PREFACE.

IN his valuable Guide to the Public Records of Scotland, Mr. Matthew Livingstone, late Deputy-Keeper of the Records, says—
“The Protocol Books kept by Notaries contained a record of their official Acts, and in absence of the original instruments were frequently used in evidence and for ‘transumps’ or extracts. The Statute 1555, c. 18, ordained these books to be produced before the Council on the admission of a Notary, that the leaves might be numbered and blanks marked, and the Act 1587, c. 29, ordained all Protocol Books to be lodged with the Clerk Register after the death of the owner. The Act 1617, c. 22, repeated this provision, but directed Protocols belonging to the Clerks of Royal Burghs to be delivered to the Provost and Bailies.”

It is to be regretted that the provisions of these Acts have been so little observed, only 139 of these books being preserved in the Lord Clerk Register’s Department, and that many of the volumes contain very little, some only the Notary’s admission. The volumes, which are here printed in abstract, form the earliest of the series, and are numbered I. and III.

Of Mr. Gavin Ros himself, the editors have not been able to discover any information, and his Protocols throw no light on his parentage, or what family he belonged to. He seems to have resided chiefly in Ayr, but to have had business transactions in Lanarkshire also.

(apparently to the effect that he had also made lawful proclamation in the church of Rikartone), who also Sir John clothed in sacred vestments for celebrating marriage between the said parties repeatedly (called upon) all and sundry who were present for the time (to declare) any impediment or impediments, if any they knew, between said persons under pain of danger to their souls. Besides the said George Ros desired a sentence of divorce celebrated between the said Robert Lynsay and Jonet Stewart, his pretended spouse, to be produced and shown, which sentence Alexander Lynsay promised to present and deliver to the notary within twenty days next immediately following, of which the tenor follows:—Having invoked the name of Christ, we, James Lynsay, commissary of the jurisdiction of Kylbryde, and judge in a certain cause tending to divorce moved between Jonet Stewarte, pursuer, on one part, and Robert Lynsay, grandson and heir-apparent of Alexander Lyndesay of Corsbaskate, defender, on the other part, concerning the matters contained in Jonet's libel, as follows, that Jonet compelled by force and fear of death which might befall a steadfast woman, and coerced by her parents, she unwilling, mournfully objecting and with grief contracted a pretended marriage "de facto et non de jure" with Robert L. by "verba de presenti," and in the same manner, though in law unjustly, solemnised the marriage with him in face of the Church; and the said Jonet, remaining always in the same opposition, never at any time consented nor intended to consent to the said Robert as her husband, and in token of said dissent he never had intercourse with her, as in the libel is fully narrated. Having seen the libel and Robert's answer thereto, having seen also the depositions of witnesses upon the libel produced against Jonet, none of whom contradicted the others, and the other merits of the case, sitting as a court and having God only before our eyes, by this our definitive sentence which we set forth in these writings, we declare the pretended marriage between Robert and Jonet contracted "de facto et non de jure" to be in itself and to have been null, of no effect and void, notwithstanding the impediment of violence, fear and opposition before written, divorcing them and celebrating divorce between them if no other canonical impediment hinder, bestowing licence of marrying others ; and whatever either has given to the other by way of dowry and marriage gift we decern to be restored. This sentence is dated at the metropolitan church of Glasgow 14 October 1521, and George Ros desired it to be inserted in the notary's protocol, and published under the form of an instrument. He denied, however, that he ought to pay custom on said goods, because it was not usual to pay custom on goods transmitted to these parts in any time bygone. heirs of his own body lawfully to be procreated, for the sum of 240 merks to be paid to him by John K. and John D. And after divers words on both sides, as to the purchase and sale of said heritage, the said John Kennedy gave and placed in said John Johnson's hand one penny, asserting that he was willing to give and pay to him the 240 merks for the heirship, failing heirs of Johnson's own body, which penny John K. declared was given in name of earnest for the premises. Done in the lodging of said John Kennedy 4 June 1523. John Johnson immediately resiled from said condition about the premises, and threw from him the penny given him as earnest, asserting that he did not wish to keep or fulfil the premises. Done at Laffinoris 11 June 1523. Witnesses, Michael M'Clanochan and Thomas Ross, 164a.

660. Instrument narrating that Margaret Cathcart, Mariota C., Elizabeth C. and Elena C., daughter and heirs of the late Allan Cathcart of Watterhed, comparing before the notary (Gavin Ross), appointed by letters patent commissary in that part of Mr. Thomas Cowtis, official of Glasgow, chose and named Egidia Craufurd, their mother, and Sir James Craufurd, as their curators until their mature age, twenty-four years, giving their oath that they would never come in contrary of the premises. Moreover, the said Egidia and Sir James, chaplain, accepting the office of curatory, took oath upon the gospels "de fideli administratione." Done at Watterhed 12 June 1523. Witnesses, Andrew Blak, Andrew Campbell, William Dalrymple, George Dalrymple and Sir William Cathcart, chaplain,

Moreover, the said Egidia C., comparing in her court before William Dalrymple, sitting as a judge, declared (?) the lands of Corshill and the mansion which John Qubit formerly inhabited in Penyfodzeath to be waste, straitly forbidding that any one should occupy the lands in future without tack or her special leave, under the penalty competent in law and fact. Done at Watterhed 12 June 1523. Witnesses, Sir James Craufurd, chaplain, Thomas Ross, George Ross, George Dalrymple, John Qubyt, John M'Creth,

This commission, so produced, the said David caused to be read by the notary, and in virtue thereof, David, as sheriff in that part, chose a judicial seat for himself, and created the members of his court, namely, Sir William Miller as clerk, Ninian Nicol, sergeant, and John Dalrymple ("sectorem"), deempster, who gave their oaths to minister faithfully in their offices during the time they filled them. Done at the mansion of the lands of Plad 16 June 1523. Witnesses, James Boswell, James (? Hunter) and Hugh Craufurd. 164b.

663. Instrument narrating that John Wer, chaplain, vicar of . . . , procurator of Elizabeth Crechtoun, lady of Uchiltre, compearing before David Camroune, sheriff of Are in that part, sitting as judge in a fenced court, publicly produced certain letters of tack of the lands of Plad, made by James Colvil of Uchiltre, under his seal and signature, to Elizabeth Crechtoun and Jonet Campble, her daughter, specifying the four-merk land of Plad, which tack was dated 12 June 1514, containing in it the space of eleven years, written by these figures "xi," by virtue of which tack the said procurator claimed ("vouebat") the lands, and required the sheriff to hold Elizabeth in possession thereof, according to the tack produced by and till she might be summoned and lawfully removed thence. Done at the mansion of the lands of Plad 16 June 1523. Witnesses, George Ross of Hanyng, William Dalrymple of Star, Wiliam Symonton of Auchinbay and Sir Thomas Craufurd, chaplain, 165a.
664. Instrument narrating that Matthew Craufurd, judicially compearing before David Camroune, as above, impugned the said tack made by James Colvil of Uchiltre to Dame Elizabeth Crechtoun and Jonet Campble, her daughter, asserting that the letters of tack were erased and changed in a suspicious place, namely in the number of years, and declared that eleven years to be fraudfully ("sinistre") written by these numeral letters "x et i" where formerly were written nine years only, by these numerals "i et x." And for his interest the said Matthew produced letters of tack of the said lands of Plade, made of new to him by James Colvil, in virtue of which he claimed the lands to have belonged to himself since Whitsunday last. Matthew C. also produced certain letters of excambion of the lands of Bareturk for the lands of Plade, containing in them nine years only. Moreover, Matthew effectually obeyed the said sheriff in all things, according to his commission from the proclamation of a court to be held upon the lands of Plad, for taking cognition between Matthew and Dame Elizabeth Crechton, until the day of said court, in which court Matthew compearing required certain men of the country, arrested, compearing and admitted on inquest, to proceed to said cognition: and because they were unwilling to proceed, he protested that it should not prejudice him, asserting that he had done and wished to do all things incumbent on him by law, protesting solemnly for a term to object against said tack. Same place and date as preceding. Witnesses, George Craufurd of Laffinoris, William Symonton of Auchinbay, William Dalrymple of Star, 165a.

665. Instrument narrating that David Camroune, above designed sitting, &c., required George Ros of Hanyng, William Dalrymple of Stare, Edward Cunyghame of Auchinhervy, William Symontone of Auchinbay, Adam Cathcart of Bardarrach, George Ros, younger, Allan Dalrymple, James Dalrymple, James Boswell, David Dalrymple and Robert Cunyghame, sworn and admitted upon inquest for taking cognition (as above), to give deliverance affirmatively or negatively in said cause, in terms of letters of commission, because they were lawfully summoned and required by command of the king to compear on a certain day and place to the effect foresaid. All those so required declared they were few in number and illiterate, and asserted that they could not know how to proceed in that cause for the time, because there was a doubt in an alleged abrasion of some letters in the tack of which they knew not to determine. Moreover, Sir John Were, procurator for Dame Elizabeth Crechtoun, produced letters of tack, made by James Colvil of Uchiltre to Dame Elizabeth, publicly in writing, and required the foresaid persons on the inquest to proceed in the cause, according to the same; and if they hesitated about the tenor, he declared they and each of them would commit a wilful error. Same place, date and witnesses as preceding, 166a.

666. Instrument narrating that after the entry of the inquest in face of the court, as to the cognition of the lands of Plade, the said Sir John Were, procurator for Dame Elizabeth Crechtoun, solemnly protested for term, day and place, to which the said Dame Elizabeth might pursue and call the sheriff in that part and other members of court, for having remedy of law, and likewise to cite the inquest to that effect, before a judge competent. Moreover, the procurator claimed the lands in name of Dame Elizabeth, requiring the said David Camroune to hold her in possession until she may be cited and rightly removed. Same place, date and witnesses, 166a.
667. Instrument narrating that Matthew Craufurd, compearing judicially before David Camroune (above designed), in a court held at the mansion of the lands of Plade, required said David to proceed in this present court in the manner and form of his first court held on said lands, the members of court unchanged. Matthew asserted that the clerk ("sector,") of court and serjeant chosen, sworn and admitted in the first court, in this present court were changed and altered, because Sir Andrew Walch, clerk, John Contane, sergeant, and John Dalrimple, "sector," were not created and did not use office in the first court. At the mansion of the lands of Plade 27 June 1523. Witnesses, George Craufurd of Laffinoris, Bartholomew Craufurd of Kerss and William Craufurd, 166a.
668. Instrument narrating that James Lange, procurator for Dame Elizabeth Crechtoun, appearing before David Camroune (as above), sitting, &c., produced letters of tack of the lands of Plad, by James Colvil of Uchiltre, to Dame Elizabeth, containing the space of eleven years, of date 12 June 1514, and required the inquest to proceed to take cognition in said cause according to the king's letters. The said procurator also, in name of Dame Elizabeth, claimed possession of the lands. On the opposite part, Matthew Craufurd, judicially compearing, declared that the said tack produced was in itself insufficient and invalid because it was erased, altered and changed in the number of years specified, namely, by putting eleven years by "x & i" in place of nine. He also produced other letters of tack of said lands made to himself by James Colvil and letters of exchange of the lands of Barturk continuing nine years only. Moreover, Matthew required the said sheriff to cause three chaplains, Sir William Tonok, Sir William Millar and the notary to be sworn, and be present with the inquest for informing the men upon proceeding as to the premises, because many of those on the inquest were illiterate, to which the said procurator for Dame Elizabeth entirely objected. Same place, date and witnesses as above, 166b.
669. Instrument narrating that the said James Lange, as procurator, &c., compearing before David Camroune, &c., solemnly protested that whatever was done before the said David, concerning the lands of Plad, should not prejudice Dame Elizabeth Crechtoun, and if aught were done against her in this court, he asserted that the inquest would wilfully err not negligently. Same place, date and witnesses as above, 167a.
670. Instrument narrating that William Symontone of Auchinbay, for himself and others admitted on inquest, required David Camroune, as sheriff, to admit George Wallace, witness specified in Dame Elizabeth's tack, judicially produced, for informing their minds regarding the contents of the letters of tack, but David C. wholly refused to do that, asserting that he did not have this in the commission directed to him. Same place and date 27 June 1523, 167a.

671. Instrument narrating that Andrew Wycht required James Lange, servant and procurator of Dame Elizabeth Crechtounne, to receive certain cows from a man inhabiting the lands of Plad, because Andrew W. had formerly become cautioner and surety for redelivering the cows, asserting that he did not wish to remain longer in charge of them. Same place and date 27 June 1523. Witnesses, Matthew Craufurd, William Reid and William Craufurd, 167b.

"tua stane croce," with three acres of land of Carcaffyland, of which price for the said oats and bear George discharged the said John and Patrick. Moreover, they faithfully promise to deliver from said victual to William Bell six bolls of bear at the above price, each boll for eight shillings. Done at the mansion of the lands of "Tua stane croce," 23 June 1523. Witnesses, William Bell, Margaret Miller and . . . Inglis, 167b.

July 1523. Witnesses, David Colvill, James Colvill and John Wallace, 168b.
677. Instrument narrating that Bartholomew Craufurd of Kerse and John Craufurd of Drongane faithfully promised to fulfil the whole contents of a certain writing of agreement made between them at the mill of Scheld, and subscribed by them, in virtue of which they agreed to obey and fulfil the decree and sentence arbitral of George Craufurd of Laffinoris and of Quintin Schaw, tutor of Keris, concerning matters debateable between them, upon which they took their bodily oath. Moreover, Isabella exonerates John Craufurd of all rents and profits from her said third, received and intromitted with by him in time past, or to be received : for which he straitly obliges himself and his heirs to warrant freely and peacefully the said Isabella those three-merk lands of Drongane, which she presently occupies, in compensation of said third, for the whole of her lifetime. Done at the Mill of Scheld 13 July 1523. Witnesses, George Craufurd of Laffinoris, Patrick Blak and John Rankin, 169a.

Moreover, Mariota faithfully promised to the said John, her son, her best heirship goods, the secondary heirship belonging to her, and the heirship goods of Leonard Clerk, being first taken out, to all which goods falling to her she made the said John assignee, with full power of intromission and disposition, transferring all her rights to him, and promising before the notary to uphold whatever her assignee may do in the premises, under obligation of all her goods, moveable and immoveable. Done at the burgh of Are, in the lodging of James Tayt, . . . July 1523. Witnesses, James Tayt and Alexander . . . son, 169b.

Done in the barony of Alloway probably same date as preceding. Moreover, Adam Wallace, alderman, required the said bailies, in the King's name, and by virtue of their office and great oath, to sit with him to hold a court of barony of Alloway to minister justice. Moreover, the said alderman declared himself ready to sit in said court by virtue of his office, so far as devolved on him of right for ministration of justice in the same, the tenants of said barony and community of said burgh being congregated in sufficient number for inquiry, expulsion and punishment of thieves, robbers and transgressors, according to the king's commission, specially directed to the alderman and bailies, and for other causes and matters which were to be proposed for the public weal and the common good of the burgh and barony for the time, but certain bailies, as he declared, formerly rose up and retired from the alderman, others sitting and remaining there. Alderman Adam W. declared that (he could not) hold a court of the barony to the grave injury of the community, and, lastly, he required the tenants and burgesses of the burgh present for the time to remain with him for the execution of justice as above, who all thus requested remained except John Lang and John Monfod, younger, who with said (bailies) formerly retired in contempt of the alderman, as he asserted. Moreover, Adam declared that he had not been present with the brethren of the guild of the community (at the election) of John L. as dean of guild, and, therefore, John had not been lawfully chosen to that office, and ought not to minister the same according to the statutes of the burgh. And because, as (Adam) declared, the said court as before begun and fenced could not be held, he protested that it should not prejudice him; protesting also for day and term to be assigned to him to set forth the crimes and offences committed against him by said John before the community and council of the burgh. On the opposite part John L. declared that he had been lawfully chosen dean of guild by the common council of the burgh, and could therefore sit and lawfully hold a guild court, and he required the said Adam, as alderman, by virtue of his office, and all other burgesses present for the time, to remain with him, that he might be able to hold a court for the administration of justice therein. The co-burgesses thus requested retired from him, notwithstanding the requisition. 1061. Instrument (much defaced), probably to the effect that Allan Cathcart, holder of the ward ("wardatarius") (protested) that the briefe of inquest produced on the part of William Cathcart, son and heir as above (should not prejudice his rights). Same date as preceding, 118a.
1062. Instrument narrating that (David Cathcart of) Duchray, sheriff in that part (of Lord Cathcart), compearing before Hugh Campble of Lowdown, sheriff of Air, sitting as a court, produced letters from the king, dated at Edinburgh 6 . . . , obtained by John, Lord Cathcart, in the action between Lord C. on one part and James Chalmer, son and heir of the late Mr. Robert Chalmer of Gatgirth, on the other part, in terms of which letters the said David required the said Hugh, as sheriff principal, John Craufurd of Drongan, James Tate and Andrew Tennand, his deputes, personally apprehended, to desist from all summons, citation and process against Lord C. or his tenants for certain reasons contained in the king's letters, because the plea and action moved between the said Lord C. and James Chalmer and his tutor before the Lords of Council is as yet depending undecided, and the said David further asserted that the said letters were formerly presented to the sheriff-depute of Air. Hugh Campble declared that he had never been required before by any letters to desist in said cause, then he asserted he was willing to obey the letters in all points. Same date as preceding. Moreover, the latter, with his "prelocutor," asserted that Christina Colvill and David himself were the just possessors of the tenement and gardens and certain lands in Uchiltre for the space of thirty-six years, and judicially claimed (or avowed "vouebat") the same, with all danger and penalty of law thence arising, and he produced certain letters of tack of said tenement, &c., made to him for his title by said Cristina, and offered himself ready to give oath in the premises, in form of law. Moreover, William Craufurd, procurator of James Colvill, required the sheriff and his deputes to proceed in said cause, according to letters from the king produced, David C. also alleging that Cristina was a surety to him for his title as above. The judge assigned the next court day to David to produce his warrant and to verify the precept, &c. produced. In the Tolbooth of Air 4 October

(The rest defaced), 160a.
1201. Instrument (unfortunately very defaced and illegible) the chief purport of which is that John, Lord Cathcart, in a cause against (apparently) John Craufurd of Drongan, objected to the judges, First James Campble in Lochle and Quintyn Schaw . . . were nearly related to John C. and these two sheriff-deputes were declined and removed from the whole process. Moreover, Lord C. asserted that (Patrick) Campble in Mertname, sheriff-depute, sitting alone in the cause, was not a competent judge . . . (1) because he asserted that the said Patrick Campble, pretended sheriff-depute, was related to John C. of Drongan in the third and fourth degrees of affinity . . . Lord C. asserted that the late Alexander Boid (?) begot of his body the late Alexander Boid . . . which Alexander B. begot of his body Egidia Boid, mother of Katrine Glasfurd, spouse of . . . (The other side of the descent is illegible.) Lord Cathcart made other objections, such as that Patrick C. was not sworn, and was otherwise incompetent, but the details are defective, 160b.
1202. Instrument (the first lines of which are wanting or defective) relating to a cause brought before Adam Wallace of Newtoun, alderman of Air, on a rollment of court, by Leonard Clerk, Thomas Broun and John Kennedy' on one part, and James Dormont on the other part, the rollment being dated . . . , and under the hand of Stephen Prestoun, notary public, clerk of court. Adam Wallace received the rollment and promised to put it to due execution, and promised, in name of James Dormont, (to cause?) Andrew Davidsoun to serve the said Leonard, Thomas and John in their voyage now instant, in the place of James D., according to the rolment. Thomas and Leonard asserted that Andrew Davidsson was not so good a servant nor so skilled in navigation nor in fishing as James Dormont, but they offered to take any sufficient servant in place of James, as he according to the discretion and consideration of four men of the New town in the art of navigation. . . . Therefore, they solemnly protest for the loss and expense of future sustenance in default of said servant if James D. does not find his servant competent according to the rolment, protesting for the remedy of law in the meantime . . . August 1531. Witnesses, John Nelson, Charles Tait and David . . . , 162a.

Instrument narrating that (Adam Wallace of Newtoun) resigned a tenement in the burgh of Air, bounded on one side by the tenement of Quintin Cunygham (the description being almost wholly illegible), in favour of Jonet Maxwell, his spouse, into the hands of John Kennedy, one of the bailies of Air, who duly gave sasine of said tenement to the said Adam and Jonet in conjunct fee, the longer liver of the two and their heirs. Then Adam C. acknowledged that an acquittance produced by David Semple was subscribed by him, containing the sum of 40s. in part payment of a larger sum promised to him of the portion of heirship moveable goods pertaining to him by decease of his father. The said David Semple produced letters of the king for taking cognition . . . (lines wanting) . . . and . . . declared on oath that he arrested Adam Conygham and John C. at Caprintoun on a warning of . . . to compear before the bailies, in terms of said letters, upon this date to see and hear the said cognition taken, and that the serjeant specified all the points requisite for a lawful arrest, nevertheless the judges refused to proceed in the said cause of cognition. Moreover, David Semple, prelocutor foresaid, excepted and opposed against all the persons chosen upon the inquest for the time, collectively, because, as he asserted, they were related to Adam and John C. in degrees of consanguinity and affinity, and for other reasons and reasonable causes and of relevant right to be proposed before a judge competent, protesting solemnly that whatever was done against Elizabeth before the said judges should not yield any loss or prejudice to her on account of the above causes and reasons and others to be proposed in their place and time. David Semple asked instruments. Done at (Prestwik) in said court . . . August 1531

Done in the Tolbooth of Ar . . . December 1532. Witnesses, John Craufurd of Drongan, Hugh Campbell of Carleton, Robert Campbell, John Bard, 209b.
1368. Instrument (also very defective) narrating that William Wallace, bailie of Hugh Campble of Lowdoun, sheriff of Are, gave sasine of certain lands to (Richard?) Banotyne, burgess of Air 31 (?) December 1532. 209b.
1369. Instrument (defaced) apparently a protest by someone then engaged in the king's service, that his absence thereon should not prejudice him in any way. Witnesses as before, 210a.
1370. Instrument (imperfect) narrating that James Tait, sheriff-depute of Air, at command of royal letters under the signet, released Gilbert Bard, William Colvill and Thomas Pickart from a process of horning formerly led upon them on account of a pretended maiming of . . . Colvill, and delivered a rod of peace to Thomas Pickart for himself and in name of the others. Done at the cross of the burgh of Air. 22 January 1532. Witnesses, William Kar, Patrick . . . , William Lekprivick, 210a.
1371. Instrument (entirely illegible). Witnesses, David Blair of Adamtoun, Sir George . . . , . . . Martin, 210b.
1372. Instrument (imperfect) narrating that Stephen Pike, (skipper?) of a ship . . . being at the port and station of the burgh of Air . . . of George Wallace, one of the bailies of said burgh, and testi(fied?) that he had in his ship, three anchors, two cables, two nets, broken for catching herring, one . . . pasvolant and four wooden barrels. (The rest is so defective that the sense cannot be properly given, but the name of Thomas Udart, burgess of Edinburgh, appears perhaps as one having a share in the vessel.) . . . January 1532, 210b.
1373. Instrument (almost wholly defaced) the only name visible being "Symontoun." At Ar . . . 1532, 211a.
1374. The same day Adam Cunyghame, son of the late Thomas Cunyghame in Washfurd, compeared before James Tait and Gilbert (Boid), sheriffs-depute of Air, in the Tolbooth there, sitting as a court, and on behalf of John Cunyghame of Caprintoun and of Adam Cunyghame, tutor of Laglane, protested that whatever was done as to a breve of terce of Jonet Hamiltoun, relict of the late Alexander Cunyghame of Laglane, pursued for the time, should not prejudice the said John and Adam because they were then in the service of (James, Earl of) Murray, lieutenant of the king at the confines of the Kingdom, according to an Act of Parliament made thereupon, which act Murdach (Nesbit, clerk) of court refused to receive or read because (the said Adam C.) had no mandate of procuratory. . . . January (?) 1532. Witnesses, Sir Alexander Craufurd, presbyter and N.P., 211a.
