FOREWORD

The original Register of Wills(1729-1826)given to us by "Uncle Dan" Kachel, was the inspiration for this publication. Later, after genealogical committees of Donegal Chapter, N.S.D.A.R., had copied the Index to both Will Books and Intestate Records down to 1850, we obtained permission from the Board of Management, for a consideration, to put this valuable material into print. We found it necessary to check up with the Court House records, to correct errors and supply omissions. Certain omissions in the Court House records were learned to be due to the fact that some of the Wills could not be copied until deciphered or translated from the German. When later some of these were done, they were entered in Vol.II of Will Books X and Y.

The Wills of those persons who died in this region prior to the erection of Lancaster County (May 10, 1729) are registered in the Chester County Court House at West Chester, the County Seat since September 25, 1786, when they were removed from old Chester. There are no Orphans Court records prior to 1740.

Typed or photostatic copies of Wills may be obtained by writing to the Office of the Register of Wills.

We have thought to make this volume more interesting and far more valuable by putting "flesh on the bones" - in other words, precede the Index with a brief review of these early inhabitants and their settlements. Their attainments and accomplishments, varied and notable, are suggested in the extensive though by no means exhaustive bibliography.

We wish here to express our appreciation for the advice and suggestions given us by Dr. G. M. Brumbaugh of the National Genealogical Society, and Dr. Jean Stephenson, National Chairman of the Committee on Genealogical Records of the Daughters of the American Revolution, both of Washington, D.C. And we wish to thank Mrs. Charles M. Coldren, genealogist, of Lancaster, Penna., for her valuable assistance in solving some of the mysteries in the Court House records and in the selection of a comprehensive bibliography; also Mr. M. Luther Heisey, librarian of the Lancaster County Historical Society, for his graciousness in permitting us the use of the library and lending us plates for the illustrations.

LANCASTER COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

This was a long-time home of the Indian. Here in the forest primeval he hunted wild game, and in the productive valley lands of many streams he grew corn and tobacco; while along the great waterway of the picturesque Susquehanna, restless nomads ceaselessly moved northward and southward. Inhabiting this region were the Susquehannocks, the Shawanese, the Ganawese or Conoys, the Nanticokes, and the Lenni Lenapes or Delaware Indians[1]. They called this, their home, "Chanastocka," or Conestogoe, said to signify "the great magic land,"[2] expressing the same rapture over its beauty and fertility as did their white successors who named portions of it "Paradise" and "Eden." It was natural for Penn's followers to refer to the Indians of Conestogoe as "Conestogoes," though the term was locally applied to a small group, remnants of several tribes who lived on the Conestoga flats below Lancaster. It was this group which concluded with William Penn a treaty[3] "to endure as long as the sun should shine or the waters run into the rivers."

Throughout the seventeenth century there came into this region explorers, adventurers and traders -- French[4], English[5], Dutch[6], Swedes[7], and Finns[8] -- most of whom passed on.

In 1681 William Penn was granted by King Charles II all this area of land now known as Pennsylvania, in payment of a 16,000 pounds debt owing to his father, Admiral Penn, and immediately he began plans for its colonization[9]. Documents show that he was greatly attracted to the region of the Susquehanna at the mouth of the Conestoga, and considered it a suitable place for a great Capital City. Later the site of Philadelphia on the Delaware was chosen, but Penn, still retaining his interest in the Susquehanna-Conestoga tract, gave orders that 16,000 acres be reserved for him, his heirs and assigns forever[10]. Conditions changed in the years that followed, and "Conestoga Manor" which might have been the great landed estate of the Proprietary and Governor-in-Chief of the Province, was divided into farms and gardens and is one of the most productive areas of the "Garden Spot".

Before the end of the seventeenth century Penn's Land was beckoning to the oppressed of the Old World, and ships were bringing into the port of Philadelphia passengers bent on founding for themselves new homes in this land of religious and political freedom. They soon spread over the three original counties of Philadelphia, Bucks and Chester, and then reached out into the Conestoga country -- English and Welsh Quakers, Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, Swiss Mennonites, French Huguenots, Germans from the Palatinate, and English and Welsh Episcopalians.[11]

For the Quaker, first of all, Penn's "Holy Experiment" was a haven of refuge[12]. From England and Wales they came, settling in great numbers in Chester County, then over into the wilds beyond. The records show that the first deed to land in what is now Lancaster County was granted to John Kennerley in 1691. This "William Penn Deed" was for 375 acres in what is now Sadsbury Township, near Christiana[13].

It is also known that Quakers came from the Nottinghams into Little Britain Township at a very early date. Within a few years they were firmly established throughout the Octorara and Conowingo valleys[14]. Some continued up the Susquehanna under the leadership of John Wright, who in 1730 procured a patent for a ferry, and soon "Wright's Ferry", at the site of Columbia, became the great gateway to the West[15]. The Quakers, or Friends, were especially prominent in the political affairs of the county during provincial times. They have been characterized by their "plain living and high thinking", their vigorous intellectuality and a well developed sense of moral responsibility. They were bitterly opposed to slavery and gave protection to runaway slaves[16]. For years they were leaders in the temperance movement.

It is to the Swiss Mennonites, followers of Menno Simon from the cantons of Berne and Zurick, however, to whom is given the credit for making the first permanent white settlement in what is now Lancaster County. Several families of these hardy pioneers took up a tract of 10,000 acres north of Pequea creek in what is now West Lampeter Township, on a warrant dated October 10,1710[17]. Here they settled under the pastoral care of their Bishop, Rev. Hans Herr, and soon one of their number, Martin Kendig, was sent back to the Rhineland for other kinsmen. Here they put into practise the German methods of farming they had learned during their sojourn in the Rhine Valley, and it is to these Swiss and Germans from the Palatinate that Lancaster County is largely indebted for making of it the richest agricultural county in the United States. Though the Mennonites have never participated in any of the wars in which this country has been engaged, they have willingly and generously contributed at their Nation's call in times of distress in war, flood or famine. These early settlers have been well characterized by Lloyd Mifflin in his sonnet[18]:

THE PIONEER OF PEACE: THE MENNONITE FARMER

Like some great patriarch of old he stands
    Among the sheaves - far from the town's embroil -
    Bearded and grey, true sovereign of the soil;
    A later Boaz, at whose wise commands
The harvest turns to gold. Lord of wide lands,
    Mellowed by cycles of unending moil,
    He typifies the dignity of toil,
    As earth attests the power of his hands.

Driven by persecution to our shore,
    A man of peace and Christian tolerance rare,
    With tranquil faith he thro' life's tumult goes,
Nor ever turns the needy from his door;
    While thro' the years of patient work and prayer
    He makes the valleys blossom as the rose.

ROBERT FULTON

Artist and Inventor—1765-1815

(From the painting by Benjamin West)

Born in Little Britain (now Fulton) Township,
Lancaster County, Pennsylvania

In 1791 he exhibited portraits in the Royal Academy, London
In 1807 he first successfully applied steam to navigation

A child of Lancaster, upon this land,
    Here was he born, by Conowingo's shade;
    Along these banks our youthful Fulton strayed,
Dreaming of Art. Then Science touched his hand,
    Leading him onward, when, beneath her wand,
    Wonders appeared that now shall never fade.
    He triumphed o'er the Winds, and swiftly made
The giant, Steam, subservient to command."

Sonnet by Lloyd Mifflin

After the revocation of the Edict of Nantes by Louis XIV in 1685, half a million French Huguenots left the country. Penn's colony not only welcomed them but encouraged their coming. In the first group to reach this section were Maria Warenbauer, widow of Daniel Ferree, or Fiere, and her three sons and three daughters, one the wife of Isaac LeFevre. It was in 1711-12 that they came into the Pequea Valley in what is now Paradise Township. Soon after settling here, Philip Ferree married Leah DuBois of New Paltz, New York - another important Huguenot community[19]. Since then many more have come, contributing much to the happiness and prosperity of our people because of such traits as gaiety and an optimistic outlook on life, ingenuity and adaptability, tolerance, unlimited energy, and efficiency at the handicrafts[20].

Scotch-Irish Presbyterians soon followed. Simultaneously with the building of their homes they arranged for a place of worship. There is tradition of a Presbyterian Society at Chestnut Level in Drumore Township, in 1711, and evidence of an organization there in 1717. Donegal Church was in existence in 1720, possibly even as early as 1714; Pequea in 1724; and Middle Octorara in Bart Township in 1727[21]. In connection with their church they established a school, and as most of the ministers were graduates of Edinburgh, Glasgow or Dublin, they were well qualified to develop these into classical schools of a high order, such as the Latin school at Pequea, founded by Dr. Robert Smith in 1750, the Chestnut Level Academy, established by Dr. James Latta in 1771[22], and the classical school at Donegal conducted by Rev. Colin McFarquhar in 1776[22]. Such schools as these, taught by such learned men in our neighboring counties, developed into Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania[23]. Because of a scholarly ministry and an educated laity, Presbyterianism cultivated "an intellectual freedom which meant spiritual and political freedom[24]." Thus were developed men and women of indomitable courage, ever ready to espouse a cause which had for its purpose the removal of shackles from body, mind or spirit. Of restless energy, the Scotch-Irish guarded the frontier and pushed it farther and farther westward[25]. With a genius for organisation, they took a peculiar interest in "the construction of a country and the formation of a government"[26].

Germans from Hesse-Darmstadt settled in Martic Township about 1710[27], and Germans from the Palatinate came into the Townships of Earl, West Earl and East Earl in 1717[28]. They were men and women of a hardy type and the possessors of many virtues. Most of them were of the Lutheran and Reformed persuasions, and they began early to establish churches and schools. One of the finest contributions the Germans have made to this community and to the country at large is Franklin and Marshall College, together with the Academy and the Reformed Theological Seminary. From the time when Franklin College was founded at the suggestion of Benjamin Franklin, in 1787, - the third institution of higher learning in the State - it has had a succession of learned men on its faculty. Its first president, Dr. Henry E. Muhlenberg, the pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, was a profound scholar, an able theologian, and excelled in the natural sciences, especially botany, because of which he has been called the "American Linnaeus". On the faculty at the same time was Dr. Melsheimer, professor of Greek, Latin and German, who also acquired distinction as the "Father of American Entomology". His collection is now a part of the Agassiz museum of Harvard University[29].

A group of Germans settled on the Cocalico in 1732 under the leadership of Conrad Beissel, a Lutheran who was influenced by the Pietists of Heidelberg and initiated into the Rosicrucian Fraternity, and here formed the Ephratah Community, a mystical, semi-monastic society[30]. These "Solitary Brethern" and "Spiritual Virgins" observed the seventh day as their Sabbath and practiced the rites of an occult philosophy. After a time their Cloisters became centers of industry. Here was made much of the paper used during the Revolution, and oil was pressed for printer's ink. By 1742-43 their book-bindery "was the largest and best equipped in the colonies", and on their hand-press "some of the earliest and most important American printing was done". Here the "Martyr Book" was translated from the Dutch into German, and printed and bound with leather and brass mountings. Wagon loads of unbound copies were later requisitioned by Washington's armies and used for wads in cannon[30].

In 1754 a Moravian settlement was made in Warwick Township and named by Count Zinzendorf[31], its founder, Lititz, after a barony in Bohemia. Here members lived under close "spiritual supervision" and "all the industrial and civic agencies were undertaken by the church authorities or with their sanction." There was a "tenacious clinging to early customs and regulations" until 1855, when the lease system was abolished and "Lititz ceased to be an exclusive settlement".[32] Lititz early became a musical center. Here, in 1765, David Tanneberger began making organs, some of which were described as "the best and largest in America." Here was established a school for girls, which in 1794 became Linden Hall Seminary, famed for the cultivation of "lady-like grace and high moral purpose." Here also was the Lititz Academy for Boys, conducted by John Beck for fifty years. In 1865 another private school for boys was established by A. R. Beck, son of John Beck, which was conducted for thirty years[33]. Here during Revolutionary days the Moravians cared for sick and wounded soldiers -- Continental, British and Hessian. Here in the Moravian Cemetery is buried General Sutter, the discoverer of gold in California.

The Germans have given us many interesting customs, one being known as the "Feast of Roses." Wilhelm Heinrich Stiegel, manager of the Elizabeth iron works from about 1760, and the manufacturer of the famous "Stiegel glass", gave to the Lutheran congregation in Manheim a plot of ground on which he erected a church, in consideration of five shillings and a yearly rental of one red rose,

WHEATLAND, LANCASTER, PA. HOME OF JAMES BUCHANAN

Born April 23, 1791; died June 1, 1868

Congressman and Senator. Minister to Russia under President Jackson. Secretary of State under President Polk.
Minister to England under President Pierce, and Fifteenth President of the United States

"if the same shall be lawfully demanded." This annual payment has developed into a beautiful ceremony at which not one rose but many are brought into the church each year.[34]

The English of the Established Church settled first in Pequea and Salisbury townships, where in 1729 they built "St.John's Pequay".[35] Though the English have been greatly outnumbered by other nationalities, they have from very early days held prominent places in the political, legal and medical annals of the county. The second Episcopal Church of the county was built in 1733 at Bangor in Caernarvon Township by Welsh who had come over from the townships of Radnor and Haverford, in Chester County, about 1718[36]. It is said of Churchtown that "in the days of the forges, it was a busy hive of industry. Tailors, hatmakers, cabinet and chairmakers, harness shops, blacksmiths, Conestoga wagon builders, and nearby fulling mills, gave employment to many persons, and an air of prosperity was evident to the traveller."[37]

As early as 1720 there were Jews in this vicinity trading with the Indians. In 1735 Joseph Simon came to Lancaster and soon was extending his enterprises as far as the Mississippi[38]. He was a broad-minded, public-spirited man who took part in the affairs of the town, county and province. He was frequently visited by his granddaughter, Rebecca Gratz, said to have been the inspiration of Sir Walter Scott's heroine Rebecca in "Ivanhoe".[39]

The foregoing gives an idea of the many distinct groups that first came into the region now known as Lancaster County. So rapidly did they come into this Conestoga region that in 1718 the section of Chester County west of the Octorara creek was erected into Conestoga Township. In 1720 the township was divided, and West Conestoga was made to include all the territory west of the Pequea creek. In 1721 Pequea Township was formed, which included the settlements along the Pequea. By 1722 West Conestoga Township became Donegal, named for that county in Ireland from which many of its settlers had come.[40]

Increasing population, the great distance from the County Seat at Chester, poor roads, lawlessness in Conestoga, and difficulty in collecting taxes, all made it imperative that a new county be formed. So it came about that on May 10, 1729, the "Upper Parts of the Province of Pennsylvania, lying towards Susquehanna, Conestogoe, Dunnegal, etc.," were erected into a new county and named LANCASTER by John Wright who had come from the shire of that name in England. Whereupon Lieutenant-Governor Gordon appointed the following as justices of the peace to constitute the first court: John Wright, Tobias Hendricks, Samuel Blunston, Andrew Cornish, Thomas Edwards, Caleb Pierce, Thomas Reed, and Samuel Jones. These magistrates sat at the tavern of John Postlethwaite on the "Great Conestoga Road" to confer "withthe most prominent inhabitants" on the names of the townships and their respective boundaries.[41]

Here the Court sat during the August and November terms, 1729 and February, May and August of 1730[42], after which it was removed to Gibson's Tavern at Hickory Town, a favorite rendezvous of the Indians, and at this time a small community where Governor Hamilton owned considerable land, laid out a town site and offered a plot for the erection of public buildings. His offer was accepted, and Hickory Town became Lancaster the County Seat.[43]

The building of a Court House was commenced in 1731. It was described as a two-story brick structure. On or about June 9, 1784, it was destroyed by fire while undergoing repairs. In this first Court House, located in the center of Penn Square, many important scenes were enacted[44]. Here was held, in 1744, a council between the deputies from the "Six Nations" of the Iroquois Confederacy and Lieutenant-Governor George Thomas and Commissioners from Maryland and Virginia, with Conrad Weiser as interpreter and more than five hundred Indians attending. It was the most important council yet held in Pennsylvania, for by the terms of the treaty, "England secured the right to the Valley of the Ohio" and the English colonies were guarded against surprise by the French and their Indian allies.[45]

This first Court House was the "Capitol" of Pennsylvania at two different times[46] - first, for a few days beginning August 11, 1762[47], then from October 1, 1777, to June 28, 1778, when the Supreme Executive Council fled to Lancaster[48] at the approach of Howe's army into Philadelphia. Here during this time the first President of the Council, Thomas Wharton, Jr., died while in office, May 23, 1778, and lies interred in Trinity Lutheran Church.[49] At the same time, and for the same reason, the Continental Congress left Philadelphia and came to Lancaster[50]. On Saturday, September 27, 1777, they held a session here[51]. Many of the members were in Lancaster several days, gradually moving over the Susquehanna to York for greater safety.

After the burning of the first Court House in 1784, another one was erected and completed in 1787. It was a two-story brick structure, larger than the first and trimmed with cut stone. It was used until 1853, when the present one on East King Street was completed. This second building in Penn Square was also used as a State House for Pennsylvania - at this time from 1799 to 1812.[52] Thus Lancaster was three times the Capital of Pennsylvania, and for one day the Capital of the Nation. It was while the Legislature was meeting here that Thomas Mifflin, the first State Governor of Pennsylvania, died, and on January 22, 1800, was buried just outside the west wall of Trinity Lutheran Church. He was a signer of the Declaration of Independence and a Trustee of Franklin College.[53]

LLOYD MIFFLIN, Artist and Poet "America's Greatest Sonneteer"
Born in Columbia, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, September 15, 1846
Died at "Norwood," Columbia, July 16, 1921

For a period of many years preceding 1800, Lancaster was the largest inland town in the country. Through the efforts of James Hamilton it was incorporated as a borough, May 1, 1742[54]. It was chartered as a city, March 20, 1818.[55]

When originally erected, Lancaster County included a very large area, its western limits being undefined. It has since been reduced to its present size by the establishment of many counties which trace their parentage to Lancaster County. These, according to a Genealogical Map of the Counties of Pennsylvania, compiled and prepared in the Bureau of Land Records of the Department of Internal Affairs in 1933[56], are as follows:

York, August 19, 1749; Cumberland, January 27, 1750; Berks, March 11, 1752; Bedford, March 9, 1771; Northumberland, March 21, 1772; Westmoreland, February 26, 1773; Washington, March 28, 1781; Fayette, September 26, 1783; Franklin, September 9, 1784; Dauphin, March 4, 1785; Huntington, September 20, 1787; Allegheny, September 24, 1788; Mifflin, September 19, 1789; Lycoming, April 13, 1795; Somerset, April 17, 1795; Greene, February 9, 1796; Adams, January 22, 1800; Center, February 13, 1800; Beaver, March 12, 1800; Indiana, March 30, 1803; Cambria, March 26, 1804; Schuylkill, March 1, 1811; Lebanon, February 16, 1813; Union, March 22, 1813; Perry, March 22, 1820; Juniata, March 2, 1831; Blair, February 26, 1846; Fulton, April 19, 1850; Montour, May 3, 1850; Snyder, March 2, 1855.
