HARDAWAY.

1685 — 1745.

ALMOST every Hardaway has heard from his ancestor the story of the kidnapped boy who was found on the ship.

About 1685 a ship owned by Joseph Thomas, a Quaker, of Philadelphia, sailed from England to America.

On board of that ship was a little kidnapped boy, who was dressed in green silk velvet trimmed with gilt; the boy seemed tenderly nurtured, and was too young to give his name.

Joseph Thomas, the owner of the ship, bestowed upon the boy the name of Thomas Hardaway.

Mr. Thomas made affidavit of the facts, and left the suit of clothes, with the affidavit, in custody of the clerk of the court (supposed to be Henrico).

The late Col. Robert A. Hardaway, of Columbus, Ga., who had collected quite a mass of information in regard to the Hardaway family, stated, in a letter to the author, that this information of the first Hardaway was authentic from public documents.

Joseph Thomas, the Quaker, educated Thomas Hardaway. He married Jane Drewry, of Drewry's Bluff, Virginia, and settled at Osborn's, Chesterfield county, Va. Their children intermarried with colonial families of respect, wealth and arms-bearing people. From Thomas Hardaway and his wife, Jane Drewry, I suppose all the Hardaways in America are descended.

Tradition says the name was originally MacBeth, and they claim descent from that royal family. The boy was kidnapped, and held for a ransom, but his captors, perhaps getting in a close place, had put him in the hold of the outgoing ship to get rid of him. In that day of slow travel and sparse mail it is little wonder that the boy was not recovered, but made his home in the new world.

We find from Register of Bristol Parish on James River, Chesterfield county, Va.:

"In 1733 the vestry of Bristol Parish, May 4th, met at the house of Mr. Thomas Hardaway, near the chapel at the Ferry, and agreed to build the brick church at Well's Hill, now known as Blandford Church, in Petersburg."

For more than twenty years Thomas Hardaway was a member of Blandford Church, though known then as Brick Church, and previously as Ferry Chapel, then located in Chesterfield county.

Thomas Hardaway died in 1745.

From Land Registry Office, Richmond, Va., we find the following:

His father left an estate, but, being badly managed, there was but little left for the little orphan boy. When he was fourteen years old, he was apprenticed to a hatter in Virginia, with whom he worked until he was twenty-one years of age. He then had money enough to purchase a horse, saddle and bridle, a good suit of clothes, and had a few dollars left.

In 1802 he mounted his horse and bid adieu to the scenes of his youth, to seek a home in Georgia. He resided one year in Washington, Wilkes county, Ga., where he pursued his trade successfully.

By his industry, economy and superior judgment he accumulated a fine estate.

He was a man of eminent piety, a strict member of the Baptist Church. He was kind and benevolent, maintained a high character for honesty and integrity in all of his transactions, had the confidence of his neighbors, was the trusted adviser and friend of all who knew him.

In 1828 he joined the Baptist Church at Union meeting House, was baptized by Rev. B. M. Sanders. A few years before his death, his membership was moved to the Baptist Church in Warrenton, in the communion of which he died September 3, 1858, age seventy-seven years, eighteen days.
