles Ross), whom he looked upon as the instigator of the offensive treatment of which he complained. The matter came to the Governor's knowledge, and was fully investigated in the Court of Royal Audience, the result being a decree of which the following is the principal part:—

"Regarding this case, it is necessary to observe that the provocation came from one, who from his public situation must have been informed of the impropriety of the same: and there is too much evidence to warrant the imputation of animosity on the part of Mr. Lamont against more than the one he challenged of the militia officers, who by showing a proper sense of what was due to themselves and their brother-officer, subscribed the letter which is alleged to have been in Mr. Lamont's estimation the warrant for these proceedings, which were the more unjustifiable, since they are the more calculated to disturb the peace of quarters settled by persons to whom the white inhabitants ought, on their own account, as well as from a due regard for the public interest, to shew a good example.

"The following penalties are therefore assigned to the offenders involved in these proceedings:—

John Stewart $300.
Thomas Brown $300.

Charles Ross $200.
Humphry Colquhoun $400.

He was in receipt of a pension for wounds.

1103-1110.

1386. Godred Crovan, son of Harald the Black, after a desperate struggle, obtained the Kingdom of the Isles in 1077. Godred was the ancestor of that dynasty of Man and the Isles which terminated by the death of Magnus, the son of Olave, in 1265. Godred was expelled by King Magnus Barefoot of Norway in 1093, and died in Islay in 1095. In 1103 the Islanders "took for their King Lagman, the eldest son of Godred Crovan. This Prince, after a reign of 7 years, the most important event of which was an unsuccessful rebellion against him by his brother Harald, abdicated his throne, and, assuming the Cross, went on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, where he died." Olave, third son of Godred Crovan, succeeded: (known as Olave Bitling, or Olave the Red).

1391. In 1187 Godred (King of Man) died, having nominated his lawful son Olave, surnamed "the Black," to succeed him. Olave was but 13 years of age, and the people therefore chose Reginald, an illegitimate son of Godred. After 1214, Olave was compelled by Reginald to marry Lavon, supposed by some to be a daughter of Somerlid, by others a Lamont. This marriage was, however, annulled by the Church, and Olave then married a daughter of the Earl of Ross, who is called Ferquhard by some, by others Mac an Tagart. Olave expelled Reginald from Man in 1224, and died in 1237.

After some days, a synod was assembled, and in it Bishop Reginald of the Isles canonically separated Olave and Lauon,<sup>1</sup> his wife."

1393. In 1238 Gospatrick and Gilchrist, the son of Murkerthac, were sent to Man by the King of Norway to dethrone Harold, because he refused to present himself at the Court of Norway. They took possession of the whole country, and collected the revenues for the use of the King of Norway. Harold made two expeditions to man, but was met on the shore by the above said chiefs, Gospatrick and Gilchrist, with their army, and was prevented from advancing into the country, and also from obtaining any necessary supplies, and consequently returned to the Isles and resided there. In 1239 Harold went to the Court of the King of Norway, and remained two years. In 1240 Gospatrick died at the Church of S. Michael.

As Harold refused to acknowledge his dependence upon Norway, Gospatrick and Gilchrist M'Erchar, whose names appear to mark them as members of the Clan Lagman, or Lamond family in Cowal, whose Gaelic name was M'Erchar, obtained a grant of the kingdom from Haco; and two years elapsed before Harold, carrying his submission to the Court of the offended King, was reinstated in his ancestral dominions.)

1396. Clans supposed to be descended from the Hy Neill or race of Neill naoi giallach, king of Ireland. These consist of the Lamonds, the Clan Lachlan, the MacEwens of Otter, and a Clan Somairle which has not been identified. These Clans are all taken back to a certain Aoda Alain, termed Buirche, son of Anrotan, son of Aodha Atlamuin, ancestor of the O'Neills. From Aoda's son Gillacrist the Clan Lachlan came, and from another son, Dunsleibe, the Lamonds, MacEwens, and Clan Somairle. The genealogy of the Lamonds is authentic as far back as Fearchar, the son of Dunsleibe, but Ferchar's son and grandson<sup>1</sup> are mentioned in a charter (No. 1, supra) inter 1230 et 1246, while the death of Aodha Alain is recorded in 1047, and thus only three generations are placed in two centuries.

1398. Toward Castle, Argyllshire.

Toward Castle is situated on the Firth of Clyde, near Toward Point, opposite Rothesay. It stands a few hundred yards inland from the sea, on the end of a gentle ridge about 20 feet high, which juts out from the higher ground behind. The castle consists of an ancient keep (Fig. 806), probably of the fifteenth century, built across the end of the ridge, with a courtyard of a later date extending along the ridge to where it joins the general surface towards the south-east.

The keep was apparently a rectangular structure, about 39 feet from east to west, by about 28 feet from north to south; but as the south wall is completely buried in its own ruins (as shown on Plan), the latter dimension is only approximate. The ruins also prevent its being ascertained whether there is any projection approaching the L form of plan.

The tower has probably been four stories high. The ground-floor is vaulted, as shown by dotted lines. The hall floor was also vaulted, the vault being arched in the contrary way to that beneath. The entrance doorway is on the first floor, at a height of 12 or 15 feet above the ground. It is in the west face of the castle, at the north-west corner, and is round-arched, and was secured with a sliding bar. The door leads directly into the hall. Adjoining the north wall there is a garde-robe. No further details of the hall are visible amidst the ruins. Fig. 807 gives a general idea of the appearance of the castle. The high window, with stone seats, seen in the sketch, is on the second floor, and above it there is a considerable height of masonry, indicating another floor. On the north face, a row of single corbels, carrying a part of the battlements, still remains. From the hall floor a stair in the south-east corner leads down to the north cellar. This cellar is divided by a line on the Plan, the floor of the part marked A being at a lower level by about 6 feet than the other part, where the stair stops. The deep part has been floored over with joisting, and has a small slit. The part of the cellar at the higher level is lighted with a window. The floor of the large cellar adjoining is at the level of the low cellar A, and has a door of communication with it, as shown. From the high cellar to the large low one there is also a door, and there were probably steps, as indicated by a few lines on Plan, but the floor is now heaped with ruins, which obliterate them. In the thickness of the west wall there is a garde-robe, and on the south side the wall is thickened, and contains a door which leads in for a space of about 6 feet, and is closed at the back by rough masonry, apparently the ruins of the fallen wall already referred to. It is just possible that this door led into a wing at the south-west angle of the keep.

The later buildings are of considerable extent, and, including the keep, measure along the outside of the north-east front 119 feet 6 inches by about 80 feet in width, and they are grouped so as to form a courtyard having buildings on two sides, with the old keep at the north end, and an enclosing wall along the north-east side. When complete, it must have been a castle of considerable extent; the pity is that it is now so wrecked. The entrance gateway, which is in the south-east side (Fig. 808), is a beautiful example of the revived early work of the Fourth Period.<sup>1</sup> Fig. 809 is a detailed sketch of the arch enrichments. The gateway projects two feet beyond the general front, and has the usual shot-holes in the sides of the projection, and an arched passage leading into the courtyard, with stone seats on each side. Most of the modern buildings are very ruinous. The apartment marked "kitchen" is so named on account of the projection in the west wall, which is supposed to have contained the kitchen chimney. There is apparently a wide fireplace in the gable of the room adjoining; and from this room a doorway leads to the outside (not into the courtyard), and, as will be seen from the check, the door has been hung, contrary to the usual practice, on the inside of the wall, and opened outwards. The circular piece of masonry shown in the courtyard adjoining is probably the foundation of a stair turret.

Toward was the residence of the chiefs of the Lamont family. In 1646 it was the scene of a bloody tragedy, which was nothing less than an attempt to exterminate the whole clan. The castle was besieged by the Campbells, and forced to surrender, when horrible cruelties were perpetrated by the latter on some two hundred vassals and servants of Sir James Lamont. It is believed that not less than thirty-six of them were hanged at Toward. The castle is supposed never to have been inhabited after this event.

Note.—In "J. Lamont's" Letter of 1699 (No. 1072, supra) it is stated that "Our house of Toward was burnt by the great MacDonald when Argyll married Lamont's daughter, because he took Argyll's part against MacDonald." This seems to refer to the wars of 1334 when John of the Isles sided with Edward Balliol and Edward III. of England, and Sir Colin Campbell (whose son, Sir Archibald, married Isobel Lamont, see No. 26, supra), assisted Robert the Steward in the recovery of Dunoon from the English.

The present keep was probably erected circa 1472 by John Lamont, who in that year obtained a charter of the Barony of Inverryne. The "later buildings" may have been erected by Sir, Collil Lamont of Inverryne between 1619 and 1635.—Ed.

1424. "Gilcolm M'Soirl was the son-in-law of William M'Iver or Campbell, son of Kenneth Buey. Gilcolm was of the Family of Lamont of Monydrain or Monydrynan in-Glassary, called patronymically MacShomhairleadh (sometimes written as pronounced M'Coirl) from its progenitor Somerled Lamont. The property, though much diminished, has continued till the present year (1873) in possession of the Lamonts; and a receipt in the writer's hands shows that some documents relative to a part of the estate were even at the middle of the last century in the keeping of William Buey's descendants. Gordon also calls Gilcolm 'ane islander,' most probably as connected with, and occasionally living in, Tiree. The Argyll family having some time previously . . . induced many of their friends and allies from the mainland to settle there. Among these were some of the Lamonts, of whom the Lamonts of Monydrain were then a leading family. The name Lamont is even yet not infrequent in Tiree."

William M'Iver viuit 1616. I know of no Gilcolm M'Soirl; but Gilbert M'Sorle or Lamont of Auchinbreck (brother of Monydrain) is mentioned in 1575 with his spouse Christian M'Iver. His grandson, v. 1622, is also Gilbert. See Nos. 292, 293, 454 supra.—ED.

Sheriff-Court of Ergyle held at "Donone" by Neill Campbell of Blayr and Johnne Campbell of Auchinvoling, Sheriff-Deputes of Argyll, constituted by my lord Earl of Argyll, Lord Campbell and Lorne, and Sheriff-Principal of the said sherriffdom of Argyll. (Signed Gilpatrick M'Laurin.)

Inquest:—Johnne Boill, elder of Auchtekerean-moir, Allister Campbell of Ewig, Neill Makilhannych of Dallilongart and 16 others.

Elizabeth M'Kesak, lawful daughter to umquhile Malcum M'Kesak, compeared and desired a foirspekar, to wit, Charles Campbell of Kilbryde, who was admitted to speak for her as her procurator, who produced the King's Brief of Inquest, impetrat by the said Elizabeth and lawfully executed on 5 June, 1583, with the Earl's precept directed to his officer commanding him after the sight thereof to proclaim the Brief at the Parish Kirk of Donone on 20 June instant, to have Elizabeth served as lawful heir to her said umquhile father.

Johnne Lawmonth, fear of Knokdow, appeared and desired Johnne Stewart and Mr. Archibald Lawmonth, his procurators, to be admitted, who said against the Brief and its execution because the same was not proclaimed at the "mercat-croce of Inneraray as principall toun" of the sherifdom of Argyll. Elizabeth's procurator said the Earl's precept commanded proclamation at Donone Kirk, and therefore the inquest may proceed. The said Johnne Stewart still protested, the like allegiance being put forward by Neill M'Ilhannych of Dallilongart, instancing the service of a brief rased at the instance of Awlaye Makneill, which stayed the said Awlaye's brief for this same reason. He further alleged that Elizabeth's mother was not married upon the said umquhile Malcum, which is notoriously known to the assize. Charles Campbell said no such fact was known to the assize; and that it was but Johnne Lawmonth's allegation, so it should be repelled. Johnne Stewart replied that the said marriage was never completed, and that it was evidently known that they were delated before the kirk. Charles replied that the parties were haldin in repute as mareit folks, as is clearly knawin to the inquest.

After mature deliberation, the Inquest found that Elizabeth was lawfully begotten betwixt her parents, and that she is nearest and lawful heir to her said father. Johnne Stewart continued to protest, and Charles Campbell said he ought not to be heard further.

(On 11 December, 1583, Elizabeth M'Kesag signed an assignation to John Campbell, Captain of Dunoon, of the right falling to her, as one of her father's heirs, of the decret obtained upon the above process.)

<sup>1</sup> Silvercraigs is situated on Loch Fyne, within the parish of Kilmichael-Glassary, Argyleshire. . . The City's connection with Silvercraigs originated in proceedings taken for the recovery of money lent partly by the founders, and partly by the governors, of Hutcheson's Hospital to the Laird of Lamont, within whose territories the lands were situated. In 1643 the laird owed the hospital 8000 merks besides interest, and in 1659

the town gave the hospital value for the debt and accumulated interest, and took an assignation of the laird's bonds. As the lent money was not forthcoming, legal proceedings were taken by the town for attaching the lands, and a decret of apprising having been obtained, the town council, on 9 May 1663, appointed a bailie to hold a court on the lands, and to collect the rents for the town's use. Other creditors, however, had been adopting similar proceedings, and among the number was Robert Campbell, son of Colin Campbell, who was at one time Provost of Glasgow. Robert Campbell contested the town's right to the lands. . . . On 2 October 1669 a Commission was given to a writer in Inveraray authorising him to collect the rents of Silvercraigs for behoof of Robert Campbell elder and younger, for ten years, and this indicates that an amicable arrangement had been concluded.

The Campbells, father and son, were merchants in Glasgow, and some of their family connections are traceable through the titles of the property called Silvercraigs land, which was situated on the east side of Saltmarket, opposite Bridgegate. . . .

Till 1664 neither of the Campbells appear in the titles under the territorial designation of Silvercraigs. In the next writ, however, dated 24 February 1703, Robert Campbell is designated "of Silvercraigs," and he thereby conveyed the Saltmarket property to his son-in-law. . . .

1440. The Church of Kilmun was founded by Sir Duncan Campbell, and was once collegiate. The vault at Kilmun has for some time past been the burial place of the Argyle family; and the coffins of Dukes Archibald and John, and Duchess Elizabeth, are shewn, with the stone effigy of one of the ancient Knights of Lochow, represented in the act of killing a wild boar. The following is supposed to be a copy of the original grant of the above burying place; it was taken from the credible recitation of a gentleman, and thus rendered, by the ingenious Mr. Angus Fletcher of Dunoon, who says he was credibly informed, that it was engraven on a stone arch, in the Duke of Argyle's family vault, under which arch, according to the tradition of the country, the first of that noble family were interred.

Gaelic Inscription, said to have been engraven on the front of a stone arch, in the Argyle family vault, at Kilmun.

LITERAL TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

I, Great Lamond (Laird) of All Cowal, Do give unto thee, Black Knight of Lochawe, A grave of Flags, Wherein to bury thy son, In thy distress.

The kind of grave here mentioned has been frequently found in different parts of this country, as at Largs, etc. etc.; and there is every evidence in point of circumstance to warrant the supposition that the above grant was the original one, given by one of the Chieftains or Lairds of Lamond, who, according to Buchanan's "History of the Clans," was a descendant of Lamond O'Neil, a son of the great O'Neil, provincial King of North Ulster, and who resided in ancient times at the Castle of Towart, on the Cowal shore.

The Black Knight of Lochawe, mentioned in the inscription, was, most probably, Black Sir Colin Campbell, second son to Sir Colin Campbell of Lochow.

Note.—There is, on the other hand, a widely current tradition in Cowal to the effect that the "Black Knight" in question was Sir Duncan, first Lord Campbell, whose eldest son, Celestin, predeceased him. According to this tradition, Celestin died in the Lowlands, and the removal of his body by the Holy Loch to Inveraray was interrupted at Kilmun by a severe snowstorm. The storm continuing, leave was sought, and obtained, from Lamont to inter the body at Kilmun. This version has at least the merit of explaining Lord Campbell's re-building and endowment of the very ancient foundation at Kilmun.—Ed.

1450. At Stirling. Petition to the King and the Estates of Parliament by Robert Campbell of Achawilling and Alexander Campbell of Pennymoir and on behalf of other gentlemen and heritors in the sheriffdom of Argyll, bearing that the Laird of Lamont, and Archibald his brother, and the bloody Irish rebells did in the year 1645 most cruellie, barbarouslie and maliciouslie burn and destroy all our houses and cornes, robbed and took away all our goods, murdered and killed many innocent people belonging to us, and committed many other most wicked crymes; and that the Laird of Lamont and his brother, of whom we complane, are guilty of so great treachery and perfidiousness for which they ought to be punished; and that your Majesty and Lordships by your Act of 25 June last have ordained them to be brought prisoners to the Castell of Stirling where they now are to be proceeded against. Petitioners are confident that the Lord Marquis of Argyll, without prejudice to his right of justiciary in other matters will be content that they pursue them before the Justice-General and his deputes. Therefore they petition that they may have criminal letters from the King's Advocate, and to order that the prisoners guilty of so great crimes be kept in prison till the day of their trial.

Endorsed is a note that nothing followed hereupon, His Majesty having so soon removed to England; and when the English "took in" the Castell of Stirling they "putt thame to libertie."

1452. The true relation of Sr James Lamont of that Ilk His actings and sufferings In His Late Majesties service since the yeare 1643.

Humbly ofered to His Royall Highnese James Duke of Albany and Yeork etc.

His Majesties Commission was sent to the said Sr James by the Marquesse of Montrosse, and hee received the same at his owne Mansion house about the latter end of Aprill In the yeare of the date thereof, with a letter, desireing him to meete his Excellence the said Marquesse, neare to Dumfreize upon the South borders of Scotland: about the beginning of May Anno 1643 But the rebells, haveing notice of the said Marquesse his designs, sent the greatest part of their forces unto the said borders;

Whereby the said Marquese being disapointed of the Aides of the well affected by reason they were overawed by the said Rebels their forces The Marquesse was forced to retyre to his Majestie without any successe: So that the knowledge hereof was almost as soon come to the ears of the said S<sup>r</sup> James as his Majesties Commission and his Leivetennants letter to his hands But the next yeare thereafter the Earle of Antrim cheife of the McDonnalds did send his cousin S<sup>r</sup> Alexander Mackdonnold over from Ireland with fiveteen hundred expert souldiers as forerunners of his owne comeing (who notwithstanding did not come with a residue as was expected) Yet our forsaid Marquese of Montrose did come throw a great part of Scotland in a disguised maner having but two in company with him disguised also: And haveing thus travelled by night roads many a mile he came directly to the said S<sup>r</sup> Alexander Mackdonald, Generall Major to the Earle of Antrim; who was then in an Highland Countrey called Badzenoch belonging to the Marquese of Huntley; Chiefe of the Noble family of the Gordons, with whom the said Generall Major Mackdonald most cherefully joyned, with the which Marquesse the Badenoch people, and the people of Atholl next adjacent thereto, did with Loyall hearts ryse and in a body did march towards the rebells who were then in a great body neare St. Johnstowne An ancient Citty in Scotland: Whom they defeated att a place called Tippermoore; and thereafter went to the farr North parts of Scotland where they continued for that yeare, 1644; being all the while Two hundred miles distant from the said S<sup>r</sup> James his Countrey; but the next year 1645 the said Marquesse haveing much augmented his Army by George Lord Gordon Who brought in his freinds and followers came in the month of August 1645 and totally routed the Rebells whole army at a place in the west called Kylsyth And from whence the said Marquese encamped at Bothell Bridge From whence he wrote to the said S<sup>r</sup> James to make his addresse to him; to which place the said S<sup>r</sup> James with all hast repayred It being but twenty five miles distant from his cheife mannor house, and there his Excellence gave him a new commission of the date contained in the same After that the said S<sup>r</sup> James Lamont of that Ilk had received the said Commission Hee heartly undertooke His Majesties Service; And that hee might have the better freedom for drawing together his owne freinds and followers and many others within that Sheyre He desyred that his Excellence the Marquese of Montrosse would be pleased to send S<sup>r</sup> Alexander Makdonald who was Generall Major with some five or six hundred men to be assistants to him while hee gott his owne and others brought into a body which request was immediatly granted by his Mat<sup>ties</sup> Captain Generall viz. the forsaid Marquese, who no sooner being come with the said S<sup>r</sup> James, within the Marquese of Argyle his bounds then S<sup>r</sup> James quickly drew together his said freinds and followers And the said Generall Major and he with conjoynd forces did march throw the said Marquese of Argyles and his freinds their territories none of their enemies daring to stand in their way: So they marched in good order throw all the countries of Cowell, Argyle, Lorne, and Kentyre doeing no further harme (to any person thereinto) then takeing their necessary susteinance; and thus they continued for the space of five weekes, the said S<sup>r</sup> James Lamont in every place goeing to the seaverall heads of the trybes, within the saids bounds All whom hee had perswaded to joyne chearfully with him: for advancing of his late Majesties (of ever blessed memorie) his just cause and interest For they and their predecessors had always a dependance on the said S<sup>r</sup> James and his predecessors) Whereby within the said space of tyme they and hee together mustered neare two thousand men : And whylst the said Generall Major and hee were farr removed from his owne lands the whole name of Campbell drew together in a body and fell upon the said S<sup>r</sup> James his countreies and Baronies killing all the poore people whom they found without his garisons and so murdering man woeman and chyld whom they could overtake burning and destroying all his land his kindred and followers, their houses and cornes As also they plundered and carried away all their horses, mares, cows, sheep, goats, swyne, and what ever else of moveable goods they were able to gett their hands on : the report whereof being speedily sent to the said S<sup>r</sup> James who was then in the Countrey of Lorne bringing into the said service with himselfe the ancient familie and name of Mackdowgalls which haveing effected he then began to put his commissions in practice For he burned all the Campbells their houses and cornes and killed all the fenceible and armed men hee could overtake of them, Yet never suffered hee any harme to be done to old or Impotent people women and children But the said Generall Major and hee fynding that there was no hope of Reclaymeing the Campbells to their dutyfull loyalty and obedience to his late sacred Majestie They therefore did with such courage and resolution assaile and invade them where ever they could have notice of their being that in short tyme they extruded and expelled them out of the saids countreies (Except some few who betooke themselves to some castles and rocks within loghs and lakes) even as foxes when hard hunted doo to their holes ; The spring of the year 1646 being then begining and the enemies thus gone, S<sup>r</sup> James haveing a resolution that the Generall Major and hee should repaire with their whole forces in that ensueing summer to the assisting of their Generall the Marquese of Montrosse whom they knew to stand in neede of them after the defeate receaved at Phillip-Haugh : But before hee should goe he considered it concerned him in conscience and honour to fortyfy his houses with victualls and ammunitiōe and with strong trenches and fousies and also to leave more men within the same then he had left whylst himselfe had occasion to remaine in the countrey and for the defense of his wyfe and children brethren and sisters and the wives and children of those whom he was to take along with him to Montrosse, For which end hee returned from the army which was then in Kentyre ; under the command of the aforesaid Generall Major Mackdonald bringing only along with him five hundred of the specialls of his freinds and followers, But whylst hee was thus fortyfying his houses the foresaid Major Generall Mackdonald went out to the farr Isles of Loghabar. Arkinglasse being the Marquesse of Argyle his neare kinsman and having the sole command in his absence of all his kindred and followers heareing tell of the absence of the said Generall Major with the Army came with all the whole power of the Campbells with Shipps boats and great cannons and beleaguered the said S<sup>r</sup> James by sea and land within his owne principall house, and haveing mounted their said cannons did continue shooting and battering for two days together, (haveing layne a fortnight about the same before that) And upon the third day they sent a gentleman to the said S<sup>r</sup> James offering honourable capitulation. The said S<sup>r</sup> James haveing received a letter from his Excellence the Marquesse of Montrosse some three days before hee was besidged wherein hee did signifie to him that hee was commanded by our late Sovereigne of Ever glorious memorie to lay downe arms and therefore he required the said S<sup>r</sup> James to doe the lyke, ffor which cause hee did the more readily give eare to a capitulation and hostiges being given from them for faithfull dealeing the said S<sup>r</sup> James sent forth his brother Archibald Lamont of Steelage with instructions upon what terms to capitulate And in a word they yeelded to all that was required which indeed were as honourable and brave conditions as were ever granted to any: for the Lamonts were all resolved rather to dye then not to have most honourable conditions: But to be short Those honourable capitulations<sup>1</sup> upon the third day of June 1646: Signed by S<sup>r</sup> James Lamont on the one parte and by James Campbell of Arkinglasse cheeife commander his Collonells Majors and Captaines and other gentlemen of that name who were there with them on the other pairt and a double of the said capitulation was given to the said S<sup>r</sup> James and another given to the said James Campbell In the which capitulations<sup>1</sup> the foresaid persons and partyes were deeply sworne to the artickles contained therein As is yet to be seene by the principall, which the said S<sup>r</sup> James hath yet in custody but shortly thereafter the said James Campbell with all the rest of that name and their followers did seize upon the person of the said S<sup>r</sup> James, his brethren and whole gentlemen of the name of Lamont which were in both his garisons and haveing first disarmed them and their followers They kepted them in severall chambers within the said garisons for the space of eight dayes as if they had beene Galley slaves, And in the interim of tyme those Campbells did nothing else but plunder and carry away all and whatsoever did belong to the said S<sup>r</sup> James his brethren sisters freinds and followers, And amongst other things they carryed away the said S<sup>r</sup> James his charter chist, wherein were the whole Rights and evedentes of all his baronies and lands and spoyled himselfe and brethren of their whole cloaths Yea they were not ashamed to dispoyle his Lady and sisters of their gowns and petticoats leaveing little more upon them wherewith to cover their shame but their smocks and also the said S<sup>r</sup> James his children were robbed of their little garments and thus they used all his freinds and followers, their wives and children: And so after that those Campbells had robbed them of all they had they burned broke downe and demolished those garisons and so great was their crueltie that they spared not any of the name of Lamont that were past seven yeares of age; yea so far went they on in their barbarous cruelties, that they plucked sucklings from their mothers breasts and dashed out their brains against the walls: And ten dayes after the capitulations were ended they carryed the said S<sup>r</sup> James his freinds and vassalls to a place called DUNNOONE about five miles from his principall garison And there in the Churchyard they most cruelly murthered (without Assyse or order of law) on one tree thirty and six at one tyme of the cheifs and speciall gentlemen of that name, and before they were half hanged they cutt them downe and threw them in by dozens in pitts prepared for the same and many of them striving to ryse upon their feet were violently holden downe untill that by throwing the earth in great quantity upon them they were stifled to death (this was done on the fourteenth day of the said month of June) And it is much to be remarked and taken notice of that the same tree upon which these thirty six gentlemen were hanged being shortly after cutt downe did immediately as it was in cutting spring forth blood and notwithstanding the body of the tree was carryed away yet did the root thereof continually cast forth blood for the space it continued in the ground which was for seaverall yeares together so that the certainty hereof hath beene verified by Knights Gentlemen Ministers and others And after the Committing these horrid murthers The said Sr James his lady children and sisters and all the remnant of the woemen with so many of their little ones as they had left alive were carryed away by boatfulls to other countries either to get by begging or starve ; But it was Sr James his good fortune (dureing their abode in the garison) that hee haveing in the dark of the night slipt asyde from his keepers did meete with a sister of his to whom hee said I perceave these people (meaning the Campbells) are most perfidious and not lyke to keepe any article of the capitulations sworne and subscribed by them to us And I fear also ere it be long by violence they will wring the same from mee therefore be you pleased to receive this same into your custody and by the best and surest way you can carry the same unto our noble freinds that you and they may require (in convenient time) reparation for their breach made allready to us y<sup>o</sup>f, or shall make hereafter, Which she with many sobbs and tears answered and said how shall I be able to hyde it from them being that already I am divested of my whole garments, even to my smock, But he said to her there is no remedie but you must take it for it is not only all the evidences which wee your brethren and kindred have for our whole lands and estates But also all the securytye wee can pretend for our lives and blood which these wicked people by all appearance are likely unjustly to robb us of The which then she accepted of and retyreing herself to a most secret corner she disvailling her head wrapt it up in the platts of her haire where secretly she kept it dureing the tyme she was detained in the said garisone and so carryed it to the Metropolitane Citty of Edenbrough where (shortly after the murthering of her freinds above mentioned) The parliament did sitt: To whom she complained of the Rapine murthers and cruelties committed upon herselfe brethren and kindred But so great was the Overswaying power of the late Marquese of Arguile that she not only could get no hearing But likewise could get none that durst assist or countenance her legall persuite against the Murtherers of her deare freinds And so was forced not only then But at severall other parliaments to goe away without the least hope of satisfactorie redress, yea without any hearing at all And in this meanetyme the said Sr James Lamont and his two brothers with two other speciall young gentlemen of his owne name were transported twenty myles thence to Inverrarah the Marquesse of Argyle his cheife Mansion house and from thence disposed upon to severall prisons And these two other gentlemen were by one George Campbell Sheriff and Justice depute to the Marquesse of Argyle brought back to Inverrarah And by the said George his order and command were most cruelly hanged they alwayes pleading the benefite of their capitulation hee still mocking them when they spoke y<sup>o</sup>f affirming that no capitulations should be kept with Traytors to God and his Covenant as hee tearmed it, As for the said Sr James himselfe and his brethren they were kept seven years prisoners in great want and misery for Sr James had neither shirt nor cloaths for four yeares together but the same hee had upon him when hee was taken The which in the said space did all rott of him So that there did not keepe so much together as cover his nakednesse And at last there was given him one shirt and one suite of very coarse gray cloth which was all hee had endureing his seaven years imprisonment In which misery hee continued for the space abovesaid untill His Majesties coming to Scotland where the Capitulations were presented to him by his said sister with a narrative of the breaking thereof and of the evill useage and hardshippes hee then endured for his loyalty to his Majestie and his father of ever blessed Memorie Wherefore his Majestie and his Estates of Parliament commanded the late Marquese<sup>of</sup> Argyle to bring the said Sr James and his brethren in safetie to Sterling And there for the safetie of their lives from the cruelty of the Marquese and his freinds they were by his Majesties command committed as prisoners to that Castle Where they alwayes remained untill that Generall George Monck haveing considered the Marquesse of Argyles and his freinds cruell dealings with the said Sr James and his brethren and pittying their said useage and Innocence hee did liberate and sett them at freedome But no sooner was the said Sr James gone to the West parts of Scotland to live quietly with his noble freinds there (not daring to goe to his owne lands) but as soone as the said Marquesse, Arkinglasse and George Campbell forsaide hunted out men to murther him Whereupon hee was forced to flye to this present Dutchesse of Hamiltoun for safety who then lived in the Isle of Arran from whence returning back was againe laid wait for to be murthered So that hee was forced to flye to the East parts of Scotland where he stayed five years together With his noble Cousin the Earle of Wintounne to which place the saids persons failed not to send men to murther him But they being detected hardly gott their owne escape made ; By what is said there is none but may Immagine that his sufferings and losses are very great ; his sonn lyeth yet out of the possession of his owne estate which is hoped will make yo<sup>r</sup> Royall Highnesse the more instant for him Being that it is knowne that hee is one of the most ancientest standing familyes in those parts Now I must conclude with showing your Royall Highnesse the most deplorable condition of his family Who by the endeavours of the present Earle of Argyle, In byeing Appryseings and old debts that the familie lay under In the tyme they suffered for his Majestie that they are absolutely ruined never to be a familie unless your Royall Highnesse be graciously pleased to take the whole premisses into your serious consideration and out of your Princely Goodnesse commiserate their sufferings and take some course to see them repaired of their losses Which Princely Act will indeare as in duty bound that familie and people Ever to be obedient servants to your Princely Highnesse.

1481. We have to record the decease of one of the most distinguished members of our Island circle. Mr. John Lamont departed this life at his residence at Diego Martin Valley on Thursday the 21st inst. at one o'clock in the morning. Mr. Lamont had arrived at the age of 65 years, the greater part of which he passed in this Island [of Trinidad]: where he had accumulated a very large fortune, by care, perseverance, and intelligence, accompanied by the strictest integrity, and marked by honour in all his transactions. He was never married; and we believe it is not known who will become the possessors of his fine estates in Diego Martin and in Naparima.

His body was attended from his residence to Cocorite by a numerous cortege of friends; and it was there placed on board the steamer, and brought to San Fernando—from thence it was conveyed (attended by his friends who are resident in Naparima) to the family burial-ground at Canaan Estate, where it was finally deposited next to the grave of his late brother, Boyden Lamont, Esq.
