A. J. PEELER AND INGHAM S. ROBERTS 502½ MAIN STREET Sw. Phone 853 ENTERED ACCORDING TO ACT OF CONGRESS IN THE YEAR OF 1907
BY A. J. PEELER
IN THE OFFICE OF THE
LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

INTRODUCTION.

It has been our purpose to diverge somewhat from all stereotyped methods in the preparation of this work and to blaze our unaided way through virgin forests, in hope of new discoveries in ideas and methods, bringing together, if possible, a happy combination of the social and poetic side of life, intermingled and blended with the prosaic conditions of commercialism and wealth, into a happy union: a crystalized charm of entertaining reflection and study, as well as a peerless and powerful business advertising medium.

Our rapid social and commercial development, which has, within a few years, made our city the gigantic hub of the Imperial State, demands a reliable, honest, comprehensive illustrated review from time to time, of its phenomenal progress and prolific opportunities. We have tried in meeting this want to give the public a work that will not only be indispensable to the citizens of Houston, but to the stranger within her gates, the homeseeker, the investor, manufacturer, tourist and capitalist; it will be to them a reliable guide and constant companion.

We have held this work primarily above money consideration, and every precaution has been used to give our readers a strictly high-class work. The purchasable space for high-class advertising was limited and opened to reputable business firms with whom we were familiar, and it is a pleasure to us to recommend each and every one of our patrons to the general public, in and out of Houston, not only as commercially honest and trustworthy, but also as enterprising, patriotic citizens, having as their motto, "We are for anything that helps Houston." In this unselfish manner we have received our patronage, yet we are free to admit that our entire voyage has not been with continuous fair winds and cloudless skies during the seven ceaseless months in the compilation of the Blue Book. We have encountered gales and pounded upon the rocks when least expected, but we are glad to say that we have been victorious over these elements and have come to remain a permanent Houston enterprise, and we would kindly suggest, in making your appropriations for advertising for the year coming do not forget us.

In reciprocation for our extensive patronage, it is our most earnest desire to issue a work worthy of Houston, and while this edition may have some few omissions and in various ways may not be as complete and as thorough as we would like it, yet, taken as a whole, we believe it will meet the unqualified approval and endorsement of the citizens of Houston and the public at large. We have deemed it necessary, to properly compile this work, to give a few photo illustrations of men standing foremost in their respective lines of business, possessing the brain force that has been instrumental in upbuilding the social and commercial progress of the city. It has also been our pleasure to provide a number of illustrations showing a general average of the comfortable homes of its citizens, a true criterion of the refinement and culture of a people or nation. We have also produced a number of engravings of business blocks, office buildings, bank buildings, schoolhouses, churches, street scenes, showing the results of the power of thrift and industry of its citizenship. We have also given a complete church directory and a list of all of the various social and commercial clubs and all places of general interest and amusement. We have compiled at great cost and labor a Ladies' Social Directory consisting of some nine hundred carefully selected names, giving street addresses and telephone numbers in each case, which will be almost invaluable as a correct guide to the social refinement, wealth and culture of Houston. As a checking list for social calls and functions it will be indispensable and in constant demand. This work also contains illustrated articles on Houston and its city administration, the No-Tsu-Oh, the railroads, banks and banking. We also give a digest of the latest rules of etiquette and miscellaneous hints on good form and correct dress. We further desire to say that this publication is strictly a home product, edited and published by a Houston company and all citizens of Houston. The engravings contained in this volume is the work of the Texas Engraving Company of Houston. The press work and binding comes from the State Printing Company of Houston. The photographic work is that of Gray's Studio of Houston. We stand first and foremost for home industry, as we have here exemplified. In conclusion, we are confident that this work will without doubt occupy a long felt daily want, and find an abiding place in the most cultured homes of this country.

Respectfully submitted,

Anderson J. Peeler,

Joint Prop. "Who's Who" Pub. Co. of Houston.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

A City of Phenomenal Growth and Prolific Opportunities.

When the first stake was driven in Houston little did the surveyor dream that he was planting the foundations of a city that in time would take precedence over many whose age entitled them to greater things. When the first cabin was built beside the turbid waters of Buffalo Bayou there was but little to forecast that the city named after the Texan patriot and soldier would one day dominate the trade of Texas entirely and ultimately conquer in the commercial battle that means success and power. What Houston now is can but be taken as an indication of what she is to be—of what nature intended her to be when the God of Chance elected that she should be founded by a waterway that means tidewater and ocean ships and all that goes with them.

History tells us what Houston formerly was, and men who now live here can trace back her pedigree to a collection of huts without a thing to strike the beholder; but the prophet has not arisen whose vision can pierce the future and predicate the destiny of the Magnolia City. Only by what has been accomplished within the past quarter of a century can an idea be obtained of what is in store for her when the forces of nature, combined with the art of man, shall place on her brow the diadem of commercial queen of the South. Her empire is coming and the day is not far distant when her supremacy will be acknowledged throughout the length and breadth of this, the Empire State of this Union.

The site was well chosen. Fifty miles inland from the broad bosom of the Mexican gulf, where an arm of the tide reaches to her borders, where the topography is eminently adapted to the growth of an immense city, Houston was placed at a point which the hand of man could hardly have chosen wiser. Built on level ground, which, however, is higher than surrounding territory; endowed by nature with trees, shrubs and clinging vines, where the sunlight of winter is fragrant and life-giving, she offers everything that man could want for in a city for residence or business. Jessamine and magnolia bloom side by side, the rose perfumes the air and the songsters of the forest dwell among the trees and foliage found so abundantly within her borders.

Houston has all things that make life livable and enjoyable. Her broad and shady streets are adapted coincidently for business traffic and pleasureable driving. Her residences are a credit to the city and to her people, and her office buildings and manufacturing plants cannot be duplicated within the borders of the Lone Star State and in but few other cities of the fair Southland. Winding away from her edges are country roads—paved and graded—whereon the speedy auto and the slow merchant wagon pass and repass each other, bringing commerce and wealth within her. Her sidewalks are being standardized and made uniform and her streets, with few exceptions, contain some sort of paving, asphalt and brick being the prevailing materials.

Nowhere else in America, perhaps, could such a home-loving class of citizens be found as in the Magnolia City. Her homes are owned by her people and mortgages are few and far between—and usually the man next door holds any that may exist. Foreign capital comes, sees and is conquered, and forthwith becomes a citizen of the most hustling city that may be pointed out on the map of Texas. Her municipal government is the model from which half a score of other cities, both in Texas and outside, are now seeking inspiration and a new government. She is governed in a business manner, by business men of ability and proven worth, and politics is eschewed in every department. The officials govern Houston for its own good, not for the benefit and emolument of politicians and office seekers.

Sixteen square miles are embraced within the city limits and it is doubted if any other area can produce another 80,000 happy, prosperous inhabitants so well pleased with conditions as are the residents of Houston. In 1900 she had, by official government census, 44,663 people within her borders, but the population has increased so rapidly within the past six years that she must now have even more than 80,000. To be conservative, however, the figure is placed at that. Her average elevation is 54.1 feet above the sea, and the cool Gulf breeze fans her peoples' cheeks when the thermometer is mounting higher and higher in other cities of the State.

In nothing else has the growth been so large within recent years as in the business and commercial industries of Houston. Ten years ago she emerged from the lethargy which seemingly held her in thrall and year after year her progression has been in the nature of a continued triumph. Her manufactories, in conjunction with her railroads and water routes, have placed the erstwhile village in the class of cities upon which depend the material welfare of the country at large. Tall and stately office buildings have replaced the one and two-story buildings that formerly met the eye on her business streets, and her warfare to lead all Texas has been crowned with success anticipated by none. Buffalo Bayou has been deepened and broadened, and although the undertaking cannot yet be called finished, yet there is sufficient to base a future forecast that cannot be anything but bright and rosy for her. Her people are bright and energetic, with an eye to the present and future greatness of their city, and working in harmony toward the accomplishment of things tending to make a Greater Houston.

TEXAS AVENUE, LOOKING WEST.

Forming the hub from which the spokes of sixteen railroads radiate, Houston enjoys transportation facilities unsurpassed anywhere in the South. Her annual tonnage is something enormous and she enjoys the unique distinction of being the greatest cotton center in the world. True, most of this cotton now goes on to Galveston, where it is loaded into vessels for the markets of the world, but this is only a temporary arrangement and before the cotton season of 1908 it is confidently expected that ocean-going vessels will dock at the wharves of the Houston ship channel and export cotton, now going to tidewater at Galveston will reach it some forty miles inland.

This ship channel means more than the casual observer can detect. It means cheaper freight rates to Houston, cheaper charges on all outbound and import goods, and consequently cheaper commodities to the manufacturer and consumer. Likewise, it means the opening up of a method of shipment by which Houston and every one of its peoples will benefit through the less cost of getting products to the market or of bringing in what is wanted for home consumption.

Houston is the logical center of the cotton, lumber, rice and oil industries of Texas. It was but six years ago that a geyser of fuel oil spouted from the ground at Beaumont to a height of more than 300 feet and since that time drills have busily punctured the earth's crust in other places in the nearby region and elsewhere adjacent to Houston, oil flowing at each place. Mills are grinding out lumber in East Texas and mills are grinding out sugar in Southeast Texas, both working simultaneously in order that both products may be sent to Houston for distribution over her network of railroads. All about Houston, in tracts ranging from 100 to 2,000 acres, are rice fields, the sturdy Japs vieing with the native Texan in producing the cereal. Houston acts as the common center and market place for all this, her commerce increasing in a proportion warranted by the importance of these business enterprises. Her banks are kept busy and her annual clearances are jumping in such manner that she now holds the fifth place in size of clearances, with the prospect of reaching third or second next year.

With the facts as they are, is it any wonder that the real estate of Houston has more than quadrupled within four years? Is it any wonder that capitalists realize the value of Houston dirt and are not scant in their investments? Land values are one of the best criterions by which to judge the prosperity of a city, and Houston furnishes an example of the phenomenal manner in which realty may advance without any kind of boom or enforced inflation other than the natural course of events which surround the city. Homes for factories as well as for factory workers and business employes have been bought in profusion and the coming half-decade will witness even greater manifestations of public faith than the past ten years has been able to show. The development of Houston has but just begun. Her destiny cannot be measured in words, for she stands unequaled in Texas and unapproachable by any other city of the South with but few exceptions. She has all things that make for greatness and her riches can be seen on every hand; she gives and takes from the rest of the world in about an even proportion, dispensing her blessings in return for favors received from the rest of the world.

CITY HALL AND MARKET HOUSE.

To the man who wants educational facilities for his children Houston offers advantages unexcelled by any city in the State. Her magnificent public school system is at once the pride and envy of the rest of the State, and her private schools are many and good. The curriculum in all includes everything that might give aid to the student and the teachers are chosen for their ability to inculcate their knowledge to others.

Her churches are magnificent, and the Carnegie library located here furnishes mental pabulum for all classes. The Rice Institute for the advancement of science and art, founded by the late William Marsh Rice, will soon be under active construction and this, in itself, will give Houston a superiority not enjoyed by other cities of Texas. Her press consists of an excellent morning and afternoon daily with about thirty other weekly and monthly publications.

For the busy traveler within the gates, the hotels and hostelries throw open welcoming doors. With four first-class and up-to-date hotels now catering to the trade, in addition to a number of smaller ones, the demand is still insistent for a mammeth $1,000,000 structure, which will be built before the lapse of another two years. Additions and improvements to the present hotels have been made a number of times, but not yet has the demand been appeared for more and better hotel facilities.

In order that an adequate idea may be had of the commercial importance of Houston and its shipping, it may be of interest to state that in 1905, the year for which complete cotton returns are available, there were handled here the enormous total of 2,470,171 bales. In the same year, 800,000,000 feet of lumber were handled here, and the rice crop from something like 210,000 acres of land passed through Houston, the larger portion being milled within her limits.

In 1906, the permanent building permits aggregated, in round figures, $2,320,000. In 1907 that figure will go to nearly twice as much, as the railroad companies in Houston, and especially the Houston Belt and Terminal Company, project the expenditures of about $2,000,000 in improving their holdings and enlarging their terminals.

The assessed valuation of city property in 1906 was $42,627,715 and in 1907 it will run close to $55,000,000. In the County of Harris, of which Houston is the county seat, the property assessment for 1907 is certain to be over $52,000,000 and will more than likely run to $75,000,000. Houston's tax rate is $1.80 per $1,000, this being a reduction of 10 cents from the 1906 figure.

With all the advantages enumerated, and aside from the strong attractions offered in the way of business opportunities, Houston's many advantages as a residence city have greatly aided her growth. The wide and leafy appearance of the city, the profusion of flowers and fresh vegetables at all seasons of the year, the ceaseless Gulf breezes that alike temper the cold of winter and the heat of summer, the modern street paving and excellent street car service, the many direct railway outlets to all points of the compass, the driveways extending into the country, the unusually good shopping facilities, and excellent fire protection, and the innumerable other advantages at once appeal to the visitor and homeseeker as important items bearing on the home question.

And this is Houston, fair city of the Southland and unquestioned queen of the broad plains of Texas. No ill wind disturbs her repose and no force can retard her continued progression. She has arrived into her own and the peoples of these United States are coming to look to her as the one city of supreme importance in the State with the Lone Star flag.

BANKS AND BANKING

Houston, in Proportion to Population, is One of the Largest Banking Centers of the World

Some idea of the enormous magnitude of the banking interests of Houston may be gathered when it is stated that the bank clearances for the year embraced between June 1, 1906, and June 1, 1907, reached the stupendous total of $1,118,985,191. Such figures are staggering in their immensity; yet they are but an indication of the future that may be anticipated of the twelve National, State and private banks which handle the finances of this city, and they but serve to show why Houston stands fifth in the list of banking cities showing the largest clearances. That Houston, within the next five years, will advance to second or third place is confidently predicted by financiers who are in touch with conditions.

With strides equaled by none of the financial institutions of any other Southern city and by but few in the North, the Houston banks have steadily increased their annual clearances from the comparatively insignificant figure of $57,068,920 in 1890 to a sum nearly twenty times as large in 1906. All this has been accomplished in sixteen years—simply a criterion of what the future presages.

Houston's banks are solid institutions, with ample capital, and managed by skilled financiers who are progressive yet conservative, aggressive yet conscious of the fact that they are the custodians and guardians of the surplus wealth, not alone of Houston but of a large territory adjacent to this metropolis. Money is not hard to obtain on legitimate collateral, but an enterprise of a shady character or one which cannot stand the scrutiny of safe banking investigation finds itself unceremoniously refused. Houston bankers regard their profession as one of deep responsibility, and the high standing of the officials proves that they have the entire confidence of the public.

The National banks of Houston are the Commercial National, the First National, the Houston National, the Lumbermans National, the Merchants National, the National City, the Planters and Mechanics National and the South Texas National, making eight in number. The two State banks are the American Bank and Trust Company and the Union Bank and Trust Company, both staunch institutions operating under a charter in conformity with the State laws. There are three private banks, as follows: T. W. House, banker, whose rating in Dun and Bradstreet is the highest given to institutions of its kind; the Texas Banking & Investment Co., a new but successful bank, and F. E. Pye, banker, a very recent acquisition to financial circles. The savings banks are the Texas Savings Bank, a comparatively new bank, but one that is filling a want, and the Harris County Savings Bank, recently organized by some of the city's well known financiers and located in the Fifth Ward. The combined capital of the fourteen banks is $3,230,000, and they have deposits running into the millions.

The business of these banks extends throughout the State and, proportionately, throughout the country. They have made Houston, in a sense, the financial center of the South and their methods are rapidly forging this city to a position in the financial world that will leave other Southern cities far behind.

With such an array of financial strength, coupled with Houston's growth as a manufacturing center and a market place for the world's goods, and the astounding cotton and produce tonnage handled annually here, is it remarkable that her bank clearances have jumped in a decade to a figure that astonishes all?

For comparison's sake, if for nothing else, it will not be amiss to quote from the actual official figures of the Houston clearing house and to demonstrate thereby that the growth, while phenomenal, is nothing more than might be expected of a city surrounded with such natural advantages as circumscribe Houston.

Going back to 1890, the bank clearances, as stated, stood at $57,068,930. Five years later, in 1895, they had jumped to more than four times that figure, or $255,836,902. Still five years later, in 1900, they reached $394,859,480, and a year later, when oil was discovered at Beaumont, they climbed to $466,426,159. In 1902, the height of the oil boom, they were shown to be $602,931,516, and in 1903 they were $94,000,000 more, or exactly $696,928,866. This may have indicated an unsettled condition attendant on oil speculation and the rapid increase in negotiable securities and land values, for in 1904 they dropped to $663,672,543. The following year, however, they went just $100,000,000 better than in 1904, the official clearances reading a total of $763,757,337.

From January 1, 1906, to January 1, 1907, the record became the banner one, a total clearance of $1,012,499,099 being shown. This promises, however, to be eclipsed during 1907, the figures for the first five months of 1907, from January 1 to June 1, being $475,141,012. Taking this total, for comparison purposes, with the seven last months of 1906 the enormous sum of $1,118,985,191 is shown. For the twelve complete months of 1907 it is not doubted but what the volume will be $200,000,000 more than in 1906.

With all of Texas and a large portion of all the territory west of the Mississippi river pouring their goods through Houston and receiving in return merchandise and products from the other end of the world, the magnitude of clearances and of Houston's banking interests can well be appreciated. That they are bound to grow commensurate with the continued and rapid prosperity of this section, and especially Houston, goes without saying; and that the keen and conservative business men at their heads are bound to advance the material welfare of this city is equally palpable.

RAILROADS

With fifteen railroads actually operating into Houston, and with the prospect of at least three more during the present year, this city justly lays claim and title to being the railroad center of the State of Texas. There is no fear that the designation will ever be wrested from her by any other city in the State, for her railroads and her shipping facilities generally will receive added impetus when the United States government has completed the gigantic task of deepening Buffalo Bayou until the proudest ocean greyhounds or the bulkiest freight vessels may load and unload at her wharves. In the most complete sense of the word may it be claimed that Houston controls the commerce of the State, for not a pound of freight finds its way either in or out through a Texas port without Houston having handled it coming or going.

All of Houston's railroads are good, though some are better equipped than others. This is but natural, and yet big and little roads all tend toward a development that can be brought about in no other manner. Railroads have been aptly termed the highways of commerce and Houston is a mart that could not have been placed in a better location along this highway. Commerce from the markets of the world is handled here, while exports from as far as the Pacific coast are sent through this gateway to Galveston, where mighty vessels convey it to ports of Europe, that in turn send us that which we lack. But not for long will Galveston act as the open door to Texas. Houston's deep water project docked at Galveston wharves be seen ranged up alongside the slips at the turning basin just at the city limits.

In public spirit the railroads of Houston cannot be surpassed. They want to serve the public and their aim is to please. The Harriman lines, with head-quarters here, consisting of general passenger, freight and operating officials, together with the executive heads, have always been foremost in public works, and the local officials of other lines have kept pace with them in their endeavors to promote the city's interests. With shops and roundhouses here, and with plants for the preparation of material to be used in railroad construction, they offer work to all, and their annual payroll forms not an inconsiderable sum of the total paid out to workingmen. Between the railroads and the people of Houston there is the friendship which works harmoniously for the promotion of the city's welfare and accomplishes so much in forcing this city forward in its race for supremacy. Houston's railroads comprise the following, each of which is a factor not to be underestimated in the commercial progress of the Magnolia City:

The Houston and Texas Central, from Houston to Denison, passes through the richest black land territory where corn and cane and cotton and garden truck allow an unceasing round of shipments. This road is credited with being the oldest road that Texas possesses and it is certainly one of the best.

The Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe also runs in a northerly direction, branching to important cities, and forming connections which allow a Houston passenger to travel via Pullman undisturbed to his destination, no matter where that may be.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas, more popularly known as "The Katy," comes down the Brazos river bottoms, placing the cotton growers' product in Houston in record time and enabling it to reach deep water without loss of time.

Then the International and Great Northern, known as "The Texas Road," claims attention. Running through a section of the State in which strawberries are succeeded by Elberta peaches, and this crop by pears and tomatoes, the Texas Road lacks nothing to make it one of the best in the State.

Reaching then the Harriman system of Texas, Houston claims the headquarters of six of them, practically the entire system within the State. These are the Texas and New Orleans, from Orange to Houston; the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio, from Houston to El Paso; the Houston, East and West Texas, from Houston to Shreveport; the New York, Texas and Mexican, from Houston to Victoria and thence to San Antonio; the Houston and Texas Central, already mentioned, and the Direct Navigation Company, a small line, but meaning much for the commerce of Houston. It runs from Houston to Clinton and embraces a rail line in addition to a barge line that operates on the ship channel, even as incomplete as it is.

All the Harriman roads traverse territory of unexcelled commercial importance, the Texas and New Orleans running through the heart of the rice district and yellow pine forests of East Texas and Western Louisiana and bringing untold tonnage to Houston to be sent to the world abroad. The Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio road and the New York, Texas and Mexican reach to the truck centers of Southeast Texas and their annual cargo is composed not inconsiderably of the Southern staple cotton. The Houston, East and West Texas is the air line to Shreveport, forming connections there that take the Houston traveler in a night to points far removed from this busy city.

Then the Yoakum roads come in for consideration. It has been well said that Yoakum could "take a spade, a wheelbarrow and two crippled Mexicans and build a road from the Gulf to the Pacific," and this has been exemplified in the remarkable progress which he has made in the construction of his important system in Texas. From as far north as the Rocky Mountains of Colorado and Utah the system pushes through a band of shining steel pointing the way to the Mexican gulf.

In Texas, the two lines are the Trinity and Brazos Valley and the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico, both of which find their headquarters and natural center in Houston. Toward the east, and already practically in operation, the Beaumont, Sour Lake and Western stretches away to a junction with the Colorado Southern, New Orleans and Pacific and thence into the Crescent City, affording a second and shorter line to that port. The St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico, known as the Gulf Coast Line, carries the traveler to Brownsville and thence into Mexico, and brings back trainloads of produce that reach the Gulf and thence the world's marts through steamers that ply on the broad waters of the Houston ship channel.

The Columbia Tap penetrates into the rich bottoms adjacent to the windings of the Brazos river, finding its southern termination at Velasco and its northern terminus in Houston. It is a portion of the International and Great Northern system, but is operated as a separate road.

Not least of the tracks leading from Houston is the Galveston, Houston and Henderson road, running between Houston and Galveston and known far and wide as "The Old Reliable." It verifies its name every day and during the brisk cotton shipping months it carries more than its quota of cotton to the seaside.

Last, but not least of the actual roads running into Houston, we have the San Antonio and Aransas Pass. Built through the rich alluvial soils of Southeast Texas, it annually places in Houston and thence to the North a world of gardener's truck, besides carrying probably the second amount of cotton of any of the Texas lines. From Houston it extends to San Antonio, with branches to Corpus Christi and Rockport and other seaside towns, thus affording Houstonians the pleasures of the seaside within a very short trip.

Houston has also more than the promise of two additional roads before the close of the year. These are the Brenham and Brazos Valley, extending from Waco to Houston, and the Port Arthur Short Line, which is just what its name implies—a line reaching from Houston to Port Arthur by the route that goes like the crow flies. These two projects are more than paper railways, inasmuch as the contract for building portions of them has already been let.

In the matter of railroad terminals, shops, roundhouses and general railroad property, Houston easily leads the State. At the first glance, the massive encircling ring of the Houston Belt and Terminal Company will be seen. It makes a complete circle of the city, giving entrance to all the Yoakum lines and such others as may desire to use it. It was built by the Rock Island-Frisco interests, of which Colonel B. F. Yoakum is the head, and its ownership is placed with those interests conjoined with the three Yoakum roads centering here.

And this belt will have its terminal, if such a term may be used, in the mammoth passenger and freight station to be built on twelve blocks of land in the heart of the Third ward, bought for $1,500,000 and now estimated to be worth nearly double that. A passenger and freight station is to be erected at a cost exceeding $3,000,000, these facilities to be used by the Yoakum roads and the Santa Fe, which owns a one-fourth interest in them.

For other terminals, there are the Grand Central depot, the International depot, the Katy depot and the Santa Fe depot, each of them being passenger stations. There is a prospect that a mammoth union station will be built for all the lines of Houston, but this is such a remote possibility that it is not now considered seriously.

Each and all of the roads are to have terminals on the ship channel, where the loading and unloading of commodities may be done with the greatest facility and least cost. Goods are to be, in a manner, slid directly from cars into ships' bottoms, there to lie until discharged at a foreign port. The International and the Southern Pacific already have secured ground for their terminals on the ship channel and the other roads are fast making their plans for the same.

These railroads that mean so much for Houston pay their just and equitable share of the city's public taxes. In 1906 they paid taxes on a valuation exceeding $3,500,000 and this year their assessments will total nearly $5,000,000. A large proportion of the increase is brought about by the Yoakum system, which has sent three new lines into Houston besides beginning the erection of a mammoth passenger and freight terminal on twelve city blocks which it has purchased in the heart of the city. In 1906, the rendered assessments on ten of the principal lines were as follows: Galveston, Houston and Henderson, $66,545; Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio, $123,920; Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe, $178,205; Houston and Texas Central, which includes the Grand Central depot, $819,765: Houston, East and West Texas, $74,995; International and Great Northern, $350,130; Missouri, Kansas and Texas, $204,802; Texas and New Orleans, $710,075. San Antonio and Aransas Pass, $183,520; and Houston Electric Company, the street car company, $653,575.

As may be seen, Houston occupies a position absolutely unique in the matter of transportation facilities. With rail lines galore and an open waterway reaching to its outermost edge, she commands the State of Texas in common with the territory practically west of the Mississippi river. In common parlance, she might be termed the neck of the funnel through which commerce passes in its journey to the sea. She will have a harbor second to none in the world and her commerce will be commensurate with it, overshadowing any city in the South and running neck and neck with the export and import centers of the East. Her destiny is assured and nothing can bar her progress, for she steps over every obstacle, rising higher and higher in the industrial world and gathering prestige that no other Southern city can approach.

NO-TSU-OH

THE ANNUAL NOVEMBER FETE.

Rivaling the pageants of Louis the Fourteenth and the splendor of "The Field of the Cloth of Gold" is the annual November carnival of the No-Tsu-Oh given under the auspices and supervision of the No-Tsu-Oh Carnival Association. It is unique in character, having no counterpart in the United States. It combines some of the features of the fetes of Paris, the carnivals of Venice and Florence and the Mardi Gras of New Orleans and withal has its original and distinctive features.

The association that manages and directs this great festival is composed of Houston's most influential and patriotic citizens to whom in making the carnival the most popular and pleasurable event in the State, no labor is too onerous nor expense too great.

King Nottoc. who reigns over this brilliant Court of Mirth, is selected by the association and he in turn selects the queen, His Majesty's identity not being disclosed until the night of the Royal ball.

"A gorgeous, illuminated night parade follows the triumphal entry of the carnival king into the city," and during the week fantastic pageants and other demonstrations of various and unusual character add interest and pleasure to the festival. Upon the entry of the king the whole population accepts it as a signal of enjoyment and for an entire week they revel in frolic and fun. Class lines are obliterated, the lawyer, doctor, teacher and sedate preacher, the butcher, baker and candlestick maker, all meet upon a common ground of pleasure and good fellowship.

Thousands of visitors are attracted to the city who catch the spirit of the occasion and joyfully enter into its pleasures. Thousands throng the streets, engaging in pranks, pleasantries and confetti battles, turning day and night into one grand recess from every day cares.

The Royal Ball of King Nottoc, monarch of the carnival, is attended by the grace, beauty and chivalry of the State and is a society function that for richness and splendor ranks with the notable society events of the country.

The following Presidents, Kings and Queens have contributed to the success of the carnivals since the incipiency of the No-Tsu-Oh:

Presidents—Norman S. Meldrum, 1899; B. F. Bonner, 1900; James H. Adair, 1901; John McClellan, 1902; H. T. Keller, 1903; G. J. Palmer, 1904; Charles D. Golding, 1905; William D. Cleveland, Jr., 1906; George N. Torrey, 1907.

HOUSTON SOCIETY

Refinement, Culture and Purity Its Distinctive Features

In summing up the distinctive qualities that tend to make Houston an ideal residence city, her attractions as a social center are most certainly entitled to take precedence of all others. Granted that her commercial advantages are beyond doubt unparalleled, her position among her sister cities as a city of culture, good taste, handsome women and loyal men is unquestioned. Her ability to entertain has been amply demonstrated in the past, when it has been the pleasure of the strangers within her gates to proclaim her without a peer, when crowning her hostess of any festive occasion. Nature has been prodigal in her distribution of natural gifts. Nowhere are the flowers fairer, the skies bluer or the trees greener than in the beautiful residence environs of this city, and nowhere in this great and powerful Southland is a more gracious and unbounded hospitality dispensed by more attractive and winsome chatelaines than adorn the handsome homes of Houston.

Refinement, culture and purity are the distinctive features of her social life and this fair city has maintained the best traditions of Southern society, whose standard of excellence has been famed from Colonial days to the present time; and while retaining all the graces and charms that have made it ideal, yet Houston society is modern and progressive. It has kept pace with the marvelous improvements of the city along every line, adjusting itself to and meeting new conditions without loss of prestige. It has its golf, automobile, launch and country clubs, and its numerous excellent literary, musical, art, patriotic and social clubs and societies. It enjoys all the pleasures of a metropolitan city, and in addition to the charming home receptions and elaborate public functions, for which it is noted, it has the advantages of the best dramatic and musical attractions which serve as vehicles for the arrangement of pleasurable social affairs. Houston's beautiful homes, evidencing a home love and pride which is unrivaled by any city in the South, its spacious boulevards and drives and its picturesque parks all reflect and express a standard of society which is unsurpassed by any in the United States.

DIGEST OF THE LATEST RULES OF ETIQUETTE.

GOOD MANNERS.

Good manners indicate the lady, and mark the man, the essential qualification being kindliness and courtesy. A gentleman cannot be made out of a disagreeable man, no matter how titled or rich he may be.

"What can ennoble knaves, or fools or cowards? Alas! not all the blood of all the Howards!"

True nobility of character is revealed in genteel manners.

Say "Good Morning," or "Good Day" in a courteous manner and always clasp the hand of a friend warmly and cordially, indicative of genuine friendship. Don't hold out your hand like a limber dishrag and probably hold out two or three fingers at that.

Respect should always be shown to the aged; the Bible says, "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head and honor the face of the old man." It also commands, "Honor thy father and mother."

Whateley says: "To be always thinking about your manners is not the way to make them good; because the very perfection of manners is not to think about yourself." It must also be remembered that personal contact with rude people creates and fosters rudeness and impoliteness. Apostle Paul says, "Evil communications corrupt good manners."

Good manners have many times proven the only stock and trade possessed which have led to fortune and fame many a poor boy. A courteous remark, a smile, a polite bow will make life more joyful and successful. When in foreign countries try to follow the customs of the country you are visiting, if not too objectionable. It is a safe rule when in Rome do as Romans do, as polite society and good manners are more or less the same in all civilized countries. True courtesy comes from within and emanates from a good heart, a genuine kindness of spirit.

TRUE ETIQUETTE.

Etiquette is nothing more or less than kind and sincere thought. It flows out into its perfect beauty through careful training along lines of a graceful observance of the right things to do and to say. It is the outward expression of the heart's sweetest and most refined impulses.

The ignorance of the law excuses no offender and ignorance of the rules of etiquette should excuse no one. To be kind and considerate; to avoid any act that would be at all offensive; to find pleasant opportunities for unobtrusive favors; to always say the right thing at the right time; all these are the ingredients of etiquette. Etiquette is also a proper consideration for others in full dress, and the occasion which calls for full dress must never be slighted or ignored. Charity should begin at home. So should good manners. The home is the most important place to learn etiquette and use it.

MANNERS IN PUBLIC.

The lady must invariably bow first.

It is not well bred to cut an acquaintance with an icy stare.

A lady does not take a gentleman's arm when walking in the day time unless she is quite elderly or infirm.

A gentleman escorting two ladies at night offers his arm to the elder of the two; the other lady walks beside her friend.

The gentleman should take the side of the pavement which he can best guard his companion; either the right or left arm may be offered with equal propriety. A gentleman should never take the lady's arm.

A gentleman should lift his hat most gracefully on all occasions required to observe good manners, namely:

When a lady bows to him; when he recognizes a clergyman on the street or one who has attained distinction; when he meets a man of his acquaintance who is accompanying a lady; when one stranger shows a courtesy to the lady with whom he himself is walking; when he gives answer to a request for information concerning a right direction, a street or number or any similar inquiries from a lady; when he offers her his seat in a car or omnibus; when he moves aside to make way for her in a narrow or crowded place and when he shows her any passing courtesy.

If a lady friend is met on the street you desire to speak with, the usual fashion is to lift the hat, then slowly replace it while walking beside the lady and lift it again when withdrawing.

In street cars and all public conveyances equal rights obtain. It rests with the man to decide for himself when and how far to exhibit gentlemanly courtesy.

When a seat is offered to a lady she should give graceful acknowledgment of the kindness.

On entering any public conveyance together the gentleman should follow the lady.

When another man yields his place to the lady, her escort should acknowledge the courtesy with lifted hat.

A lady's escort pays all fares and fees, but this is not considered correct when meeting is only by chance.

If saluted by friends when driving, the man or woman who handles the reins touches the whipstock to the front of the hat brim.

A woman should not stop to chat with a friend in the middle of the sidewalk. A man is permitted to smoke only when walking or driving alone.

A woman the guest of a public hotel should enter at the ladies' door and sign the hotel register. A mother and daughter should sign thus:

Mrs. John H. Stanley, Miss Stanley, Washington, D. C.

A young lady who is not the eldest daughter of her family should sign herself as Miss Florence Stanley. A man and wife should register as Mr. and Mrs. George L. Stanley.

A woman stopping alone in a hotel receives all masculine guests in the public parlors. She will show good discretion by wearing few jewels and in ordering no wines.

A woman must never accept the shelter of an umbrella from a man who is a stranger to her.

A man meeting a woman friend on the street who is accompanied by a male escort whom he does not know should never join the party; if, however, unaccompanied, he may raise his hat and ask permission to walk along with her.

CONVERSATION.

Association with refined, cultured people is the best school of language. Avoid expressions of speech "I say," "you know," etc., and the habit of addressing people as "dear;" this familiarity not authorized by affection and true friendship is objectionable and wrong. In your conversation you must be in earnest. Persons who are never serious are very tiresome. Bishop Huntington says: "It is a mistake to imagine that we always please people by agreeing with them. One's own deliberate convictions, modestly and courteously spoken, is a generous contribution to the public intellectual wealth."

Aggressive, disputatious persons should be muzzled.

Avoid affectation; no posing; no big words are permissible; don't try to "show off." Try to feel a real interest in what interests those with whom you talk and show it in your manner. Keep posted and try to say something when you talk. Gossip has been voted out as bad form. Speak well of everyone; the reputation of doing this makes one very popular in social life.

To listen is a great art; it is as great an art to listen well as it is to talk; to talk well you may be considered clever, but to listen well you will be considered brainy as well as possessing a charming personality. The true social success is to win real friends.

TABLE ETIQUETTE.

The hostess of a dinner is the last lady to be seated.

A host waits until all the ladies are seated before taking his place.

The gentlemen seat the ladies.

The table is no place for heated arguments between guests or members of a family.

Do not scold a servant, complain, explain or apologize at meals. Maintain a serene countenance, to issue only the most essential orders in a whisper, and after the meal to repair and correct the mistakes. Only at an informal meal is it in good taste to comment upon the food and offer the housekeeper compliments.

A napkin must not be shaken out of all its lengthwise folds and spread out like a rug upon the knees. To lay open two of its long folds is enough.

It is not tactful to force wine upon a guest who has refused.

Cake is broken and eaten in separated mouthfuls, like bread.

Expert carvers are made, not born; a knowledge of the joints must first be acquired and then the process of separating them easily must be learned by close observation and practice. Every housewife should make a study of carving, and the head of the family most certainly should strive for proficiency in the art.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Simple unruled stationery, folding once to fit envelopes that are almost square, is considered good form. The stationery generally adopted in polite society is white, cream white, gray, or gray blue. Men, as a rule, prefer plain white paper of smooth surface.

It should be remembered that social correspondence is never conducted upon business or office paper. Club paper and hotel and steamship stationery can always be pressed into service when private stationery is not at hand.

It is a serious mistake for a woman to order her family crest stamped on her letter paper, and yet more absurd is the appearance on the stationery of an unmarried woman of a knight's shield bearing a fine coat of arms. A queen is the only woman who has a right to use a crest. A stag trippant, a lion rampant, a martelet, or boar's head, and motto beneath, all in low relief, and placed in the upper center or upper left hand corner of the sheet is the very best style to follow in the decoration of stationery.

Mourning paper is used just as long as black-edged cards are carried, and mourning dress worn. Sealing wax is no longer an essential in correspondence. It is only used as a charming decoration, and, therefore, should never be added unless it is neatly and decoratively employed. On mourning paper black wax only is allowed.

The first rule is to write the direction quite clearly and as straight as possible across the envelope. At present the more fashionable form runs as follows: "David T. Wilson, Esq." It is essentially correct, however, to write "Mr. David T. Wilson." In addressing a physician or to a clergyman prefix "Dr." or "Rev.," as the case may be. When writing to the President, the address on the envelope should run, "The President of the United States."

A woman's name upon an envelope can be prefixed by no other title than that of "Mrs." or "Miss." In beginning a letter, "My Dear Mrs. Jones" or "Dear Mr. Jones" are good forms.

The formal ending for letters is "Very truly yours" or "Yours truly." This form is generally employed by men and women. In social correspondence, "Very sincerely yours" or "Yours very cordially" are the conventional and graceful phrases employed between friends. "Lovingly," "Fondly," "Affectionately yours" are the warm and intimate terms used between close friends and in family correspondence only. Men frequently and appropriately conclude their notes and letters to feminine and masculine friends thus: "I am very sincerely and faithfully yours."

When a woman wishes to indicate in correspondence with a stranger that she is married or single, she follows the simple expedient of signing herself thus: "Sara A. Wilson (Mrs. John W. Wilson)," or "(Miss) Sara A. Wilson."

WOMAN'S DRESS.

To be well dressed there are two fundamental rules to be observed. Her appearance must suggest absolute neatness, and her dress must be appropriate to the place and the occasion.

The hair must be frequently arranged; the hands well kept, and all garments must be fresh and free from speck, dust or stain.

It has been said that "a lady is known by her gloves and her boots."

It is a growing fashion to wear full dress every evening. "Full dress" for a woman means a gown made with low neck and short sleeves, and it is worn at balls, the opera, dinners and dances, and at any entertainment after six o'clock given at private houses.

The dress of a business woman, to be in good taste, should be characterized by extreme neatness and simplicity.

MEN'S CORRECT DRESS.

A long cutaway coat is dignified and becoming.

A sack coat is worn in place of short cutaways.

The fancy colored shirt, with cuffs attached or detached, is quite the thing for business wear, the collar being white.

A Tuxedo suit of white duck is worn at one's country home in summer.

Men of fashion frequently wear pearl gray Alpine felt hat straight through the summer.

The proper material for golf and tennis coats is striped and not white flannel.

Golf and tennis trousers should be made of tans, grays or browns.

For yachting wear blue serge or flannel coats cut double breasted, with either blue trousers or white duck ones; a yachting cap is in good form.

--

White duck suits can also be selected for yachting.

The regulation dinner coat aboard a yacht is a blue broadcloth, Tuxedo finished with braid on the edges, and the yacht club emblem embroidered in the corner of the collar.

At garden parties a wide range of discretion in dress is allowed. A walking coat or frock coat, and a silk hat may be worn with either style of coat, or a neat straw hat.

The middle-aged and elderly men more often wear frock coats and silk hats.

A walking coat which can be made to serve a variety of purposes is a cutaway with pockets and flaps.

During the summer months the style of garments worn are double-breasted sack coats, or single breasted, as may depend upon one's wishes.

Straw hats should not be put on until the 1st of June and should be left off as soon as cool weather sets in.

Colored hatbands are no longer worn except as college colors.

In footwear the proper thing is Oxford ties with rounded toes.

For automobiling wear double-breasted coat and buttoned across.

With a Tuxedo coat, a single-breasted vest of like material may be worn if one chooses. The same rule holds good with frock and cutaway.

For the day wedding or a smart reception the white double-breasted waistcoat is much better form.

Light or dark striped worsted trousers are worn at afternoon teas and church.

For morning attire a sack coat or walking coat is good form.

A derby or soft hat conforms to the walking or sack coat suitably.

The Tuxedo coat can be worn at a stag theater party, a club or stag dinner, at summer dinners even when women are present, at seashore hotels, etc.

A Tuxedo coat is made of black or dark gray mixed cassimere.

A white necktie or a white waistcoat is never worn with a Tuxedo under any circumstances.

At a day wedding wear a long double-breasted frock or Prince Albert coat, white duck waistcoat and light colored striped trousers, patent leather, buttoned shoes, and deep pearl gray kid or gray suede gloves, a pearl gray Ascot or four in-hand tie with a pearl scarf pin. A silk hat is always worn with a frock coat.

Fobs are now being worn more than watch chains.

A pearl scarf pin is the perfection of good form.

For evening dress pearl shirt studs are the correct thing.

--

Mother of pearl links are the sleeve buttons for evening dress.

--

For business wear, use simple gold shirt studs without gems; wear a simple stickpin of gold device in cravat.

In full evening dress wear the standing collar with the points turned out. The tie must be the broad end white tie.

With the Tuxedo coat a high band turndown collar may be substituted, if desired. The necktie to go with a Tuxedo is always the broad end black silk or satin tie. A pleated white shirt also harmonizes with the Tuxedo coat.

A stout man should not wear checked and plaid suits and white waistcoats.

The calfskin walking shoes correspond with the sack coat.

With the long cutaway coat wear patent leather shoes, high or low pattern, according to the season of the year.

For evening dress patent leather pumps are correct.

With the frock coat at an afternoon affair wear patent leather button top shoes.

It is good form to wear frock coats and silk hats to church on Sunday mornings, but it is permissible to wear the English walking coat and derby hat; in summer straw hats are in evidence.

MISCELLANEOUS HINTS.

It is good form for a woman to pay her formal calls in the afternoon after three o'clock.

Men are privileged to call formally in the afternoon and evening. Calls may be paid as early as eight o'clock in the winter and may present themselves as late as nine.

In paying a formal call and for the first time fifteen minutes is the usual time allowed. The call may be prolonged from a quarter to three-quarters of an hour.

A woman's name when engraved or written on a card used when calling must be always prefaced with the title Mrs. or Miss.

A caller must never carry in her card and present it to her hostess; a visiting card is always left on the hall table or on the card tray.

Every wife carries a number of her husband's cards in her own card case, for husbands as a rule make few calls and hostesses remain quite satisfied with vicarious visits paid by the dutiful mates of busy business men. A wife who begins her rounds of first calls in a season always leaves her husband's cards with her own.

The wife who calls upon her married friend leaves two of her husband's cards and one of her own.

An unmarried woman when calling on her married friend leaves but one card.

A man never carries or leaves the cards of any other man.

Persons who wish to gradually close an acquaintance respond to all calls paid them by persistent card leaving.

If you want to get rid of anyone, talk much to him or her of yourself or of your interests.

If you want to hold the listener, talk of his or herself, of his or her interests.

Don't marry, if you are a man, unless you can support a wife.

Don't marry, if you are a woman, unless you are in good health, and are prepared and capable to be not only sweetheart and friend, but a helpmeet.

Don't go in debt. Live within your income.

A bore is a person who insists upon talking about himself when I want to talk about myself.

Don't expect to control others until you have learned to control yourself.

--

Don't be witty at the expense of another's feelings.

Don't contradict your friends or interrupt them when they are speaking.

Anger is a highway robber and worry is a sneak thief.

Don't expect more of your servant than you would be willing to give were positions reversed.

Dismiss a servant, but don't argue with him.

Don't spend time deploring the imperfections of others, but consider how best to mend your own.

MOXINE

Hayne's Fever and La Grippe Mixture

THE GREATEST REMEDY EVER PUT ON THE MARKET FOR SUCH AILMENTS AS

Catarrhal Fever, Hay Fever and to Allay Fever of All Kinds, Tonsilitis, Coughs, Croup, Sore Throat, La Grippe, and Other Pulmonary Troubles, Regular and Muscular Rheumatism.

A NERVE TONIC

Also for women who suffer from irregularities of the Menstrual Organs (except when caused by Malformation, ulcers or diseases requiring surgical treatment), suppressed or delayed menses, painful menstruation, profuse or too frequent flow of menses, general debility and change of life.

Is King of All Remedies

Because it is Supreme in its Power. It does its work, not only effectually but rapidly.

IT HAS STOOD THE TEST OF YEARS.

In some of the best families in the country, all of whom endorse it in the highest terms and say they would not be without it. Some of the best physicians endorse and use Moxine in their practice, and no physician will dispute its merit. Moxine has established this enviable reputation with all who have used it. A trial will convince you of its value.

Gov. T. M. Campbell says "Moxine is the greatest remedy of today," and the following reputable people have written the strongest endorsement of this wonderful remedy after using it for several years: Hon. W. M. Lacy, President Commercial National Bank, Abilene, Texas; Hon. A. W. Gregg, Congressman; Hon. W. H. Gill, Chief Justice of Court of Civil Appeals, Galveston; Z. L. Robinson, one of the leading bankers of East Texas: Hon. N. B. Morris, ex-Assistant Attorney General of Texas; J. S. O'Flynn, General Claim Agent of the I. & G. N. Railroad; M. A. Rich, General Salesman for Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Company, St. Louis; C. G. Angus, Dallas; Mrs. C. M. Onins, Fort Worth; Col. W. H. Moore, President National Good Roads Association, and hundreds of others whose letters we hold in testimony of the merit of this medicine. Many prominent physicians not only endorse the formula, but prescribe it in their practice. More Moxine has been sold than any other remedy ever put on the market.

MOXINE CHILL TONIC Cures Chills and Malaria

The only Chill Tonic that contains 5 grains of Quinine to the Dose, (the amount Physicians prescribe).

MOXINE PURGATIVE

MOXINE KIDNEY TABLETS

Cures Constipation. The most pleasant Laxative on the Market.

Cure Bright's Disease, Weak Kidneys and Kindred Ailments.

Price 50 Cents.

All Dealers.

A THRIVING YOUNGSTER

HIS smiling, dimpled youngster represents the HOUSTON CHRONICLE, which will be six years old on October 14th, 1907. Healthy newspapers, like healthy babies, grow fast, and the CHRONICLE is no exception to the rule. It puts out a sworn statement that its daily issue has a circulation of 25,000, and its Sunday issue 30,000. The CHRONICLE goes into over 400 towns and has the largest circulation in Texas of any daily published in this State.

The news service of the CHRONICLE is unequaled, not only covering every county and section of Texas and the great Southwest, but its domestic, market and foreign newsservice is not surpassed by any daily paper in this section of the country. Its style and makeup is metropolitan, and the CHRONICLE was the first paper in Texas to be sold by newsboys for two cents a copy.

That advertisers all over the country appreciate a twentieth-century newspaper as an advertising medium is attested by the advertising the CHRONICLE carries.
