I Richard B. Lloyd of the County of Washington & District of Columbia being in sound mind & health, but knowing the uncertainty of life, make this my last will & testament, namely, For the consideration of the love and affection I have unto my beloved wife Elizabeth Ellen Lloyd I will and bequeath unto said Elizabeth Ellen, at my death, all my property of which I may die seized, of Real, personal or mixed, wherever situated, or what I might be entitled to, or interested had I then lived, unto the said Elizabeth Ellen for and during her natural life and at her death to be equally divided among my children Rosalie, Rosina, Richard, Ellen, Drama, Francis, Edward, and Brookford and any others I may have yet unknown. And knowing full well how uncertain it is that children should not be independent of their parents, and that they maintain a respectful respect for their mother, the said Elizabeth Ellen shall have full power to disinherit any child or children above named, who may give her just cause so to do. And it is particularly enjoined by me, that my said wife shall not have power to divide or apportion any part of said property hereby bequeathed to any child or children named, before the death of my said wife, but the whole property to be kept in her possession in trust for her support & the support and education of said children. Except, and it must be understood, that in case the said Elizabeth Ellen should again marry (which I hope she will not do) then the whole of said property hereby bequeathed to her, be divided equally between my said named children or such as may be living at the time of their heirs (big children) as they shall severally arrive to the age of twenty one years.
