

my family, we have, in part, arrived safe and well in this land, but my little daughter Maria Margretha fell gently asleep in the Lord, in the midst of our voyage, on the 10th of September, on the high sea. At twelve o'clock she bade farewell to this world of sorrow and at four o'clock she was consigned to the deep. As a last honor to her memory I had them sing for her the two funeral hymns: "When my last hour is come", and "Now let us lay away the dead". I also had a funeral sermon preached for her, but we were having a storm, and the waves rose as in the tempest described in Psalm 107 and in the eighth chapters of the gospels of Matthew and Luke. Then indeed we had reason to cry to God in the words of the hymn: "Great is the Danger on the Sea" (Verses 5 and 6 in the new Heidelberg Hymnal).

"Now as to our voyage, we traveled down the Rhine to Cologne. There we were not allowed to pass through, because the King of Prussia, since he could not have us, refused to let us go by. Therefore we were obliged to travel by land to Hertogenbosch, which is forty hours distant from Cologne, and to have our goods hauled all that distance cost us 5 florins 40 kreuzers for each hundred weight.

"Now as to the rest of our journey, we sailed on July 22 from Harbort, Schilles (Hollandsche Ed.) on the Dallas Hunt and reached harbor safely, thank God, on the 26th, for we had a storm that lasted 4 days and on Saint Jacob's Night wind and waves drove a ship between us and a rock and split in two, and of about 200 passengers and crew only 72 survived with their lives. Fourteen of these 72 were killed in crash this land on another ship and have told us this.

"As far as we sailed north on August 1st from Harbort (Covers, Ed.) in the Engel and came safely over the great sea to Philadelphia on the 14th of October, as healthy and hale, thank God, as when we left Harbort. If there is anyone else here who has a desire to come over here, let him turn all his goods into money, for he does not have a lot to pay for freight as far as Rotterdam. At Rotterdam one can buy all sorts of victuals cheaply, and whatever articles one needs at sea.

"It happens just now that there is a good opportunity to send this, as the Neuländer (Immigration Agent) Nickell Licht, with whom I am well acquainted, is on his way over again. So I take advantage of this to send my esteemed friend the Amtskeller an English bell for his church as a gift of gratitude from me. I send his honor the Amtskeller the bell for this reason: he showed both me and my brother many favors and kindnesses. And if he would like to have another, or anything special from this land, whenever we have opportunity we will take pains to get it and send it to him.

"I have nothing more to write for the present. Our whole journey from home to Philadelphia was 18 weeks and one day. Herewith I commend you all, as aforesaid, to the protection of the Almighty, and wish you all, according to your several offices, a quiet and peaceful sphere of duty, and remain your obedient servants.

"Johann Heinrich Schmitt, formerly a citizen and master smith in the village of Wolfstein. If you write me, address your letters to Joh. H. Schmitt, brother to "Little" Schmitt on the Little Schwanau (Swatara), a share of Emersburg, in Berks County, Pennsylvania."

Philadelphia, Nov. 21, 1754

(Note by the editor—translating Johann Heinrich Schmitt has not been identified positively with anyone of that name in Pennsylvania records, but there are many possibilities. One of the most suggestive is that he may be the same as the large landowner Henry Smith of Lebanon Township, Lancaster County, who is listed in the 1771-1773 assessment lists as owning from 380 to 435 acres of land. It is evident that Schmitt was better provided with goods than the average immigrant from Germany of the period—Dr. Jereba Great forbade the passage of American-bound travelers below Cologne, in order to halt the mass migration and to force those involved in it to settle in his own territories.)

EDITOR'S NOTE: With this issue of the Quarterly we discontinue publication in the present form of the "Passports Issued by Governors of Georgia", which have appeared in our periodicals since Volume 41, June 1953. This action is necessitated partly by the pressure of other articles awaiting publication, and partly because of a change in policy. Henceforth, under a recent decision of the Committee on Publication, long serials will not be accepted for the Quarterly; articles which ordinarily would run through many numbers of the magazine will be considered, on the Editor's recommendation, for Special Publications. The passports for the period from 1785 to 1809, inclusive, will be reprinted from the Quarterly as a Special Publication, in accordance with the plans of the late Miss Roberta Wakefield, former editor of the Quarterly. At a later date, we intend to publish the remaining passport records (down to 1820) in abstract form.
