WHAT OF THAT ?

Tired! Well, what of that?
Didst fancy life was spent on bends of ease,
Fluttering the rose leaves scatter'd by the breeze?
Come! rouse thee, work while it is call'd today,
Coward, arise—go forth upon the way!

Lonely! And what of that?
Some must be lonely; 'tis not given to all,
To feel a heart responsive rise and fall,
To blend another life into its own;
Work may be done in loneliness; work on!

Dark! Well, and what of that?
Didst fondly dream the sun would never set?
Dost fear to lose thy way? Take courage yet;
Learn thou to walk by faith and not by sight;
Thy steps will guided be, and guided right.

Hard! Well, and what of that?
Didst fancy life one Summer holiday
With lessons none to learn and naught but play?
Go, get thee to thy task; conquer or die!
It must be learned—learn it then patiently.

No help! nay; 'tis not so.
Though human help be far, thy God is nigh,
Who feeds the ravens, hears His children cry.
He's near thee wheresoe'er thy footsteps roam,
And He will guide thee, light thee, help thee home.

Farmers Winter Short Course to be Given at Blacksburg.

Are you satisfied with your present method of farming? Do you care to increase the yield of your corn crop by the use of better seed and better culture? Do you intend to grow better live stock? Are you interested in the problem of lowering cost of production of dairy products? Do you want to grow better fruit and more of it? Are you able to cope with the problem of protecting your animals, farm crops, and fruit trees from disease? Do you know how to use fertilizers to the best advantage?

If you are interested in any of these subjects you should attend the Farmers Winter Short Course of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute which begins Jan. 16, 1911, and continues for a period of one month. This course is given by men of thorough scientific training and of wide practical experience. Instruction will be by lectures and practical demonstrations. Only live topics will be handled. WANT MORE CATECHISMS.

Large Demand for Bulletin Issued by Health and Antituberculosis Authorities.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 28, 1910.—Letters are being received at the headquarters of the State Health Department by every mail, requesting additional supplies of the bulletin recently issued by the Department in conjunction with the State Antituberculosis Association. A large number of school officials have written that they would teach the catechism in the schools and, in a letter received today, a leading educator of the State stated that he had decided to give a number of prizes to the children in his school district who could make the best showing in an examination on the catechism.

PLAN INSPECTION OF INSTITUTIONS.

State Sanitay Engineer to Report on Sanitary Arrangements of State Schools.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 28, 1910.—Carrying out the general policy of the State Health Department, to complete a general sanitary survey of the State during 1911, Richard Messer, Engineer of the Department will leave the city during the next few days to begin a study of sanitary conditions at the various public institutions of the State.

The Health Department, in ordering this survey, has been guided in large measure by the requests of public institutions and the personal statements of prominent educators. Following the recent investigation of typhoid at Lexington, the Department decided to make a definite study of conditions in other college towns, with a view to preventing the occurrence of such epidemics as that which forced the temporary closing of Washington and Lee and the Military Institute.

Mr. Messer, according to the statement given out today, will visit each of the State schools and public institutions in turn, will make a detailed study of the water supply, of the methods of sewage disposal employed and of the general arrangements for the health and safety of the pupils or inmates.

"This inspection," explained Commissioner Ennion G. Williams this morning, "is not due to any particular alarm regarding conditions in our public institutions, for, as a matter of fact, most of them are model. The Boards of many of them are anxious however, to have their present arrangements approved and their plans for future development approved. As this is precisely in line with our general policy, we believe Mr. Messer's inspection will be of great service to the institutions and to the State.

OYSTER SITUATION SATISFACTORY SANITARY EXPERTS DECLARE.

Few Complaints Have Been Received by Health Department this Winter.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 28, 1910.—Despite an unfavorable season from other points of view, the oyster industry in Virginia was never in better condition than it is today, according to the sanitarians of the State Health Department. The oystermen, in every part of Tidewater, have been careful to conform to the regulations of the Department and have placed the industry on a basis which is now above criticism in most instances.

"The regulations adopted by the Federal Government and by the State for the sanitary conduct of the oyster business," said Assistant Commissioner Freeman of the Health Department today, "have been accepted almost without question by the oystermen. Some of them who looked at these regulations with doubtful eyes, have completely changed their opinion and declare that the promulgation of these rules have been the best step ever taken for the trade."

LETTER HAS MANY SCARED.

(Published by Request.)

Country papers throughout the United States are printing what is alleged to be a letter written by Christ.

In this letter was an injunction that it should be published to the world by whoever found it together with the statement that misfortune and bad luck would follow the person having possession of it in the event that it was not given publicity.

There was likewise a promise that whoever may have a copy of this in his or her possession will prosper and be followed by good fortune.

The Blade has received some hundreds of requests to print this letter, so if it will relieve the superstitious fear of any one, here it is:

According to the history of the letter it was written by Christ just after his crucifiction, signed by the Angel Gabriel ninety-nine years after the Savior's birth and presumably deposited by him under a stone at the foot of the cross.

On this stone appeared the legend, "Blessed is he who shall turn me over."

No one knew what the inscription meant, or seemed to have sufficient curiosity to investigate, until the stone was turned over by a child and the letter which follows was discovered.

"Whosoever works on the Sabbath day shall be cursed. I command you to go to church and keep holy the Lord's day, without any manner of work. You shall not idle or misspend your time in bedecking yourself in superfluities of costly apparel and vain dressing for I have ordered it a day of rest, I will have that day kept holy that your sins may be forgiven you.

"You will not break my commandments, but observe and keep them, they being written by my hand, spoken from my mouth. You shall not only go to church yourself, but also your man servant. Observe my words and learn my commandments.

"You shall finish your work every Saturday at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour the preparation for the Sabbath begins. I advise you to fast five days in the year, beginning on Good Friday and continuing the five days following in remembrance of the five bloody wounds I received for you and mankind.

"You shall love one another and cause them that are not baptized to come to church and receive the Holy Sacrament, that is to say baptism, and then the supper of the Lord, and be made a member thereof and in so doing I will give you long life and many blessings. Your land shall be replenished and bring forth abundance and I will comfort you in the greatest temptation and surely he that doeth to the contrary shall be cursed.

"I will also send hardness of the heart on them and especially on hardened and unpenitent unbelievers. He that hath given to the poor shall find it profitable. Remember to keep the Sabbath day, for the seventh day I have taken as a resting day to myself.

"And he that hath a copy of this letter written by my own hand and spoken by my own mouth and keepeth it without publishing it to others shall not prosper, but he that publisheth it to others shall be blessed by me and if their sins be as many as stars by night, and if they truly believe they shall be pardoned and they that believe not this writing and my commandments will have my plagues upon and you will be consumed with children, goods and cattle and all other worldly enjoyments that I have given you. Do but once think of what I have suffered for you, if you do, it will be well for you in this world and in the world which is to come.

"Whosoever shall have a copy of this letter and keep it in their house, nothing shall hurt them, neither pestilence, thunder nor lightning, and if any woman be in birth and put her trust in me she shall be delivered of her child. You shall hear of no more news of me except through the Holy Scriptures, until the day of judgment. All goodness and prosperity shall be in the house where a copy of this letter shall be found finished.

The story goes that the little child who found it passed it to one who became a convert to the Christian faith. He failed to have the letter published. He kept it, however, as a sacred memento of Christ and its passed down to different generations of his family for more than one thousand years.

During this period the family suffered repeated misfortune, migrated to different countries until finally one of them came to America, bringing the letter with them. They settled in Virginia, then moved further south, still followed by misfortune when finally the last member, a daughter, approached her death bed and called a neighbor, Mrs. Thompson, giving her the letter and related its history for more than one thousand years. The Thompson woman began the attempt to have it published and it first appeared in the Rome, Ga. Tribune on Oct. 31, 1891. It then appeared in the Dalton, Ga. Citizen and Mrs. Wortman, now living in Marion, Ind., clipped it and kept it in her possession for many years without an effort to have it published. She was followed by misfortune which she attributed to her neglect in trying to have the letter published.

Mrs. Raby Crutchfield of Treasvant, Tenn., is also said to have had a copy and failed to make an effort to have it published for three years, and was followed by a varied lot of misfortunes which she attributed to the fact of her neglect in this respect.

AN ENJOYABLE OCCASION.

One of the most enjoyable social functions of the holidays was a six o'clock dinner at the home of Mr. J. M. Snidow of Kimballton, when his daughter, Miss Mabel entertained a number of her schoolmates and friends. The home was very tastefully decorated with evergreens, holly and mistletoe. In the large parlor a log fire crackled behind old fashioned andirons, imparting a warm and cheerful glow to the festive scene.

The bountiful dinner was served in the elegant style so characteristic of Mrs. Snidow.

The happy evening was over all too soon, but fond memory of it will recall those hours.

The same merry party went to spend the following day with another Pearisburg High School Senior, Miss Mary McDonald. At Mr. Arthur McDonald's hospitable home, again "Old Virginia hospitality" was dispensed, and before the draught of pleasure had been fairly tasted the time to take the train had arrived; but each occasions are not over at their seeming close but remain as red letter days, and when the mind reaches the point where the mental gaze turns to the past rather than to the future, the soft glow of life's golden dawn will throw a beautiful halo around the crown of age.

Those from Pearisburg in attendance were: misses Bess Phlegar, Clara Shumate, Mary Shelton and Winnie Johnston, messrs. Jess Shelton, Fred Tabor and Arch Phlegar.

PEARISBURG HIGH SCHOOL.

On Friday evening December 23rd, the Semi-annual debate of the Pearisburg High School was held in the Assembly Hall, and, despite the very rainy night, was attended by a large number of people.

The exercises was of an high order, and all who took part acquitted themselves with credit.

The subject debated was: Resolved, "That the signs of the times indicate the downfall of the Republic."

The question was handled in a masterly way by Messrs. Stafford and Shrader, for the affirmative, and Williams and Muncy for the negative. The decision of the Judges, was for the affirmative. This is the second public exercise enjoyed by the friends of the school.

The entertainment recently given by W. Powell Hale was highly enjoyed by all. Mr. Hale is an entertainer of rare talent and his effort was appreciated.

On January 13th, Prof. Eggleston of Richmond State Superintendent of Public Instruction, will address the patrons in the Assembly Hall. All persons interested in education are invited.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN WOODS.

Irrespective of time and place Death comes into communities, and while some are enjoying the glad festive season, others close by, are made to drink of the bitter cup of bereavement. It was thus with our little town as the year 1910 crept near to its close, Mrs. John Woods' life ebbed out into the "Great Beyond."

Mrs. Woods had been failing in strength for many months. A little while before midnight on Dec. 30, 1910, her spirit left the frail tenement of clay, that had so patiently borne the suffering brought about by ill health.

Before marriage Mrs. Woods was Miss Rhoda Wilburn, in 1875, she was married to Mr. John Woods. They have reared a large family, eight children are left to mourn the loss of their mother, two have preceded her to the grave.

The funeral service was conducted at her home by her pastor, Rev. J. L. Prater, and despite the very cold weather a number of sympathising friends and neighbors followed the casket to Eastside Cemetery and remained until the newly made grave was perfectly shaped and upon the cold, hard grave the beautiful floral designs had been placed which in a mute but impressive way seemed to speak of a beautiful land where no chilling winds nor storms of grief ever enter.

To the bereaved husband and children, we tender our sincerest sympathy.

CARR-FRENCH.

Mr. Wm. D. Carr and Miss Effie Helen French celebrated Xmas. 1910, by joining their interests for life. The ceremony which made them two one was performed by Rev. H. B. Worley at the home of the bride at Penvir, Va. A good company of relatives and friends were assembled to witness the rite: The bride was attired in a beautiful white satin gown while the maids of honor, Lelia O. French, sister of the bride, and Miss Nora B. French, were also attired in white. The gentlemen of honor were Mr. John Carr, brother of the groom, and Mr. Leland French, brother of the bride. Mrs. G. M. Mitchell rendered very beautifully Shubert's Serenade and Mendelshon's Wedding March. A beautiful feast was spread in the well decorated dining room and the honorable L. J. McGhee wearing a dainty apron, and assisted by Mrs. Tyler French, did the serving. The bride is a daughter of Rufus A. French and the groom is a son of Jasper Carr also of Penvir. After a few days spent with the homefolks the happy couple will make their home in Bluefield, W. Va. We wish for them many joys in the New Year and a long and happy life.

JOHNSON-BAILEY.

Cupid seems to be especially active about Xmas times. On Thursday night, Dec. 22, 1910, Mr. Grover C. Johnson and Miss Essie M. Bailey, were united in the holy bonds of marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. B. Worley at the home of the bride, and was witnessed by a good company of relatives. The groom is a son of B. T. Johnson, Sr., and the bride is a daughter of Henry Bailey, formerly of Mercer Co., W. Va.

The attendants were: Mr. Clifton Johnson and Miss Rusha Johnson, Mr. Kelly Shumate and Miss Eula Honaker. The happy couple were handsomely attired, and immediately after the ceremony they, in company of several friends, went to Pearisburg station to board No. 16 for Norfolk, Va. They will reside in Narrows the remainder of the winter.

May many New Year joys attend their way.

A Marriage Romance.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 2.—A marriage romance was consummated here Friday night when Miss Margaret Hoge, a popular young woman of Giles county, Virginia, and Mr. Herbert McIlhany of Roanoke, eloped from that city to Bristol. They were married at the home of Mrs. J. W. Hill, on Windsor avenue, the Rev. Asa D. Watkins officiating. The young couple left the city Saturday for the home of the groom in Roanoke. Mrs. Hoge whose parents reside at Hoge's Store, is well known here, being a niece of Mrs. A. D. Reynolds and Mrs. John Alt Brewer, of this city, and having frequently visited here. She was attending the business college at Roanoke, and it was there that she formed the acquaintance of the young man who is now her husband.

Miss Margaret Hoge is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam'l Hoge of Hoge's Store, Va., and the VIRGINIAN joins in with her many friends in wishing them a long life of happiness.

Bluefield, Dec. 23, 1910.—Miss Mary L. Spangler, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Spangler of Peterstown died of tuberculosis at her home yesterday morning at 5:15, after a long illness. Miss Spangler spent sometime last summer at the Bluefield sanitarium where she seemed much improved. After leaving Bluefield she went to Richmond, there she was under the treatment of Dr. Ben Johnson for several months, leaving Richmond with a trained nurse whom she had with her until her death.

She leaves many friends and relatives throughout the southern part of the state, where she was prominently connected.—Bluefield Telegraph.

EDITOR OF THE VIRGINIAN:

Through your paper I want to express my gratitude and that of my family to the people of Eggleston and community for the nice pounding they gave us for Xmas. People do not always relish poundings of some kinds, but this was one that we all relished very much. No preacher ever served a better and kinder people than is found on the Eggleston Circuit, and besides this expression a number of the good Christian ladies of the charge have made donations that were necessary for the preacher's comfort.

The outlook for the present year is good. May God bless and prosper all the people and cause his face to shine upon them.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A Plea for Old Dixie.

Do not let the new words take place of the old, but remember that the old words sung around the camp fires from 1861 to 1865 brought a smile to many a sad face of our half starved soldiers, brought a loud laugh from the young boy with a heart bleeding for home scenes. Thousands of times the wag of the regiment has cheered the tired, lightened the heavy footsteps, when over and over again he jested of "Will de weaber" and "forty pounder." The empty canteen, the weary march was forgotten, when Dixie rang out from the camp fire through the night air. The old words come echoing down from the battlefields. Let us cling to these words as a heritage from the camp fire, from the volley of musketry, from the roar of cannon, from the unfurled flag on to victory.

DIXIE.

We give the original from which sprang the versions of the song so indelibly connected with the Confederacy :

I wish I was in de land of cotton,
Old times dar am not forgotten.
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land,
In Dixie land whar I was born in,
Early on one frosty mornin',—
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.

CHORUS.

Den I wish I was in Dixie,
Hooray, Hooray !
In Dixie land I'll took my stand,
To lib and die in Dixie ;
Away, away, away down South in Dixie ;
Away, away, away down South in Dixie.

Ole missus marry "Will de Weaber,"
William was a gay deceiber,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land,
But when he put his arm around 'er,
He smiled as fierce as a forty pounder,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.

His face was sharp as a butcher's cleaber,
But dat did not seem to greab 'er,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.
Ole missus act de foolish part,
And died for de man dat bruk her heart,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.

Now here's a health to de next old missus,
And all de gals dat wants to kiss us,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land,
But if you want to drive away sorrow,
Come and hear this nig to-morrow,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.

Dar's buckwheat cakes and ingen batter,
Makes you fat or little fatter,
To Dixie's land I'se bound to trabble,
Den hoe it down and scratch your grabble,
To Dixie's land I'se bound to trabble
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.

A TRUTHFUL ASSERTION.

The worst habit that boys can fall into is that of loafing around on the streets at night. It is then they cast their lot in slippery places when at any moment they are likely to fall from grace. All good and noble lessons taught them by their mothers are there counteracted and nullified. They learn nothing that is good—but everything bad. The boys who spend their evenings in the sacred precincts of home, with good books for their companions are the future hope of this republic; they will fill our legislative and congressional halls, and sit in judgment upon men and measures, while the boys who run the streets will fill our penitentiaries, almshouses and lunatic asylums. Parents who are responsible for these broken lawa of decency will have broken hearts and bowed down heads in the awakening years that will inevitably follow.

A man's conscience never tries to deceive him.

NOTABLE DECLINE IN TWO DISEASES.

Health Department Reports Less Typhoid and Consumption in State.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 4, 1911.—That two of Virginia's most dread diseases claimed a smaller toll in 1910 than in 1909 is the most cheering note in a statement of Health Commissioner Ennion G. Williams read today to the State Board of Heald at its annual meeting.

Typhoid fever and Consumption, according to the Health Commissioner, showed a marked decline during the past year, and the warfare being waged against them by the State and local health authorities presages still greater victories during the next year. During the statistical year 1909, the Department of Health estimated 14,398 cases of typhoid fever in the State exclusive of the cities which have organized municipal health departments. During the same period of 1910, this number was reduced to 11,843, or a decline of 2,555. During 1909, the estimated number of cases of consumption developing was 6816, while in 1910 this number was reduced to 5760, a decline of 1156.

In speaking of these figures today, an officer of the Health Department grew enthusiastic. "Owing to the absence of a vital statistics law," he said, "it is not possible to tell precisely how many cases of any given disease occur in the State during any given time ; but the report filed with the Health Department and the careful estimates made from them leave no doubt that there has been a great and gratifying decline in typhoid fever and consumption. Great as this is, it is but an indication of the possibilities of preventive medicine. There is no reason why, in time, there dread diseases should not disappear, with a gain to human happiness and prosperity which is almost beyond one's imagination."

In addition to receiving Commissioner Williams' report, the State Board of Health transacted a large volume of routine business, reelecting the same officers and outlining work for the future. There was a genuine tone of satisfaction manifested throughout the proceedings and all the members of the Board expressed their firm confidence that Virginia's war against disease was yielding magnificent results.

SORROWS COME AMID THE GREATEST JOYS.

EDITOR OF VIRGINIAN :

I am sure you will kindly allow me space in your paper to express partially the great sadness I feel today. No words can tell it fully ; no language, however aptly spoken can portray this genuine grief. In this season of festivity and general felicity does it occur which seems to make it only the more sad. Sorrows come amid the greatest joys, as the dark wings of night fall upon the brightest days.

Death as we take the word visits everything. Our hearts await the coming of dear ones only to learn of death, all powerful grief that fills our hearts, and bears them down. Oh, could it be averted ! but such is fate.

We hear the sad report of the awful train wreck in West Va., thirty-three miles west of Williamson about 4 o'clock on the evening of December 24th, in which five postal clerks were killed. Men in the faithful discharge of their duties, hazardous duties. Men with strong, brave hearts, to fall instantly the victims of a wreck, to die without a moment's notice ; no message to wife or children, no message to the Lord of Mercies, yet such is fate. Oh ! that this mystery could be solved, that these accidents could be averted, for how necessary to the world is the postal service, the great essential of commerce, the great medium of intercourse.

Among those who lost their lives in this wreck, we are sad to write the name of Lamar W. Dowdy of Roanoke, Va., formerly of Newport, Giles Co., Va. A man who had no enemies in the service, a man of noble character, a most efficient clerk, one of many years experience, one whom we all loved. We shall miss his smile and kindly words.

It is all too sad, and we pray the words of Lord Lytton are true, which he expresses in his beautiful poem :

"There is no death ! although we grieve,
When beautiful, familiar forms,
That we have learned to love are torn,
From our embracing arms.
Although with bowed and breaking heart,
With sable garb and silent tread,
We bear their senseless dust to rest,
And say—that they are "dead."

They are not dead ! they have but passed,
Beyond the mists that blind us here,
Into the new and larger life,
Of that serener sphere.

They have but dropped their robe of clay,
To put their shining raiment on,
They have but wandered far away,
They are not "lost" nor "gone."

FRANK BURKE PORTERFIELD,

Obituary.

The Death Angel visited the home of Mrs. Fred Byrd and took their darling babe, little Bernice. She was born August 17, 1909, died November 14, 1910, making her 14 months and 28 days old. She was too pure to live in this world, so the Lord called her home to live with him. The Lord only loaned her to them for a short time. Dear papa and mama look up through your tears and say "Thy will be done." O, may this draw them closer to the Lord. "Mother, little lamb has gone to dwell with him who gave, another little darling babe is sheltered in the grave, God needed one more angel child amidst his shining band, so he bent with loving care and clasped our darling's hand."

We sent out last week 34 statements, making in all since Dec. 22nd, 218, amounting to $512 05. Since that time we have received in all $55.25. Friends, this is not treating us exactly right. We need our money badly to meet our expenses, and we have worked hard for it and you should pay us as it is the only way we have to make our living. So, please let us hear from you. Many thanks to those who have already responded.

We owe it to the community in which we live to do everything we can in every way possible that will be to its advantage. Our neighbor's prosperity means a great deal more to us than someone's who lives elsewhere. We should bear this in mind in buying our goods. We can afford to pay our home man a firm price for his wares rather than send our money away, knowing as we do that every dollar our own citizen makes will help in sustaining our schools, churches and public institutions. It pays richly to patronize home industry.

DEATH OF P. R. PUCKETT.

Mr. P. R. Puckett, postmaster at Newport, died at his home there at about 7:30 p. m., Tuesday.

He had been in failing health for several years past and a severe attack of pneumonia in his weakened state quickly proved fatal.

Dr. J. L. Muncy of this place was hastily summoned on last Monday to attend him and remained with him until Tuesday, when it was apparent that no medical skill could avail to save the sufferer from the fate that awaits us all.

Mr. Puckett was a prominent and influential Republican politician of this county; and was of a cheerful, kind and generous nature and had many friends, to whom the news of his death will be sad tidings.

We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

A more extended notice of the deceased may be expected in a later issue.

SOCIAL EVENT.

One of the most enjoyable evenings spent during the season for the members of the younger set took place last Friday evening, when Miss Bessie Phlegar entertained a number of her friends.

Delicious refreshments were served. All kinds of games were indulged in. The guests present were: Misses Stella and Ollie Prater, Clara Stafford, Georgia Pearson, Lula Shrader, Francis Shumate, Annie Strader, Bess and Mary Shelton, Banie Johnston, Mary McDonald, Mabel Snidow and Winnie Johnston. Messrs. Fred Tabor, Jess Shelton, Clarence Strader, Terrell Shrader, Russell Pearson, Wilmer Hedrick, Will McDonald, Martin and Buford Williams.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

One of the most enjoyable events occured on Thursday evening, when a jolly crowd of young people gave a surprise party at Mr. J. S. Eaton's of Wabash.

On entering it was a surprise to every one as the key to the front door was misplaced and all had to enter by the back way. It was thought by Professor that burglars were intruding and he gave the guests an old witches flight with a broom for several minutes.

A fire was soon made and all enjoyed a good time at different games until the hostess gave us another surprise and said: "Come to the dining hall." There we found ices, cake, pickles and candies, which were delicious as could be seen when all had finished, at a late hour we departed wishing surprise partys occurred often.

Those present: Misses Bessie Johnston, Clara Eaton, Mary King, Callie Eaton, Elsie Meadows, Annie King, Nellie Brown, Eaton, Mary Eaton and Lula Mae King. Prof. Emmet Givens, Messrs. Arthur Brown, Albert Eaton Fred Whitaker, Alfred Meadows, Roscoe Eaton, Clarence King, Robert Eaton, Frank Brown and Hoge Robertson.

WHITE GATE.

The Work We Have Done.

"It isn't the job we intend to do,
Or the labor we've just begun,
That puts us right on the ledger sheet;
It's the work we've really done.

Our credit is built on the things we do,
Our debts on things we shirk.
The man who totals the biggest plus
Is the man who completes his work.

Good intentions do not pay bills,
It's easy enough to plan.
To wish is the play of the idle boy
To do is the job of a man."

What turkeys are left are holding a sort of mute thanksgiving.

IN MEMORIUM.

Mrs. Mary Carpenter Payne, wife of the late Dr. James Preston Payne, died at her home in Newport, Nov. 21, 1910, in the sixty-sixth year of her age.

Mrs. Payne was born in Covington, Va., second daughter of the late Col. Samuel Carpenter, and came to Newport when her husband located here in the practice of his profession, about thirty-four years ago. Reared a Presbyterian from early childhood she joined the church of her husband, (Baptist), when married; later having no near association with either of these churches here in Newport, with all her family, she was confirmed in the Lutheran church, about twenty years ago.

During the years she dwelt in our midst she had gathered unto herself many warm friends. Few indeed are the homes, in which she failed to minister help and sympathy, when affliction's shadow hovered near. High minded, womanly, devotedly Christian, a sacrificial "mother in Israel." Truly earth and heaven seemed to meet in her with her high Christian character, and devotion to her God, and her ever ready communion, and kindly charity for bodies terrestial. While much might be said in eulogy of such a character. Combining those incomparable attributes, tenderness, strength, and beauty, yet such would be in keeping with the quiet, reserved dignity that marked her character.

Reared in a home enshrining all the traditions of the Old South, when scarcely more than a child as their country called father and brothers, she proudly buckled on their shields saying, "Return with it or upon it." Early she learned her lesson of self sacrifice, and dignity, which has ever marked the true daughter of the Confederacy. Thus all through life she met the storms that assailed her with all the courage of the Spartan Matrons of old.

Stricken with nephritis in the early summer she bore her suffering patiently, knowing from the first the nature of the disease, and the ultimate end. She realized the Master had called, and willingly answered, "Lord here am I."

And when the end came, surrounded by her children and friends, she passed away so quietly and peacefully, that those watching, scarcely realized her spirit had entered the "Paradise of the blessed dead." To those who mourn, we offer consolation, for verily, "He giveth His beloved sleep."

"Sleep on, beloved, sleep and take thy rest,
Lay down thy head upon the Savior's breast,
We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best,
Good-night, good-night, good-night."

JUST PUBLISHED

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of specialists, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unsparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness, in size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

POEM CHEERS RILEY WHO IS ILL AT HOME.

Appreciation Written by Charley Mustard Sent to the Hoosier Verse Maker.

(From Bluefield Telegraph.)

Several days before Christmas Charley Mustard wrote an appreciation to James Whitecomb Riley, and together with Judge George Dillard, sent it to the poet who is ill at his home in Indianapolis. The poem is as follows:

When dear old Whitcomb Riley
Looked out one frosty morn
And saw the frost a glistening
On the fodder and the corn,
He just rolled out and started in Without his shoes and sox
And wrote "The frost is on the pumpkin
And the fodder's in the shock."

You can praise and honor Shakespeare,
You can doff your hat to Burns,
You can eulogize the poets
As long as the old world turns,
But you cannot find the equal,
No matter where you roam,
Who writes nearer to nature
Of our boyhood days at home.

There's "Down around the river,"
And "There Billy Fighted Me,"
"The Goblins" and "The Raggedy Man,"
And "The lazy bumblebee,"
And don't forget the story
Of "The Reindeer and the Fur,"
And "Long Afore I knew Who Santa Claus Wuz."

For they make us think of childhood,
The springtime of our lives,
When all the world's aflower,
A joy that never dies,
So fill and lift your glasses
With old Hoosier best rye stock
To "The Frost that's on the Pumpkin
And the fodder in the shock."

Several days ago Messrs. Mustard and Dillard received the following letter:

"Gentlemen:—Mr. Riley was simply delighted with your Christmas poem. His ill health makes it impossible for him to give the personal answer he so much desires to give you, but he has instructed me to tell you how the poem cheered him in his illness and to return his heartiest and best wishes to you, and his 'God bless you' both.

"Very sincerely yours,
"EDWARD T. ETEL."

A MOTHER'S REVERIE.

The Yesterdays of Her Boy as They Pass Before Her.

Yesterday you looked at me with your father's eyes. You clasped my finger with your tiny ones, clinging as for your life, and a tiny spark of life was kindled in my cold heart. Yesterday you walked alone, you stood proudly erect, flung back your head, with your father's own gesture, and said, "Boy."

Yesterday you wore your first little trousers and were indeed "mother's boy." You have very likely forgotten, but I never shall, the huge monster of a dog that barked at us on our walk that day. You sprang before me and faced it valiantly. You stretched out your tiny arms and shrieked: "Go way! Don't you hurt my mother!"

Yesterday you came blindly to my sitting room with swollen eyes and blood stained lips. As I bathed and patched and trembled you blurted out: "He called you a name! Let any feller dast call my mother a name! I punched him good! Let him just dast say that again! He said you was a widow!" Dear little warrior, with your father's own chivalry! No wonder my starved heart feasted upon those divine crumbs of comfort.

Yesterday I sent you to college. I hope my misgivings showed not at all in the face. Yesterday I went to "the game." I sat with blanched cheeks and smiling lips through two hours of agony. I saw my stalwart son pounced upon, battered, victorious. I waved my hand to him as they carried him out on their shoulders, and he turned from all that shrieking throng—to me. It is hard to be a Spartan mother, but "Hands off!" You came straight to me after the rub down and said, "Mother, you're a brick!" You didn't know that I still shook inside.

Yesterday you left your college days behind you. You came to me after all the feasting and merry-making as I sat quiet again after awhile. We talked, you and I, of what you were to make of that larger life now so near at hand. My heart was glad to hear you say you would choose that same honorable calling to which your father's best was given. And I said to you then, as I have ever said, "Make of your life something clean and straight and honest, as was his." Your mother has watched to see you struggle against the waves of temptation.

But you have kept that promise. She has seen the man grow out of the youth not perfect, but facing toward the right. Dear boy, your mother is glad to tell you that.

Yesterday you told me. I had seen it coming—seen it even in spite of my cowardly denials to myself. She is a dear girl, an ideal mate for my manly son, and I pray you may be happy together. Yesterday was your wedding day—bright, beautiful, sunny. Never until I die shall I have to do anything again so hard as to stand through that solemn service.

Yesterday, my crowning yesterday, my heart sings as I write and is happy again, truly happy, as I never expected to feel in this world. You came to me, tall, straight, with a new expression of manliness in your eyes, and said: "Mother, he has come—my son! Isn't it wonderful?" You came to meet me and gathered me up in your strong arms and held me close to the heart that had rested so often on mine. Your voice came to me, softened with the tears of which your manhood was not ashamed. "Little mother," it whispered, "I never knew till now what you have suffered all these years to be alone—poor little mother!"

Feast of the Garlands.

In several of the more remote Swiss cantons there is held what is called the feast of the garlands. The marriageable maidens assemble at sunset, sing, dance and make merry. Each wears a chaplet of flowers on her forehead and carries a nosegay tied with a bright colored ribbon. If a lad is attracted by a maid he plucks a flower from her bunch. She pretends not to notice, but when the merrymaking breaks up at dawn she will, if she reciprocates his feelings, tie the entire bouquet by a ribbon to the handle of the cabin wherein he resides.

Only a Sample.

Rufe Johnson blundered into a graveyard and woke up a spook. "Yessur," he said in telling about it afterward, "it sare was ah ghost, and you ought to seen de way I run. De fust mile I made in nuffen, and den I burnt de wind for two or free more, and den I sit down on a rail fence to rest, and when I 'bout eot my breff I looked over my shoulder, and dere was de ghost ag'in, an' it said, 'We sure did run, Rufe, didn't we?' And den I say, 'Yes, Mr. Ghost, sure did, but we didn't run nuffen to what we's gwine to run.'"

DEADLY FIREARM TO THE SHUMATES.

Strange Disaster at Beckley—Same Gun that Killed Dr. Shumate's Father and Brother, Blows Off His Foot.

Beckley, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Dr. Robert Shumate, who is well known throughout this county and an associate dentist of Dr. W. W. Watts, while cleaning a shot gun Thursday afternoon in his office, had his left foot almost severed from his leg by a shell that was accidentally left in the gun, exploding. He had removed the hammers and was cleaning the weapon with his pocket knife, which struck against the shell, thus causing the accident. Drs. Hume and Cook found it necessary to amputate the wounded foot. The peculiar feature of this mishap is, his brother, Elbert Shumate, and his father, George Shumate, were accidentally killed in the use of their fire arms and one of them met his death with the same gun that Dr. Shumate was cleaning when hurt.

Fifteen Uses of A Lemon.

Few people realize the value of lemons, which cannot be overestimated. In cases of fever, sore throat, or torpid liver the medicinal qualities are excellent.

1. Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of strong tea will cure a nervous headache.

2. A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a small cup of black coffee will relieve a bilious headache.

3. The juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water, taken on awakening in the morning, is an excellent liver corrective and successful substitute for calomel and other alterative drugs.

4. A dash of lemon juice in plain water makes a cleaning tooth wash, not only removing the tartar, but sweetening the breath.

5. A lotion of lemon juice and rose water will remove tan and whiten the skin.

6. Lemon juice and olive oil is far superior to vinegar for a salad dressing—equal parts used for blending.

7. Lemon juice and loaf sugar is good for hoarseness.

8. Outward applications of the juice allay irritation caused by insect bites.

9. A refreshing drink is made by adding a freshly beaten egg to lemonade.

10. A freshly beatgn egg added to lemonade and the entire mixture frozen makes a delicious ice.

11. If, when boiling sago or rice, a teaspoonful of lemon juice is added, the kernels will be whiter and a delicate flavor is imparted.

12. An old fashioned remedy for croup, we remember, is honey, alum and lemon juice.

13. We all know the value of salt and lemon juice for removing rust stains from white goods.

14. After the juice is extracted, the rind dipped in salt cleanses brass beautifully and conveniently.

15. It also removes unsightly stains from the hands.

We do not laugh enough. There is nothing more pleasant to ear than the merry laugh of a happy, joyous person, and nothing drives away gloom and care like a good, hearty laugh. Laughter and good humor make a happy, pleasant home and a cheerful bright home is the safeguard against the temptations for the young. Parents should run guard against this and spare no pains to make home a cheerful spot.

CHARLES G. BOYD DEAD.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 11.—Just after midnight this morning Charles C. Boyd, Associated Press operator in the Roanoke Times office died in the office after an illness of not more than ten minutes.

Mr. Boyd came down town in the afternoon from his home, 410 Fifteenth avenue, South West, complaining of neuralgia in his face and apparently suffering intensely. Later he remarked that the pain had extended into his chest. He began his work as usual, however, at 6 o'clock and continued to take the press during the night.

At 11:50 there was a "let up" on the wire and Mr. Boyd leaned back in his chair from the type writer on which he had been busy and began to talk with Mr. H. P. Chapman, of the Times staff, the telegraph instrument being in one corner of the local room. He was in his accustomed pleasant genial humor and had just finished telling a story at which he and Mr. Chapman were laughing heartily. Suddenly he rose to his feet facing the front window, and with a half smothered cry of "Oh, my God!" fell forward on his face to the floor. Immediately he was turned over, but he was senseless and practically dead. He gave no sign of life except a few slow, gasping breaths. Messengers were sent in all directions for doctors. Dr. Guerrant of Patrick county, hurried over from the Ponce de Leon and Dr. Watson arrived soon after. By that time it was about ten minutes after twelve and Mr. Boyd was pronounced dead. The doctors said death was caused probably by a quick attack of neuralgia of the heart. The body was removed to the Oakey undertaking establishment and will be taken to Mr. Boyd's home this morning.

Mr. Boyd had been a resident of Roanoke twelve years and all that time had held the Associated Press wire for The Times. He came here from Columia, S. C., where he was a Western Union operator, but was a native of North Carolina. He was about thirty six years old. He married in Columbia and his widow and five children survive him.

The news of his death was broken to Mrs. Boyd as gently as possible, but she was prostrated by the horrible shock and nothing could be learned last night of her wishes regarding the disposition of the body.

Mr. Boyd was the most universally popular member of The Times force. In many respects he was a remarkable man. He not only took the full service of the Associated Press for this newspaper but edited it and wrote the headlines and in that way was incomparably useful. He was genial, gentle and sympathetic always, of very unusual ability and fine sense. This morning the office is gloomy and silent but for the sound of the machinery, for every man feels he has lost a loved and valued friend.—Roanoke Times.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER.

Stand by your town newspaper. If there is anything in your town worth talking about, ten chances to one your little town paper had a hand in putting it there; and if there exists any unsightly or unsavory nuisance, twenty chances to one it will stay there until your town editor sees it or smells it, and wipes his pen on the town board's breeches. If anybody beyond the walls of your little burg ever learns that there is such a place as Peaceville it will be through the town oracle that is printed up-stairs over the drug store.

Every village gets its money's worth in the village newspaper. It's the wagon that carries all your good things to market. It ought to be kept in good repair. In many cases it would pay to grease it, paint it, keep its running gear in shape, and shelter it, at the public expense.

Stand by your town newspaper. It's the guardian and defender of every interest, the forerunner and pioneer of every advance movement, and the sturdy advocate of law and order. Take it away and it would not be six months before the town would look as if it had been doped. Business would drag, society would yawn, and grass would grow between the bobbles.

Long live the town newspaper. —Virginia Industrial Magazine.

Snakes Are Found in Apples.

The apple eaters of this community are very much disturbed by the numerous reports of snakes being found in the cores of that most delectable fruit. Mr. W. C. Chapman of Glenvar, is reported as having found an eight inch snake coiled in an apple he was enjoying. The reptile had evidently eaten the core and seed and then proceeded to substitute himself in their place. Mr. John Strickler is reported to have had a like experience and from Roanoke comes still another similar report. The snakes are not thought to be poisonous. They are usually about eight inches in length and of a whitish color.—Salem Times Register.

The One and Only.

She had a figure like twenty elephants in one and a voice fit to command the British army.

"William," she shouted, "take your feet off the parlor table this very instant!"

"Margaret," he responded in a voice charged with manly determination, "I want you to know that there is but one person whom I will allow to address me in that name!"

"And who is that, sir, may I ask?" she roared, towering above him.

He cast one furtive glance at her and made up his mind. "Why, dear," he answered as he gently removed his feet from off the table, "you, of course."—Punch.

By this time it was fully expected that Pearisburg would be able to boast of a real moving picture show, but it develop that it was nothing but a pipe dream. We will have to be content with the moving pictures furnished by pedestrians on the slippery sidewalks of the town.

The farmer who owns a farm is the particular person who is fixed. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and mines suspend, merchants fail and town burn, times may be panicky and even crops may be be short—but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet, with plenty to eat, drink and wear. He is the most independent man on earth. Yet there are lots of them who do not appreciate their situation.

The voice of duty is never still. It whispers to us morning, noon and night; it reaches us from the roar of the wild tempest, the sigh of the summer winds, the soft, gentle murmur of the wayside brook. That still small voice will not be hushed.

The world would be happier if the people were a little more generous with their praise. There is too much flattery, but a word of just appreciation whould cheer the heart and strengthen the hands of many a discouraged worker in the home, in the school, in the church and in the world.

Mr. A. P. Payne of Slab Fork, W. Va., says: "Enclosed you will please find one dollar for which send me your paper for one year. I am a Giles boy and want to keep in touch with the doings of the good people of Giles, and I know the VIRGINIAN will give me all the news."

What volumes our faces say! Some speak of love and kindness, some of anger and hatred, others of pride and rebellion, and others still of selfishness. We can't help our faces talking, but we can make them say pleasant things; and all should try to have them do so.

The bestowal of Crosses of Honor by McComas Chapter, U. D. C., to about twenty-six of the Veterans, will take place today (Thursday afternoon), at 2 o'clock p. m., in the High School Auditorium. Pull together, brethren. We are all here for the same purpose. Then live and let live. The best way to build up a town is for each and every man to pull together and not strive to rend and tear down. All the residents of a town are partners' not opponents. In all likelihood the more business done by your rival the more you will do. Every merchant who treats his customers honestly and fairly will get his share and the more business that can be secured by united effort, the better it will be for all.

SURPRISE PARTY.

On last Thursday evening a party composed mostly of young ladies and gentlemen of the Pearisburg High School started out in a body to surprise. They were joined at Bluff City by a reinforcement of comrades, and across the river at the hospitable home of Mr. Wysong the young people spent several very happy hours in innocent games interspersed with laughter and merry conversation.

About one o'clock the sleeping inhabitants of Pearisburg began to wonder if it were already daylight and what had become of the sun, but pretty soon they realized it was only the good night partings of the merry members of the surprise party.

OBITUARY.

(From the Midland Methodist.)

Pierre Lamont Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams, was born in Giles County, Va. Most of his ealy life was spent in and near Pearisburg. His chosen avocation was merchandise. He was for a number of years previous to his death a leading merchant in the town of Pearisburg, where he conducted a large and lucrative business, which he had built up by energy and close application to business and by his courteous bearing toward his numerous customers. It is exceedingly rare that one so young enjoyed the confidence of capitalists as did he. He filled the niche for which Providence fitted him. Could he have lived a few years longer, the normal gains from his business would have won for him enviable distinction. When quite a youth he went into the coal fields of West Virginia as a clerk in a store, and after several years he returned to home of his childhood without a stain upon his escutchon. He abounded in liberality. He was large-hearted. He was a member of the Methodist Church. The writer was his pastor for three years, and he can truthfully say that P. L. Williams never turned away from a call for means with which to carry on the work of the Church. He was the preacher's friend. Next to his immediate family, he will be missed most in the home of the pastor of his Church. There was nothing little in his make-up. He was a member of a highly honored family, was one of the best of citizens, and, better than all else, he was a Christian. The last year of his sojourn on earth he made a strong fight against the subtle approach of disease, he having gone to a sanitarium in North Carolina, and later to one in Colorado; but failing to find the desired relief, he folded his tent and returned to the home of his nativity, where on July 27, 1910, surrounded by father, mother, brothers, sisters, and friends, he went to the house of many mansions. He was given every attention that friends and money could provide; and when it was announced that Pierre Williams was dead there was not an inhabitant of his town, young or old, rich or poor, white or colored, that did not feel poorer because of his departure. He was twenty-eight years of age, and was well prepared for the higher life on which he has entered. This brief tribute is sorrowfully but affectionately contributed to his memory. Good-by, Pierre; we shall see you again.

Failed in Health

"My mother died six years ago," writes Miss Ruth Ward, of Jerseyville, Ill., "and left me to care for six children. I had never been strong; and this, with the shock of her death, was too much for me.

"I failed in health. I was tired all the time and did not want to go anywhere, nor care for company. I had the headache all the time and such bearing-down pains.

"A very dear friend advised me to take Cardui, as it had done her so much good, so I commenced to use it and now I am in good health."

Take CARDUI

If you do need it, do not delay, but commence to use it at once. Every day of delay, only lets you slide further down the hill.

Don't wait, then, but begin to take Cardui today, for its use, no matter how prolonged, cannot harm you and will surely do you good.

"ARLINE."--AGED 19 YEARS.

Call her not dead though you found her asleep,
Lying so restful, so silent and white;
Sleeping the sleep that cometh to all,
Sooner or later—mortality's night.
Fold the white hands o'er the slumbering heart,
Tenderly, knowing all earth-work is done;
Nothing to her is the morning's red dawn—
Nothing to her is the setting of sun.

Gone to her rest, in her beautiful youth;
Free from the scar of earth's pitiless stain;
"Dust unto dust"—'tis the way of the world,
The spirit has passed through the portals of pain,
Softly caressing the bright, silken hair,
Say that the angels her dear lips have pressed;
Borne her away from our cherishing arms,
Upward, afar, to the beautiful rest.

Kiss the dumb lips through your fast-falling tears—
Never again will she come at your call;
Our Beautiful passed from this sorrowful star,
Leaving to us but the dirge and the pall,
Say she went home in her life's dewy morn,
Star flowers paving the way she has fled;
Say she has laid down the cross for the crown;
Say she's at rest, but, O, call her not dead!

—Helen Watts-McVey.

THE HERITAGE OF TOMORROW!

BY HERBERT KAUFMAN.

The old year is dead. Long live the new!

Another milestone has been set upon the Road of Time. The first decimal of the mightiest epoch in history just been dotted

We have lived harder, moved faster, climbed higher, and wrought more gloriously in the last decade than in any one total century since Dawn smiled upon the bleak, raw universe.

In all the epochs down from creation, mankind never before aimed so high, planned so broadly, or achieved so splendidly.

The sands of the hour-glass have run at a new speed—the clock has quickened its tick We stride at a new pace; we wear seven-league boots, and think with seven-league intellects.

We have questioned in the mountain and on the plain, in the air and on the sea, and found long-hidden and priceless secrets

We scan the terraced layers of the gorge and translate from the gnawed out hills the diary of the aeons.

We know the schedule of the comet and the ages of the stars.

Our fleets are on the ocean-bed and on the wave and in the clounds. We have become fish men and bird-men. We swirl like dolphins through the deeps and glide like eagles triumphant in the face of the sun.

We are not content with the heritage of Noah. We have replaced the living beast of burden by whirring, whirling steeds of steel.

Nature is no longer Mother of Mystery. Her veil is rent—her soul exposed. We are no longer her slaves, but her competitors. We breed her forces and her riches in out test tubes and our furnaces.

We know wherein lies the rose breath and the flush of the rose leaf and the iridescence of the pearl.

We have made the desert to flower and the arid wastes are sweet with the fragrance of oranges a bloom, and golden with the glow of ripened wheat.

The river and the waterfall are vagrants trained and taught to serve our will. The lawless torrent is bridled and turns the turbine in the canon.

The hateful, merciless battalions of plague and pestilence no longer slip within our walls. With microscope and antiseptic, Science is devastating the hordes which once made greater havoc than the spear and sword.

We are the wisest and the boldest Sons of the Earth. We are magicians, more potent than the magi and the sorcerers.

The miracles of tradition are trite and commonplace compared with words that flash from ships a thousand miles apart—with trains that rumble through the river boze—with scales that weigh the hairs upon a housefly's feet.

We scrutinize a mass of tar, and see a thousand dyes and drugs and perfumes lurking in its depths. We press a button and a city blazes into light. We turn a screw and lo! we hear the master-voice burst into song.

Who knows what strange and startling heritage lies in tomorrow? Each dawn is arched with rainbows. Only a fool despairs to hope in this inspired age.

Today is but a threshold—no man can dream what lies beyond. The Land of Promise is ahead.

This is the hour of the best man. He stands for what he is, and owns what he can reach. There are no barriers, no predestined positions, no castes of breed—only of deed. The babe at any mother's breast may be supreme.

Ignorance and bigotry have fled before the torch of knowledge. Poverty no longer wears shackles. There is but one key to every treasury—persistence.

The horizon constantly retreats. Stand forth in Faith—believe and achieve.

Equal For Him.

A certain American naval officer brought a Chinese servant named Quong home with him from the far East. One day the Oriental asked permission to attend a funeral.

"Go ahead Quong," consented the officer. Then he supplemented, "I suppose you will place different kinds of food on your dead friend's grave, as they do in your native country."

"Sammee as in China," said Quong.

"Now, Quong," continued the officer, good naturedly, "when do you think your friend will come up to eat what you leave on his grave?"

"Allee samee time that Meli-can man comes up to smellee flowers you put on his," retorted Quong.—National Monthly.

Old War Shell Exploded.

The explosion of an old war-time shell filled with powder almost caused the death of Ernest Patterson, and his young wife at Dundee, a small country hamlet near here. The shell had lain in an unfrequented spot for years and was found by Patterson while he was hunting. The explosion followed his attempt to pry it open with a hatchet. The concussion knocked the couple several feet, causing dangerous injuries. Two of Patterson's fingers were torn off and his wife's face was mangled.—Central City (Ky.) Argus.

EDITOR OF VIRGINIAN,
Pearisburg, Va.

DEAR EDITOR:—Here I come again with a small budget of news from away Northwest Missouri, hoping it may be of interest to some of your readers at least. There is a warm place in my heart for Virginia, as I have said before and will say again, it is the place of my birth, the place I first saw the light of day, and because of this I love her rocks and hills, her mountain peaks and craggs, her rivers, creeks and mountain springs, from which I have slaked my boyish thirst upon many a sultry summer day in my chase after old Reynard, who had been robbing my mother's poultry house, and not only robbing, but become so bold he would come in the daytime and catch a big yellow legged pullet, take her by the neck in his mouth and throw her body over his back (for that is the way a fox carries a chicken), and away would go at break neck speed to his den, under a large cliff on a hillside where his family was securely housed, and there he composedly made a a meal of his prey. Upon one of these occasions my older brother and I, called out our dogs (for we had two as good fox dogs as there were to be found in our neighborhood) and laid chase after the chicken thief, and they were not long in chasing Mr. Fox into his den, and we went to work to close the doors of his den, by securely putting in stones so tight that the only way for him to get out was to dig under. We visited the den each day for several days, and we then opened the doors of the den and we found the inmates almost starved, some of them could not stand up and we cut us a pole of some length and went to work to get out our game, and we were not long in securing nine, eight young ones about half grown and one old one. We took our pole and split it at the small end into quarters and put in little wedges and pointed each quarter and then twisted the quarters into the hair of the foxes and by this means we could pull them out. This was cruel treatment to those that still had life in them, and so was it cruel treatment the chickens had received at the hands of old Reynard. Well, two prouder boys would be hard to find than we, but the chickens had quite a rest from Mr. Fox's visits.

I have said, I loved the mountains, rocks, hills and mountain springs; but better by far, do I love the dear people who lived there at the time of which I write, and the few of them that still remain. I still love you with a love which cannot be expressed by human words. Some of them are my kindred in the flesh, others were neighbors of my dear parents, who have long since paid the last debt of nature and gone to try the unalterable laws of an unending eternity, and I do hope and pray that some sweet day I shall be permitted to meet them in that land where no farewell tears are shed and no good byes are said. It was a long time after we left the old state of Virginia, to settle in Indiana, before I visited the place of my birth, yet many things had changed but little. Of course there had been a great change in the people from youth to age. But let me say while there were many things that filled my very soul with joy and gladness. But let me say, the prize I received by going out ranks all others. I now speak of my dear companion, my wife, who is to me all that a wife can be to a husband; and I am glad to say she is well pleased with her home and especially with our neighbors, and I do not say it in a boasting way, but no one ever had better neighbors than we have. I have long since learned the best way to have and keep good neighbors, is to be a good one yourself, following the old rule "Do unto other as you would have them do unto you."

I want to say a few words about the weather such as we have had and are having now. We have had but three or four days of winter so far. Just after the holidays we have had no rain here since early in the summer except a few light showers not enough to wet the ground an inch deep at any one time, and yet we had a fine crop of corn, oats, wheat and hay, and also potatoes and all kinds of garden products. But we had no fruit of any kind to amount to anything. It is costly living on account of the price we have to pay for meat and fuel. Pork 14 to 18 cts., beef the same price, wood four foot per cord $4 50 to $5.50, wood in the pole $1.50 to $2.00 dollars a load, coal $5.50 to $8.00 per ton, hard coal $8.00, soft coal $5.50, and if the weather should continue on until spring as it has been so far, the cost of fuel will not be much more than other winters. Notwithstanding, the high price, we have not burned half as much fuel so far as we have been burning in the same length of time. We, however, are expecting more winter further along, as we have experienced some winters before. However, we are not going to send our mind on events to the future, to borrow trouble or attempt to cross the hill before we get to it.

There is a great deal of borrowed trouble in this old world in which we are now living, which I think is all wrong, as it is written, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Notwithstanding, or beautiful weather all through the fall and winter up to the present, it has not been healthy, and the sickness is of a peculiar nature, there has been a good deal of typhoid fever in different localities and a great many cases of pneumonia, but the doctors claimed in rather a mild form and there has been as many if not more deaths from pneumonia in the same length of time as I have ever known. The patient will take it, we will say by way of explaining how it operates this evening, and in a few hours he becomes very hoarse, like one taking a cold, and he does not complain of being sick, he is not thought to be seriously ill yet within three days he is numbered among the dead. There have been several cases similar to the one I have just mentioned in our immediate vicinity. A few days ago a man came from some distance into our county to visit his son, who lived here, and was sick with pneumonia, and the father took sick on his way here, arriving at his son's on Friday on the following Sunday evening he died. There has been a number of cases where the patient has died in from three to five days after taking.

Both children and adults, have the old fashioned la grippe, and one of the doctors told me a few days past it had come in its worst form. We also have the mumps and measles to contend with. But enough of the dark side.

We would like very much to visit again the old birth place and to see and converse with all who have escaped the raveges of death since we were there, but we cannot tell when that will be whether ever or not, but we love you all just the same.

Some dear friend is sending us the VIRGINIAN for which you have our deepest, warmest and sincerest thanks. It seems like we could not get along without its weekly visits to our home. May God's choicest blessings ever rest upon you whoever you may be.

We were glad to hear the editor had the good pleasure of feasting on turkey during Xmas time. We had a fine dinner on Xmas day and a good visit with the friends who gathered at our home, to partake of the good things which adorned the table, and we are glad to say that each one did ample justice.

I will now close for fear of the waste basket. This has been written because of the love we have for our friends and relatives. I will close by saying, this is a dark, gloomy morning, with about two inches of hail and sleet on the ground, the first we have had this winter. My love and best wishes go out in behalf of our afflicted brother, C. F. Brown, to whom we wrote a few days ago. Our love and best wishes to all of our friends, and may God's richest blessings be upon you all, is the prayer of your true friend in Missouri.

Smallpox Has Already Appeared in Several Counties of the State.

Richmond, Va., Jany. 18, 1911.—The reports of communicable disease received at the State Health Department of the last week indicate that smallpox has already begun its annual visitation of the State. In Alexandria, in Fauquier, in Appomatox, in Lee, in Wise, in Northumberland, in Mecklenburg, in Brunswick, the outbreaks are reported, and the indications are that this disease will soon appear in other counties of the State.

Health officials of the State are not surprised at these outbreaks and will venture no predictions as to the probable extent of the disease during the coming winter. They declare that ample and repeated warning have been gives the people and that every means has been given the people to protect themselves by vaccination. As long as the people decline to be vaccinated, healt officers declare they must accept the consequence and must be prepared for a much more virulent form of samallpox.

TRAINING SCHOOL CHILDREN.

"About how many hours after supper should a child of twelve years (in seventh grade) devote to home work?

"I do not think that children in first and second grades (average age seven and eight) should give any time to school work outside of the school room. Every bit of the work in these grades should be teaching by a trained teacher. No independent study outside of the school room should be required. I do not mean that there are not mothers with such normal training as to be of much great assistance to the teacher in her work, but these cases are few. Even where the mother has proper normal training, it generally happens that the mother shows the child one way which the child believes is the only right way and when the teacher shows the class another way equally correct the child is confused and the parent, all too often, holds to her way of doing things. "There is no royal road to learning."

"In the third grade, one lesson which may take twenty minutes to prepare may be required to be prepared at home, but the teacher must have gone over this lesson with the child until he understands perfectly what is expected of him in the preparation of the lesson.

"In the fourth grade, one or two lessons may be prepared at home, provided that the work can be done by the child in thirty minutes. The child is now only ten years of age, and in the assignment of the lesson the teacher must see to it, that the child knows what to study, and how to study without assistance at home.

"In the fifth grade, average age eleven, one hour of home work may be required, but still the careful assignment of the lesson, so that the child might know definitely what is required of him is necessary.

"In the sixth and seventh, average twelve and thirteen, one hour and a half may be expected of the pupil, but still the teacher must have studied the lesson with the child before he is expected to study alone.

"In the high school, two hours of outside work may be expected of the pupil.

"This is, in my judgement, what should be required of the average child. I realize that a few will be able to do the work of the class in less time than that given, and that some will have to put more time on the work in order to "keep up."

"I am fully aware of the arguments made for no study at home as well as the more rigid demands of those who insist that a child must be able to attack and conquer the text independently."—Willis A. Jenkins in Virginia Journal of Education.

HOW LITTLE WE KNOW.

Several women were discussing modern life the other day and one of them said she felt that we missed a good deal in not being able to know people as our grandmothers did when they took their knitting and went out to spend the afternoon. In the cities this may be true, for today women who have domestic affairs to superintend, and church, social and club relations to maintain, do most of their visiting at clubs or the church society. When calls are made they are generally short and rather unsatisfactory as far as cultivating close acquaintance goes. Many of us can say that we know dozens and dozens of women and yet not one of them knows us as we really are! They know so little of our ambitions and we know so little of their real worth because we meet them only a few moments and under conditions that are not apt to reveal them at their best. Someone has put this condition into very truthful verse. It runs as follows:

Isn't it strange
How little we know
The people we meet in this world below?
How we pass our friends from day to day,
And with only a nod we go on our way.
When there's so much more we each might say—

Isn't it strange
How little we know
What we really feel in this world below?
How we hide, or pass with a merry jest,
The feelings that are true and best;
How much we leave by a clasp of the hand
Or a look, our friends, as best they can,
To find what we mean, and to understand—

Isn't it strange?

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass. Surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unsparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

THROUGH SUFFERING.

God never would send you the darkness
If He thought you could bear the light;
But you would not cling to his guiding hand
If the way were always bright,
And you would not care to walk by faith
Could you always walk by sight.

'Tis true, He has many an anguish
For your sorrowing heart to bear,
And many a cruel thorn-crown
For your aching head to wear;
He knows how few would reach heaven at all
If pain did not guide them there.

So He sends you the blinding darkness,
And the furnace of seven-fold heat;
'Tis the only way, believe me,
To keep you close to His feet;
For 'tis always so easy to wander
When our lives are glad and sweet.

Then nestle your hand in your Father's,
And sing, if you can, as you go;
Your song may cheer some one behind you
Whose courage is sinking low,
And—well, if your lips do quiver—
God will love you the better, so.

FOUND DOCUMENTS 2,800 YEARS OLD.

Wonderful Discoveries of Ancient Hebrew Remains Unearthed by Recent Explorers.

New light on the past comes into the world, in these days of research, with exciting frequency and importance. The imagination is stirred when we obtain real documents about the remote history of our race. 1910 brought to knowledge certain inscriptions in which the ink is so well preserved that the readings are subject to no doubt, although they have lain in damp soil for twenty eight centuries. Harvard University began in 1908 the exploration of the large hill in Central Palestine which marks the site of the ancient Hebrew capital, Samaria. The results of the three years' work are outlined by Professor David G. Lyon in the current number of the "Harvard Theological Review." In the first year there were unearthed a Roman statue of heroic size, a well preserved Roman altar, a stairway about eighty feet broad, and the foundation walls of a building thought to belong to the temple which Herod built in honor of Augustus. The next year proved that the temple really was the work of Herod, and disclosed older towers of the Greek period, occupying the site of still older Hebrew towers. 1910 brought to light the inscriptions already referred to, which are on about seventy-five fragments of pottery, in the Phenician script. They are brief memoranda concerning oil and wine. The names of the men which appear on them, as owners of the jars or of the vineyards, are often compounds, including the names of gods, and it is interesting to observe that Baal and Jehovah appeal with about equal frequency. The Book of Kings reports a great development of Baal worship in Israel during the rule of Ahab, and it is to this reign that the writings are ascribed. They are the earliest Hebrew writings which have ever been found, and in amount they exceed greatly all known ancient Hebrew inscriptions. They are also the first Palestinian records of this nature to be found. It is thought that thousands of such records may still exist in Samaria, including business documents, giving records of sale, barter, contract, all phases of private and social transactions, and probably historical records by the court annalists of the kings of Israel.

As Professor Lyon says, the claims of Samaria, in comparison with Greek and Roman sites, are particularly strong, since remains from classical antiquity are abundant, whereas this work in Samaria is the first to bring to light important remains of early Hebrew times.—Collier's Weekly.

TWO AWFUL MYSTERIES.

BY W. H. H. PEARSON.

How relentlessly the stream of time bears us onward. A little while we journey on together, sometimes in sunshine, but more often in shadow, and then some one drops out of our band and is seen and heard by us no more. Life, so bright and hopeful at its commencement, loses a part of its beauty and gladness with the death of each friend. Father, mother, sisters, one after another, lay aside, like a wornout garment, the burdens of this deeply awful mystery we call life, and fall into that other awful mystery we call death. The sun shines, the refreshing showers fall, the flowers bloom, the birds sing and the relentless stream still bears us onward. But never again for us will the sun shine with the brightness it once possessed, never again will the showers fall as cool and refreshing, the flowers seem less beautiful and sweet. The sounds of active life, the low, weird music of the perfume-laden zephyr as it softly floats through forest and over the field in the holy, mystic calm of the summer night, the murmur of the moonlit river as it moves onward toward the mighty ocean, all things once so pleasant and cheering now seem but to mock us in our woe.

And still the stream of time bears us relentlessly on. We are bound for somewhere but where we do not know. When the voyage is ended shall we reach some green, flowery isle and find rest, peace and contentment forevermore? Will our dead friends and our dead hopes ever be restored to us? How much we have lost, how many hopes we have buried, how many longings for things higher and better, are still only longings. Shall we find them some time in the future, will our hopes and longings turn to fruition? Or will the onflowing storm relentlessly cast us upon some chill, desolate shore, there to spend an eternity of unhappiness? We do not know. We can only hope for the best.

"If a man die shall he live again?" The question was asked long ago, it has been asked thousands of times since and we are still waiting for the answer. From the living we can get hopeful but not positive answers. From the dead we get no answer at all, because they are dead. And in vain do we go to Nature for an answer. The sun, moon and stars that for thousands of years have looked down on the living and the dying have no answer for us.

But we believe the answer is soon to be given and given so positively and plainly that a mistake will be an impossibility. When Jesus comes and sets up that Kingdom for which so long we have been praying, then the lost will be restored, then the dead will live again. But till then, though me must grope in partial darkness, let us hope that God is doing everything for the best and will in his own time turn darkness into light and mourning into rejoicing. [Christ lives! Why this foreboding and doubt?—Hicks.]

Nagging the Teachers.

Perhaps no class of people meet with so much or so severe criticism as teachers. Much of criticism is unjust and exists solely because parents and others listen to unverified reports and do nothing to acquaint themselves with the real inner workings of the school room.—Rural Retreat Times.

SUNDAY EVENING THOUGHTS.

CONTRIBUTED.

"Every heart has its secret sorrow which the world knows not, and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad."

Oh, why will we be sad? God has so graciously promised to be with us, why are we sad?

A question brought out in the lesson this morning, asked personally of each one seems to explain why we are sad.

Why are you not a better Christian than you are? One said because she let worldly things crowd the love of God out of her heart, another because she did not try, another because of lack of faith, and another because she let little things discourage her.

Christ says, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me."

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do that the Father may be glorified in the Son." Oh, let us not be sad but "just go on smiling." "Sad soul, oh, why this vain repining for that which might have been, just go on smiling.

Do friends desert you in your need and loved ones pass beyond your ken, just go on smiling.

Smiles will smooth life's rugged way far more than idle tears."

When we sin it is right that our hearts should reproach us and that we should be sorry but oh, let us not be sad to the extent of our sadness causing us to lose an opportunity to do good, as we have in some instances.

Let us just go on smiling and take this precious promise to our hearts, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you"

Hill's Tribute to Lee.

The following extract is from an address by Hon. Ben Hill, of Georgia, on Gen. Robt. E. Lee:

"He was a foe without hate; a friend without treachery; a soldier without cruelty; a victor without oppression; a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vices; a private citizen without wrong; a neighbor without reproach; a christian without hypocricy; and a man without guile. He was a Caesar without his ambition; Frederick without his tyranny; Napoleon without his selfishness, and Washington without his reward. He was obedient to authority as a servant and royal in authority as a true king. He was gentle as a woman in life, and modest and pure as a virgin in thought; watchful as a Roman vestal in duty; submissive to the law as Socrates, and grand in battle as Archilles."

This is the Honest Truth.

Phoenix, Ariz., is such a hot place than an ordinary furnace fire freezes before it can work up to the natural ozone. The hot air kills germs and makes people so healthy that they can't die.

One old fellow of Phoenix wanted to die. He was tired of living. But he couldn't die to save his life, which is odd, isn't it? Determined to die, however, he crossed the border into New Mexico and stole a horse.

It merely goes to show that necessity is the mother of invention.—Baltimore Sun.

As George folded the fair young creature to his heart a dull, crackling sound smote his ear.

"Ah! It's goodby to those cigars in my vest pocket," he said grimly, "but hang the expense at a moment like this."—Judge.

NAME SUGGESSOR TO TEWKSBURY.

Dr. W. E. Jennings of Bedford Made Resident Physician at Catawba.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 25, 1911.—The place made vacant at the Catawba Sanatorium by the resignation of Dr. W. D. Tewksbury as Resdent Physician, was filled today by the appointment of Dr. W. E. Jennings of Bedford now assistant physician at Catawba.

Dr. Tewksburg resigned a few days ago to accept an appointment as superintendent of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Hospital. His resignation follows an administration of more than a year and his decision to leave Virginia is deeply regretted by officers of the State Health Department. In an official statement given out today by Commissioner Williams, Dr. Tewksbury's work is highly commended and he is credited with much of the success which has attended the work of the Catawba Sanatorium.

Dr. Jennings, is appointed by the Commissioner to hold office until the next meeting of the State Board of Health, at which time a permanent resident physician will be chosen. Dr. Jennings is declared to be a favorite of the patients as well as a most competent physician and diagnostician.

The appointment of Dr. Jennings at this time is particularly important in view of the recent enlargement of the Catawba Sanatorium. More than 100 patients are now being treated, and the opportunities for scientific work are regarded as very large by physicians generally.

MORE INSPECTIONS.

Dr. Flannagan Reports Hotels of Valley in Good Condition.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 25, 1911.—Dr. Roy K. Flannagan, Chief Inspector of the State Board of Health, returned to Richmond today from a tour of inspection of the hotels located in the Valley of Virginia. He reports a commendable spirit of co operation among the hotel proprietors of that section and finds that they are conforming closely to the provision of law. Most of hotels inspected are in an excellent condition and appear to be flourishing. Many improvements have been made, according to Dr. Flannagan, to meet the demands of the automobile traffic along the Valley Pike and sanitary conditions in most instances are good.

More Smallpox Reported to Health Department.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 25, 1911.—Fresh outbreaks of smallpox have been reported to the State Board of Health during the last few days from various sections of State and the mend for vaccine has noticeably increased. According to the physicians reporting to the Health Department, the smallpox thus far occuring in the State is of rather a mild type and patients are not suffering seriously from the disease. This condition, however, rather alarms the inspectors of the Health Department, who declare that under conditions existing in the State, the milder forms of smallpox, where vaccination is not practiced, frequently lead to very virulent forms of the disease and to dangerous outbreaks. Vaccination warnings are being distributed very widely.

Governor Mann Appoints Committee to Represent the State at Atlanta Meeting.

Richmond, January, 1911.—Realizing that the eyes of the business world will be focused on the meeting of the Southern Commercial Congress at Atlanta, March 8th, 9th and 10th, Gov. Mann has placed Virginia in the front rank by appointing a Committee of influential business men to see that the Old Dominion is properly represented at this great gathering of the most potent forces in the commercial world.

Gov. Mann is Chairman of the Committee, and Wm. M. Martin, Secretary of the Chamber or Commerce at Petersburg, is Secretary. Other members of the Committee, are:

I. T. VanPatten, Portsmouth, Va.
W. S. Copeland, Newport News, Va.
C. H. Shoop, Suffolk, Va.
T. F. Heath, Petersburg, Va.
John C. Freeman, Richmond, Va.
C. E. Michaels, Roanoke, Va.
A. B. Carrington, Danville, Va.
T. G. Burch, Martinsville, Va.
Archer H. Williams, Wytheville, Va.
Armistead C. Gordon, Staunton, Va.
W. E. Allen, Covington, Va.
Harry F. Byrd, Winchester, Va.

The Southern Commercial Congress promises to be the biggest event in the commercial history of the South, and will place this section in her right light in the commercial and industrial world.

It comes just fifty years after the states of the South were uniting for a struggle of arms. It typifies a new union of the South, along constructive lines of commerce and business endeavor so that the states of the South, vieing with each other in wise use of their great natural heritage of resources may, through their prosperity and growth, give added strength to the nation of which they are an integral part.

Not only will thousands of public spirited business men interested in the development of the South as a whole attend, but the President of the United States will be there, bringing with him two of his Cabinet, Secretaries Dickinson and Willson; Ex-President Roosevelt; the majority of the Southern Governors, Governor Woodrow Wilson, the French Ambassador, and scores of other notablee.

Gov. Mann's example has been followed by the Governors of Tennessee, Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, West Virginia, Kentucky, South Carolina and North Carolina. The entire programme will be mailed upon application to the Southern Commercial Congress, Washington, D. C.

On last Friday, at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Quesenberry, was a scene of pleasure, the occasion being a party given by their son Clyde to a number of his friends, most of them being high school pupils. All kinds of games were indulged in, and a delightful course of refreshments were served. All report a delightful time.

Venus and Minerva, as a rule, do not act harmoniously together, and are generally in opposition and so, when the one is in perihelion the other is in apogee and vice versa and so on and et cetera. Hence, astronomically speaking, and judging from the number of young people's parties about here recently and the number of sentimental novels read, we should say that in our educational firmament Venus is now very much in the ascendant.

Our esteemed West Virginia cotemporary, the Border Watchman, in a very strong editorial charges, that in the recent election of Watson and Chilton to the U. S. Senate by the legislature of that state, that money and threats were freely used to secure the election of the successful candidates. If these charges are warranted by the facts in the case and it appears that there is evidence that they are, then another strong argument is furnished in favor of the election of U. S. Senators by a direct vote of the people.

There was a large crowd of relatives and friends of both bride and groom present. The attendants were Miss Chloe Morgan with Lewis T. Bailey, Miss Mattie Bailey with J. W. Lester, Miss Cecil Wilson with Fred H. Bailey, Miss Nontie Bailey with Maxie E. Morgan.

The Secret of Youth

Do you ever wonder how you can remain young, or why other women older than you, look younger than you do?

The secret can be put in a few words: "Preserve your health, and you will preserve your youth."

By "health" we mean not alone physical health, but nerve health, as, sometimes, magnificently strong-looking women are nervous wrecks.

But whether you are weak physically or nervously, you need a tonic, and the best tonic for you is Cardui.

It builds strength for the physical and nervous systems. It helps put flesh on your bones and vitality into your nerves.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"My mother," writes Mrs. Z. L. Adcock, of Smithville, Tenn., "is 44 years old and is passing through the change of life.

"She was irregular and bloated and suffered terribly. My father stepped over to the store and got her a bottle of Cardui, which she took according to directions and now she is up, able to do her housework and says she feels like a new woman." Try Cardui in your own case.

GENIUS IN JAIL.

Sir Walter Raleigh, during his imprisonment of eleven years wrote his celebrated work, "The History of the World." The evening perceding his execution he penned the following lines:

'E'en such is time, that takes on trust,
Our youth, our joy, our all we have,
And pays us with but earth and dust;
Who, in dark and silent grave,
When we have wandered all our ways,
Shut up the story of our days,
But from this earth, this grave, this dust
My God shall raise me up, I trust!"

In 1642. Richard Lovelace, imprisoned by the Roundheads, wrote a poem to Althea ending with the beautiful stanza:

'Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds, innocent and quiet, take
That for an hermitage.
If I have freedom in my love,
And in my soul am free,
Angels alone, that soar above,
Enjoy such liberty!"

Mary, Queen of Scots, just before tragic death, after eighteen years of inprisonment, wrote these lines:

"Oh my God and my Lord, I have trusted in Thee!
O Jesus, my Saviour, now liberate me.
In my enemy's power, in afflictions sad hour.
I languish for Thee,
In sorrowing, weeping and bending the knee,
I adore, and implore Thee, to liberate me."

James Montgomery, the Scotch poet imprisoned in York Castle for the cause of civil liberty, wrote a song to a robin visiting his prison window, beginning:

"Welcome, cheery little stranger
Welcome to my lone retreat,
Here secure from every danger
Hop about, and chirp and eat,
Robin, how I envy thee,
Happy child of liberty."

Madame Guyon, for four years a prisoner in the French Bastile, wrote much of prose and poetry. The following extracts are justly celebrated:

"My cage confines me round
Abroad I cannot fly
But though my wing is closely bound,
My heart's at liberty.
My prison walls cannot control
The flight, the freedom of the soul.

Oh! it is good to soar,
These bolts and bars above,
To him whose purpose I adore;
Whose providence I love;
And in Thy might will to find
The joy, the freedom of the mind"

Here is a beautiful poetical passage from Bunyan, in the Bedford prision:

"He that is down need fear no fall,
He that is low, no pride:
He that is humble ever shall Have God to be his guide.

"I am content with what I have,
Little be it or much;
And Lord! contentment still I crave,
Because Thou savest such."

What we need today most of all, perhaps, is a heroic gospel preached by the heroic men—men who are large enough of heart to understand any field and preach the gospel to any people and men who are great enough of brain to preach a great gospel, such as heroic men will hear. Our Lord was the greatest of all heroes. He worked of nothing, even without honor, and did in the face of persistent opposition, and then died a voluntry and shameful death in order to finish his work. He was no weakling, bat a strong, heroic charicter.—Midland Methodist.

VIRGINIA COLONELS IN HEROIC ARRAY.

The Washington Times makes much of the mobilization of Virginia's justly celebrated colonels, on a recent occasion at the State capital, saying in part:

For more than a year no rumor of the foe's advance gave Governor William Hodges Mann of Virginia an excuse for mobilizing those justly celebrated Colonels whose uniforms are the golden wonder of the Old Dominion. In spite of the prudent chief executive's special care in securing an increase in the number of his staff officers, who like young Casabianca, are at once beartiful and brave, no tyrant arose at whom he could hurl hot words of defiance and a living mass of bright embroidery, designed by the most exclusive military tailors, there could be no doubt as to the fullness in the chest and the fit around the shoulders, and the sartorial perfection of the individual uniforms down to the last gaiter button, but there was no means of telling how the general color scheme would fit into an anverage landscape or harmonize with the Persian rugs of a drawing room.

The situation had been growing more and more acute ever since Governor Crothers called out his beaux sabrers and helped the army review the flying machines at Halethorpe. The Virginia lamp of chivalry gave out troubled and uncertain flame.

Suddenly, a few days ago, the Virginia colonels conceived the happy idea of giving themselves a party and inviting the governor. The meager details which have leaked out indicate that the Richmond club, at which the function was held, never saw so much dare-devil courage garnished in such rich array. Continuous walls of mirrors multiplied their trim, impressive figures until a few score sides became a battalion. By midnight they seemed a division and at gray dawn an army corps. Three veterans who had seen service before at a military wedding were scarcely distinguishedable from the apt debutants when the evening was over. Governor Mann was pleased with the knightliest of Virginia's knightly race, and they were pleased with themselves. Richmond has not felt so secure since the battle of Seven Pines.

Our Washington contemporary pays a fine tribute to the colonels of the present administration, a fine body of representative Virginians in which Roanoke has representation in Colonel James D. Johnston. In the previous administration, too, Roanoke had representation in Colonel James P. Woods, and, it may be, there are others of former administrations.—Roanoke Evening World.

GRAPE CULTURE.

BY H. L. PHLEGAR.

Care should be taken to select land with a southern, or southern and western exposure, and it should have good drainage.

Prepare the land as if for corn. Furrow off in rows eight feet apart, and plant the vines ten or twelve feet apart.

Plant in the spring, using nothing but the best two-year old stock.

When vines are planted, cut off all shoot but one or two and prune them back to three or four buds.

The foregoing should be done as soon in the spring as the land is in proper condition to plow and work properly.

When the ground is soft, but not so wet as to injure by tramping through it, drive a stake to each vine, eighteen inches to two feet from same and in the furrow using a stake of sufficient length and size to meet the requirements, as follows: Stretch two wires about the number of ordinary telephone wire alongside the stakes, and fasten to each with staples: let the lower wire be about thirty inches from the ground and the upper one two feet above the lower.

This done, cultivate with a shovel-plow, and hoe as for corn.

As soon as vines grow long enough, lay up on first wire or tie with twine to hold them up.

Second Spring.

Prune and tie up vines in January and February.

Cut all the sprouts off close to the stalk but one or two, and those that are long enough can be tied to the first wire.

Plow land with shovel. Plow early, before it bakes or gets hard, and cultivate same as corn.

Continue to prune in January and February, and continue to cultivate as for corn; stopping the plowing about same time as in case of corn. Keep thoroughly cleaned of weeds.

By the third spring most of the vines should be to the second wire, and a very good crop should be produced.

Early in the spring give the vines one to two forks of good stable manure, throwing it so that in plowing and hoeing it will work about the vines.

In purchasing the young vines, much care should be used in selecting the best varieties. For our climate, the Concord is desirable. I would suggest planting a few of the Catawba and the Niagaras, but the money is in the kind that will bear and mature well and will give the best yield in weight, and I have had much the best results with the Concord.

After the vines have been planted, staked and wired, the cost of maintenance is comparatively small, until marketing. With the little vineyard of one acre, which I first planted, there was a cost of about $25 up to the fourth year, and I sold from it more than $200 worth of grapes.

If reasonable judgment and care are used, grape culture is a profitable industry. — Southern Planter.

There was some insurance on the house, but as we are informed there is not enough to cover the loss.

DEATH UNDER THE AUTOMOBILE.

Son of Former Pearisburg Citizen Meets Tragic End.

From the Los Angeles (Cal.) Daily Times, Jan. 21st, we note the death of Louis McLure Woolwine, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Woolwine, of Los Angeles, California.

At about two o'clock in the morning, Mr. Woolwine, Miss Rosalind Harrington, a New York debutante, and Mrs. John N. Drummond, the chaperone, were returning from a charity ball in an automobile, and going at a moderate speed, when a truck wagon in charge of a driver, who, it is thought was asleep at the time, suddenly came out in front of them from some shadows cast by trees. The obstruction was seen too late to avert the accident and the automobile crashed into it, with the result that the machine overturned, catching Mr. Woolwine and Miss Harrington under it; the steering wheel resting on Mr. Woolwine's breast, causing death in about forty minutes. Miss Harrington was not seriously injured and Mrs. Drummond, being thrown clear of the wreckage, was but slightly injured.

Many of the citizens of Pearisburg and Giles county, will remember Mr. William D. Woolwine, father of the young man, whose tragic death is here related as a citizen of Pearisburg in other days, and that he came to our town when but a young boy and grew to manhood, and went to Nashville, Tenn., where he lived for some years, going from there to California, where, by his shrewd business ability he has become one of the most successful business men on the Pacific Slope.

It was but last summer that he, in company with his wife, paid a visit to his old home.

Louis, the son who was the victim of the sad accident was killed on the morning of his 21st birthday, and the large and beautiful home of his parents was decorated to celebrate the event when the accident occurred.

The most fitting words of sympathy, however lovingly and tenderly expressed, can be but an ineffectual balm for the bleeding hearts occasioned by such distressing circumstances, but Will Woolwine knows, that of all the words of consolation offered now, none will go out to him and his most estimable wife, that are more genuinely sincere than those that go out to them from his friends at his boyhood home.

MARRIED.

Rogersville, Tenn., Feb. 1.—A pretty home wedding was solemnized at the southern methodist parsonage, at one o'clock p. m., on last Tuesday when Miss Mellie Owen became the charming bride of Mr. Frank St. John, of Knoxville. Rev. R A. Owen, father of the bride, officiating.

The wedding was a quiet one, witnessed only by a few intimate friends of the bride and groom. They received a number of beautiful and valuable presents, enough in fact to cover two tables.

No more beautiful or accomplished bride ever left Rogersville, than Mrs. St. John, and the handsome husband is one of the rising young business men of Knoxville.

The bride and groom left on the afternoon train for a trip to Washington and New York, and after their return they will be at home to their friends in Knoxville.—Rogersville Herald.

Tribute of Respect from Providence Sunday School and Epworth League.

It is with sad hearts that we record the death of our dear and much beloved member, Mrs. J. H. Givens, formerly Miss Annie Johnston, which occurred Dec. 9, 1910.

She had been a faithful member of our Sunday School from infancy and of our League since its organization. She loved the Sunday School and League work, and was always ready and willing to take an active part in any thing for their advancement. To those who knew her and loved her, her bright, sweet face comes in memory, and words cannot express how much we miss her when we assemble, most especially when the songs are announced. While her voice is silent here, we can think of her as singing in the great choir of angel's around God's throne. She is not dead, but living in a higher and nobler sense. The angles silently and quietly kissed her from earth and escorted her to the home of the blessed.

The sudden removal of this bright Christian life from our midst, leaves a vacancy that is deeply felt in the home and community.

"Oh, 'tis hard, so hard to part with a sister we all held so dear,
For some good purpose she has been taken unknown to mortals here:
The golden streets she is walking and beckoning her loved ones come,
To that sweet Paradise of love, to make their eternal home."

RESOLVED 1st, That by these resolutions we do testify to a deep sense of our sad loss, but bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well. It is hard to understand these things, but we know that all things work together for good to them that love God

2nd, That we extend to the bereaved husband and family our most sincere sympathy, and pray that the Great Comforter may sustain them and that ultimately they may be reunited where there is no parting.

3rd, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Sunday School and Epworth League, and a copy be sent to the PEARISBURG VIRGINIAN and the Midland Methodist for publication.

Worked Off String-Halt Stallion.

What is likely to prove a suit of considerable interest has been brought in the circuit court of this county. The controversy as we have been informed is that one Martin, an agent for John Crawford, sold a stallion to a number of gentlemen at Newport in Giles county. The horse was warranted to be sound, but the purchasers now claim that he is string-halt, and by careful grooming this fact was concealed until a few days after the purchase. The purchasers have brought suit for breach of warranty, and Crawford being a non-resident, have levied an attachment on another horse at Blacksburg. Mr. M. P. Farrier, of the firm of Williams & Farrier, of Pearisburg, came here to look after bringing the suit and preparing the attachment, and has associated the firm of Johnson & Roop with his firm.—Christiansburg Messenger.

Dissolution of Partnership.

The partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned and F. E. Walker, under the name of Shumate & Walker Bros., is this day dissolved.

All persons holding claims against said partnership will present the same to the undersigned, and all persons indebted to said partnership will please settle at once.

A Good Example

"I am a good example," writes Mrs. R. L. Bell, of McAlester, Okla., "of what Cardui will do for suffering women.

"I suffered with my head and back, for over six years, and although I tried everything, I never could get anything to do me any good, until I began to take Cardui.

"Cardui has surely helped me and built me up and I am so thankful that I have found something that will do me good. I feel so much stronger and better than I have in a long time."

It is well to make up your mind before you are sick what medicine you will take when you are sick.

Take CARDUI

J 47

The Woman's Tonic

You will be glad to take it when you are tired, miserable and when life seems a weary grind. It will put new thoughts into your head, fresh courage into your mind.

If not sick now, at least burn Cardui on to the pages of your memory, so that when you are sick you will ask for it without thinking.

If sick or weak, get a bottle today. At all druggists.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

[This exquisite poem, by Henry Kirke White, of England, has been given place among the nobler hymns of the Church. Its author's career was singularly brief and troubled, and Byron's noblest poem has paid tribute to his genius and sorrow.]

When, marshaled on the nightly plain,
The glittering host bestud the sky,
One star alone of all the train
Can fix the sinner's wandering eye.

Hark! hark! to God the chorus breaks,
From every host, from every gem;
But one alone the Saviour speaks—
It is the Star of Bethlehem.

Once on the raging seas I rode,
The storm was loud, the night was dark,
The ocean yawn'd, and rudely blow'd
The wind that toss'd my foundering bark.

Deep horror then my vitals froze;
Death-struck, I ceased the tide to stem;
When suddenly a star arose—
It was the Star of Bethlehem.

It was my guide, my light, my all:
It bade my dark forebodings cease;
And through the storm and dangers' thrall
It led me to the port of peace.

Now safely moor'd, my perils o'er,
I'll sing, first in night's diadem,
Forever and for evermore,
The Star—the Star of Bethlehem!

ERRORS IN MARRIAGE.

Fourteen Seen by Him and Fourteen Seen by Her.

BY THE HUSBAND.

To tell her how to run her club.

To bank his money in her name.

To expect her to like his female relatives.

To forget to praise her.

To expect her to be grown up.

To expect to have the last word.

To take her opinions too seriously.

To forget that she will change her mind.

To let her open his letters.

To borrow her umbrella.

To get mad because his bed is not tucked in at the foot.

To tell her how his mother used to cook.

To hesitate to tell her where he is going and where he has been.

To work for her so hard that he has no time to devote to her.

BY THE WIFE.

To ask a man where he is going when he goes out.

To ask him where he has been when he comes back.

To tell him what she would do if she were in his place.

To tell him everything and thus reveal her limitations.

To ask him to put on her rubbers.

To allow his stock of handkerchiefs and socks to get low.

To buy bargain neckties.

To tell him that he is good looking.

To expect to have the last word.

To let him know how old she is.

To tell him what her mother says.

To allow him to edit her letters.

To economize at the expense of her personal appearance.

To expect him to like her best friend's husband.—Life.

A man went into a store to buy a fountain pen. The young saleswoman gave him one to try, and he covered several sheets of paper with the words tempus fugit. The obliging saleslady offered him another pen. "Perhaps," she said, "you'd like one of these stubs better, Mr. Fugit."—Everybody's Magazine.

CATAWBA CROWDED TO ITS CAPACITY.

Twenty Five Now on Waiting List Despite Enlargements.

Catawda, Va., Feb. 8, 1911.—Despite the recent enlargement of the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium in the Catawba Valley, the Resident Physician has reported to the State Health Commissioner that every bed is occupied and that additional patients are clamoring for admittance. This announcement has led to many expressions of regret and to a lengthy conference among the Sanatorium officers during the last visit of the Health Commissioner

Following the appropriation made by the last session of Assembly, several new pavilions were erected at the Sanatorium, under plans which called for a maximum number of beds. By this means, the capacity of the sanatorium was increased during the autumn to 110 beds, and it was hoped that these, with the normal changes and cures among the patients, would be sufficient to accommodate all applicants within reasonable limits. The popularity and success of the Sanatorium, however, has brought a flood of applications during recent weeks.

Before leaving for Richmond today, Health Commissioner Williams discussed the situation at the Sanatorium and expressed his deep regret that the State could not offer ample accommodations for the many patients who needed treatment. "It may be possible "he said" to build an additional pavilion, though our grounds are extremely limited. We shall do the best we can, however, and want the people to know that every energy will be strained to find quarter for those who wish treatment."

INSPECTING OYSTERS.

State and Federal Health Authorities Co-operating to Insure Sanitary Supply.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 1, 1911.—Assistant State Health Commissioner A. W. Freeman has left for the Potomac River and the Northern Neck to co-operate with representative of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service in an inspection of the oyster beds of that section.

The State Health Department, in taking up this work is carrying out a policy adopted two years ago, and is striving to aid the oyster industry by a careful inspection of all oyster rocks from which bivalves are sent to market. The Department, according to Commissoner Williams, has found that many false reports regarding the condition of the industry have been circulated, and, while promptly ordering the abandonment of all unsanitary oyster rocks, has been able to give certificates of inspection to a vast majority of the tongers of the State. "Virginia oysters are unexcelled," declared Commissioner Williams today and we are co-operating with the Federal authorities in protecting the industry against misrepresentationand against the activities of a few men who are sending unsanitary oysters to the market.

Tenth Annual Convention of Virginia Anti-Saloon League.

The Tenth Annual Convention of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League will convene in the First Presbyterian Church, Newport News, Virginia, on Tuesday evening, February 21st, at 7:30 p. m., and will continue its sessions until Thursday night, Feb. 23rd.

The Convention City.

The convention city will prove a place of exceptionable interest to delegates and visitors to the convention. Situated on Hampton Roads, within easy access of Norfolk, Old Point, and the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, with its own great ship building plant and shipping interests, the city will afford many interesting side attractions to the convention.

The Convention Auditorium.

The First Presbyterian church of Newport News, through its pastor, Dr. E. T. Wellford, one of the members of our state executive committee, and its official board, has given us a most cordial invitation to hold the convention sessions in their commodious and attractive auditorium. In addition to the convention hall, the Sunday school and committee rooms of the church will afford ample accommodation for the meeting of all committees and other smaller gatherings which may be desirable to hold in connection with the convention.

The Convention Body.

The convention will be composed of a large representative body of the temperance people of Virginia, which means a great aggregation of character and brains. From far Southwest Virginia, from the northern section of the state, from Piedmont, Southside, Eastern Shore and Tidewater, there will come a great host of serious and thoughtful men and women intensely intent upon one purpose—the destruction of the legalized liquor traffic in Old Virginia.

The Convention Program.

The program for the convention is almost completed, and the people who gather to discuss and plan for a more vigorous crusade against the saloon will have many phases of the liquor problem presented to them by men of prominence, from various professions and callings of life, in an interesting and illuminating manner.

Among the speakers invited and expected to be present are Hon. John G. Woolley, of the Hawaiian Islands; Dr. P. A. Baker, superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League, and Rev. S. E. Nickolson, superintendent of national legislation, who will shed light on some phases of the interstate and nationwide temperance warfare.

Hons. Carter Glass, R. E. Byrd and Thos. Whitehead will speak on the various legal phases of State-wide prohibition and the enforcement of state liquor laws.

Revs H. D. C. Maclachlan, D. D.; G. W. McDaniel, D. D., and other great pulpit orators will deliver popular addresses.

Rev. W. S. Neighbors, D. D., of Bristol; Rev. H. E. Johnson, D. D., of Franklin; Rev. G. W. Perryman, D. D., of Norfolk, and Elder John Wayland, of Harrisonburg, will bring messages from their respective sections of the state on the burning question of State-wide prohibition.

The League president, superintendent, secretary and district superintendents will deliver interesting addresses and reports.

These are only some of the good things that are in store for the attendance upon the convention sessions.

Delegates to the Convention.

According to the plan adopted by the Anti-Saloon League, every clergyman in the state is a delegate to the convention. Every Sunday school is requested to appoint one delegate. Each county and local league is requested to send four delegates. In addition thereto, every other temperance organization is cordially invited and urged to send fraternal delegates.

Some Asides.

There will be some new features attached to the convention this year. Our state attorney, Hon. Thos. Whitehead, will be asked at one session to conduct a question box on "The Enforcement of State Liquor Laws."

The Shenandoah Collegiate Institute male quartette will be requested to furnish special music for the occasion. In addition to the music furnished by the quartette, the choir and musical director of the First Presbyterian church will render some special numbers.

Instead of the usual badge, each delegate will be presented with a white carnation to be worn during the convention.

On Thursday afternoon we are planning to give the delegates to the convention a pleasure trip to the great Newport News Ship Building Yards, where they will have an opportunity to see ships of various styles and sizes, including some of the United States dread-naughts in the process of construction.

The railroads will be requested to give special rates to delegates attending the convention.

Everybody Come.

We want this convention to be the greatest in the history of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League. For several years our conventions have been growing in attendance, the one held in Richmond last winter being the most largely attended of any held heretofore. We want the delegation at Newport News in 1911 to be twice as great in numbers as the Richmond convention of 1910. To this end we urge that every appointed delegate be sure to attend. Where the distances are great, let representative members of congregations bear the expenses of their pastor, and let the local and county leagues bear the expenses of their delegates.

Let us have a convention of such numbers and influence as shall carry to the nethermost corners of the state with a new force and vigor the Anti-Saloon League slogan — The Saloon Must Go.—American Issue.

Didn't Move the Agent.

A Pennsylvania farmer whose hog was killed by a train wrote to the company's claim agent for a settlement. He penned his commuication thus:

Dear Sir—My razorback strolled down your track a week ago today. Your twenty-nine came down the line and snuffed his life away. You can't blame me, the hog, you see, slipped through a cattle gate, so kindly pen a check for ten, the debt to liquidate."

He received the following reply:

Old twenty-nine came down the line and killed your hog, we know, but razorbacks on railroad tracks quite often meet with woe. Therefore, we cannot send the check for which you pine. Just plant the dead, place o'er its head, 'Here lies a foolish swine."

Nol Pros Ends Ocey Snead Case.

Newark, N. J., February 7.—Judge Ten Eyck this afternoon on motion of Prosecutor Mott nolle prossed the indictment against Mrs. Mary W. Snead for the alleged murder of Ocey W. M. Snead, who was found dead in a bath tub at East Orange, and on motion of counsel the judge made an order releasing the woman from custody.

The order was given to Mrs. Snead's son, Albert C. Snead, who went at once to the county jail to take his mother away. Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, who was recently sentenced to seven years' imprisonment in connection with the death of Ocey Snead, will be taken to State Prison on Thursday next. The third sister, Virginia Wardlaw, who was indicted with the two others, died before her case came to trial.

We do not admire the man who swears and curses, neither have we the greatest respect for the man who spits tobacco juice on sidewalks, depot platforms or other public places, but the man who doesn't embellish each sentence with a ripping, tearing, yard-long oath may not be so good and religous as it appears, but simply lacking in rhetorical ability and imagination.—Rural Retreat Times.

Little Mary went into the country on a visit to her grandmother. Walking in the garden, she chanced to spy a peacock, a bird she had never seen. She ran quickly into the house and cried out: "O, grandma, come out and see! There's an old chicken in full bloom."—Ex.

With the living expenses so outrageously high, it is difficult to make both ends meet. As a rule, and by compulsion, we make one end oatmeal and the other end fried potatoes, and in the middle we are sometimes lucky to have smoked sausage.—Rural Retreat Times.

The dollar you owe your editor is just as much a debt as the dollar you owe your merchant—and he needs the money just as bad. So, when settling up, don't forget your newspaper subscription.

McComas Chapter, U. D. C. will meet with Mrs. Bernard Mason, Saturday, February 25, 1911. At the last meeting of the Chapter it was decided that each member should pay an additional fifty cents to defray some necessary expenses, so you are urgently requested to be present at the appointed time, and come prepared to pay your yearly dues, as well as the additional tax.

MRS. W. T. DUNCAN, Treas.,
McComas Chapter, U. D. C.

Be sure to attend the Base Ball entertainment at the High School Auditorium, Friday night. Admission, 15 and 25 cents. They promise to give you a first-class entertainment, and if you want to enjoy yourself you had better attend.

Master Robert King entertained a number of his little friends, Feb. 4th, on his 7th birthday. The table was beautifully decorated, a large white cake holding seven red candles representing seven years adorned the center of the table. Games were indulged in, after which refreshments were served. One and all report a nice time.

In another column will be found the advertisement of the Duncan Implement Co., of Rich Creek, Va. This Company carries a full line of International Harvester goods, grain drills, wagons, buggies, surreys, harness, pumps, plows, weeders, acme harrows, saw mill supplies, etc., which they buy in car lots, and guarantee you a square deal. Read their ad.

Pretty little Miss Kate Shelton gave a party to her young friends and schoolmates on Monday evening, the 13th, in honor of her 13th birthday. That the juvenile participants had a great, glorious and happy time, goes without saying. It was a great success despite it was a 13th birthday on the 13th of the month, and it will be hard to convince any of the young people who attended that 13 is an unlucky number.

We are in receipt of a letter enclosing one dollar with the request that we send the VIRGINIAN to Mr. Marion Guy Sonner, now resident at New Britian, Conn., where he has a good position as Asst. Baggage Master. We are pleased to learn of the success of this former Giles boy, and complimenting him upon the same, wish him continued advancement and prosperity.

At the Presbyterian Church next Sunday at 11 o'clock, there will be a special service on the word of God. At that time a public collection will be taken to put a Bible in each bed room in our hotels. 60,000 Bibles have been recently placed in hotels in United States and Canada. A Senator reading one of these Bibles said, "It has stirred my memory and brought back thoughts of the past, and moved me to send you a check for $50, that the good work may be enlarged and others blest." We want everyone to come and feel you want to take part in praying that God will bless the reading of His word.

PROF. SHUMATE'S SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMME.

On last Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium, the first year High School Literary Society, gave a public programme which was very highly complimented by a very large audience.

The recitations, songs and declamations were well rendered. Special mention is due Sidney Scott and John Shumate for their well prepared orations.

The subject for debate was, Resolved, "That Virginia should have State-wide Prohibition." Messrs. Chas. Cooper and Fred Tabor representing the affirmative side. Messrs. William Fletcher and Hunter Shumate the negative side. The young men handled the subject quite admirably. The decision of the judges was in favor of the negative side.

There were two little songs by Prof. Shumate, Messrs. Frank Johnston and Tracy Whittaker that were decided hits.

Prof. Shumate is to be congratulated on the success of this highly interesting programme.

DEATH OF J. O. MEADOWS.

At the family residence in Wallowa, Monday, January 23, J. O. Meadows died of consumption. He leaves a wife and five small children to mourn his loss.

He was a member of Wabash Lodge 189, I. O. O. F. and the Masonic order 205 of Poplar Hill, Va. He was buried from the undertaking parlors of H. B. Haisten, under the auspices of Wallowa Lodge No. 154 I. O. O. F.

The family were unable to attend the funeral on account of being under quarantine for scarlet fever.

There was a large attendance of local Odd Fellows to assist in the last rites of the order at the grave.—Wallowa (Ore.) Sun.

His hosts of friends in Giles county will deeply regret to learn of the death of Jesse Meadows, whose death is above narrated. His life was spent in the vicinity of Staffordsville, this county, until less than one year ago, when he moved with his family to the state of Oregon, in the hope that the climate there would prolong his life, which Tuberculosis was rapidly bringing to an end.

He leaves a wife and several children, some of them small, and for these, the deepest sympathies will be felt, and everyone who knew him, will deeply and sincerely regret the death of Jesse Meadows, than whom a more kind, more honorable and better loved man never lived in Giles county.

VALENTINE VERSES.

If you love me as I love you.
We'll soon be One instead of Two.

There is a young lad named "Sid"
Who, for the hearts of the girls makes a bid,
For joy, they are all sobbing
And their little hearts are bobbing,
A new "Mann" in town, oh you kid!

In the office of the "packing" emporium
Sits Ikey, "main squeeze" of the hog-orium
He's a man of big deals
And will can the pig squeals
And serve music in his show a la pig-orium.

He's a man of vast interests, and to boot
Sports a 1911 model suit,
Those gun-barrel pants!!
Of the parenthetical ( ) slants!!
A perfect beau brummel, oh shoot!

Is he a bachelor space-waster to be?
Save him, dear girls, is our plea,
As an inducement for the match
And soft bait for the catch,
Think of all the moving pictures you could see.

There was a young Spark from the West,
Who thought that his girl was the best,
Because she's so queer,
As to think him a deer,
And better than all of the rest.

There was a young man from the West,
For a fair-haired maid came in quest,
And with her till late,
Drank brown chocolate,
And the man in the moon knows the rest.

There was a young lawyer named Foote,
For "attachment" in chancery brought soote:
In the court of Dan Cupid,
Whom he thought rather stupid,
For "non-joinder" to decree a "Cahoot."

To the Enchantress:

Vision of my waking and sleeping dreams,
Lovely as mirrored stars in streams;
Wilt thou not be my Valentine,
As I'd be now and ever thine?

G. W. D. D. is single still,
And still a Jack without a Jill;
And now is almost desperate,
For fear he'll never get a mate.

Jud goes to school most every day,
And courts the girls along the way;
The pretty, ugly, old and small,
But can't get one of them at all.

Jerry says the jingle's fine,
But the ideas are no good;
And courting a la Valentine,
He never yet has understood.

WHITE GATE.

"All those who journey, soon or late,
Must pass within the garden gate;
Must kneel alone in darkness there,
And battle with some dark despair.
God pity those who cannot say,
'Not mine, but thine,' who only pray,
'Let this cup pass,' and cannot see
The purpose in Gethsemane."

House of Jones.

Jones painted his house last
It looks dull, dead, no life to it.
Smith painted his house 10 years ago.
It looks clean, nice, and don't need repainting, because he used L. & M. Paint, and added three quarts of Oil to each gallon.

The Oil gave life and preserved it.

Besides—adding the Oil reduced its cost 40 cents a gallon less than other paint.

Thirty five years use in N. A. & S. A.

The Last Man.

All worldly shapes shall melt in gloom,
The sun himself must die,
Before this mortal shall assume
His immortality.
I saw a vision in my sleep
That gave my spirit strength to sweep
Adown the gulf of Time,
I saw the last of human mold
That shall creation's death behold,
As Adam saw her prime.

The sun's eye had a sickly glare,
The earth with age was wan;
The skeletons of nations were Around that lonely man,
Some had expired in fight—the brands
Still rusted on their bony hands;
In plague and famine some,
Earth's cities had no sound nor tread
And ships were drifting with the dead
To shores where all was dumb.

Yet, prophet-like that lone one stood,
With dauntless words and high,
That shook the sere leaves from the wood
As if a storm passed by—
Saying: "We are twins in death, proud sun,
Thy face is cold, thy race is run,
'Tis mercy bids thee go,
For thou ten thousand years
Hast seen the tide of human tears
That shall no longer flow.

"What tho beneath thee man put forth
His pomp, his pride, his skill;
And arts that made fire, flood and earth
The vassals of his will;
Yet mourn I not thy parted sway,
Thou dimmed discrowned king of day,
For all these trophied arts
And triumphs that beneath thee sprang
Healed not a passion or a pang
Entailed on human hearts.

"Go, let oblivion's curtain fall
Upon the stage of men,
Nor with thy rising beams recall
Life's tragedy again;
Its piteous pageants bring not back
Nor waken flesh upon the rack
Of pain anew to writhe;
Stretched in disease's shapes abhorred
Or mown in battle by the sword
Like grass beneath the scythe.

"Even I am weary, in yon skies
To watch the fading fire;
Test of all sumless agonies
Behold not me expire,
My lips that speak thy dirge of death,
Their rounded gasp and gurgling breath
To see thou shalt not boast,
The eclipse of nature spreads my pall—
The majesty of darkness shall Receive my parting ghost.

"This spirit shall return to Him
Who gave its heavenly spark,
Yet think not, sun, it shall be dim
Why thou thyself art dark,
No! it shall live again and shine
In bliss unknown to beams of thine,
By him recalled to breath
Who captive led captivity,
Who robbed the grave of victory
And took the sting from death.

"Go sun, while mercy holds me up
On Nature's awful waste,
To drink this last and bitter cup
Of grief that man shall taste—
Go tell the night that hides thy face
Thou saw'st the last of Adam's race
On earth's sepulchral clod
The darkening universe defy
To quench his immortality
Or shake his trust in God"

A Tuberculosis Catechism.

The Truth About a Dread Disease in Simple Form.

FIRST LESSON.

Question. What is the most dangerous and fatal disease we know?

Answer. Consumption or tuberculosis.

Q. What is consumption?

A. Consumption is a disease of the lungs that can be communicated from one person to another.

Q. Can a person have consumption elsewhere than in the lungs?

A. Yes, but pul-mo-nary or lung consumption is the most common form of the disease.

Q. Is consumption very dangerous?

A. Yes. It kills more people in the United States every year than any three other diseases combined.

Q. Is it very fatal in Virginia?

A. Yes. The State Health Department says there are 20,000 cases of consumption in the State today.

Q. How many people die of consumption in Virginia every year?

A. At least 5,000.

Q. What causes this disease which kills so many of our people?

A. A germ, called the tu-bercle bacillus.

Q. What is this germ, or tubercle bacillus?

A. It is a very small plant, which cannot be seen with the naked eye.

Q. Do these germs grow very rapidly?

A. Yes, they multiply by millions in a short space of time.

Q. Where do these germs grow?

A. Chiefly in the lungs.

Q. How do the germs get into the lungs?

A. They are usually breathed into the lungs from the dust in the air.

Q. But how do the germs get into the dust?

A. Because some people who have consumption spit on the ground or in places where the spit can dry.

Q. Is this wrong?

A. Yes, it is contrary to law and it is wrong for a person to give to anyone a disease he has contracted.

Q. Does every person who gets the germs into his lungs have consumption?

A. No. If a person is strong and healthy he may not have consumption, even if the germs get into his lungs.

Q. What, then, is the best way to prevent consumption?

A. To keep the body strong and healthy.

Q. When these germs of consumption get into the lungs, what do they do?

A. They grow and produce a poison which weakens the one who has the disease.

Q. What else do they do?

A. They cause the lungs of the person to harden and then they destroy them.

Q. When a person has consumption and is not treated for it, how long will he live?

A. He will generally die within three years and may die much sooner.

Q. Can a person tell when he has consumption?

A. Not always, but generally there are signs of the disease.

Q. These signs are called smyptoms. What is the first of them?

A. A person who has consumption at first has a cold which does not get well like other colds.

Q. Do you mean that every person who has a cold will have consumption.

A. No, indeed. Not one cold in many hundreds develop into consumption.

Q. What other symptom may a person have?

A. He will have a cough, which lasts a long time.

Q. What is another symptom of the disease?

A. Loss of weight.

Q. Does this always happen in case a person has consumption?

A. Yes, in almost every case.

Q. Can one be certain he has consumption when he has a cold that lasts a long time, a cough and is losing weight?

A. No, but he should go to see a doctor and be examined.

Q. Can the doctor be positive the person has consumption?

A. In most cases, he can. If he is in doubt, he can have an examination of the spit made at the State Laboratory.

Q. What is this State Laboratory?

A. A place in Richmond where trained men study disease germ.

Q. Suppose a person finds that he has consumption, must he then give up all hope and prepare to die?

A. No. He may live for many years.

Q. Can consumption, then, be cured?

A. It can, if it is treated in time. This is one of the great est discoveries of recent years.

Q. Who found out that consumption could be cured?

A. Many men studied the disease and helped in making the discovery, but the man who did most in America was Dr. Edward Trudeau (Tru-do).

Q. What did Dr. Trudeau find out, about consumption?

A. He found that if a person who had consumption lived in the open air for some months, he would be much better and might get entirely well.

Q. What do you mean by saying a person must "live in the open air" if he wants to be cured of consumption?

A. He must not spend any time in a close or badly ventilated room.

Q. Must he sleep out of doors?

A. Yes, or in a room which is always filled with fresh air

Q. How will this help him get well?

A. We do not know, but there is something in the fresh air that helps overcome the germs and keeps them from growing.

Q. What else must a person do to get well of consumption?

A. He should follow the advice of his doctor.

Q. Is it best for him to work?

A. His doctor may advise him to do so, or he may tell him to do only a small amount of work.

Q. But suppose the person has to work for a living; will this keep him from getting well?

A. He may get well, but he should do as little work as possible and should stay in the open air all the time.

Q. Are there any other things that help a person get well of consumption?

A. Yes, good food is necessary.

Q. Do you mean a person must eat a great deal?

A. Yes, he must eat all he can digest of substantial food.

Q. What is the best food for the person who has consumption?

A. Milk and eggs, but any nourishing food will help.

Q. What else must a person do to be cured of consumption?

A. He must try not to worry about himself.

Q. You have named five things that help cure consumption. Repeat them so that you will remember them.

A. The five things that cure consumption are, fresh air, rest, good food, exercise and cheerfulness.

Q. Do medicines help?

A. A good doctor may give medicines that will help but they cannot cure.

Q. I saw a medicine advertised in the paper the other day that was said to cure consumption. Are such medicines safe and helpful?

A. No. These medicines kill instead of cure. They are gotten up by bad or ignorant men to deceive people.

Q. No one should use them, you think?

A. No, they are very dangerous.

There are so many cures and aids to grow beautiful that it is no wonder any longer why we have so many beauties among us. But most of these aids to beauty do not give our less handsome maidens a square deal. The latest stunt out to acquire both beauty and health is bubble blowing. So don't be surprised to find Sallie in the kitchen blowing soap bubbles.—Rural Retreat Times.

DEATH OF MR. B. E. PEARSON.

At the home of his son, Mr. W. D. Pearson of this place, at 5 o'clock p. m. on last Saturday, Mr. Benjamin Pearson quietly passed away.

As was well known in this community, he had been in feeble health for several years, and for the past year had been confined to the house and his room, and death resulted from various causes, chief of which were those incident to old age.

Mr. Pearson was born in Franklin County, Virginia, on the 6th day of April, 1825, and was therefore, nearly eighty six years of age.

He was married four times, his surviving children by his first wife being Thos. J. and W. D. Pearson of this place, John W. Pearson of Indiana, Mrs. M. J. Knowlton of Illinois, and Mrs. Bettie Hale of Wolf Creek. Jas. H. Pearson of Bluefield, and Mrs. Jennie Bracy of this place, are also children of his by a subsequent marriage.

Probably forty years ago he moved from Franklin county to Nicholas County, W. Va., and later from there to Illinois, and about twenty-five years ago, he came to this place, where he has since resided.

A coincidence in connection with his death was that it occurred, to the day, just forty-three years after the death of his first wife.

Mr. Pearson was a kind, sociable, friendly old gentleman. He was a good conversationalist and enjoyed recalling the scenes and incidents of other years. He was a man of the highest honor and integrity, was firm and unswerving in his convictions and never hesitated to speak out in condemnation of the wrong and defense of the right.

Interment was in Eastside Cemetery last Monday afternoon.

Peace to the ashes of this fine old man.

WHITE GATE.

Some men have cause to complain as Cowper did years ago when he wrote:

"We sacrifice to dress 'till household joys
And comforts cease. Dress drains our cellars dry,
And keeps our larders lean; puts out our fires,
And introduces hunger, frost and woe,
Where peace and hospitality might reign."

Everything is said to come to him who waits, but those items have failed to come, and our almanac does not speak of any news.

If London continues to grow, in another quarter of a century it will be half as large as Roanoke!

Miss Bess Allen's school closed last Tuesday, and a very interesting entertainment was held at the school house Saturday evening. The house was well filled and good order prevailed while the audience enjoyed the amusing farces, dialogues, monologues, recitations and music. Every pupil took a part in the exercises, the rendition of which reflected much credit upon the fair young teacher who so patiently and persistently endeavored to make it what it was,—a success.

In Bad Fix

"I had a mishap at the age of 41, which left me in bad fix," writes Mrs. Georgia Usher, of Conyers, Ga.

"I was unconscious for three days, and after that I would have fainting spells, dizziness, nervousness, sick headache, heart palpitation and many strange feelings.

"I suffered greatly with ailments due to the change of life and had 3 doctors, but they did no good, so I concluded to try Cardui.

"Since taking Cardui, I am so much better and can do all my housework."

Take CARDUI

J 41

The Woman's Tonic

Do not allow yourself to get into a bad fix. You might get in so bad you would find it hard to get out.

Better take Cardui while there is time, while you are still in moderately good health, just to conserve your strength and keep you in tip top condition.

In this way your troubles, whatever they are, will gradually grow smaller instead of larger—you will be on the up-grade instead of the down—and by and bye you will arrive at the north pole of perfect health.

Missionary Song.

WORDS BY REV. M. W. ROYALL.

[Tune, What a friend we have in Jesus.]

Do you see the heathen kneeling
To their gods of wood and stone;
To their gods who cannot hear them
And cannot for sin atone?
They are waiting for the message
That God's people have in hand;
They are lost without the gospel,
In that dark benighted land.

Do you hear the heathen crying
For the gospel that we hold;
Shall we tell them, oh, my brother,
Of that story sweet and old;
Or shall we withhold the message
That would save their soul from sin,
When our Lord is leading forward,
And will help us them to win?

Do you see the Christian waiting
As they heed not God's command,
When He bids us send the gospel
To that far-off heathen land?
Oh! the silver that we're holding
Would some missionary aid;
Let us do as He commanded,
That the work be not delayed.

Do you hear the Saviour's message
As He speaks to one and all?
"Go and tell them how I love them,
Whosoever will I call.
Tell them how I died to save them,
Tell them all about the cross,
Tell them of a home in heaven
When earth's pleasures count but loss."

A Tuberculosis Catechism.

The Truth About a Dread Disease in Simple Form.

SECOND LESSON.

(Review the first lesson, especially the method by which the disease is contracted and the five essentials to the cure)

Q. Does consumption spread very rapidly?

A. Yes, it frequently appears in a family and the others members of the family take it from the one who has it first.

Q. Do you mean that one may inherit the disease, just as one sometimes inherits the personal appearance of one's father?

A. No. The disease cannot be inherited, though one may inherit a weak body from one's parents, which will make one an easy victim of consumption.

Q. When consumption appears in a family, is there any way of preventing other members of the family from taking it?

A. Yes, this is not hard, if all the members of the family are careful.

Q. What is the most important thing for them to do?

A. Not to come in contact with any of the spit from the person who has consumption.

Q. Why is this so important?

A. Because when a person has consumption, all of his spit contains the germs of the disease.

Q. And can these germs give the disease to others?

A. Very easily.

Q. How can one keep from coming in contact with this dangerous spit?

A. By seeing that the person who has consumption is very careful where he spits.

Q. Where should he spit?

A. He should always spit in a cup with a cover, and should empty the cup into a stove or fire, and should cover his mouth with his handkerchief when he coughs.

Q. What else should one who has consumption do to prevent the disease from spreading?

A. He should be very careful to keep his hands and person clean.

Q. If a person does all this, is he still a danger to those who live with him?

A. No, and because he is careful, be should be treated very kindly.

Q. What should people do who live in the house with one who has consumption?

A. They should be very careful to keep their windows open and to get plenty of fresh air.

Q. Should everybody sleep with their windows open and get fresh air?

A. Yes. Fresh air is one of the best ways to keep one healthy.

Q. Suppose a person has consumption and wants to go away to be cured. Where can he go?

A. There are many places for the treatment of consumption in the United States.

Q. But must a person go so far from home to be treated?

A. It is not necessary. He can take the treatment at home it he is careful.

Q. How can he take the treatment at home?

A. By living in a tent or in a room always open to fresh air.

Q. Is there any place in Virginia where a person can be treated?

A. Yes, there is the State San a-to ri um at Ca-taw-ba in Roanoke county.

Q Can all who want to do so go to Catawba?

A. No, because it is not yet large enough to make more than 100 patients. Only a few can go at a time.

Q Have any of the cities places where those who have consumption can be treated?

A. Yes, a number of our cities have.

Q. Do you think every city should have such a place?

A. Yes, because they help those who cannot help themselves and save people from great sorrow and suffering.

Q. Can we help do this?

A. Yes. We have a State Association that tries to get cities to do this and tries to teach the people how to prevent consumption.

Q. Where does this Association get money?

A. By selling the little Red Cross Christmas seals at Christmas. All who want to help in this work should buy these seals and use them.

Nothing can be advertised too much. Therefore, while Pocahontas coal is supposed to be known over the world, the people in the field owe some thanks to Representative Humphrey, of Washington, for the blow against them he aimed in the house yesterday. He brought from the chairman of the committee on Naval Affairs the public declaration that after years of search the government had been unable to find a coal so good or cheap as the Pocahontas.

Apparently the majority of the house is willing to cripple the navy and take chances on putting it at disadvantage at a critical time for the sake of putting into the pockets of Pacific coast miners a few dollars they do not deserve. It is predicted that the senate will kill the Humphrey amendment and we do not doubt that the prediction will be proved true. We can not imagine that the senate will imitate the criminal folly of the house. Pocahontas coal will continue to be the supply for the navy. The very first settlement of white people in this country was saved by Pocahontas in Virginia. The time may come when the republic will be saved from disaster and distress and given supremacy over some foe on the high seas by the same old name and same old state—Pocahontas, of Virgina.—Roanoke Times.

Tribute of Senator Swanson in the United States Senate in Honor of Senator Daniel.

We give below some extracts from the speech made in the U. S. Senate by Senator Swanson in memory of our late Senator, the lamented Daniel. No better theme than the life of Daniel could have inspired Senator Swanson in his maiden speech in the Senate, and Virginia should be congratulated on the fact that the mantle of Daniel should have fallen upon one who could so worthily wear it. We all know Gov. Swanson, and we know that he has worthily fulfilled many high responsibilities, and the State was fortunate in having a man when Daniel died, who, from his experience in Congress and as Governor of Virginia, made him peculiarly fitted to take up the great work where Daniel left off; and this speech shows how well he is measuring up to our expectations:

"Senator Daniel was the very highest type of a Virginian: a name synonymous with the most attractive and most splendid qualities of human character. Sunshine scintillated from every lineament of his pleasing face; geniality radiated from his warm, generous heart; a rare knightly courtesy characterized his manly deportment. To women he ever extended a deference and reverence, bespeaking innate refinement and purity. A devoted husband and father, a kindly neighbor, a loyal friend, he possessed in a preeminent degree those sterling Anglo-Saxon home virtues which have constituted the foundation of its greatness and has made it the world's conquering race. When interested his conversational powers, whether on light or weighty matters, were unexcelled. His deference to and consideration for others were marked and at once won the hearts of those with whom he was brought in contact. No person whom I have ever seen surpassed him in pleasing personality or possessed in a superior degree every indication of distinction. His Roman face and features of rare and unexcelled beauty ever radiated with luminous thought and gleamed with the sunlight of genius. These attractive personal traits were adornments that gave charm to a strong manly nature. He was a man of tireless energy, strong convictions, superb moral and physical courage. No misfortune could bring despair to his brave and stout heart. No personal sorrow, no great disappointment could retard his dauntless spirit in its effort for achievement. Though born and reared amid all the surroundings of wealth and luxury, yet when the misfortunes of Civil War swept all of these away, manfully, cheerfully, he accepted the changed conditions of poverty and hardship and struggled to earn a competence for himself and others, and with no assistance but what came to him from a brave heart and a great mind, he attained the fame and the preeminent positions which afterwards came to him.

Though defeated twice in his efforts to be governor of Virginia and twice in his efforts to become a Member of the House of Representatives, yet he did not despair, and by his conduct and magnificent bearing in the hours of defeat proved himself worthy of success, acquired the confidence of the people and captivated their effections until he obtained every honor and distinction that Virginia could bestow and was elected for five terms as a Member of this honorable body. Thus, alike in defeat and in victory, he displayed his preeminence and greatness.

Senator Daniel was a man of positive convictions, and without a shadow of turning adhered firmly and steadily to his party's tenets. For more than 30 years he was one of the ablest and most eloquent defenders of Democratic principles in this Nation. On the hustings, in the press, in the legislative halls of State and Nation he was the bold, brave champion of Democracy—one of its acknowledged and most beloved leaders. In his early life, when rejected repeatedly by the Democratic Party, he manfully acquiesced, never sulked or swerved from party fealty. He proved himself too good and too great a man to desert his people because they failed to crown him king.

Senator Daniel was a man of absolute scrupulous honesty. A great orator has well said:

Honesty is the oak around which all other virtues cling, without that they fall and groveling die in weeds and dust.

The paths of his public life were crowded with vast power, responsibility, and opportunity, yet no stain ever followed his footsteps. His pure clean hands were never soiled by the betrayal of public or private trust.

Senator Daniel was a man of unflinching courage and intrepid spirit. When the war between the States commenced he was a youth of 19 years; yet so ardent was his patriotism, so brave his heart, so resolute his will that he at once volunteered and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Twenty-seventh Virginia Regiment, a part of the Stonewall Brigade. Nothing can be more heroic, no picture more striking than that of this young beardless youth charging with the Twenty-seventh Virginia Regiment at the Battle of First Manassas, and aiding in winning that great victory which made the name of Stonewall Jackson immortal. I shall ever remember the vivid descriptions I have heard him give of his experiences in this terrific battle—his first baptism in blood and war. His gallantry, his courage, his aptitude for war soon won him distinction and secured for him rapid promotion; he became major and chief of staff for Gen. Jubal A. Early. He displayed special skill and gallantry as a staff officer at Boonesboro and at Sharpsburg, the fiercest and bloodiest battle of the war. He also rendered conspicuous service as chief of Gen. Early's staff in Gen. Lee's second invasion of Maryland, which culminated in the Battle of Gettysburg.

During his three years of continuous service in the Confederate Army he participated in the campaigns of the Army of Northern Virgin'a, shared all of its privations and dangers, fought gallantly in its fierce and stubborn battles, winning new honors for devotion to duty, for courage and gallantry. During the service he received four wounds, the last one being of a serious and dangerous nature, which made him a cripple and a sufferer from unremitting pain until his death. On the 6th of May, 1864, during the battle of the Wilderness, recognizing that an emergency existed and believing that the troops needed a mounted officer to lead them on a difficult and perilous charge, though it was not his duty, he volunteered, and was gallantly leading the Thirty-third Regiment of the old Stonewall Brigade when he was dangerously wounded, his thigh being shattered by the bullets of the enemy. Thus this hero fell wounded while his comrades marched on to victory inspired by his gallantry and genius. This wound rendered him useless for active service in the field. But for this wound there is every reason to believe that on account of his high reputation, his splendid record, his gallantry and genius for war, he would very soon have been promoted to brigadier general, possible the youngest in the Confederate Army.

He was one of the pioneers and foremost advocates of the establishment of free schools in Virginia, with all of their resultant blessings and benefits. He was the author of the law in Virginia giving the employees of transportation companies the first lien upon the property of the companies for their wages and also the law permitting the personal representative of a decedent to recover damages for the death of the intestant, when occasioned by the wrongful act of a corporation. He was the originator and the promoter of the measure giving the counties, cites, and towns of the Commonwealth power to tax the railroads within their borders, which measure alone has been the source of inestimable benefit and progress to the State. In the last State constitutional convention he was the author of the suffrage provision, which was finally adopted as a part of the constitution of Virginia, and thus he successfully solved the most difficult and perplexing problem that confronted the convention.

By his services in the Senate he acquired a national reputation for statesmanship, ability, courage of convictions, and soundness of judgment. The esteem and admiration entertained for him were extensive with our National Government. If he had lived in some other section of this country besides the South many years ago he would have been nominated on the Democratic ticket for the Presidency, with splendid chances of success. He possessed those qualities of mind, heart, and will which would have made a great President—fit company for the illustrious Virginians who had so well filled this high and exalted position. At the Chicago convention in 1896, so profound and extensive was the esteem and admiration of the Democratic party for him that he could easily have had the nomination for Vice President if he would have accepted it. He unselfishly waved this honor aside for what he believed was to the best interest of his party.

In all that constitutes true, broad statesmanship Senator Daniel was preeminently endowed, and if Virginia had been as potential in this Nation as she was in former times, possessing as he did the universal confidence and admiration of his native State, he would have attained position as high and influence as great as that wielded by the illustrious Virginians in the early days of this Republic. In character and capacity he measured up to these great men."

In the darkest night we may hope for the dawn of a new day, and we do not hope in vain. When the storm clouds hide the sun's bright face, we know that sun still smiles and that those clouds will pass away. Looking on the bright side may be old-fashioned and hackneyed, but it has never failed to drive away the blues.—Rural Retreat Times.

DR. GEORGE EASLEY WILLIAMS.

Dr. George Easley Williams, third son of Jas. W. and Mary A. Williams, was born August 30, 1875, in Giles County, and here the major portion of his life was spent. In the fall of 1896 he went to Richmond and entered the Medical College of Virginia from which he was graduated in 1901. In this he was but following the example of his grandfather, the beloved Dr. John W. Easley, who was an alumnus of this college and who had practiced his profession in our county for more than forty years.

While attending college he met Miss Virginia May Cardoza and they were married July 2, 1900; and she, with one little daughter nine years old, is left to mourn his loss.

He practiced medicine at different points in the counties of Bland and Buchanan, and also for more than a year in Richmond, evincing an ardent love for his chosen vocation and a special power of diagnosis, in its practice; but never possessed of the physical strength to pursue his profession with the vim and energy requisite to ensure the success his abilities deserved.

For nearly five years his health had become so enfeebled from the encroachments of that insidious disease—consumption, that he was unable to continue his practice, and had spent the most of that time in a sanatorium in the mountains of North Carolina. The past winter he had remained in Richmond in order to be near his family and only a few weeks ago, finding that he was failing rapidly, he requested that they bring him home—as the poor fellow said, "To die." Mother, wife, brother, sister, accompanied him and did everything they could to alleviate the suffering that could have but one end. Here at 12:25 Tuesday, Feb. 21st, surrounded by many of his loved ones, the spirit broke its earthly bonds and entered into that realm of eternal day, where there's no more suffering and no more "good byes" are said. Just a day before he died he told his mother "that all was well" and that he hoped Pierre would be the first to meet and greet him.

Dr. Williams was of a most modest, retiring disposition, gentle in manner, deliberate in judgment, keenly sensitive to both praise and blame and withal possessed of the very highest sense of business honor and an unswerving loyalty to truth.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to this bereaved family that so lately suffered another crushing blow.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist Church at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, conducted by the three ministers of our town, after which the body was taken to the family cemetery and interred with Masonic honors. The flowers were of exquisite design and in such profusion, they completely covered the grave.

Those who were in attendance at the funeral from a distance were his father Hon. Jas. W. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. W. Williams of Richmond; Dr. Jas. P. Williams, Mr. Robt. Williams and Miss Frances Williams of Grundy; Mrs. M. B. Easley, Capt. and Mrs. D. A. French, Dr. E. M. Easley, Messrs. D. M., F. S., W. C. and E. H. Easley and Mrs. Matt West of Bluefield; Mrs. W. P. Miller of Newport.

DEATH OF HARRY JOHNSTON.

Although expected, few messages have ever come over the wires to Pearisburg that have cast a deeper gloom over this community than was the message announcing the death of Harry Johnston.

On January 10th while employed as timekeeper and paymaster for a Co., in Southeastern Kentucky, Harry was kicked by a mule. At first the injury was not considered dangerous, and he remained in camp about two weeks before serious symptoms began to develop. The latter part of January he was taken to Openheimer and Kelso's Private Sanitorium, Knoxville, Tenn. An operation was performed February 17th; but without relief, another operation was performed February 19th; Monday and Tuesday following the last operation there was thought to be a fighting chance for life, but on Wednesday, February 22nd, at 10 p. m. The Reaper Death severed the golden cord of life and set his seal upon the brow of one who up to the time of the sad accident had not known what suffering meant.

Harry was the only son of Mr. Wesley Johnston, and was born November, 15th 1885. He had grown to young manhood in our midst and was a great favorite among old and young.

He was endowed with great intellectual power and was of strong personality. As a school boy he was always a leader. He was strong in his friendships and manly in his character.

He took a business course in the Roanoke Business College and had been employed away from home about three years.

On February 15th, his sister Miss Mamie and Dr. Charles Johnston of Bluefield went to Knoxville and remained till the end came. Everything that medical skill could do was done but without avail.

The remains were brought home on the 23rd, and on the 24th, the pastor of the family, Rev. J. L. Prater conducted the funeral service at the Johnston home.

By the side of the gentle mother who had preceded her boy by some ten years the body was laid to rest in the Wall Cemetery.

The Elks of the Bluefield Lodge paid the final tribute to the dead and amid a host of sympathizing friends and relatives, the new made grave was covered with beautiful floral tributes.

Death bears its venomed sting wherever found, but doubly sad is bereavement when young manhood with its limitless possibilities is so suddenly chilled by its icy touch.

To the bereaved father and sister we tender our sincerest sympathy.

DEATH OF MISS MITCHELL.

Miss Mary Adelaide Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mitchell, was born February 14, 1887, at Martinsville, Henry Co., Va., and passed into her rest Feb. 23, 1911, aged 24 years. Funeral services were conducted in the Lutheran Church at Pembroke, amidst the largest gathering of mourners the writer has ever seen there. In 1902, her family moved to Pembroke, this county.

She was one of those young women, who could teach in the same building, in which she herself was trained. The last five years of her life were spent in the school room, as a teacher, and the scenes of her burial bore a beautiful testimony as to what she had there done.

She joined the Presbyterian Church in 1909 and our hearts were made to rejoice by her sweet frank testimony as to her faith in Jesus. Her warm heart and buoyant temperament, her winsome manner, and her frank and friendly turn made her friends wherever she went, strangers even recognized her as a lady. So thoughtful of others, so devoted to her task, and striving so earnestly to do her duty, that her body had become more weakened than she was aware. She made no complaint even to her most intimate friends, but like all "soldiers of the cross" had a warning that "something was going to happen."

Though the end came suddenly to some, I feel sure it was not a surprise to her. That God, who had so wisely endowed her, with the characteristics that she possessed, had given warning of the approaching change, and without a groan or a murmur, like a fading flower, she quit the scenes of suffering here, to be transplanted to that land, where suffering will be forgotten.

The memory of her life will ever live with us. Her family and her church mourn her absence, but her character remains vivid in our memory. She leaves a mother and father, four sisters and one brother to mourn her loss. A noble woman—the noblest work of God. One of the sweetest scenes to be witnessed at this burial, was the crowd of children, that she had loved and had taught to love her, as they gathered around her casket, many of them weeping as mourning for a sister. A life like this cannot be silenced with death.

"There is no flock, however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there!
There is no fireside, howsoe'er defended,
But has one vacant chair!

She is not dead, the child of our affection,
But gone into that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ himself doth rule."

Pastor.

In Realms of Rest.

On Feb. 14, 1911, the death angels entered the home of H. K. Kelley at Interior, Va., and bore to the fair fields of Paradise a loved one, Mrs. Maggie Kelley; she was sick only a few days, her death resulted from heart failure. She was indeed a sweet woman, and will be sadly missed by all that knew her. She leaves a husband and one son, two sisters and two brothers to mourn her loss.

May God ever bless this home which has been left so desolate.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in their home,
Which never can be filled.

A Friend.

"A Pleasant Day at Mrs. D. F. Hale's."

Of the many pleasant things that take place in our little town, one of the most pleasant took place on Friday, when the members of the Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, gathered at the hospitable home of Mrs. D. F. Hale, to quilt a quilt, which these zealous workers had pieced for the benefit of their society.

The work began at ten thirty, each one eager to do her part, and with pleasant chatting and jokes the work moved along, until the sound of a bell, which made each heart leap, knowing what was so close at hand, they were soon seated around a table that was loaded with everything nice, and was greatly enjoyed by all. The quilt was finished at five p. m., and the ladies departed to their homes after a very much enjoyed day.

Avoid Frauds.

A paint fraud is paint that looks fair for a year or so, and then makes repainting necessary.

Don't waste your money and injure your property.

The L. & M. Paint has been in use for thirty five years.

You make one half of it by adding ¾ of a gallon of Lindseed Oil to each gallon. It then costs about $1.60 per gallon, and is the best paint that can be made.

"At last, I began to take Cardui. I have taken only three bottles, but it has done me more good than all the doctors or than any other medicine I ever took."

HEADING IN FOR EVENING.

I'm going back: I'm going back, and be a boy again,
Leave far behind the cares of now and taste the joys of then,
I'm going to dive head-first once more
in that ol' swimmin' hole,
And wander 'long the river's banks with my cane fishin' pole,
Back to the joys of yester years, when life was free from care;
When every sky was azure blue and every breeze was fair,
I'm going to sit upon the bank and chew the rag with Blunk,
And watch to see my bobbing cork go underneath—ker-plunk!

I'm going back; I'm going back, through all the vanished days
And gather in the bloom of youth along the old-time ways,
Down by the mill and through the woods, and past the shaded hill,
And through the pasture lot that lies along the rippling rill;
Right to the stump that's leaning o'er the deepest, darkest pool,
Where lurk the bullheads and the perch beneath the waters cool,
And then, forgetful of life's cares, I'll sit and talk with Blunk,
While we keep careful watch to see when our corks go ker-plunk!

I'm going back: I'm going back, forgetful of the years
That tinge my once black hair with gray, forget all cares and tears,
To be a care-free boy again, with happy joyous heart,
And sit and fish the old, old stream where cautious bullheads dart,
Then, when the sun sinks slowly down behind the crimson west,
And birds and beasts have settled down
for hours of peaceful rest,
I'll slowly take the backward trail,
and later, in my bunk,
I'll say "lay me down to sleep"—and dream of youth, and Blunk!

ALLEGED TRUE STORY TOLD IN CLEVELAND.

Now, this is a true story.

Bill is known everywhere as a "good fellow." He has his faults, but his heart is in the right place—that's what everybody says. Nobody ever came to him for help and got turned down. He had a family; none of our crowd had ever seen his family, but we knew he must be good to them, even though he never did appear to go home.

One evening five or six good fellows were sitting in the back room of a downtown saloon, and Bill was telling a story. A woman entered. She had a dark shawl over her head and we couldn't see her face, but she came directly to our table. Gentlemen, she said, "Christmas is coming, and I have nothing for the little ones. Can you help."

Of course it was Bill who responded first. He jumped up and plunged his hand into his pocket. We could hear the rustle of bills, and we knew that something more than silver had found its way into the trembling hand. Bill was blushing when he came back to us. We were shamed into offering something, but he would have none of it. He seemed confused—a little ashamed of his charity—but he wouldn't let us help. And it was just like Bill to change the subject and go right on with his story.

And the woman? Oh, that was Bill's wife. We found out later that was about the only way she could ever get any money out of him.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Dyspeptic Moses.

Percy: "Miss Jane, did Moses have the same after dinner complaint my papa's got?"

Miss Jane: "Gracious me. Percy! Whatever do you mean, my dear?"

Percy: "Well, it says here the Lord gave Moses two tablets."

We are told that the day of the novel is ended. When we consider the alleged literature that has been perpetrated recently, we cannot squeeze out even the semblance of a tear.

The Buyer's Creed.

In a recent issue of the Tradesman appeared the following statement of reasons why a citizen should buy in his home city. In one of the cities of the smaller class this motto has been posted in street cars and moving-picture shows.

I BUY AT HOME—

Because my interests are here.

Because the community that is good enough for me to live in is good enough for me to buy in.

Because I believe in transacting business with my friends.

Because I want to see the goods.

Because I want to get what I buy when I pay for it.

Because my home dealer "carries me when I am run short."

Because every dollar I spend at home stays at home and helps work for the welfare of the city.

Because the man I buy from stands back of the goods.

Because I sell what I produce here at home.

Because the man I buy from pays his part of the town, county and city taxes.

Because the man I buy from gives value received always.

Because the man I buy from helps support my school, my church, my lodge, my home.

Because, when ill luck, misfortune or bereavement comes, the man I buy from is here with his kindly expressions of greeting, his words of cheer, and his pocketbook, if needs be.

Here I live and here I buy.

I BUY AT HOME.
DO YOU?

Apple Epigrams.

The apple is an asset financially, morally and politically.

A little land and a living is the slogan of the hour.

The apple is the aristocrat of foods and the best medicine.

The climate and conditions that are best for apples are best for man.

Anarchy never gathered fruit from its own apple tree.

Apple orchards are better nurseries of citizenship than the deck of battleship or military camps.

The man in the orchard is always a good citizen.

Horticulture is a science, not a guess.

The apple barrel is nature's medicine chest.

I would rather trust a judge that loves apples than one that hankers after bear meat.

Apples are antidote for drink and tobacco.

Apples carry the pure food stamps of the Great Physician.

The road that leads to the orchard is the pathway to a simple, happy, prosperous life.—Gov. Alva Adams of Colorado.

Proving Too Much.

An Irishman was once serving in a regiment in India. Not liking the climate, Pat tried to evolve a trick by which he could get home. Accordingly he went to the doctor and told him his eyesight was bad. The doctor looked at him for a while and then said:

"How can you prove to me that your eyesight is bad?"

Pat looked about the room and at last said: "Well, doctor, you see that nail on the wall?"

"Yes," replied the doctor.

"Well, then," replied Pat, "I can't."

If all the church members of the country would be aggressively against the saloon its days would be few.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE ACTION.

State Wide Prohibition and General Agitation and Organization Called For.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 24.—The Virginia Anti-Saloon League last evening practically concluded its work with the adoption of the following report and recommendations of the committee on resolutions:

"Your committee on resolutions begs leave to report that we have given due consideration to the several matters referred to us and would recommend the adoption of the following:

"First, We aprove the recommendation of our general secretary that the league take steps to establish a paper to represent the league and its work before the people of the State, said paper to be located in the city of Richmond, and authorize the executive committee to establish such paper at the earliest date possible, and that the present arrangement with the American Issue be discontinued.

"Second, That we endorse and recommend for adoption the suggestion of the general secretary that more men be secured for the prosecution of the work of the league, and that a special fund be raised for the purpose.

"Third, That we earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in the national Congress that they support the work for the enactment into law of the Miller-Curtis bill, now pending or its equivalent.

"Fourth, That all the energies and force of the league be directed through our executive and legislative committees to secure from the next legislature such legislation as will oring about State-wide prohibition."

"Fifth, That, in our judgement, every candidate for legislative honors should be interrogated as to his position on the question in which we are so vitally interested.

"Sixth. That we reiterate and emphasize the position of the Anti-Saloon League as being non partisan in its nature, and we propose to continue to avoid any entanglements of any kind with any party or faction of any party.

"Seventh. That we insistently urge upon the members of the league, in every section of the State, to see that the people are made conversant with the aims and purposes of the league, by the holding of public meetings, circulation of league papers, and in every way possible furnish reliable information on our work.

"Eighth. That our executive committee take steps promptly to urge upon all voters foverable to our cause, the great importance of their attending to the payment of their poll tax and otherwise qualify themselves to vote. And, further, that the executive committee stress the importance of our voters urging the members of the next legislature to pass suitable laws concerning registration, and which will insure the carrying out of the spirit of the constitution in making and keeping a pure electorate.

"Ninth. That our executive committee be instructed to publish the report of the legislative committee for free and general distribution in such form and in such manner as it may deem best.

Varying the Monotony.

Little Agnes, aged three years, when saying her usual nightly prayer, ended it by saying "a woman," instead of "amen." Her mother, much amused, asked her why she had said this and she answered very indifferently, "Oh, just to make God laugh."

Let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion Reason and experience both forbid us to expect that natural morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles.—George Washington.

Into a general store of a town in Arkansas there recently came a darky complaining that a ham which he had purchased there was not good.

"The ham is all right, Zeph," insisted the storekeeper.

"No, it ain't, boss," insisted the negro. "Dat ham's shore bad!"

"How can that be," continued the storekeeper, "when it was cured only last week?"

The darky scratched his head reflectively, and finally suggested:

"Den mebbe it's had a relapse."

THE 104th ANNIVERSARY OF ROBERT E. LEE.

January 19, 1911, the 104th Anniversary of the birth of Robert E. Lee, was commemorated with appropriate exercises in the High School Auditorium, under the auspices of McComas Capter, U. D. C.

Four young ladies from the High School took part, Misses Bess Pilegar, Lula Shrader, Mary Shelton and Nell Rowe. These young ladies are to be congratulated on their success, as all the papers read by them called forth the highest encomiums from every one present, and especially from the veterans. The prize was awarded to Miss Lula Shrader, who had chosen for her theme, "The noble and matchless Sam Davis. Miss Shrader's essay was beautifully written and delivered in a splendid manner. The Judges for the occasion were Rev. Mr. Miles of Bane, Prof. Read of Pembroke High School, and Mr. W. B. Snidow of this place.

After the reading of the essays, songs by the school, and short addresses by Messrs. Martin Williams, Jr., Frank Stafford and Terrel Shrader of the High School, and one by Prof. James R. Stafford, formed the remainder of the program, before the bestowal of the Crosses took place.

As a whole the exercises were well rendered and were very entertaining, and the Chapter should feel very much indebted to its President, and to Prof. Wasson and his pupils, who participated in the program, for their efforts in making it a success.

McGOMAS CHAPTER.

The regular monthly meeting of McComas Chapter, U. D. C., was held at Mrs. Bernard Mason's, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 25, 1911. The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Minnie C. Easley, the roll called, to which nine members responded, but several came in after the calling, and the minutes of the last meeting read by the Secretary, which were approved by the Chapter.

Mrs. Bernard Mason then moved that the Secretary spread upon the minutes of the to-mater an account of the exercises held on the 19th of January, in commemoration of Robt. E. Lee's birthday, which motion was carried. The Secretary then read the letter she had written, authorizing several Veterans to assist the Chapter in raising the amount promised Mrs. Montague, for the support of an old lady in the Home for Needy Confederate Women, in Richmond, which letter was accepted by the Chapter, and she was instructed to send the letters to the Veterans, and ask them to assist in raising this amount. After reading the program sent out by Mrs. Enders Robinson, Historian, Virginia Division, it was decided to make the next meeting a historical one, and Mrs. Frances Miller was appointed to prepare a historical paper, and Mrs. Bernard Mason and Mrs. Lucille Mann were asked to arrange the music for the afternoon.

This being the regular time to pay the yearly dues, and also the assessment of 50 cts. In the absence of the Treasurer, Mrs. W. T. Duncan, Mrs. Ada Welch was appointed Treasurer protem, and about ten dollars was collected.

There being no further business before the Chapter, it adjourned to meet the last Saturday in March, at Mrs. Harve Pilegar.

Mrs. Mason, assisted by her daughters and Miss Helen Mason, served a delicious ice course, and a very pleasant social hour was spent after the business session.

Bogus Cloth.

What is Paint? Some people think anything labelled "paint" is paint, but there's a difference. Just much as between one kind of cloth and another. Cloth nine tenths cotton and one tenth wool, is bogus cloth. Cloth all wool wears to the limit. Paint at a price between 75 cents and $1.50 is like bogus cloth. The L. & M. Paint is all wool and wears to the limit. There's a reason.

Tribute of Respect.

WHEREAS, It was the will of God in His divine wisdom on the morning of Feb. 23, 1911, to remove from the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Mitchell, their beloved daughter, Mary, at the age of twenty-four years, and whereas in this dispensation of an All-wise Providence, the home, church and community, has lost a devoted daughter and faithful member; therefore be it

RESOLVED 1st, That we, the members of Pembroke Lutheran Sunday School, are deeply moved by the sad affliction which has befallen us and deeply feel the loss, which our Sunday School has sustained by the removal of one of our most useful and consecrated members; one who never tired of working in the Sunday School and who was ever ready to promote Christ's kingdom.

2nd, That, though filled with a feeling of deepest sorrow, we bow with humbleness of hearts to the unerring will of God, who doeth all things well.

3rd, That we strive to emulate her Christian example and walk as Mary did, in the fear and love of God, and, although we shall see dear Mary no more on this earth her bright smiles and kind acts will not cease to linger in our memory.

4th, That we extend to her loved ones our sincerest sympathy and love, and for their comfort and consolation, point them to Jesus who stood at the grave and wept. He alone, can dispel the clouds that now hang so dark. The home circle is broken on earth, but it is forming in Heaven, and we can meet her again in that beautiful home where there will be no more sad parting or death. May the sunshine of God's love and smiles dry every tear, bringing a brighter hope and a stronger tie to that city whose builder and maker is God.

5th, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and to the PEARISBURG VIRGINIAN for publication.

MRS. VIRA SNIDOW,
MRS. ROXIE SNIDOW,

THE MEETING CLOSED.

The protracted services which had been going on in the Methodist Church, of this place for nearly two weeks, closed last Sunday night. A few conversions and accessions to the church was the result, but that there were not more is deplored, and with the very able, earnest and forcible sermons by Rev. Tyler Frazier, whose services for the occasion were secured, it is indeed surprising that more were not brought to a more full realization of their condition, and constrained to change and live the better and higher life.

The attendance, especially at night services, was good, and good order and close attention were observed. Rev. Frazier is much loved in this community, where he was born and reared, and it is regretted that more did not respond to his earnest appeals.

Not a Place to Rest.

Col. J. S. Browning of Roanoke, is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. Browning, who is at El Paso, dated March 8, in which Mrs. Browning says the country thereabouts is crowded with American soldiers. They are to be seen on both sides of the border and it really appears that more are to be found on the Mexican side of the border than on the American side. Mrs. Browning went to El Paso for a rest but does not appear to appreciate the restful appearances of the border country at this time.—Bluefield Telegraph.

Death of Mrs. Ritz.

Bluefield, W. Va., March 14th.—Mrs. Hattie Wilson Ritz, wife of Judge Harold A. Ritz, died Sunday at the family home "Windhurst," in south Bluefield, of pneumonia.

Mrs. Ritz had been ill for several weeks but her condition was not thought serious. On Saturday evening pneumonia developed in mild form. She passed a very good night but about 8 o'clock Sunday morning grew worse and began to sink rapidly until the end came.

Mrs. Ritz was thirty-six years of age, and was a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. M. A. Wilson, who lived in this city in the early days of the town and both of whom are buried here. She is survived by two sisters and two brothers, among them Mrs. M. R. Emmons, of this city, and Dr. F. L. A. Wilson, now of Portland, Ore., but formerly of Bluefield.

She was married eighteen years ago to Judge Ritz and since that time they have made their home in this city, where the deceased was loved and esteemed by all those who had the privilege of knowing her.

The funeral will take place from the residence this morning at 11 o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. H. S. Mabie, of the First Baptist Church, and the interment will be made in the Maple Park Cemetery.—Bluefield Telegraph.

FOR STOMACH TROUBLE AND CONSTIPATION

Send us your JOB WORK.

THE MAN AND HIS WORK.

I haven't much faith in the man who complains
Of his work he has chosen to do,
He's lazy, or else he's deficient in brains,
And maybe a hypocrite, too,
He's likely to cheat, and he's likely to rob;
Away with the man who finds fault with his job!

But give me the man with the sun in his face
And the shadows all dancing behind;
Who can meet his reverses with calmness and grace,
And never forgets to be kind,
For whether he's wielding a scepter or swab,
I have faith in the man who's in love with his job.
—John L. Shroy, in Lippincott's.

BLESSINGS OF HOME.

Home joys are blessed of heaven.—Seneca.

Home is the sacred refuge of our life.—Dryden.

Home is the chief school of human virtue.—Channing.

Home should be the center of joy, equatorial and tropical.—Beecher.

A cottage will hold as much happiness as would stock a palace.—James Hamilton.

Domestic happiness, thou only bliss of paradise that hath survived the fall.—Cowper.

Apelles used to paint a good house wife on a snail, to import that she was homekeeping.—James Howell.

Silence and chaste reserve is woman's genuine praise, and to remain quiet within the house.—Euripides.

The sober comfort, all the peace which springs from the large aggregate of little things.—Hannah More.

She was little known beyond her home, but there she silently spread around her that soft, pure light, the preciousness of which is never fully understood till it is quenched.—Channing.

The Bachelor Girl.

Alas! Why is the marriage relation always a distant one!

Money talks! Yes, and it will also keep a lot of other people quiet.

It takes a man with lots of nerve to marry a woman with lots of nerves.

It is more often proximity than affinity that leads to those summer soul matings.

As a preparation for her great life work one brother is of more assistance to the average girl than a college education.

It doesn't make a man jealous when his wife tells him about the men she might have married and didn't; it merely makes him envious.

The lower the neck the higher the price, but it's so difficult to convince a husband that the most expensive part of an evening gown is what's cut off at the top.

The road to hades may be paved with good intentions, but the men who go by the limited express escape all that by never having any intention of being good.—Helen Rowland.

Hints for Anglers.

A bookworm does not make good bait for trout fishing.

Trout may or may not make brains, but they certainly make liars.

The angler is like the actor in one respect, he must not forget his lines.

Birds are often brought down on the wing; trout are frequently brought up on the fly.

We prefer, however, having our trout stories overdrawn rather than our bank account.

The red spots on a trout do not indicate scarlet fever or the measles, as some suppose.

Like many humans, the trout that keeps his mouth shut saves himself lots of trouble.

If you hook a trout you pull it in, if you hook anything else you are apt to get pulled in yourself.

Rules and Regulations.

Adopted by the State Board of Health, July 13, 1910, Under Authority of An Act Approved March 14, 1910.

These rules and regulations are based on sound sanitary principles and the well-tested experience of many States, and they constitute absolutely the minimum of what is necessary for the protection of the public health of the State. Their strict observance is not only a matter of law, but of vital economy.

Sanitation of Schools.

Rule 9. Every building used for school purposes, public or private, shall comply with the State law regarding the amount of cubic space per pupil and amount of fresh air to be supplied. (Chapter 56 V, Acts 1908).

The air in any school room at all times shall be kept in a wholesome condition, and exercises shall be suspended as often as necessary in order to renew the air in any room, the ventilation of which is defective.

Rule 10. No school room shall be swept except after all school exercises have been concluded for the day.

The floor of no school room shall be swept without first having been sprinkled with water or covered with damp sawdust or damp paper.

All sweepings shall be removed daily from the school room.

The furniture and woodwork of every school building shall be wiped down with an approved disinfectant solution at least once each month, and shall be wiped with a damp cloth at least once each week.

Rule 11. Every room used for school purposes, public or private, shall be furnished at all times, when in use, with an adequate supply of drinking water of good sanitary quality. This shall be running water wherever same is available. If running water is not available a tank or cooler shall be supplied, furnished with a spigot; or a dipper shall be supplied, which shall be used only for dipping the water from such tank or cooler.

In addition to the dipper there shall be furnished a cup or glass to be used only for drinking, and which shall not be used for dipping water from the tank or bucket, or any other purpose. The contents of every receptacle for drinking water must be renewed fresh every morning, and every receptacle, dipper, cup, or glass shall be well washed every morning and scalded with boiling water at least once each week.

Rule 12. Every building used for public school purposes shall be furnished with two closets, one for males and one for females, separated as far as possible from each other and so arranged to give the greatest possible privacy to persons using same.

Buildings to which water and sewerage are available shall be provided with water closets and connected with the sewerage system. Where water and sewerage are not available, buildings shall be provided with dry closets, built and maintained in accordance with the standard given in these regulations on dry closets. Such closets shall be at all times maintained in a clean and sanitary condition.

RAILROADS.

Coaches.

Rule 13. All railroad coaches used by passengers shall be provided with toilet facilities, which shall at all times be kept in clean and sanitary condition. The floors of all toilets shall be of impervious material and shall be washed with an approved disinfectant solution at the end of every run. The seat, hopper and woodwork of these toilets shall be cleaned and washed with a disinfectant solution at the end of every run. Every closet shall be provided with proper ventilation sufficient to maintain purity of the atmosphere.

Rule 14. No railroad coach or street car shall be swept or dusted while occupied by passengers. All railroad coaches and street cars shall at all times be kept in clean and sanitary condition. Necessary cleaning may be done with a hand brush and dustpan if no dust is raised thereby. Sweeping shall be done only after sprinkling with water or covering the floor with damp sawdust or damp paper or other material intended to prevent dust. Woodwork shall be wiped down with a damp cloth, and dry dusting with feathers or a dry cloth shall not be practiced. A vacuum cleaner is recommended wherever possible.

Rule 15. All spittoons or cuspidors shall contain sufficient water to stand one-half inch deep on the bottom. They shall be emptied, washed and disinfected with an approved disinfectant at the end of every run.

Rule 16. All coaches shall be thoroughly cleaned, dusted, sunned and aired at least once each month. Cleaning shall include the removal from the car of everything movable, thoroughly wiping down all woodwork, scrubbing the floors, dusting the carpets and seats, and fumigating the interior of the car with formaldehyde gas as prescribed in the regulations on disinfecting.

Rule 17. Conductors, brakemen and porters shall call the attention of passengers expectorating on the floor to the law prohibiting such expectoration, and shall at once supply such passengers with cuspidors.

Stations.

Rule 18. Waiting rooms, offices, and other portions of railroad stations shall at all times be kept in a clean and sanitary condition. Sweeping shall not be done in the presence of waiting passengers except in stations which are open continuously. In these stations sweeping shall be done only after sprinkling the floor with water or throwing on it damp sawdust or other absorbent material to prevent dust. Woodwork shall be wiped down with a damp cloth, and dry dusting with feathers or dry cloths shall not be practiced.

Rule 21. Every railroad station shall be provided with proper closets. Where water and sewarage are available these shall be water closets, which shall be connected with the public sewerage. Where water and sewerage are not available, closets shall be built in accordance with the provisions regarding the construction of closets in these rules. They shall at all times be kept in clean and sanitary condition.

Churches and Public Halls.

Rule 22. Any church, hall, theater, or other building used for public meetings shall be kept at all times in a clean and sanitary condition. Every such building shall be provided with proper means for maintaining purity of the atmosphere while in use and such means must be employed at all times.

Rule 23. All buildings used for public meetings shall be cleaned after each meeting held in them, such cleaning to consists of thorough sweeping of floors and wiping of woodwork, together with the opening of all windows and doors to permit the entrance of fresh air and sunshine. No such building or room shall be swept without first sprinkling the floor with water or throwing on it damp sawdust or other absorbent material to prevent dust. Woodwork shall be wiped down with a damp cloth, and dry dusting with feathers or dry cloths shall not be practiced. In construing this rule, all meetings held during the course of a single day will be regarded as one meeting.

Rule 24. An ample number of spittoons or cuspidors shall be furnished, which shall contain sufficient water to stand one-half inch deep on the bottom. They shall be emptied, washed and disinfected after each day's use with an approval disinfectant.

Nine Southern Shoe Salesmen Earned More than $60,000 Last Year.

A few years ago, if a traveling salesman made a salary of $1800 to $2000 a year he was considered a successful salesman, but today it is not an uncommon thing to find a high class salesman who will earn from $8000 to $10,000 a year, but one of the most striking examples of what a salezman can do, is shown by the record made by nine of Craddock-Terry Company's leading salesmen last year.

J. B. Stroud of Greensboro, N. C.; Calvin Young, Jr., of Selma, Ala.; J. W. Jenkins of Shreveport, La.; E. B. Craddock of Cluster Springs, Va; M. S McRee of Montgomery, Ala.; Major P. J. Drew of Columbia, S. C; Walter C. Carrington of Spartanburg, S. C; George H. Gilmer of Lynchburg, Va., and Albert L. Noel of Covington, Va., sold a million and a quarter dollars' worth of Southern merchants and earned a little over $60,000.

Some of these gentlemen earned more than the Governor of this State receives as a salary, and these salesmen averaged a larger salary than is received by our Congressmen.

The fifty odd salesmen representing Craddock-Terry Company, the largest manufacturers of shoes in the South, sold last year $3,736,000 worth of shoes, and these aggressive Southern manufacturers are now invading the large cities of the North, such as Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, and are manufacturing more shoes in Lynchburg than are made in such large cities as New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and Lynchburg, is now the fifth city in the United States in the distribution of shoes, with Craddock-Terry Co., far in the lead of all competitors.

The Thirteenth Census, just completed, shows that wonderful progress has been made in the South in all lines, but no more striking example of the South's progress can be found than the growth of Craddock-Terry Company's business in the last ten years. In sales, they show an increase of 165 per cent. and in the manufacture of shoey, thew show even a more remarkable gain. In fact, they started to manufacture in the year 1900, and in ten years became one of the largest concers in their line in the world, and are now operating all of the factories in Lynchburg, but one, and are making more shoes than all of their competitors in the South combined.

DEATH OF GHAS. F. BROWN.

After a lingering illness principally caused by the infirmities of old age, Mr. Charles F. Brown of Staffordsville, passed to his reward on last Friday the 17th inst. Thus another good, kind and much esteemed old citizen has passed from life's seems to those over there.

Mr. Brown has lived the life of a good Christian. We have known him for many years and can say personally that he always esponsed the cause of right. It is appropriate to mention here that for a number of years Mr. Brown wrote almost weekly letters for this paper under the nom de plume of "Critic," and we have been assured quite often that these letters were much enjoyed, especially by our older readers and many who left our county for distant climes and have this paper visit them.

We hope some one in his neighborhood, who knew him more intimately than we do, will prepare a more extended notice of his life, death, and send us.

DEATH OF WILLIAM P. WOODS.

Mr. Wm. P. Woods, one of our oldest citizens, died in this place after a long illness, and general break down, last Friday, aged 82 years.

Mr. Woods was an old Confederate soldier and member of French's Battery, Storke's Battalion, for four years, and did his duty willingly and well.

Mr. Woods was born and raised in Giles County and lived here all his life. He was buried from the Methodist Church, after appropriate services by Revs. Hobson and Royall. Interment in Eastside Cemetery.

His wife preceeded him to the grave but a few years ago. The surviving children are John H. and James A. Woods and Mrs. S. S. Lucas, of this place and William and Earnest Woods who have been in the west for many years.

"Uncle Billy," by which name he was known to all our people, was a man whom everybody liked and was always welcomed wherever he went. A number of years ago, he met with an accident which necessitated the use of crutches the balance of his life, and his familiar figure about the streets of our town will be missed from now on.

Until the infirmities incident to advanced years came on, he was an active, industrious hard working man and this fact probably caused life to drag more wearily. He was honest, he was kind, and none who have died here for many years, will be more missed than "Uncle Billy."

PLAY.

On Monday night the 13th, the students of Wabash Academy gave a play, title: "Al Martin's Country Store." (A comedy drama in five acts.) Under the management of Prof. E. E. Givens of Newport.

Each one acted his or her part well. The scenes of a country store were perfect. To enjoy it was to see it, and much credit is due Prof. Givens for having so amply trained them.

Miss Nellie Eaton gave a reading, title: "Jemima," which brought laughter to every face.

Mr. Alfred Meadows gave a dialect, title: "Negro Sermon," which proves that he is due much credit on having to change his race so sudden.

The proceeds go to the W. A. base ball team.

Owing to rainy weather the 13th, the play was given again Friday night 17th, which was enjoyed again by all.

NOTIGE!

All members of Giles Camp will please come or send in their dues, 10 cents. Come as many as can as there will be delegates to elect to the Reunion. Will meet at the Court House, Tuesday.

Pearisburg scored one in the seventh, a home run by Shrader. In the eighth after Tabor had had scored and two men out Duncan singled and came home on Williams home run, one of the longest drives ever made on Thrasher diamond.

(From Bluefield Leader, March 21st.)

Howard Payne, the young man who lost his leg in an accident at the scale house some time ago, has grown worse and was forced to return to St. Luke's hospital today. Mr. Payne's condition was reported as very good when he left the hospital several days ago, but complications have set in and it is thought that another operation will be necessary.

An unknown negro entered the offices of Lacy Bros., on Bluefield ave., about 3 o'clock this afternoon and upon the refusal of Miss Roxie Bruce, the stenographer, who was alone in the office at the time, to give him money, knocked her down, and took her purse, her glasses and a ring from her finger. Miss Bruce was discovered in an unconscious condition a few minutes later by some one from the neighboring offices. She recovered in a short time, and it is not thought she was seriously hurt.

The negro escaped, and every effort is being made by the police to capture him. The Baldwin detective agency has also been enlisted, and the conductors on all street cars asked to watch for a strange negro.

Nice shades of color like L. & M. Tuxedo Yellow or Silver Gray, and solid trim of Olive or Shaker Green, both ornament and wear, when used by adding ¾ of a gallon of Oil to each gallon of the L. & M. colors as produced at Factory.

HOME.

No matter where we wander,
No matter where we roam,
We will not find a sweeter spot
Than the one we call our home.

It may not be a palace grand
That's built of costly stone,
But just a modest little place
That we proudly call our home.

The world holds many pleasures,
And it holds delusions, too,
But home to greater bliss invites,
More peaceful and more true.

We pilgrims often search in vain
For Eden's sacred grounds,
While in the holy joys of home
An Eden may be found.

Yet do we in our happy home
Our future life prepare,
To meet our Heavenly Father
Who awaits in our home up there?

If we'd just a glance of that grand home—
But none on earth is given—
We'd know a Christian family
Is but an earlier heaven.

—Miss Annie McIntyre.

True Friendship.

It is easy enough for many people to make friends, but it is quite a different matter to keep them, because so many of us haven't learned how to be really friends at all.

We so often give our friendship for the sake of what it will bring back to us. Not a very solid foundation on which to build a lasting friendship, is it?

Real friendship is not in seeking what we can get, but what we can give.

Most of us expect too much of each other, a fact that is responsible for many and many a broken friendship; and though it may be difficult to make our friends love us more, we can very easily make them love us less by demanding too much and feeling injured when we do not get it.

A true friend is one who helps us to be better, and is quick to forget and forgive things that had best be forgotten and forgiven.

When people go away on holidays together, as well as at other times, there are sure to be moments when each gets on the other's nerves. It is inevitable. And things are said perhaps that had better have been left unsaid; and if the one to whom they are spoken bears malice there is soon a rift in the friendship difficult to bridge over.

And the remedy is obvious, even though you may feel pained and hurt—try to forget as soon as possible. It is the only plan for those who would be true friends.

This is one way in which you can help your friend; and if we are friends at all we might as well try to be good ones, and to do what we can to help each other.

Try and remember that the other people have a best self just as you have. Think of the good times you have had together, and forget the jarring note that crept in because one or the other of you was feeling a bit out of tune.

Shall we ever learn, I wonder, that other people, like ourselves, are merely men and women, owning tempers and all the other ills of life just as we do?

"Yes," you say, "but they ought to control them."

So they ought, but we none of us do all the things that we ought to, do we?

We might, therefore, at least give to our friends the same latitude that we allow to ourselves on every occasion.—Chicago Daily Journal.

Wife—Do you mean to insinuate that your judge is superior to mine!

Husband—Certainly not, my dear. Our choice of life partners proves it isn't.

Rules and Regulations.

Adopted by the State Board of Health, July 13, 1910, Under Authority of An Act Approved March 14, 1910.

These rules and regulations are based on sound sanitary principles and the well-tested experience of many States, and they constitute absolutely the minimum of what is necessary for the protection of the public health of the State. Their strict observance is not only a matter of law, but of vital economy.

DISINFECTANTS AND DISINFECTION.

Fumigation.

Rule 25. Fumigation, as required by these regulations, shall consist of the liberation of formaldehyde gas in the room or car to be fumigated after tightly closing all apertures. At least twelve ounces of formalin (40 per cent. by volume) shall be used for each 1,000 cubic feet of air space to be fumigated. It is recommended that permanganate of potash be used for the liberation of the gas.

Disinfectants.

Rule 26. Any disinfectant to be approved by the State Board of Health shall be equal in disinfecting power to a solution containing two per cent. by volume of formalin.

Rule 27. Materials shall be disinfected as follows:

Sheets, towels, linens and white goods shall be disinfected by boiling for at lest twenty minutes.

Clothing and woolen goods shall be disinfected by formaldehyde gas.

China, glass and crockery shall be disinfected by boiling for at least twenty minutes.

Bedding, other than sheets and pillow cases, shall be disinfected by formaldehyde gas.

Furniture and woodwork shall be disinfected by wiping with a standard solution (2 per cent.) of formaldehyde or its equivalent.

Mattresses used by smallpox cases shall be burned.

Handkerchiefs, rags, and other materials of small value, soiled with discharges from diphtheria, scarlet fever or smallpox shall be burned.

NUISANCES.

Rule 28. The following are declared misances dangerous to the public health and as such shall not be permitted to exist:

1. A dry closet in which the compartment containing the excrement is not water tight or fly-proof, or in which the excrement is allowed to run on the ground or be exposed to flies, or in which the excrement is not removed or buried at least once a month.

2. A cesspool, vault or tank, containing sewage, and not water-tight or fly-proof.

3. A drain or sewer which empties so that the contents can gain access to a well, spring or stream from which water is obtained for drinking purposes without purification.

Dry Closets.

Rule 29. The standard dry closet shall be provided with a water-tight tub or box for the reception of the excrement which shall be at all times protected from flies and shall be cleaned at least once each month, or as often as necessary. Cleaning shall consist of the removing of the excrement to a point at least one hundred yards from any spring, well or any house used for human habitation, and covering it completely with earth.

Special Regulations For The Report of Certain Infectious and Contagious Diseases.

Effective, November 1, 1910.

Rule 30. To carry out the provisions of section 2 of an act of Assembly, entitled "An Act to require the reporting of cases of infections, contagions, communicable and dangerous diseases to Boards of Health" (Acts of Assembly, 1910, chap. 307, p. 468,) every physician is required, subject to the penalties of the aforesaid act, to report immediately to the Secretary of the local Board of Health having jurisdiction, any cases of the following diseases occurring in his practice—namely, smallpox, Asiatic cholera, Bubonic plague, diphtheria, scarlet fever and yellow fever, which diseases are hereby denominated as Reportable Diseases, Class I.

Rule 31. To carry out the further provisions of the above act, every physician is subject to the same penalties, to report to the Secretary of the local Board having jurisdiction, once each month, any cases the following diseases occurring in his practice—namely, typhoid fever, measles, chickenpox, tuberculosis and hookworm disease, which diseases are hereby denominated as Reportable Diseases, Class II. Where any physician finds any disease of Class II unduly or abnormally prevalent in his practice, he shall report the same immediately to the State Board of Health.

Special Regulations For The Prevention of Hookworm Disease and Typhoid Fever.

Adopted July 13, 1910.
Effective January 1, 1911.

Hookworm disease and typhoid fever being widely prevalent in Virginia, and their spread being largely due to improper methods of disposing of human excrement, the following regulations are adopted by the State Board of Health for the protection of the people of the Commonwealth against these diseases:

Rule 1. Every house used as a human habitation in the State shall be provided with a proper closet for the disposal of human excrement. This closet shall be either a water closet, connected with an approved system of sewage disposal or with a public or private sewer, or where such sewer is not available shall be built and maintainted in accordance with the regulations governing the construction and maintenance of dry closets, this day adopted.

Rule 2. No person shall deposit any human excrement within one hundred yards of any house used for human habitation except into the receptable of a closet built in accordance with the regulations of the State Board of Health.

Suggestions For The Organization and Operation of Local Boards of Health.

Since the revised statute regarding the organization of local Boards of Health went into effect, the State Department of Health has received many requests for information are offered local officers. These are not mandatory, and are not a part of the foregoing rules and regulations, but their enforcement is recommended by the Department.

A Boy's Essay on the Editor.

"I don't know how newspapers came to be in the world, and I don't think God knows, for He ain't got nothing to say about them in the Bible. I think the editor is the missing link we read of and strayed in the bushes until the flood, and then came out and wrote the things up and has been here ever since. I don't think he ever died. I never saw a dead one and never heard of one getting licked. Our paper is a mighty good one; but the editor goes without underclothes all winter, and don't wear any socks and pa ain't paid his subscription since the paper started. I asked pa if that was why the editor had to suck the juice out of snowballs in winter and go to bed when he had his shirt washed in summer.

"Then pa got mad and took me out in the woodshed and licked me awful hard. If the editor makes mistakes folks say he ought to be hanged; but if the doctors makes any mistakes he buries them and people dassent say nothing because doctors can read and write Latin. When the editor makes mistakes there is lawsuits, and swearing and a big fuss, but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anybody knowin' what it means, but if the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife, he charges for the visit; but if the editor should go, he gets a charge of buckshot. Any college can make a doctor to order, but an editor has to be born."—Ex.

Go Up Ahead.

Thirty years ago in a poor schoolhouse in a back district a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word that had passed down the entire class.

"Go up ahead," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the day next he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one. Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every work.

"Dave, how do you get your lesson so well now!" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson and got my mother to hear me at night, then I go over them in the morning before I come to school, and I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave!" said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do."

Dave is to day the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributes his start to the words:

"Go up ahead and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."—Genesee Courier.

Yes, He Knew the Time.

A quiet, bashful sort of a young fellow was making a call on a Capitol Hill girl one evening not so very long ago when her father came into the parlor with his watch in his hand. It was about 9:30 o'clock. At the moment the young man was standing on a chair, straightening a picture over the piano. The girl had asked him to fix it. As he turned the old gentleman, a gruff, stout fellow said:

"Young man, do you know what time it is!"

The bashful youth got off the chair nervously. "Yes, sir," he replied. "I was just going."

He went into the hall without any delay and took his hat and coat. The girl's father followed him. As the caller reached for the door knob the old gentleman again asked him it he knew what time it was.

"Yes, sir," was the youth's reply. "Good night!" And he shot from the house without waiting to put his coat on.

After the door closed the old gentleman turned to the girl.

"What's the matter with that fellow!" he asked. "My watch ran down this afternoon, and I wanted him to tell me the time so that I could set it."—Denver Post.

He Just Simply Asked.

An orator with long whiskers was eloquently making a free silver speech.

"Gents," said he, "our country's welfare demand that silver be kept at its face value. If the government marks a dollar it follows that it must be worth 200 cents."

"Excuse me—may I ask a simple question!" spoke up a man in the rear of the hall.

"Certainly, sir," said the orator.

"Then," said the man, coming forward, "if the government marhed your whiskers hay would a mule eat them.—Ladies Home Journal.

Not Much Difference.

A stranger addressed the farmer's boy across the fence:

"Young man, your corn looks kind of yellow."

"Yes, that's the kind we planted."

"Don't look as if you would get more than half a crop."

"We don't expect to. The landlord gets the other half."

Then after a short time the man said:

"Boy, there isn't much difference between you and a fool."

"None," replied the boy, "only the fence."—London Standard.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM---it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Don't waste your money and injure your property.

The L. & M. Paint has been in use for thirty five years.

You make one half of it by adding ¾ of a gallon of Linseed Oil to each gallon. It then costs about $1.60 per gallon, and is the best paint that can be made.

Our sales agents are H. B. Shelton & Co., Pearisburg.

FARMERS SHOULD ATTEND.

The Norfolk & Western Railway Co., in conjunction with the Virginia State Agricultural Department will run a "Farmer's Special" train through our county on Tuesday, April 4th.

The train will be composed of several cars, one of which will be fitted up with many and varied farm products, and two of the cars are fitted out as auditoriums in which lectures will be given along the lines of better farming generally. Among other speakers will be Commissioner of Agriculture, Geo. W. Koiner, whose authority on these subjects has attained a wide reputation.

These exhibits and lectures are free to all, and are doing much to the advantage of our farmers, and as many as can possibly be present on this occasion should avail themselves of the opportunity.

THE TEMPERANCE PROGRAM.

On Tuesday evening in the Methodist church the W. T. C. U. gave a temperance programme.

A large audience listened attentively to every word that was said, and did much to inspire the speakers of the evening.

The declamation contest was a strong one, showing much talent for public speaking on the part of the young men, and faithful and careful training on the part of those who had that work in hand. The contest was extremely close. The declaimers were Messrs. John Shumate, John R Johnston, Sidney Scott, Roby Wysong, Tracey Whittaker, Clarence Strader, William Fletcher and John Hoback. All the young men taking part in the contest were first year high school students except two who were from the last grammar grade.

The judges for the occasion were Hon. Alex. Meadows, Athens, W. Va., Hal Tyler, Radford, Va., and Col. Jas. D. Johnston, Roanoke, Va.

Between the contest and address Miss Mary Francis Mason recited "Brier Rose," which did great credit to the occasion, to herself and to her mother who trained her.

In a few well chosen remarks Prof. Jas. R. Stafford introduced Col. Jas. D. Johnston, the speaker of the evening. Col. Johnston well knows the kind feeling that goes out to him from the people of this community, and so feels perfectly at home when among us. His address was strong with facts and figures, and delivered in a way that had great weight with the audience.

Hon. Alex Meadows delivered the medal, and he certainly knows how to perform that duty. He said if he had known what duty was awaiting him when he came to Court, he would have brought along with him seven medals, so that none of the class would have been disappointed. The boys say they mean to notify him next contest. To Mr. Sidney Scott of Bane, Va., the beautiful gold medal was awarded.

After a "Good night" song the audience was dismissed by Rev. Mr. Miles.

JUBILEE MEETING.

On next Sunday evening in the Methodist Church at the regular hour for service the ladies of the Methodist and the Baptist Foreign Missionary Societies will give a joint programme in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Movement.

WHITE GATE.

"When you can't make any headway,
And each day seems like a dead day,
And the thorns begin to pester till your nerves are shattered, racked,

A Pleasant Trip.

Friday a. m. during opening exercises Mr. Brown announced his intention of varying the usual program for week-end exercises and instead of debate we would have a mountain climb in place of essays; field glasses and for quotation a view of Virginia's lofty mountain peaks and fertile valleys.

Accordingly at one o'clock we left the building, a party of forty odd "High School" pupils and four teachers, all eager to distinguish ourselves for bravery and endurance. We did our heroic best and at the end of one and one-half hours were on the summit of "Earth Quake Peak," that lofty mountain which towers over our town and stands behind our building, a grim monster who frowns at truants and smilingly beckons the faithful toilers on to grander heights. The ascent was very difficult, at times even dangerous; in some places the few bushes were our only means of support for the side of the slope was actually perpendicular. There was no semblance of a road or even path for I don't think that part of the country is frequented by humans or even quadrupeds. One of the boys related that an eagle experienced great difficulty in soaring above such rough land.

We were more than repaid for all our efforts, by the view from the top. The weather was ideal and one could see for miles and miles far up and down the beautiful valleys of New River and Wolf Creek. Bluff City was easily discernible with the glasses while almost at the foot of the mountain nestles the picturesque little town we are so fond of with the "High School" building in the fore ground.

If possible the descent was even more difficult than the climb; for though far easier it was if possible more dangerous. We leaped like kangaroos from one bush to another holding to whatever came our way for support, from pine trees and cliffs to rhododendron and spruce pine. We did not retrace our steps in returning; but came down the opposite slope, and landed at the beautiful falls in "Dry Branch." There are several leaps of perhaps from ten to twenty feet and the scenery is perfectly beautiful

Both sides of the narrow valley are over grown with rhododendron and ferns and moss. Immense rocks covered with moss and ferns project from the steep sides and icicles five feet long hang from their edge.

We followed the course of this swift mountain stream for quite a distance, climbing over rocks and fallen trees, often stumbling but never loosing courage; we arose each time more determined to retain our balance in the future and to look oftener to the ground and more seldom at the beautiful cascades we were leaving behind us. We came at length to a tram road that leads to town and furnished a smoother path for the remainder of our journey. At six o'clock we reached home, tired, stiff, but happy, and all voted it the grandest outing it ever fell our lot to enjoy.

FOR THOSE WHO FAIL.

"All honor to him who shall win the prize."
The world has cried for a thousand years,
But to him who tries, and who fails and dies
I give great honor and glory and tears.

Give glory and honor and pitiful tears
To all who fall in their deeds sublime,
Their ghosts are many in the van of years,
They were born with time in advance of time.

Oh, great is the hero who wins a name,
But greater many and many a time,
Some pale-faced fellow who dies in shame,
And lets God finish the thought sublime.

And great is the man with a sword undrawn,
And good is the man who refrains from wine,
But the man who falls and yet still fights on,
Lo, he is the twin- born brother of mine.

APRIL FOR GOOD WELLS AND GOOD WATER.

April is the spring-cleaning month, and should serve to repair the well as much as to dust the carpets. Nothing on the farm is more important or more valuable than pure water. Bad or impure water is more dangerous than the deadliest poison, and always affects those who drink it. Now is the time of the year to get your well or spring in shape for the summer.

Wells are polluted by organic matter getting into them. This matter comes from human beings or from animals, and is always bad for those who drink it. If it comes from a case of typhoid, or from a person who carries typhoid germs, and gets into the well, it will produce typhoid fever in those who drink it. This matter gets into the well usually through cracks in the top of the well, through soiling the bucket by touching it with dirty hands or setting it on a dirty floor, or through holes in the top of the well.

To be sure that the well is good and that dangerous material is kept out, the following things must be true:

1. The well must be not less than 15 feet deep. As a general proposition, the deeper the better.

2. The top must be sound and tight so that no water which falls on it can drip back into the well.

3. The well should be provided with a pump or with a bucket which empties itself and does not have to be touched. The double bucket is always dangerous.

4. The ground immediately around the well should be sloped up to the well and banked with clay or covered with cement, so that all water spilled around the well will run off and not trickle back.

5. The well should be cased with brick or with a terra-cotta pipe and the space back of the casing filled with sand.

6. A spring in a limestone county cannot be so protected as to make it perfectly sure that it does not come from underground streams at a place far from the well.

7. The spring should be so protected that water cannot was into it from the hill-side above or from the plantform below. This is best done by cementing or stoning the curbing at least a foot above the ground all around and putting in a pipe for the overflow. All water should then be drawn from the overflow pipe, and not by dipping buckets or dippers into the well.—Virginia Health Bulletin.

The Battle of Life.

Life is not a summer holiday, or a personally conducted tour through Joyland, or a dream we much accept just as it comes; it is a struggle, a battle. It is not easy; it cannot be made really easy; but we can make it a bit easier for ourselves and others. We must do our part; we must fight—fight, too, with no war maps of the, full campaign spread out before us for our consultation and inspiration. We must fight the enemy that is nearest, vanquish the duty that stands in our way, hely the faint and fallen, win every vantage point of higher, clearer vision, be ready for whatever comes, with a true soldier's defiance of the odds against him. Whatever is worth while is worth the fight to attain it. If you want happiness, fight for it like a man; fight to be worthy of it; fight to win it; fight to keep it; fight to share it; fight to help others get theirs. And, when things look darkest, fight harder.

The battlefield in our fight for happiness is not the world, but—self. More attainment of wealth, fame, success, position, power or possession does not necessarily bring happiness. The history of the ages proves this. Happiness come ever from within. It is the atmosphere of an inner calm and peace. We must battle against the elements within us that keep happiness from us, and valiantly on the side of those that will help us win it. There are trails within us that often poison the cup of happiness when it is sate within our hand—jealousy, malice, stubbornness, envy, pride, selfishness, idleness, fear, worry, suspicion and a host of others.—William George Jordan, Globe-Demcrat.

Married Ten Years and Got Nineteen Children.

Muskegee, Okla., March 16—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scott, of Highland, Kansas, are seeking a home in this state with plenty of land. They need it, for although they have been married not quite ten years they are the parents of nineteen children, all boys, and thirteen of them living. They hold the record for triplets, having five sets to their credit, and two sets of twins. All of the thirteen boys living are under five years.

Recently the Scotts deciding that they must find more land went to Alberta, Canada. They were not satisfied there and returned. On the return trip Mrs. Scott and her thirteen children all rode on one first class ticket. At Omaha the conductor made a vigorous protest.

Mrs. Scott dug down in her valise and brought out the family bible in which was recorded the names and ages of each of the children. The conductor had to give in. The mother and children occupied five double seats in the homesceekers car and paid for only one.

Rules and Regulations.

Adopted by the State Board of Health, July 13, 1910, Under Authority of An Act Approved March 14, 1910.

These rules and regulations are based on sound sanitary principles and the well-tested experience of many States, and they constitute absolutely the minimum of what is necessary for the protection of the public health of the State. Their strict observance is not only a matter of law, but of vital economy.

I. Legal Authority.

The legal authority under which the local Boards of Health operate is found in the Bulletin containing the Public Health Law of the State, and other copies of which will be furnished on request. The law on public health will be construed for the local boards by the Commonwealth's Attorney for the county, who is their legal adviser.

II. Composition of Local Boards.

The local Boards of Health are composed of four members, three of whom are physicians appointed annually by the State Board of Health, the fourth member, who is also Chairman of the Board of Health, being the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors of the county or the mayor of the town, as the case may be. The clerk of the court, formerly a member of the Board, was left out of the new act as it was being engrossed, though in the bill as it passed the Legislature. The engrossed and signed act is the law.

III. Organization.

Under the law the Board elects from its members a Secretary, who is the executive officer of the Board. It is recommended to County Boards of Health that the territory of the Board be divided equally among the medical members of the Board, the calls arising in any territory being investigated first by the member to whom that territory is assigned.

IV. Meetings.

It is recommended that the rules of the Board require regular meetings, not less frequent than quarterly, other meetings being called as necessary by the chairman or secretary.

The regular meetings should be held at some place within the county, most convenient to a majority of the members, special meetings being held wherever expedient.

V. Duties of the Secretary.

The secretary should keep the minutes of the meetings, should be the custodian of the records of the Board, and its property, supplies and the like. He should likewise enforce all legal orders of the Board, serve notices, publish regulations, and act as the executive officer of the Board.

VI. Duties of Members of Local Boards.

Each member of the local Board should have immediate charge of the territory assigned to him. He should make an inspection of reported nuisances and instruct persons maintaining nuisances to abate same.

He should visit the schools of his territory once each month, noting and reporting to the Board failures to observe regulations regarding sanitation.

He should investigate all reported epidemics or undue prevalence of disease, reporting the facts to the secretary or to the State Department.

VII. Compensation.

It is recommended that as soon as possible after organization the Board appear before the Board of Supervisors and arrange a scale of compensation for the various services to be rendered the county. This may be in the form of an annual fee or of special fees for special services. These fees should include the following items:

Inspecting nuisances.

Visiting cases of infectious disease for purposes of diagnosis, of quarantine or instruction.

Vaccination.

Inspection of schools, jails, etc.

Disinfection.

If the Supervisors and the Board cannot agree on a schedule of compensation, notify the State Department, who will endeavor to adjust the matter.

It should be noted in this connection that members of local Health Boards are not ex-officio physicians to the poor or to the jail. These offices are filled under the provisions of other acts.

VIII. Quarantine and Isolation.

Immediately upon receipt of report of diseases of Class I, listed in Rule 30, the Secretary of the local Board should notify the member in whose territory the disease is reported. The member should visit the case and see that the disease is quarantined in accordance with the regulations of the State Board, the premises placarded and that proper precautions are being observed to prevent its spread.

In cases of smallpox, the method of diagnosis is specified by the regulations of the State Board.

Violations of quarantine should be reported at once to the Secretary of the local Board.

In case of undue or unusual prevalence of any disease of Class II, physicians should follow the procedure outlined in rule 31 without delay.

IX. Fumigation.

Every health officer should keep on hand two or more of the standard fumigating buckets. These should be purchased by the county in advance and kept on hand. They may be obtained from Powers & Anderson, Richmond, Va.; J. C. Hagan, Pharm., Danville, Va.; The Obemical Supply Co., Richmond, Va; The Alcatraz Co., Richmond, Va.

X. Vaccine Virus.

Owing to the fact that vaccine virus keeps only a short time, it is recommended that it be ordered as needed, by wire, from the State Department. When smallpox is prevalent in the neighborhood, a small supply should be kept on hand. Virus should be kept in a refrigerator until used.

XI. Diphtheria Antitoxin.

The State Department has no funds for free supply of antitoxin. It has, however, made arrangements to supply it at the lowest possible cost to the citizens of the State. The Board of Supervisors should be induced to purchase a small supply, enough for every member of the Board of Health to keep a supply on hand, for the use when necessary. The usual amount being one 1,000, one 3,000 and one 5,000 unit package for each member. A sufficient supply for the three members costs $11.01. This should be made free to the poor; those able to pay the cost price should do so. This antitoxin may be kept six months, and then if unused may be exchanged for fresh. Physicians should note carefully the new and revised regulations for the distribution of diphtheria antitoxin outlined in the Health Bulletin, September, 1910.

Placards, postal cards for contagious disease, reports, etc., will be furnished the Secretary of each local Board for distribution to the other members.

XII. The State Department.

The State Department of Health stands ready at all times to co-operate with local Boards, to furnish them expert advice and assistance and every aid possible in their work.

The policy of the State Department is to leave as much as possible to the local Boards. It will interfere with local conditions only when absolutely necessary, and will support local Boards and their policies wherever possible.

The Democracy of Death.

In the democracy of the dead, all men at last are equal. There is neither rank nor station nor prerogative in the republic of the grave. At this fatal threshold the philosopher ceases to be wise, and the song of the poet is silent. Dives relinquishes his millions, and Lazarus his rage. The poor man is as rich as the richest, and the rich man as poor as the pauper. The creditor looses his usury and the debtor is acquitted of his obligation. There the proud man surrenders his dignities, the politician his honors and the worlding his pleasures; the invalid needs no physician, and the laborer rests from unrequited toil.

Here at last is nature's final decree in equity. The wrongs of time are redressed, injustice is expiated, the irony of fate is refuted, the unequal distribution of wealth, honor, capacity, pleasure and opportunity, which makes life so cruel and inexplicable ceases in the realm of death. The strongest there has no supremacy and the weakest needs no defense. The mightiest captain succumbs to that invincible adversary, who disarms the victor and the vanquished.—John J. Ingalls.

In cases of rheumatism relief from pain makes sleep and rest possible. This may be obtained by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. For sale by all dealers.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's," is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

FARMER'S DAY AT NARROWS.

It was a very rainy day, not a ray of sunshine was to be seen but that did not keep the farmers away from the meeting Tuesday. Every car was crowded, more than two hundred being present. For over two hours the crowd eagerly listened to speakers, who showed much earnestness and a thorough knowledge of their subjects. Every speech was terse, pointed and practical. They were practical farmers themselves and they evidently understood the needs of the farming classes. They were plainly pleased with their greeting, explaining that it was the largest audience that had thus far greeted them on their trip.

The first speaker took up the subject of soil improvement. He briefly discussed lime, fertilizer, clovers, and finally the all absorbing subject of alfalfa. He was careful to explain that lime was not a fertilizer as many people thought, but rather a stimulant. It should not be used on all kinds of land and for all purposes. All our broomsedge sods, however, needed lime. It should be used judiciously, the persons using being careful to study its use and abuse.

He did not endorse the indiscriminate use of commercial fertilizers. He stated that he used them himself on his own farm to increase the yield but would rather do without them if he could.

He was most emphatic in his desire to impress his audience with the great benefit clover is to all kinds of soils. He stated the positive rule that no land should be sowed in grass for meadow or permanent pasture without a certain proportion of clover. The farmer who sows clover and sows it plentifully will keep a fertile farm forever fertile.

The next topic he discussed was alfalfa. As the population of the world grows greater, throwing a correspondingly increased burden on the soil alfalfa must more and more take the place of other grasses. It not only produces a far greater yield but wonderfully renews the fertility of the soil. He described fully the necessary preparation for the crop. It is not an ordinary grass and ordinary care in preparing the seed bed is not sufficient. Large quantities of lime must be used to insure a fair stand of alfalfa.

The next speaker discussed the subject of fruits. He said that is a far more difficult matter to produce fruit now than it was fifty years ago. The country is full of fruit diseases. It takes frequent sprayings and it is useless to try to produce fruit nowadays without giving it that care and attention that its importance demands. No crop is so profitable if properly handled. He spoke in enthusiastic terms of our markets. We are just on the edge of one of the best markets in the world. It is constantly growing better. The demand for fruit is ever growing greater. The increased production is not by any means keeping pace with the increased demand.

Too much praise cannot be given to that section of our county for the very large attendance of the meeting. They showed by their earnest attention and practical questions that they were interested in the subjects discussed. Farming is no longer a hap hazard occupation but it is a scientific one. Farmers are studying their business and are trying to farm better every year.

There has been a wonderful improvement in the farms of Giles County during the past twenty years. New homes have been built, the grass is better, blooded horses are kept, larger crops are grown, the washes are healed and most farmers have money in bank in addition to the improvements of their farms. It is no longer the last occupation but it is the first. No longer are the sons and daughters of farmers regarded as in a little lower social scale by their town and city cousin. The telephone, rural mail delivery and other conveniences are making farm life more attractive. Let us keep our bright boys and girls at home on the farms. They are better, happier, healthier and in the long run are usually wealthier than those who try their fortunes in distant states or go to towns and cities.

VIRGINIA FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS.

The Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, convening in Roanoke in May, promises to be of unusual interest; four years old and including seventeen clubs, it has allied itself to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and is rapidly taking place among the older and leading state federations. The Civic Betterment Club of Roanoke has the honor of entertaining this year, and is planning to make the sessions most attractive. The social side will be of minor importance, but will include an initial reception at Hotel Roanoke and a sight seeing trip to Mill Mountain.

Mrs. Phillip N. Moore, president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the leading speaker on the program for the second evening; the third evening will be given over to "Civics and civic improvements;" the lecturer, Mr. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg. Pennsylvania, comes as the guest of the Roanoke Club, whose deep interest in this question is largely due to the impetus given by him, several years ago in his charmingly illustrated lectures.

It is the ardent wish of Mrs. W. W. King of Staunton, that all women's clubs in Virginia which have for their subject social uplift, or civic improvement, or whose interest is with the advancement of schools, or domestic science, should ally themselves with the state federation, thus adding greatly to their strength and influence.

The Roanoke Clubs extend a cordial invitation to such as are not yet federated, to send to the May meeting, as guests of the club, a member each, who as a visitor, will see and judge the advantages given by federation.

EDITOR VIRGINIAN:

Your paper received, and is always a welcome visitor.

The sad news contained therein I was sorry to see—namely the death of Uncle Billy Woods. I have known Uncle Billy Woods for years. He was a good man, good citizen, and while he will be greatly missed, he has gone to his reward.

The other sad news was the passing away of Mr. Charles F. Brown. I have known him since childhood, lived near him, and can truthfully say that he was a Christian gentleman and will be sadly missed.

Whilst in your city, I met Dr. Hobson, Bros. Gott, Mat Peters, Lloyd Fry and Tom Pearson, and as usual, enjoyed a conversation with them. Only saw Jesse Woodrum for a few minutes, and could not talk to D. J. Chapman, he was too busy. Wanted to see Skid Dennis, but was told he was confined to his room with old age. Very sorry I did not get to see Capt. D. W. Mason. Wish Giles county was full of just such men.

I spent the night with my friend Charley Munsey, and there I met his good old mother, and it is an inspiration to me to talk to a good woman like her. Next I went to Sugar Run to see my big brother, J. H. Peck. He looks well for his age and the devil will never get him, as he has a good wife. The devil never got a man who had a good wife. On my return I met my old friend, John Floyd Johnston. He is looking well and is a good man.

Have already made this too long. I love the people of Giles county so well I can't write about them without making letters too long.

With best wishes for you and your paper.

Bogus Cloth.

What is Paint? Some people think anything labelled "paint" is paint, but there's a difference, just as much as between one kind of cloth and another. Cloth nine tenths cotton and one tenth wool, is bogus cloth. Cloth all wool wears to the limit. Paint at a price between 75 cents and $1.50 is like bogus cloth. The L. & M. Paint is all wool and wears to the limit. There's a reason. Our agent are H. B. Shelton & Co.

Days of Dizziness

Come to Hundreds of Pearisburg People.

There are days of dizziness:
Spells of headache, sideache, backache;
Sometimes rheumatic pains;
Often urinary disorders.
All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.
Can Pearisburg residents doubt this statement?

Mrs. Patrick Nelligan, Monroe St., Wytheville, Va., says: "I am pleased to state that Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney complaint. I suffered for years from attacks of dizziness, accompanied by severe pains through my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly recommended that I procured a supply and it required the contents of only one box to rid me of every symptom of kidney complaint. My present good health speaks strongly for the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills."

HE DREW THE LINE.

"I've been a wicked man," he said,
I've done a many crimes,
I've shot at folks by way of jokes a half-a-dozen times;
I've gone in broad daylight an' stole a widder's fattened shoat
But though I've been a man o' sin, I never sold my vote.

"I've set fire to a tenement to see the engines run,
I've swiped the alms from blind men's palms an' thought that it was fun;
An' once when it was bitter cold I took a cripple's coat;
I've scuttled ships on pleasure trips—
but never sold my vote.

"I've dynamited savings banks an'
skipped off with the cash;
Gold bricks of brass I've made to pass
with all a con man's dash;
I've been a counterfeiter too, an' made a greasy note;
I've held up trains out on the plains—
but never sold my vote.

"I've worked the shells at county fairs an' pockets, too, I've picked;
I've sold fake stocks in thousand blocks—the conned have tricked;
Each victim's tears were like three cheers whene'er I'd get his goat;
Yet though, old pard, my heart was hard, I never sold my vote.

"I've burgled here and burgled there,
an' run a rackin' hook;
You'll find my name is one o' fame
with almost any crook;
But set this down"—the dying breath was rattling in his throat—
"Although I've been a man o' sin, I never sold my vote."

A SOUTHERN MOTHER.

I would not obtrude any sorrow of my own heart upon my readers, but I should be ungrateful if I did not here record my deep appreciation of the many sympathetic messages that have come to me in the bereavement that turned my joyous home-coming into a time of mourning—the death of my mother just two hours after my arrival in New York. Nor will it be thought out of place, I trust, it I add a word or two, written not only for the sake of the dead, but for the sake of the other

"Old mothers with white hair
And kindly eyes, and lips grown strangely sweet
With murmured blessings," whose more fortunate sons and daughters have not yet walked the beaten way that leads to a mother's grave.

I sometimes wonder if the world has ever known a higher type of womanhood than the Southern women of my mother's time. They grew up on the plantations of the Old South in what proved to be the sunset glow of a patriarchal civilization that has vanished as completely as the social order of Homer's time, but whose charm and romance still lure us to dreams of its beauty. They were just budding into womanhood when the fateful war drums sounded in '61, and their young souls were tested in the four years of epic struggle and distress that followed. And then, with spirits made perfect through suffering, with a dignity which poverty had not altered and a courage which defeat had not shaken, they took up life on the small farms of the South and became the inspiration of the best that was wrought by the men in tattered gray in the long ordeal of our rebuilding.

To that generation my mother belonged, and I think her spirit was sweeter for the times through which she had lived. Just as I write this there comes a letter from a schoolmate who went with me to the little country school house of our boyhood: "I loved your mother because she was my mother's friend. But more than that, I loved her for her own sake. Even to me as an unkempt youth, she was no ordinary woman. Her gentleness and courtesy, her culture and elegant bearing, impressed me as in few women I have known." And yet she shrank from no hard task of the every day farmer's wife.

Before her marriage in 1880 she was a teacher; and not so much by any aid from the schools as to the instruction and inspiration I received from her do I owe whatever material success I have been able to win. Yet I feel, and I know she feels, that this is the smaller part of the debt that I am due her. If I have kept, if I may hope to keep, in Tennyson's fine phrase, my "trust in all things high"; if I may hope that "though I trip and fall, I shall not blind my soul with clay," I must pay tribute to the influence of a mother and a father whose well lived Faith enabled them to appraise life's values fairly. They fired me with ambition for achievement and success, but they taught first and most of all that the truest victory or defeat is within one's own soul, and that the earth knows no more tragic failure than the man who has bought so-called Success at the cost of his only enduring treasures—his manhood and his ideals.

I cannot claim to be worthy of their teachings, but in this hour I may at least bear witness to what I owe them and to the fact that the heritage of such influences and the heritage of the faith that alone can console us in the hour of supreme sorrow, are treasures besides which mere gold and lands and stocks should be pitiful indeed.

Health Proverbs.

Here are a few health proverbs from the State Health Department, which should be committed to memory.

"The man who says he had rather have smallpox than be vaccinated, never had the smallpox."

"An open window is better than an open grave."

"Warm rooms have killed more people than ever froze to death."

"If you let the child have measles when he is young, you may save a doctor's bill later on, but you may have to pay the undertaker now."

"A good iron pump costs less than a case of typhoid."

"If your milkman brings you warm milk, make it hot for him."

"Wire screens in the windows may keep crepe from the door."

"A fly in the milk often means a member of the family in the grave."

"If some people were as much afraid of flies as they are of bad water, there would be less typhoid."

"When you see a child looking like an angel, do not kiss it; you might make a real angel out of it."

"Scarlatina may not sound so dangerous as scarlet fever, but ask the undertaker."

Plain Talk to Parents.

Do not fail to make allowance for slight exaggerations when hearing of pranks in school.

Do not accuse the teacher of undue favoritism. If she is kinder to one child than to another it's because that one does not take advantage of the liberty allowed him. This is simply justice.

Do not tell the teacher that Willie will not line. She may know better.

Do not condemn the teacher without a fair hearing. This is accorded to even the worst criminal. There are usually two sides to a story.

Do not send a scathing note to the teacher by Nellie, the contents of which she knows. Her aggressive look of triumph is not soothing and the teacher is only human.

Do not make unfavorable comment upon the methods of the teacher in the presence of your child. Send him to carry in wood while you are doing so, if it must be done.

Do not expect the teacher to understand Jimmie's disposition as understood by you have studied it for six years and there are still kinks in it which you have failed to straighten out.

Do not plead lack of time to visit the school. There is no excuse for shirking a duty.

Do not reproach the teacher with the fact that "Tommy has not learned a single thing the entire year." She is not responsible for his lack of brains.

Do not send a verbal request to have Jennie's seat changed. There is often no vacant seat and one change usually means at least half a dozen.

Do not forget that the teacher's in your child is personal. She will do more to help him than any one except yourself.

Do not expect the teacher to manage without friction a child whom you yourself have never been able to control.

Do not insist that the teacher is keeping your child back through spite. She will hardly risk her reputation as an instructor to gratify a personal grudge however disgreeable the child may be.

Do not forget that the parents owe a duty to the teacher just as surely as the teacher does to the child.

Facts About Animal Structure.

The complexity of animal structure is marvelous. A caterpillar contains more than 2,000 muscles. In a human body are some 2,500,000 perspiration glands, communicating with the surface by ducts, having a total length of some ten miles, while that of the arteries, veins and capillaries must be very great. The blood contains millions of corpuscles, each a structure in itself. The rods in the retina, which are supposed to be the ultimate recipients of light, are estimated at 30,000,000, and Meinert has calculated that the gray matter of the brain is built of at least 600,000,000 cells.

No Reference to Allusions.

"I am what I am today," said the speaker, "because of my own unaided efforts. I have come up from the very bottom."

"Uh huh!" grunted Farmer Corntossel, who sat in the audience; "I reckon it's about time to skim you off, too."

If a majority of the audience thought of Illinois and the United States senate about this time, of course we are not to blame.

Telephone Courtesy.

Phone directories give much information concerning the use of phones, but one thing which is conspicuously absent and which is badly needed is a page or two of "phone etiquette," for it is a fact that many people who ordinarily are models of politeness lack much of sustaining their reputations in this particular when using the phone. No one, for instance, would thing of walking into a business house and approaching the first person they saw with the question, "Who are you?" Of course not. One would say "I wish to see Mr. So-and-So." But when one answers the telephone the first question with which he is greeted is, "Who is that?" If it happens to be a business house and the firm name is given to the party at the other end of the line, the next question invariably is, "Who is that at the phone?" Now the one who answers may be entirely unknown to the party who calls and the giving of the name will not convey the slightest information of value, besides the question is a distinct breech of good manners and takes valuable time. How much simpler, more polite and easier it would be to say, "I wish to speak to Mr. So-and-So?" Try it the next time you use the phone.

Brain Leaks.

Even a clam knows when to shut up.

The self-made man has usually spent overtime on his vanity.

Shallow men, like shallow wells, usually yield indifferent product.

Anyhow, the hobble skirt gives some men less opportunity to hide behind their wives.

The larger the pumpkin the coarser the meat—do not judge men by their physical size.

Doubtless the popular election of senators would result in the election of more popular senators.

If woman's hair grew the way she fixes it, wouldn't there be a big money in the barber business?

Some people spend so much time practicing religion that they never have time for practical Christianity.

Why Is It That

When a girl of six talks nonsense she is cute?

When a girl of 12 talks nonsense she is stupid?

When a girl of 20 talks nonsense she is naive?

When a woman of 40 talks nonsense she is kittenish?

When a woman of 60 talks nonsense she is antiquated?

When a dying woman talks nonsense she is delirious?

Back Home Move Growing.

Roanoke, Va., April 6, 1911.—Monday, May the first, has been made the day for you to write a personal invitation to one or more of your friends, now living in the North, West or Northwest, to come back to the South, "Back Home." You are earnestly requested to do this, and to send their names and address to me on a postal card, and if convenient, a copy of your letter. We desire to reinforce your appeal by literature and proofs that the South is now different and better for them than the South they formerly knew—better, in fact than any other part of the United States.

The time has come to resist the constant drain upon the South for people to go to Western lands to make business for the Western railroads. The "Back Home" movement is encouraging a return movement of our own people, and a discouragement to further in roads upon our already scanty population.

There are five million of our Southern people in the west. Will you not help us to reach them all on May the first?

This is something definite you can do towards advertising your State, and at the expense of only two or three cents and a few minutes time. The publisher of this paper is giving his space (which is his stock in trade) to aid this movement, because it is for the common good. Will you not do what is here asked of you?

Yours for the South,
F. H. LABAUME,
N. & W. Railway Co.

Virginia Clerks Walk the Plank.

Washington, April 7.—Sixty-eight clerks in the census bureau, all from Virginia, have been removed from their positions since the first of April. The total number dismissed from the service is 192, of which number more than a third are from a single State.

It is significant that of this exceptionally large proportion of dismissals, not one was released for inefficiency. But all the clerks from Virginia who were removed lost their places because their state had received appointments in excess of the quota allowed under the apportionment law.

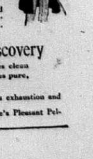
During the rush following the census extra help was required and clerks were put in from any place where they could be found. Now that the rush is over and dismissals are in order, the clerks are being let out in such a way as to even up the allotment by States.

Virginia, having been close to Washington when clerks were needed supplied more than its quota and now they are being relieved from duty.

It is expected that an additional number will be dismissed next month.

Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy.

A Clean Man



Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

An unknown negro coming from towards Glen Lyn and going to Pearisburg was drowned here Tuesday morning about nine o'clock, whilst crossing Wolf Creek. The negro was riding a mule, and when about half way the creek the mule stumbled and the negro fell and after getting up and starting to walk out, was washed down the stream by the swift tide into New River. At this writing his body has not yet been found.

The bridge, which is being erected across New River at this place, has not been damaged by high waters thus far. The Bluefield paper had been misinformed, when it stated, that it had been damaged so much. Of course work has been delayed on account of the heavy rain fall, but then that is all.

CASE OF LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Cheboygan, Michigan, Postmaster Met, Wooed and Won Bride Within a Month.

Knoxville, Tenn., April 7.—Rather a romantic wedding was celebrated last night at nine o'clock at the parlors of the Hotel Atkin, when Rev. LeRoy G. Henderson of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, pronounced the words that made Hon. D. P. McMullen of Cheboygan, Mich., and Miss Nancy Shannon Frances, of White Gate, Va., husband and wife.

The romance which culminated last night, began exactly four weeks ago when Mr. McMullen arrived at Tate Spring to spend a vacation. Miss Frances was already at the resort and on the day of Mr. McMullen's arrival, they became acquainted. Although having neither seen or heard of each other before, they immediately fell in love, and were together continually at the springs. Yesterday morning they announced to their new formed friends at Tate Spring that they "would live no longer without each other," and that they were coming to Knoxville to be married.

The bride is a daughter of Capt. M. A. Frances, a wealthy land owner of White Gate, Va., and as yet, he has heard nothing of his daughter's love affair.

Mr. McMullen is postmaster at Cheboygan and is reputed one of the wealthiest citizens of that town. He was three times state senator from the seventh district of Michigan, twice mayor of Cheboygan and is now serving his third term as postmaster at that place. He has been previously married but his wife died some two years ago.

Accompanying the couple to this city from Tate Spring were J. F. Mahoney, president of the Cheboygan County Saving bank, at Cheboygan, and S. E. Martin, postmaster at Indian River, Mich., both of whom were here with Mr. McMullen spending their vacation. Both of them declared last evenings to Journal and Tribune representative that they had had very little vacation, as they have been too busy ever since their arrival trying to help Mr. McMullen win his bride.

Mr. and Mrs. McMullen will leave the city this morning for Cheboygan. Enroute, they expect to stop for a few days at Detroit. They will make their home at Cheboygan. They will be accompanied by Mr. Martin.

The Census Man.

"How old are you?" he asked of me,
"And is your color white?
How many in your family?
Can you both read and write?
How much a week do you bring home?
How much goes to your wife?
How often downtown do you roam?
Have you insured your life?

"What was your great grandfather's name?
At what age did he die?
When was it your ancestors came
From Germany and why?
What color was your grandma's hair?
Was she brunette or blond?
And did your great grandfather swear
And did he e'er abscond?

"How many times do you eat meat?
What is your favorite dish?
Is your wife's cooking fit to eat,
And do you care for fish?
Do you pay rent or own this place?
Have you stored up your pelf?
When whiskers grow upon your face,
Say, do you shave yourself?

"How many times have you been wed?
How oft sued for divorce?
How many of your wives are dead?
Do you set on a horse?
And do you smoke or drink too hard?
And do you keep a pup?
Have you a garden in your yard,
And are your sweet peas up?"

I answered him right patiently,
I told him all I knew,
I gave to him my pedigree
And swore that it was true,
With courage he performed his task,
Nor ever wavered from it,
But one thing he forgot to ask—
"Have you seen Halley's comet?"

Mabel Ashton's Dream.

BY REV. COURTNEY H. PENN.
(Published by Request.)

As the guests came together in the brilliant lighted parlors, at the home of Mabel Ashton, that crisp winter evening, there was nothing unusual in the appearance of the rooms to indicate that the party to which they had been invited was to be, in any respect, different from the round of gaiety to which they had been devoting themselves for the greater part of the winter.

Some of the guests, as they greeted their young hostess, noticed an unusual degree of nervousness in her manner, but attributing it to the excitement of preparation and anticipation, thought no more of it, and all were soon engaged in conversation and in making up their cards for the various dances of the evening.

The musicians were in their places, and the young people beginnig to wonder why the signal was not given for the orchestra to strike up, when Mabel Ashton, her sweet face flushed and pale by turns, took her stand near the musicians, and, after closing her eyes for a moment, during which the room became perfectly still, in a voice at first trembling, but soon clear and steady, she said:

"Friends, I know you will think me very queer, but before we do anything else I must tell you a little story.

"I had a dream last night which has made such an impression on my mind and heart that I must tell it to you. I dreamed that tonight had arrived and you had all assembled in these rooms, when there came to the door and was ushered in, a guest who seemed strangely familiar and yet whom I could not recognize.

"He had a rare face, peaceful, yet a little sad in its expression, and his eyes were more penetrating than any I had ever seen before. He was dressed in neat, yet very plain clothing, but there was something in his appearance which marked him as no ordinary man.

"While I was trying to think where I had seen him, he advanced to me, took my hand, and said gently, 'You do not recognize me, Mabel?' Surprised at such a form of salutation from a stranger, I could only say: 'Your face, sir, seems familiar, yet I cannot recall your name.'

"'Yet I am one whom you have invited here this evening, or, I should rather say, one to whom both you and your parents have extended many invitations to be present here whenever I am able to come. You have even invited me to make my home here; and I have come tonight to join our little company.'

"'I beg a thousand pardons,' I replied, 'but you mystify me all the more, and I beg that you will relieve me by telling me whom I have the pleasure of greeting.' Then he offered to my view the palms of his hands in which were scars as of nail wounds, and looked me through with those piercing yet kind eyes, and I did not need that he should say to me: 'I am Jesus Christ, your Lord.'

"To say that I was startled would be to express only a very small part of my feelings. For a moment I stood still, not knowing what to do or say. Why could I not fall at His feet and say with all my heart, 'I am filled with joy at seeing you here, Lord Jesus!'

"With those eyes looking into mine I could not say it, for it was not true. For some reason, on the instant only half comprehended by myself, I was sorry He had come. It was an awful thought to be glad to have all the rest of you here, yet sorry to see my Saviour and Lord!

"At length I recovered myself to a degree and said: 'You wish to speak to my parents, I am sure.' 'Yes, Mabel,' as He accompanied me to where my mother and father sat gazing in surprise at my evident confusion in greeting an unexpected guest, 'but I came this evening chiefly to be with you and your young friends, for I have often heard you speak enthusiastically in Christian Endeavor meetings how delightful it would be if you could have Me visibly present with you.'

"Again the blush came to my cheek as the thought flashed through my mind, tomorrow night is prayer meeting night, I should have been delighted to see Him then. But why not tonight on this pleasant occasion! I led Him to my parents, and, in a somewhat shamefaced fashion, introduced Him.

"They both gave a start of amazed surprise, but convinced by His appearance that there was no mistake, my father recovered a degree of self possession bade Him welcome, offered Him a seat, remarked that this was an unexpected pleasure, and then, after a somewhat lengthy pause explained to Jesus that his daughter, Mabel, being very closely occupied with her studies, and having little variety in life, had been allowed to invite a few friends in for a social evening, with a little quiet dancing by way of healthful exercise. Her friends were all of the very choicest, and he felt that this was a very harmless amusement, which the church had come to look upon in a somewhat different light from that in which it was viewed forty years ago. By removing the objectionable feature of bad company it had now made this pleasant pastime a safe indulgence for its young people.

"As my father stammered out, in the presence of Jesus, these words of apology, which had fallen from my own lips, I felt myself flush crimson with shame both for my dear father and myself. Why should he apologize at all for what he considered unquestionably right! Did not Jesus know that my studies were not so pressing but that I could keep late hours, sometimes several nights in the week, at parties!

Then father, anxious to relieve my evidents embarrassment, said: "I am sure we can leave these young people safely to themselves and nothing would please me so well as to take you, my Lord Jesus, off into my study for a talk."

"'No,' said Jesus, 'Mabel has often invited Me, and I came tonight especially to be with her. Will you introduce me to your friends, Mabel? Some of them I know, but some I do not know."

"Again that miserable, uncomfortable feeling came over me. Why could I not reply: 'It will give them and me the greatest pleasure!' Because, for some reason, I could not feel pleased, and I dared not in that Presence use the polite but untrue phrase. I simply said, 'Certainly, if you wish.'

"Of course all this time, you, friends, were looking much in our direction, wondering at our embarrassment, and perhaps guessing that we had been made uncomfortable by the arrival of a not altogether unwelcome guest. I led Him first to some of the church members among you, and there was not one of you who looked as comfortable after the introduction as before.

"As it became known who the guest was, faces changed color, and some of you looked very much as if you would like to leave the room. It really seemed as if the church members were quite as unwilling to meet Jesus as those who were not Christians.

"One of you came up quietly and whispered to me: 'Shall I tell the musicians not to play the dance music, but to look up some sacred piece?' Jesus caught the question; and looking us both squarely in the face He simply asked, 'Why should you? and we could not answer. Some one else suggested that we could have a very pleasant and profitable evening if we should change our original plans and invite Jesus to talk to us. Again he was met with that searching look and that searching question: 'Why should my presence change your plans?'"

"After I had introduced the Lord Jesus to you all, and no one knew what to do next—Jesus turned to me and said: 'You were planning for dancing, were you not? It is high time you began, or you cannot complete your program before daylight. Will you not give the words to musicians, Mabel?'

"I was at my wits' end. If my original plan was all right, His presence ought only to add joy to the occasion; yet here were all my guests, as well as myself, made wretchedly uncomfortable by the presence of Him who most of us called our best friend. Determined to throw off this feeling and be myself, at His word I ordered the musicians to play for the first dance.

"The young man with whom I was engaged for that dance did not come to claim me, and no one went upon the floor. This was still worse embarrassment. The orchestra played once more, and two or three couples, more to relieve me than for any other reason, began to dance in a rather formal fashion. I was almost beside myself with shame and confusion, when the Lord Jesus turned to me said, 'Mabel, your guests do not seem at ease. Why do you not, as their hostess, relieve their embarrassment by dancing your self. Would it help you any if I should offer to dance with you?'

"My confusion gave way to an expression almost of horror, as I looked into those tenderly sad eyes and cried: 'You dance! You cannot mean it!'

"'Why not Mabel? If my disciples may dance, may not I? Did you think all this winter, when you and others of my disciples have gathered for the dance or the card party or at the theater, that you left me at home, or in the church? You prayed for my presence in the prayer-meeting; you did not quite want it here; but why not my dear child? Why have you not welcomed me tonight, Mabel? Why has my simple presence spoiled your pleasure? Though I am a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with grief," yet I delight to share and increase all the pure joys of my disciples. Is it possible that you leave me out of any of your pleasure, Mabel? If so, is it not because you feel that they do not help you to become like me and to glorify me; that they take your time and strength and thought to such an extent that you have less delight in my word and in communion with me? You have been asked, "What's the harm?" have you asked, "What is the gain?" Have you done these things for the glory of God?'

"It was all plain to me now. Overcome with self-reproach and profound sorrow, I threw myself on the floor at His feet and sobbed out my repentance.

"With a 'Daughter go in peace, thy sins be forgiven thee,' He was gone. I awoke and found that it was all a dream. And now I want to ask you, my friends, shall we go on with the program tonight or shall we take these lists which we have prepared and discuss for a time with our partners the question, 'What can young people do to make the world better for their having lived in it?'"

As the vote was unanimous in favor of the latter plan, which was followed by other wholesome recreations, and as the social evening, closing promptly at midnight, was declared the most delightful of the winter. It is safe to say that the Lord Jesus had sent that dream for others beside Mabel Ashton.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

In Bad Fix

"I had a mishap at the age of 41, which left me in bad fix," writes Mrs. Georgia Usher, of Conyers, Ga. "I was unconscious for three days, and after that I would have fainting spells, dizziness, nervousness, sick headache, heart palpitation and many strange feelings.

"I suffered greatly with aliments due to the change of life and had 3 doctors, but they did no good, so I concluded to try Cardui.

"Since taking Cardui, I am so much better and can do all my housework."

THE BATTLE OF SHILOH.

One of the Most Brilliant and Sanguinary of the Great War Between the States.

BY COL. GEORGE C. PORTER.

(Published by Request.)

At midnight on the second day of April, Gen. Cheatham, with his excellent staff, of which Col. James D. Porter was chief, sent word from Bethel Station, twenty miles north of Corinth on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, where his division was then encamped, to Gen. Johnston at army head quarters, that the Federals were advancing in force from Crump's Landing in the direction of Purdy the county seat of McNairy County, and in the direct line with Bethel Station.

This intelligence was gladly received by Johnston. It was precisely what he wanted to hear. The much-desired opportunity for the exercise or genius and skill in an offensive movement was about to present itself. Bowling Green, Donelson, Fishing Creek, Nashville are now to be redeemed and confidence restored to the people and to the Confederacy. It was the chance of his life, and accepted with alacrity. "Ability to divine the object and purpose of any move or demonstration on the part of an enemy was one of Johnston's strong characteristics. He had, too, in a marked degree, its coordinate virtue, promptness of decision coupled with a knowledge almost intuitive as to what counter moves should be made. Without this combination, this equilibrium of mental forces in the management of an army, either for offensive or defensive action, the pinnacle of true generalship cannot be attained. Such has been the history of commanders from the age of Pericles to the present time.

The Time to Strike.

No emergency or disaster could for one moment deprive him of his firmness of the entire possession of all his faculties; nor did his adverse fortune ever deprive him of the respect and confidence of his soldiers. That respect and confidence he owed in no small measure to his personal courage. Courage, in the degree which is necessary to carry a soldier without disgrace through a campaign, is possessed or might, under proper training, be acquired, by the great majority of men. But courage like that of Johnston is rare indeed. It was proven by every test. It may be he was unconscious of it, and might have denied the show of rashness, and if questioned as to his recklessness in battle would no doubt have said that it rose from a sense of duty and of a cool calculation of what the army and the public interest required, that at Shiloh he was always at the post of danger. The troops that he commanded had seen no war, and might shrink from a close encounter with the veteran soldiers of the Union Army.

When this Bethel information was received Johnston comprehended the situation at once. Lew Wallace, marching, from Crump's Landing in the direction of Purdy; the swollen waters of Snake Creek flowing between his command and the army of Grant at Pittsburg Landing, Buell beyond the Tennessee, and in the vicinity of Waynesboro, now was the time if ever to strike and thus fulfil his Shiloh prophecy.

The battle of Turin, in which Prince Eugene defeated the French General, Marsin, is not more the prototype of Marengo than Waterloo is of Shiloh. The character and disposition of the opposing armies, the conformation of the battleground, the method of attack and defense, the momentous result depending upon the issue, in the one, the re establishment of the Napoleonic dynasty, the other the fate of the Confederacy, constitute a parallelism and a similitude seldom encountered in the history of battles. For Napoleon to advance upon La Hay Sainte, seize upon Brussels and make of the armies of Wellington and Blucher two fragments, to hurl the Prussian into the Rhine and the Englishman into the sea all this to Napoleon was in that battle.

For Johnston to rapidly advance from Corinth and suddenly fall upon Grant to make of his army and that of Buell's two fragments; to hurl one into the Tennessee and the other into the Cumberland; to re-establish his former line of defense from Columbus to Cumberland Gap, or advance it to the northern border of Kentucky; to open and maintain communication between the divided sections of the Confederacy; to hold as in a vice the navigation of the Mississippi from Columbus to Vicksburg and thereby obtain recognition of sovereignty from France or England or both—all this to Johnston was in that battle. Afterwards the people would see.

To perfect and carry out this reasonable, practical, yet masterful conception Gen. Johnston determined not to wait the junction of Price and Van Dorn from the west, but to move to the attack at once, and the famous Order No. 8 bearing date April 3, is issued.

His four corps are to move at once in the order named, and bivouac that night near the Mickey House, eight miles from Pittsburg Landing, at the Junction of the Montery and the Savannah roads. Gen. Hardee, commanding the Third Corps at daylight on the morning of the 4th. is to take position in line of battle in the vicinity of the enemy's outposts, his left resting on Owl Creek, his right extending in the direction of Lick Creek. It consisted of Cleburne's, Wood's, Shaver's and Gladden's, brigades from left to right in the order named.

Gen. Bragg, commanding the Second Corps was to deploy 800 yards in the rear of Hardee's line. It was formed of two divisions, commanded by Gens. Ruggles and Withers, the former's containing the brigades of Pond, Gibson and Anderson, the latter Jackson's and Chalmers' brigades.

Gen. Polk commanding the First Corps, formed of two divisions, Clark's and Cheatham's, the former having two brigades, Russell's and Stewart's and the latter two, Johnston's and Stephen's was to take position in the rear of Bragg's line, in column by brigades, and the Fourth Corps, under the command of Gen. Breckenridge, consisting of three brigades, Trabue's, Bowen's and Statham's, was to take position immediately in the rear of Polk's Corps, also in column by brigades. These commands constituted the reserve force.

Wharton's and Brewer's cavalry were on the left flank near Owl Creek, Ayer's Adams' and Forrest's were on the right flank near Geir's Ford on Lick Creek. Morgan's squadron was attached to Trabue's brigade and Clanton's command on the right of Bragg's line.

Gen. Johnston's artillery consisted of twenty-six batteries, commanded, respectively by Capts. Bain, Bankhead, Byrne, Calvert, Cobb, Gage, Gibson, Geraldy, Harper, Hodgson, Hubbard, Hudson, Ketchum, McClung, Miller, Polk, Roberts, Robertson, Rutledge, Stanford, Smith, Swetts, Trigg, Throup, Watson and Battery No. 5 of the Washington, La., Artillery, containing 112 pieces of cannon, which were equally distributed among the several divisions.

The sun rises beautiful and bright. Is it the sun of Austerlitz or the sun of Waterloo? It is Austerlitz, today and Waterloo tomorrow! No bugle note sounded. No drum beat the reveille. Yet the wide forest is alive with preparation for the mighty struggle soon to begin, like clouds surcharged with electricity the armies now impend. The storm of battle is ready to burst upon the scene.

Johnston and his brilliant staff are in the saddle. He says: "Gentlemen, tonight we water our horses in the Tennessee." Mounted on his splended bay, "Fire Eater," he sets as though apart of him, an illusive counter part of one of those fabulous monsters, half man, and half horse, that stormed Olympus in a gallop.

His gray uniform glittering with insignia of ranks, with plumed hat and flowing sash, sword by his side, and field glasses in hand—he looked the genius and spirit of battle, a soldier of an antique type. He never appeared more jocund. Passing a group of cheering soldiers he said: "Look along your guns my boys, and fire low. The eyes and hopes of 8,000,000 people are upon you. Show yourselves worthy of your sires." To Marmaduke, one of his Utah soldiers, he said: "My son, we must this day conquer or die." To Hindman: "You have already earned your spurs, as a Major General let this day's work win them." To the Arkansas troops: Your prowess with knife and rifle must be surpassed today by a nobler weapon—the bayonet—use it well." To the Tennessean. You fight upon native heath. I know you will do your duty. Napoleon and his young guard at waterloo. I name you the Young Guard at Shiloh. Today we fight the greatest battle of modern times. We must win or die."

"We will, we will," resounds from a thousand eager throats. And thus the machinery by which Cromwell kept up among his soldiers so stern and pertinacious enthusiasm, was employed with not less complete success, and raised a spirit and fire in that host that swept the serried lines of the conquerers of Henry and Donelson, and drove the splended army of Grant and Sherman from an almost impregnable position, hurling it to the very bottom of this water bound delta.

Leaving Gen. Beauregard to manage the troops in the rear, Johnston hurried to the right of the now advancing line of Hardee and Bragg. Gen. Grant was quietly discussing his coffee, beef and buns at the breakfast table of the hospitable Cherry mansion in Savannah eight miles away.

At dawn the advanced guards of Powell and Hardcastle were engaged. The forward movement of Wood's Brigade drove Powell back to the Seay field, where he was reinforced by the Third Wisconsin. This command, hard and steadily pressed, retreated slowly and was joined at the Rhea field by Peabody's Brigade. The lines of Hardee steadily advancing drove them back to their camps, closely followed by the brigades of Gladen, Chalmers, Jackson's and Gibson's of Bragg's line, and the battle became general along the whole length of Hardee's front.

Nothing could have been more brilliant than this advance and attack. The fierce volleys of fifty thousand muskets and the booming of a hundred cannon receding steadily towards the river, marked hour by hour, the slow but ceaseless advance of the Confederates. The captured camps, rich with the spoils of war, with throngs of prisoners moving to the rear, showed the headlong fury with which they had advanced and crushed the heavy columns of the foe. As the enemy was being driven to a common center strongly supported by infantry behind fields across which the attacking army had advanced, weakened the assaults of Hardee's line, and the forces of Bragg were moved up to their support. In these movements by regiments or brigades to strengthen the weak and faltering parts of Hardee's line, Gen. Bragg displayed a genius, tact and judgement seldom equalled in battle.

Marshall Lannes at Austerlitz did not surpass him. From this time on the contest raged without intermission. The right flank under the immediate supervision of Gen. Johnston had swept everything before it. Batteries, encampments, stores and amunitions of every kind were captured. The enemy, fighting hard and stubbornly, made three successes dearly bought. His left was his strong position, and held with a valor and determination rarely equalled. So instead of driving him down the river, as anticipated and designed by Johnston, leaving his left open for him to pass, he was being enveloped on front and flanks, and pressed back on Pittsburg Landing. By 2 p. m. the divisions of Sherman and McClemand on the Confederate left had been driven from Shiloh Church, a distance of two miles, to the east of Tillman Creek, and fronting along the Savannah and Hamburg Road, in manner perpendicular to this first line of battle. The divisions of Prentiss and W. H. L. Wallace had been driven a distance of a mile across the Barnes field beyond the East Corinth Road, and had taken position behind the Duncag field.

The Turning Point.

Here was the turning point of the day, the Confederate stumbling block, which must be removed or overcome. It was to Johnston what the plateau of Mons St. Jean was to Napoleon. It must be taken at all hazzards, and at the last extremity. If held by Wellington, Blucher will arrive; if held by Grant, Buell and Lew Wallace will arrive. The situation is known and felt by both commanders, and the death struggle ensues. It was a battle of the giants. History has no duplicate for superiority of assault and resistance, Napoleon and Ney failed. Johnston and Bragg succeeded. In battle parlance it was dubbed as the "Hornet's Nest," a name given by the Confederates.

Johnston at this time had his reserves under Breckenridge in position south of the "peach orchard" field and assumed personal command of the right of the army and ordered a combined forward movement to break the enemy's left. Stuart, hard pressed by Chalmers and Cavalry, was the first to yield. In falling back the flank of Hurlbut was exposed, compelling him to fall back to the north side of the peach orchard field. While directing and leading this movement Gen. Johnston was struck by a minnie ball, severing the artery of his right leg, causing his death in a few minutes thereafter.

This was 2:30 p. m. The fall of the commanding General caused great confusion and relaxation of effort on that flank.

Bragg in the Breach.

Gen. Bragg learning of the death of his chief turned the command of the center over to Gen. Ruggles, assumed the command of the right in order to execute and carry out the movement designed by Gen. Johnston. Unable to force the position with his infantry, Gen. Ruggles was ordered to concentrate all of his artillery upon it. Sixty pieces were placed in position on the west side of the Duncan field. In support of these were brought up the brigades of Gibson, Schater, Wood, Anderson, Stewart, the Thirteenth Tennessee and the rescent regiment of Pond's brigade. By command of and under the immediate presence and direction of Gen. Bragg this force now advanced and attacked with a valor and heroism rarely surpassed, the strong position of Wallace and Prentiss. The concentrated fire of sixty piece of artillery soon silenced the Union batteries but failed to drive the infantry from their sheltered and protected position, safe and secure from the conformation of the ground. Besides it was a strong and valiant body of troops well disciplined and bravely commanded. To assault this position an open field had to be crossed with enfilading batteries supported by infantry. Brigade after brigade

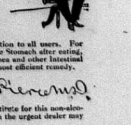
Remedies are Needed



Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine or known concoctions, not even though the surgeon dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

N. C. Hetherington, who went to the golden fields of California about three weeks ago, prospecting, returned to this place Tuesday. He seems well pleased with the country, but as the saying goes, "there is no place like home." Giles county seems to be a drawing card, and hard to keep away from once you have been there.

We expect in a few days to canvass the county in the interest of our paper, and want to visit every home. We have been anticipating this for a number of years as we have often told you before but something has prevented us from so doing, but this time we are going to do so, if death does not overtake us. So, if you see anything "out of the ordinary" coming do not get frightened or set the dog on him.

Dr. J. C. Darst will move this week into his new home on Huntington Boulevard, built for him by J. R. Carter. The doctor will have one of the prettiest suburban homes around Roanoke.—Roanoke Times.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHNSTON.

On last Thursday, April 20th at about noon, Mrs. Charles A. Johnston of this place, breathed her last. While Mrs. Johnston had not been strong for some time, yet she had not been confined to her room until about three weeks ago.

Before marriage Mrs. Johnston was Miss Laura Campbell, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Campbell of this place.

In early life she became a member of the Christian Church.

Mrs. Johnston was noted for her kind and friendly disposition. It always seemed to be a real pleasure to her to kindly serve others.

On Friday at 2 p. m. the funeral services were conducted at the home by Revs. J. L. Prater and M. W. Royall. Interment was made at Eastside Cemetery.

As neighbors and friends, we feel the great loss that comes to our community in the death of Mrs. Johnston, and are very strongly reminded of the fact that each day brings us nearer to a great company of our people, who for awhile, are lost to sight.

The home of her parents will, as the days go by, sadly realize the loss of a sympathizing daughter and a loyal and loving sister; but by far the greatest loss is to the husband and four little children. May God help the father, that by precept and example, he may train these little ones so, that they may again be a united family, in that home where partings never come.

To our brother and fellow-worker, we tender our sincerest sympathy.

Richmond Daughters Don't Like Elson.

The Richmond Times Dispatch in reporting last week the meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy of that city, says:

"The chapter also indorsed the protest passed by the Maryland Chapter, U. D. C. against Elson "History of the United States," which is used in many schools of the South and North, and which is generally considered grossly incorrect and unfair to the Confederate cause.

Avoid Frauds.

A paint fraud is paint that looks fait for a year or so, and then makes repainting necessary.

Don't waste your money and injure your property.

The L. & M. Paint has been in use for thirty five years.

You make one half of it by adding ¾ of a gallon of Linseed Oil to each gallon. It then costs about $1.60 per gallon, and is the best paint that can be made.

RESOLUTIONS.

At a meeting of the Session of Pearisburg Presbyterian Church, held at the Church on this, the 16th April, 1911, the following resolutions were offered and adopted:

RESOLVED 1st, That we accept with regret the determination of Dr. Bolling Hobson to sever his pastoral connection with this and the other churches in Giles County.

2nd, Whereas Dr. Hobson has been our pastor for eighteen years, with the exception of one year, when he was connected with the Orphan's Home at Lynchburg, and whereas, during this long while he has labored industriously, conscientiously and with an eye single to the glory of God, and the welfare of this people, therefore, we can extend to him our best wishes and bid him God-speed in his new field of operations, and this whole congregation do most cheerfully and cordially recommend him to his new pastorate and people as a faithful, efficient and indefatigable worker in the Master's vineyard, always boldly discharging his duty in the fear of God and never flinching from any duty or responsibility that rested upon him.

3rd, That it is with equal reluctance that we part with his co-worker, Mrs. Hobson, for in her, our church and community has had the leadership and guidance of a Christian woman and willing worker in all that part of its great work, which only woman can do.

4th, That the Session of this church be requested to spread these resolutions on its minutes, and that a copy be sent to Dr. Bolling Hobson, the PEARISBURG VIRGINIAN and the Christian Observer for publication.

To The Daughters of The Confederacy And All Friends of the South.

Shiloh was one of the most momentous battles fought for the cause of the Southern Confederacy, and for all to realize its importance and the need of a handsome monument there. I ask that all of you will carefully read the accompanying articles on "Shiloh and for the April meeting of the chapters of the U. D. C. the pre-presidents will have a comprehensive program on Shiloh, and use the questions on Shiloh.

The Shiloh monument will be erected not to one man nor to one command, but to all Confederate soldiers, the only monument that will have this distinction, a monument to the entire South. It will be placed in Shiloh National Military Park, where it will be surrounded by hundreds of handsome, strictly Federal monuments, and to compare with them and to tell worthily the story of the men in grey. Our Shiloh monument must be a handsome one. Nothing less should satisfy us, nothing less is worthy of those noble Southern men who lie on that battle field in long, crowded trenches, their devotion to duty, their hard work and suffering, the sacrifice of their lives in vain, apparently forgotten. Their bleaching bones cry aloud against this injustice and neglect. The story of their valor must be told in marble and bronze, and I ask every one who had a relative or loved one in that great battle to send me at least one dollar for this monument fund. Just one dollar from every one of you, and what a beautiful, grand monument we could soon have. Help us in this cause.

IRON ORE NEAR NARROWS, VA.

While prospecting for iron at Narrows and securing land for right of way purposes, Walter Graham, of Graham, has discovered a bed of iron ore of unusual richness for the hematites. The bed of ore which is on the property of K. S. French, just across the river from Narrows, is said on reliable authority to be very close to the surface and it is also said that it can be worked with a steam shovel and that the percentage of iron will run close to sixty per cent.

The Bluefield Telegraph says: "Test holes which have been made have all ready unearthed a depth of twenty-five feet of ore and the bottom of the bed has not been reached yet. It is certain, according to people from Narrows, that the ore is not in a pocket but extends all through that section and considerable of a boom has resulted."

Mr. Graham and associates have secured a twenty year lease on the property, which will be worked on a royalty basis.

Misses Geraldine and Ernestine Gerald spent the week's end with their cousin, Miss Gladys P. Duncan.

Quite an excitement was created in our little town last Sunday morning when the house occupied by F. H. Durham caught fire. Mr. Durham kindled a fire in the cooking stove and returned to his room, leaving all the doors shut. When he came back in about 30 minutes he found the room in a blaze. Soon after the alarm was given, quite a crowd gathered and soon had the fire extinguished. When Mrs. Durham opened her bed room door and saw the smoke she became excited and she and her little daughter Frances and Elizabeth Vickers jumped from the upstairs window. The fire did very little damage and no one was hurt.

NEW DAM SITE ON NEW RIVER BOUGHT.

Negotiation were completed last night and they purchase made of the Shumate property at Glen Lyn, Va., by the Virginia Power Company for a site for a large dam at that point, it is reported today. The property was bought outright, a consideration of $2,000 cash being paid by Dr. J. J. Mott for the site. Options had already been secured covering the damage to property by backwater.

This is the second site that has already been purchased by this company for the erection of power dams. The other is farther up the river and this but adds another step in the advance of this company toward the coalfield.

The dam at Glen Lyn is only about 30 miles from Bluefield and will be able to supply power for this city. That this company is going into the coalfield there now remains not the slightest doubt.

The New River Power Company which purchased the holdings of the Bluestone Traction Company of this city, has already secured dam sites, trolley rights of way for the coalfields but it looks now as though it is going to have some competition.—Bluefield Telegraph.

WHAT BAD ROADS COST.

There are 2,151,570 miles of wagon roads in the United States.

There are 176,429 miles of improved roads in the United States, —faced with gravel or something superior.

The percentage of improved highways is 8.2.

Each year 265,000,000 tons of farm and forest products are hauled to market or to railway stations over American roads.

This hauling costs $432,000,000, or 23 cents the mile.

It costs only 10 cents the ton the mile to haul freight over an improved road.

Therefore, if all our roads were improved it would mean a saving of $200,000,000 the year in hauling alone.

It will cost fully $3,000,000,000 to put all the mud roads in the United States in decent shape—to make them merely good travel roads.

This is the richest nation in the world, yet "the poorest, most tax burdened country in Europe" can boast better roads than we have in the United States.

Why!

Origin Of A Famous Hymn.

A pathetic and yet charming story is told of the origin of the well-known hymn, "Bless Be the Tie That Binds," which was written by Rev. John Fawcet, an English Baptist, who died in 1817, having spent nearly sixty years in the ministry.

It was in 1772, and a few years spent in pastoral work, that he was called to London to succeed Rev. Dr. Gill. His farewell sermon had been preached near Moinsgate, in Yorkshire. Six or seven wagons, stood loaded with his furniture and books and all was ready for departure.

But his loving people were heartbroken. Men, women and children gathered and clung about him and his family with sad and tearful face. Finally, overwhelmed with the sorrow of them they were leaving, Dr. Fawcett sat down on one of the packing cases and gave way to grief.

"Oh, John," cried Mrs. Fawcet at last, "I cannot bear this! I know not how to go."

"Nor I either," returned her husband, "and we will not go. The wagons shall be unloaded and everything put in its old place."

His people was filled with intense joy and gratitude at this determination. Dr. Fawcett at once sent a letter to London explaining the case and then resolutely returned to his work on a salary of less than $200 a year.

This hymn was written by Dr. Fawcett to commemorate the event.—Pittsburg Press.

Directors Name Committees and Fix Character to This Autumn's Show.

The Radford Advance says:

At its recent meeting of the board of directors of the Fair Association formulated plans for the coming fair. Present were Capt. D. H. Barger, Haven Einstein, J. R. K. Bell, Mark Reid, Capt. J. G. Osborne, H. B. Howe, D. M. Cloyd, Jr., J. R. K. Cowan, R. H. Dobbins and Lewis Harvey.

Capt Osborne was elected treasurer, and Mark Reid, under protest was compelled to accept the secretaryship. He will have as assistants, R. H. Dobbins and Frank Einstein.

Miss Sue Tyler was named chairman of the ladies' committee but has since declined the honor.

Superintendents of departments named were J. R. K. Cowan, draft horses; D. M. Cloyd, Jr., saddle and driving horses; J. R. K. Bell, cattle; Henry T. Einstein, hogs and sheep; J. C. Peters, agricultural implements and machinery.

The fair is to be of three days duration, Sept. 6, 7 and 8, as fixed by the circuit, but racing will not be a feature, in so far as presents plans contemplate. There will be scrub racing though, and no end of fun, and while there will be concession-aries with the usual side shows, this year, if serious effort can make it so, will be a thoroughly agricultural and live stock affair. It is realized that it is not easy these days to arouse the kind of interest which is indispensable to the making of a really successful fair of this kind, which after all is the only right kind—the only one which justifies the existence of such associations and the work put into the enterprises.

Premiums will be offered on the best get of horses of their class, and on horses sire of the get. The same will apply to cattle—short horns, Hereford, Aberdeen and Angus.

As indicated the exhibits will be confined to stock and agricultural specimens—horses, hogs, cattle, sheep, poultry, and of course horticultural exhibits will be especially invited.

In the coming Fair, it is announced that there is to be no entrance fee for exhibits; but a gate fee will be charged to all except a limited number of groomsmen.

The directors appointed an auditing committee consisting of H. B. Howe, Mark Reid, Haven Einstein and Lewis Harvey.

President Barger said: "We are going to give a fair; we are going to make it agricultural—a farmer's fair; we will give attractive premiums; we mean business and we want the people to understand it. We will work to make it a success and we ask the co-operation of our citizens and of the farmers—of everybody."

The catalogues of the Galax State Normal are being distributed. They contain important announcements for the teachers of Southwest Virginia, giving the principal changes in the certification of teachers.

This Normal has been running three years and has done a great deal for the cause of education in the counties of Carroll, Grayson, Montgomery, Pulaski, Floyd and Giles. Teachers in these counties enroll free of tuition, the school boards having agreed to pay it for them. This makes it possible for them to attend the Normal with very little expense. Board is advertised at three dollars a week.

The Ten Commandments of Agriculture.

1. Prepare a deep and thoroughly pulverized seed bed, well drained; break in the fall to a depth of 8, 10 or 12 inches, according to the soil, with implements that will not bring too much of the subsoil to the surface. The foregoing depths should be reached gradually.

2. Use seed of the best variety, intelligently selected and carefully stored.

3. In cultivated crops give the rows and the plants in the rows a space suited to the plant, the soil and the climate.

4. Use intensive tillage during the growing period of the crops.

5. Secure a high content of humus in the soil by the use of legumes, barnyard manure, farm refuse and commercial fertilizers.

6. Carry out a systematic crop rotation with a winter cover crop.

7. Accomplish more work in a day by using more horse-power and better implements.

8. Increase the farm stock to the extent of utilizing all the waste products and idle lands of the farm.

9. Produce all the food required for the men and animals on the farm.

10. Keep an account of each farm product, in order to know from which the gain or loss arises.

Thought He Was in Hell.

Cumberland, Md., April 23.—Driven insane by the belief that he was in hell, Frank Gaysoks, a Pole, who had just landed in this country, was arrested Friday at Farmington, W. Va.

He had been taken into the Farmington mine shaft to work. He had never even heard of a shaft, and when he was taken 400 feet under ground in the cage he was greatly frightened. Below he saw fire and men, half naked and covered with sweat, at work, and heard shots in the distance.

"Where am I?" he asked in his own tongue.

A fellow countryman replied: "In hell."

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

The Junior Class of the Pearisburg High School were entertained by their teacher, Prof. L. D. Shumate on Thursday evening last.

Mrs. M. W. Royall and little Aulona Powell, went to Vinton last week to be at the bedside of Mrs. Royall's mother, who is dangerously ill.

The new house of Kenley Munsey has been completed and his family have moved into it. This residence is quite a handsome addition to our city.

There will be an ice cream supper at Narrows, Saturday night, May 6th, for the benefit of the Christian Church. They will appreciate any one's assistance.

Drs. L. D. Whitaker and H. C. Givens, Veterinary Surgeons, seem to be doing a good business since locating here. They have been on the "go" nearly all the time.

The cold, rainy weather, has put the farmers way back in planting corn and some have not even ploughed a furrow as yet. Never too late to plant until the mountain is green to the top.

E. E. Barnhouser of Pembroke, has just completed an eight-room dwelling for C. W. Collins of the same place. L. E. Poff has had his house turned around and is building an addition to the same.

Mrs. Charles Kemp and three children of Cornwell, Canada, arrived here on Thursday last, and are stopping with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Pearson. She has not paid our city a visit for over two years.

J. M. Orr, Superintendent, and W. R. Davis, book keeper of the Narrows Tannery, came up last Sunday in their auto and spent a few hours in our town. This is Mr. Orr's first trip to our city and we hope he will come again.

After thirty-nine years of residence in Pulaski, Mr. L. H. Thomas was in town today saying goodby to many friends as he is about ready to leave with his family for Giles County to live with his son.—Southwest Times.

It is rumored that Rev. J. G. Reveley of Bland county, has accepted the call to the Presbyterian churches of this county. His many friends in Bland regret to hear of his leaving. We predict for him a very enjoyable time among us.

Many faces are beginning to wear the sad countenance as the school nears its end. The young ladies and gentlemen hate to leave each other, particularly, when they are more or less in love. Cheer up, the happy time will soon roll around again.

Tobias Johnston of this place, has secured a position with the Graham Bank of Graham, Va., and went there Monday to engage in the work. "Tobe" is one of our most popular young men, and we wish him success and much pleasure in his new field of labor.

Don't forget that tomorrow (Thursday) night the ladies of the Baptist church will give an ice cream festival in the Dennis building, and a most enjoyable time is sure to be had. We hope the weather will be HOT, and that the sale will be large. Proceeds for the benefit of the church.

The Misses Pearson entertained the Daughters of the Confederacy Saturday afternoon. The battle of Shiloh and the monument there was the subject of the afternoon. The Daughters were called upon to take steps about the Elson History and a resolution was carried that not only made a false impression concerning the South should be debarred from our public schools. Mrs. Mason entertained the company with some of her delightful music.

Automobiles are like mules, stop when they feel like it. The other day Mr. Dinsmore's machine refused to go forward and done only backing. Is not this like a mule? Be careful, do not get on a cliff three hundred feet high. It took all the "kids" in town to haul his machine into the garage.

The body of Alex. Flipping (col.), Graham, Va., who tried to ford Wolf Creek a few weeks ago and was drowned, was found on a rock in New river by Mr. H. T. Adair on Tuesday last. Mr. Adair was crossing the river when he discovered the body. He was buried in Adair's graveyard. He was about 60 years old.

Narrows Electric Light & Power Company, Narrows, Va. Incorporators: H. W. Hale, president; Geo. L. Bane, vice-president; H. C. Johnson, secretary; B. T. Johnson, Jr., treasurer, all of Narrows. Capital stock; maximum, $5,000; minimum, $2,500. Objects and purposes, operate an electric light and power plant.

While enroute to the east end of the county on Monday last, we noticed a goodly number of new houses on our way—and nice ones too. The farmers seemed to be getting along fine with their plowing; grass and wheat fields looked nice and green, and everything seemed to be in a flourishing condition. We might say Pembroke district is coming to the front rapidly, and if the other districts in the county do not be on the lookout, Pembroke will outstrip them.

Miss Claudine, the sixteen year old daughter of the late Rev. Chapman S. Lucas, died at her mother's home in Philadelphia on last Saturday of spinal meningitis. The remains were brought to Maybrook this county, and interred on last Tuesday. The deceased was the youngest of the family and is survived by her mother and four sisters. The father was a noted minister of the Christian church and was born and reared in this county.

The personal property of Aunt Emily Atkins (col.), who lived near Newport and who died about two weeks ago, were sold at public auction by Sheriff J. H. Durham on last Monday. The sale was well attended and brought very good prices, bringing about $450.00. After the sale, we, in company with Messrs. J. D. Snidow, deputy Sheriff, and B. Ellison who acted as clerk at the sale, started for the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Atkins. There we partook of a bountiful meal, and all did ample justice to it. Mr. and Mrs. Atkins are fine entertainers, and as to richness of the cooking, no one, in our opinion, can serve a better meal than the lady of this house. We hope some of these days it will be our pleasure to again partake of a meal with them. We also hope they will live long and prosper.

Now is the time to get rid of your rheumatism. You will find Chamberlain's Liniment wonderfully effective. One application will convince you of its merits. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

Shumate and John R. Johnston. The subject was Woman's Suffrage, and it aroused much eloquent and earnest debating.

Rev. M. W. Royall opened the program with a prayer, then followed a chorus and an interesting recitation by Miss Mattie Buchanan. After the debate there was an attractive recitation by little Miss Margaret Dills.

An extempore debate was held at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. The subject was: Resolved, "That farm work tends more to the development of men and success than public work." Mr. Cooper was awarded the medal, he had spoken as an anti-suffragist. The gold medal was given by Judge Martin Williams.

THE BANQUET OF THE SENIOR CLASS.

On last Tuesday evening, May 2, the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Shelton was the scene of a very brilliant occasion, it being the banquet of the Senior Class.

About forty guests were present. Mr. Terrell Shrader, president of the Senior Class, was toastmaster. The toasts were as follows: Prof. Wassom, William McDonald. To P. H. S., Prof. Jas. R. Stafford. To the Class of 1909 and '10, Miss Bess Phlegar. To the Class of '10 and '11, Miss Brotherton. To the faculty of P. H. S., French Rowe. To the president of the class, Miss Mabel Snidow. To the secretary of the class, Miss Mary Shelton, James B. Muncy. To the Physics Teacher, Wilmer Hedrick. To the English History teacher, Miss Mary McDonald. To the principal of last year, Miss Johnston. To the fair High School graduate, William Dennis. To the young gentlemen of the class, Miss Janie Cunningham.

With song and jest and merry laughter the time quickly passed.

The twelve Seniors that go out this year from Pearisburg High School are a fine band of young people. After their days and nights of toil graduation day brings to them some festive scenes, but it more surely ushers them into the stern realities of life.

As youth recedes may memory ever hold the bright pictures of unforgotten school days.

Pale-Faced Women

You ladies, who have pale faces, sallow complexions, dark circles under eyes, drawn features and tired, worn-out expressions, you need a tonic.

The tonic you need is Cardui, the woman's tonic.

It is the best tonic for women, because its ingredients are specifically adapted for women's needs. They act on the womanly organs and help to give needed strength and vitality to the worn-out womanly frame.

Cardui is a vegetable medicine. It contains no minerals, no iron, no potassium, no lime, no glycerin, no dangerous, or habit-forming drugs of any kind.

It is perfectly harmless and safe, for young and old to use.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"After my doctor had done all he said he could for me," writes Mrs. Wm. Hilliard, of Mountainburg, Ark., "I took Cardui, on the advice of a friend, and it helped me so much. "Before taking Cardui, I had suffered from female troubles for five years, but since taking it, I am in good health. "I think there is some of the best advice in your book that I ever saw." "THE TELEPHONE GIRL."

BY MISS GRACE FRENCH.

The telephone girl has her troubles,
She's plenty to do besides play;
Yet she's talked about, laughed at,
and fussed at,
By some one most every day,
Don't get angry at central
If the answers in a hurried tone,
Remember there's a number of others
The same moment are using their 'phones.
And one by one must be answered
And their numbers remembered as well,
The numbers they answer in one day
How many of you who can tell.

Its "central do you know where the fire is?"
And its "central please tell me the time,"
And "central why don't you answer?"
And "central please get off the line?"
Its a wonder they all don't go crazy,
So much to be thought of and done,
Yet those who hasn't had the experience
Think telephone work would be fun,
So please don't fuss at poor central,
She has a plenty to do,
You see I can sympathize with her
For I was central once too.

RESPONSE TO THE TOAST "THE FAIR HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE," MAY SHE ENJOY HEALTH AND LONG LIFE.

The following toast was delivered by Mr. Will Dennis, son of our townsman, Mr. E. S. Dennis, on the evening of the 2nd inst, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Shelton who entertained the Senior Class of the Pearisburg High School. It is so rich we could scarcely refrain from publishing:

A colored waiter upon being asked by a party of gentlemen, whom he was serving, what was his favorite dish, replied, after enumerating several that he considered delicious, that of all dishes the one that appealed to him most was the American eagle served on the silver dollar.

Now all the dishes here tonight have been delectable with out a single exception, but when the toastmaster called upon me to serve to those gathered around the festal board, the dish denominated "tongue garnished with brains." I was forthwith filled with grave fears that it would not prove as palatable as was the eagle and the silver dollar to the dusky son of Ham, and that the result of it would be to destroy that equable demeanor and calm repose which have characterized the guests here this evening.

It is with great diffidence that I undertake to respond to this most delightful sentiment. I feel that it is too delicate a subject for rude hands to touch. In fact, the High School graduate needs no eulogy; she speaks for herself.

Bishop Berkley, when he wrote his beautiful verses upon our western world and penned the line "Times noblest offspring is the last," described not so nearly our prophetic future, as the last and best creation of the Almighty—woman.

Our fair young lady friends are only girls tonight, but in a few short years they will have bade good-bye to the girlhood days and will be called upon to play more serious roles; and if the woman is just a more complete edition of the girl we see tonight, we may rest assured that the roles will be played well indeed. It is fair to presume that a majority of the budding graduates, after pursuing knowledge a little further, will experience a reverse in the order of things and that delightful sensation of being pursued by a doting swain with matrimonial intent.

The role of the wife and mother is one which any girl may well aspire to. It has been said that the woman who has never loved, hugged, kissed, played with, listened to, told stories to, or thoroughly spanked a child, has missed the cardinal joys of life.

Next to God, man is indebted to mother and wife for life itself, and then for making it worth living. To describe them the pen should be dipped in the hazuid colors of the rainbow, and the paper dried with the dust gathered from the wings of a butterfly.

But it is possible that upon the stage of action, all of our hopeful graduates will not choose the same role, and it is understood that one of the most intelligent has already spoken for the role of the maiden lady or bachelor girl sometimes unkindly termed "old maid." We refrain from calling any name. Suffice it to say that it was not the girl, who, upon being asked by the teacher to decline "love," simperingly replied, "not me, I would as soon think of declining marriage."

Some wicked wretch has most unkindly said "Old maids are embers whence the sparks have fled;" and some touching stories have been related illustrating the anxiety of the maiden lady to catch a man after she has frittered away one opportunity after another. I will relate the following anecdote for the benefit of the complacent graduate who thinks the life of the maiden lady the sweetest of all.

A lady passenger was weeping bitterly when a gentleman said to her, "my dear madam, what can I do to console you in your troubles?" She said her troubles were inconsolable, that she was on her way to the city to have her fifth husband cremated. Just across the aisle and two seats back, another lady burst out crying like her heart would break, and the gentleman stepped back to get her troubles. She said she was forty years of age and had never been able to catch a man yet, while "that one" across the aisle, had his bands to burn.

Picture to yourselves, ladies and gentlemen, this fair young graduate fifteen years hence in the predicament of the lady who is the subject of the following little story: An Irish sheriff was delegated to serve a legal writ on a maiden lady of uncertain age, and on coming into her presence said: "Madam, I have an attachment for you."

"My dear sir," she said blushing, "your attachment is reciprocated."

"You don't understand me; you must proceed to court," said the sheriff.

"Well I know 'tis leap year, but I prefer to let you do the courting yourself, men are so much better at that than the women."

"Madam, this is no time for fooling. The justice is waiting."

"The justice waiting. Well I suppose I must go, but the thing is so sudden, and besides, I would much prefer to have a preacher perform the ceremony."

But girls, there is one consolation for those who will appear before the footlights in the role of the maiden lady. Time and Tide wait for no man, but Time stands still for a girl of thirty summers. To illustrate the point: There was a certain woman on the witness stand, and when the judge asked her age, replied, "thirty years old."

"Thirty years," said the judge, "were you not in this court room five years ago?"

"I think I was, your honor."

"And didn't you tell me then that you were thirty years old?"

"I think it is quite likely, your honor," said the woman wholly unabashed, "I am not one of those women who say one thing one day and another thing the next."

I have already consumed too much time and I must bring my perfunctory remarks to an abrupt ending. If you are dissatisfied with what I have said this evening, my only comment is that which a little girl made to her mother, who chided her because God would not be pleased with her sleepy prayer. "Well it's the best He will get out of me tonight."

Inasmuch as we as school companions are about to reach the parting of the ways and our pathways will soon diverge, in closing, I wish to voice the sentiment so beautifully expressed by the poet:

"Though lost to sight, to memory dear,
Thou ever wilt remain,
The only hope my heart can cheer,
The hope to meet again."

OATS AND PEAS.

In Combination They Make Very Good Hay, But Care Must be Taken in Method of Planting.

Oats and peas make very good hay. If they are sown early in the spring they are ready to cut by the 1st of July. The ground can be plowed under after harvesting peas and oats and sowed to alfalfa, that will give sufficient growth to protect it during the winter. Some farmers have found it more satisfactory to sow the alfalfa reasonably early in the spring, using three pecks of barley per acre as a nurse crop.

Some sow peas and oats at the same time, while others sow the peas first and when sprouted sow the oats. This requires considerably more labor, and those that practice sowing the two seeds together state that there is not enough difference in the crop to warrant the extra trouble and expense of sowing them seperately. As a rule, to oats and peas are so tangled up that it is not possible to use a binder, but they are cut the same as hay and cured in the same manner.

In preparing the seed bed for oats and peas the same practice is followed as in preparing the soil for small grain crops. It should be harrowed or cultivated sufficiently to destroy the lumps and put the seed bed in reasonably good condition.

Saved Child From Death.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson of Richardson's Mills, Ala., "we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healty." For coughs, colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, croup and sore lungs, it's the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by T. J. Pearson.

Tribute in Memory of G. F. Brown.

Have been expecting to see something from some one regarding the life of our dear brother, and not seeing it I feel like saying a word myself.

Charles Fleming Brown was born May 7, 1836, and died March 18, 1911. Burial services were conducted by Rev. W. S. Bullard assisted by Rev. Miles of the M. E. church.

He was married twice, the first time to Miss Mary Jane Lowe, February 27, 1867. This union was blessed by six children, five of whom are still living. The second marriage was to Miss S. Lou Snidow, December 4, 1884. To them were born three boys.

He served in the Civil War and was captured at the battle of Cloyd's Mountain and held a prisoner at Point Lookout until the close of the war.

Most of his life since the war was spent in the mercantile business, and he filled the office of postmaster for nearly forty years.

Not having the data, I cannot tell how long he had been a Christian, but I know he obeyed the gospel many years ago, perhaps under the preaching of Dr. Bullard. He was a consistent Christian to the end and could claim the promise "He that endures to the end, the same shall be saved." Brother Brown was always thoughtful of the Lord's work—kept it in mind and prepared to be ready to do His will. To the widow, children and friends, let me say, you need not sorrow as those who have no hope.

May we all be faithful to Him who alone can save, and loyal to His word which is the power unto salvation and when we die we may then expect to go where we believe brother Brown has gone.

His friend and brother,
R. A. HELSABECK.

A Burglar's Awful Deed

may not paralyze a home so completely as a mother's long illness. But Dr. King's New Life Pills are a splendid remedy for women. "They gave me wonderful benefit in constipation and female trouble," wrote Mrs. M. C. Dunlap of Lesdill, Tenn. If ailing, try them. 25c at T. J. Pearson's.

Is there anything in all this world that is of more importance to you than good digestion? Food must be eaten to sustain life and must be digested and converted into blood. When the digestion fails the whole body suffers. Chamberlain's Tablets are a rational and reliable cure for indigestion. DR. HOBSON HAS LEFT US.

It is with regret that we state that Rev. Bolling Hobson and family have left us. Dr. Hobson after spending about eighteen years in our midst as pastor of the different Presbyterian Churches in Giles, was called to two churches one at High Bridge and the other at Buchanan, both in Botetourt county, and on account of being near Washington & Lee University where his son Kempt will enter college, he has accepted the calls and taken charge of the work. We regret this, and in saying this we but voice the sentiment of the entire county, regardless of religious denominations. No man was ever more zealous in his work than is Dr. Hobson; no man in our midst has ever manifested more religious zeal than he, and no man has endeavored harder to do the right than Dr. Hobson.

He and his family will be missed in Giles, and we bespeak for them a hearty welcome and a career of usefulness in their new field.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF PEARISBURG HIGH SCHOOL.

On last Friday afternoon at 3 p. m., the commencement exercises of the Pearisburg High School began, when Misses Peery and Johnston gave an entertainment consisting of drills, recitations and dialogues. The children taking part on this occasion were from the second grade up to the seventh grade. These young people showed careful training and acquitted themselves in such a manner as to reflect great credit upon the ladies who trained them.

Friday evening at 8 00 p. m., was the recitation contest. The young ladies participating were Viva Scott, "The Dukite Snake;" Annie Laura Stafford, "Van Bibber's Rock;" Stella Prater, "Ole Sue;" Lula Shrader, "As the Moon Rolled By;" Edith Woods, "Old Mistis;" Mabel Snidow, "Ballad of Quentin Massey."

The judges on this occasion were Mrs. E. W. Hale of Pembroke; Judge Seldon Longley of Radford; Dr. J. Thomas Parker of Pearisburg.

The recitation contest was followed by the play entitled "The Village School of Long Ago." The students in this play were principally from the seventh and the eighth grades. They had been very carefully trained by Mrs. M. C. Easley, who supervised the entire commencement occasion. Those participating in this humorous play rendered their parts in most becoming style.

Saturday morning at ten o'clock, eleven young men contested in declamation. It was a very strong and well trained class. Though a long contest the audience listened through it as it spell bound.

The judges for this contest were Prof. Givens, Wabash, Va., Dr. Parker and W. B. Snidow, Pearisburg.

On this occasion Miss Kate Shelton was awarded a book of poems given by Rev. M. W. Royall to the one who would draw the best map of Giles County.

The students promoted from the last grammar grade into the high school received their diplomas. The following comprised the class: Misses Mabel Bolton, Mary Peters, Georgie Pearson, Gladys Duncan, Leliah Spangler, Margaret Dills, Mary Frances Mason, Sadie Johnston, Irene Johnston, Nina Johnston, John Hoback, Walker Williams and Warren Johnston.

Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock the auditorium was packed to its utmost capacity to see the four act play "A White Lie," given by the Senior Class. The characters in every instance suited their role, and the acting was a little beyond anything ever given in this community by an amateur troupe.

Miss Mary Shelton, as "Pauline Bell," showed that remarkable talent for the drama which her friends for sometime have known her to posess.

Miss Constance Osborne as "May Blossom," a coquette, played her part in a very graceful manner.

Miss Bess Phlegar as "Miss Araminta Smilax," a lady of uncertain age, who had not given up the hope of matrimony sustained her part most admirably.

Terrell Shrader as "Rich Mr. Bell," Will McDonald as "Lawyer Moore," and Warren Stafford as "Arthur Peyton, a vagabond artist," acted their parts to perfection.

Will Dennis as "Taffy, a colored servant without wings," enlivened all tragic scenes and gave color to every occasion. Will has played the darkey role so long that in impersonating the negro he is far ahead of many comedians already on the stage.

The play was followed by a beautiful drill consisting of sixteen young ladies, Mrs. Easley patiently and untiringly trained all of these young people and to her all the honor belongs.

On Sunday morning in the Methodist church at 11 o'clock, Rev. David T. Miles of the Bane Circuit, preached the annual sermon, which was admirable in diction, forceful in thought and delivered in a manner that made a strong impression upon his hearers. Mr. Miles is a young man who is bound to make his mark. He has gained a wonderful hold upon the young men of his circuit, perhaps no man of Holston Conference has more good material in strong, healthy, intelligent boys than has Mr. Miles in his charge. Those boys are worth looking after and we hope Bro. Miles will train some of them to be preachers and missionaries.

The culmination of commencement exercises was the Graduating Exercise, Monday morning at ten o'clock when the twelve Seniors received their diplomas. The following comprise the senior class of '11: Misses Mary McDonald, Mabel Snidow, Bessie Phlegar, Mary Shelton, Constance Osborne, and Janie Cunningham, Messrs, Willie Dennis, Will McDonald, Martin Williams, Jas. B. Muney, Terrell Shrader and Wilmer Hedrick.

The graduating programme was as follows: Prayer, Rev. David T. Miles; Salutatory, Beyond the Alps Lies Italy, Lula Shrader; Class Prophecy, Mary Shelton; Solo, Mrs. A. A. Skeen; Class Poem, Mabel Snidow; Valedictory, The Building of Character, William McDonald; Chorus, "Spring Blossoms."

In a few well chosen remarks Prop. J. T. Wassom awarded the diplomas. Merit prizes to students in the seventh and the eighth grades were awarded by Mr. A. H. Woodyard to Miss Trixie Woods of the eighth grade, and Misses Mary Frances Mason and Leliah Spangler of the seventh grade.

The five dollar gold piece, given by the Daughter's of the Confederacy for the best essay on some "Southern Hero of the Civil War," was awarded by Prof. Jas R. Stafford to Miss Lula Shrader. Rev. M. W. Royall awarded the reciter's medal to Miss Annie Stafford. Rev. David Miles, the declaimer's medal to Frank Johnston. Prof. Stafford, the dabater's medal, to Chas. Cooper.

Prof. Wassom, the scholarship medal in his department, to Miss Mary McDonald.

A short prayer by Rev. Miles closed the last exercise of the session, and the joys and sorrows, victories and defeats of 1910 and '11 pass on into history.

Prof. Wassom has managed the school in a manner most gratifying to the majority of the patrons, and the school board has shown its appreciation of his efficient management by electing him principal for the next session.

The Right Combination

Every manufacturer of shoes knows that he can play up any one feature he cares to in producing a shoe to sell. He can make it stylish or comfortable, or he can turn out a shoe so heavy and stocky it will never wear out. He also knows that a nicely balanced combination of these three shoe virtues is about the hardest problem in shoe making.

The Southern Girl $2.00—Shoe—$2.50 owes its reputation and its many friends to the fine sense of proportion of style, comfort and durability, each to each.

You never saw better style—a neater, snappier shoe. Your foot never knew greater comfort than The Southern Girl Shoe will give. Once you've worn a pair you'll say you never got better value in wearing quality. Look up our dealer in your town and let him show you the line.

SWANSON OFFERS GOOD ROADS BILL.

Proposes That Government Apply $20,000,000 a Year to Assist States and Counties.

(Special to Times-Dispatch.)

Washington, May 6.—Senator Swanson has introduced the following bill in the interests of the good roads movement, and asks for an appropriation of $100,000,000:

"That the Director of the Office of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed, under the general supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, to carry out the provisions of this act as hereinafter set forth, and he is authorized to employ such engineering and other assistance as may be necessary, and the expense thereof shall be paid from the appropriation hereinafter made.

"Section 2. That upon application of said director by the legislature of any State, or such officer as the legislature may designate, requesting national aid in the improvement of any post road or rural delivery route, and setting forth that such road is a post road or rural delivery route; that it is a main traveled highway; that its improvement would be of great benefit to the State; that funds will be available on the part of the State or local authorities to defray half of the expense of the proposed improvement of such road; it shall be the duty of the said director to cause investigation to be made as to the correctness of all the statements made in such application, and to determine whether such improvement is desirable and for general welfare.

"If he shall approve such application, he shall so inform said State authorities, and then surveys, plans, specifications and estimates for such improvement shall be prepared, as may be determined by the joint action of said director and State authorities and which shall also be jointly approved and the director is satisfied that the portion of estimated cost to be borne by the State will be duly available, it shall be the duty of said director and State authorities, as they may agree, to advertise for bids for carrying out of such improvement. The bids shall be made and contracts awarded under such rules and regulations as the said director and State authorities may prescribe:

"Provided, that all bids shall be opened by a representative of the office of public roads in public, and in the presence of a duly qualified representative of the State. All contracts shall be awarded jointly by said director and duly constituted road authorities of the State.

Section 3. That the Director of the Office of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture and the State authorities shall have joint supervision over the construction, improvement and maintenance of all roads constructed, improved, or maintained under the provisions of this act.

"Section 4. That the entire cost of such construction, improvement or maintenance shall be paid by the treasurer of the United States upon warrant from said Director of the Office of Public Roads; provided, that upon completion of such construction and improvement and payment therefor, the said director shall certify to the duly constituted State authorities the total cost of such improvement, and it shall be the duty of the said State authorities to cause to be paid to the treasurer of the United States and by him placed to the credit of the national highway fund, hereinafter created, an amount equal to one-half of the total cost so certified by said director.

"Upon failure of any State to pay the national government the amount so certified it shall be the duty of the said Director of the Office of Public Roads to withhold a additional aid until such payment is made.

"Section 5. That there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000,000, of which $20,000,000 shall be available annually for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, which amount, after the payment of salaries and expenses herein before mentioned, shall be annually apportioned, in accordance with the provisions of this act, among the several States and Territories in the ratio which the population of each State and Territory, exclusively of cities of 120,000 or more inhabitants as determined by the last Federal census preceding such apportionment shall bear to the total population of the United States as shown by such census. Any portion of the $20,000,000 annually appropriated under the terms of this act remaining unexpended at the close of any fiscal year shall be carried over to the next succeeding year, and added to the amount available for the apportionment in that year.

VIRGINIA BOY WHO DIED GALLANTLY.

Graphic Story by An Eye Witness of Last Moments of Albert Edwards, INSURTECTO.

Bluefield Telegraph.

The following letter from Mayor R. N. French, of Douglas, Ariz., was received yesterday by A. L. Hawkins, of this city and tells the story of the death of Albert Edwards:

"I have been absent from home at Tombstone, attending court; hence the delay in answering your letter regarding the death of Albert Edwards, who was killed in the battle of Agua Prieta, Mexico, on the 14th of April. Young Edwards came here from Yumma several weeks before his death and joined the insurrectors at this place, enlisting under Colonel "Red" Lopez. On account of his daring and courage he was chosen by Lopez as his companion when it became necessary to come across the international line to Douglas to meet the insurrecto junta, or to obtain supplies for the insurrecto army. About ten days before the battle at Aqua Prieta, in attempting to cross the line into Douglas, Lopez and Edwards ran into some Mexico rurales (a kind of Mexican officer) and were fired upon by the rurales and while Lopez was giving battle to one of them with a clubbed gun, Albert Edwards killed two of the rurales shooting them with his revolver. Lopez also killed his man by beating him over the head with his gun. They came on to Douglas and young Edwards stopped at the Hotel Mexico, at which place I first saw him on the following day. When I entered the Hotel Mexico on the morning after the fight between Lopez, Edwards and the rurales, I noticed a young American sitting apart from the rest of the insurrectos, and there was something about his looks that impressed me with the idea that he was no ordinary boy. I approached him and asked him if he was an insurrecto. He replied that he was. I then asked him how he was getting along, to which he answered 'Bad enough.' He then told me of the fight the night before between Lopez, himself and the rurales and said he had to pawn his pistol for his supper which was the first meal he had eaten for forty hours; that his horse was then in the livery stable and he did not know how he was to get him out, as he had no money. I gave him some money with which to get his breakfast and told him I would see that he had something to eat himself and would get his horse out of the stable when he wanted to leave Douglas. There were so many young Americans among the insurrectos that I forgot to inquire about his name or from what part of the United States he came until I met him later on the street. I then asked him what State he was from and he replied Virginia. He told me that his name was Albert Edwards, and that his mother was Bailey from Mercer county W. Va. He asked me if I was a kinsman of Capt. Dave French of Bluefield, and asked me about a great many Bluefield people. He also said he had seen the insurrecto general who had furnished him with money and that he had sufficient for his present needs. I saw him frequently afterwards, and he seemed to be very glad to find some one to whom he could talk about people known by both he and I.

"The last time I saw him alive, he told me that he was expecting a telegram from New Mexico, and asked me to get it for him. I got the telegram, and had it in my pocket and was trying to cross the international line to give it to him during the battle, and had just asked Red Lopez (who had just come up to the line to give his brother a leopard skin, taken from the house first captured by him) where Edwards was, when a young man named King from Michigan, came through a shower of bullets to the line and said: Your friend Edwards has just been shot. I then went to an American officer and told him I would like to get across to look after a "kinsman of mine," who was shot, and he gave me permission to go over the line. As the battle was still raging and the bullets falling uncomfortably close, I had some difficulty in reaching the spot where Edwards was lying. Before I got to him he had crawled out from behind the house, where King and other Americans had carried him, and with his left leg almost entirely shot off just below the knee he persisted in continuing to fire at the federals, who were behind sandbags on the top of the surrounding houses. King begged him to crawl back behind the house and stop firing, but he replied with his last breath: 'Let me get that fellow on the roof and I'll die happy.'

He got the fellow on the roof and as the fellow struck the ground Albert Edwards received the fatal shot which killilled him instantly.

"I was a moment too late to see him alive. I went for a wagon with which to bring his body across to Douglass and was informed by Mexican guards that I could only take wounded and not dead soldiers across the line. By that time Lopez had taken the town and I found him in the center of the town giving orders against the selling of any kinds of liquors under penalty of death. He was placing guards around the houses of the town. I asked him for permission to take Edwards' body across the line. Lopez was very much distressed to hear that Edwards was killed and he gave orders to allow his body to be taken across the line and asked me to go with him to see a Mexican lady who had been wounded, which I did. After I had called an automobile the first and had assisted Lopez in getting the lady in the automobile, I then returned to the place where I had left Edwards' body and I found that he had been taken across by a wagon which was gathering up the wounded. I then came across and into Douglass and found the body of Edwards at the hospital, which he had gone to see the wounded. I had it taken at once to McCarthy's undertaking parlors and afterwards shipped it to Bluefield, W. Va.

"His death, however, deserves more than a passing note here. If the federal soldiers in the civil war, who gave up their lives in defense of the Union, fighting under Grant, Sheridan or Sherman, or the soldiers in gray who died fighting for state sovereignty under Lee, Jackson or Longstreet deserve to be remembered by the country, and to have their names enrolled on the scroll of fame, then Albert Edwards this young Virginian who gave his young life for an alien people in the cause of liberty deserves a high niche in the temple of fame. With no stars and stripes, the flag of his country, to inspire his feed of valor; with no bonny blue flag flung to the breezes of heaven and kissed by the sunbeams of morning to fill the young heart with love of his country; with no martial music from bands or drums and fifes to breed inspiration in his blood and urge him on to daring deeds, this young hero, who has been face to face with the Mexicans and has seen their peonage; and upon whose heart was engraved the mottos of the Virginias, "Montani Semper Liberi" and "Sic Semper Tyrannis," he enlisted with Red Lopez in the insurrecto army and for love of liberty and freedom gave his life for an alien people striving them selves to be free. In advance of his comrades, where the fighting was and where the bullets fell thickest, he fell, and while his life's blood slowly ebbed away his last words were: "Let me get that fellow on the roof and I will die happy." Braver words never fell from the lips of a man; history does not record an exhibition of cooler courage, more unselfish and patriotic motives, a brave or more heroic death than the death of Albert Edwards at Aqua Prieta, Senora, Mexico.

FAMILY BURNED IN ALBEMARLE.

Five of the Six Children of a Farmer Die in an Upper Room.

Charlottesville, Va., May 8.—Five of the six children of Sanford Davis, a farmer residing near Free Union, Albemarle county, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the Davis home today. Davis and his wife and an infant escaped. The dead children ranged in age from three to fifteen years. They slept in a room on the second floor, reached by narrow stairs. When discovered the fire already had eaten its way to the stairway. The frantic father attempted to reach the room from the outside, but, when at the top of the ladder he was nearly overcome by smoke and heat. Davis called vainly for the children to come to him. The only response came feebly from Estelle, aged 13, who cried:

"Papa, I can't get out; I am nearly strangled to death."

Foley's Kidney Remedy Acted Quickly.

M. N. George, Irondale, Ala., was bothered with kidney trouble for many years. "I was persuaded to try Foley Kidney Remedy, and before taking it three days I could feel its beneficial effects. The pain left my back, my kidney action cleared up, and I am so much better, I do not hesitate to recommend Foley Kidney Remedy." Sold by Mason Bros. & Hoge, Hoge's Store, Va.

GONE HOME.

On Saturday, April 22, God seen fit to send the death angel into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stiff and claim as His own their little son, Haven, aged three months only, a short time in which to make a record. This little one budded in this world to blossom in heaven. Our greatest sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones who are so heartbroken. Though they shall see him no more in the body, yet in their memory he lives in renewed glory and with his same sweet smiles he is ever beckoning us to a better life. It is hard, so hard for you to give up this dear little one. Yet his end is no accident, no misfortune. It is only a gift of a loving Father; one he thought too much of to allow to remain here.

Funeral services were conducted at the Lucas Memorial church by Rev. G. R. Fringer, assisted by Rev. G. W. Harless. His remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground near Maybrook, Va.

May God's blessings rest upon the mother and father who are left to mourn his loss.

A FRIEND.

PAT'S MISTAKE.

Two Irishmen, Pat and Mike, who had been for some time wandering about in a small town, decided they could find no job unless they went to a larger town, and as money was rather scarce, they were puzzled to know just how they would raise enough to get away.

Finally, Pat said: "Oi have it. You lead me through the town. Oi be the blind man and you me brother. Oi sit on the street and hold me hat, and when we have enough money from the passers by, we lave."

"Good," said Mike. "We will try that plan."

Pat had succeeded in getting quite a little sum when Mike, thinking he could do as well sitting alone as when he was by, decided to steal away from his supposed blind brother and get a drink at a near saloon.

A kind hearted man happened along shortly after Mike's departure and noticing Pat holding his hat, said:

"So you are blind, and how came you to lose your eyesight?"

Pat wishing to make a favorable impression on the stranger, said:

"Oi think it was caused from being bate about the face with a club, as Oi was never blind until after that."

"You don't say!" said the stranger. "And pray tell me who was so unkind?"

"Me father," said Pat (forgetting he was to be blind), "he used to keep a saloon and made me wash bottles. One day he came in mad and he thought oi had not been working hard enough and he bate me all over the with a whip until oi was as the striped as that post," said he, pointing to a barber sign across the street.

Wanted Satisfaction.

"What is your fee for extracting a tooth?" asks the heavy set man with the fur trimmed overcoat.

"Five dollars," answers the dentist, recognizing in his patron a well known plutocrat.

"Well, say, I'd like to make a bargain with you. I've got a whole lot of grudge at this tooth, and if you'll let me swear at you as much as I like for hurting me when you pull it I don't mind paying you $20 extra.

J. S. Hoback of Sugar Run, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Fount Johnston, at "Pleasant View."

Quite a number from this place attended the High School exercises at Narrows last Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Dent Echols of Newport, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Dr. Frank Miller, returned home Wednesday.

If you want ice, country beef and fresh fish, call at Painter's meat market. These luxuries kept constantly on hand.

Miss Julia Catron who has been the guest of Miss Constance Osborn for several days, returned to her home at Radford, Monday.

When in need of wall paper, painting and paper hanging, picture frames made to order, call on K. M. Charlton, Narrows, Va.

Raymond McGhee of Radford, spent Saturday and Sunday here. There seems to be a drawing attraction here for several young men from other cities.

Spring has arrived in earnest. The past few days has been very warm. Some one said it was 102. We think they ought to be more careful in what they say.

Mrs. E. B. Durham and Miss Gladys Duncan of Ripplemead, accompanied Miss Susie Easley as far as Roanoke on her way home to Eastern Virginia.

Dr. Frank B. Miller of Newport, who, some time ago, bought the property belonging to Mr. C. L. King of this place, has moved into the same. We welcome the Dr. and his amiable wife to our community.

Now is the time to bring in your announcement. It will cost you no more to insert it now than two weeks before election. The price is the same, no matter when announced. Put it in early and get your money's worth.

Houston Wilburn of Charleston, W. Va., is visiting homefolks on Sugar Run. He is also on a fishing expedition. As is usually the case, with fishermen particularly, we expect to hear of some unusually "big" yarns.

Gov. Wm. Hodges Mann has appointed Mr. A. E. Shumate a delegate to the National Good Roads Congress, which convenes in Birmingham, Ala., May 23 to 26, 1911. The people of this county will be well represented in the person of Mr. Shumate, and no better appointment could have been made.

Profs. Stafford and Wassom spent Wednesday on Angels' Rest.

Dr. W. D. Woolwine visited homefolks at Vinton, Monday, and returned Tuesday evening.

Little Misses Louise and Eugene, daughters of Mr. Charles Southern of Radford, are the guests of little Miss Mabel Brotherton.

Dr. Frank B. Miller has moved his family to this village and is now ready to attend all who may desire anything done in the dental line. He has been making calls here for many years, and needs no recommendation from us.

We acknowledge an invitation from The Faculty and Gradnating Class of Martha Washington College, Abingdon, to attend the Commencement Exercises of that institution, May 26-29, 1911 We are sorry, but business forbids us attending.

Money is a blessing in the hands of some people and a curse in the hands of others. It is a blessing to us, and we wish we had more of the blessing. Don't be afraid to send these blessings to us; you know the good book says, it is more blessed to give than to receive.

In the "matter of Joel H. Cutchin, Mayor of Roanoke," from the number of witnesses summoned to testify against said Mayor, we venture to remark that whatever it was that was the matter with Hannah, it wasn't half as bad as the matter with Joel.

Rev. Royall wishes us to say he will fill his appointments or have some other minister attend to them for him. Glen Lyn, Sunday morning; Lurich in the afternoon, and Pearisburg at night. We are sorry to say Mrs. Royall's mother lies at the point of death.

Frank Prater, son of Rev. J. L. Prater, was riding his wheel between this place and Pembroke on Wednesday, the 10th inst, when he took a "header" and was thrown to the ground, and badly stunned. At first it was thought he was seriously injured. He was taken to the home of a friend at Ripplemead, where he remained until Thursday night when he was brought home. We are glad to state he is all right now. These roads are too rough for a 2 40 gait.

The Amicon Fruit Company, Bluefield, W. Va., have opened up packing houses at Pearisburg station and Eggleston, Va., and are ready to receive fruits, vegetables and produce of all kinds as soon as you are ready to market them. On delivery to their houses they will pay you "spot cash" for whatever you sell them. We consider this move something valuable to our farmers in the way of marketing their products, they will not be bothered running around to different markets to dispose of them. We predict for them a fair share of the trade of our farmers. Read their advertisement in another column.

FOR SALE.

I have one good two horse Look & Lincoln wagon and one one-horse spring wagon for sale. Will sell cheap.

Remember, mass meetings for the various districts in the county, will be held on next Saturday, the 20th, at the following places: Pearisburg District, at Narrows; Walker's Creek District, at Wabash; Pembroke District, at Pembroke, and Newport District, at Newport. Let there be a good attendance by the Democrats at these meetings.

A PLEASANT TRIP.

On our way to Eggleston Monday morning, we met Sheriff Durham and Special Officer J. B. Lucas, on the train on their way to Roanoke for some prisoner wanted for housebreaking and robbery. The sheriff decided that Special Officer Lucas and himself would not be sufficient guards to bring the prisoner back for trial, and to our surprise, the sheriff summoned and demanded the Editor to accompany him and Special Officer Lucas to Roanoke to assist in bringing the prisoner back. Feeling that we had to obey "the powers that be," and that the sheriff was entitled to have brave men to assist him in the discharge of his duties, we yielded to his demands.

Our trip was made the more pleasant by our train being in charge of Conductor Linkous, who is a true blue Giles County Democrat.

On our arrival at Roanoke we were met by Sergeant Tillett and his deputies, Messrs. Allen and Johnson and special officer Joe Funk, who were exceedingly kind to us while in this city.

A VERY CLOSE CALL.

Tuesday morning A. C. Thomas, W. G. Cunningham and James Charlton went to Eggleston to bring down a large fifty foot ferry boat that Mr. Thomas had bought to be used in crossing the river at Pearisburg, they realized that the river was not in the proper condition to bring such a large boat that distance but thought they could bring it by landing and going ahead and picking out a way to go over the swift falls, which is just opposite the Pembroke depot. They stopped and asked several people that they thought were thoroughly familiar with the river at that point, and was told that there was nothing in the channel to bother them, but as they reached the lower end of the swift channel and going at a rapid rate of speed, they crushed into a large rock that was barely up to the top of the water and could not be seen until boat was within ten feet of it, then it was too late to check the great force and they went against the huge boulder, which plowed its way through the well constructed boat and sent it to the bottom of New river at the most dangerous and swiftest point along the route, leaving the crew hanging to one side which was barely out of the water. There they remained for over half an hour expecting every moment to be swept off the rock to death in the swift rough water where swimming would be almost an impossibility. They were rescued by Mr. Booth who went to them in a small skift. The crew hardly know how to express their gratitude to Mr. Booth who risked his own life to come to them in that hour of anxiety and fear. Mr. Cunningham has lost two brothers by being drowned in New river.

NARROWS HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

Wednesday Evening.

"PRINCE CHARMING."

On the evening of May 10th in the school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock, Narrows High School opened its commencement exercises with a comic operetta, Prince Charming or The Capture of the Queen of Hearts. This interesting and beautiful musical entertainment had one hundred and twelve characters in it. The leading characters were: "St. Valentine," represented by Earl Johnson; "Prince Charming," by Jas. Wheeler; "Cupid," by Blake Nelson; the "Queen of Hearts," by Ethel James Johnson; "Jack," by Percy Hale; "Jill," by Clara Shumate; "Puck," by Phil Day; "Maid Molly," by Lyda Hale; "Father," by Joe Topper; "Mother," Kate Bane; "Nanette, a French maid," by May Fizer; "Coquette," by Lillian Dillowe; "Sallie," by Kathleen Hale; "Jane," by Loula Bailey. Besides these fourteen principal characters there were seven little girls representing "Tart Maids;" twelve young ladies "Reception girls;" seven small girls as "Roses;" ten tiny tots, "Butterflies;" five boys, "Gold;" five girls, "Silver;" sixteen Indians helped to hurrah things along; ten little Violets added color to the occasion; ten Fairies directed the plans; ten Valentines bound the Queen of Hearts and thus captured she confessed she had always intended to marry Prince Charming. The little play showed most refined taste, being delicate, its thought delightful in humor and replete with first-class music. The costuming was all that could be desired. Each character did credit to the occasion. To present a play of this kind requires a great deal of work on the part of those who train the pupils; but it is well worth while since there is much more in such training to the student than appears at first glance.

The great musical talent for which Narrows has long been noted was exemplified in this operetta.

Thursday.

At 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the school auditorium a large audience of patrons and friends of the school gathered to hear the declamation and recitation contests. Eight boys from seventh grade contested for a declamation prize. These boys were between the ages of twelve and fifteen. Not often will boys of that age enter a speaking contest, here the same good taste was displayed that characterized the entire commencement programme, nothing was selected merely to entertain each declamation was an old standard. The class was as follows: The Victory of The Black Horse and His Rider, Dewey Coburn; It Takes a Man to be Brave, Clarence Hale; The Home, Hope Honkins; The Minute Men of '75, Clarence Hammer; After Twenty Years, Russell Topper; America's Glory and Shame, Cyrus Brown; The Gladiator, Samuel Johnson.

The prize in this contest was won by Cyrus Brown.

The next contest was a class in recitation, made up of seventh grade pupils. The following were the contestants and their subjects; Papa's Letter, by Elliston Strosneider; "Cradle Hymn," Gray Fizer; The Man in the Model Church, Mellie Coburn; She Sang to Him of Heaven, Lillie Waldron; "The Burial of Sir John Moore," Edna Johnson; "The School Marm's Courtship, Emma Topper; "The Picket Guard," Elizabeth Lambert; "Man was Made to Mourn," Clara Shumate.

These girls showed very careful training. The prize was won by Miss Mellie Coburn.

Nine eight grade boys contested in declamation for a medal. They were as follows: "John Howard Payne," by Frank Beamer; "The Ends of the Present the Means of the Future," Cover Johnson; "We Must Make Circumstances," Percy Hale; "The Cavalier," Oscar Dillowe; "Abraham Lincoln," Chapman Hale; "Liberty and Union," Bennett Adair; "The Victim of Passion," A. B. Glenn, Jr.; "Henry W. Grady," Eugene Honaker; "Joe. E. Johnston," Zed French. Each young man did so well that it was very hard for the committee to decide who should have the medal, Cover Johnson was deemed the successful one.

Thursday Evening.

That part of school work which represents most merit in public exercises was very wisely left for the last evening, namely, the debate. The question, was Resolved, "That students should pursue a special rather than a general course of education in our high schools and colleges." Those representing the affirmative were: Lon Coburn, Robert Hale, and Arthur Adair; Negative: Carl Dillowe, Earl Johnson and Dan Hale. Each young man acquitted himself very creditably. The committee decided that Earl Johnson was entitled to the medal.

Six young ladies from the eighth and the ninth grades contested for the reciter's medal. The contest was as follows:

Incident of the Johnstown Flood, Miss Beulah Topper.

Bernardo Del Carpio, Miss Loula Day.

The Confessional, Miss Clarice Alvis.

The Famine, Miss Lyda Hale.

Pro Patria, Miss Kathleen Hale.

Uncle Dan'l's Prayer, Miss Kate Bane.

Here again the contest was extremely close, the pieces were rather difficult but each young lady deserved a medal though there was only one to be given. Miss Clarice Alvis was the successful contestant.

Prof. Momen Sheppard in a few well chosen remarks awarded the seventh grade declamation prize to Cyrus Brown, and the recitation prize of the same grade to Miss Mellie Coburn.

Rev. Benton Brown of Eckman, W. Va., awarded the declamation medal of the eighth grade class to Cover Johnson, and the recitation medal of the young ladies class to Miss Clarice Alvis.

Prof. C. A. Brown, in a brief, but very pleasant way, awarded the music medals, one to little Miss Lynsenmeyer; the other to Miss Lyda Hale; also the debater's medal to Earl Johnson.

Throughout the entire commencement exercises the deportment was all that could be desired.

Narrows High School is composed of a high-toned, well disciplined body of students, it is a school of which not only Narrows, but the entire county may be justly proud.

The music depatment of this school under the efficient management of Miss Rachel McClaugherty, is unsurpassed in Southwest Virginia.

The teachers are very popular among both patrons and pupils, and the School Board has solicited the service of the same efficient corps of instructors for the next session.

We have never seen a better behaved student body.

A LITTLE TRIP.

On last Wednesday afternoon in company with Mr. Thos. R. Kelley, salesman for Roanoke Candy & Manufacturing Company, we started for the Narrows to "take in" the closing exercises of the Narrows High School. After seeing the exhibition given by the school at night, and which we must say, was fine indeed, we were invited by Mr. E. L. Shockey to spend the night, which we did. Mr. and Mrs. Shockey are fine entertainers and make one think they are at home. We hope they will live long and prosper.

Thursday morning in company with that indefatigable gentleman, we took our departure up Wolf Creek and landed at Rocky Gap, the terminus of the New River, Holston & W. R. R. This place is beautiful in the way of fine scenery. Honaker Bros. have a large, fine store-house here, and filled to overflowing with a fine line of goods usually kept in country stores.

The people along the line seem to be prosperous from a farming point of view, nice residences and saw mills in abundance. In the afternoon we started back and reached the Narrows late in the afternoon.

We took supper with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hale. Mrs. Hale knows how to fix up things in superb style. That night we stayed with our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Hale, whose hospitality is known the county over, and too much praise cannot be said of their generous treatment to others.

Friday noon we took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hoback, and it has not been our good fortune to set down to a better meal in many years. Mrs. H. is certainly a genius in cooking.

The N. R. H. & W. R. R., which runs from the Narrows to Rocky Gap, is quite handsomely equipped and is a great convenience to the people along its line. Mr. Bud Haile, the conductor on the line, is very popular, and his place would be hard to fill.

We had on our trip many kind friends who invited us to stay and dine with them, but of course, we could not do so with every one, to all of which, we extend thanks.

ATTENTION!

A Plea for History.

BY JULIA M. TYLER OTEY.

Moses has given us a text that should be a motto for histories research:

"Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations: ask thy Father and He will show thee: thy elders, and they will tell thee." Deut. xxxii, v. vii.

The preservation of the records of ninety-six generations of our Blessed Lord from Adam, shows how faithfully the Jews heeded this admonition; and from all ages history and genealogy have been the beacon-lights of Progress to Civilization.

In forming this chapter, it is with pride we welcome the descendants of makers of history from many States, but especially makers of history on the then frontier of Virginia. Such men as sounded the keynote of independence at the price of life and property, and as early as January 20, 1775, put on record the Fincastle Declaration, authorized by her citizens, drawn up and signed by fourteen men of Fincastle county—practically Southwest Virginia. Around us now spread the peaceful homes of this section, where it is our duty and pleasure to gather and preserve such data as is in the possession of the descendants of the frontier heroes—to present it in such form as to be available for reference in authentic history, or in other words to materialize history from tradition and present each in its true garb to posterity.

"Events—events, give me events, and I will write a book to hold the attention of the world," said Balzac, and where shall we go to a more eventful period, than before and during the Revolution, or look for braver deeds than on the frontier of Virginia?

The battle of Point Pleasant antedated Lexington, and that grim old giant here, Gen. Andrew Lewis, fought and won it in spite of the treachery of Governor Dunsmore and with no reserves in case of disaster. Where are the dependents of the men who fought with him?

In all times the peace of the frontier has secured the prosperity of the State. So Caesar's staunchest legions always faced the barbarians. The German's sing, "O! Fatherland, no care be thine our lives will guard the border line." The lords of the Marches in England were never selected from a craven class, and so Virginia trusted the safety of her frontier to sturdy men, worthy of all confidence, and nobly did her sons respond to this important charge. On the frontier, ever and always, the French and treacherous Indians, who disputed our claim to Western territory and made of Kentucky that dark and bloody ground wherein no tribe or settlement could establish itself in safety.

To the credit of our frontiersmen, be it said, that no enemy broke over our border and no scars on Virginia's sacred soil bear testimony in the Southwest of ineffectiveness of her guardians, but their absence pays a glorious tribute to the vigilance, patriotism and devotion to our country's important trust.

The Historical Society has written and urged that we collect from private sources all history and tradition for reference by future historians. Now the people to furnish this data are the descendants of the men who fought and the women who helped.

General Campbell's brigade was among the first to join Gen. Woodford in fighting around Norfolk and driving Dunsmore out. Where are my descendants of these soldiers to be interested in placing the deeds of Montgomery and Washington county men on record?

The files of the State were burned; I say—perhaps some list or partial list is hidden in old letters of soldiers. Who has ever looked well for such material? Who has ever written down what was told by older members of their families. Please do it now. If the story is only a few words, write it and bring it to the chapter meeting.

If you have valuable original papers to deposit, Dr. Barringer has most courteously offered us the use of such space in the fire-proof vault at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute as will be necessary to preserve them, or copies of the original. Then, in case of fire at your homes, a copy will be safe for history.

There is a feeling among us that justice in history has never been done to the Southwest in the Revolution. Have each of you done your part to help historians secure facts or traditions about your people? If not, do start now. Locked up bureau drawers give out no information. Notes shut up in family bibles or old secretaries may be a private satisfaction, but do little good in the world.

Few over here know of General Matthews, yet Bancroft says his indomitable soldiers decided the battle in our favor at Germantown. Who were these men? Women of Giles, Pulaski and Montgomery, you should answer—they were from your counties.

Three Revolutionary general officers came from this remote, thinly settled Southwest. Men with them trained to fight from boyhood, necessarily made good soldiers and were ready to respond to the first call to arms. Why are their descendants so shy about putting their records on file? A good name better than riches lies unrecorded. Yet I know few among you have failed to put each deed to your property on record. 'Tis a farce that human life should be so cheap and land be held so dear.

There are many claims on, and appeals to this society requiring more or less expense, but the greatest appeal is for more light on hitsory; it comes to each daughter and at no cost can be answered. If each member converts into writing all the facts and traditions of her family or friends, and places it with the archives of the chapter here.

Be interested and the interest will spread, the chapter grow, and our members be closer, better friends and citizens, when we fully realize the individual deeds done for our country, that liberty might be secured to all the land and to all the inhabitants thereof.

This appeal is not alone to the nation born Virginian: others, whose homes are temporarily or permanently here, can greatly assist by securing data from other sections, thus spreading and stimulating the interest in history here, as well as demonstrating the fact that Virginia did not do all the fighting in the Revolution, but was ably supported by twelve other belligerent stars of equal magnitude.

IMPROVED RURAL SCHOOLS.

Middle and Eastern Virginia Out-distancing the Valley and Southwest Sections of the State in the Building of High Grade Modern Rural Schools.

BY L. H. LABAUME.

A great many school houses in Virginia rural districts lack the common decencies and necessities of school life, to say nothing of its comforts and conveniences. Strange, as it may seem, most of these deplorable school conditions are found in the richest agricultural section of the State, namely, the Shenandoah Valley and Southwest Virginia.

This lack of improvement is not due to causes evident at first sight. It is not on account of poverty, for here is an instance where the wealthiest and most prosperous sections of the State are most culpable. It is not due to lack of appreciation of the elements of beauty, comfort and convenience, for the homes of the Valley and Southwest are conspicuous for these features. The cause seems to be in the failure of the people in these two sections of the State to see the importance of comfort and beauty and brightness in the school environment as well as in the home.

Wonderful Development in Eastern Virginia.

On a recent tour through the State I have been inspired with the bleakness, the bareness and the crudeness of many of the rural school building and grounds in the most prosperous sections of the Valley and Southwest Virginia, and I find that the town and village schools are little better in many instances. On the other hand the Middle and Tidewater sections of the State are simply doing wonders in the improvement of their school facilities. Everywhere in all the counties of this section we find beautiful large centralized school buildings recently erected. Buildings mostly of stone and brick, with modern heating and water appliances, large light and airy rooms, beautifully furnished and equipped with modern furniture, and other apparatuses, large auditoriums, libraries and frequently gymnasiums and domestic science departments. Most of them having High School facilities, with a full four years course of study. These buildings are costing from $15,000 to $50,000 each, and the people are clamoring for more of them, although some forty or fifty have been erected in the past few years.

These high class schools are doing more to arouse the residents of the community to the vast opportunities that lie before them than anything else and as a direct result they are improving their roads and their streets, their towns, their cities, and their farms, and in consequence this Eastern half of Virginia is fast becoming a most attractive and prosperous section of the State.

How to Get New Settlers.

What Virginia needs most of all is plenty of good high class settlers to put her lands under cultivation and increase the agricultural productions and general prosperity. Middle and Eastern Virginia are getting the bulk of these people because of their progressive policy in these matters of development and general up building of the community. Not only this, but in the past two or three years a large number of the former residents of the Valley and Southwest are selling their old homes and buying these old Eastern Virginia plantations where they get better school facilities in a rapidly developing community with land less than half the price they sold theirs for.

There are more of these high grade centralized Rural Schools visible from the railroad in the eighty-two miles from Petersburg to Norfolk than in the two-hundred and fifty miles from Roanoke to Hagerstown, Md.: this statement is not made for invidious comparison, but simply with the object in view of acquainting our people of the Western part of the State with the fact that they are making time while their neighbors at the East are advancing at double quick and will soon out-distance them entirely, if they don't get in line and do likewise.

Demand the Best for Your Locality.

Start a school improvement campaign in your own community and then call on State Superintendent of Schools, James D. Eggleston, at Richmond, Va. If you are in earnest he will tell you how you can get one of these up-to-date buildings in your own locality and it will be absolutely the best investment you and your friends ever made.

There is no reason why farmers and others living in a $100 00 land belt should be satisfied with antiquated old buildings and inadequate school facilities that have almost entirely disappeared in the $10, $20. land belt of the State where people will no longer put up with those back number conditions. The illiteracy of Virginia is not found in the Middle or Eastern section of the State, but in the Blue Ridge and Alleghany Mountains, bordering both sides of the most fertile and prosperous valley in the entire South.

Roanoke, Va., May 15, 1911.

The Second Man.

A teacher said to her class, "Who was the first man?"

"George Washington," a little boy shouted promptly.

"How do you make out that George Washington was the first man?" said the teacher, smiling indulgently.

"Because," said the little boy, "he was first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his coutrymen."

But at this point a larger boy held up his hand. "Well," said the teacher to him, "who do you think was the first man?"

"I don't know what his name was," said the larger boy, "but I know it wasn't George Washington, ma'am, because the history book says George Washington married a widow, so of course there must have been a man ahead of him."

Princely Hospitality.

The new King of Siam, Vajiravudh was educated at Oxford University, England. The Washington Star has an anecdote from the lips of one who knew him there.

"Vajiravudh was a pleasant, hospitable lad, but not a very brilliant student. I remember him saying to me one night:

"'Dine with me tomorrow at the Mitre, will you?'

"'Can't old man,' I answered. 'I'm going to see "Hamlet."'

"'Bring him along,' said Vajiravudh."

In Texas, only a few hours ride from here, the whole earth there is a garden of flowers. The first crop of hay is being cut; oats are being harvested, and corn is waist high, and we are only beginning to think about planting a little "roasting ear" patch. Truly, this is a wonder ful country.

Obituary of Harriet Elizabeth Lucas

Oftentimes a dark shadow at the least expected time, enters the home and casts its sombre gloom over all them that dwell therein. It was so when the death angel entered the fireside circle of Mrs. Nannie Lucas in Philadelphia, Saturday, April 22, and touched the youngest and perhaps the fairest of her six daughters. In January she took the grippe which later developed into typhoid fever and then into meningitis of which she died.

She was fifteen years old, a member of the Christian Baptist church; also of the second year class of the Philadelphia High school.

How often will her loved ones look at the vacant chair with tear dimmed eyes and think with sad hearts how impenetrable the mystery attending the going out of one who was so well advanced in mind and body and who was a bright ray of comfort to the devoted mother and sisters. On Monday following her death a funeral service was held, and immediately the family took the train for the burial ground of her father, Rev. Chapman Lucas, one of Giles' most gifted sons.

At Maybrook upon a grassy hillside it overlooks the home of his childhood and there on the beautiful spring afternoon as the sun was casting its mellow rays to kiss the bursting bud and flower and to coax the early songsters to tune their lays to stronger and sweeter strains, the body of Elizabeth was tenderly laid away. As the new made grave was being covered with beautiful flowers by loving friends and as the soft murmur of the near by stream, along whose banks her father as a bare-foot boy chased the golden winged butterfly or followed the golden thoughts which finally led him into a gifted man of God, was wafted on the evening air one could not help but think that while her body would return to dust her spirit would return to the God who gave it and would mingle with the innumerable hosts that are gathered upon the banks of the beautiful river of eternal life as it flows forever out from the throne of God 'Tis dark and strange and sudden now.

'Tis sad to say farewell to those we love, but after all life's storms are past, we'll know her in our bright home above!

POPULATION OF GILES COUNTY.

E. Dana Durand, director of the new census, taken last year, has announced the figures in detail covering the entire state of Virginia. The following is the population of this county:

	1910.	1900.
Newport district,	1257	1322
Pearisburg district,	4899	4043
Narrows town,	975
Pearisburg town,	470	464
Pembroke district,	2808	2644
Walker's Creek dis.,	2659	2784

As this is the time of year for whitewashing and quite a number of fences, henceops, coal and other houses hereabouts need a coat of lime, the following may come in handy to those who do not know exactly how to mix the ingredients so they will stick: Slake half a bushel of fresh lime with boiling water, covering the barrel while slaking. Strain and add one-half pecks of salt dissolved in warm water, one half pound of whiting and one pound of glue dissolved in warm water. Let stand for several days and apply warm, if possible. Another recipe is to merely slake lime and then add one pint of boiled linseed oil to each gallon of wash, or, if no oil is at hand, use melted tallow. This for rough outside work only.

NEW TELEPHONES AND WIRES.

The proper way to judge the progressiveness of a community through which you are passing, first look at the number of telephones in use; next the kind of roads you are traveling, and you have the whole story. No need of futher inquiries. If nine out of ten residences have telephones and the road is good, you are in a territory that is prosperous and progressive. As a proof of the above, we point with pride to our own county, with its good roads, bridges, valuable farms, nice residences, blooded stock and 500 telephones. We do not believe there is a single county in the State ahead of us in facilities for communication, traveling and transaction of business.

No point has been so remote as to escape the penetration of prosperity via the telephone. There are still a large number of farmers and business men without this most valuable instrument in their residences, although the indications are that it will be only a short time until almost every one will have a telephone.

A few of the prominent citizens lately connected at Pearisburg are A. E. Shumate, R. S. Fry, E. W. Charlton, W. R. Walker, James Hale, J. W. Porterfield, C. T. Painter, L. D. Shumate, W. J. Odell, R. C. Pack, S. H. Pack, A. H. Woodyard, besides numerous subscribers to Pembroke, Newport, Wabash and Narrows exchanges. I am informed that nearly one hundred have established telephones in the last year.

To take care of the increased business occasioned by the prosperity of the Giles citizens, the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company has a construction force at work stringing new wires. Our copper circuit to Radford and the South, one to Hinton and the North, one to Bluefield and West, it is hoped that this will give the best of facilities for long distance conversations. When the above fails to supply the demand we are assured the more will be forthcoming. The cost of service, especially to country people, is small and not to be compared to the benefits arrived. These benefits are too numerous to mention and can be summed up in the saving of time, money and horse flesh.

We use Live Leather only

Some shoe dealers will tell you they can't give you a good, durable shoe for $2.00 or $2.50. They are right, they can't. The $2.00 shoe they sell is made to fill a demand at this price—not to wear. It is made of seconds—from sole to heel.

This same shoe in our "Autograph" brand, $2.50 and $3.00, is Goodyear well sewed; in our College Woman's Walking Shoe, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, it equals the best custom make.

The Southern Girl $2.00 Shoe $2.50

is a revelation to every woman who tries it for the first time. In style it 's the equal of shoes that cost double the money. It makes the foot feel perfectly at home. It wears better than any shoe you ever bought for $2.00—because we use live leather—a quality sole, insole, counter, heel, linings. How can we afford it?

The Secret of Youth

Do you ever wonder how you can remain young, or why other women older than you, look younger than you do?

The secret can be put in a few words: "Preserve your health, and you will preserve your youth."

By "health" we mean not alone physical health, but nerve health, as, sometimes, magnificently strong-looking women are nervous wrecks.

But whether you are weak physically or nervously, you need a tonic, and the best tonic for you is Cardui.

It builds strength for the physical and nervous systems. It helps put flesh on your bones and vitality into your nerves.

The Woman's Tonic

"My mother," writes Mrs. Z. L. Adcock, of Smithville, Tenn., "is 44 years old and is passing through the change of life.

"She was irregular and bloated and suffered terribly. My father stepped over to the store and got her a bottle of Cardui, which she took according to directions and now she is up, able to do her housework and says she feels like a new woman." Try Cardui in your own case.

The sunshine nowhere seems so bright

The birds sing nowhere quite so sweet
And nowhere hearts so lightly beat,
For heaven and earth both seem to meet

The days are never quite so long

And when my time has come to die,

How Worry Kills.

Worry kills more people than work. It is not sure that worry does not shorten more lives than are shortened by disease. Never in the history of the world was so much money being spent, so much labor, to prevent disease. Formerly the prevention of disease received no attention. Curative medicine occupied the whole field. Preventive medicine now is regarded by physicians all over the world as of far greater importance.

The prevention of worry is of about equal importance. Scientific people believe that worry produced something akin to disease. A recent writer in the Journal of Physiological Therapeutics says:

"Worry injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain, and the brain being the nutritive center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and when some diseases of these organs or a combination of them arises death finally ensues.

Worry, to make the theory still stronger, is an irritant at certain points which produces little harm if it comes at intervals or irregularity. Occasional worriment the brain can cope with, but the iteration and the reiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against.

It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain struck lightly with a hammer every few seconds with mechanical precision, with never a sign of a stop or the failure of a stroke. Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike or fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, diminishing the vitality of the delicate organisms that are so minute that they can be seen only under the microscope."

Don't worry. Look at the doughnut, not the hole. Half of the ills of life are imaginary. All of them are exaggerated by contemplation. It is just as easy to see the bright side as the dark side. It is easy for the man who resolutely looks for the cloud's silver lining to believe the promise that, "As thy days are so shalt thy strength be."—Exchange.

A young man, who had not been married long, remarked at the dinner table the other day:

My dear, I wish you could make bread such a mother used to make.

The bride smiled and answered in a voice that did not tremble:

Well, dear, I wish you could make the dough that father used to make.

Virtue is not left to stand alone. He who practices it will have neighbors.

June for Flies and Mosquitoes.

June is the beginning of fly-time and of the mosquitoes' song The flies seem to come from everywhere and go everywhere. They fall into the boiling-pot; they crawl over the butter; they make their toilet on the vegetable dish; they take their bath in the milk; they rest on the edge of the drinking-cup; they are the worst nuisance of the entire summer season. Worst of all, they carry the germs of many diseases, and play a great part in the spread of typhoid fever.

The only good fly is a dead fly; the best fly is the fly that never was born. No man can absolutely prevent the breeding of flies, but every man who will take the trouble can greatly reduce their breeding. Animal and vegetable refuse is the nest of the fly. Bury this, cart it away, burn it or otherwise keep it from the fly and you will greatly reduce the nuisance and danger of flies.

To keep flies from the house, screen the windows and doors and kill the flies that find entrance. If you do not want to buy fly-paper, make it yourself by boiling two pounds of resin in one pint of castor oil until dissolved; spread this on heavy paper and use as needed.

Mosquitoes, unlike flies, breed only in stagnant water, but they are as great a nuisance as flies in some localities and, in addition, spread malaria. If you keep water from standing around the premises and if you drain or fill pools of stagnant water, you will have very little trouble with mosquitoes. — Virginia Health Bulletin.

Whole-Hearted Farming.

God gave to every man a body, a mind, and a soul. He left it to us to become dextrous with the implements he placed in our hands.

They are the talents given us. It was intended that we should use—not hide—them.

Some of us put our body into our work, and leave out our mind and soul.

Often we are prone to reserve our mind for our social gatherings, and our soul is only unwrapped on Sundays when we go to meetings.

Why not put body, mind and soul into our work? Intelligent farming demands of us both mind and body, making all of our work count.

Our mental and moral conscience should hurt us when we deprive our land of the necessary plant foods that it requires, through the false idea of economy.

When we fail to put back into the soul the elements our crops take out, our mind has slipped a cog and our morals are on a vacation.

It we don't take into consideration the value of crop rotation and the growing of legumes, we may be working hard with the body, but the talent of intelligence is not being used.

By the constant exercise of all of our faculties, by putting mind, body and soul into our work, we acquire the habits of right thinking, right working, right living.

Resolve to be a better farmer. Strive to accomplish the things that seem hard. Persistence will overcome resistance.

The record of Jerry Moore, who raised 228 2-3 bushels of corn to the acre, should make us stop and think if we are using all of our talents—if we are securing the utmost from our acreage.

The market of ability cannot be cornered. No one can ever acquire a monopoly on bodies, minds or souls.

What others have accomplished we can accomplish. Arriving comes from striving. Resolve to become a dextrous farmer.—Farm Life Bulletin.

Seventeen-Year Locusts.

The New York Times lately printed an article which bears on a matter of much interest to Virginia — the seventeen-year locusts, an unwelcome but none the less certain pest. Millions and millions of cicadae are declared by entomologists of the American Museum of National History to be lying in wait for a great carnival of devastation later in the season to take place throughout New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania with "special centers of disaster" in Staten Island and New Jersey.

In order that the people may understand what sort of devastators the cicadae are, the entomologists explain that they are the old familiar pests known as seventeen year locusts. Proof that there are millions of them getting ready for their work for the summer is to be had in the fact that their larvae have been found all the way from Nyack to the battery in New York City.

The grub should be emerging into full-fledged foliage destroyers about June 15, in the New York neighborhood, while in Virginia, where these pests do great damage, they may be expected a week or two sooner, according to the weather.

According to the entomologists who have warned the horticulturists and the gardening communities to beware the cicadae, there will be more of them near Plainfield, New Jersey, than in any other point in the Eastern section. — Times Dispatch.

Flower Superstitions.

Here is a schedule of superstitions about finding the first flower of the season:

If found on Monday, good luck all the year.

If found on Tuesday, large undertakings will be successful.

If found on Wednesday, a wedding in the family.

If found on Thursday, hard work with little profit.

If found on Friday, unexpected wealth.

If found on Saturday, misfortunes.

If found on Sunday, best luck of all.

To plant a flower hedge is to bring good luck.

If a person wears flowers with the stems upward it is a sign that he or she is in love, but does not know it.

If someone gives you a yellow flower you are going to have money.

If anyone asks you for flowers pinned on your dress and you refuse, you will have immediate ill luck.—Exchange.

Elkins Left $4,055,209.04.

Elkins, W. Va., May 23.—The report of the appraisers of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins' will, entered on file at the Randolph County Clerk's office places the total value of his estate at $4,055,209 04, which is divided as follows:

Money in bank at time of death, $117,357.64. Stock value in 54 corporations appraised at $2, 932,298 90.. He had a bond appraisement in nine corporations of $733,900. He had $12,370 in miscellaneously invested. Bills receivable $48,035. Home property appraised at $64,100. Real estate, including timber lands appraised at $117,147 50.

A little child died in Pulaski last week, from drinking kerosine oil which was left in its reach. Three physicians were called, and did all they could, but to no avail.

"I Know a Thing or Two."

"My dear boy," said a father to his only son, "you are in bad company. The boys with whom you associate indulge in bad habits. They drink, smoke, swear, play cards, and visit theaters. They are not safe company for you."

"You needn't be afraid of me, father," replied the boy laughingly. "I guess I know a thing or two. I know how far to go and when to stop."

The boy left his father's house twirling his cane on his fingers and laughing at the "old man's notions."

A few years later and that boy, grown to manhood, stood before the bar of a court, before a jury which had just brought in a verdict of guilty against some crime in which he had been concerned. Just before he was sentenced he addressed the court, and said among other things: "My downward course began in disobedience to my parents. I thought I knew as much as my father did, and I spurned his advice; but as soon as I turned my back on my home, temptations came upon me like a drove of hyenas, and hurled me into my ruin."

Mark that confession, you boys who are beginning to be wiser than your parents' Mark it, and learn that disobedience is the first step on the road to ruin. Don't take it.—Exchange.

A Normal Apple Crop in Piedmont.

Lynchburg, Va., May 20.—Indications from the Piedmont apple belts, as shown by reports gathered by some of the most substantial apple growers of this section, show that the prospects for an apple crop this year are good and that the crop will be about normal, if not somewhat above normal.

Orchards which bore heavily last season will have small crops this year, but those which did not bear last year promise a big crop this season. These investigations show that there will be an especially large crop.

The peach crop does not promise more than twenty-five per cent of a normal crop.

To Lives Long and Happily.

A bridegroom of 80 years recently gave the New York World the following rules for longevity:

Eevery man should take long sleep every twenty-four hours.

Keep abreast of the times and with what is going on in the world.

No dissipation of and kind should ever be indulged in by any man.

Associate with young people as much as possible and be interested in their interests.

Keeping His Word.

"He has kept his word. Whenever he goes to sleep he puts his wallet and his check book under his pillow.—Washington Star.

Richmond has passed an ordinance prohibiting theatres within 150 feet of a church. Worst of all, they carry the germs of many diseases, and play a great part in the spread of typhoid fever.

The only good fly is a dead fly; the best fly is the fly that never was born. No man can absolutely prevent the breeding of flies, but every man who will take the trouble can greatly reduce their breeding. Animal and vegetable refuse is the nest of the fly. Bury this, cart it away, burn it or otherwise keep it from the fly and you will greatly reduce the nuisance and danger of flies.

To keep flies from the house, screen the windows and doors and kill the flies that find entrance. If you do not want to buy fly-paper, make it yourself by boiling two pounds of resin in one pint of castor oil until dissolved; spread this on heavy paper and use as needed.

Mosquitoes, unlike flies, breed only in stagnant water, but they are as great a nuisance as flies in some localities and, in addition, spread malaria. If you keep water from standing around the premises and if you drain or fill pools of stagnant water, you will have very little trouble with mosquitoes. — Virginia Health Bulletin.

Whole-Hearted Farming.

God gave to every man a body, a mind, and a soul. He left it to us to become dextrous with the implements he placed in our hands.

They are the talents given us. It was intended that we should use—not hide—them.

Some of us put our body into our work, and leave out our mind and soul.

Often we are prone to reserve our mind for our social gatherings, and our soul is only unwrapped on Sundays when we go to meetings.

Why not put body, mind and soul into our work? Intelligent farming demands of us both mind and body, making all of our work count.

Our mental and moral conscience should hurt us when we deprive our land of the necessary plant foods that it requires, through the false idea of economy.

When we fail to put back into the soul the elements our crops take out, our mind has slipped a cog and our morals are on a vacation.

If we don't take into consideration the value of crop rotation and the growing of legumes, we may be working hard with the body, but the talent of intelligence is not being used.

By the constant exercise of all of our faculties, by putting mind, body and soul into our work, we acquire the habits of right thinking, right working, right living.

Resolve to be a better farmer. Strive to accomplish the things that seem hard. Persistence will overcome resistance.

The record of Jerry Moore, who raised 228 2-3 bushels of corn to the acre, should make us stop and think if we are using all of our talents—if we are securing the utmost from our acreage.

The market of ability cannot be cornered. No one can ever acquire a monopoly on bodies, minds or souls.

What others have accomplished we can accomplish. Arriving comes from striving. Resolve to become a dextrous farmer.—Farm Life Bulletin.

Seventeen-Year Locusts.

The New York Times lately printed an article which bears on a matter of much interest to Virginia — the seventeen-year locusts, an unwelcome but none the less certain pest. Millions and millions of cicadae are declared by entomologists of the American Museum of National History to be lying in wait for a great carnival of devastation later in the season to take place throughout New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania with "special centers of disaster" in Staten Island and New Jersey.

In order that the people may understand what sort of devastators the cicadae are, the entomologists explain that they are the old familiar pests known as seventeen year locusts. Proof that there are millions of them getting ready for their work for the summer is to be had in the fact that their larvae have been found all the way from Nyack to the battery in New York City.

The grub should be emerging into full-fledged foliage destroyers about June 15, in the New York neighborhood, while in Virginia, where these pests do great damage, they may be expected a week or two sooner, according to the weather.

According to the entomologists who have warned the horticulturists and the gardening communities to beware the cicadae, there will be more of them near Plainfield, New Jersey, than in any other point in the Eastern section. — Times Dispatch.

Flower Superstitions.

Here is a schedule of superstitions about finding the first flower of the season:

If found on Monday, good luck all the year.

If found on Tuesday, large undertakings will be successful.

If found on Wednesday, a wedding in the family.

If found on Thursday, hard work with little profit.

If found on Friday, unexpected wealth.

If found on Saturday, misfortunes.

If found on Sunday, best luck of all.

To plant a flower hedge is to bring good luck.

If a person wears flowers with the stems upward it is a sign that he or she is in love, but does not know it.

If someone gives you a yellow flower you are going to have money.

If anyone asks you for flowers pinned on your dress and you refuse, you will have immediate ill luck.—Exchange.

Elkins Left $4,055,209.04.

Elkins, W. Va., May 23.—The report of the appraisers of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins' will, entered on file at the Randolph County Clerk's office places the total value of his estate at $4,055,209 04, which is divided as follows:

Money in bank at time of death, $117,357.64. Stock value in 54 corporations appraised at $2, 932,298 90.. He had a bond appraisement in nine corporations of $733,900. He had $12,-370 in miscellaneously invested. Bills receivable $48,035. Home property appraised at $64,100. Real estate, including timber lands appraised at $117,147 50.

A little child died in Pulaski last week, from drinking kerosine oil which was left in its reach. Three physicians were called, and did all they could, but to no avail.

"I Know a Thing or Two."

"My dear boy," said a father to his only son, "you are in bad company. The boys with whom you associate indulge in bad habits. They drink, smoke, swear, play cards, and visit theaters. They are not safe company for you."

"You needn't be afraid of me, father," replied the boy laughingly. "I guess I know a thing or two. I know how far to go and when to stop."

The boy left his father's house twirling his cane on his fingers and laughing at the "old man's notions."

A few years later and that boy, grown to manhood, stood before the bar of a court, before a jury which had just brought in a verdict of guilty against some crime in which he had been concerned. Just before he was sentenced he addressed the court, and said among other things: "My downward course began in disobedience to my parents. I thought I knew as much as my father did, and I spurned his advice; but as soon as I turned my back on my home, temptations came upon me like a drove of hyenas, and hurled me into my ruin."

Mark that confession, you boys who are beginning to be wiser than your parents' Mark it, and learn that disobedience is the first step on the road to ruin. Don't take it.—Exchange.

A Normal Apple Crop in Piedmont.

Lynchburg, Va., May 20.—Indications from the Piedmont apple belts, as shown by reports gathered by some of the most substantial apple growers of this section, show that the prospects for an apple crop this year are good and that the crop will be about normal, if not somewhat above normal.

Orchards which bore heavily last season will have small crops this year, but those which did not bear last year promise a big crop this season. These investigations show that there will be an especially large crop.

The peach crop does not promise more than twenty-five per cent of a normal crop.

To Lives Long and Happily.

A bridegroom of 80 years recently gave the New York World the following rules for longevity:

Eevery man should take long sleep every twenty-four hours.

Keep abreast of the times and with what is going on in the world.

No dissipation of and kind should ever be indulged in by any man.

Associate with young people as much as possible and be interested in their interests.

See their large handbills and advertisement in this issue for garticulars and prices.

Has this town a set of rules and ordinances? Did you ever see a copy of them? Did the sargeant ever see or read a copy? Does he know the full scope of his duties? The town should have the ordinances printed in a cheap form and copies distributed generally among the people. We do not know what's what. There might be a better and more faithful administration of the town affairs if this were done. As far as we know, we have never seen a copy of the town ordinance, nor do we believe there is any such document. Let us by all means have one.

At this writing the drouth is still on. Only one shower, of any consequence, in a month. The situation is serious. Young grass and oats are most beyond redemption now, and meadows are seriously damaged. There cannot be a half crop of hay now, even if rain comes at once, and should rain not come within a week or so, many meadows will not be cut at all. Pastures are, of course, dry, and cattle are not fattening. The fruit crop is reported as being damaged greatly by the drought, and gardens are failures so far. Corn planted before the drought is up and looks fine. The wheat crop is likely to be so short it will hardly be worth cutting. But let us all hope for the best, and that the crop will turn out better than is predicted.

W. B. Snidow, deputy treasurer of the county, who has been quite ill at his home at Pembroke for sometime past, went to a hospital at Roanoke on Tuesday of this week. We earnestly hope he may soon return from there greatly improved in health.

We hope our readers will bear with us this week on account of our small amount of reading matter. Had we known it sooner, we could have to a large extent, furnished more, but in the nick of time, we were compelled (for the money in it) to insert a large advertisement which takes up our entire second page. We hope our readers will not think hard of us this time, as it is very seldom we have such good luck as this. We will try and not do so any more, unless obliged to, or the love of money "scoops us in."

DEATH OF MRS. J. E. SAUNDERS

After a long and painful illness from a complication of diseases, Mrs. Virginia Pocahontas Saunders died at her home in Vinton on the 23d ult., aged 53 years.

She leaves a husband, one daughter, one adopted daughter, three brothers and one sister to mourn her loss.

She was a most estimable lady, a consistent member of the Missionary Baptist church; a loving wife and mother, and loved by all who knew her.

Her funeral took place in the Vinton Baptist church the 25th ult., with service by Rev. M. W. Royall. The remains were taken to Bedford county for interment, and were laid to rest by the side of her father, mother and little babe.

Mrs. Saunders was a mother of Mrs. M. W. Royall, whose husband is pastor of the Baptist church of this place. We tender to them our heartfelt sympathy in their sad bereavement.

EXAMINING BOARD IS DISCONTINUED.

Work of School Inspection to Be Directed by Educational Department.

By a unanimous vote the State Board of Education last week decided to discontinue the State Board of Examiners after September 1 of this year. It was felt that the work of examining teachers and of inspecting schools can be done more effectively and with half the cost by administration from the office of the Department of Public Instruction in this city, under the new plans worked out by the department's officials.

It was announced after the meeting that Examiners Oscar L. Shawmake, now of Petersburg, and E. E. Worrell, whose office is now in Roanoke, will be retained in the office of the department, to be employed there in the work of inspection. The two other examiners will no longer be connected with the State administration. Examiner A. B. Chandler, Jr., has already been elected a professor in the new Normal and Industrial School for Women at Fredericksburg, while Examiner C. G. Maphis, of Charlottesville, will devote his entire time to his work as secretary to the Virginia Educational Commission, under the Peabody fund. Mr. Maphis has for some time past been giving half of his time to the commission's work.

UNDER CENTRAL HEAD.

Under the plan which has existed for the past six years, the State Board of Examiners has had in charge the inspection of all schools and the examination of teachers. The office force of the Department of Public Instruction, which will be augmented by the employment there of Examiners Worrell and Shawmake, will handle the inspection, and any of the officials there will be sent out on definite lines of work at any time when it may seem necessary. They will have desk room at the department, which will, by the way, be forced to seek larger quarters at the Capitol, and will be constantly at work there.

Details of the task of examining teachers and awarding certificates yet remain to be worked out. A committee was appointed for this purpose, composed of Superintendent Eggleston, Secretary Stearnes and Dr. J. L. Jarman. This committee will report to a later meeting of the State Board. A plan will be devised by it to control the examinations from the offices of the department.

NO SEPARATE SUPERVISION.

In a few words, the action of the board means that instead of a separate body, which has been the target for criticism from many quarters ever since its formation, the entire administration will be handled by the department.

At the last session of the Legislature a resolution was passed by the House directing the Committee on Schools and Colleges to report on the State Board of Examiners. This resolution was offered by Judge Martin Williams. After several hearings the committee reported to the effect that the number of members of the board should be gradually reduced which has been for some time the plan of the department. Formerly there were five members.—Times Dispatch.

The above mentioned action of the State Board of Education will receive the applause of the people of Virginia, as it does away with what they consider at this time as useless offices. It will save the school fund about $14,000, annually. It is gratifying to us to know that it is a consummation of a fight that has been waged incessantly by our representative, Judge Martin Williams for the last four years.

Misses Nannie Lou, Polly, Nina Johnston and Lelia Spangler are visiting in Bluefield.

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.

Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.

The most perfect remedy ever devised for weak and delicate women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG,
SICK WOMEN WELL.

The many and varied symptoms of woman's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Ordinarily a $2.00 shoe is very ordinary. When the looks are gone the shoe is gone. The Southern Girl Shoe at $2.00 is an extraordinary value. It looks good as long as you wear it, and you will still be wearing it when your neighbor who may have bought some other shoe at the same time is obliged to buy new ones. A Good Example

"I am a good example," writes Mrs. R. L. Bell, of McAlester, Okla., "of what Cardui will do for suffering women.

"I suffered with my head and back, for over six years, and although I tried everything, I never could get anything to do me any good, until I began to take Cardui.

"Cardui has surely helped me and built me up and I am so thankful that I have found something that will do me good. I feel so much stronger and better than I have in a long time."

It is well to make up your mind before you are sick what medicine you will take when you are sick.

GLASS SONG OF THE GLASS OF NINETEEN ELEVEN PEARISBURG HIGH SCHOOL.

BY MISS CLARA SHUMATE.

Tune—"Yankee Doodle."

We are the jolly Senior class—
We number six plus seven,
We are the pride of P. H. S.—
The class of nineteen eleven.

CHORUS:

Thirteen Seniors, brave and true;
Don't you wish you were one too?
We're the class of nineteen eleven—
The best since sixty seven.

We've tried so hard to be real good,
As Seniors always should do;
And though sometimes we've fallen short
'Twas not because we chose to.

We all, have shared the school life joys—
What fun we've had together!
We've never gotten mad or cross
Tho' good or bad the weather.

Our splendid taste is plainly shown,
In these our chosen colors;
Maroon and gray stands for the class,
Which carries off the honors.

We've labored here for many months,
But now our toils are over
We hate to leave old P. H. S.
Because we dearly love her.

So here's a toast to P. H. S.
The scene of so much pleasure—
And mem'ries of the days spent here,
Forever, will we treasure.

GLASS PROPHEGY PEARISBURG HIGH SCHOOL GOMMENGEMENT.

The following "Class Prophecy," of the Senior Class was delivered by Miss Mary Shelton, daughter of our townsman, Mr. H. B. Shelton, at the Auditorium of the Pearisburg High School building, May 8, 1911:

It was an ideal Spring day. All nature seemed to have awakened from her long Winter's repose. The day was long and balmy. The pretty rolling fields of the valley were green again. Fleecy white clouds lazily wended across the skies casting their shadows upon the distant mountains. Such a day might betoken peace and repose, but not so with me. I could think of nothing but the prophecy, O that prophecy: and each day brought nearer our commencement. How was I to know what the future of my classmates of 1911 would be? I wandered out on the lawn alone, looking up to the clouds and hoping that they might give me some inspiration.

I was suddenly aroused from my reveries by the gay voices of some of my classmates on the way to the moving pictures and I could not resist their urgent invitation to join them. The moving pictures were good, but O that prophecy. Each picture that passed before my vision seemed to have some connection with the prophecy, but only to press the word more deeply upon my mind. I returned home worn less from the exertion of the body than from worry on account of my unaccomplished task.

As the twilight was gathering, I wearily cast myself upon a couch. Presently it seemed that the room was filled with some strange presence. I opened my eyes and though it seemed that I had lain there only a few minutes, the room had become dark. Suddenly I saw a strange light on the opposite side of the room like the light on a canvas just before the pictures are thrown on, and wonder of wonders, I saw writing on the wall, and these were the words: "Why art thou troubled? Ask what thou wilt." The one wish that rushed through my mind was to see the class of 1911, ten years hence, then quick as aflash, 1921 in large figures quivered upon the canvas. I waited in eager suspence, lest my classmates' future might be snatched from me, and all at once it grew dark. Far off I could hear the sound of music, it came nearer and nearer, and as it grew closer, the room became lighter, and I could see crowds of people; I could hear voices singing accompanied by a band. I soon discovered that it was the Salvation Army, which was drawing the crowd. One of the women who seemed to take a leading part in the singing attracted me. There was something strangely familiar about her appearance and in her voice. It was Mabel Snidow. I started to speak to her, but I was stunned motionless, and the army passed by.

Again, darkness reigned in the quiet room. Then my thoughts turned to one of the youngest, but by no means the smallest, of my classmates. As my thoughts ran thus, a light again flashed on the canvas, with a dispatch from New York World stating that the new minister to France, Honorable J. Wilmer Hedrick had arrived in Paris. Thinking that this would be all that I would hear or see of my former friend, I was surprised when the scene changed again into that of one of the most famous parks of Paris. I was admiring the beautiful surroundings, when down one of the driveways, a beautiful carriage approached. As the carriage rolled by I recognized my former classmate in earnest conversation with the President of France.

These unexpected glimpses of the strange changes which had taken place in the lives of my school absorbed my complete attention, and I awaited the next vision with deepest interest. Almost in the twinkling of an eye, there lay before me the calmest, most peaceful, and one of the most beautiful scenes I had ever beheld. A man was approaching in the distance, and I saw by his bearing, his style of dress, and by the general atmosphere and surroundings that he was a monk and that this was a convent. A strange calmness seemed to reign and take possession of my own spirits. Two sisters of charity gently coming down the steps of the veranda, and evidently starting upon errands of mercy next attracted my atten. tion. Surely there was something familiar about one of those sisters, she was very stout which necessitated her walking slowly. As they drew nearer, her face showed plainly that she had borne some great sorrow, yet with the sweet gentleness and a resigned will. Imagine the awe and wonder with which I was filled to recognize in this sister my former classmate, Bess Phlegar. I could not speak, I could not move. They left me, darkness came again, and still I was wondering what was the cause of this incredible change in Bess. Could it be that J. had broken her heart, weakened her spirits, and increased her love for humanity?

I was still wondering about Bess, when I seemed to be thrust right in the midst of a crowd, who were being entertained by the very liveliest of rag-time music and such acting as one usually sees at a ten cent vaudeville show. The room was now filled with laughter, now with loud applause. The noise and excitement of this scene, in contrast to the quiet and peacefulness of the previous one, filled my brain with confusion. I turned to see whether in this crowd I could find a friendly face. My eyes fell upon a rather dudish looking man standing, his hat on one side of his head, cigarette in one hand, and leisurely swinging a gold headed cane in the other. It was no other than Will McDonald, who was at that instant returning a smile of one of the actresses. An audible exclamation had scarcely passed my lips, when the scene changed gradually from the show, to the rush and noise of the streets of some city, and then to the quiet of the suburbs. There stood before me an unpretentious, but very pretty Presbyterian, church and manse. The pastor and his happy looking family seemed to be pleasantly engaged on the porch. When the wife arose to go into the house, I thought I recognized her. She returned presently with a waiter of fruit, and I knew at once that the slender but matronly and very minister's help-mate was Constance Osborne.

Constance in her happy home flitted by me, then all was dark. Suddenly, however, a brilliant scene blazed upon the canvas. There was a vast arena filled with cheering men, who were frantic with excitement. In the center upon a raised platform a fierce fight for supremacy was going on. As I watched the fight I could not help but notice the familiar gestures of the one of the participants, as he faced his black opponent. He would raise upon his toes and come down with a quick little gesture and shake his head exactly as I had seen one of my class mates do in his debates. At last I was able to get a full view of his face, and it was none other than Martin Williams.

In an instant the scene changed to the sky scraping buildings of New York. Everything seemed to be passing on before my vision until I was in the most dazzlingly beautiful and most brilliantly lighted place I had ever beheld. Gentlemen in evening dress and ladies in the most exquisite gowns added to the beauty of the scene. A great ball was in progress, I had never heard such music. As I listened, I seemed to be attracted by an approaching couple from whom I could not take my eyes. No surprise I had had equaled the one I had experienced when I recognized Clara Shumate leaning on the arm of Will Dennis. Clara looked charming, beautiful in her evening dress and Will,--- well no one would have taken him for Taffy, Sammy and his numerous titles of school days. Even then some of the lines of one of our class poems were recalled to my mind: "Will Dennis is not like other boys, the thoughts of girls bring him no joys, and his answer --I have my mind on higher things, which of course, was to be of the 400 of New York.

Though there was something very fascinating about the scene, I was glad to see things changing to the quiet country district. Now lay before me such country as can be seen only "'mid the green fields of Virginia." In the distance was a pretty little country home. From the smoke rising from the chimney and other evidences, I could see that the house had inmates. And certainly the owner was James Garfield Blaine Muncy, for even at that moment, he was coming over the top of a hill plowing a yoke of oxen. I could not help but utter, "O Time, what changes thou hast wrought!"

This view was gradually passed by and I found myself thinking of Janie Cunningham, wondering what was her occupation, but of course I could think of her as nothing else but a teacher. As I was studying about her I seemed to be standing before a large handsome building. "Yes it is true no doubt that this is some college of high standing in which Janie is instructor in Latin." The scene changed from the outside to the inside of the building. I thought things were arranged in a peculiar manner for a college. At the end of the hall I noticed over one of the doors, "wrecked nerves." Then I had a glimpse of Janie muttering something I could only distinguish, "Odi immortales" and again "etenim quid est Catalina." I turned aside filled with remorse, feeling convinced that we, her classmates, were the cause of this on account of the way we worried her, each one being eager to get Janie's translation of a certain passage in Cicero.

A kind of homesick feeling came over me, and suddenly there stood before me a perfect picture of an ideal home. Delighted and anxious to know whom I would see next, the scene changed to the inside of the house, everything was quite attractive, but I was frightened by a voice, which, though familiar, was much changed, and on account of the loud articulation, I feared that I had found an insane asylum this time. The furniture of the room was that of a private office. In one corner passing before a mirror, stood Mary McDonald making a loud speech, about all that I could make out of it, was a demand for woman's suffrage. I was indeed surprised to see my former classmate of so sweet, but so timid a nature, now practicing for a speech to be given in defense of woman's suffrage. As I was still looking on with a great deal of interest, I heard foot steps, and into the office, completely hidden by a large gingham apron, a man emerged long enough to say in a rather humble way as a vassal would do to his liege lord, "Mary I let the bread burn." Ah, Terrell: to think that you who used to delight large audiences with your eloquence in the old school days at P. H. S., should fall to the position of a hen pecked husband, and your wife a suffragette. My surprise was so great that I awoke with a start and found that I was still a P. H. S. of 1911 and that the long dreaded task of writing a prophecy would now be the work of a few minutes.

TARGET PRAGTIGE ABOARD THE VIRGINIA.

An extract from a letter by F. L. Bailey, U. S. S. Virginia, to his homefolks.

"Do you know that this has been a right interesting day today. I will you what I have been doing and let you see how a 'Gobbie' spends his Sundays.

"I was on the liberty list and a friend had asked me to go to church with him over in Medford town. You know that expression occurs in Longfellow's poem —'Over the River in Medford Town.' It is about seven miles from Boston.

"Just before I had checked out and gone to the officer of the deck together with a lot of other fellows, I saw a sight that would have made you laugh to the end of your life.

"A detective had just come aboard with a poor deserter and having pocketed his ten dollars reward, started off feeling very well satisfied with his morning's work. Now the crew in general hate a deserter, but they also have a decent humane sympathy for the poor fellow. So as Mr. Plainclothes man walked haughtily away, thinking, no doubt how he had laid one over on that silly sailor kid, there were some seamen up on the superstructure —about forty I would guess—having a Sunday morning sun bath. Also near at hand were some potato lockers filled with potatoes. Each son of Neptune gathered his hands full of potatoes best suited for heaving with greatest velocity and effectiveness. When the detective reached the nearest point, about fifty feet, they let him have a broad side 'salvo.' The air was fairly gray with whizzing, smashing 'spuds,' and believe me those sailors did justice to the American gunnery records. Few shots went wild; down went Mr. Detective; up he jumped and ran with all his might to a friendly shelter of a near by box car. Talk about a speed run, I will guarantee that that man broke all previous records. Once behind the car he dared not move, but began bawling for the officer of the deck to protect him. That official sent out a chief master at arms to escort him aboard. One likely 'spud' had found a fair mark in his left eye, which was nearly closed and as black as ace of spades. Another had centered him in the jaw, and had turned that part of his anatomy 'kinder toward Wysongs.' Nothing could induce him to leave the ship without an escort to shield him. So the chief master at arms again accompanied him out of the range of the deadly spuds. Then the officer of the deck delayed the liberty party, so that we would not make him the target of the handy cobble stones of the street when we got ashore.

"Now you take it from me that that particular detective will never take the trouble to round up any more deserters, especially if he has the slightest taint of an idea that they belonged to the good ship 'Virginia.'"

This young man is a son of Rev. H. E. Bailey of Eggleston this county, and is stationed at Boston, Mass.

LETTER FROM A GILES BOY.

FRIES, VA., May 29, 1911.

EDITOR VIRGINIAN:

These lonesome hot days make one sigh for old Giles; her rugged hills and shady dells: for the genial faces and hospitable homes, in short, for any news from the place of my childhood, and knowing that yours is headquarters for news, thought I'd write on for a crap of it. What is going on anyway? I have wandered away up here on the crystal span of New River, where the ivy and laurel lap their bows in the water, and shade the speckled beauties while they watch and wait to feast on a miller or a fly; where the wild flowers bloom in gorgeous beauty. Though not surpassing those on the crags and dells of Angels' Rest, Peters Mountain and many other hills of old Giles. How about the long-talked-of unharnessed power of old New River —on the muddy end? I don't hear anything more about it. Can't you find any one to make a harness? Here under the dam I dare say, you may find a thousand boys and girls that will undertake it. The Washington Mills Co. here employ all the boys and girls that come along and train them up for the business. They make 80,000 yards of cloth each day and keep many wheels buzzing, making other things and turn loose half the power they have harnessed.

I have nothing to do but gather wild flowers and lounge in the shade. But there is no place where the shade is more inviting nor where the bluegrass mats so mellow and green, as under the trees on the hills of old Giles. If they get any more bridges built in the county and have any Fourth of July to it, please let me know I want to be there.

Hoping not to tire your patience, nor make an unreasonable request, with best wishes for your prosperity and all happy, prosperous old Giles, shall await the arrival of the VIRGINIAN.

Your friend,
J. ARTHUR ADAIR.

Now that the primary is put off until August 1st, bring in your announcement and let's see who wants an office. We ought to have at least twenty in the next week or so Hurry up.

We were present yesterday morning at the opening sale of The Thomas Mercantile Co., Bluff City, and quite a large crowd was in waiting for the sale to begin. They have about twenty clerks, and all seemed to be very busy while we were there.

Rev. Thomas B. Sheldon will preach in the Presbyterian Church in this place Sunday at eleven o'clock; McClangherty's Chapel, 3 30 in the afternoon, and Narrows at night.

Those "spring chickens" we hinted at the other week come in very slow. Perhaps you are keeping them for your own tooth. Remember we have not lost our taste, we love good things as well as you do.

Rural Retreat is going to have a baby show on the 10th. Why not get up something of this kind here. We have quite a number of fine looking babies here, some of which would carry off a prize. What say ye!

That noisy thing, Charley French of Narrows, was in town Friday last. We do not see how they stand him down there. Suppose they have got used to such things and do not mind him any more. "With all thy faults we love thee still."

John Myers and family returned from Wytheville last Saturday where they went to be at the bedside of Mrs. Myers mother, who was seriously ill. We regret to state the old lady died one day last week. We deeply sympathize with them in their sadness.

Quoit pitching seems to be the order of the day here at present. Medicine doctots, horse doctors, doctors of the jaw, merchants, bums, etc., all take a hand in it. We hope it will not get infectious and drag the women into it.

In another column will be found the announcement of Mr. D. J. Chapman for Commonwealth's Attorney of this county, subject to the Democratic primary to be held August 1st. Mr. Chapman is too well known throughout the county to need any words from us. If elected, we are sure he will do his duty and make an efficient officer.

Cherries are getting ripe, and while they are very scarce, yet we hear of some persons who have quite a quantity. Please bring us enough to fill our 'craw' once, anyway, and if you do not care to donate them to the editor, we will buy them of you.

Read the announcement of Mr. W. B. Snidow for Commonwealth's Attorney in another column, subject to the Democratic primary to be held August 1, 1911. Mr. Snidow is well known to most of our citizens and will make a good officer, should he be so fortunate as to be elected.

Job work of every description done at this office. No matter how large or small a bill or poster you may want, we can do it. Get your work done at home, Patronize home industry. It seems strange to see people go away from home to have their printing done, when there is an office in their own town, yet this is done, for we have seen it.

Report has it that New River, which has been in a muddy state for many years, by the washing of iron ore in a creek which flows into it, is once more a clear stream and is to stay this way—only when she gets "on a bender." This is as it should be, and many "messes" of good old cat fish may now be caught where the muddiness prevented it.

Mrs. Emily Thompson of White Gate, is visiting her great grand son, W. Hambrick Walker of Bluff City. Master Walker is entertaining quite a delegation of grandmothers this week. He has for his guests his grandmother, Mrs. Geo. Walker, his step grandmother, Mrs. G. E. Hambrick, and his great grandmother, Mrs. Emily Thompson.

The forepart of last week we had a drouth upon us, but on Wednesday we had the finest rain we had had in eight weeks. On Sunday night last it commenced to rain and continued to do so almost all Monday. These rains were badly needed and will greatly enhance the value of the oats, wheat, grass and corn crops, to say nothing of vegetation. The electrical display on both these occasions were simply beautiful.

We noticed on our streets last Friday afternoon quite a goodly number of young ladies—and good looking ones too—in our opinion. We are at a loss to know the occasion for so many. They were dressed in many styles, the "hobble" being in the bunch. We are glad the "harem skirt" was not to be seen, and that our young ladies think enough of themselves to discard this ridiculous garment. The "hobble" is bad enough.

The following young ladies of this place and vicinity, who have been attending colleges in different parts of the State, have returned home: Miss Minnie Pearson, Randolph Macon Institute, Danville; Miss Lucille Lucas, State Female Normal School, Farmville; Miss Marjorie Shumate and Miss Mattie Johnston, Virginia Institute, Bristol; Misses Nancy and Ellen St. Clair, Martha Washington College, Abingdon.

On last Monday morning we had quite a heavy downpour of rain accompanied with terrific thunder and lightning, the latter doing much damage in the county. Mr. T. B. King of Poplar Hill, had a new barn burned to the ground. W. O. Carper and George Wilburn of Sugar Run, both had window curtains to take fire, but being close by were put out before much damage was done. There may have been others and probably were, but we have not been informed of them. This was the worst electrical storm we have had in many years, great damage being done to many 'phone lines.

On last Sunday morning, we, im company with Mr. W. R. Powell, Dr. Frank Miller and Mr. A. E. Dinsmore, started out for a joy ride in an automobile, and a joyous ride it was. Mr. Dinsmore was our man at the wheel, and handled the machine very artistically and to the point. We went as far as Mr. E. W. Hale's when we stopped and took him with us to the end of our route which ended at Pembroke, and on return landed him safely at home. Then we concluded we had gone far enough and had better return home. The crops along the route looked fine and the farms showed they were handled with skill and care. This was our first ride in an automobile and we enjoyed our company and the ride very much.

DIED.

On the 27th of May at Sweet Springs, Monroe County, W. Va., Mrs. Nancy Adair, wife of the late Robert Adair of Red Sulpher Springs, W. Va. She was a daughter of John Wingo and sister of Dr. C. C. Wingo, who survives her. She was about 80 years of age. There will be a more extended notice of her death later on.

SPECIAL SERVICES.

Sheffey Memorial Church, Staffordsville, to be Location for Exercises of an Interesting Nature.

On Sunday, July 2nd, next, Rev. J. Tyler Frazier, perhaps the best known and loved minister of the Holston Conference, will re visit his native county of Giles and preach a special sermon at Sheffey Memorial Church at Staffordsville. Special preparations are being made by Rev. Mr. Miles and the officials of that charge looking to making the day one of great interest and spiritual profit.

It is understood that the services will in a sense be of a memorial character in memory of the beloved preacher for whom the church was named, Rev. Robert S. Sheffey. It would be difficult to find one better equipped for the service than Rev. Mr. Frazier, and his friends throughout the county will hail with delight the prospect of hearing him again.

It is understood that Mr. Edward F. Sheffey of Lynchburg, a native of Giles, will be present on the occasion and deliver a brief Sunday School talk.

It is proposed to make the service an all-day one, with basket dinner on the ground, and friends are requested to heartily participate in this feature, bringing baskets with them.

Wedding Reception at Bluefield.

A lovely wedding reception took place on the 2nd of June at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. N. Sands of Bluefield, brother of the bride. Mr. G. H. Gills and Miss Della Sands were married at Bluff City, Va., June 1st at the residence of Mr. George E. Fletcher; Rev. J. L. Prater officiated.

Mr. Gills is well known in Bluefield, and has a host of friends. The bride is from White Gate, and she also has many friends, who wish them all the happiness life can afford.

The dining room was beautifully decorated with many colors of lovely roses. The refreshments consisted of ice cream, cake, bananas and oranges.

Prof. T. H. Christie, Messrs Gillispie and Mattox furnished music on the piano and violins. Those present were: Misses Mamie Jackson, Edith Francis, Sheffey Sands, Grace, Julia, Ruby, Lillian and Mildred Hager, Myrtle Terry and Rosa Francis; Messrs. Ward and L. E. Sands, Wm., J. H. and Clarence Hager, R. L. and Greely Abshire and Thomas Gillpin; Mesdames J. H. Hager, R. F. Abshire, L. E. Sands, Roscoe Peterman, A. L. Ratcliff, Eliza Martin, Cynthia Louelance and Killip.

The young couple received many handsome presents. Those present returned home remembering a joyful evening.

CHAPEL.

The crops here look fine since the rain.

There seems to be quite a lot of hogs, sheep, cows and horses for sale hereabouts, but buyers are scarce.

W. A. Johnston went to Oakvale Sat'y, May 27; next heard from he was in Bluefield, then all trace of him was lost. At this writing we do not whether he has arrived home or not. When in love one is liable to wander considerable.

We bet there are more saw mills on this creek than all the other creeks in the county combined.

Lightning rod agents infest our community. Very few, if any, of our people, seem to purchase, thinking they are of no particular value.

It is said by some who have seen them, that W. A. J. and Miss M. W. have been seen sitting on the spring box for two or three hours at a time. And they were not talking of butter or buttermilk either, but things of a more loveable nature. From the way things are going on it is safe to presume, that wedding bells will soon ring. Eben.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen!

Disappeared from J. W. Porterfield's place, one short horned roane heifer, fresh or about to be fresh. Any information as to her whereabouts, will be gladly received and rewarded.

How to Keep the Boys On the Farm.

(From the Richmond Dispatch)

[An address delivered at various agricultural high schools of the State.]

President Virginia Polytechnic Institute:

Almost every American who makes a fortune in any form of business spends his first surplus income in buying a farm. If he came originally from the country he may stop with building on his farm a modern country home and the proper outbuildings, but if our rich man is a generation or two removed from the soil he may be expected to do much more. Under these conditions he will probably build a larger, if not a better, house, and then barns galore. He will then next install a menagerie of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, dogs and fowls, possibly several kinds of each, regardless of expense and difficulty of keep, and proudly call the whole a "stock farm." This farm mania is so certain to happen that the real estate men now keep tab on the reports of financial success and eave time by meeting the financier half way. It is a fever that is in the very blood, and it will out—an instinctive desire to live in the open, to own land and direct its culture and breed animals. But you have all seen these cases yourselves, and if you have followed the sequence and order of events you will recall that in each case the prospective farmer always built first a dwelling place—a home. If a man of cultural training, our new farmer if less apt to build afresh, but will rather ransack the earth for some old country place with grass, trees and shrubbery already grown. When this is bought he does the same thing as the man who builds at first hand—he makes the old house a living place equal to the demands of the day—with more windows and light, hot and cold water, bathrooms, a sewerage system and some modern system of lighting, etc.

Why does the city man thus come to the country? Because in that close city office where, year after year, he labored to become rich, he dreamt dreams and saw visions, and they always took one form—green fields and shady woods and birds and flowers, and when he becomes free and able he goes to the scene of his visions. That's all there is in it; it is not strange—it is a natural drift. The menagerie man is simply the intense type—he merely shows an exuberance of feeling in wanting it all and at once.

Incentive to Better Life.

Those may laugh at him who will, but he who builds a home that is an incentive to a better life, to better health and cleaner living is no fit subject for laughter. It is not, as is sometimes thought, the challenge of successful and dominant industries to those less prosperous, but nine times out of ten it is a sincere attempt at the proper thing; at an ideal—a home—and for that reason it carries a message and a sermon to every old time farmer who laughs. There are some misfits, of course. The city man may go too fast; he may spend too much money; but he has lived the life—he has gotten close to his ideal.

Unfortunately, against this picture, we must sometimes place another. We often see the farmer who has made a fortune by earnest effort going straight to town, leaving the farm. Why? Because as day after day he toiled in the field and fretted there arose before him also visions. This time they came as a comfortable home in some neighboring town; with furnace heat, hot and cold water, bath tubs and all the conveniences of life, and last, but not least, abundant company. In fancy 'twas to him also an earthly paradise.

If you have followed many of these cases here you have also seen some misfits. Fortune may have waited too long, and the old farmer does not quite fit into the new life. I know of no sight more sad than that of a rich old country couple living in a large town house, aloof and alone, as remote from the life around them as prisoners in a dungeon awaiting the end. But we have all seen it.

These divergent ideals are matters of fact; they exist all over the land, and they move men to and fro as a shuttle in the loom, but they can never weave a strong fabric of rural life for us, because these two classes are essentially at odds—at cross purposes. What would happen if two of these men, the one going and the other coming, each a good representative of his class, could be made to stop and confer together as to their real motives in moving? I have never been able to bring this about, but I believe that by analyzing the lives and the desires and emotions of those two classes we can arrive at a solution of the most important of all social problems—what will keep the family and the boy on the farm!

The problem is further complicated by the fact that it is not alone the rich farmer who leaves the farm. Let the average single crop farmer get even a little "ahead" and he at once makes for town, rents out the farm, and joins the great army of "absentlandlords," who already constitute the most serious menace to country life in the South. There must be something really wrong with the details of our present farm life when the mere hope of financial success will tempt the farmer to renounce it—for it is a renunciation:

Boys Leaving Farm.

Further, we must note that the farm is losing not only at the top, but at the bottom. Boys are leaving as well as men, and this is the real problem. The city wants the boy and it calls him. The farmer's task is to prevent the steady loss in rural economy represented by the going of the boy; born, bred and educated at the expense of the farm. The "journeyman artisan," who takes away from it a knowledge of its practical details such as no other can ever gain except at great sacrifice.

The lowest estimate which any political economist could put upon a young man twenty-one years of age, with a fair education, would be $5,000. This is what he has cost, and he can earn the interest on this sum, and railroad suits for loss of life fully confirm this estimate. Now the number of boys leaving the farm each year in Virginia is variously estimated at from five to six thousand, and at $5,000 each this makes an enormous total of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year. Of course, it may be said that such a boy in the city becomes a consumer instead of a producer, so we will cut the loss to the farm in half, and still it gives a yearly loss to agriculture in Virginia of $12,000,000 to $15,000,000. No really organized industry would tolerate such a condition for a moment and its mere existence shows the chaotic state of American agriculture.

Many causes are given by writers as conspiring to drive the boy to town; among them are usually mentioned:

First. The long hours and the monotony of farm life as at present maintained.

Second. The narrow and unvarying dietary unfortunately so common amongst farmers and particularly those of the one-crop system.

Third. The primitive arrangement of the usual farm plant, giving the unspeakable barnyard, hogpens, etc., in immediate proximity to the dwelling house.

These are the objections to the farm usually presented by critics, but these are not the things that influence the boy. Except the first, they are easily remedied, and here much more can be done than the average farmer thinks.

Shorter Hours of Labor.

A few years ago at a big farmers' meeting in Virginia, the president of one of the great railroads of the South addressed the farmers assembled, and he took as the basis of his talk the unnecessary hours of labor spent by the farmer in his fields. While he did not exactly advocate the eight hour day for the farm, he came very near it. I was much impressed by his unusual attitude, and for several years I have carefully noted the results of one or two farmers who have more or less followed this advice. They have succeeded about as well as their neighbors, who worked from light to light, and they have had what the others did not have—some social life; some home life. There is no reason why any farmer, not overcropped, should not do likewise if he will provide the proper motive power and the so-called "labor saving" machinery. This machinery should really be called "time saving" machinery; for this is what it does. Better teams and wider furrows save time on the same labor, but time gained if not properly used will not keep the boy.

In my life's work I have met thousands of young men, students, at their entrance into college, and I suppose that one-half of the students that I have known have been the sons of men who owned more or less land, and yet not one in a hundred were looking to the study of agriculture as a life calling. Quite often when you voluntarily approach this subject with such boys you are met with scorn. They cry out, "Farming! Don't talk to me about farming; I know it from the ground up, and it's the last calling that I would adopt." Now when this comes from farmers' sons, whose is the fault that the boy leaves the farm? The fault is that of the farmer himself, the man who fully able to have them seems to ignore and even scorn the beauties and refinements and comforts of rural life. It is the man who voluntarily lives poor, and makes his family live poor, in order that he may die rich, that drives the boy from the farm. The boy sees that no matter how well off they may be, farmers rarely seek the social and intellectual privileges which their city brothers, of equal wealth and opportunity, demand and enjoy. He comes to believe that social carelessness is inherent to the craft, and he also seems to fear that the malady is "catching." So long as this impression prevails you can never hold him. Our Southern farm life must be changed or he will continue to go.

Satisfaction on Farm.

On the other side, the farmer has many things in his favor to aid him in keeping the boy. In its worst estate the farm gives a natural satisfaction—a sense of independence and a mental and physical vigor that appeals to all men. Moreover, the farmer is about the only man who can always leave to his son the direct results of his life's labor. Neither the doctor nor the lawyer can rely with any certainty upon turning over a professional practice to his son.

The minister cannot insure the continuation of either character or talent; the manufacturer has no guarantee that his patrons will adhere to the firm in the second generation, but the farmer who leaves his son a home and farm in good condition has an absolute assurance that his son will receive the full results of his labor.

Now, while I am here to talk to all kinds of farmers, my mission is to the young men—the young men thinking of starting life on the farm in Virginia—and my endeavor will be to show them how they can live a farmer's life so their sons will be able and proud to take up their calling.

The great question of the day is: If given a fair return for his produce, so that the farm really pays, can one maintain on the farm in the South a life equal in intellectual and social privilege to that of his brother on an equal income in the city? If this question cannot be answered in the affirmative you may as well quit, for you will never keep any one on the farm that has a chance to get away. But we can now say that I believe this can be done now—an ideal life can be maintained on the farm in most parts of the South.

Knowing that there were parts of the South in which the rural life was almost ideal, from an intellectual and social standpoint, I have made it my business to study on the ground the local peculiarities that have made for this state of affairs.

I have visited certain counties in Maryland, a score in Virginia, counties in both Middle and Eastern North Carolina, and various other parts of the South, with this question in mind. In this way I have learned of a number of communities in the South where today the social and intellectual opportunities will compare quite favorably with almost any city circles to be found. An analysis of the life of these rural communities shows that in all cases they have been strongly influenced by English rural ideals. The English country home and English country life have been clearly in mind, even when the exponents of these ideals knew nothing of their source, and in all these communities English settlers would find themselves perfectly at home.

Old English rural custom and economy demanded that—

First. The farmhouse should be located, constructed and fitted as a home, and not merely as a shelter from which to go out to work.

Second. The farm must always be a place of varied enterprise, yielding a revenue at all seasons of the year and minimizing a failure from drought, etc.

Third. As large a part of the farm as possible should be planted in the things that require as little seasonal attention as possible; as orchards, grass, winter forage, grazing land, etc., giving fruit, milk and live stock as the money crops.

The old English "squire," moreover, believed that farm life, in its highest and best form, could not exist without the bucolic spirit, without a love for and a pride in the development of the animal husbandry side of a well-rounded farm. He believed, also that the patriarchal spirit was an essential to a proper rural life, and that this sentiment could never be built up on a purely agronomic, calling, but was developed only from an agriculture that embraced animal husbandry in one form or another.

Animal Breeding Is High Art.

To the average man amongst us, English country life seems inordinately "horsey," and an undue amount of their talk seems to be devoted to stock. It looks as if the English had almost made a fetish of the horse and other animal life of the farm, but if you look at it from their viewpoint and concede that such forms of farming are not solely for pecuniary ends, but act as a means of grace as well, we can better understand their position. They really believe that animal breeding is the highest of men.

In this they are about right, for it is but natural that the supervision, care and consequent love of domestic animals, especially in youth, should produce in a man elements of character difficult to produce without this influence. The very dependence of animals on him gives him a broader sympathy with life, a truer spirit of service and a consecration to something beyond self. The records, moreover, seem to bear this out, for a pastoral life has been responsible for a large proportion of the characters in history that have been loved and chosen as leaders of men. Note that almost every man called as a leader in Israel has been a "tender of flocks," and that the great men of almost all races have been largely country bred. We must particularly note that from the world-conquering island of England have come, not only conquering men, but almost every type of domestic animal which we know to-day.

Among the horses recall the Thoroughbred, Hackney, Clyde, Shire, Punch and Shetland; among the cattle the Ayrshire, Doven, Durham, Angus, Hereford, Jersey, Guernsey, Suffolk, etc.; among the sheep the Southdown and other Downs, Dorsets, Cotswolds, Lincoln, Cheviot, etc., and the hogs—Berkshires, Yorkshires, Hampshires, Tamworth, etc.—all English. From the hand-made turf of tugh little Holland have come the various Dutch breeds of cattle, and the Flanders horses (Belgians and northern Percherons), and besides these and the English breeds, there are practically no others. Was this mere coincidence or cause and effect? Again in the heroic age of America, our post-colonial period, it was from the farms that bred horses, cattle, hogs and sheep—and fox hounds—that we get our Washingtons, Jeffersons, Madisons, Monroes, Henrys, etc. Farming was then a successful calling, not only in producing animals, but also in producing men. Have you seen Mount Vernon, or Monticello, or Arlington, or The Hermitage, or any of our old ancestral or post-colonial homes? The wide outlook, the broad acres, signs of animal life everywhere and stables close at hand, give the true farm atmosphere.

These houses and their builders were the result of old English ideals. No other suit us, so character evolved on the continent really appeals to a Southern heart. We cannot assign the cause, except they were "raised" differently.

The more talking a man does the less attention he attracts. If this be true, and no doubt it is, there are quite a few in this town who attract very little attention. We know of a number of "wind bags" who gather at stores on different occasions and see who can tell the "biggest" —— truth (?). We prefer not to give names, but we know you.

We omitted, or rather overlooked, mentioning last week the departure of Mr. William Carter for the green fields of Maybrook. We were sorry, indeed, to have to give the Captain up, but what is our loss is Maybrook's gain. We hope he will cast his eyes upon and feel something nibbling at his heart over there that will be compatible with him. We did not say one word about the fair sex, did we?

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I wish to say to the public and those who called while I was ill, that I am able to attend to my office again and glad to see all who may need my professional services.

Dr. James T. Parker.

The Inter-High School contest of ten counties of Southwest Virginia will be held at Rural Retreat, today and tomorrow, June 15th and 16th. Miss Lula Shrader of Rocky Gap, a student of our High School, Miss Annie Laurie Stafford, Mr. Charles Cooper, Mr. Frank Johnston and Prof. J. T. Wassom left here today to be present.

Rev. M. W. Royall leaves this week for Philadelphia, to attend the meeting of the Baptist World's Alliance. This is one of the greatest meetings in the world. It meets every four years. It met the last time in London. Mr. Royall is one of the delegates from this State, and will give a report of this meeting on his return.

Our Baptist brethren have made quite an alteration to the entrance of their edifice, and a good one too. The steps that used to be in front have been changed to the side—with a door on each side in the front—and nice concrete steps to reach each entrance. This is a great improvement, as the old steps were quite steep, and hard for an old person to climb.

We have a nice line of candies. Fruits of all kinds and at all times, at T. J. Pearson's.

We acknowledge the invitation to attend The Faculty and Class of 1911 of the Detroit (Michigan) College of Law at their Annual Commencement, Thursday evening, June 15th at eight o'clock at the Garrick Theatre of that city. This invitation was sent us through the courtesy of Mr. Ottie Robertson of this county, who is a student there. We thank him for his remembrance of us, but sorry we cannot attend.

The Episcopal church commenced here early last Fall is nearing completion, and when finished Pearisburg will have six churches, which speaks well for the town. Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopal; one Methodist and one Baptist, colored, all very nice and tasty edifices. There are nearly double the number here now that were here thirty-five years ago, yet the churches do not have the attendance now they had then. Can you explain why this is?

On last Sunday morning, between six and seven o'clock, our little village was a scene of excitement over the escape of two prisoners Marshall Comer, white, Walter Gosett, colored, out of the county jail. It seems, in some way, they sawed the bolt of the Yale lock which kept them in, and got into the corridor, and when jailer Franklin went to take them their breakfast, or see to them otherways, they overpowered him and made their escape to the street, where they were soon captured and put back in "limbo" again.

SNIDOW-BARRIER.

Married at the home of the bride's sister in Mount Pleasant, N. C., on the 24th day of May, 1911, Mr. Albert W. Snidow of Pembroke, Va, to Miss Kate Barrier of Mont Amoena Seminary, N. C., Rev. J. P. Miller of the Lutheran Church officiating.

Mr. Snidow is a popular and well known farmer of Pembroke; his many friends congratulate him upon his happy choice, though they had almost despaired of ever having an opportunity of this pleasure.

The bride is a graduate and post-graduate of Mont Amoena Seminary. Afterwards she was a teacher of French and higher mathematics, and later was elected lady principal of that institution, which position she held at the time of her marriage.

The friends of Mr. Snidow are much pleased with his wife and extend her a hearty welcome in their midst.

DEATH OF MRS. SARAH I. SHUMATE.

Mrs. Sarah I. Shumate died at her old home place, at Rich Creek, this county, on Friday, June 2, 1911, after an illness of several weeks. She was 84 years of age. She was the widow of Mr. Hardin Shumate who died at this place during the Civil War. Five children survive her, Geo. W. Shumate, Mrs. Mary A. Adair, Mrs. Fannie B. Johnston, Miss Ella C. Shumate, and Mrs. Lula Guinn.

Mrs. Shumate was a member of the Christian Baptist church and one of the best of women, rejoicing in the love and esteem of all who knew her. She will be sadly missed in her community.

Her remains were laid to rest in the new family burying ground, on the 3rd inst., in the presence of an immense crowd of relatives and friends. Revs. J. B. Chambers and J. W. Watkins conducted the funeral services.

Thus, another good woman has gone to meet her reward, which is promised to the faithful —a crown of glory, and to be forever with the Lord.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience —a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

LETTER FROM CHINA, MAINE.

The letter published below, written to Mr. W. H. Snidow, deputy treasurer, by Mr. Theron E. Doe of China, Maine, giving an account of the recent loss of his valuable property by fire, will be read with sincere regret by those of our readers to whom Mr. Doe is well and favorably known. Mr. Doe was the owner of a large tract of valuable timber and iron lands on the waters of Big and Little Stony Creek, a portion of which he sold some years since to the Ohio Land & Lumber Company:

CHINA, JUNE 4, 1911.

MR. W. H. SNIDOW,
Pembroke, Va.

MY DEAR MR. SNIDOW:

Doubtless you think very strange in not hearing from me in regard to my tax. But, when you learn the cause, you may excuse me in part. On may 5th about 8:00 a. m. I was assisting my son Harold do some examples. Soon after he started for school (the Academy) a few rods away, I casually went into the stable a few moments after. I saw the smoke coming up through the cracks in the floor. I immediately ran down in the basement and saw a pile of shingle shavings on fire in one of the stalls under my horse and cow. I ran out through the door and hollowed fire and then rushed up into the stable for my horse. The stable which was 33 by 50, four stories and cupalo was filled with smoke. I could see my horse, I backed him out and before I could get him out the stable was so full of smoke I could not see my way and I thought I should drop. I finally kept on and got out, had I been sixty seconds later I should have to have given up. The fire had gone from the basement up through a hay shock and three tons of hay was set on fire and as the stable was arranged all the smoke came down where I was. Everything was very dry, we have had no rain for six weeks, so all of my buildings being connected were burned in less than thirty minutes. The fire made such progress that nearly everything was burned. We saved only a little parlor furniture. I can build a set of buildings but I can't get back the old mahogany and black walnut furniture, family portraits (Uncle Kimball among them), silver ware and the accumulation of the family for a hundred years. I had been trying for the past twenty-five years to get a home to suit me and had the best set of buildings in the town costing me about $7,000, to say nothing about the contents, which money cannot buy. Had it caught in the night we should have certainly have been burned. So I feel thankful that we are all alive. It has thrown me out of gear, so to speak. I shall probably go to Virginia before long if I can make engagements. I think my building was set by an ill-bred boy six years old, living in the village not but a few rods away. I had a comfortable home and beautiful grounds. The house was heated by hot water. I shall not build again. Hoping to hear from you when convenient, I am with kind regards,

Very truly yours,
THERON E. DOE.

P. S.—Give my kind regards to Harry Snidow, Johnson Chapman, and John French. Is Mr. David Bolton living? Please give a letter of Giles County news.

SOME LAW ON RUNNING AUTOMOBILES AND MOTOR CYCLES.

There have been complaints by citizens of various parts of the county as to Automobiles and Motor Cycles on our public roads. Some accidents have occurred, but none serious. The Commonwealth's Attorney will prosecute any violations of the law that are brought to his attention by the citizens or other officers whose duty it is to report crimes where the evidence is furnished. The Attorney is powerless without witnesses who will swear to the facts. One case was prosecuted to conviction last year.

In order that the citizens of Giles may familiarize themselves with the law relative to running Automobiles and Motor Cycles on the public roads, we hereby give some extracts from the Act of March 17, 1910, which regulates the speed and fixes the punishment for violations:

"The operator of a machine shall not drive in the corporate limits of any city or town at a greater rate of speed than twelve (12) miles an hour, except in cases where the local ordinances of such city or town shall provide otherwise. Outside of the corporate limits of any city or town a speed of twenty miles an hour is permissible, except going around curves, down sharp declines, or at the intersection of any cross roads, or over the crest of hills, or in passing other vehicles or riders on road ways, when a rate of speed not exceed ing eight miles an hour must be observed.

The following rate of speed may be maintained, but shall not be exceeded on any of the highways set forth in section one, of any city, town or village or county in this State, by anyone driving a machine.

A speed of eight miles an hour around curves or bends, or where the roadway is not plainly visible for a distance of three hundred feet ahead, and at the intersection of prominent crossroads, when such road or highway passes through the open country; and when the operator of an automobile overtakes a vehicle and indicates his desire to pass said vehicle, it shall be the duty of the driver of the vehicle to bear to the right and decrease his speed to less than eight miles per hour, so as to enable the automobile to pass at the left at a speed not exceeding eight miles per hour.

A speed of eight miles per hour where a street or highway passes the built up portions of a city, town or village.

A speed of eight miles an hour at points on any public highway where there is a gathering of horses or persons. Otherwise the rate of speed may be twenty miles per hour, but this rate is subject to the conditions set forth in the succeeding sections of this act.

The owner, operator, conductor, driver or occupant of any such machine shall keep a careful look ahead for the approach of horseback riders, or vehicles drawn by horses, or other animals, and upon the approach of such riders or vehicles, shall slow up, keep his machine under thorough and careful control, give ample roadway to such rider or vehicle, and if signaled by such rider or occupant of such vehicle, or be otherwise requested thereto, shall immediately bring his machine and its engine to a full stop and allow ample room and time to allow such rider or vehicle to pass. And if requested so to do by said rider or occupant of said vehicles, the owner, operator, conductor, driver or occupant, if a male, of any such machine shall lead the horse or horses past his machine. Should any horse ridden or driven in an opposite direction to that which the machine is traveling give evidence of fright, then the duty of the driver shall be the same as if he had been signaled to by the rider of the horse or the occupant of the vehicle.

When the operator, owner, occupant, conductor or driver of such machine overtake a horse or vehicle traveling in the same direction with himself, he shall slow down his speed, signal for the road by bell or gong or horn, and if the horse or other vehicle stop, shall pass at a rate of speed not greater than eight miles per hour. Should such vehicle or ridden horse not stop, and the said operator, owner, driver, conductor, or occupant of said machine desire to pass, he shall do so at a rate of speed not greater than may be necessary, and shall, in all cases, use due diligence and care not to frighten the horse, or horses. In case of a machine passing a horse vehicle going in the same direction the provision of section twelve of this act shall apply to the operator, owner, driver, occupant, or conductor of the machine, except that in such case the horse or horses shall be held until the horse or horses become quiet, and then the machine may proceed.

When the operator, owner, occupant, conductor, or driver of any such machine approaches a curve, bend or any place where the roadway is not plainly visible for a distance of three hundred feet ahead, he shall at all times keep his machine on the righthand side of of the roadway sufficiently to allow ample room on the opposite side for the passage of other vehicles or machines, irrespective of whether another vehicle or machine is approaching or not.

Any person failing to perform any duty imposed by any section of this act, or violating any provision or condition herein set forth, shall for each offense be fined not less than ten dollars, or imprisoned in jail not less than five nor more than thirty days, or both, in the discretion of the justice of the peace before whom the case may be tried. An appeal may be taken to the circuit court of the county or corporation or hustings court of the city, in accordance with the general law governing appeals in misdemeanor cases.

In addition to such fine or imprisonment, any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be liable for damages actually incurred by reason of such violation, and in default of the deposit with the justice by such owner or occupant of a sum in cash reasonably sufficient to pay such cost and probable damages, the machine may be seized and impounded anywhere in any county or city in which offense is committed, and may, by order of the justice, be sold to pay such fine or damage.

How you may profit by it. Take Foley Kidney Pills. Mrs. E. G. Whiting, 360 Willow St., Akron, O., says: "For some time I had a very serious case of kidney trouble and I suffered with backaches and dizzy headaches. I had specks floating before my eyes and I felt all tired out and miserable. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and got a bottle and took them according to directions and results showed almost at once. MR. EDITOR: It you think this worth publishing you can do so in your next issue, and if not, it will make good fly paper with a little Royal Glue applied.

In the last few years I have heard quite a number of compliments passed upon your little town which even is appropriate and comments concerning the magnificent beauty and picturesqueness of the mountains surrounding, and last, but not least, the generosity in which your place seems to be the leader in hospitality it shows to every visitor; and I am sure according to my experience, that what I heard concerning the place, does not do it full justice, as the compliments were not made strong enough and not enough to the point as they should have been.

I have visited your town twice in the last year and there is not a place on the map that affords one who is a student of nature, more grander ideas; and there is not a place as small in population where there are so many friendly people. The way they welcome you, the hospitality they show you, will, without further comment, insist on you as becoming one of them.

Your young men seem to be always ready and willing to mingle with the one who is a total stranger in your midst, try in their own effort to show you a good time. And it is certainly not so with most places, your hotel accomodations are first-class in every respect, most especially in the courtesy you are shown and the interest that is shown in trying to make everything as pleasant as possible. No difference how short your your visit may be, one beauty of it is, every one is treated alike and it is commendable; and last, but not least, I will have to pass a few compliments on the young ladies. As I noticed they are as social as can be, they are not as they are in most of the small towns. I have had the opportunity of visiting, after they become acquainted they always greet you with a smile and try to show to you without words, that you are welcome into their social midst.

In most of the small towns after becoming acquainted, they pass you with their heads up like a race horse, give you a snub of their pretty, little painted nose, catch up their skirts and rush by for fear some of the dust off your shoes might get on to the snug-fitting hobble she is sporting..

I am glad to say there is one town that has not young ladies of this style and where you will always be treated with the proper respect as long as you do the same and it is Pearisburg.

Remember, our line of Fruits are the best that can be bought.
T. J. Pearson.

Cuba Shumate and wife of Thacker Mines, W. Va., are visiting relatives and friends in and around this place. They look as though they had never seen any trouble. We are pleased to see them looking so well.

Last week we made an error in our report of The First State Bank, Narrows. The error is this: "Individual deposits," $237.60." This should have read, "Dividends unpaid, $237 60." We are sorry, and gladly make the change.

Mrs. M. D. Woolwine who has been visiting her son, Mac, in Tennessee for several weeks, returned home the latter part of last week. On her return home she stopped over at Graham to visit her daughter, Mrs. Poindexter, whose children accompanied their grandmother home.

The 16th of June, one year ago, red-hot stoves were used here to keep warm, and this 16th is about the same. It was cold enough all last week to hug the fire. Sunday before last, the thermometer ranged in the 90's, since then it has been ranging from 50 to 70 deg. The weather is about as uneven as our hills and mountains are.

Mr. Willie and Miss Irene Johnston gave a lawn party at their home near town on Saturday evening last. Quite a number of young misses and gents were in attendance. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, strawberries, oranges, bananas, and several kinds of candies were served. All present enjoyed themselves very much.

We call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Frederick A. Webster, in another column. He has settled in our town, and will do housepainting and kalsomining, sign painting, repairs and refinishes furniture and makes the old look like new. All work guaranteed. If not satisfied with his work, no charge will be made. Give him a trial and see what he can do.

If you want good Ice Cream for Sunday, let us know a day or two ahead. T. J. Pearson.

Pearisburg is about the right sized town to settle down in and enjoy life. Most everything for the comfort of life can be bought here, and you do not have to pay as much here as in the cities; $10 will go as far here as $15 or $20 in the city. When you want to leave the farm, or tire of the noiseless city, come to this town; build a comfortable home, and be among as good, if not the best people, in the world.

The Wabash Band of this county, composed of about 22 persons—and as fine a lot of looking men as we have ever seen—went to Princeton, W. Va., on Saturday morning last to discourse some of their sweet music at a gathering of the Odd Fellows there. They returned home Sunday afternoon. This Band is one of the best, if not THE BEST —and we have had a number of them. We are sorry they could not have treated us to a "tune or so," but they could not do so at this time.

Died near Williamson, W. Va., on last Saturday, the 17th, Mr. Harvey Carr, son of William H. Carr of Poplar Hill. His remains were taken to Poplar Hill Saturday night. He was buried Sunday afternoon. His death was caused by that slow and dreaded disease, typhoid fever. He was 45 years of age. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. He moved to Williamson two or three years ago. We deeply sympathize with the widow and children in their loss.

Look out for the large posters for the Fourth of July at Narrows.

Several communications are crowded out this week, but will appear in our next issue.

Mrs. Fannie Tinsley, Misses Maud and Trixie Woods, who have been visiting friends in Lynchburg for a week, returned home Tuesday.

Rev. C. W. Kelley an old Giles boy who used to roam the fields on Sugar Run, spent Monday night in town. We were glad to meet and shake hands with him.

Mrs. Dr. O. K. Phlegar and children of Crandon, are visiting the doctor's mother, Mrs. T. T. Phlegar. Miss Viola Phlegar who has been visiting them has returned home.

"Billy" Porterfield who has been occupying the old home place of Dr. H. G. Johnston, deceased, for the past year, moved to his farm on Monday of this week. We are sorry indeed to lose them from our midst.

Dr. J. H. Nanzetta, a medicine man, is in town and will remain the balance of the week. He has also a band of colored comedians, and give a splendid show each night. The tent has been crowded to its utmost every night. Good order prevails, and everybody is treated with the utmost respect.

Rev. Andrew Shumate and wife of Richmond, Va., are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Shumate, near this place. On Sunday night Andrew preached for us. It seems the more he preaches the better his sermons are.

On Saturday last we had the pleasure of spending a few happy hours at Pembroke, we met quite a number of old friends and acquaintances, which we were glad to see. The day was noted, as there was a circus to be seen there that day, and we had an eye open for business, and we did some. We had the pleasure of dining with Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Snidow, who run a hotel there, and the way they serve and treat the people is beyond words to express. We thank them very much for the courtesy shown us and hope they will live long and prosper.

Any one wishing to come here to live and wanting a nice building lot or lots to build a home on, can find the same here. There are a large number of very choice building lots here for sale —as nice as can be found anywhere—so do not stay away on this account. Besides, we will extend to you the right hand of fellowship—if you are a desirable person.

Mr. C. W. Thompson died at Lurich last Friday, aged 67 years. He was a faithful soldier and fought through the Civil War. He belonged to the 8th Va. Cavalry and was a member of Capt. W. N. Harman's company. He was born and reared in Bland county, and was well known in Tazewell. He leaves a wife and fifteen children. Thus, one by one they pass away, and in only a very few years there will not be one left to tell the tale of the "old rebellion," as nearly all are extinct now.

C. D. and C. C. King have this to say of our Veterinaries, Drs. Whittaker and Givens: "They are all right. We have tried them, they know their business; are well equipped for it; have the grit; they are on the job and to stay there, daylight or dark. One of our best milkers had milk fever, they put her on her feet all right. We were busy and let her get down in the branch, she relapsed; they came back and pulled her through all right, after we had given her up to die. Don't wait until your stock are dead before you call them."

WILBURN ROAD CASE.

The celebrated Wilburn Valley Road case is being tried as we go to press, it will be remembered that this case has been tried several times and has been once to the Supreme Court of the State.

The out of town attorneys in the case are Judge W. J. Henson and Col. Jas. D. Johnston of Roanoke.

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the case as is evidenced by the attendance of quite a number of the prominent farmers of the Walker's Creek District.

The case is being tried before the Road Boards of Pearisburg and Walker's Creek District, composed of Supervisors, A. E. Shumate and T. B. King and Road Commissioners, Wm. Gibboney and W. E. C. Merriman.

PIC NIC.

The Christian Sunday school at Narrows, will give an excursion to Rocky Gap, Saturday. Every one is invited to go and enjoy themselves. Refreshments on the grounds.

HONOR COMES TO GILES.

Miss Margie Shumate, daughter of Prof. L. D. Shumate, won the scholarship medal the highest honor, at the Southwest Virginia Institute. This medal is given to that member of the senior class who does the best work during that year. Mr. Shumate has a right to be proud of the work done by Miss Margie all through her college course and especially of the crowning success of her senior year's work.

Arthur P. Sibold won the declamation medal at Blacksburg this year. His many friends in Pearisburg are much gratified at his success. Mr. Sibold also secured a special scholarship last year on account of his excellent work during the session. This scholarship is for four years and will largely reduce his college expenses. These scholarships are awarded only to the best student in each class.

Mr. Sam Cooper came home last week from Blacksburg with a diploma from that splendid institution. He is a deserving young man and we predict a successful career for him in his chosen work as mining engineer.

All these young people are former pupils of Pearisburg High School. It is gratifying to us to notice the success that meets our boys and girls when they go out from home to try their powers in broader fields.

All these young people are to be congratulated on the splendid college records they have made. Giles county pupils make good every institution where they are found.

ORATORICAL CONTEST.

The fourth Annual Oratorical Contest by the High Schools of Southwest Virginia was held at Rural Retreat, June 15th and 16th.

About ten High Schools were represented, a large number of visitors were present.

This feature, higher education has grown in importance in the last few years.

The State authorities are very much interested, and since the Southwest Virginia organization is the only oratorical organization in the State, and the Board of Education has ordered that similar organizations be made in other parts of the State.

Misses Lula Shrader, and Annie L. Stafford, Messrs. Chas. Cooper and Frank K. Johnston represented the Pearisburg High School.

These young people acquitted themselves with credit.

Miss Croy of Christiansburg High School, won the Reciter's Medal. Miss Welch of Elk Creek won the Essayist's Medal.

Mr. Killinger of the Rural Retreat High School, won the Debater's Medal. Mr. Clark of Washington county, won the Declaimer's Medal.

Dr. J. H. Nanzetta,

better known as King of Dentistry, will be in Pearisburg the remainder of the week extracting teeth---90 per cent. easier than any other dentist. Extracts 40 per cent. with his natural fingers; 60 per cent. with instruments. No bad results after teeth extracted.

Will be in Peterstown, W. Va., from 26th of June to 1st of July.

At Narrows, Va., 3rd and 4th of July.

Also exhibiting a clean up-to-date colored minstrel show each night.

The first convention of the First District of Virginia Division, U. D. C. will be held at Radford, Va., June 28th and 29th. It is the desire of McComas Chapter, U. D. C. that the entire chapter go to Radford on the 28th, and spend the day and take basket dinner. The District Chairman, Mrs. A. A. Campbell, urges that all the chapters be fully represented, and it is hoped that all the members of our chapter will make a special effort to go.

GIVENS-FOWLKES.

Newport, Va., June 17.—A wedding of interest here took place at "Mountain View," the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Henry Farrier, Thursday night, when their foster-sister, Miss Anna Gertrude Fowlkes became the bride of Dr. Frank Spencer Givens.

The ceremony took place at 8:30 o'clock on the front lawn of one of the oldest homes in this part of the country and beneath a spreading silver maple. An aisle formed by chains of daisies and ferns marked the path for the bridal party down the steps of the porch and across the lawn to the tree, beneath which was a chancel rail banked and covered with daisies and ferns.

Before the approach of the bridal party Miss Thurzetta Thomas, of Roanoke, sang beautifully "Oh Promise Me." The bridal party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Eileen Dudley, of Roanoke. Four ushers: Messrs. W. B. Snidow, of Pembroke, T. Gilbert Porterfield, of Maybrook, Kenneth Farrier, Edward Sibold, of Newport, and the groom and his best man, Mr. Emmett Givens, led the way followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Emblyn Jennings and Miss Lizzie Parry, of Roanoke; Miss Bertie Givens, sister of the groom, and Miss Lula Lucas, of Newport, wearing white lingerie dresses and carrying boquets of daisies and ferns.

The maid of honor, Miss Ella Preston Fowlkes and the matron of honor, Mrs. Mark Roberts, sisters of the bride, and both of Roanoke, wearing white lingerie dresses, preceded the bride.

Scattering daisies in her path came the little flower girls, Misses Harriet and Helen Farrier.

The bride wore a gown of marquisette draped over white satin and trimmed in pearls and duchess lace, her tulle veil was held in place by a cabachon of pearls. She carried a bonquet of bride's roses. She also wore a pearl brooch, the gift of the groom. She entered with her brother, Mr. Henry Farrier, who gave her in marriage.

Master Phillips Coleman bore the ring on a silver tray and little Miss Mary Farrier was train bearer.

The impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. F. Powell, pastor of Calvary Baptist church of Roanoke. At the conclusion of the ceremony a large reception was held with additional guests. The table, decorated with daisies and ferns, was spread upon the spacious lawn, over which were hung numerous Japanese lanterns.

Mrs. Spencer of Farmville, and Mrs. B. W. Porterfield of Maybrook, presided at the punch bowl.

Mrs. Henry Farrier, foster sister of the bride, wore a handsome black gown trimmed in real lace.

Friday at three o'clock dinner and reception was given for the bridal party and house guests at the home of the groom, and Mrs. Cale Givens of Newport. The bride wore a traveling suit of brown rajah with hat to match.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Hurt Fowlkes of Atlanta, Ga., sister of the bride; Mr. Richard Fowlkes, brother of the bride; Mr. Mark Roberts, Miss Loveline Coleman, Mrs. Hickman, Miss Lizzie Bandy, all of Roanoke; Miss Dora Meek of Burke's Garden; Professor and Mrs. J. B. Givens of Narrows; Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Groseclose of Blacksburg; Mr. John Givens and Mr. John D. Foote of Pearisburg.

The many handsome wedding gifts of cut glass, silver, and china, which were received show their popularity. She is a graduate of Roanoke High School and also attended college at Front Royal and Farmville State Normal.

The groom is one of Giles most promising young physicians and is a graduate of the Medical College of Richmond.

Dr. and Mrs. Givens will make their home at Newport, where Dr. Givens has an extensive practice.

Mrs. M. D. Woolwine who has been visiting her son, Mac, in Tennessee for several weeks, returned home the latter part of last week. On her return home she stopped over at Graham to visit her daughter, Mrs. Poindexter, whose children accompanied their grandmother home.

The 16th of June, one year ago, red-hot stoves were used here to keep warm, and this 16th is about the same. It was cold enough all last week to hug the fire. Sunday before last, the thermometer ranged in the 90's, since then it has been ranging from 50 to 70 deg. The weather is about as uneven as our hills and mountains are.

Mr. Willie and Miss Irene Johnston gave a lawn party at their home near town on Saturday evening last. Quite a number of young misses and gents were in attendance. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, strawberries, oranges, bananas, and several kinds of candies were served. All present enjoyed themselves very much.

We call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Frederick A. Webster, in another column. He has settled in our town, and will do housepainting and kalsomining, sign painting, repairs and refinishes furniture and makes the old look like new. All work guaranteed. If not satisfied with his work, no charge will be made. Give him a trial and see what he can do.

If you want good Ice Cream for Sunday, let us know a day or two ahead. T. J. Pearson.

Pearisburg is about the right sized town to settle down in and enjoy life. Most everything for the comfort of life can be bought here, and you do not have to pay as much here as in the cities; $10 will go as far here as $15 or $20 in the city. When you want to leave the farm, or tire of the noiseless city, come to this town; build a comfortable home, and be among as good, if not the best people, in the world.

The Wabash Band of this county, composed of about 22 persons—and as fine a lot of looking men as we have ever seen—went to Princeton, W. Va., on Saturday morning last to discourse some of their sweet music at a gathering of the Odd Fellows there. They returned home Sunday afternoon. This Band is one of the best, if not THE BEST—and we have had a number of them. We are sorry they could not have treated us to a "tune or so," but they could not do so at this time.

Died near Williamson, W. Va., on last Saturday, the 17th, Mr. Harvey Carr, son of William H. Carr of Poplar Hill. His remains were taken to Poplar Hill Saturday night. He was buried Sunday afternoon. His death was caused by that slow and dreaded disease, typhoid fever. He was 45 years of age. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. He moved to Williamson two or three years ago. We deeply sympathize with the widow and children in their loss.

Look out for the large posters for the Fourth of July at Narrows.

Several communications are crowded out this week, but will appear in our next issue.

Mrs. Fannie Tinsley, Misses Maud and Trixie Woods, who have been visiting friends in Lynchburg for a week, returned home Tuesday.

Rev. C. W. Kelley an old Giles boy who used to roam the fields on Sugar Run, spent Monday night in town. We were glad to meet and shake hands with him.

Mrs. Dr. O. K. Phlegar and children of Crandon, are visiting the doctor's mother, Mrs. T. T. Phlegar. Miss Viola Phlegar who has been visiting them has returned home.

"Billy" Porterfield who has been occupying the old home place of Dr. H. G. Johnston, deceased, for the past year, moved to his farm on Monday of this week. We are sorry indeed to lose them from our midst.

Dr. J. H. Nanzetta, a medicine man, is in town and will remain the balance of the week. He has also a band of colored comedians, and give a splendid show each night. The tent has been crowded to its utmost every night. Good order prevails, and everybody is treated with the utmost respect.

Rev. Andrew Shumate and wife of Richmond, Va., are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Shumate, near this place. On Sunday night Andrew preached for us. It seems the more he preaches the better his sermons are.

On Saturday last we had the pleasure of spending a few happy hours at Pembroke, we met quite a number of old friends and acquaintances, which we were glad to see. The day was noted, as there was a circus to be seen there that day, and we had an eye open for business, and we did some. We had the pleasure of dining with Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Snidow, who run a hotel there, and the way they serve and treat the people is beyond words to express. We thank them very much for the courtesy shown us and hope they will live long and prosper.

Any one wishing to come here to live and wanting a nice building lot or lots to build a home on, can find the same here. There are a large number of very choice building lots here for sale—as nice as can be found anywhere—so do not stay away on this account. Besides, we will extend to you the right hand of fellowship—if you are a desirable person.

Mr. C. W. Thompson died at Lurich last Friday, aged 67 years. He was a faithful soldier and fought through the Civil War. He belonged to the 8th Va. Cavalry and was a member of Capt. W. N. Harman's company. He was born and reared in Bland county, and was well known in Tazewell. He leaves a wife and fifteen children. Thus, one by one they pass away, and in only a very few years there will not be one left to tell the tale of the "old rebellion," as nearly all are extinct now.

C. D. and C. C. King have this to say of our Veterinaries, Drs. Whittaker and Givens: "They are all right. We have tried them, they know their business; are well equipped for it; have the grit; they are on the job and to stay there, daylight or dark. One of our best milkers had milk fever, they put her on her feet all right. We were busy and let her get down in the branch, she relapsed; they came back and pulled her through all right, after we had given her up to die. Don't wait until your stock are dead before you call them."

WILBURN ROAD CASE.

The celebrated Wilburn Valley Road case is being tried as we go to press, it will be remembered that this case has been tried several times and has been once to the Supreme Court of the State.

The out of town attorneys in the case are Judge W. J. Henson and Col. Jas. D. Johnston of Roanoke.

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the case as is evidenced by the attendance of quite a number of the prominent farmers of the Walker's Creek District.

The case is being tried before the Road Boards of Pearisburg and Walker's Creek District, composed of Supervisors, A. E. Shumate and T. B. King and Road Commissioners, Wm. Gibboney and W. E. C. Merriman.

PIC NIC.

The Christian Sunday school at Narrows, will give an excursion to Rocky Gap, Saturday. Every one is invited to go and enjoy themselves. Refreshments on the grounds.

HONOR COMES TO GILES.

Miss Margie Shumate, daughter of Prof. L. D. Shumate, won the scholarship medal the highest honor, at the Southwest Virginia Institute. This medal is given to that member of the senior class who does the best work during that year. Mr. Shumate has a right to be proud of the work done by Miss Margie all through her college course and especially of the crowning success of her senior year's work.

Arthur P. Sibold won the declamation medal at Blacksburg this year. His many friends in Pearisburg are much gratified at his success. Mr. Sibold also secured a special scholarship last year on account of his excellent work during the session. This scholarship is for four years and will largely reduce his college expenses. These scholarships are awarded only to the best student in each class.

Mr. Sam Cooper came home last week from Blacksburg with a diploma from that splendid institution. He is a deserving young man and we predict a successful career for him in his chosen work as mining engineer.

All these young people are former pupils of Pearisburg High School. It is gratifying to us to notice the success that meets our boys and girls when they go out from home to try their powers in broader fields.

All these young people are to be congratulated on the splendid college records they have made. Giles county pupils make good every institution where they are found.

ORATORICAL CONTEST.

The fourth Annual Oratorical Contest by the High Schools of Southwest Virginia was held at Rural Retreat, June 15th and 16th.

About ten High Schools were represented, a large number of visitors were present.

This feature, higher education has grown in importance in the last few years.

The State authorities are very much interested, and since the Southwest Virginia organization is the only oratorical organization in the State, and the Board of Education has ordered that similar organizations be made in other parts of the State.

Misses Lula Shrader, and Annie L. Stafford, Messrs. Chas. Cooper and Frank K. Johnston represented the Pearisburg High School.

These young people acquitted themselves with credit.

Miss Croy of Christiansburg High School, won the Reciter's Medal. Miss Welch of Elk Creek won the Essayist's Medal.

Mr. Killinger of the Rural Retreat High School, won the Debater's Medal. Mr. Clark of Washington county, won the Declaimer's Medal.

Dr. J. H. Nanzetta,

GIVENS-FOWLKES.

Newport, Va., June 17.—A wedding of interest here took place at "Mountain View," the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Henry Farrier, Thursday night, when their foster-sister, Miss Anna Gertrude Fowlkes became the bride of Dr. Frank Spencer Givens.

The ceremony took place at 8:30 o'clock on the front lawn of one of the oldest homes in this part of the country and beneath a spreading silver maple. An aisle formed by chains of daisies and ferns marked the path for the bridal party down the steps of the porch and across the lawn to the tree, beneath which was a chancel rail banked and covered with daisies and ferns.

Before the approach of the bridal party Miss Thurzetta Thomas, of Roanoke, sang beautifully "Oh Promise Me." The bridal party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Eileen Dudley, of Roanoke. Four ushers: Messrs. W. B. Snidow, of Pembroke, T. Gilbert Porterfield, of Maybrook, Kenneth Farrier, Edward Sibold, of Newport, and the groom and his best man, Mr. Emmett Givens, led the way followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Emblyn Jennings and Miss Lizzie Parry, of Roanoke; Miss Bertie Givens, sister of the groom, and Miss Lula Lucas, of Newport, wearing white lingerie dresses and carrying boquets of daisies and ferns.

The maid of honor, Miss Ella Preston Fowlkes and the matron of honor, Mrs. Mark Roberts, sisters of the bride, and both of Roanoke, wearing white lingerie dresses, preceded the bride.

Scattering daisies in her path came the little flower girls, Misses Harriet and Helen Farrier.

The bride wore a gown of marquisette draped over white satin and trimmed in pearls and duchess lace, her tulle veil was held in place by a cabachon of pearls. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses. She also wore a pearl brooch, the gift of the groom. She entered with her brother, Mr. Henry Farrier, who gave her in marriage.

Master Phillips Coleman bore the ring on a silver tray and little Miss Mary Farrier was train bearer.

The impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. F. Powell, pastor of Calvary Baptist church of Roanoke. At the conclusion of the ceremony a large reception was held with additional guests. The table, decorated with daisies and ferns, was spread upon the spacious lawn, over which were hung numerous Japanese lanterns.

Mrs. Spencer of Farmville, and Mrs. B. W. Porterfield of Maybrook, presided at the punch bowl.

Mrs. Henry Farrier, foster sister of the bride, wore a handsome black gown trimmed in real lace.

Friday at three o'clock dinner and reception was given for the bridal party and house guests at the home of the groom, and Mrs. Cale Givens of Newport. The bride wore a traveling suit of brown rajah with hat to match.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Hurt Fowlkes of Atlanta, Ga., sister of the bride; Mr. Richard Fowlkes, brother of the bride; Mr. Mark Roberts, Miss Loveline Coleman, Mrs. Hickman, Miss Lizzie Bandy, all of Roanoke; Miss Dora Meek of Burke's Garden; Professor and Mrs. J. B. Givens of Narrows; Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Groseclose of Blacksburg; Mr. John Givens and Mr. John D. Foote of Pearisburg.

The many handsome wedding gifts of cut glass, silver, and china, which were received show their popularity. She is a graduate of Roanoke High School and also attended college at Front Royal and Farmville State Normal.

The groom is one of Giles most promising young physicians and is a graduate of the Medical College of Richmond.

Dr. and Mrs. Givens will make their home at Newport, where Dr. Givens has an extensive practice.

"If you see it at PEDIGO's it's correct and worth the price."

Underwear of all kinds—some at reduced prices, at

BUCHANAN & POWELL'S.

We suppose we have got to "slobber" on, as no one has brought us any cherries, for love or money. We hear there are quite a few blackheart cherries, can't some one bring us a small basketful, we will pay for them. We would like one good "bait" of some kind.

D., etc., can come without a basket if they will bring a lady with them. Come and have a good time with us!

Rev. Andrew Shumate was among the graduates of Richmond College this year. It seems just a year or so since Andrew was a red-headed and freckle-faced student of Pearisburg High School. He still owns the red head and the freckles. Andrew made a good record here in the High School and he made equally as good a one at Richmond College. We expect great things of him in the future. His promising boyhood is developing into a splendid young manhood. We are always proud of young men of his type.

In the afternoon, Mr. Edward F. Sheffey, son of the late Rev. Robert Sheffey, will deliver an address on the Sunday School, which is sure to be handled in a masterly manner. Do not be afraid to attend, as there will be an abundance and to spare, of good things to eat, and all will be treated well. We hear there is to be a large crowd present from this place, and we presume, it will be the same from all over the county. We hope and pray the day will be a pleasant one as regards the weather.

MARRIED—On the 14th inst., at Byron, Oklahoma, Mr. Wm. Luther Johnston of that place, and Miss Alma Hoffman of Wichita, Kansas. Luther is a son of Mr. William A. Johnston who lives at Chapel, Va., on the waters of Wolf Creek. About five years ago he went to Byron, Okla., with his brother Charles, who is in business there. In going there he probably had in mind the words of Horace Greley, "go west, young man, and seek your fortune." Now that he has found it in the person of Miss Hoffman, we guess his heart knows no bounds. We wish them success and a long life of happiness.

FOR SALE!

Seventy-five extra good sheep. Inquire of O. C. SNIDOW, Pembroke, Va.

As our reporter has written up the picnic of the Christian church Sunday School on Saturday last, we must not forget to mention the many invitations we had to dine with numerous friends. We would liked to have pleased them all, but this was an utter impossibility, so we decided to dine with Mesdames C. D. French and J. B. Givens. Their spread was an immense one, and the way we partook of it was a sin, we were so ravenous. These ladies know how to treat one with the utmost respect, and we wish them a long life and a happy one.

LAND SALE.

Wiley S. Munsey has sold to Hon. Martin Williams and M. P. Farrier his tract of thirty-four acres of land just East of town, and these gentlemen have sub-divided the same and will offer it for sale in tracts of four to ten acres, each.

This is a nice and attractive situation and its nearness to town makes it very desirable for persons wishing small farms.

ANOTHER FINE HORSE SOLD.

Dan. M. St. Clair has sold to Mrs. Thomas Stearnes of Newport News, Va., his fine riding and driving horse, "Billy," for $400.00. This splendid, all-round combination horse, was sired by the celebrated Red King. Red King is the sire of a number of fine riding and driving horses in this county, and his splendid colts have done much to add to the reputation Giles has won as the foremost county in Southwest Virginia for fine horses.

TO THE TRADE.

Having decided to run our business on a new plan, beginning July 1, 1911, to pay cash for all kinds of produce, and to sell goods for strictly cash and produce, which will enable us to sell at a very low price, we feel that it will be to our customers' advantage to buy from us on this plan. But remember this places you under no obligation to buy goods from us.

We want your produce, and of course any time you are at our place we would be glad and feel it would be your duty to buy your goods from us at the lowest cash price. However, you are placed under no obligation to us. Sell us your produce for cash and buy your goods where you can buy them cheapest, therefore we respectfully ask that you write or call on us, ask our prices, be convinced that you can buy cheaper from us than ever before. We can help you, let us do it.

Positively no credit after July 1, 1911.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

The SOUTHERN GIRL
$2.00 Shoe $2.50

Ordinarily a $2.00 shoe is very ordinary. When the looks are gone the shoe is gone. The Southern Girl Shoe at $2.00 is an extraordinary value. It looks good as long as you wear it, and you will still be wearing it when your neighbor who may have bought some other shoe at the same time is obliged to buy new ones. We use only the best hides for vamps and tops, and the best sole leather money can buy. We have a dealer in your town. Look for the Red Bell on the box.

COMMUNICATED.

Fries, Va.,
June 22, 1911

Editor Virginian:

Dear Sir—With interest and a great deal of pleasure I read your columns each week, for news of my native county and surrounding country, something about the places I visit—the people, the country and the development of her resources, may be read with some interest by your patrons, and I venture to you a scribble, trying to find language that shall shield it from the waste basket.

The town of Fries is nestled in the valley on the cyrstal span of New River in Grayson county, near the eastern line, at the terminal of the Norfolk & Western Railroad, within five miles of Galax, where each year the twin county fair is held for the counties of Grayson and Carroll, Within five miles of Grayson Springs and seventeen miles of Independence, the county seat of Grayson, 45 miles from Pulaski. The population is about 1,800, is mainly supported by the Washington Cotton Mills.

The mining and agricultural resources add materially to the well being of the populace. Many miles in area are owned and incorporated by the Washington Mills Company, on which the town of Fries is located.

None of the company land is allotted for sale to settlers who wish to build homes here, though within the incorporate lines, embracing Fries, are various additions, such as Blair & Hawk, beautifully plotted into convenient lots, and many handsome residences are being erected. On the Blair addition, a part of the Blair farm, where stands the grand old mansion, the home of the Blairs, there are many beautiful and attractive new residences. The scent of new paint, the sound of the hammer and dinn of machinery invigorate and lends spirit to one visiting Fries.

I must not forget to mention some of the features that make the lots of the Blair attractive and valuable. They are not in the real estate business. The sight is comparatively level, with sufficient drainage for all practical purposes. One of the best agricultural pieces of land in the valley, will produce thirty bushels of wheat or eighty bushels of corn per acre; underlaid by living streams of Freestone water, as pure and cold as mother earth affords. A reliable supply may be obtained at depths of 40to 50 feet. My business is to find water embosomed in the earth, and fit it to the use of those who want it, and know whereof I write.

The town of Hank is situated in the Northwest portion of Fries on a higher plane, beautifully plotted, and though only offered for sale last year, is already possessed of many spacious, attractive homes. Water is not obtained so easily in Hank. Though at depths of 80 to 100 feet, a reliable supply of pure water is secured.

Blair and Fries are governed under the same laws, and one set of officials preside over the territory embraced within the incorporate lines of Fries.

The society, I may rate, as the best. Hard working, prudent, thoughtful, liberty loving, God fearing people. Innocent sports are largely engaged in. Fishing, rowing, skating, lawn tennis and many other forms of amusement. Disorder is frowned down; drunkenness is seldom noticed, the sale of whiskey and all forms of gambling is forbidden. Occasion for arrest or to call an officer is a rare occurrence. It seems only necessary to point to the lockup when disorder arises to restore peace and quiet.

The ladies are simply beautiful, attractive and entertaining in the highest degree. Occasionally you may notice one take a pinch of snuff; while others sing as sweetly as the native birds of the forest; others pluck from the banjo the Southern ditties in such sweet strains you might imagine you were chasing the coon down in the yellow cave.

Fries, proper, is built and maintained, by the Washington Cotton Mills Co.; supports a bank, wholesale house, a first-class hotel, tonsorial parlor, a first class general stove, grocery and meat market, at which you may buy anything from the delicate fruits of the season to the hardy staples. Ready made clothing or a ladies hat. Anything in the saddle and harness line from a driving whip to a Buena Vista saddle or bloomers made to order.

The company employs nearly everybody who will work. From every by way come boys and girls and march unduly into the mill. The boys with clean shirts and polished shoes; the girls so neat and sweet, they seem almost sweet enough to kiss it a young man should dare entertain such a thought. At noon they skip out like crickets across the grassy lawns. At night when the day's work is done, bound like birds from a cage to the various places of recreation. Some boat riding with their sweethearts spearing the fish by moonlight in the crystal water. The mountain trout, bass, carp and many other varieties abound here. Others go to the Lyceum, a grand institution built and designed by the company for the recreation of their weary laborers; roller skating, moving pictures, bowling alleys, public speaking, theatrical performance, a reading room provided with the popular journals of the day, are some of the attractions at this Lyceum. Though beautiful in design affording so much pleasant pastime for every one when good order is invariably preserved, by some is called the company's wheel of fortune, designed only to return their nickel to them. Such are usually blind to everything with in the lunch walls, without wide awake condemning, all that has not a penny in it for themselves

I must not forget to mention we have two churches, presided over by eloquent pastors, Rev. Vaughan of the Methodist and Rev. Heaver of the Baptist. You may go to church and listen to a sermon delivered in the most forceful, simplest language that one's tongue command; or in the streets or in the grove and listen to the most ridiculous harangue, delivered in the most insulting language. But pardon me if I appear by any manner or means to make light of any one's manner or form of worship. I sat in the grove one day on the ground when a man arose to preach, with no voice, could hardly talk, and hardly enough clothes on to dust a fiddle; I crept closer and closer to him, catching every word I could. I heard one of the grandest sermons I ever listened to. Shall make this suggestion only, if a man embrace religion, has it in his heart, it will not hurt to let it run through his brain. If a Frazier, Catron, Straley or a Terry—men who started out with no education, can't find words too forceful not too expressive, with which to expound the gospel, why should not men be educated to preach?

Will add a scrap of news and write from information gathered from the most reliable sources The woods is full of strangers, who divulge some wonderful plans relative to the development of the water power near here, which they have already set about. A force of 25 to 30 men are now building camps near Grayson to quarter their hands who shall build the immense dams across the river there. As soon as money and men can do it, 1,500 to 2,000 men, besides many teams, will be employed on the work when they shall have their full force installed The rate of wages is not yet established, and will be governed largely by local customs. There is no demand for labor more than the immediate neighborhood supplies. My associates are seeking employment there and give to me correct news.

Truly the people are awake to industry and determined to develop the resources of our country. By what has been done we may look for wonders to develop and old New River to be harnessed in such a manner that many a hand will be kept busy and many a wheel set buzzing that was never dreamed of.

Three cars of lambs were loaded here last week; two cars of walnut stumps and logs this week.

The town will soon be supplied with the crystal water of Loelan fountain, by the installation of the new pump just received. This wonderful fountain has recently been developed in Lanhoe Park—a celestial spot—unique in design as heavenly things. Is wreathed in floral decorations of nature's own handiwork; bordered by rododendroms, interspersed with wahoo, locust and many other floral shrubs of beauty of nature's own sprinkling, hence the nature.

J. Arthur Adair.

LIQUOR BY EXPRESS IS A VAST BUSINESS.

Washington, June 23.—Approximately twenty million gallons of liquor annually are shipped by express, principally from mail order houses, direct to consumers in prohibition States.

This startling fact was developed today in an inquiry conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission into proposed changes in express classifications which resulted in an advance of rates on packages containing liquor.

Commissioner McChord, who conducted the inquiry and prepared the opinion of the commission, points out that the industry directly concerned is that of the mail order liquor houses.

"It was the spread of the prohibition movement," the opinion says, "that gave vitality to this character of traffic in liquor. With Statewide prohibition came the interstate traffic in liquor. The decision of the Supreme Court that this traffic was interstate and, therefore superior to interference by the State governments gave the industry a tremendous impetus, and established the express companies as the carriers of practically the whole of this traffic.

"Jacksonville, Fla., probably the largest shipping point for liquor in the South, sends out between three and four thousand packages of one or two gallons daily, or a total of about one and one-half million gallons a year. Chattanooga ships about 786,000 gallons; Richmond 546,760 gallons; Petersburg 268,128; Pensacola 267,760; New Orlean, 255,856; Augusta 213,000; and Norfolk, Va., Caire, Ills., Emporia, Va., Louisville, Ky., Portsmouth, Va., Roanoke, Va., and Savannah, Ga. ship more than 100,000 gallons each annually.

"The movement is much more active in the South than in other sections of the country, partly because of the extent of the prohibition territory in that section, partly because of the large quantities of very cheap whisky manufactured and shipped there for the consumption of the negro population."

The opinion concludes with the statement that although it is not the function of the commission to dwell on the moral aspect of the question, it is considered that the traffic has an evil effect on and is one of the important factors in the race problem of the South.

If I should receive the nomination and after that be elected to the position for which I am a candidate, I would give it my best endeavors and would try and perform the duties thereof to the end that the moral and material interests of the county would go forward with unabated progress.

Soliciting your support and thanking you therefor, I am

Sunday was a scorcher. Are you aware of that fact?

Take things as easy as you can during the hot weather.

The glorious Fourth has passed with its usual serious results.

Miss Kate Snidow is visiting the Misses Walker, at Vinton.

It is an utter impossibility to please every one, or even half of that.

Rev. J. T. Frazier filled the pulpit in the M. E. church last Sunday night in the place of Rev. J. L. Prater, the pastor. He also gave us a pleasant call Monday morning.

If you don't believe there is music in this place, get out on your front porch some night and listen. The squall of babies can be heard from every nook and corner. Prosperity abounds here.

If it is necessary to get up at six o'clock every morning to reach the age of one hundred and one, we are satisfied to linger the traditional three score and ten years in this world and let it go at that.

Misses Pearl Angles of Farmville, and Kate Reynolds of Tazewell, are the guests of Miss Lucille Lucas. These young ladies were her schoolmates, while attending the Farmville School.

The young people of this place gave a very enjoyable dance on Friday night last. Sandwiches and lemonade were served. We understand these dances are to be repeated every two weeks.

Read the new advertisement in this issue of the Eggleston Produce & Commission Co., Eggleston, Va. They are very energetic merchants, and are always pushing to the front. They will pay you cash for all the produce you will bring them.

Robt. Surface of Roanoke, spent Sunday in town.

We are sorry to state, that the father of Mr. Jack Olinger, died at Price's Fork, Montgomery county, on Sunday last and was buried Monday. He was a good old man and much respected.

Prof. Chas. C. Weaver, President of Emory and Henry College, gave us a pleasant call last Monday. He was here in the interest of this college, which is one of the (best, if not the best) in the State.

Lee K. Williams of Wingo, announces himself in this issue for Supervisor of Pembroke District. Mr. Williams is very popular and is in every way qualified for the position he has announced himself, should he be so fortunate as to be elected.

Prof. Graybill of Roanoke, gave us a call the other day. He was in the interest of the Roanoke-National Business College, of which he is vice-president. This college is considered the best of its kind in the South. Call again, when in our village.

Dr. M. M. Talkin of Baltimore, is stopping with his wife and child at the Mountain Lake Hotel. The Dr. will practice his profession during the month of July in this county. Dr. Talkin specializes the eye, ear and throat.

Thoughtless persons often accuse the newspapers of printing falsehoods, something they never do, but here is a little story from a Michigan paper that can't be questioned: "She was left a widow through the death of her husband." Now, who says they do not tell the truth?

We are sorry to state that Dr. J. T. Parker, who has been troubled with a stomach trouble for a long time, and who has been treated by physicians here, was taken to a Roanoke hospital on Friday last for treatment. We hope the treatment there will prove successful, and that he will be returned to us at an early day.

Rev. J. D. McAllister, State Secretary of the Anti Saloon League of Virginia, will preach Sunday at Narrows at 11 o'clock; Bluff City at four o'clock, and Pearisburg at 8.15 o'clock. Rev. McAllister is said to be one of the finest speakers in the State, and those who come out to hear him, are sure to be more than pleased.

Mrs. J. P. Surface of Roanoke, who has been visiting in town for several days, left Wednesday in company with Mrs. W. J. Shelton of this place, for a week's visit to relatives and friends at Tazewell.

The annual Colt Show will be held at Pearisburg on Saturday, August 26th. Premiums will be given on the following colts, whose daddies are: Peery; Hum—better known as the Black Horse; David King's horse; Baywood Squirrel; Royal Arch, owned by J. T. S. Hoge. The amount of premiums will be mentioned later. Everybody get ready for the Colt Show.

Rev. Andrew Shumate, wife and sister, Miss Clara, Mrs. David Prince and daughter of Raleigh county, W. Va., took dinner last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Brotherton. We have taken dinner with this couple ourselves, and know those who were with them on this occasion, fared sumptuously, and were treated "right up the handle."

John Viney, a colored gentleman of this place, has a rare specimen of a chicken, and we wish all chickens were of this kind, as they would afford us a great deal more eating. It has four legs, but only two feet. As the feet are not much good to "chew on," anyway, the legs "hit us" about right. Some say this is a "bad omen," but when a chicken has four "drumsticks" to it, we think not.

We had the pleasure of attending the grand celebration at Narrows, given by the Modern Woodmen of America, on the Fourth. The day started out fine, but in the afternoon, about three o'clock, one of the hardest rains of the season came down, greatly to the annoyance of the throng assembled. There was said to be about two thousand persons on the grounds. The behavior was splendid, considering the large crowd. We will give full details in our next issue.

The people in general about here seem to take a great deal of interest in the editor and their county paper, and sometimes want favors done by the editor—and he does it, as he is of an obliging nature—still we have noticed many times they go elsewhere to have their letter heads, envelopes, etc., printed. We think, and we know, we do it as good and as cheap as they can get it done elsewhere. So why go away from home to have it done? Don't you believe in patronizing home industry? We believe you do. Then practice what you believe.

The colored people of the M. E. church of this place, had quite a nice picnic in a grove on the outskirts of town, on the Fourth. Baskets, filled with good things, bananas, oranges, etc., were on the grounds. The day was very pleasantly spent until about three o'clock, when one of the heaviest rains of the season fell, when all went to the church for refuge. Taking it all in all, the day was very happily spent. In the evening a drill, very handsomely done, was given in the church which was enjoyed by all.

Miss Margie Shumate will have charge of the music department of Pearisburg High School for the coming session. She has studied music for a number of years, is a fall graduate in the music department of Virginia Institute, Bristol, Va., and has had some experience as teacher.

Read the new advertisement of the Roanoke-National Business College, Roanoke, Va., in this issue. Conceded to be the leading school of the South. Banking business, shorthand, typewriting, etc., taught. Fall term opens September 5. Write for free catalogue.

Wiley S. Munsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Munsey of this place, was married at Cumberland Gap, Tenn., last week to Miss Hopkins of Tazewell. They went on a bridal tour to Cincinnati and other Northern cities. Will be at his home here today. We wish him success, a long life, and a happy one.

Our reporter had the pleasure while attending the Sheffey Memorial services at Staffordsville last Sunday of dining with Mr. and Mrs. David Whittaker. We have not in all our travels, (and we have traveled some) saw more kinder people; and more than this, we have not seen a table with better things on it to eat, and in such a large quantity, as we saw at this house. If you go away from this house hungry, it is your fault, for it seems one cannot eat enough to satisfy this lady and gentleman. We thank you very much, and hope some time, we may again have the same pleasure.

Last Saturday morning a very vicious dog belonging to Miss Zella Woodrum, daughter of Mr. J. H. Woodrum of this place, jumped on and badly lacerated the forehead and right cheek of the little daughter (about two years old) of Mr. and Mrs. Will Woodrum, and had it not been for the grandmother being close by, might have been torn to pieces. Several stitches had to be taken by the doctors to close the cuts. The dog soon afterwards was killed and his head sent to the Pasteur Institute at Richmond, to ascertain whether or not he was rabid. We are very sorry, indeed, this happened, and more so, because of it being a small and very sweet child. We hope nothing else of a serious nature will develop and that the little one will soon recover. At this writing it is getting along as well as could be expected.

THE SHEFFEY MEMORIAL.

The Robert Sheffey Memorial Services held at Staffordsville on last Sunday, July 2d, was largely attended by people from the different parts of this county and from adjoining counties in this State and some from West Va. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Tyler Frazier, one of the ablest and most eloquent divines of the Holston Conference.

The handsome church in which the services were held, was crowded to its utmost capacity, very many being compelled to remain on the outside. The eloquent sermon was listened to with rapt attention by the sweltering throng on the inside of the church and by those in hearing distance on the outside.

There was a general expression of regret that Mr. Edward Sheffey of Lynchburg, Va., a son of Rev. Robert Sheffey the famous divine, whose name has been a household word in this section for nearly a half century, could not be present on account of illness and take in the services as had been arranged.

Despite the great heat of the day, which was a regular "July scorcher," the large assemblage seemed to greatly enjoy the occasion, and the superabundance of good eatables provided and dispensed with that wholesomeness and lavish hospitality for which the good people of Walker's Creek are so justly and widely famed.

There was an interesting Sunday School service conducted in the afternoon by Rev. Miles, the pastor in charge of that circuit.

We call attention to the advertisement of Emory and Henry College, which appears in this issue. This old institution has a well-established and recognized place in the educational work of the South. It was established in 1836, and has educated more than ten thousand young men. Within the last five years great improvements have been made in the material equipment of the school. New buildings have been erected, a water system installed, and laboratories newly furnished.

During the past year there was an enrollment of 226 students. The friends of the institution will rejoice to learn that the prospects for the coming year are exceedingly bright.

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach out? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it all you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 90 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are of known composition. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Good Old Summer Time Again.

BY GRACE FRENCH.

It's a good time you bet when we all work and sweat,
In the good old summer time,
But I know you'd rather be in the shade of the tree
With your baby mine;
We all try to shirk for we all dread to work,
We'd rather take our bait and line
And go a fishing in the pool,
In the good old summer time.

Thus you while time away on the bright summer days,
In the good old summer time;
Ne'er a thought of the money you'll need for your honey
In the good old summer time.
But you trust to your pap for your shoes and your hat,
And never think of a crime.
When you tell her every one works but dad,
In the good old summer time.

When your father comes in he looks weak and thin,
In the good old summer time;
The sweat's on his brow while he handles the plow,
In the good old summer time;
He's raising potatoes, beans, corn and tomatoes,
It takes up all of his time.
Yes you sing, "what's the matter with father,"
In the good old summer time.

So the summer rolls over while you rove in the clover,
In the good old summer time,
With your girl on your arm you stroll o'er the farm
In the good old summer time.
Your money's all spent you have a cent,
So you say to your baby mine:
"I'll meet you in St. Louis, babe,
In the good old summer time."

Then when summer time's past
You think why can't it last,
The good old summer time,
When you've nothing to do but talk to your Sue,
In the good old summer time.
You now have to shun her, although you have won her,
And say you cannot be mine.
So you'll sing, "Good bye little girl, good bye,"
Till the good old summer time.

A Curious Courtship.

BY SARA TREAT BINGHAM.

I was recently entertained by a gentleman and his wife, living in their handsome country place on one of the most beautiful of American lakes, whose courtship was certainly the most strange I ever heard of. They were both Russians by birth and both of the higher class. The husband told me the story one evening while we were smoking on his piazza overlooking the water. It was this:

I am now a man of seventy, and during my long life there has been a great change in the political condition of my native country. Were it not for this change instead of telling you my experience I would be deathly afraid of your knowing it. In deed, I should be living, as it were, in oblivion. I was one of the original nihilists. The word is no longer used in speaking of Russians who oppose the government, for there is nothing it stands for. It is the Latin word nihil, which means nothing, the nihilists believing that nothing, governmental or social, that exists should exist—all should be destroyed. Today there is a process of building up Russia, and even the term revolutionist there is at present confined to a few.

The belief of the circle that I belonged to was, among other things, that all property should be held in common. I was then but twenty years of age adn was caught by this idea. Indeed, young as I was, I became a leader among the nihilists. But my principles underwent a sudden change. A brother of my father had emigrated to America and had made a fortune. He died a bachelor when I was twenty-five years old and left me his property, amounting to more than half a million dollars.

This acquisition of wealth will turn the head of any communist from his principles. I no sooner learned that I was heir to a fortune than I saw all the social problems I had studied in a different light. But one object took possession of me—to conceal the news of my fortune from my associates, hiding myself from them that I might enjoy it. One night I left one of their meetings to disappear from them forever. Disguised, I left at midnight for America, and in a few months my property was turned over to me.

In time the cause of my absence would be known. I should be tried and condemned to death. I turned over my property and the collection of my income to an agent, with instructions to send the latter to another name than my own, which I assumed, and attempted to lose my identity, in traveling from place to place. I never dared stop anywhere more than a month at a time, and before long I began to experience that tired feeling which indicates criminals who know the police are hunting them to give themselves up and suffer the penalty of their crimes.

Especially did I suffer from being cut off from my own countrymen. I dared not associate with a Russian lest through him my identity and whereabouts should be communicated to those who were looking for me. For ten years I lived a life in death. I have often since wondered how the czar, knowing all the while that there are many persons seeking to kill him, can live without breaking down with nervous prostration.

As time passed and I still lived if I did not feel easier I at least took fewer precautions against being found by one sent to kill me. In fact, I felt that I would rather die than suffer myself to constantly fear death.

One day I was introduced to a lady from Russia, who on learning from something I inadvertently dropped to reveal the land of my nativity that I was a Russian took an interest in me. Hounded as I felt sure I had been for many years, I gave my self up to the companionship of this woman, who seemed to have been sent to me in my banishment to comfort me. Indeed, I was falling into that condition we call love when one moonlight evening at a house where we were entertained she suggested that we walk in the garden. When out of sight of the house she suddenly faced me, drew a dagger and, with the words "Forgive me," attempted to plunge it into my heart. I was too quick for her, springing backward. Then I said to her: "Try again. Another time I will not oppose you. I have lived so long in this dread that I welcome death"

I threw open my coat and presented my breast to her.

For a moment she stood irresolute, then handed her dagger to me.

"I cannot do it," she said. "But if I don't I will be killed Do the work yourself, it will be a mercy to me."

What had prevented me from following the work I had taken upon myself was a fortune; what prevented this woman from obeying the commands she had received and taking upon herself the blight of so overhanging death was love. From this time the arrow of the little god, instead of the assassin's knife, was between us. The former united us, preventing the latter from separating us. For ten years as man and wife we htd ourselves as best we could, making the angles.

second decade for me of such life. Then gradually the socialpheval in Russia took on nother form—the form of revolution—and now we are contributing our means toward it.—Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

ARE WED IN SPEEDING AUTO.

Couple Married While Being Whirled Under Palm Trees in Westlake Park, Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A novel wedding occurred the other day when Max Botefuhr and Miss Avis C. Doebler, daughter of William Doebler, a retired capitalist, were married in an automobile as the car glided under the palm trees in Westlake park.

The ceremony began at the Seventh street entrance and when the car arrived at the Sixth street entrance the happy young couple were man and wife. When the automobile entered the park Rev. Cassius Morton Carter, pastor of the First Baptist church, arose with book in hand "We are standing here together in the sight of God and man—"

"Go a little slower," said the bridegroom-to-be. "We want it all to happen in the park."

The minister continued:

"To join together in the holy bonds of matrimony this man and this—"

"Oh, my hat!" exclaimed Miss Doebler as the palm leaf became entangled in a ribbon.

The minister continued: "If anyone can show just cause why they should not be joined together, let him now stand forward or forever—"

"Don't stop the car!" said Botefuhr. "I want it to keep moving."

"Hold his peace," the minister was looking pretty serious.

"Do you, Max Botefuhr, take Avis Doebler to be your beloved —"

"I wish papa was here," said Miss Doebler, "he would enjoy this!"

"Wife to honor and cherish until death do you part?"

"I do," said Botefuhr.

"Do you, Avis Doebler, take Max Botefuhr to be your beloved husband, to honor and cherish until death do you part?"

"I do," said Miss Doebler.

The car was within ten feet of the Sixth street entrance when the minister said: "Then I pronounce you man and wife."

Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow, it strayed away one summer day where lambs should never go;
And Mary sat her quickly down and tears streamed from her eyes; she never found the lamb because she did not advertise
And Mary had a brother who kept a village store; he sat him down and smoked a pipe and watched the open door. And as the people passed along but did not stop to buy, John still sat and smoked his pipe and blinked his sleepy eye. And so the sheriff closed him out, but still he lingered near, and Mary came along to drop a sympathetic tear.
"How is it, sister, can you tell, why other merchants here sell all their goods so readily and thrive from year to year?"
Remembering her own bad luck, the maiden then replies: "These other fellows get there John, be cause they advertise."

Glass Calamity How Disproven.

The only issue presented by Mr. Glass why he should be United States Senator is the alleged extravagance of Virginia during Governor Swanson's administration, which he claimed had bankrupted the state. He has continued this attack, though the records in the Auditor's office show that Governor Swanson left a surplus in the treasury when he retired, consisting of cash, $787,449.10, and had expended during his administration $549 854 47 in the purchase of State bonds before they were due, leaving the aggregate surplus accumulated during his administration of bonds and of cash of $1,337,303 57; being $142,701.34 greater surplus than when he assumed the office of Governor, on the first of February, 1906. These are undisputed official figures.

Mr. Glass, in order to advance his candidacy, has claimed that the State was bankrupt, and had a depleted treasury. Now comes the information from official sources again that on the 19th of June, of this year, there was in the treasury $613,146 82. The auditor has just given his check to the Second Auditor of $420,000 to pay the interest on the public debt. This will pay all interest due by the state. After paying this interest, the state will have an ample balance in the treasury to meet all of its demands.

The records show that the revenues of the state from the first of January to the 19th of June, this year, has exceeded those of the corresponding months of 1910 by $432,147 24. Thus, the finances of Virginia are in a flourishing condition There will be no necessity to borrow any money. The officials of the state say that every demand has been and will be promptly met and no necessity exists for the borrowing of any money.

We are glad to note that the revenues of the state are in such excellent condition as to prevent the state from being injured by the campaign of misrepresentation projected by Mr. Glass. Patriotism should have prevented him from endangering the vital functions of state government confided to it by the people.

The splendid financial condition of the state, the improved conditions of its institutions, and the prompt payment of the interest on the first of July clearly disprove the vicious attacks of Mr. Glass and his partisans upon the administration of state affairs by the democratic party, its governors, general assembly and state officials. The democratic party in the last gubernatorial election successfully met similar assaults then made by Mr. Kent, and it will rebuke on the 7th of September, these last attacks of Mr. Glass and his supporters.—Alexander Gazette.

Different Now, of Course.

"Civil service reform has given us a splendid army of civil servants. It wasn't always so."

The speaker, Mayor Whitlock of Toledo, smiled.

"When I was writing my first short stories," he resumed, "we had civil servants of a different stamp. An elderly resident of my native Urbana sought out, back in those days, his congressman.

"'Congressman,' he said, 'I supported you at the polls, and now I expect you to get my boy a good civil service job.'

"'All right, friend,' the congressman answered, 'what can your boy do?'

"'Do?' snorted the other. 'What can he do? By crimes, man, it he could do anything, do you think I'd be bothering you?'"

Motherly Advice.

Margery was playing school with her dolls. The class in physiology was reciting.

"Now children," she said, "what are your hands for?"

"To keep clean," was the prompt reply.

"Yes," repeated the little teacher, "hands were given us so we could keep them clean, and 'member, too," she added, "we must keep our feet clean 'cause there might be an accident."—Metropolitan Magazine.

We have received a card from our old friend, Dr. F. H. Killer. He is at Lucerne, Switzerland, among the alpine scenery. He says that country has got to be seen to be appreciated, it is so beautiful. You know, or probably have heard, that Switzerland is the "beauty spot" of the world. Oh, how we would love to be with you and behold such grandeur.

On last Sunday night, Rev. J. D. McAllister, State Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia, preached a sermon on the liquor question, in the M. E. church here. The subject was handled in a masterly manner, and a great many truths were pointed out, which no doubt, astonished many of his hearers. There is no doubt, but that liquor is the greatest curse in this world and the hardest one to get rid of. Quite a handsome donation was made to help carry on the work of the League. We would have heard a great deal more from this able speaker, had it not been that he had to leave on the ten o'clock train. All were well pleased with his discourse.

J. H. Durham requests us to announce that if he is re-elected Sheriff that E. L. Buchanan of Pembroke District, H. Douglas Johnston of Walker's Creek District, and J. G. French, his present deputy of Pearisburg District, will be his deputies for the next term. These deputies are well known by almost every one, and are among our most popular gentlemen of the county, and will make efficient officers. The county could be thoroughly searched, and no better men, in our opinion, could be found.

Little Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Painter, cut his foot severely Friday last on an old broken ink bottle some one threw in the street. Several stitches had to be taken to close the cut. It is a shame that some people have no better sense than to do such things. The older people wear shoes, but most children do not, particularly in the summer, therefore, the children have to suffer for the carelessness of some grown people who ought to know and do know better, than to throw broken glass in the streets.

From the 17th to the 21st of this month will be Rural Week at the University of Virginia. There will be addresses delivered by many prominent speakers, upon as many different subjects. The public is cordially invited to all sessions. The entire program is of a very practical nature and of especial interest to farmers, all women, ministers, educators, rural school officials, legislators, village business men, and all those who feel that country life deserves a fuller consideration on the part of the public that it has hitherto received.

The little child of Mr. and Mrs. Will Woodrum, who was so badly bitten by a dog one day last week, was taken to Richmond Thursday last to be treated at a hospital there, the physicians here thinking it best for fear that something might happen to the little one. Its parents and Dr. W D Woolwine accompanied it. Miss Zolla Woodrum, an aunt, has since joined them. Word has been received that the child was getting along nicely, and everything points to its being cured in a short time. We are very glad to hear this and hope it will turn out to be true.

Robert Lucas of Maybrook, has got his "dander up" and has ordered two of the best make of Colts' revolvers, and says he will shoot the first one who scares his horses with an auto. Several of his neighbors, we understand, have purchased these frightful things. We would advise those who do not want to be a "dead nigger in a wood pile," to "steer clear" of his premises or meeting him in the road. Some Lucas' we know of (not a thousand miles from here, either), are a "little windy" in their talk, but when it comes from Robert, you can "bet on it" being true. A word to the wise, etc.

Sprains require careful treatment. Keep quiet and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely. It will remove the soreness and quickly restore the part to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

Married—On Sunday after noon last, at the residence of the bride's father near this place, by Rev. J. L. Prater, Robert L. son of John Blackburn of Narrows, and Miss Georgia L. Vaughn. Soon after the ceremony the happy couple started for the Narrows, the home of the groom. We hope your days together will be joyous ones.

William Carter, who has been on "run side" about a month working at Maybrook, has returned to Pearisburg. No where on earth like this place. Once you get a drink of "big" spring water and some of our red clay on your moccasins, you are surely doomed to remain here. This is as true as preaching, and we can cite many instances to prove what we say.

The entire block 18, consisting of seven lots, bounded by Oak, Poplar and Fifth streets, the property of S. C. Whitaker, was sold by Judge W. S. Mathews, Monday and was bought in by Judge A. A. Skeen late of Clintwood, who it is said, will erect a residence on the site of the Whitaker home burned some two years ago. The property brought $2,800 and was appraised at $3,750.—Norton Free Press.

MARRIED AT TAZEWELL.

Mrs. Tillie Stith and Fred Charlton Surprise Their Friends.

A wedding which came as a surprise to their many friends and acquaintances occurred last Thursday afternoon at Tazewell when Mrs. Tillie Stith and Fred C. Charlton were united in marriage at home of Rev. Mr. Roberts. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock and was attended by Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Douglass of Bluefield, who accompanied the couple to Tazewell. Mr. and Mrs. Charlton will spend a few days at Pearisburg, where they will visit the groom's parents, after which they will visit Craig Healing Springs and other points before returning to this city. Mrs. Stith, who came here from Louisville, was employed by the Ferrell Mercantile Company, which store has lost two popular clerks during the last two days, Miss Karretta Atkinson having been married Monday to Alonzo Davis of of Pulaski. Both weddings came as big surprises, even the closest friends of the girls not being in the secret.—Bluefield Telegraph.

Mr. Charlton was born and reared at Bluff City, and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Charlton. He is also a salesman for the Amicon Fruit Company of Bluefield, W. Va. We wish them a long, happy and prosperous life.

GRAND CELEBRATION OF THE "FOURTH" BY THE MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA, AT NARROWS, VA.

Opening of the New Steel Bridge at that Place, Riding and Driving Contests, Tournament, Ball Game, Etc.

Immense Crowd in Attendance.

The big event of the year in our county, was the Woodmen's Fourth at Narrows. Never before in the history of that young, enterprising and rapidly growing town, has such a number of people assembled within its limits on any occasion. Five trains unloaded there on that day, the anniversary of the most eventful and glorious in the history of our country. From a careful estimate made on the basis of tickets sold by the railroads there were about 4,000 present, and participating in the amusements of the occasion. The programme of the day as published was carried out, with the exception of the ball game in the afternoon, which was prevented by a heavy down pour of rain about the time it was scheduled to begin.

In the first item on the programme, was Single Driving Contest, the first prize was awarded to Mr. H. C. Johnson and the second to Mr. Dan St. Clair; second on the programme Best Horseback Rider, the first prize was won by Mr. Dan St. Clair and the second by Dr. A. S. Cover; third on programme Riding Contest by ladies over 18 years, the prize was awarded to Mrs. Grover C. Johnson; fourth on programme, Riding Contest by girls under 16 years, the first prize was awarded Miss Nancy St. Clair and the second to Miss Marcia Lent; fifth on programme Double Driving Outfit contest, the prize was won by Mr. Dan St. Clair; sixth on programme, Best Pair Draught Horses, first prize won by Mr. W. T. Cuddy of Lurich, and second by Mr. W. H. Thomas of Bluff City.

The most expensive prizes given was in the draught horse contest. Seventh on the programme was the tournament in which the first prize, a genuine Buena Vista saddle was won by Mr. Atlee Smith and the second prize, a fine riding bridle, by Mr. E. A. Hopkins. Eighth and last on programme, the ball game, was not played on account of the rain, but there was a game played in the morning by the Athens and Oakvale nines, resulting in 7 to 2 in favor of the Oakvales.

The receipts over and above expenses was about $150. Although the day was the warmest of the year up to date and the hottest for many years, yet, the crowd was in the best of good humor and seemed to enjoy the day; and the order, as remarked by many, was the best ever known in this section in so large an assemblage of people. While there was some drinking there were very few persons drunk.

The number and good order of the people in attendance on the occasion has greatly encouraged the promoters of the enterprise, and the Modern Woodmen are now already considering the feasibility of either buying or leasing ground sufficient for the purpose and enclose and prepare it in fitting manner to accommodate the large and likely-to-be larger growing crowd that will annually assemble there to celebrate their "Fourth." Stockmen from all parts of the Southwest Virginia and from West Virginia will be invited to enter and exhibit their stock. If rightly managed, and we have no doubt it will be—judging by the intelligence and energy of the gentlemen composing The Modern Woodmen at that place, the stock show at that place could be made the best in the Southwest and perhaps of the State. We trust those gentlemen will push this contemplated enterprise to a glorious achievement.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

Are You Hard on Shoes?

Many a woman thinks she is hard on shoes when the fact of the matter is her shoes have tricked her. If your shoes go to pieces unreasonably soon it's the fault of the maker. WANTS MILLIONS FOR GOOD ROADS.

Senator Swanson Introduced a Bill For Federal Government to Pay The Bill.

Washington, July 7.---Declaring that good roads would save the American people $250,000,000 annually, while bad roads impose such a "mud tax" every year upon the people who haul their products to market over poor country highways, Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia, delivered today a strong speech in the Senate in advocacy of his bill for federal appropriations for the improvement of public roads.

The Swanson bill provides that that the Government appropriate $20,000,000 annually for the next five years for improving the post roads and rural free delivery routes used by the Government. The appropriation is limited to post roads and rural free delivery routes to remove all Constitutional objections that might possibly be urged.

This was Senator Swanson's maiden speech in the Senate and he was accorded close attention by his colleagues on both sides, who were anxious to hear him despite the sweltering heat. The strength of his argument and his eloquence earned for him the congratulations of his colleagues.

"There is no question before the American people today," declared Senator Swanson, "more important than the improvement of the public roads and highways. The progress of this nation in nearly all directions has been phenomenal. We have established our pre-eminence in most things. We have become the greatest manufacturing people in the world. The products of our factories exceed those of Britain and Continental Europe combined. Our mines furnish the world more than one-half of its minerals products and wealth. Our plains and prairies are recognized as the granaries of the world. Cotton continues the king of plants and the world's clothing makers are dependent upon the white fields of the South. We occupy today the foremost place in the world's commerce. Our wealth is greater than that of any other nation. Recently we have become supreme in finance. The worlds financial heart now throbs in New York. Its pulsation affects the world. We surpass all other nations in money spent for primary and general education, in the creation of colleges and splendid universities.

"Our progress in these directions has been so wonderful that its story reads more like romance than history. Yet, amazing as are these varied achievements, we have the poorest public roads and highways of any civilized nation. Of the 2,155,000 miles of public roads in the United States, less than 200,000 miles are macadamized and improved with hard surfacing. More than nine-tenths of the public highways of the United States during rainy seasons are almost impassable. No other enlightened people are cursed with such a wretched condition."

Senator Swanson said neglect in this respect had been one of the greatest misfortunes that had affected Americans as a people. The remedy should be applied as quickly as possible. The internal commerce of the United States, he said, exceeded the inter-foreign commerce of the entire world, and it was estimated that 90 per cent. of the internal commerce must be hauled over the public roads. The average haul was 9.4 miles, the average cost of hauling these products 23 cents per ton mile.

"The cost of hauling per mile over the splendid roads of France," continued Mr. Swanson, "is on an average of 7 cents per ton mile. The average cost in England and Germany is about 11 cents per ton mile. If the more important and main lines of our public roads system were as improved as those of France, Germany and England our products could be hauled over our entire system of roads at a cost of 12 cents per ton mile. This would result in an annual saving in this item of hauling alone to the people of the United States of more than $250,000,000.

"This," said Senator Swanson, "is the annual "mud tax" paid each year by the people of the United States in hauling their products over poor country roads. This loss, if wisely and properly expended, would in 20 years macadamize and furnish hardsurfacing to all the public roads in the United States."

"The poor condition of American roads generally was having bad effect upon the American people, Senator Swanson declared, pointing out that poor roads make it unprofitable to market much of the products of the farm, and was arresting production in places where cost of transportation exceeded the selling price.

"In many places," said Mr. Swanson "farmers fail to raise certain crops because the cost of hauling them over miserable country roads is so great that they sustain loss instead of profit. The national loss from this source amounts annually to millions of dollars. Another great detriment has come to the nation from wretched roads that have forced people to leave rural sections and congregate in towns. Each census discloses that our urban population is rapidly increasing at the expense of our rural sections. It means an immense national loss, not only financially but morally, intellectually, and physically. The pleasures and profits of country life are dependent largely upon the condition of country roads. Good school facilities and good public roads go hand in hand."

Death of Popular Traveling Man.

JUDGE MARTIN WILLIAMS TALKS ON SCHOOLS.

Practical Observations by a Practical Man and History of Free Public Education in Virginia.

The following speech was delivered by Judge Martin Williams before the Normal School at Martinsville, Va., on Friday, the 7th inst., and we gladly publish it in our columns:

"The Hon. Martin Williams of Giles county, addressed the Normal and its friends Friday evening. He was introduced by Hon. J. M. Hooker of Patrick county, who congratulated the Normal on having a visiting speaker whosis one of Virginia's foremost legislators. He said that Mr. Williams, as chairman of the committee on affairs of schools and colleges, has used his ability as a practical thinker in accomplishing much for the public school system of the State.

Mr. Williams said that he could not call himself an educator but that he did know something about the subject he had been asked to speak on—the relation of the legislature of the State to the public school system of the State. He has been in very close touch with all the school legislation for the past eight years. He called attention to the fact that Henry county had the first public schools in the State of Virginia, allowed by an act of legislature in 1845 which made public schools optional with counties. His great grand father, for whom Martinsville is named, had much to do with establishing the system here. But the public school system is comparatively new in Virginia. It is scarcely forty years old. Thomas Jefferson recommended a general public school system to the Virginia legislature a century ago, it was not adopted Not until 1869-70 was the public school provided for by the State legislature, the system to go into effect a few years later. Virginia was the first Southern State after the civil war to establish public schools.

Mr. Williams paid his respects to the profession of teaching. He declared that the old order had passed away, the old style head of the family, who looked after the mental and often the moral welfare of his children, has been replaced by the modern busy man who turns his children over to the public school teacher. The hero of early days was the physical champion, the man who could roll the biggest log, the expert marksman. The hero of today is the intellectual and moral leader. The only possible training ground for this leader is the public school. There is still prejudice against it, but it is winning favor and support for it has no substitute, and the speaker takes his stand to do all in his power to perfect that system. Mr. Williams is the father of the high school law of 1906 which marks a great stride found in the system.

He has confidence in the teacher's ability to accomplish much for the system. The teachers by co operation can secure favorable legislation, for they are 10,000 in number and the legislators are quick to respond to a united call from constituents. The teacher knows what the system needs and should make demands from trustees, boards, and the State. The State has a debt of $27,000,000 and no land reserve for school purposes, but she is willing to see her duty and gradually build up the public school. The important part of the system is the primary school for the mass of the citizenship of the State.

Mr. Williams expressed himself as being in favor of the pension for the teachers. He introduced the bill in 1905 at the demand of a delegation of twelve teachers from Richmond, headed by Miss Webb. There was a hard fight but the bill was passed because the teachers of the State were for it almost unanimously. The bill may be defective but it is sound in principle and Mr. Williams hopes the day will come when Virginia will equal the State of Michigan which pays $100,000 annually as a pension fund in addition to the one per cent. salaries paid by the teachers.

The board of examiners does not seem so essential now, said Mr. Williams, since competent county superintendents have been secured at respectable salaries. The examiners, he thinks, have done a most important work in creating public sentiment in favor of the public schools.

Virginia is not yet ready for a State wide compulsory school law. Sentiment is not strong enough for that. Local option in compulsory attendance is given, and already four or five counties have adopted it.

Mr. Williams closed his address by saying that Virginia always had been ready with leaders for any crisis. She furnished a national leader in Washington and a leader for the South in Lee. The leader for future calls are now in the training, and the trainers of these heroes are the public school teachers in Virginia."

NOT ONE PRINTER IN STATE PENITENTIARY.

Of all the ancient and honorable trades and professions whose votaries are represented in the State Penitentiary, that of the printer is missing. An inquiry set in motion by Governor Mann reveals this fact. There are preachers and doctors and lawyers and cashiers and blacksmiths and factory girls and teachers and clothiers and cooks, but not a single printer.

The Governor asked about it. Superintendent James B. Wood expressed his regrets at not being in position to accommodate the inquirer, but among all the 1,200 boarders at this institution, there was not one who would own up to being a graduate in the art of printing.

A publisher of a country newspaper in Virginia made the rather unusual request for information regarding any printers who might be incarcerated. He needed one in his town, where labor of this sort is perhaps difficult to procure. So with a desire perhaps to reform some one, he asked for data If he found a worthy case where the term had half expired, it was his intention to bring the matter to the attention of the directors with a view to securing a parole by a promise of employment.—Richmond Times Dispatch.

This goes to show conclusively that the printer is the smartest and best individual we have. He is supposed to be "smart" anyway, as he furnishes intelligence for the world, and while advising other people how to keep out of meanness, takes his own advice and keeps out himself. Oh, that everybody was a printer! What a glorious world we would have!

Right in your busiest season when you have the least time to spare you are most likely to take diarrhoea and lose several days' time, unless you have Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand and take a dose on the first appearance of the disease. For sale by all dealers.

THE SABBATH.

Reader, ponder these words: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," and if you have hitherto failed so to do; if you have used it for worldly pursuits and selfish indulgence and have kept away from the worship of God and His service let this holy day now rise in your estimation; sanctify it henceforth by using the public means of grace, by study of the holy Scriptures, by instructing your family in them and by private prayer. Make it a delight. Depend upon it the Lord's Day is the foundation on which, only true happiness in private life and public morality can safely rest. Stand by it as a good citizen and a good servant of Jesus Christ and preserve it for the honor of God and the promotion of private happiness and public weal; and so let it go down to the latest general.—Francis C. Cantine.

Dewberries and blackberries are ripe and the average housewife's hands are slightly painted, making jam, jellies and canning the "seedy" but precious things.

The temperature of the weather seems to be very changeable of late. Last Friday morning the thermometer registered a little above 50. Fires felt real comfortable.

Rev. D. P. Rogers will begin a series of services at the Green Valley Presbyterian church on the 24th of July. He will be assisted by the pastor, Rev. T. B. Sheldon.

It seems "old nick," that accursed stuff brought here from Bluefield and Roanoke in a jug or bottle, has to raise the dickens here once in a while. Will it always be thus?

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. B. Ellison of Hoge's Store, a few days ago, twins. There were also twins born to a family at Bluff City a few days ago. Who says Giles county is decreasing in population?

There are about a million automobiles in the country and a certain senator wants the government to tax them ten dollars each and use the money in building good roads. All of us who have no automobiles are in favor of that proposition, and think it a good one.

Mrs. R. E. Woods and son of Welch, W. Va., returned home Monday after several days visit to her sisters, Misses Lucy and Lizzie Carper of Prospect Dale.

We return thanks to Mrs. Kate Woods for a delicious mess of home-grown peas, the first of the season, the first we had. They were beauties and tasted better than they looked. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. So do we.

We received the othar day a very pretty post card from Mr. M. G. Sonner, once a resident of this county, but now of New Britain, Conn. He wishes us a successful year and lots of success for old Giles. We thank you very much for your interest shown in us and hope you will be successful in your undertakings. Old Giles is improving all the time, and is now, or soon will be, the banner county of the State.

John Peters, the "devil" in this office (all printing offices have what they call a devil) has gone to Oak Hill, W. Va., to live—for a while at least. John was a good worker, and for the time he worked for us, was about the aptest boy at the trade we ever saw. He was a rapid and clean compositor, and we hated to see him leave. We hope he will prosper in his new place of business—that of clerk in a country store.

Just received a full line of Selz-Royal Blue Shoes for men and women. A written guarantee with every pair. Call and be convinced that they are the best shoe ever sold in the county.

KING & ROBERTSON,
Poplar Hill, Va.

J. Alf Brewer of Bristol, Tenn., an old subscriber of ours, gave us a very friendly call on Monday. He and his family are visiting relatives at Hoge's Store and this place. Always glad to shake hands with old friends.

A game of ball was played here Saturday afternoon between the Pearisbug and Hoge's Store nines, the score standing 11 to 9 in favor of the latter. In a previous game, sometime ago, Pearisburg won. Now for the winner, best two out of three.

Charles Dulaney of Walker's Creek District, announces himself in this issue for Supervisor of that district. Mr. Dulaney is well and favorably known by most every one in his district, is a real gentleman, and if elected, will make a good officer.

Next Sunday at eleven o'clock, Rev. M. W. Royall will give a report from the Baptist World Alliance in the Baptist church here. In the evening at eight o'clock, his subject will be "The Rejected Stone." Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, he will preach at Berean church.

F. P. Snidow Co., Inc., of Pembroke, are going to give their customers, and others also, a rare treat in the way of a vaudeville show, Saturday, August 5th, at 7 o'clock in the evening. Everybody should take this in. Read their big advertisement in this issue.

Some of the men in our town, who have nothing to do and never did do much, have got the aviators fever, and are flying kites. We expect to see some one dangling to the end of one, thinking they are an aviator. Be on your guard, and do not attempt such a thing.

And still they come, the more the merrier. George B. Eaton of Walker's Creek district, announces himself in this issue as a candidate for Road Commissioner of that district. Mr. Eaton is a farmer and knows what it means to them to have good roads. If elected, will, no doubt, see to it that the roads are put in the proper condition.

We had the pleasure of taking dinner on Saturday last with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lucas of Pembroke, which we certainly enjoyed. They have a beautiful home and surroundings, and the place is made the more cheerful by the bright countenances of this happy couple. We thank them very much and wish them a long life of happiness.

Walter Graham, superintendent of the Narrows Mining Co., was in town Monday. He says the prospects for iron ore at that place is very encouraging, and promises to yield in abundance. They are also getting ready to erect a number of dwelling houses for their employes. We are proud to hear of such things as these springing up in our county, as it will give work to many of our unemployed.

In giving an account of the Fourth of July celebration at Narrows, in our last week's issue, we omitted mentioning the best part of the celebration, that of the Wabash Band, and for which, we are very sorry. This band is composed of twenty-one pieces, and as many nice and good looking men as anyone would wish to see. The music by them was up to the standard, and helped to make the day really what it was, the best celebration ever held in that place.

Last Friday afternoon we left here bound for Eggleston to have a little recreation and get out in the country. The fields of grain looked fine along our route, and give promise of an abundant harvest. Friday night we stayed at the Bishop Hotel, where we were treated with the greatest politeness. At supper and breakfast, we had the great dish of old New River catfish for each meal, which we devoured with a ravenous appetite, and which surely, we did cherish, being something rare to us. After we had breakfast, we started for Wingo, and wended our way to Hoge's Store and to Pembroke, where we whiled the hours away until we took our departure for home. The merchants at these places have a choice and large line of goods on hand and seem to be prospering and the best of sprits.

We hope that he will not have to sing again for any big occasion until he can have sufficient time to completely recover his voice. We did not have an opportunity to join the choir, nevertheless, we enjoyed the music. We were disappointed in not getting to hear Dailey sing.

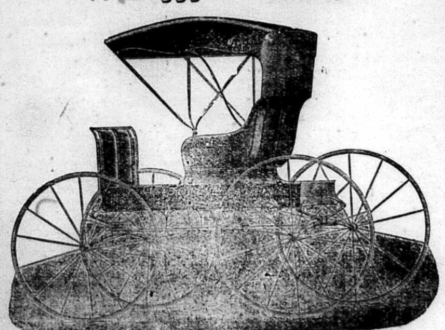
THE HAYDOCK.
A Buggy of Quality.



A BUGGY WITHOUT COMPETITION.
Chance of a Lifetime.

The question is, do you want quality or price? What is true of a Buggy is true of a house, a piece of furniture, a suit of cloths, a pair of shoes: It is true of all manufactured things, especially all PAINTED things. The wear depends upon the QUALITY.

One maker's BUGGY will last five, ten, twenty years—depends on the use you give it. Another maker's will last—no one can tell. It may last a year, two years, or it may rattle and squeak and go to pieces in six months Both buggies look pretty much alike when new. You couldn't see ten dollars between them. Yet one will last ten years, another may be ten months. What kind of a BUGGY do you want? Which kind is best for a buyer to buy or a seller to sell? Consider the quality first and let the price be a secondary matter.

You get something more than four wheels—a gear top, body, and a pair of shafts, in the Famous HAYDOCK. You get a Vehicle that is finished in all its details, and QUALITY that can't be excelled. A cheap buggy with a cheap cost satisfies sometimes—but never enthuses. With a HAYDOCK purchaser, it is different; his satisfaction changes quickly into enthusiasm; his enthusiasm sows seeds every day of public confidence in the quality of the HAYDOCK.

Mr. Prospective Buggy-buyer, let this sink in, and when in the market for a Buggy of Quality, call on STATE'S FINANCES ARE SATISFACTORY.

Balance in Treasury $315,000 and All Claims, Including Pensions, Will Be Met Promptly.

Richmond, Va., July 10.---No political pessimist need fear that the Commonwealth of Virginia will fail to meet its obligations or that the treasury of the State is in anything but a most satisfactory condition, according to Governor William Hodges Mann. After careful investigation of the condition of the treasury, as reported by Auditor Donahue at the opening of business on July 1, the Governor has prepared a statement showing that there is a very substantial balance in the State treasury, that the interest and sinking fund obligations of the State have been met and that in confirmation of the estimates made by the executive in January, the State will pass through the lean months of the late summer and will enter a new fiscal year with a balance on the right side of the ledger.

Discussing the matter this morning, the Governor gave out the following exclusive interview:

"On the 1st of July, 1911, after payment of school apportionment; $420,000 interest on the public debt the appropriations as they fell due, and the regular expenses of the government, there was in the treasury to the credit of the State a balance of $315,624.95.

"The months of July, August and September are known as lean months, that is the revenue coming into the other months of the year, but basing an estimate on the experience of other years it is safe to say enough revenue will be received to promptly pay the Confederate pensions in September and meet all other demands upon the treasury closing the fiscal year with a balance to the credit of the State.

"This statement is made after receiving an informal report from the auditor of public accounts, and verifies the statement made by me in January of this year.

"Much of the credit for the present very satisfactory condition of the State's finances is due to the admirable manner in which Auditor Donohue has discharged his duties. He has called for prompt settlements and been met by remarkably prompt payments by the treasurers of the State, who almost without exception, have closed their accounts with the State. Out of rather more than $2,500,000 taxes due on real, personal property, incomes and capitations, all except about $15,000 had been paid on the first of July, and the entire amount will probably be collected by the 15th of this month, a record of which the auditor should be proud. Certainly the Governor is proud that his appointee should have done such creditable work.

"This statement can be verified at the auditor's office ought to satisfy every man interested in the subject that financial conditions are excellent in Virginia, and that they are being carefully looked after by the auditor.

"It will be noted that the $120,000 due to the sinking fund has been promptly turned over to the board of sinking fund commissioners, and checks for $420,000 of interest were sent out on the 1st of July. When it is remembered that about $4,000,444 has been paid on the debt of the State since its settlement with the creditors, and that the sinking fund is receiving annually $120,000 appropriated by the Legislature, and $52,641, the State's dividend on its Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac railroad stock, it must appear that the State debt is in a very satisfactory condition and in all human probability will be paid before it matures."

Sprains require careful treatment. Keep quiet and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely. It will remove the soreness and quickly restore the part to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

THE UNITED STATES TREASURY.

When Uncle Sam last Friday night counted his cash to see what balance he had at the end of the fiscal year he found a surplus of $28,000,000---a tidy sum any way you take it.

In the treasury offices was working balance of $38,900,000, while the amount to the credit of the United States in national bank depositories was $44,6000.00.

This with such proceeds of the $50,000,000 bond issue as are still to come in, will make Uncle Sam "comfy" for the present.

But it doesn't mean that he hasn't spent more than he ought to. The figure mentioned in connection with the surplus relates only to ordinary expenses and incomes. When income and outgo is considered inclusive of the Panama Canal a deficit of $4,500,000 is revealed.

During the past year there has been a notable falling off in customs receipts, which have declined about $20,000,000 in the receipts from the internal revenues.

Further additions to the total for the internal revenue receipts---$309,000,000---are expected and the aggregate, in all likelihood, will be increased by $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 more. This will break all records. The maximum receipts heretofore came in the year 1866 and amounted to $309,000,000.

Taken all in all, the condition of the treasury is considered satisfactory. It will be closely watched, however, for it has an important bearing on the tariff policy of the Democrats.

EDITOR VIRGINIAN:—I am always glad to see Friday come, to scan your pages for home news. You generally catch me on the fly that day.

Have just returned from a stroll through Carroll county, where I find things looming up and prospects brightening. The plans for water power development now seem wonderful; beyond the comprehension of ordinary people. Their blue prints are about as wide as Carroll county, and I reckon fully as long as the muddy end of New River. In fact, they are breaking it off in great big, great big chunks. I stood off amazed and wondered if there was even a crown for me, but find their present demands for water supplied by a pipe line, laid from a reservoir far up in the hills. And for the cottagers, the resident front, another line is soon to be laid up into the mountains to catch the drippings of the snow. So I made no effort to push my well drill in there. About 300 men are employed in the various departments, bridging the river, carpentering, sawmilling, cleaning up, etc., getting ready to lay concrete. The folks over in Carroll are getting suspicious that something is going to be done.

The old still is hid further back in the laurel (too many strangers about). Good laurel rhododendron, the mountain dew, is issued to them in mighty small quantities.

There is no especial demand for laborers. A few grade hands extending the siding for the machinery. Occasionally, a carpenter is put to work. Within a month things will be humming.

Material is scarce, and until they get better facilities, it will be so and have to go slow. Wages for carpenters is $2.50 per day; grade hands, $1.25; board per week, $4 50.

Local showers have visited most parts of the country and it is fairly seasonable and crops look very well, though it has been very dry in some parts of the county.

Lambs are fat; stock in general look well. Grazing has kept up fairly well. But very little grass on the meadows to mow.

With fond remembrance of Giles' hills and dales.

DIVORCE COURT JUDGE'S RULES FOR WEDDED BLISS.

Chicago Jurist Declares Mothers-In-Law are Foremost Trouble Makers.

Judge Petit of Chicago, who has just completed his annual six weeks calendar, made up mostly of divorce suits, has come to the conclusion that parents of young married people are largely to blame for family troubles.

"The mothers-in law are foremost trouble makers," said the judge. "I have all reverence for mothers and motherhood, but they must not argue with their daughter-in-law or son-in-law but must realize that they are individuals and have their work to do in the world. Mother can give advice when asked for it.

"Summer resorts, winter resorts and flat life can be blamed for many divorces. It is bad for husband and wife to be separated by trips away from home.

"My advice to husbands who wish to avoid divorce is this:

"Don't quote mother.

"Call up your wife while at business and ask how she is, and say that you called her up just to hear her voice.

"Bring her a box of candy.

"One of the new books that she is interested in.

"A flower, even if it is faded and you have picked it up off the street.

"A pretty pin or handkerchief.

"And don't you ever lay your head on your pillow at night without having done something to gain and obtain a firmer hold on your wife's love.

"Kiss her every day.

"At least once a month meet her downtown and take her to dinner and the theatre.

"Don't ever stop courting, for as soon as you do, some other man will begin.

"Make your wife your companion.

"Take her out with you, and when you have to have a big time take your wife along, and the divorce evil will be lessened.

"For the wives I should advise:

"Don't quote father.

"Pet your husband; he is only a big kid.

"Meet him at the door with a smile.

"Dress as carefully as you did when he came courting.

"Wear the color he likes you in and the style of gown.

"Have something in the way of a surprise dish for dinner.

"Read the papers and magazines and be your husband's intellectual equal.

"Keep up with him in any special line of work.

"Encourage his hobby.

"Be sympathetic, and do not tell him all the troubles of the day: he has had his own, more significant and important individually than all yours put together.

"Keep his clothes in order, a clean house and good food.

"Your husband is then yours forever and ever. No chorus girl or pretty stenographer can take him away from you. But keep him, or somebody else will snap him up and make him think she and she alone ever did or will understand him."

Mr. Sibold has held this position for the past two years, which is a good recommend for him, and shows him to be a faithful and trusted officer. It re-elected, he will, we are sure, do his duty as he has done heretofore.

In Tazewell and other counties where the Republicans have a majority they nominate their candidates for county officers, therefore they should not kick because Democrats in Giles where they have a majority, nominate their candidates. If nominating county officers is right in Tazewell, where the Republicans are in the majority, why not right in Giles, where the Democrats are in the majority?

A party of "trampers" enjoyed a picnic on Angels' Rest last Thursday. Dinner was served at the big spring and the afternoon spent in sight seeing and a general good time. Those from out of town were: Mrs. Hoge Mason, Miss Susie Litz, the Misses Williams and Miss Irene Easley.

T. B. King announces himself in this issue as a candidate for re-election for the office of Supervisor of Walker's Creek district, subject to a mass meeting of the Democrats of the county, should one be held. Mr. King has held this office for the past term, and as every one knows, has discharged his duties fearlessly and without equivocation. Should he be re-elected, there is no doubt, he would fill the office as he has done in the past, in a manner well befitting the office and the man.

W. D. Woolwine of Los Angeles, Cal., July 18th, says: "Enclosed you will find a draft on New York for $1.00, being the amount due for my subscription to you good paper for the year ending in June. Lybrook and Dr. Henderson. From there they proceeded to Lexington, Natural Bridge and Buchanan, at the latter place they stopped and paid Dr. and Mrs. B. Hobson, a nice visit. After stopping there a few hours, they proceeded on their journey home. Mrs. Hoge has been in delicate health for some time, and this trip greatly buoyed up her spirit, and we hope will tend to improve her health. Their trip consisted of about 450 miles.

EFFIGIENCY--EFFIGIENCY--EFFIGIENCY.

Thousands of business men are impatiently getting along with inefficient, indifferent help simply because they are not able to find men of the right type. They want young men with ambition, energy, education and training.

Very Serious

It is a very serious matter to ask for one medicine and have the wrong one given you. For this reason we urge you in buying to be careful to get the genuine—

THEDFORD'S
BLACK-DRAUGHT
Liver Medicine

The reputation of this old, reliable medicine, for constipation, indigestion and liver trouble, is firmly established. It does not imitate other medicines. It is better than others, or it would not be the favorite liver powder, with a larger sale than all others combined.

TESTIMONIALS.

Pearisburg, Va, July 24, 1911.

This is to certify that we have used a Majestic Range for eight years, and like it better than all the other ones we have tried. It does the work perfectly and satisfactorily in every way. Would not do without a Majestic for any consideration.

Mrs. P. F. St. Clair,
ANNIE DEE ST. CLAIR.

Pearisburg, Va., July 27, 1911.

This is to certify that I own and am now using a "Majestic" Range, and find it superior to all others. Could not do without a Majestic.

FRANK B. MILLER, D. D. S.

Pearisburg, Va, July 28, 1911.

I have used the Majestic Range and found it very satisfactory for seven years.

Mrs. C. L. King.

MONDAY, AUGUST 7th.

SET OF Ware Free!

If you call at our store during our Majestic Demonstration Week and allow us to show you the many advantages and superior qualities of the Great and Majestic Range, and will purchase one at the regular price, we will give you Free the beautiful and useful Souvenir Set of Ware illustrated in this advertisement. This ware is made to match the quality of the Majestic Ranges, and we know all ladies will see the beauty and utility of this set, especially the first three pieces, which are entirely new and cannot be had alone by purchase, except at a very high price. The prices of Majestic Ranges are the same, but we give the set FREE with each Majestic Range bought during the demonstration week only.

Reasons Why The Great Majestic You Should Buy.

1st. It has the reputation of being the best range money can buy.

2nd. It not only has the reputation but IS the best range made, and we will prove this to you if you will let us.

3rd. It is constructed of malleable iron, material you can't beat, and of Charcoal iron, material that resists rust 300 per cent greater than steel, is riveted together air tight. No heat escapes or cold air enters the range, thus uses very little fuel to do perfect work.

4th. The reservoir alone is worth the price of range over any other reservoir made. It boils 15 gallons of water; is heated like a tea kettle, with pocket against left hand lining, and is movable and sets on a frame, hence cannot wear out. When water gets too hot it can be moved away from fire.

Majestic Ranges use less fuel; heat more water—and heat it hotter; costs practically nothing for repairs; lasts three times as long; bakes better; easier to keep clean and gives better satisfaction than any other range on the market. If you know positively that the above statements are true, wouldn't you buy a Majestic at once?

Come in Demonstration Week and We'll Prove It to You.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R.V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Editor Virginian:

What is the necessity of the discouragement of town boys of an instinct that is in every breast, viz.: the hunt for game and cash?

For years at every meeting of our Board of Supervisors, claims have been allowed for scalps of hawks, owls, foxes, and several other carniverous birds or animals, that was not killed for the bounty, so much as for the interest above referred to. Many hunt for hours and even days and shoot anything that flies larger than a sparrow, or that runs bigger than a ground squirrel for the same reason.

The loss entailed upon the tax payers of Giles county by the depredations of all the prescribed list, is not more than one per cent. of that caused by rats and mice; and if our Board of Supervisors in their wisdom would offer, say, one cent for mice and two and one-half cents for each pair of rats ears, it would be an incentive to town and country boys for the extermination of a pest to every household in town or country, which would be decreased materially.

When one considers that the cost of chickens, eggs, grain, eatables and wearable articles, destroyed each day by these rodents, exceeds the loss in six months by virtue of all the outlaws on which a price is now paid; it does seem that a change is desirable.

If legislation is required to enable the Board of Supervisors to act in this matter, then let the slogan for the Fall be—down with rats.

Editor Virginian:

Dear Sir:—It is true that I am a stranger to you, but as a friend of one of your countrymen, I ask you to do him a favor, this is not known to him, however.

Three years ago Mr. Ottie Robertson from your county, entered The Detroit College of Law, and has just graduated from said college. His record which I have just obtained from the secretary's office (and which he would not give me) should make his friends in Virginia feel very proud. Of a class No. 56, he was one of the foremost students in his class. As a student, debater and orator, his record says "ex." In his Junior year he was chosen as one of the three to represent his college in a debate with Notre Dame University, Ind. Again in his Senior year was one of the three to debate Albion College, this State. He took part in many college debates and was very active in the Oratorical Association, of which he was a member. He declined to be one of the seven to speak at the Commencement exercises, this, I find, was on the account that he had already accepted a good position with one of the leading law firms in this city.

Base ball was his long suit, never failing to hold a position on his college team. The secretary's office also informs me that on the field, in the field-day meets, he always carried away some prizes.

Please print this for his benefit so that I can show him his work face to face.

DRASTIC BILL PASSES SENATE.

Washington, July 18.—The most drastic campaign publicity legislation ever passed in either branch of Congress was adopted by the senate late yesterday, practically without a dissenting vote. Using the pre-election publicity bill passed by the house of representatives as a basis, the senate constructed during the day a proposed law the following important features:

No candidate for the senate or house shall spend in the election more than a sum equal to 10 cents for each voter in his district or state.

No Senatorial candidate shall spend a total of more than $10,000 in the primary and general election; and no candidate for the house shall spend more than $5,000.

Publicity must be given to all primary campaign contributions and expenditures.

All general election expenses must be made before the election beginning fifteen days before election, and making publication each six days until election.

All promises of political jobs must be made public.

The bill further makes it illegal to promise political places in order to secure election support; or to aid in influencing the election of any member of a state legislature.

THE HORSE SHOW IS COMING ALONG.

Much Interest Shown All Through Southwest in this Event and Big Crowd Expected.

The Horse Show season is rapidly approaching and with its approach the interest in the big exhibition to be held in this city August 9th and 10th is growing and it is now certain that the show this year will eclipse any yet held.

There will be, perhaps, the largest number of entries ever made and some fine horses that have not been exhibited in the Pulaski Show before will be seen this year. The management is daily receiving inquiries about the show, entry requirements and other information. The interest is widely extended and from all parts come very encouraging reports as to the attendance and already many eager eyes are turned towards the Pulaski Horse Show. The number of exhibitors from Roanoke, Bristol and the intermediate points will be greater this year and not only more horses but the number of visitors from all sections will be larger.

The Pulaski Horse Show has come to be recognized as the one event of the year in Southwest Virginia for horses and horsemen and the growing interest is shown by the way people talk about the show and this year everybody is coming.

The management has the details of arrangement well in hand and already workmen have been busy at the grounds getting things in shape. The arena has been fenced off, the reserved seats are plotted and will be on sale in a short time. The electric lights will be tried out this week and it is assured that these will be better than ever before.

In short the outlook for a big show with a big crowd is most excellent.—Southwest Times.

Seemed to Give Him a New Stomach

"I suffered intensely after eating and no medicine or treatment I tried seemed to do any good," writes A. M. Youngpeters Editor of The Sun, Lake View, Ohio. "The first few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets gave me surprising relief and the second bottle seemed to give me a new stomach and perfectly good health." For sale by all dealers.

K. C. Pack of Pearisburg, announces himself in this issue as a candidate for Commissioner of the Revenue for Giles county. Mr. Pack is a young man of fine sense and ability, and would, no doubt, in our mind, make a competent official. He has as deputies, H. M. Johnston of Staffordsville, T. M. Guinn of Rich Creek and G. B. Higginbotham of Newport, all men of merit, fine standing, and will make good officess.

If advertising in the VIRGINIAN pays people who are hundreds and thousands of miles away from here, why would it not pay the merchants here to advertise? Advertising certainly pays; it will double anyone's business. If you want to sit about your store and "snore" and have nothing to do, do not advertise, but if you want to be wide awake and on the "trot" all the time, advertise in the VIRGINIAN.

This morning (Thurday) the M. E. church Sunday school will picnic at Walker's Creek, on the farm of Mr. J. W. Porterfield. All are invited from other churches, but with request that they bring a basket with good things in it, as all are expected to do this. Watermelons, bananas, etc., will be there in abundance, and no one will go dry, as lemonade by the tubfuls, will be provided. A good time is promised, and will be fulfilled, to all who may attend.

A well known Des Moines woman after suffering miserably from two days from bowel complaint, was cured by one dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by all dealers.

The editor, in company with several other notables from this place, attended the Sunday school picnic at Chapel last Saturday. The weather was fine and a large, well-behaved crowd was in attendance. As to eatables, the like of which, for richness and abundance, was never seen before. It was like the miracle Christ performed on the loaves and fishes, all ate to their hearts satisfaction and many basketfuls were carried away. There was a merry-go-round for the children, which they more than enjoyed, while the older ones took delight in a game of base ball between the Penvir and Round Bottom teams. The people of Chapel certainly know how and what it takes to make a picnic.

FARMERS EVERYWHERE

are giving their sons a business education. They realize that a business education is money wisely invested. They know that good business positions cannot be secured without a business education. They know also that a practical business education will be of great value to them at all times. Many young people from this section are planning to attend the ROANOKE NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE this fall and winter.

NORTH PEARISBURG, VA., July 31, 1911.

MR. EDITOR:—In reply to the letter from "The Town of Bluff City," we would like to say that certainly we do not take offense, for would it not be foolishness to take offense at something we have heard all our lives. We know not where these lines first originated from, but if they are just now getting into the town of Bluff City, we think it high time they were taking some newspapers and try to keep up with the times. While we do not expect to have a bridge at the Walker place until the county sees proper to build it, neither do we expect to have a depot until the Virginian Railway gets ready to build, and then, it is for them to say where it will be. We are not like some folks, want everything within ourselves or for our own convenience, we are willing to divide.

From what we can hear at the present, on the 7th day of November the town of Bluff City will need the votes of grasshoppers, doodlebugs, fishworms, snails, and all other insects and fowls.

NORTH PEARISBURG.

The Blue Healing Springs.

The Blue Healing Springs are the thing that is. Since the installation of the telephone this is an important part of the world and they that dwell therein. It is largely a Giles county institution and represented largely here by Giles people. The waters of which there are four, equal these of the celebrated All Healing, and as to location—well, we are four miles nearer the railroad and can "shoot at the moon" as set-back players would say. Location, topographically, perfect, and when the buildings proposed are completed, will be an Elderado.

'Tis already proven to be good for man and beast, by Gilbert Porterfield and Sam Hoge taking ladies out driving. Does any one need farther proof of the efficiency of these wonderful waters? If so, let them come and see the biggest-hearted Little and his little Littles that are here galore, around the Little springs.

We are thirsty all the time, with the best here to drink; hungry every meal and plenty to eat. The accommodations (except as to eating) are limited, but the owners welcome any who may wish to come and camp. Picnics are welcome and none are considered loafers on these grounds.

H. L. and James W. Phlegar caught or bought 30 pounds of fish in one day, and they said it wasn't a good day for fishing either.

SET OF Ware Free!

If you call at our store during our Majestic Demonstration Week and allow us to show you the many advantages and superior qualities of the Great and Majestic Range, and will purchase one at the regular price, we will give you Free the beautiful and useful Souvenir Set of Ware illustrated in this advertisement. This ware is made to match the quality of the Majestic Ranges, and we know all ladies will see the beauty and utility of this set, especially the first three pieces, which are entirely new and cannot be had alone by purchase, except at a very high price. The prices of Majestic Ranges are the same, but we give the set FREE with each Majestic Range bought during the demonstration week only.

Reasons Why The Great Majestic You Should Buy.

1st. It has the reputation of being the best range money can buy.

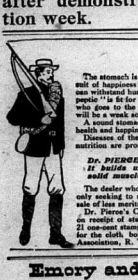
2nd. It not only has the reputation but IS the best range made, and we will prove this to you if you will let us.

3rd. It is constructed of malleable iron, material you can't beat, and of Charcoal iron, material that resists rust 300 per cent greater than steel, is riveted together air tight. No heat escapes or cold air enters the range, thus uses very little fuel to do perfect work.

4th. The reservoir aloce is worth the price of range over any other reservoir made. It boils 15 gallons of water; is heated like a tea kettle, with pocket against left hand lining, and is movable and sets on a frame, hence cannot wear out. When water gets too hot it can be moved away from fire.

Majestic Ranges use less fuel; heat more water—and heat is hotter; costs practically nothing for repairs; lasts three times as long; bakes better; easier to keep clean and gives better satisfaction than any other range on the market. If you know positively that the above statements are true, wouldn't you buy a Majestic at once?

Come in Demonstration Week and We'll Prove It to You.



Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of ROBBER COWS.

Cows which do not produce enough milk to pay for their keep are called "robber" cows There are thousands of such cows in Virginia. The only way to find them out is to weigh the milk, and test it for butter fat. An easy and inexpensive method of doing this is given in a new bulletin from the State Agricultural Experiment Station, at Blacksburg, (No. 193, "Co-operative Herd Testing," by W. D. Saunders and O. W. Holdaway).

According to this bulletin the average annual production of the 281,876 cows in Virginia in 1900, was 373 gallons as compared with 520 gallons in Ohio, 516 gallons in Pennsylvania, 680 gallons in the District of Columbia. The difference is due largely to the fact that our farmers keep so many scrub cows, which bring down the average of the good cows. The bulletin states that for all practical purposes if the milk is weighed for three consecutive days each month, and tested for butter fat two or three times during the lactation period, reasonably reliable results are obtained. Records of a number of herds supplying milk to a creamery are given. Only one-third of the seventy cows in these five herds gave a net profit of over $30.00 per year, and four were kept at an actual loss. These results fairly represent general conditions in Virginia. It will pay every man who keeps cows to test them. He may be surprised to find that some which he has considered his best cows are really being kept at a loss. Full directions for testing cows are given in the bulletic, which is sent free to those who apply to the Experiment Station for it.

THE TEST OF A WEDDING GERMONY.

A certain young pastor was planning with a young couple the steps in a marriage ceremony when the bride suddenly remarked, "Don't you make me promise to obey him."

"You ought to have some head to your family," replied the minister.

Then, turning to the groom, he asked, "Will you promise to obey her?"

"Not much, I won't!"

"What then? Do you expect me to tie you two together and leave you to fight it out afterward?"

"Isn't that the way they generally do?"

After a moment's thought the clergyman answered: "I will tell you what I will do. I will use the same ceremony that was used at my wedding. Neither party promises to obey the other in that, and it has worked well in our case."

"I don't know," said the young man, doubtfully, gazing at the top of the minister's head, already becoming bald. "If it is going to work on my head as it has on yours I don't believe that I want to try it."

SOME REASONS WHY.

"Why should I support my own town?" is a question every one should put to self and honestly consider. The result would be beneficial both to the individual and the town. Here are a few of the many reasons he would be sure to find.

The town is his home and a man's first duty is to his communal home as well as his domestic home. Love for and pride in one's town is the duty as it should ever be the joy of every citizen, and that patriotism should find constant expression in furthering its interests. His town affords him the protection of its government and laws and guards his property against fire and other losses.

A man should trade in his own town. It's business men are courteous, willing and progressive, their stock of goods, large and varied, and if there is some thing one wants which they do not carry they are always ready to secure it. Unlike catalogue houses, the home merchants help to pay the taxes of a town, they contribute to the churches, improvements and entertainments. Without the business men the town would stagnate and property would decrease in value.

The schools of a town provide ample and satisfactory education for one's children, and its churches meet and satisfy his religious needs and conserve the moral and spiritual interests of the community.

It's newspapers keep him informed on local matters, enlarge his knowledge, help him in business, minister to his enjoyment and that of his family, and promote every wise effort put forth to help the best interests of the town.—Bedford Democrat.

SOME COMMON ERRORS.

The fourteen mistakes of life, as Judge Rentoul recently told the Bartholomew Club of London, are:

To expect to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and expect everybody to conform to it.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in the world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mold the disposition of everybody alike.

Not to yield in unimportant trifles.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to alleviate, if we can, all that needs alleviation.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To consider anything impossible simply because we ourselves happen to be unable to perform it.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To live as if the moment, the time, the day, were so important that it would live forever.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.—The Interior.

HER ONE WISH.

The wandering peddler stopped at the southern cabin and opened his pack.

"Mammy, let me show you some self-raising umbrellas," he began.

"No use, man, no use," interrupted the old colored woman as she busied herself about the pot clothes' "Cyant use nuffin lak dat."

"How about self-raising window shades?"

"No good heah, kase dey ain't no winders wuth talkin' about."

"Self raising buckwheat?"

"No good to me—we eat cohn pone. But, mister?"

"Well, mammy?"

"If yo'll tell me how to tuhn dese heah fohteen bad chillun into self-raising pickaninies Ah'll be yo' friend foh life, dat Ah will, sah."—Chicago News.

FAT AND THIN.

The two women encountered each other at a dance. They had not met for several years.

"How thin you have grown," exclaimed one.

"How fat you've got to be!" the other cried, and they stood gazing at each other in some dismay.

"Before you come to blows," remarked a mutual friend who stood by, "let's take a vote as to which is worse, to get too fat or to get too thin."—New York Press.

The honest worked demands more of himself than his employer ever expects of him.

DELIGHTFUL OCCASION.

Those who attended the Methodist Sunday school picnic on last Thursday, report one of the most pleasant occasions of the kind they ever attended. On the large, pretty, shady lawn at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Porterfield out on the river, there was everything to make the occasion a glad one. Many, many baskets were in attendance and they were well filled with an abundance of all kinds of good things to eat. Lemonade, bananas and delicious watermelons were also there and everybody was plenteously supplied and there was plenty left.

The belles, beaux and little folks played all kinds of lawn games while the elderly ones whiled away the hours in pleasant conversation while comfortably seated under the spreading maples.

Truly, it was a most delightful occasion and we want to see many more like it.

A WARNING FOR VIRGINIA.

Some day when it is too late, Virginia and West Virginia will awake to a realization that they are making a fearful blunder in allowing certain interests to gobble up their water power. They will discover that they literally are throwing away assets that ultimately would bring them great incomes amounting probably to millions of dollars. Magnificent properties, the inherent values of which are almost incalculable, rapidly are passing into the possession of capitalists, who in return for them are paying not a cent into the State treasury. And in future, when an opportunity to act effectively has disappeared, Virginians and West Virginians will find themselves paying annually immense tributes for the use of electric power which today belongs to them and which, under wise and proper direction, could be handed down to generations as a wonderful and far reaching benefit.

The Evening world wants to sound a warning to the two States. It wants to ask members of the legislatures, the governors, the attorney generals, and all other officials, whose duty it is to promote and subserve the interest of their commonwealths, to look into this matter, to study the situation, and to make sure that our children and children's children will not rise up and pronounce us faithless to our trust.

Do not let the voice of flattery or the plausible promises of present development lead you into dangerous and foolish acquiescence. Call a halt before it is too late. Save for the people that which God has given to them as a priceless treasure.

A syndicate has gotten control of New River in Virginia. The same syndicate, with a different charter, it is said, will get control of all the water power in West Virginia. Another concern claims to be buying a part of the Virginia power, but, from all accounts they are figuring now on selling their holdings to the big fellow. Some persons suspect that this is done in accordance with a program laid down long ago; others believe it is a case of the big fellow absorbing the little one through attractive inducements. However, the result is exactly the same.

"I have heard," says a prominent coal operator of West Virginia, "that it is the plan not only of water power monopolies but of monopolies in general to divide these territories into certain spheres, each of which is to be under the control of certain individuals connected with the central organization, the headquarters of which are to be in Chicago. These people already have arranged to begin active operations. As an evidence of how well they will be equipped to bid for business, I can state that they have submitted propositions to coal companies to furnish power at their mines in competition with that developed from the coal mined by them. This illustrates forcibly the remarkable value of the water power which belongs properly to the State."

A rough estimate of all the water power that can be produced by New River inside the State of Virginia places the horse power at what can be produced by the output of coal in the entire Pocahontas field.

It is estimated that the river will furnish about four hundred thousand horse power.

If these figures are approximately correct, and we have secured them from trustworthy sources, we are presented with a situation profoundly and vitally interesting.

For the sake of argument let us assume that the cost of generating power from New River is the same as that produced from coal. The usual royalty paid to the owner of the coal is ten cents per ton, and on this basis, the State would receive in royalties from New River a splendid annual income, estimated at one million dollars. But under present conditions, Virginia will get not a sliver.

Every Virginian who may happen to read this article should let these statements sink deep into his mind. If we could we would print it in letters as bright as fire and as big as the Peaks of Otter and hang it in the heavens where it would be visible from Bristol to Norfolk and from Alexandria to Danville.

And what we have told you isn't all by any means. Listen to this:

One of these syndicates has obtained in one of the lower courts a ruling which gives it the privilege of exercising the right of eminent domain, which, if confirmed by the higher court, will enable these people not only to take from Virginia the water that it may possess, but to erect their poles and stretch their wires through and over any property within the State.

Furthermore, as coal becomes scarce and the cost of its production increases, charges for New River power will be advanced, until at last when the supply of coal begins to disappear, owners of the great water power plants will place their levies upon all our resources, bringing factories and individuals under the bondage of their enormous institution, and making every human being in the country pay lavish tribute to it, just as is now done to that vastly over capitalized trust, the United States Steel Corporation.—Roanoke Evening World, July 26th.

An Editor's Appeal.

My friend, help the editor in his wild-eyed search for news. When your friend comes to see you, if you are not ashamed of it, tell him; when your wife gives a tea party, if you have recovered the effects of the gossip, drop in with the news; when a baby arrives fill your pocket with cigars and call; if you go to a party steal some of the good things and leave 'em with the item sanctum; if your wife licks you come in and let us see your scare and tender sympathy through the paper; if your mother-in-law has died don't be bashful about it; give it all the common place news. In short, whatever makes you feel proud, sad, lonesome or glad, submit it to our 24 karat wisdom and see our matted locks part and stand on end with gratitude, which will pour from every pore like moisture from the dew besprinkled earth.—Lunenburg Tribune.

THINKS GREAT GATE WILL BE GREAT TOWN.

Walter Graham Enthusiastic Over Iron Property He Is Now Developing Near Narrows.

Walter Graham of Graham, was in Bluefield last Saturday, and while here showed a number of views of the iron property which he is developing near Narrows, at Great Gate. Mr. Graham is certain that the possibilities of making a great town of Great Gate are bright, as he holds that it is so situated that it is a center of a future manufacturing district. Regarding Great Gate, Mr. Graham has this to say:

"Great Gate possesses remarkable natural advantages and transportation facilities. The scenery surpasses the famous Water Gap of Pennsylvania and this is a most beautiful and salubrious location for hotels and residences. The land is level, rising in terraces above the river and railroads, dividing naturally into sections; level manufacturing sites being along the river and railroad, the business section being above and along the railroad at the Virginian railway depot and the steel county bridge connecting with the Narrows and Pearisburg and Wolf Creek valley and the other railroads. Above is most extensive and beautiful and level land for residences and still another terrace above for villa sites. Adjoining are cheaper sections for laborers and near the iron mines, a half mile away, are the sections for negroes, divided from the town by a rising ridge. The straight away view of New River through the gap and of Angel's Rest and other mountains, reaching 4,000 feet above the sea, and of the bluegrass valleys of New River and Wolf Creek is unsurpassed in loveliness. This is a country of churches and schools, an old settled section with fine plantations and good roads, of high bred horses and short horn cattle. The mountains abound in trout and grouse and wild turkeys and the valleys in bass and quail. The climate is the same as Hot Springs, Virginia—not far away in the same range of mountains—already famous and fashionable, and the scenery and natural resources are unmatched Oak, poplar, pine, hickory and tanbark forests are extensive and two large tanneries and several saw mills are located near by for this reason. Immediately in the rear of Great Gate in the mountains, immense deposits of Oriskany iron ore are being mined. The Falls Gap iron mines, controlling this important ore field, 8 miles long and estimated to contain millions of tons of iron ore, are shipping from here. Pure limestone quarries and kilns are operating near by. A dam and hydro electric power plant is projected at the Falls to smelt and refine the iron ore and to supply power to the industries here and for general distribution."—Bluefield Telegraph.

Five Car Loads of Snakes.

Southern Pacific freight officials have recently handled out of eastern New Mexico, northern Mexico and western Texas a shipment of five car loads of live snakes, delivered to Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and also to New York for reshipment to European points. The snakes, twenty-four specimens in all, numbered 1,700. It cost $800 a car to ship them.

In Memory of the Adopted Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hickerson of Newport, Va.

God's angels came with silent tread,
And pillowed there her drooping head;
Lovingly kissed her pale cold brow,
Just where a star is gleaming now.

Gently they closed the coffin lid,
The dearest sweet body in death was hid;
Consigned to the folds of angel's arms,
And borne away from all earthly harms.

Turning they gazed on parents and said,
"She only sleepeth," is not dead;
She was not given thee, only lent,
And for his own the Lord hath sent.

He only lent, that her dear smile,
Might cheer thy life but for a while;
Now He taketh His own again,
From this vile world of sin and pain.

While we are left on earth to mourn,
Waiting a call to take us home,
Ah! may we find the narrow way,
To be saved from death in endless day.

Farewell, farewell, dear Virginia Mae,
Sweet, sweet babe, farewell,
God hath called thee home again,
From earth to paradise to dwell.

A FRIEND.

OBITUARY.

Eliza Rebecca Henderson was born in Giles county, Virginia, August 29, 1840, died in Hillsboro, Ohio, May 11, 1911, aged 70 years, 8 months and 12 days.

At the age of 16 she united with the M. E. Church at the old Wabash Camp Ground and her life bears witness to all who became acquainted with her, that she found her Saviour and that her sins were pardoned; for her life was like a sun beam growing brighter and brighter as the days went by, until Jesus called and she went home.

On February 23, 1871, she was united in marriage to James Turner. Two children came to bless and make their home a very happy home, Ola May and Carey.

Ola May only lived about two years and God sent his messenger and took her unto himself. The mother's heart was broken, but through it all, her eyes were heavenward and she said, "She cannot come to me but I can go to her" and with aching hearts they faced the future, and after twenty-seven years of love, joy, happiness and sorrow, the Messenger came again and took the husband and father. She said, "Thy will be done." Their married life was an exceedingly happy one. They were all and all to each other until God called the dear one home and she was left with one son, Carey, to mourn a loss that no one can fully understand, except those who have experienced a like event; but through it all, she looked unto her heavenly Father and said, "Thy will be done"; and through those trying times, O how often has the writer seen her face shine like the face of an angel, when she talked of the loved ones over there and the glorious meeting she would have by and by. She is gone. The body that lies before us is but the house in which she lived. She is with her loved ones praising God for his loving kindness and that she is forever free from pain, sorrow and trouble.

She loved her friends and her neighbors with a steadfast, unflinching devotion. It took more than idle gossip to shake her faith in a friend or neighbor. She was always looking on the bright side, the good side, and to her all her friends were noble characters with which she expected to spend eternity. But her little grandson, Jimmy, was the apple of her eye. Every thought was of him and for his welfare. Even while suffering intense pain his welfare was uppermost in her mind. But grandma is gone, and we who believe as she believed, and we who know as she knew, that Jesus will meet his own at the dark turbulent river's edge and safely gather us to himself, do not need to mourn, for we shall all be at home by and by.

One by one we are laying our loved ones out here in the quiet church yard; one by one we take the long last, farewell look and soon and very soon, others will look their last farewell look and say goodbye to us and then we will be with Grandma Turner.—Hillsboro (Ohio) Dispatch.

A. A. ADAIR & Co.,
Rich Creek, Va.

To the Ladies of Giles County!

I have accepted the agency for the Spirella Corset. It has five points of supreme importance in a corset stay not found elsewhere. First, unbreakable, non-rustable, retains its shape, flexible in every direction, and last, but not least, an official guarantee against rust and breakage for one year, accompanies every corset. Conforming to every curve, yielding to every movement of the body, confining without injurious compression, giving elegance of contour without sacrifice of comfort, light weight. Call and let me take your measure when in town.

MRS. C. T. PAINTER.

Don't forget when the Great District Fair at Radford begins, September 6-8, 1911. Greater attractions this year than ever before. Half of your life will have been wasted if you miss it this year.

Truman Brown of Bane, who has been for the past two weeks a patient in the hospital at Abingdon, passed through town on his way home Monday. He had undergone an operation for appendicitis. He comes home very much improved in health.

Prof. W. L. Skaggs of St. Mary, W. Va., is expected the 21st inst. to instruct the Wabash Cornet Band for a month, and will accompany them to all their Fairs. The boys also have a new set of "King Instruments" made by H. N. White, on the road. Get ready to hear some good music, and help the boys financially.

Read the new advertisement of the State Normal School, Harrisonburg, Va., in this issue. This school is for the professional training of teachers and home-makers. It is situated in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley, best of health conditions. Tuition free. Third year begins September 21, 1911.

Last week we made quite a mistake when we said Rufus C. French of Narrows, was a deputy for W. H. Thompson, who is a candidate for sheriff. It should have read Rufus C. Hale. But mistakes are liable to happen in the best of families. We hope our good words for the former will do for the latter.

Dr. A. G. Crockett of Wythe county, the probable candidate of the Democratic party for the State Senate in our district, was a visitor in our town Tuesday. He made many friends by his affable, kindly and courteous manner. He is a splendid man and would make an ideal representative for this progressive district.

John, son of Robt. L. Peters of this place, who went to Oak Hill, W. Va., a few weeks ago to work in a store, came home the 9th inst. and since then has been confined to his bed with typhoid fever. John worked for us before going away, and was a good worker, and we hope his case will be light, and that he will be well soon.

Read the advertisement of L. C. Cole in another column. He offers for sale all his personal property, consisting of horses, mules, colts, cattle, hogs, cows, wagons, buggies, harness, and all kinds of farming implements. Also wheat, corn crop, straw, and other things too numerous to mention. He will also dispose of all of his household and kitchen furniture. Two good building lots in the town of Pearisburg also for sale. Be sure and attend this sale.

FOR SALE.—I have a lot of one acre with a cottage house of three rooms and basement upon same, which I will sell at a reasonable price. For terms apply to

FRANK N. FELTY,
Bluff City, Va.

The wife of Prof. John T. Wassom, who has been quite ill for a long time, was on Sunday morning last, taken to a hospital in Roanoke, Dr. W. D. Woolwine and her husband accompanied her. We learn she was operated upon Monday, and at this writing, is getting along nicely. We are glad to hear this and hope to see her at home soon.

Read the new advertisement of the Edge Hill Stock Farm, J. L. Vaughan, owner, Shawsville, Va. An auction sale of horses, Shetland ponies and red polled cattle will be held on this farm, September 11, at ten o'clock in the morning. Liverymen wanting horses, or others wanting riding or driving horses, should not fail to attend this sale.

They are coming, slowly, but surely. Mr. John B. Lucas of Pembroke District, announces himself in this issue for Road Commissioner of that district, and of course wants all the votes he can get. Mr. Lucas is quite an adept at curing horses and cows, and if he is as successful at road making as with the veterinary business, he is sure to be a success.

Read the announcement of C. M. Munsey in another column as a candidate for Magistrate of Pearisburg District. Mr. Munsey is holding down the chair at the present time, having been appointed to fill out an unexpired term. As far as we know, and we have heard no complaint, he has made a good presiding officer, and will, no doubt, improve, the longer he holds the office.

Read the new advertisement of the Duncan Implement Co., Rich Creek, Va. They sell the Empire Grain Drills—the best drills made—and are sold on a broad and liberal guarantee. They sell all kinds of farming utensils; also buggies, surreys, wagons, harness or anything else you may want in the hardware line. Give them a trial and see how well you can do in trading with this enterprising and gentlemanly firm.

A certain marriageable gentleman may be seen going down a certain street most any time, or at least, often. This is a prosperous street for any one looking for a "better half," as there are on this street young maidens, old maids, grass widows and widows. All of these, according to our eyesight, are fairly good lookers, and should the right one or ones, come along, we presume, would only be too glad to have pardners. Keep on, c. m. g., you are on the right track and more than likely you will be successful.

Read the announcement of C. B. Williams for Road Commissioner of Pembroke District in another column. Mr. Williams is out for re-election, having held this office for the past term. We leave him in the hands of the voters, and hope they will vote for him according to the way he has performed his duty heretofore, if satisfactory, try him again, if not, try some other one.

William J. Crabtree of Marion, is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. M. Henderson of this place.

J. L. Smith, wife and children of Thirteen, Ky., are visiting relatives in this county.

Miss Banie Johnston and Mr. Jess Shelton attended the picnic at Fleshman's Grove last Saturday. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ballard.

The fourteenth annual picnic at Fleshman's Grove near Peterstown, was a decided success, having one of the largest crowds ever assembled on one of these occasions. The attendance seems to grow larger as the years go by. Good order prevailed and every one seemed happy and to enjoy themselves. This is one of the most famous picnics in this part of the country, and is looked forward to with much interest.

In another column will be found the new advertisement of Messrs. A. A. Adair & Co., Rich Creek, Va. They have just received a car load of nails and American Fence. This fence is made of the best of hard, stiff steel wire with the best of galvanizing, which prevents it from rusting. Call and see this fence, and at the same time, see what other good bargains you can get out of this firm. They are noted for square dealing.

While on our way to Fleshman's Grove last Friday we had the pleasure of taking dinner with Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Guinn of Rich Creek, and never were we more loyally entertained. Mrs. Guinn certainly knows how to prepare and fix up a tasty meal. We thank them for their kindness. Rich Creek is said to be the busiest place between Roanoke and Princeton, and we predict, that in the near future, it will be a city of large proportion and usefulness.

Circuit Court convened its session here Monday, Judge Fulton Kegley, presiding. There was the largest attendance the opening day we have seen for years. The grand jury is still in session, and a number of indictments have been found, and several cases tried. The case of Luther Smith, accused of robbing H. H. Andrews of Belspring, was found guilty, and sentenced to the penitentiary for eight years. This will keep him out of devilment, at least, for a while.

While at Fleshman's Grove last Saturday, we had the pleasure of refreshing the inner man at dinner time, with two families from Narrows, who had clubbed together, they are Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Cunningham and Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Stump. Never in our life did we eat with a more ravenous appetite, than on this day, although we done our duty once before at the Christian church picnic at Rocky Gap, as many can testify to. We thank these families for their generous treatment, and hope they will live to see many more picnics at this famous grove.

SHOOTING AFFRAY.

Theodore Hardy, of this place, shot Edward King of Vickers Switch, in the stomach, in a restaurant run by Cicero Summers on Main Street, this place, Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. All colored. It is said Summers and Hardy were joking something about chicken, when it resulted in a row between Summers and Hardy, Summers striking and calling Hardy a liar. Then Hardy went home, got a gun, came back and shot at Summers, accidentally hitting King.

Hardy was caught soon after the shooting, and is now in the county jail.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

The Narrows Methodist Sunday School will hold their Annual Picnic at Rocky Gap, Saturday, August 19th. Excursion train from Narrows and Shumate leaves Narrows 8:30 in the morning; fare, 60 cents round trip; children over 12, 30 cents. Base ball and other games of amusement. The public is cordially invited to go along, take your basket, invite your friends and enjoy the day with us, if you don't care to bring your basket. Refreshments will be sold on ground. This is a good chance and very cheap for a day's outing.

SEVERAL YOUNG PEOPLE from this vicinity will attend the Roanoke-National Business College this fall. Most of them will enter at the opening, September 5th. The Roanoke-National is certainly a great school; six hundred students last year; every graduate and scores of undergraduates in good positions. A student has just accepted a position in a bank at $70 a month; another good position is open at $100 a month. Young people should write President E. M. Coulter for catalogue at once.

A DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT.

Prof. Jas. R. Stafford, who has been the efficient, honored and much-loved Superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School here for the last five years, gave a parting entertainment to the teachers of the school at his beautiful home, "Sunnyside," south of town, on Thursday evening of last week.

The cordial reception and welcome to the home by their charming hostess, Mrs. Jas. R. Stafford, the supper, which for abundance, variety and excellence of the viands was of the ne plus ultra kind, the games, the social concern, all combined to render the occasion a truly delightful one, long to be remembered by the participants.

The teachers present were: Messrs. E. S. Dennis, J. J. Carper, D. J. Chapman, John Givens, Mesdames J. L. Prater, Ada Welch, Emma Woods and E. B. Carr, and Misses Annie Brotherton and Lucille Lucas, and honorary guests, Mrs. M. C. THREE DAYS' BRIDE DIED.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 13, 1911.—Mrs. Lindsey Dunsmore, a bride of three days, died at the Lewis-Gale hospital at 11:30 yesterday. She was brought from her home on the south side of Mill Mountain to the hospital about 4 o'clock yesterday morning and had been ill since about 12:30 a. m.

The husband and bride had been visiting earlier in the evening at the home of the minister who performed the marriage ceremony and left for their new home after having taken supper. Shortly after midnight Mr. Dunsmore was awakened by the groans of his wife and upon trying to awake her, found that she was unconscious. He notified his neighbors, they responding promptly, did all they could to restore Mrs. Dunsmore to consciousness but without success. Mrs. Dunsmore died from uraemic poisoning.

On Sunday the remains were taken to Rich Creek and interment in the new cemetery there, the minister who officiated at the marriage conducting the funeral rites. The deceased was a member of the Missionary Baptist church, and was of a sweet and amiable character and loved by all who knew her.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine or known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

Rufus A. Ayers on Senator Martin.

Leading and Veteran Democrat Tells of Party Dangers, Fights and Triumphs.

SUPPORTED GEN. LEE IN STRUGGLE OF 1893.

Was Convinced That Result Was Fairly Gained---Martin a Tower of Strength to the Democracy and an Honor to the State---Should be Re-elected by All Means.

R. A. Ayers in the Roanoke Times.

BIG STONE GAP, VA., August 7, 1911.

I have known Thomas S. Martin for three decades, served upon the Democratic State Committee with him for years, fought shoulder to shoulder with him through the most memorable campaigns ever waged in Virginia—1883, when Mahone was overthrown and the legislative power of the State wrested from the Republicans — 1884 when Cleveland was elected president and 1885 when a governor, lieutenant-governor and attorney general were elected bringing the State under complete Democratic control.

These were strenuous times—days that tried men's principles—but Thomas S. Martin was always on the firing line, Barbour's right hand support and wise counsellor, a bulwark for Gordon and for more than twenty years one of the strongest supports of Chairman Ellyson. We had to raise money—yes, lots of it, and use it too, for we felt our civilization was at stake when the Republicans in power with brazen effrontery had appointed negro school trustees in our capital city, and negroes were aspiring to seats in congress, one of whom was actually elected and served. We had to fight desperately to gain and retain party supremacy and the sinews of war had to be provided.

I have attended committee meetings when everything looked as blue as indigo and the prospects of success almost hopeless—notably during the campaign of 1884—and often have I seen Martin rise and in his clear, concise and forceful way outline a clean cut plan of campaign which met the approval of all and cleared the horizon. We all worked and did our best, but we always looked to Martin to do as much as any ten of us. We leant upon him heavily at times, but he never flinched or faltered, and never disappointed us. He raised money for the committee during every campaign for years and in addition was a trusted leader, wise in council and strong in action. Martin's reputation and influence grew every year until his great contest with General Fitz Lee for the United States Senate.

In that fight I was opposed to Martin and supported Lee, with whom I had been closely connected for four years and regarded him a strong man for the position. When the contest was over and Martin nominated, although disappointed, I did not countenance or take any part with those of General Lee's hot headed supporters who claimed that Martin's nomination was effected by undue means, but went home very much disgusted over their action.

I fought Martin hard, but hit above the belt, and when he was nominated, accepted it as the honest judgment of a majority of the Democratic members of the General Assembly, which it was. The claim that Martin's nomination and election was brought about by the improper use of money is a slander upon the General Assembly, and is untrue. The facts are that Martin's strenuous party service, his ability and strength of character were well known to the party leaders who moulded public opinion throughout the State and it was in recognition of these party services, his ability and force of character that he was nominated.

I watched carefully and I may say critically, Martin's course, during his first term, and before he came up for re-election recognized that Virginia had secured the services of the most useful and influential man she had sent to the senate for a long time and gave him hearty support.

The cry of "King Rule" is as old as the organization of political parties, and is getting very stale. I have heard it all my life, and it generally comes from the OUTS wanting to get IN.

There will be found a considerable faction of recalcitrants in every political party, men who revolt because their particular views and policies do not meet the approval and ratification of a majority of their party associates. They become obsessed with their own importance and because the tail can't wag the dog, want to cut off its head, kick out of the traces and cry "Ring Rule!" "Ring Rule!" "Down with the Ring!"

Is it strange or remarkable that the advice and counsel of Democratic leaders who have won distinction and influence through a life time of party service should be often sought and frequently followed? Is it strange or remarkable that the Democratic party should recognize and elevate to positions of public trust men who have proven their ability and their loyalty and devotion to the party.

Is it strange or remarkable that the men thus distinguished and advanced should have greater influence than others not similarly situated?

Is it not the plain duty of men so situated to give their advice and use their influence for the best interest of the people, whenever and wherever they deem it necessary?

Fellow Democrats, take it from one who commencing in 1869, when Gilbert C. Walker defeated Henry Harpy Wells for governor, has for more than forty years fought the battles of Democracy in every campaign in Virginia—THERE IS NO RING dominating or controlling the Democratic party in Virginia.

Its policies are controlled by its chosen representative, legislative, executive and judicial. No important action is taken, no important question decided, that is not either directly approved and authorized at the polls, or by representatives thus chosen to represent them.

That the representatives often consult, advise with, and frequently adopt the views, opinions and judgment of the leading men of the party who have qualified themselves to advise by long experience and distinguished public service goes without saying, but instead of this being an evidence of "Ring Rule," it is quite the reverse and is in keeping with the best traditions of the party and the Commonwealth.

Right here is where the shoe pinches—the men who have sought distinction from the party and failed—indignant, because their fellow Democrats do not place the same estimate upon them that they place upon themselves, begin the cry of "ring rule," in a futile efforts to attract the public eyes to themselves and detract from those they seek to pull down.

THERE IS NO RING—THERE IS NO RING RULE CONTROLLING THE DEMOCRACY OF VIRGINIA. There is a strong militant party with chosen leaders of proven ability, loyalty and courage, which for nearly thirty years has maintained unbroken its control of Virginia, and the destinies of her people—a party that looks with pride upon the officers, legislative, executive and judicial it has given the Commonwealth and points the finger of scorn and shame at the men who attempt to place the brand of RINGSTER upon their brows.

That the party has ruled Virginia wisely and well is attested by the great progress she has made along every line of human effort. Martin's services as senator have been pre-eminently valuable and satisfactory. He is distinguished in an august body of distinguished men. He has been selected as the Democratic leader in the senate, and he leads with great ability, showing to the nation those sterling qualities which Virginia long since recognized and appreciated. The congress of the United States is now dealing with numerous questions of more vital importance than have been presented for solution within the last fifty years, involving policies which the National Democracy have been advocating and pushing to the front for years, with which Martin is more familiar and more capable of handling than any new man could possibly be. He is growing daily in influence and power and in the estimation of his fellow senators.

Virginia and the nation need Martin and it would be worse than folly should the Virginia democracy fail to return him to the senate.

Look at him—sticking closely to his post doing his duty as a public servant without regard to his personal interest, although his opponent, a member of the house of representatives NOW IN SESSION has been absent and upon the stump for several weeks.

I cannot see why any Democrat having an eye single to the interests of his State can fail to support Martin. As for myself I say, stick to your post, senator, do your duty to your State and Virginia Democracy will take care of the consequences.

I shall soon have something to say about our brilliant young junior senator, whose candidacy I cordially endorse.

I am willing for the voters to judge by my past record and your conditions if I shall "step down and out."

Respectfully,
J. M. PUCKETT.

FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE:

J. T. WASSON, Prin.

J. T. S. Hoge of Pembroke District, announces himself in this issue, as a candidate for re-election to the office of Supervisor for that district. Mr. Hoge is the present incumbent in that office, and as far as we know, has served the people faithfully and efficiently, and if elected, will do the same in the future as in the past.

Capt. Dan'l W. Mason had two thousand dollars dropped on his place Monday. His five-gaited registered saddle mare, "Lizzie E," brought him an elegant chestnut stud colt, sired by that grand old stallion, Red King, 2nd, 1310. He has named this colt "Royal King."

Ike Painter announces himself in this issue as a candidate for Justice of the Peace for Pearisburg District. Ike is well known throughout the district, a young man full of energy and goaheadativeness, and if elected, would, no doubt, make an efficient official.

One of the grandest and best news we have heard of lately, is that Radford went dry by 146 majority. Well done, you good people of our neighboring town. Oh, if only a number of other towns and cities would follow in Radford's footsteps, what a glorious country we would have!

Be sure and attend the "musical" here Friday night in the auditorium of the High School building. Gifted artists will render choice selections of music. Proceeds for the benefit of the Pastor's Aid Society of the Presbyterian church. This entertainment should draw a crowded house.

The lecture given in the Methodist church last Thursday night by Prof. T. Yamamoto, a learned Japanese, was very poorly attended, there being only a few in attendance. There should have been a larger attendance, as we seldom have such treats as this. All, no doubt, would have been well pleased, had they attended.

Prof. W. L. Skaggs of St. Mary, W. Va., who will instruct the Wabash Cornet Band in music for a month, gave us a call, Monday, while on his way to Wabash. This famous band will play at the Radford Fair, which begins September 6th. They will also render some of their sweet music here at the Colt Show, next Saturday, 26th. Don't fail to see and hear them. They are fine specimens of manhood, and the way they render music is truly wonderful.

OUR SICK.—Ems Phlegar, who has been in bed for the past six or eight weeks with typhoid fever, is improving fast; hope to see him out soon.—John Peters, who came home from Oak Hill, W. Va., two weeks ago with typhoid fever, is getting along nicely, and if nothing happens, will be out soon.—We are glad to say Dr. J. T. Parker is getting along nicely, and hope to see him in his office soon.—Mrs. J. T. Wassom, is recovering rapidly from an operation for appendicitis, and hope to see her at home at an early day.

The Great District Fair of the Southwest Virginia Agricultural and Live Stock Association to be held at Radford, September 6, 7 and 8, promises to eclipse anything of its kind, held in years. This is a farmer's fair; every department of farm life, even the racing, will be for unprofessional ones. Interesting program daily. Great Wild West Show, with reproduction of battles of the plains, racing, games, grand tourney, ball, sideshows galore, and lots of fun for every one, old and young. Don't fail to see the Cholera Immune Mule Foot Hog. The Norfolk & Western Railway will have a fine exhibit and will give a souvenir to every lady visitor and send up prize dropping balloons daily. The V. P. I. Farm will also give some demonstration work, which will be of interest to all who see it. Special excursion rates on all the railroads. Don't fail to see this great fair.

Saturday morning, August 19th dawned fair, much to the great joy of Narrows and community, as the Methodist Sunday School of that place had planned an excursion over the scenic Holston railroad to Rocky Gap which is becoming more renowned every year for these pleasant, social occasions. The editor of this paper had scented the odorous viands, and as a matter of course, he went in care of our worthy county sheriff, Mr. J. H. Durham. There were several representatives from Pearisburg, among the number were Bro. Prater and family, C. M. Munsey, Misses Nina and Gladys Johnston and Web Farley. There was a large crowd assembled on the grounds, and when the train on the N. R. & W. arrived, there was quite a large number more, as this train was loaded down with pioneers. The behavior was excellent. After dinner was over, there was a game of ball played between Bland and Narrows teams, which resulted 9 to 2 in favor of the Narrows. Excellent music by the Narrows Band, and with as fine a set of Virginians socially as can be found anywhere, the picnic was a great success. We return many thanks to our cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnston, for good things for the inner man, and also to those who so kindly invited us.

To the Ladies of Giles County!

I have accepted the agency for the Spirella Corset. It has five points of supreme importance in a corset stay not found elsewhere. First, unbreakable, non-rustable, retains its shape, flexible in every direction, and last, but not least, an official guarantee against rust and breakage for one year, accompanies every corset. Conforming to every curve, yielding to every movement of the body, confining without injurious compression, giving elegance of contour without sacrifice of comfort, light weight. Call and let me take your measure when in town.

SATURDAY, THE 26th.

The Colt Show to Be a Hummer.

Pearisburg again bids a glad welcome to the hundreds who will assemble here on next Saturday, the 26th inst., on the occasion of the Giles County Annual Colt Show.

Fliers have gone out announcing the program etc., so that by this time, all those who will have colts to enter in the contests, are no doubt familiar with it.

In addition to program, as formerly announced, we are requested to say that a Stallion ring, composed of the various stallions of the county, will be one of the features. It is desired and expected that this will be an interesting display, and the owners of the different stallions in the county, are requested to bring them in and place on exhibition in this display, which takes place at 1:30 p. m.

Advices from all over the county are to the effect that practically all the fine stock in the county will be either in the various contests or on display, and there can be no doubt that the best, biggest and finest array of stock that was ever assembled in Giles county will be on hand at this time, and a most cordial invitation is extended to all, to be present on this eventful occasion.

A DELIGHTFUL TIME.

A very nice little gathering was held at the home of Mr. J. W. Carper, one mile east of this place, on Sunday last, when all of his family gathered together to have a family re-union and social chat together. The day was a bright one and all seemed to be as bright and clear as this beautiful Lord's day was. The following, connected with the family, and a few invited guests, were in attendance: Mr. and Mrs. E. Croy and family; W. O. Carper and family; A. M. Wilburn and family, Bluefield; A. W. Johnston and daughter, Miss Mamie; Mrs. Cyntha Journell; Mrs. Lucy Anderson, daughter and son, Dublin; Mrs. J. L. Prater; Hugh Wilburn; Will Journell; E. L. and J. J. Carper; B. L. Carper, Huntington, W. Va.

A bountiful repast, consisting of choicest viands of the season, were prepared for this occasion, and all partook of it in a most agreeable manner.

We hope Mr. Carper will live to see many more of these happy and delightful gatherings.

MORTON R. EMMONS IS CLAIMED BY DEATH.

Was One of Bluefield's Oldest Residents, Having Made Home Here Ten Twenty-two Years.

Bluefield, August 11, 1911.—Morton R. Emmons, one of Bluefield's oldest residents, who has made his home here for 22 years, coming to what is now a city from Pocahontas, where he had lived for over two years, died yesterday afternoon at his home, No. 200 Shenandoah avenue. A pioneer in every sense of the word, Mr. Emmons early recognized the importance of Bluefield and entered the real estate business, which he pursued up to the time of his late illness, which had forced him to remain at home since last November. Even before that time he had been ailing, but he experienced a gradual weakening in the early part of the winter and his strength kept ebbing away until Monday when it was seen that he could not live any great length of time.

Twenty-four years ago he married Miss Virginia Wilson a daughter of Rev. M. A. Wilson, a Baptist preacher, who was known through this section as the "church builder." To this union five sons were born and all survive the deceased, together with his widow. The sons are M. W., M. A., Taylor, David Fox and Richard Allen Emmons, the last two being but eight years of age. All live in Bluefield and all but the eldest were born here.

In addition the deceased is survived by four brothers—R. A. Emmons, Bluefield; W. C. Emmons, Covington, Ky., James Emmons, Pearisburg, and Sidney Emmons—and four sisters—Mrs. Louise McKinley, of Mexico; Mrs. Barbara Walker of Mora; Mrs. Carrye Emmons of Bluefield, and Mrs. Anna Scott of Oklahoma. The funeral arrangements will not be completed until today. It is expected that the services will be held from Bland Street church, of which Mr. Emmons was a member and the burial will take place in either Maple Park or Walnut Grove cemetery.—Bluefield Daily Time.

Mr. Emmons was born and reared in this county, and went to Bluefield in her earlier years. We smypathize with his family in their great loss of husband and father.

THE OLD HISTORIC BLANFORD CHURCH.

One evening recently while leisurely wandering about, I came near the old Blanford church, and cemetery, and having a desire to see this historic place availed myself of this opportunity, spent several hours reverently looking around and reading the inscriptions on the memorials, tombs and monuments. The evening was very pleasant and beautiful, the soft murmuring summer winds among the somber pines and oaks, the birds singing over the graves of the dead, the stillness within the old church so rich in associations, so full of memories. The stillness itself with such eloquent sadness speaks to the very soul of man about God. That it is, but destiny, that beyond the shadows that blind us here is the Celestial Land of God, yet pilgrims passing through can never return; nor can we pass thither without the step of death, which is the gateway to the Celestial City.

The church was built in 1735, of brick, made in England, as you remember the colonies were forbidden to make brick, as well as many other things, and were required to buy them from England in order to build up the commerce of England and enrichen her merchants at the expense of Virginia and the other American colonies. The brick of this church are of size that visitors quickly recognize their ancient aspect. The denomination of this church was Episcopal; the church of England, however, it was attended by the colonists as a whole, without regard to their beliefs. It was used until the year 1788 when it was vacated for one in the city. In 1800 it was given to the Ladies Memorial Association, by the city of Petersburg, and has been repaired from time to time by that association John Randolph of Roanoke, the decendant of Pocahontas attended this church. All school children are familiar with his name. He was a great orator who had been unsuccessful in love in his earlier years which embittered his life causing him to be very sarcastic in debate making him many personal enemies.

Among its many beautiful features are its memorial windows which cost four hundred dollars each, and were presented by the Memorial Associations of the several states of the Southland.

In describing the window presented by Virginia, I will have to say it is the most beautiful of all the windows. At the top is the Virginia coat of arms, then below is a life size figure of the Apostle. St. John, holding a loving cup in his hand, and at the bottom these words: "To the glory of God and in memory of Virginia patriots and heroes of the Confederate army; eternal right, all else fail can never be made wrong."

North Carolina, like Virginia, and next to Virginia in bearing the weight of the Civil War, has presented a beautiful memorial window. Her coat of arms at the top. The figure of St. Bartholomew, one of the Twelve. He is said to have preached the gospel in India and at last was flayed alive and crucified. The words on this window are sincerely touching: "In memory of North Carolina soldiers of whom 40,275 proved their devotion to duty by their death. 'God Bless North Carolina.--R. E. Lee.'"

South Carolina, her coat of arms at the top of the window with the figure of St. Mark, who also suffered martyrdom. The words below the figure of the Apostle are: "To the glory of God and in memory of South Carolina's sons who died for the Confederacy; He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth."

Louisiana, has given a pretty memorial, her coat of arms is at the top of the window, and below is the figure of the great Apostle, St. Paul, who was beheaded. The following words are at the bottom: "To the glori ous memory of those brave men of the Washington artillery of New Orleans who gave their lives for the Confederate cause."

Alabama has presented a beautiful window, her coat of arms at the top, the figure of St. Andrew beneath. One of the first Apostles called. He was a brother to Peter, and was crucified at Patral in Achaia on a cross "decussate" hence called after his name. Beneath this figure of St. Andrew are these words: "To the glory of God and in sacred memory of Alabama's brave Confederate band,

Brave men may die;
Right has no death,
Truth never shall pass away."

The memorial window of Tennessee is also very beautiful, with the coat of arms at the top, and the figure of St. Phillip below. Beneath are the beautiful words taken from the poet Campbell: "To the glory of God and in loving memory of our heroes of Tennessee, 'To live in the hearts we leave behind, is not to die.'"

The next window we give in this sketch was presented by Mississippi, the home state of our president, Jefferson Davis, who now rests in the beautiful "Hollywood" at Richmond, Va. The coat of arms of Mississippi is at the top, while the figure St. Joseph is beneath. The words below the figure are: "To the glory of God and in loving memory of the Mississippians of the Confederacy, who fell around Petersburg for their country, 'They gave their lives. Greater love hath no man than this.'"

Missouri has presented her window with her coat of arms at the top, the figure of St. Peter holding the keys of heaven. The diciple suffered the same manner of death as Jesus. These words are under the disciple: "Given by the Confederate societies of Missouri."

In the gable of the church looking northwestward there are two windows which are too small for figures of the saints. One of them bears the coat of arms of Arkansas. Around it is a wreath of myrtle. Beneath are these words: "To the glory of God and in memory of Arkansas soldiers who died for their State." The other small window bears the coat of arms of Maryland, with the wreath of myrtle, below it are these words: "To the glory of God and in loving memory of Maryland's heroic souls."

In the gable looking westward above the main entrance door is the Tiffany cross of jewels, and under this cross are the following words: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men."

These windows are made of gorgeous cathedral glass, and lend a beautiful aspect to the ivy entombed church. Three other large windows are vacant and are expected to be filled by other States with memorials this summer.

The following poem, which I shall give in full, was found written on its walls in 1841. The author of it is unknown. It's greatest charm is the sentiment of the overflowing soul of the writer. This poem alone would have immortalized the name of the author, while now, perhaps, he rests in an unhonored grave:

Thou art crumbling to the dust, old pile,
Thou art hastening to thy fall,
And 'round thee in thy loneliness
Clings the ivy to thy wall,
The worshippers are scattered now
Who knelt before thy shrine,
And silence reigns where anthems rose;
In days of "Auld Lang Syne."

And sadly sighs the wandering wind
Where oft in years gone by,
Prayers rose from many hearts to Him,
The Highest of the High;
The tramp of many a busy foot
That sought thy aisles is o'er,
And many a weary heart around
Is still forever more.

How doth ambitions hope take wing,
How droops the spirit now!
We hear the distant city's din,
The dead are mute below,
The sun that shone upon their paths
Now gilds their lonely graves;
The zephyrs which once fanned their brows,
The grass above them waves.

Oh! could we call the many back
Who've gathered here in vain—
Who've careless roved where we do now,
Who'll never meet again;
How would our weary souls be stirred
To meet the earnest gaze
Of the lovely and the beautiful
The lights of other days.

Two duels were fought in the church yard, one in 1795, in which, John Jeffress was killed. The other in the year 1821, in which Adams and Boisseau, both participants, lost their lives. Near this spot was erected a slab to the memory of the Irish refugee, John Daly Burke. He was the author of a history of Virginia and was killed in a duel on the banks of the Appomattox in the year of 1808, was buried near this city. May the Virginia breezes make music in the pines above his grave, and the flowers and verdant vines entwine around his tomb.

A monument to Gen. McRae who fought in the war of 1812, stands in this cemetery, and for him and his brave men who volunteered, this monument was erected, it from them Petersburg gets its title of Cockade City.

The tomb of William Mahone stands on a slight eminence to the eastward of the church, which bears no mark or inscription save the letter "M."

Here in a sequestered spot is the grave of Gen. Phillips, the British officer, who conducted the operations against Petersburg, Va., in Revolutionary struggle, and of whom Thomas Jefferson remarked, "He was the proudest man of the proudest nation on earth."

Many memorials of the Revolutionary war cluster around this quaint old church. Here lie heroes of the war of 1812. Here lie heroes of the Mexican war. Though the number of each is small indeed, yet here and there in profusion wave the "stars and bars" above the graves of the heroes of the Southland, heroes of the Civil War.

Between two evils it's better for a woman to marry a man who chews tobacco rather than one who is always chewing the rag. But, what about the woman who is always chewing the rag and talking about her neighbors? Would it not be a good thing if she chewed the end of her "wagger"?

"To make the man, you must begin when he is a boy," said the greatest living American. The boy is coming into his rights more and more. Let him witness the great educational exhibit of dairy and beef cattle, light and heavy draft horses, hogs, sheep, poultry, fruit, grains and farm machinery at the Great Roanoke Fair, Sept. 26-29.

Dr. Orin K. Phlegar has moved his family from Crandon to Radford, Va., where he will practice his profession, that of medicine. Orin is a good doctor and a fine fellow, and the people of Crandon hated to have him leave. We hope he will have abundant success, both financially and professionally, in his new field of labor.

Last week, just before going to press, we had to insert a large advertisement, in consequence of which, we had to leave out nearly all our correspondence. This is something we hate to do and does not happen very often. All are after the dollar, and this includes us. A number of them will be found on our outside for this week. We hope our readers will bear with and not think hard of us.

W. J. Odell has the contract to build a concrete sidewalk six feet wide on the west side of Main street from H. B. Shelton's store to the end of the Brotherton property. This ought to continue, by all means, to the Presbyterian church, as we have no sidewalk to this house of worship that could be called one. The one we have is like the Irishman who could not think of a name, and called it a "thing." So a "thing" it is.

For Sale—I have a lot of one acre with a cottage house of three rooms and basement upon same, which I will sell at a reasonable price. For terms apply to

To the Ladies of Giles County!

I have accepted the agency for the Spirella Corset. It has five points of supreme importance in a corset stay not found elsewhere. First, unbreakable, non-rustable, retains its shape, flexible in every direction, and last, but not least, an official guarantee against rust and breakage for one year, accompanies every corset. Conforming to every curve, yielding to every movement of the body, confining without injurious compression, giving elegance of contour without sacrifice of comfort, light weight. Call and let me take your measure when in town.

The Pearisburg High School opens here next Monday, September 4th. Heads of families should see to it that their children start in the first day and that they attend regular thereafter. No one can learn anything going one day and staying out the next. It is also a good plan to have your children learn their lessons at night, for they will be better prepared for the next day. This helps the teacher as well as the scholar. We have a corps of efficient teachers, none more capable anywhere, and if the scholars will treat them with kindness and respect, we are sure they will do the same to them. Don't forget to start in next Monday and go regularly until the end of the term.

On a warrant sworn out by D. W. Mason, H. W. Thaxton of Pulaski, entered a plea of guilty of running a motor cycle at a greater rate of speed than eight miles per hour on the road between Pearisburg and Ripplemead and was fined ten dollars and costs by Justice C. M. Munsey. This road is one upon which there are many sharp curves, steep declines and creats, which makes it important that the law be complied with in order to protect those who travel on horse back and in vehicles, and the citizens living on the road have taken the proper steps by instituting these prosecutions which it is hoped will secure a strict observance of the law.

THE LAND SALE.

Last Monday, according to announcement, the Galax Investment Co., through their auctioneers, Penny Bros. and Thomas Bros., of Greensboro, N. C., disposed of the unsold lots in the Johnston addition to the town of Pearisburg. The day was fine, a good crowd was present, the music by the now famous Wabash Band was fine, the auctioneers were at their best and everything passed along nicely. The lots were sold at satisfactory figures and we now hope to see many nice residences go up on this beautiful addition to our town.

MUSICALE.

The Musicale at the High School Building Friday night was a grand success. The quietness of the audience attested the fact that there are many lovers of good music in Pearisburg. The only regret was that more people did not come out and spend the evening profitably where pleasure and culture reigned; for truly music uplifts the soul.

Miss Marjore Shumate opened the program and proved her great accomplishments in technique and style.

Miss Williams of Glade Springs was delightful. The Magnetic Waltz cast its charm on all while the encore, "The May Day Song" was perfectly beautiful.

Mr. Jones was greatly appreciated, his full rich voice was splendid in "The Son of the Desert," while "The Four Leaf Clover" was perfect.

Mrs. Mason delighted every one with her exquisite accompaniments. Mrs. Pearson, another gifted musician, played with a delicate touch and understanding.

The musical was arranged by Mrs. Bernard Mason, the most accomplished pianist in this part of the country. Much credit and appreciation is due her for her excellent program and execution."

The only reading toned in with the music. Mrs. Mason played while Miss Mary Frances Mason gave "Grandmother's Minuet."

The Musical was for the benefit of the Pastor's Aid Society of the Presbyterian church, and the President wishes to show her appreciation and express her thanks in behalf of the Society to Mrs. Mason and those who labored to make the evening a success, Misses Helen Mason and Edna Shumate.

Each of the chief organs of the body is a link in the Chain of Life. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link, the body no stronger than its weakest organ. If there is weakness of stomach, liver or lungs, there is a weak link in the chain of life which may snap at any time. Often this so-called "weakness" is caused by lack of nutrition, the result of weakness or disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases and weaknesses of the stomach and its allied organs are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When the weak or diseased stomach is cured, diseases of other organs which seem remote from the stomach but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, are cured also.

The strong man has a strong stomach. Take the above recommended "Discovery" and you may have a strong stomach and a strong body.

IF.

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting, too;
If you can wait and not be tired of waiting,
Or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise.

If you can dream and not make dreams your master.
If you can think and not make thoughts your aim
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same,
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools.

If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings,
And never breathe a word about your loss;
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on, when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them 'Hold on'!

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings,—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more,—you'll be a Man, my son!

—Rudyard Ripling.

Truth.

The late Mr. Pilate is often quoted as asking in a jesting manner. "What is truth?"

Well, what is truth, anyway!

Some men arise and shout defiantly that two and two are four, that the darkest hour is just before dawn and that the sun rises in the east.

Nine tenths of their hearers are profoundly impressed and vote for them, believing that men who stand so doggedly for such principles are deserving of trust.

However, such things are not simple truth; they are statements of fact, and statements of fact are generally platitude.

Truth is what you believe.

Your neighbor possibly disbelieves it.

Therefore it is not truth to him.

You argue over it; he thinks he disproves it and you think you prove it.

The third person who hears your argument goes away believing that you are both wrong.

Truth lies at the bottom of a well, also if crushed to earth she will rise again—but half of us dispute over how to pump her up and the other half stand ready to crush her to earth once more.

One man's truth is another man's exploded theory.—Life.

Col. Cecil Given Regiment.

ASSIGNED TO NEW YORK POST.

Former Officer at Fort Benjamin Harrison Will Take Charge of Governors Island Garrison.

Col. George R. Cecil, in command of the garrison at Fort Benjamin Harrison, has been assigned to the Twenty-ninth Infantry at Governors Island, N Y. The assignment was announced yesterday by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood. Col. Cecil said last night that he had not been notified of the assignment, but if it had been made he probably would be notified today.

He has been awaiting an assignment since last March, when he was promoted from the rank of lieutenant colonel to colonel, under an act of Congress of March 3, 1911. He was ordered to remain at Fort Benjamin Harrison when the Tenth Regiment was sent to Texas last spring.

Col. Cecil was born in Giles County, Virginia, Feb. 12, 1849, and has been in the army forty one years. He entered Westpoint as a cadet Sept. 1, 1870, and June 17, 1874, was assigned to the Thirteenth Infantry as a second lieutenant. He was sent with his regiment to Wyoming and remained with the Thirteenth while it was stationed in Wyoming, Louisiana, Arkansas, New Mexico, Arizona and New York, and until May 9, 1898, when he was made lieutenant colonel and adjutant general of volunteers of the Fourth Army Corps.

Sent to Cuba.

While in the Thirteenth he was promoted to first lieutenant, and was captain when he became identified with the volunteers. From the Fourth Corps he was sent to the George H. Thomas Camp at Chickamanga, Tenn., with the First and Third corps. He went from Chickamanga with Brig. Gen. J. H. Wilson to Cuba, and became adjutat general of the Department of Lapanzas.

While serving in Cuba he was relieved from duty and sent to Switzerland as the military attache of the embassy there. He remained three years in Switzerland, when he was ordered to go to the Philippine Islands with the Eighth Infantry. From the Philippines he was ordered to return to the United States, and was stationed at Fort Crook, Neb., as major of the Thirtieth Infantry.

Before returning to the United States he had been transferred from the Eighth to the Third Regiment, and from the Third to the Twenty-sixth, with the rank of major. Orders sent him from Fort Crook, Neb., to Porto Rico, in command of the Porto Rican regiment. He became lieutenant colonel in the Tenth, Jan. 31, 1907.

With the Tenth, Col. Cecil went to Alaska and was stationed at Fort Gibbon, the fort farthest north under the control of the United States army. He returned to the United States with the Tenth in July, 1908, and has since been at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Col. Cecil's family is in Boston. He says that, while he has no information about his assignment, it probably will necessitate his leaving Fort Benjamin Harrison immediately to take charge of his new post. Governors Island is in New York harbor.

There is no doubt that if the guinea hen is properly cared for at all times that it will prove almost as profitable as any of the ordinary breeds of chickens.

Conforming to every curve, yielding to every movement of the body, confining without injurious compression, giving elegance of contour without sacrifice of comfort, light weight. Call and let me take your measure when in town.

We predict at no distant day Pearisburg will be a borough, if not a city.

Read the announcement of Geo. L. Bane of Narrows, for Justice of the Peace for Pearisburg District, in this issue. Mr. Bane is filling this office now, and has done so for many years, being Justice of the Peace for Walker's Creek District before moving to the Narrows. This speaks well for him, as to his popularity and as to his meting out justice to those who were before him. He will be in the future, as in the past, a tried and true official.

Our enterprising and energetic horsemen, Messrs. D. W. Mason and W. H. Thomas, will have a fine exhibit of thoroughbreds at the Radford Fair, which commenced Wednesday and ends Friday. We presume their animals will be hard to beat.

Troubles never come singly, so they say, and it appears to be the case with our old friend Ballard P. French of Wolf Creek. Last week he had the misfortune to lose his baby, nearly two years old, and since then a young son of his has been taken with typhoid fever, and is very low. He has our deepest sympathy in his sad afflictions.

The Wabash Band went on Monday last to Bluefield to take part in the monster parade given by the lodge of Woodmen of the World, that being Labor Day. This day was largely celebrated in our neighbor city, many thousands taking part. This famous band is now playing for the Radford Fair. They seem to be a drawing card. May they continue to improve and gain notoriety as time passes along.

Prof. M. H. Shepard and wife of Narrows, who have been making their home out in Verdon, Oklahoma, where the professor is engaged in teaching school, and who spent their vacation at home here, have returned to their home. He says the about the VIRGINIAN: "I certainly enjoy the paper and always look forward to Sunday when I get it." We wish the professor and his amiable wife happiness and prosperity in their Western home.

Prof. Jas. R. Stafford and family left here Monday for Rocky Mount, where the professor goes to take charge of the High School at that place. Mr. Terrell Shrader will be his first assistant in the school. This selection is a wise and good one, as Terrell is one of our most esteemed and gentlemanly young men. We are sorry to lose Mr. S. and family from our midst, as they were certainly one of our most popular, esteemed and Christian families. But what is our loss is Rocky Mount's gain.

Mr. French Rowe and Miss Georgia, daughter of Mr. W. D. Pearson of this place, tired of living single, went to Dublin depot and took a train for Bristol, where they appeared before Parson Burroughs on last Saturday, who tied the knot for them. On their return they went to Ennis, W. Va., the home of the groom. They are now happily located at Bluff City, where the groom has a good paying job at the tannery. We wish them abundant happiness and prosperity as they jog along life's pathway together.

Miss Janie Drinkard of Bristol, will have charge of the music department. She is a graduate of the Conservatory of Music of Sullins College and comes highly recommended by the president of the college and by her music instructors, not only as thorough in music, but also experienced in the art of teaching.

WORD FROM ROANOKE.

Word has just been received from Roanoke that the enrollment at the opening of the Roanoke-National Business College is the largest in the history of the school. Nearly every county in Virginia and many adjoining states are represented. The enrollment this year will probably reach one thousand, and every graduate and advanced student will be placed in a good position. Young people from this vicinity should attend.

EDUCATIONAL RALLY.

An educational rally will be held at Narrows, Sunday morning September 10th. A good programme will be rendered. Dr. Neighbors, President of Sullins College, will speak on Christian Education at the Methodist church at 11 o'clock, and Dr. McConnell of Emory & Henry College, will speak at night at the Christian church. The choirs of the two churches will unite in giving the best of music. Patrons and students of Narrows High School are expected to turn out in full force to hear those distinguished speakers..

PROPERTY SOLD.

Hugh Croy has sold his house and lot in this place to Theo Dulaney, and is now building him a residence on his farm near here.

J. S. Woodyard and James Woods have bought the planing and grist mill of Hugh Croy, and will do planing and grinding in the future the same as has been done. Mr. Woodyard is owner of the lot on which the mill stands.

N. C. Hetherington has bought the Snidow property, opposite the Baptist church, whether he intends to get married or not, we are not informed.

Dr. W. A. Johnston has sold his home and seven acres of land to Dr. J. A. Booth of Saltville, who will at an early day open up a drug store here. Dr. Johnston and family will make their residence in Roanoke.

OPENING OF PEARISBURG HIGH SCHOOL.

On Sept. 4th Pearisburg High School opened under most favorable circumstances and now has right of way. Everybody seems willing to step aside if necessary to give the young people room. The handsome lads and pretty lassies have brought new life to town, and somehow we all feel younger and better since their arrival.

Though beginning earlier than usual the enrollment reached two hundred six the first day. There are many more to enter.

It is very gratifying to see so many students from a distance and we extend to them a hearty welcome.

Quite a number of patrons were present the first morning. Short talks were made by Bro. Prater, Messrs. Dulaney and Woodyard and Judge Martin Williams.

Next week we hope to be able to publish a list of the out of town students.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PIONIC.

The Sunday-school of Cedar Grove church on Wolf Creek, held their annual picnic in Patterson's grove last Saturday.

Baskets well filled with all kinds of good things to eat were on the grounds. Watermellons, bananas and lemonade were in abundance.

Dinner was served on a long table prepared for the occasion. Every one present ate all they could and there was enough left to appease the hunger of as many more, provided, there were not too many editors and sheriffs present.

All present had a jolly good time. Too much cannot be said in praise of the committee who had the programme in charge in making the occasion a success.

A game of ball was played in the afternoon between Round Bottom and Wolf Creek teams, which resulted in 9 to 11 in favor of Wolf Creek. The same teams played at Chapel picnic a couple of weeks ago, which resulted in 5 to 4 in favor of the same team.

The good people in the vicinity of the church complain and are somewhat aggrieved on account of the wording of the notice published in our last week's paper, relative to their picnic, in saying dinner would be free to all above Shumate's and requesting all below Shumate's to bring their baskets with them. The committee in charge of the program of arrangements, disclaim any intention on their part in making any such request, especially so, when their Sunday-school had been so courteously invited to attend the picnics of their neighber churches.

We hope our correspondents in giving us the news, will adhere strictly to the truth, as they might cause us more or less trouble and hard thoughts when we have no intention of misrepresenting any one. Try and be more careful in the future.

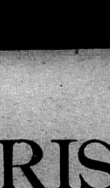
Fortune Telling



Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health.
The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.
Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

EMPIRE, JR., Drill is strictly up-to-date in every respect.

It has changeable feeds, and speed levers, at the will of the operator while drill is in motion. The popularity of the EMPIRE, JR., among farmers, comes from the fact, that the drill makes good to them just the same as the Company makes good to us.

The Great Destroyer.

FORTY DOLLARS EGONOMIC LOSS FOR EVERY DOLLAR OF LIQUOR REVENUE.

It has been found that, in the smallest quantity, alcohol is a poison.

It has no food value.

If you take one glass of beer, your efficiency will be lowered eight per cent. If you take three glasses of beer, or its equivalent a day, at the end of twelve days, your general efficiency will have been lowered from twenty five to forty per cent., varying according to the kind of work you are doing.

That will give you a true measure of the effect of this poison upon the nation's productiveness. There are fifty per cent. of all of our people who drink on occasion. They must certainly lose, conservatively estimated, at least ten per cent. of their efficiency.

That means a lowering of five per cent. in the productiveness of our nation.

Then for the five per cent. who are heavy drinkers or drunkards, we must assume they lose eighty per cent. which means a loss of four per cent. in the nation's productiveness. The sum total makes at least twenty-one and one-half per cent. loss.

That means that last year the nation was short in its productiveness, through the use of alcohol, over $7,000,000,000.

Add to this the amount of the drink bill last year, and the money expended for institutions for the insane, the poor, etc., the support of courts made necessary for liquor.

What do you suppose the total revenue collected last year from the liquor traffic was? Less than $500,000,000. Yet you will find communities under the astounding fallacy that the liquor traffic is good for the business of the community and as an argument they will cite the revenue received.

For every dollar of revenue, you impose five dollars of taxation for the crime, pauperism and insanity produced, and that amounts to over two billion of dollars. The total amount expended for and because of liquor is $16,000,000,000.

There is, therefore, forty dollars of economic loss for every dollar of revenue.

When this nation expends $1,000,000,000 a year for appropriations, we cry out in dismay. What shall we say of a tyrant that has no Congress, but who has a very large share in our Congress!

What shall we say of a tyrant that sits upon a throne and imposes a burden of sixteen and one-half billions for the purpose of destruction and degeneracy!

If some invader came to this land, and took away from any inhabitant the products of his farm, this country, it need be, would go to arms.

Here we have a destroyer who comes down upon us every year, and takes away from our people more than all the products of all the farms, forests, mines and fisheries combined, as though it took away from the nation, mother earth, the land and the water together.

Would you not say that it was not only the right but the duty of the State to put an end to any such tyranny!—Excerpts from an Address of Hon. Richmond P. Hobson before the National W. C. T. T. Convention, Baltimore, Md.

The other woman profits by the mistakes a man's wife makes.

THE PASSING DAYS.

Two-thirds of the year 1911 is gone. The whole of the summer is gone. Those of us who observe closely know that already the sun begins to raise a little later, to go behind the mountains and give the gorgeous sunset hues on the clouds a little earlier. The afternoons become shorter. So it comes to each of us to consider how we have used the year so far as it has gone, and the summer. In the winter time of early darkness and long, dark nights and barren trees and naked landscapes we thought of June and sunshine and flowers and abundant verdure. Now June is gone, and the question is whether we made the best of it while it was passing us, day by day.

The human memory is beyond explanation. Episodes and incidents live with us. Be we old or young, flashes come to us from the past. Pictures sometimes apparently unimportant, are fixed on the plates of our recollection and stand clear while important events and conditions are blurred. So with most of us some days of our lives stand out as distictly happy. The further we get from them, the brighter and more beautiful they become.

The convict lying in his cell counting the hours when he must go to execution goes back over his life and finds here and there a day which shines out as do spots on the turf when the sunlight sparkles through a rift in a shadowing tree. The successful and triumphant man with all the luxuries and honors of the world about him likewise looks back in his satiety and his weariness to days when he felt free of care and knew life as it ought to be and was happy and peaceful.

The good Lord gives to most of us such days and times. Sometimes they are winter days or long summer days, sometimes evenings around the lights of home, sometimes the afternoons while the shadows of the trees lie long across the grass and the world seems to be at peace and silenced. The disaster is that most of us refuse to know that we are happy when we are happy. The father who goes out in the calm of a summer evening with his wife and child draws into his soul great draughts of serenity and peace and happiness, and does not know it, perhaps until long years after when his memory gives back to him the restfulness, the changing sunshine and shadows, the tenderness that stirred and sweetened his soul. Even the mother may forget for the time the pride and glory of her new motherhood and of her wifehood and the instinct of exultation she had in going forth with her child and her husband—her's and her own, however poor she might be and however ominous the prospects following the little holiday. She neglects for the time; and in time to come cherishes and yearns and sorrows, perhaps.

While we are at peace and rest and happy, if it be but for a day or a few hours, let us understand ourselves. The pleasant and happy days and time are not too many in the lives of any of us. Cares and anxieties and worries come to rich and poor, to high and low. So, also, come the seasons of surcease from care, when our very souls are bathed in balm of love and light and peace and happiness whether it be in the flooding light of summer or moonlight or the lights of home. We may not avoid the trouble and the sting. They force themselves upon us and make us feel. The mistake we make is that we do not take the light and rapture into our very souls while we may; that we do realize that we are happy while we are happy, do not warm our hearts in the sunshine, take into them the fragrance and the beauty of the summer time or the still majesty and glory of the winter time, the glories of the autumn or the splendor of the spring. Too much we leave these things to be recalled in vain and yearning retrospection while, if we would, we could know and feel them at their fullness as we live in them and they go by us.—Roanoke Times.

BIGGEST BABY IN LAND.

Mount Airy, Georgia, has the largest baby in the land and he continues to grow. His name is James Adolph Oody. He is two two years and three months old, weighs one hundred and twenty-two pounds and is growing every day.

With the first indication of the abnormal growth his parents consulted a physician, and James Adolph was put under his care. All efforts to keep the baby on a diet suitable for one of his age, proved unsuccessful to keep him normal.

The baby's measurements are:
Height, 39 inches barefoot.
Around head 24 1-2 inches.
Neck, 14 inches.
Bust, 33 inches.
Around arm above elbow, 12 inches.
Wrist, 8 inches.
Across hand above thumb, 6 1-4 inches.
Around first finger near hand, 2 1-2 inches.
Around thigh, 25 inches.
Above knee, 16 inches.
Below knee, 13 inches.
Ankle, 9 inches.
Around foot, 8 1-2 inches.
Length of foot, 6 1-2 inches.
Across shoulders, 15 inches

Baby sleeps well and is perfectly healthy and very strong. His appetite is like that of a grown person. For breakfast he will eat three and four large biscuits with bacon gravy, butter and syrup, two glasses of buttermilk and two cups of coffee.

Between breakfast and dinner he will eat two more biscuits with butter and syrup.

For dinner he can eat a large plate of any kind of vegetables, with boiled bacon, corn bread, biscuit and a whole pie, if he can get it, with two glasses of buttermilk.

Baby eats again between dinner and supper, and his supper is in keeping with his breakfast and dinner.

One of his chief amusements is to rock in an ordinary rocking chair, which he fills comfortably. If candy is added to his pleasure, he is perfectly contented.

While he appreciates the endless little attentions a baby receives, he has missed much of this as but few members of his family could, with any degree of comfort to him or to themselves, lift him to their knee and carry him about.

He has a sunny disposition and rarely ever frets at the curiosity of those who go to see him.

An experienced teacher says that pupils who have access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who do not, are better readers, better spellers, better grammarians, better punctuators, and read more understandingly and obtain a practical knowledge of geography in almost half the time it requires others. The newspaper is decidedly an important factor in modern life. This will not be disputed by any one who has taken the trouble to investigate the matter for himself.—Gate City Herald.

HOW TO LIVE.

"How to die," is not half so religious a question as "How to live." The man who lives with a clear conscience will die happily without fear. The problem of life is living, not dying. Life is the most natural gift of the Creator, for He gave man life by breathing into him the breath of life. He wants us to live long and live well. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

Life is strengthened and prolonged by normal, natural means. Artificiality weakens and destroys life.

A few months ago the earth was dead to all appearances, frozen to death by a long winter, numbed by the cold frosts. Every leaf was gone, the skeleton trees were ice-clad and brittle. The hills and fields were buried beneath the snow. But suddenly they lived again. Spring, with all her glory and fragrance, was with us. The crocus and ionquil, the hepatica and arbutus, the violet and tulip were here. The robbins began to sing in the morning. All this is natural.

Why not learn "how to live" from God's good world around us! In other words, get out into the air, even if we have to be out before breakfast in order to do it. Fill your lungs with oxygen. Take vigorous exercise in the open air. Take time to walk home instead of lazily loanging on a strap all the way up the hill or breathing the condensed second hand air of sixty passengers, mixed with tobacco smoke from the rear platform. Swing your arms when you walk and get up motion. Don't move slowly along as if you had locomotaxia and then try to tell yourself that you are tired and have spring fever. Raise up the shades and let the sun into your office. If it hurts your eyes turn your back on it and have the sunlight for a background. Buy a bunch of violets or arbutus for your wife on your way home. The man who spends more money for cigars than he does for confectionery for his wife and flowers for his home doesn't deserve either. Instead of thinking how other men ought to live demonstrate your theories by personal experiment. Let sunshine, sleep, fresh air, exercise and a happy frame of mind transform your pale, sleepy, round-shouldered, tired, worried existence into a life worth living, and the Summer and Fall of 1911 will go down in life's history as the best one on record.—John Timothy Stone, in New York Observer.

TAFT'S FINEST MESSAGE.

The Taft matrimonial policy is all right, anyhow! Here it is, as given out after 25 years experience:

"Absolute and positive love for one another at the beginning.

"Ambition on the part of both for the success of the family—team work.

"Directness in all relations with each other.

"Moral courage to reject anything and everything requiring subservience.

"A continuance and growth of the devotion for one another possessed at the beginning."

A real poem of matrimonial felicity, Mr. President! Your best message to your countrymen and your most successful policy.

What a beautiful world this would be if every husband and wife lived up to this domestic ideal—lovers and sweethearts forever and aye!

Some men wear themselves out, and others simply rust.

WHAT A LEGTURE TAUGHT ONE WOMAN.

A number of years ago a gentleman in Spotsylvania county planted four cherry trees. They flourished and grew to be large and beautiful trees but bore no fruit. Later the gentleman married a school teacher. The subject of cutting down the trees came up, but the wife asked that they be not cut down as they made elegant shade and were lovely to look at.

Last year the wife, who continued to teach, attended the Summer Normal school held here where a professor in the course of an address spoke of the fact that some trees did not yield fruit, but by cultivation and cutting a portion of the roots away they could be made to bear fruit.

On her return the subject of the trees came up again, the husband wishing to cut them down as they bore no fruit and shaded too much good land. The wife then told what the professor had said in his lecture and begged that the trees be spared another year and the experiment be tried, which was done. This year the trees were loaded with cherries, the finest of the neighborhood and the suggestion of the lecturer will be adopted by other farmers.

The Daughters of the Confederacy gave an ice cream supper Tuesday evening, but with what success they met with, we are not informed.

Mrs. Chas. D. French of Narrows, who has been quite sick for some time, we are glad to state, is improving. We hope to hear of her ultimate recovery soon.

Next Sunday morning Rev. J. L. Prater will preach at Bluff City at 11 o'clock; Hale's school house at four o'clock in the afternoon, and Narrows, 7:30 o'clock at night.

Work on the new sidewalk in front of our sanctum, is progressing rapidly, and if nothing happens, will be done shortly. Let there be railings on each side for the safety of pedestrians.

Geo. C. Wilburn of Sugar Run, has been on a visit to his son Lewis, at Elkhorn, W. Va. He announces the addition to his son's family of a bouncing boy. On his return home he stopped over at Bluefield Sunday where he visited relatives. He also took in the circus at Narrows on Monday on his way home. These old "codgers" love to go to the circus—of course the animals is what they want to see, not the daintily dressed ladies.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Visitors of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, this institution found itself in such condition, financially, as to warrant a reduction of $10 in the matriculation fee for the coming session. This annual charge has long been $15, a reduction of $5 will be appreciated. They hope to abolish this fee except for Freshmen. Many improvements looking to better work and student comfort have been made during the summer. The health conditions of the campus are excellent.

A card from our old friend, W. D. Woolwine, postmarked Halifax, N. S., September 4th, states they have seen Canada from West to East, that it is a beautiful, historic, interesting and very prosperous country. He says the people are divided and are fighting reciprocity, but says it is bound to come. He says Halifax is an old, beautiful and interesting city. From this city he goes to Evangelines Land, to St. John's, N. B.; from there to Boston, Mass., New York City, Washington and on to the greatest of all places, Pearisburg, landing here about October 1st. We hope nothing will mar their pleasure while on this prolonged trip.

Mrs. J. T. S. Hoge of Hoge's Store, who has been at All Healing Springs on account of bad health, arrived at home Saturday last, much improved. We hope to hear of her being entirely well soon.

J. G. Alvis of Narrows, who has been at the hospital for several weeks, returned home last week, much improved in health, but rather weak. We are glad to say he is improving rapidly and hope he will be himself again soon.

The youngest participant we have yet heard of in the recent primary, is W. Hambrick Walker, twelve months old of Bluff City, who went to the election and held a pair of horses while his two grandfathers went into the polls and voted for Martin and Swanson. Quite a young kid, eh, to help run a Democratic machine!

Norfolk & Western passenger train No. 8 going west narrowly escaped a bad wreck early Tuesday night while passing through Eggleston tunnel. A freight was passing through the tunnel at the same time when a box car jumped the track side swiping the mail car. The train was delayed over three hours. No one was injured.

Rev. Thos. B. Sheldon, who has supplied the Presbyterian churches in the county during his summer vacation, left this week to attend the Union Theological College, Richmond, Va., where he goes to finish his ministerial education. Rev. Sheldon won the hearts of many people while here, and it is with deep regret we have to part with him.

Sanger's Combined Shows exhibited at Narrows last Monday to a large and very quiet audience. The proprietors seemed to be genteel and very nice gentlemen. The people employed by them were kind and behaved themselves in a very creditable manner. The show was the cleanest, best and most refined, ever given in these parts. When-ever you see the heading, Sanger's, it is well worth your while going to it.

We attended the Radford-Fair on Thursday last and found a large and attractive crowd in attendance. The usual attractions in the way of shows, and many other things to catch the penny, were there as usual. There were quite a goodly number from this section, and we learn some fine horses from Giles were there. The Fair, we presume, was a success, and the managers, are no doubt, pleased with this year's result. The Wabash Band from this county, furnished music for the occasion, and all who heard them, were loud in their praise of these gifted artists.

Twins! Twins!! Twins!!!

Now circumstances force me to repeat and exclaim twins! again.

Bluff City can boast of four (4) sets, 4 boys and 4 girls, ranging in age from 5 days to 3 months. If the weather continues favorable, we may have more and I will write again. X.

TWO ABLE DISCOURSES.

Rev. Dr. W. S. Neighbors, who is easily one of the most talented and eminent divines of the Holston Conference, lectured at Narrows last Sunday morning on the subject, "Christian Education," and in the evening of same day at Pearisburg, on the subject, "Good Literature."

We are advised that he delighted his hearers at Narrows, and if he acquitted himself there he as well as he did at Pearisburg, the occasion was indeed interesting.

It is seldom that the people have the opportunity to hear such able discourses as were delivered on these occasions, and those who missed hearing these certainly missed something grand.

We understand an effort will be made to get Dr. Neighbors to come here again, and it the effort is successful, a packed church will no doubt greet him.

IN FULL SESSION.

The Fall Session of the Roanoke National Business College opened Sept. 5th with a large enrollment. New students are still arriving daily, and by October 1st nearly every seat in the big college will be occupied. Every part of the state, as well as adjoining states are represented. There are also several from a distance, Texas, Iowa, Illinois and Nova Scotia being represented. Among those attending from this county are Messrs. Wm. A. Johnston, Clyde E. Odell, Frank E. Pyrtle and Miss Pearl Pyrtle.

Several applications for graduates have been received during the past week from rail roads and business firms. Mr. Robert J. Morris of Ivanhoe, a boy only sixteen years of age, in school six months, went to a position Monday in Johnson City, Tenn., with the C. C. & O. Railroad as stenographer at $60 a month. Almost any young man with a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting can command a salary at from $50 to $100 a month with splendid prospects for advancement, if they will devote a few months' time to study and practice.

HOME WEDDING.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 7.—A home wedding of much interest took place yesterday evening at 6 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents, on Barton Heights, when Miss Emily Thompson Williams became the bride of Sidney B. Steger, of Pulaski. Miss Williams is the youngest daughter of Jas. W. Williams, who is now connected with the State Agricultural Department and former member of the House of Delegates from Giles and Pulaski, and is a sister of Jno. W. Williams, clerk of the House of Delegates.

Miss Frances Williams was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant. Hubert Steger, bro. of the groom, was best man. Mrs. A. P. Strother, a sister of the bride, played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" at the entry of the bridal party, and Rev. James Y. Fair, D. D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony. Madeline Williams, a niece of the bride, was ring-bearer.

The house was beautifully decorated with palms and quantities of lovely flowers. The bride's gown was of white crepe de chine trimmed in seed pearls, and her veil was arranged with lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Immediately after the ceremony, which was witnessed by only a few intimate friends and relatives of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Steger left for an extended tour of Northern cities. After September 20th they will make their home in Pulaski.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

Horse Breeding in Giles County.

BY L. D. WHITAKER, D. V. S.

In the breeding of horses for market, as in any other line of business, the breeder must be cognizant of what is most wanted by the horse buying public, and must strive to produce that type of horse. The breeder may not especially like the breed of horse most desired by the people who buy, but if he is in the business for dollars and cents, as is usually the case, he must ignore his own likes and dislikes and endeavor to produce what the other fellow wants and is willing to pay a good round figure for. It is true that the large draught horse always commands a good market, and will, no doubt, continue to do so, as he is needed in the large cities by the men doing business there, in which it is necessary to do heavy hauling. But, at the same time, the fact should not be lost sight of that some of the lighter breeds of horses are equally in demand by the moneyed people in the large cities. Among these lighter breeds of horses there are probably none that is more popular with men of means than the Hackney. The people buying this class of horse are the ones who do not let fifty or a hundred dollars stand between them and the horse, if he conforms to what they are looking for.

Then again the cost of feeding lies in favor of the higher breed of horses, and when a man is raising any number of horses, this is a factor to be reckoned with when he comes to figure on cost of production and profit.

The Hackney breed of horses originated in Norfolk, England, through crossing thoroughbred stallions with native Norfolk trotting mares, which were noted for great speed and endurance.

The typical Hackney is a strongly built, compact strong-boned, smooth, muscular horse of fine stylish appearance and usually possessed of a kindly disposition, His graceful plumpness and the perfect curving of his outlines make him essentially "a gentleman's horse," perfectly adapted to carry fine harness and draw a handsome equipage in the park or on the boulevard. His head is light, clean cut, with intelligent countenance, neck strong, well arched, muscular, but free from coarseness; shoulder smooth and oblique, body rotund, short compact; hips smooth; quarters plump with well formed muscles; legs short, strong boned flat; tendons prominent; hoofs symmetrical and of good quality. His action is high, round, quick, elastic, regular, not only in front but behind. The hocks being perfectly flexed, to balance the "trappy" action of the knees. The common colors are bay and brown. The average height from 15:1 to 15:3 hands. This breed has been bred pure and true to his present type for over one hundred years and possesses strong prepotency to stamp his breed and individual characteristics upon his offspring, and is for this reason well fitted for mating with selected trotting mares, or mares of mixed breeding for the production of stylish, high stepping coach and cob horses for use in the cities. The nearer the mares selected for this work approximate the Hackney type, the more certain are their offspring to possess natural, inherent, coach horse action, which may be further developed and perfected by shoeing and training. The high prices realized for Hackneys at a recent auction sale held at Richard ● Evans' in Woodhatch Stud in England, should encourage those horse breeders who are breeding to Hackney stallions, and should act as an incentive to other breeders to investigate the merits of the Hackney horse. The following taken from the current issue of The Breeders Gazette, shows the good prices realized by Mr. Evans for the Hackney stock. "Mr. Evans owned some good stock, but it was not extraordinary. For thirty four head sold he received $20,300, an average of $597. The offerings included old brood mares and unbroken yearlings and weanlings, and the prices for such stock were among the highest for a decade in England. Beckingham Lady Grace, a five-year old mare by Beckingham Squire, out of Lady Helmsley by Garton, Duke of Connaught, made the top price $4,000. Her dam, ten years old, brought $1,500, and a suckling filly by Evanthus, out of the old mare, $200. For Julia, a fourteen year old brood mare, A. W. Hickering paid $850, while her daughter, Serial Queen, by Polonius, brought $2,000, and her yearling colt by the same sire, $340. Herrington Milkmaid, the dam of Edward McLean's Waddington Goldfinder, brought $350, and her daughter, Terrington Handmaiden, a full sister to Mr. McLean's prize winning harness horse, $650. A suckling colt by Evanthus, out of the latter mare, brought $250. Other gratifying prices for brood mares and young things were $1,300 for a yearling filly Woodhatch Sunflower, by Polonius, out of Woodhatch Iris, by Garton Duke of Connaught, $1,300; for the two year old colt, Khedive, by Heywood Viceroy, $950; for the three year old filly Arcadia, by Mathias, and $625 for Bindsall Daisy by Garton Duke of Connaught. Evanthus was put up but withdrawn at $4,750, a reserve price of $5,000 having been put upon the stallion."

It is true that these prices were for well bred animals in another part of the world, but conditions are so favorable for the production of active, sound, healthy and hardy horses in Giles county, that our farmers should engage in the horse breeding industry with enterprise and intelligence, and there is no reason why we should not produce horses second to none in the world. The building of a strong and perfect frame is of supreme importance in the production of horses of the various types, and to this end, the composition of the soils of a country and the character of the plants grown thereon, should be suitable to the requirements of a perfect nutrition. For the development of dense, ivory-like bone of sufficient caliber, such as is possessed by the Hackney, mineral matters must abound in the food and drink of horses, and without the requisites of nutrition, imperfect animals will be produced. Climate is also an important factor in animal production; for upon its character depends, to a certain degree, the constitution and temperament of the animals of a county or State.

Giles county, according to these requirements, is eminently adapted for the breeding and rearing of horses of the highest type and quality. The soil is rich in mineral matters. The drinking water is strongly impregnated with valuable mineral matters. The atmosphere is bright, bracing and pure with oxygen requisite for lung development and blood building, while abundant sunlight benefits animals and plants alike. Feeding materials are everywhere grown in abundance, and being rich in protein and earthly materials, are especially fitted for perfect frame development. We can at all times supply our horses with nutritious food from never failing stores of bluegrass and corn forage. Our pastures are kept green by sufficient moisture and there is ample corn grown to augment the rations with best and fat-producing elements during our cold, bright, healthy, bracing winters.

Where all of the requisites for perfect development of frame and body exist, as they do in Giles county, it may be taken for granted that vim, vigor, hardy constitution and staying powers, will be the natural legacy of the horses here bred.

We must forthwith follow more intelligent methods in our breeding and feeding operations and combine and co-operate in townships, counties, and the State in general for the advancement of our horse-breeding industry. By doing this we can gain a place at the front in horse-breeding.

The Work Done Inside.

Mr. Gough was passing a liquor saloon, in Manchester, England. He saw a drunken man lying on the ground just outside the saloon door. Mr. Gough hurried across the street and going into a grocery store said to the clerk:

"Will you let me have the largest sheet of paper that you have in your store?" The paper was brought.

"That will do," said Mr Gough. "Now, can you let me have a piece of chalk?"

"What in the world are you going to do?" the clerk asked.

"You shall see in a minute," said Mr. Gough. So he printed on the paper in nice, large letters—"Specimen of the Work Done Inside."

Then he went back and pinned the paper to the drunken man's coat, and went across the street to watch the effect.

In a very short time a crowd of people gathered around the drunken man, reading the paper, and laughing. Presently the saloonkeeper came out to see what all the noise was about. He read the words on the paper, and then asked, angrily, "Who did this?"

"Which?" asked Mr. Gough, who had joined the crowd. "If you mean what is on the paper, I did that; if you mean the man, you did that? This morning when he started for his work he was a sober man, when he went into your saloon he was a sober man, when he came out he was like that, and he was what you made him. If he isn't a specimen of the work done inside, what is he?"—Ex.

An old gentleman of pronounced religious views—a friend of our family in Scotland—wished to have cut over the door of a new house the text: "My house shall be called a House of Prayer." He left the workmen to carry out his wishes during his absence, and on his return his horror was great to find the quotation completed: "But ye have made it a den of thieves." "We had a wee thing mair room, ye see, so we just pit in the end o' the verse," was the explanation given by the Bible-loving Scot. —Westminster Gazette

Advertising has made many thousands of persons immensely wealthy. Why don't some of you merchants in Pearisburg, who have nothing to do, scarcely, who hold down chairs and dry goods boxes two-thirds of your time, try an "ad" in the VIRGINIAN and grow rich in a few years, if not in so many months!

Dr. L. D. Whitaker, D. V. S., of this place, has contributed an article to this paper, which can be found on our first page, entitled, "Horse Breeding in Giles County," which should be read by every farmer, particularly the horse-breeders of our county. We attended the L. C. Cole sale last Thursday on the other side of the river. The sale was quite largely attended and everything brought a fairly good price. While at this sale, we had the pleasure of dining with Mr. and Mrs. Cole, and was very pleasantly entertained by them. The meal was excellantly prepared, and shows Mrs. Cole to be a professional when it comes to preparing a meal. We are sorry to lose this estimable family from our midst. More Horse Talk.

Conditions are so favorable in Giles county for the production of sound, hardy horses and the native stock is so well adapted to being graded up with the pure-bred horses that have already been brought here, that the farmers should engage in breeding horses with enterprise and intelligence.

By intelligent selection and breeding there is no reason why there should not be a rapid general improvement in the horses raised in this section of Virginia, followed by a corresponding increase in their value. The county has everything necessary for producing great improvement in the horses here raised, but unless the breeders show intelligence in their breeding operations, fine imported horses and good home stock will avail but little unless each breeder familiarizes himself with the fundamental principles upon which the science and art of breeding is founded. Some of these principles are fairly constant in their action and some variable and uncertain, but those which are most essential to a fair measure of success are not numerous nor complex. Some of these are (first) breeding to a standard of excellence. (Second) breeding only from parents which conform to this standard in a marked degree. (Third) breeding from parents, especially males, which have long been bred pure. (Fourth) mating animals so as to correct the defects of the parents in the offspring. (Fifth) practicing a selection at once rigorous and persistent. (Sixth) giving proper attention to surroundings and feeding. The great necessity for breeding only from animals which conform to a standard is based on the first and greatest law of heredity, which is that like produces like. The reason for breeding from parents purely bred is based on the increased certainty in transmission secured from such breeding. When the blood of the animals bred is of a mixed variety to any extent, there is a great tendency to variation in transmission. This is due to the fact that there is an absence of dominant or controlling blood elements. In other words, the blood is not pure enough to transmit the characteristics of the animal bred, which may be a fairly good specimen but lacking plenty of blood is not able to beget offspring possessing its merits. When this impure blood is eliminated, so as to be an inappreciable factor in ordinary transmission, the animal for all practical purposes may be said to be pure bred. The animals that are the most prepotent (and by this is meant those animals possessing the power of transmitting their characteristics to their offspring) are those that have been bred along the same lines for several succeeding generations. There seems to be a general lack of understanding in regard to these principles among many breeders. A great many farmers have attempted to improve their horses by a grading in process, by which is meant, mating with pure bred stallions until the blood of these sires shall have predominated over that of the native stock and stamped the characteristics of the pure breeds upon the resultant progeny. Each step taken in this direction has been along the right lines, and the results would have proven satisfactory had the breeders continued to breed on and up by successive top crossing with sires of the same breed. But right here is where the trouble lies; a man will commence right, but soon go wrong by mating female progeny with horses of another breed—one different from the first one used, yet possibly of as good a type and character. All sorts of horses have been made in this way, with horses of mixed breeding and many of them mongrels as a result. While it is true that some phenominally good individuals have resulted from such breeding, the average mixed bred horses have proved disappointing and have sold at small prices. The only reliable method of generally improving the horses of a community as regards character, quality, type, action, utility, etc., is by persistent breeding to sires of the same breed until the blood of that breed has entirely replaced the impure or native blood gotten from the mare originally used. Where this method is followed the resultant offspring will be pure in blood, to all practical intents and purposes. As a result we would get animals with general excellence of form, quality and utility, such as characterize the breed used in the work of improvement. By way of example we will suppose that the owner of a brood mare of selected type but of mixed blood starts to grade up his horses by mating this mare with a pure bred Percheron stallion, that breed and no other should be used right along, until the effects of the mixed blood has been replaced by the Percheron blood. To do this the male progeny should all be castrated and the females of poor conformation should be sold or disposed of otherwise. The selected grade fillies should then be bred with a pure bred Percheron stallion. In this process of grading up the first progeny from the mating of a pure bred sire to a mare of mixed breeding would be a half breed, the second cross would be one-quarter, the third one eighth, the fourth one sixteenth, and the fifth one thirty second. Thus by crossing with a pure bred stallion five times in succession, the result and progeny would possess but very little of the original mixed blood, and it may possess most of the breed characteristics of the sire used. Now, suppose that the owner of this brood mare should have bred her and three of her female descendants to a pure bred Percheron stallion, and in this way produced an animal possessing fifteen sixteenths of Percheron blood, and then bred this animal to a Clyesdale, or a Belgian or a Hackney stallion; the resultant progeny would not be either of these breeds nor any other breed, and if it were a filly and in time bred it would produce offspring of very mixed breeding, and thus a mare breeding in this way would undo all the good work he had started.

The Clydesdale, the Belgian, the Hackney and all the rest of the pure breeds of horses are all right and I am not holding the Percheon up as being superior to any of them, but the point I wish to bring out is that if you start to breed to a Percheron stallion, continue to do so, and if you start to breed to one of the others stick to the one you begin with. Another mistake that is often made by breeders is in breeding to a grade stallion because he appears to be superior to a pure bred stallion. A grade stallion may possess all the characteristics that go to make a perfect horse, he may have five or six crosses of pure blood in his veins, and yet his progeny will often disappoint expectations, and why? Because he lacks prepotency, which means that he lacks the power of being able to transmit his own disirable qualities to his offspring. He lacks prepotency because this can only come from a long line of ancestry in the breeding of the individual animal. For this reason, no matter how attractive may be the form, quality, character and disposition of a grade stallion, he is apt to lack both breed and individual prepotency, and as a result his progeny will, generally speaking, favor the scrub side of ancestry more often than the pure bred sire because prepotency of the scrub is the stronger of two elements owing to his dam having been of mixed breeding for more generations than the number of times the blood in his veins has been crossed with that of a pure bred stallion. Therefore, it should be borne in mind that true grading up can only be done by means of a pure bred sire. The offspring of a grade sire with a grade female makes no advance in breeding; the resultant progeny is a grade, no higher and no lower than his parents are in regards to breeding. The foregoing statements show the necessity of knowing the pedigree of the stallion to which you are breeding your mares. For example, there may be two Percheron stallions in a community, the one a pure bred and the other a grade, the latter as an individual may appear to far surpass the former. The owner of the grade stallion may pass him as a pure bred, and as he may make the best appearance the public will naturally patronize him, and as a result introduce impure blood into stock which they may be endeavoring to grade up. It is better to breed to a pure bred stallion that is somewhat lacking in good individual characteristics but has a good pedigree, than it is to breed to a grade stallion of superior individual merit but lacking a long line of pure bred ancestors. It does not follow that every stallion having a pedigree is a good horse to breed to, but the question is as to whether he has a pedigree showing a long line of notable ancestors. For the benefit of the breeders, the owner of each stallion in Giles county should be required to publish the pedigree of his stallion in the papers of the county. They should also be required to show a certificate of soundness from a qualified veterinarian, showing that the stallion in question is free from all hereditary, transmissible or communicable diseases. Owners of mares should see to it these requirements are lived up to, before patronizing the horses. By doing this the breeder will be working for his own best interest and will be afforded an opportunity of ascertaining the true breeding of the stallion he desires to patronize. I have mentioned that the stallion should be pure bred and possess individual superiority. It is of equal importance that he should be free from all forms of unsoundness or diseases that are hereditary, and this also applies to the mares used for breeding purposes. Every breeder should have a clear understanding of the diseases and unsoundnesses that hereditary and transmissible either directly or indirectly. Generally speaking, we may say that blemishes and deformities due to accidental causes are not hereditary, and do not render an animal unfit for breeding purposes. Under this class we may place scars from injuries, blindness due to accident, lameness due to injury or anything due to causes other than disease. It is necessary to exercise great care in deciding these questions as to what is and what is not an hereditary condition, and if we wish to get the very best results from breeding animals, it is the better policy to select animals in the best of health and free from every form or unsoundness, but this is not practical. Among the diseases that are generally considered hereditary either directly or indirectly, we have as follows; Diseases of the eye, such a periodic opthalmia or moon blindness, cataract, glass eye., St. Vitus dance, stringhalt, heaves or broken wind, ringbone, spavin, sidebones, navicular disease or peculiarities of conformation rendering animals liable to disease or lameness, such as crooked hocks, flat, unsound hoofs, weak, badly formed knees, long couplings, short upright pasterns, etc. It does not follow that the progeny from parents having any of the aforementioned diseases and malformations, will all inherit these undesirable blemishes and unsoundnesses, but there is a great tendency for them to do so. It so happens at times that a mare having ringbone, or side bones, will beget progeny that is sound at birth, but being born with an inherent predisposition to these troubles, will develop them as soon as they are put to work. Again a mare of this character may produce offspring that is born sound and remains so through life, but if it is a mare and is bred it is quite likely to beget progeny affected with ringbones or side bones, having inherited a predisposition to these troubles from parents a generation removed. Hence the necessity of breeding to stock that is free from all hereditary diseases. Even after a breeder has followed all the above rules in regards to his breeding operations, there yet remains another every essential part in the raising of improved horses to be looked after, and that is proper feeding. Unless animals of all ages and stages of development are at all times provided with a full supply of the most suitable food, success will be impossible and the breeder wholly or partially fail in his undertaking. It matters not how well born a colt is, it cannot develop as it should, and at maturity is no better than the ordinary scrub if there has been an abscence of sufficient and complete nutrition. On the other hand, if the dam is well nourished during pregnancy and and when nursing and the colt from weaning time forward, is well fed, it will in all probability develop to the high standard of size, power, quality and character made possible by its breeding. Where each farmer is breeding according to his own individual ideas, as appears to be the case here in Giles county, he has to find a separate market for his products, and as a result the price paid is small. There are numbers of horses for sale here each year, but there is no uniformity among them. Such horses neither make a name for the county nor attract buyers willing to pay good prices. If the farmers here would use uniformity of blood persistently and follow the most practical methods of feeding and management in their breeding operations, the county would soon become filled with improved horses of a distinct type and character, and the fact being quickly and widely advertised would bring buyers and good profits to the breeders. To sum up and bring out the point I am driving at in a few sentences, is best done by saying that where one breed has been used for some time in a particular district, every breeder in that district should stick to the one breed he has selected until it has become the predominating one in that district. It is not meant by this that there should be but one breed of horses in the county, as it is well for each district to have one breed of draught horses and a light breed of harness horses, don't mix these breeds or any other breeds if you wish to serve your own and the communities best interest. And why, should cross breeding not be practiced? some one may ask. The answer is because cross breeding, with rare exceptions, is more likely to result in financial loss than financial gain. The pure progeny of the pure breeds that may be crossed, should have a greater money value than the cross bred progeny of the same. If the day ever comes, when in the pure form, the value of the average horse is no more than that of the average cross breed of the same, the argument for maintaining such a breed would be gone. If it were not true that pure breds are usually more valuable than their cross bred progeny, pure breeds would be wiped out of existance.

To sell promptly at a remunerative price a horse should be of a recognized market type. It can readily be seen that in a district where mixed breeding is practiced indiscriminately it is almost impossible to produce horses of a uniform type. The largest dealers and the ones that pay the best prices for good horses usually make a specialty of a certain type of horses. Now if a district has all kinds of mixed bred horses it hasn't enough of any one type of horse to attract the large buyers, and as a result the breeders have to sell to smaller dealers, with a resultant lower price. The horse that is most in demand today is the draught horse; a typical draught horse should stand between sixteen and seventeen hands high, should weigh sixteen hundred pounds and over, and in addition to this should have good conformation, soundness and free correct action, should be present in even the heaviest draught horses, especially at the walking gait. Draught geldings of the finest type, action, quality, weight and power are comparatively scarce and always in demand. In the Chicago market a few years ago, draughters of the best type brought very high prices. The Pabst Brewing Company paid from $350 to $500 per head for grey Percheron grade geldings weighing from nineteen to twenty-one hundred pounds.

If the breeders of Giles county will realize the necessity for breeding their mares to but one breed of horses and then sticking to that breed, until for all practical purposes their horses are pure bred, it will be but a few years until this section of Virginia will have greatly improved stock for which they will find a ready market at good prices in the horse markets of the country.

As a closing suggestion, always keep in mind that it is just as cheap to stick to one breed of horses and raise practically pure stock, as it is to breed to horses of first one breed and then another, and as a result get scrubs.

We had the pleasure last week of attending the Russell County Fair, Thursday afternoon, and of course visited the handsome little village of Lebanon. This town is situated about seven miles from the railroad, and to get there, we took an automobile conveyance, which took us there in a hurry. At this place we met our old friend, Bausell of the Lebanon News, who reports to be doing fine with his neat and well edited sheet. We were accompanied on this trip by the Wabash Band, Uncle Richard Eaton, Mesdames Joe Eaton and G. M. Henderson and two little girls, Misses Dulaney and Henderson. We wish we could have been with this company longer, as we never tire when thus engaged with such pleasant company. We had the pleasure of stopping at the Clinchview Hotel, which treated us very nicely.

MARRIAGE OF POPULAR COUPLE.

On last Tuesday afternoon at the Savoy Hotel in this place, Mr. C. T. Kirk and Mrs. Laura Andrews were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony that made them one was performed by Rev. J. L. Prater, of the Methodist church. A number of invited friends were assembled in the parlor to witness the happy event.

After the interesting ceremony, the intervening time until supper was spent in pleasant conversation while beautiful music was rendered at the piano under the skillful touch of Miss Stella Prater, who is one of Pearisburg's gifted musicians. Supper being announced, at the cordial solicitation of the couple, a number of their friends joined them there, one of which was ye scribe and all enjoyed it to the utmost.

The bride and groom are both residents of Bluefield, W. Va., though Mr. Kirk is a native of Giles county and for a number of years was a successful merchant of Trigg. The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. Creed Wheeler, was also a resident of this county at one time, her home being near Staffordsville.

The happy couple left for the Roanoke Fair Wednesday morning, and other points East.

To Mr. Kirk, than whom the VIRGINIAN has not a better friend, and his fair bride, we waft the most pleasant felicitations and wish for them that may be "one grand, sweet song."

H. W. Snidow has completed his concrete walks and everything assumes a business air about his premises.

Prof. Reed and Clarence Lucas were visiting at Maybrook, Sunday. We don't know the object of Prof's visit. It may be he is looking for a running mate, if this be true may the goddess of love favor his suit.

CLEAN-UP DAY IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Patrons Asked to Visit Schools October 27.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 21—A movement has just been started to have Friday, Oct. 27, observed as Patrons' Day in all the public schools of the State. Prof. J. H. Binford and Mrs. L. R. Dashiell, of the Co-operative Education Association, are back of the movement and their office is very busy at this time distributing circular letters and special programs for the occasion. State Superintendent J. D. Eggleston heartily approves the plan.

Many school houses are in bad repair, and school grounds, as a rule, are overgrown with weeds and show absolute neglect. The grown people take little interest in the school. On Oct. 27, the teachers will have interesting exercises and parents will be invited to visit the school, bringing with them axes, scythes, hammers and nails for the purpose of cleaning up the school grounds and assisting teacher and children in putting the house in order. At the same time teacher and parents can become acquainted, a School Improvement League can be organized, and plans laid for making permanent improvements.

Many superintendents and teachers have promised to observe the day, and it is believed that thousands of parents all over the State will take advantage of the occasion to visit the schools and become acquainted with their needs.

WABASH BAND TRIP TO LEBANON.

The boys returned Sunday from their trip to Lebanon, and must say it was the best and most enjoyable trip we have ever taken. The drive from Cleaveland to the fair grounds was a treat to all (fine roads).

We reached our place of destination about two o'clock Thursday, where we made a display of our music.

We were honored Thursday evening by furnishing music for the Germain, given by the young ladies and gentlemen.

On Friday afternoon the crowd was entertained by the Wabash Band Base Ball Team and Lebanon Team. We crossed bats at 4.30 o'clock. It was a regular pitchers batter from start to finish. But we were defeated by a close call, 1 to 0, in favor of Lebanon. The features of the game was the pitching and catching of King and Eaton and fielding of Bob Eaton.

The Fair closed Saturday evening. We all left with glad hearts hoping to return to the good people of Lebanon again soon.

We were glad to have Mrs. Joe Eaton, Mrs. Geo. Henderson and Mr. Johnston, Editor of the VIRGINIAN, accompany us. We are always pleased to have the ladies join us.

We are sorry to give up Prof. Skaggs, but he has labored with us a month, and feel we have accomplished much good. He left Monday (25th), for Crandon, where he will instruct the Crandon Brass Band. We wish him much success in his new field of work.

A GOOD ROADS LESSON.

New England farmers generally have become firm believers in good roads, says the Boston Globe, but if there remain any yet unconverted, their attention is called to the tale of a farmer in Wisconsin, told by the State Geologist.

The man had a thousand bushels of potatoes in the cellar, which he was holding for good prices. An offer of 92 cents came in March, but, as he said, the roads were so bad that the only way he could get to town was by telephone. By the time the roads finally dried out he obtained only 30 cents per bushel for his potatoes.

Bad roads cost that farmer more than $600, a sum more than sufficient to have paid his share of the cost had all the main highways of his county been improved.

A COMPARISON.

The Canadian Dominion is larger than the United States in extent of territory—the area of the former being 3,728,665 square miles and the area of the United States, proper, being 3,026,789, square miles. The population of the Dominion is less really than the population of the State of New York, but its material development in the last few years has been altogether phenomenal. In 1910, the value of the imports from Canada to the United States was $95,128,310, and the value of the experts from the United States to Canada was $215,990,-021. The balance of trade was largely in our favor, and the adoption of the reciprocity measure, the Canadians doubtless thought, would have made the balance against them even greater.—Southwest Times and News-Review.

A Talk to Farmers by the Veterinarian.

"A stitch in time, saves nine," and "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," are old true sayings that most of us are quite familiar with. If we are wise we profit by the advice contained in these old sayings, and use the stitch in time and save the proverbial nine, which may be represented by time and labor and these in turn by dollars and cents. When the ounce of prevention can be obtained for much less than the pound of cure, we naturally prefer the preventive. Now the ounce of preventive is not always to be obtained, or we may not know how nor where it is to be had, but it is very seldom indeed that we are unable to take the stitch in time. As I am now writing of instances where these proverbs are applicable to the care and treatment of live stock, I will endeavor to elucidate my point by a practical illustration. We will suppose that a man has a horse that is subject to attacks of colic when fed on a certain kind of food, and the owner is aware of the cause of his horse's sickness; here the ounce of preventive would be, not to let the animal eat the food that is known to have made him sick. Again, a certain district in a county may be losing hogs with cholera. If the farmers are wise they will have their hogs treated with serum and thus prevent their hogs from cholera. It is true that it will take a few dollars out of their pockets at the time, but it is with these few dollars they are buying the ounce of preventive which most of us will readily acknowledge to be worth much more than the pound of cure, which will cost more if it be possible to obtain at any price. There are many more practical illustrations that I might give, such as proper feeding, watering, and housing animals to prevent sickness and disease among them. I am aware that there are many practical farmers here as elsewhere, who know and profit by these things, but there are also here a great many who do no not know them, or else know but do not apply them for practical purposes, and it is for the benefit of these that this article is written. I have remarked that it is not always possible to obtain the ounce of preventive and this is especially true when applied to live stock.

Animals, like people, will continue to get sick as long as they are raised, even under the most ideal conditions. So this brings us to the stitch in time proposition. A man may have a buggy with a split shaft, he repairs it before the shaft is broken off entirely and thus saves the trouble and expense of buying a new shaft. Again, a man may notice that there is a small wash-out or gulley in one of his fields, and proceeds to fill it up and prevent subsequent rains from making it larger and possibly ruining his field. There are many other examples I might give but these are sufficient for my purpose. In these cases which I have just mentioned, the man has seen where the stitch in time will save nine, and knowing just how to apply the stitch, he does so, feeling sure that he is doing the right thing at the proper time. Now let us see about this stitch in time when it is applied to live stock. A farmer gets up in the morning or comes in from his day's labor at evening and finds one of his horses sick; it may be that the animal is not so bad off but "just ailing a little." Here's where our stitch in time comes in; the farmer knew just what to do with the buggy shaft and the washout in his field and proceeded to do that which was needed at the right time. But now he has a different proposition on his hands; he knows that his horse is not well and that he needs something, but right here is where the rub comes in. What is the something that the horse needs? Nine times out of ten the owner don't know what is the matter with his horse, but after holding a consultation with some of his neighbors who are as wise as himself in regard to such matters, they decide that the animal has bots (and as practically all horses have bots, they are right) something is wrong with his kidneys. or he has colic or all of these things together. Each one of his neighbors has a sure cure for all these troubles and they each proceed to pour their nostrums into the animal's mouth or nose, making the animal worse or killing him in a great many instances.

In those cases where the animal remains alive in spite of the treatment he has received, but gets worse as a result, the owner will often wait a day or two and then begin to think about sending for the veterinarian. When the animal is about ready to be dragged out the owner decides to give the veterinarian a trial, and phones for him to come out to his place as soon as possible and see his sick horse.

It would seem that there are quite a few people who do not know exactly what a veterinarian is, but have an idea that they can perform miracles such as are spoken of in the Bible.

Possibly the farmer having read in the good book how Peter and John healed the lame man at the gate of the temple by taking him by the hand and telling him to "rise up and walk," and how the apostles healed the multitudes round about unto Jerusalem. They seem to think that it matters not how far gone the animal is the veterinarian should be able to give the animal some medicine then like Peter did Aeneas who had been sick in bed eight years, say: "Arise and make thy bed," and the horse get up and go to eating.

In some cases the animal is dead before the veterinarian arrives. In these cases no doubt they have in mind the miracle that was performed by Peter when he raised Dorcas from the dead (Acts 9, 36-40). In these instances which I have just cited where the veterinarian is called too late to save the animal, the owner of the animal makes up his mind that the veterinarian is a "Nature fakir," and does not know his business. This naturally does harm to the veterinarian, who has not had a fair chance to show his ability, but is put down as n. g., nevertheless. This brings us back to the stitch in time. Let us see how we can apply it in this instance. The farmer has not had or used the ounce of preventive; his animal is sick, now is the time to apply the stitch in time. The horse needs something, the farmer does not know what, but the veterinarian probably will. Therefore the stitch in time in this case would be to send for the veterinarian as soon as the animal is known to be sick, and not wait until it is nearly dead. It is true it will take a few dollars out a man's pocket, and it is equally true that the horse may not die, but the chances are that he may, especially when all the neighbors get done pouring such nostrums as salts, vinegar, soda, molasses, coal oil and everything else they can think of into him. When the veterinarian is called shortly after the animal is taken sick, he has a good show at saving it. On the other hand if the animal is nearly dead when the doctor arrives he is unable to get any action from the medicine he may administer to the animal. Horses, cattle and other live stock are usually looked upon as representing so many dollars and cents, and when one gets sick and dies the owner is out just so much as he would have been able to sell the animal for had it lived.

To elucidate my point, we will suppose that a man at different times has ten horses sick, and each time he sends for a veterinarian, whose bill, we will suppose, is $5 for each animal he treats. Just for argument sake, we will say that the veterinarian only really saves the life of one of these animals; some of the others getting well of their own accord and some dying in spite of the veterinarians efforts. If the animal that the veterinarian actually saves is worth $150, the owner has saved $100 dollars by employing the veterinarian. In all our large cities where great numbers of horses are kept, the owners spend large sums annually for the services of veterinarians, to attend to their horses when they get sick. These men are in business for the dollar, they have no sentimental attachment for their horses and the only reason they spend thousands of dollars each year for the services of veterinarians is because they know that it means a great many saved in the way of horses for every dollar spent employing veterinarians.

Now if these practical business men in the cities find that it pays them to employ registered, graduate veterinarians (not quacks) is there any valid reason why it should not pay the farmers equally as well? No, there is not. There is a difference, however, between the way the city man employs a veterinarian, and the way the average man in the country employs him. The city man telephones for the doctor as soon as he notices that his horse is not right, but a great many farmers often wait until the horse is nearly dead. The city man has more of his horses saved and has faith in the veterinarian, while the farmer loses most of his sick horses and becomes a "doubting Thomas" in regard to the veterinarians ability.

My object in writing this article is to impress upon the farmers and stock raisers of Giles county, that much of their financial loss, caused by the death of valuable stock, can be avoided by employing a veterinarian at the proper time, which is as soon as the animal gets sick, and not when it is nearly dead. The sooner the farmers and stockraisers realize this fact, the sooner will they begin to save the lives of many valuable animals. Some of you who read this article may disagree with me and think my criticisms unjust. To those of you who feel this way I will say: If you are one of those who do not believe in procrastination when an animal is sick, this article is not intended for you. In other words the shoe does not fit you, if it does not fit you.

COFFEE HIGHEST IN YEARS.

Hinted That Price Boosting Is Due To Crop Manipulation.

Coffee was sold on the local exchange yesterday at the highest range of prices for 16 years, the figures for every month being well above the 12 cent mark. There is a small available supply of coffee. Estimates of the present crop as well as that to come have been lowered. It is said the present crop of Santos coffee will not exceed 10,000,000 or 11,000,000 bags, and may be as low as 9,000,000 On the other hand there are hints the high prices may be due to manipulation.

In August, 1895, coffee sold higher than now. Prices were made at 15.60 cents. The lowest price for coffee for future delivery since then was 3.50 in June and July, 1903.—New York Press.

Increased Mine Output of Lead and Zinc in Virginia in 1910, but Small Production of Copper, Silver and Gold.

(Figures of United States Geological Survey.)

The value of the production of gold, silver, copper, lead and zinc in Virginia in 1910, according to H. D. McCaskey, of the United States Geological Survey, was $96,151, an increase of $54,453 over the corresponding value for 1909.

The production of gold amounted to but $888, and of silver $69. The production of copper decreased from 224,162 pounds, valued at $29,141, in 1909, to 5,402 pounds, valued at $686 in 1910; but the output of lead increased from nothing in 1909 to 198,850 pounds, valued at $8,750 in 1910, while that of zinc increased from 116,627 pounds (figured as spelter), valued at $6,298, in 1909, to 1,588,112 pounds, valued at $85,758 in 1910.

There were 7 producing gold, silver, copper, lead, and zinc mines in Virginia in 1910, of which one was a placer mine and 6 were deep mines. The total ore output, from which the five metals mentioned were produced, was 16,976 short tons, of which 239 tons were gold-quartz ore, with an average extraction value in gold and silver of $2.78 per ton, 271 tons were copper ore, 6,400 tons were lead ore, and 10,066 tons were zinc ore. Copies of Mr. McCaskey's report can be had on application to the Director, U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

THE HOLY BIBLE.

It is a great wonder book. It is the revealed word of God to man. It contains the never ending problem of man's destiny and God's ways with him here on earth, if we abide by the principles taught in the Bible.

It has an ever-growing influence on which depends the whole human progress. It is impossible to rightly govern the world without God and the Bible. It is a sheet anchor of our liberties. It is a great inlet into the world of God. It is a capital safely invested and richly productive of great interest. It triumphs most efficatiously over incredulity and unbelief, and as we peruse its pages the light of His word shines into our souls and we feel our utter helplessness, and we realize that He is the Infinite One from whom all our help must come, and His word is quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword. It is also the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

It teaches us the way from earth to glory, and if we obey its teachings in every particular, it will take us safely home to heaven, where we will be on the ever green shore and on the banks of sweet deliverance, where we can sing and shout the praises of God in the realms of endless glory, forever and forever.

The Crater Battlefield.

This afternoon I spent a while looking over the Crater battlefield which is about two miles Southeast of the city, and can be reached by trolley car, or if you prefer to take the walk you will find yourself plodding along the old Jerusalem plank road which will lead you to the same destination.

The very balmiest of breezes were kissing the dark green foliage of the trees that stand sentinel by the road side and point you ever onward to the battlefield. The birds were making merry everywhere by their discordant murmurings with the myriads of insect lovers a piping out of tune, and the ripening corn and the orchards below the hazy horizon presents vividly the picture of the dying summer.

Peace reigns over the old field where forty-seven years ago the deafening note of war resounded. The cloud of death has vanished from the sky leaving it serene and blue.

The ripening corn now decorates the fields where the camp fires burned and the dead and dying soldiers lay.

These words from Bannatyne are expressive:

"We traveled in the print of olden wars,
Yet all the land was green,
And love we found and peace,
Where fire and war had been,
They pass and smile, the children of the sword,
No more the sword they wield,
And O, how deep the corn,
Along the battle field."

A bountiful harvest now makes beautiful the landscape where then the scene of war and misery met the gaze.

At that time the old Dominion as well as many other States of the Southland was the victim of the ruthless hand of Civil War, such as no other nation ever saw, yet today she blooms with peace and love.

Our guide, Mr. Williamson, a man over three score years and ten, whose hair is white with age, and whose form is bowed with years, but devoted to the Southland, took much interest in showing us the exact position of the contending armies and giving us many details of this battle and the siege of Petersburg. He was personally acquainted with Gen. Robt. Lee and many other notable men of the war, and had entertained Gen. and Mrs. Gordon at his home during the ten months siege of Petersburg.

Whilst the many granite markers that stand here and there on the battlefield each have a story to tell, though one gets very little satisfaction out of a visit of this kind without a well informed guide. In contemplating the trenches and approaches by which the fire of the enemy was brought close to the Confederate defences in my imagination I could hear the deafening roar of the battle:

"A clash of arms, and death, a hush
Of horrors of which death is least."

Parts of the old intrenchments lying parallel on the summits of the hills that remain unchanged are covered with grass and wild flowers suggesting the wish that the enmity between the North and South had been buried beneath these green mounds. The blood of those three hundred patriots which was mingled with the earth and debris of that explosion has forever consecrated this spot called the Crater, and the large pines which have grown up on its sides stand moaning, the livelong day over the dust of these martyrs. This ground was made sacred by the life blood of those patriots who died for the cause they believed to be just. It is sacred to those sorrowing and loving hearts to whom death has brought surcease of sorrow for evermore.

It was the patriotism which thrills all Americans that prompted them to respond to their country's call for aid. It was the spirit which moved Washington and Jefferson which led them away from their happy homes to struggle for their sacred rights.

They bade their mothers, sisters and brides adieu in the morning of life when the South was abloom, but they never came back any more, and the cemeteries on every hillside throughout the land bear mute witness to their devotion.

The noble women of the Southland deserve the highest praise, yet history the most enduring monument of all does not mention as it should the valor and devotion of these patriotic mothers, sisters and wives. It has been said that secession was born in the hearti of the Carolinian women, but still let us not forget that in the eighteenth century it must have thrilled the hearts of Washington, Jefferson and Henry. Let us glance at the leaders of this Civil War and the sentiment that moved them. The president of the Southern States, a native of Kentucky, and one of the foremost statesmen of his time, Jefferson Davis, stated, "We are not fighting for slavery but for independence."

The president of the Northern States also a native of Kentucky, one of the wisest men of his time Abraham Lincold, said, "We are struggling to maintain that form and substance of government whose leading object is to elevate the condition of man." R. E. Lee, a native of Virginia, holding a commission in the United States army, offered the chief command of the Northern armies by President Lincoln in 1861, gave up his commission, declined the attractive offer of President Lincoln and accepted the command of the Southern armies. He could not draw his sword against his native state and fireside. At this time Lee was about fifty years of age and apparently in the prime of life.

Let us permit Lord Walseley to describe him: I have met many of the great men of my time, but Lee alone impressed me with the feeling that I was in the presence of a man who was cast in a grander mold and made of different and finer metal than all other men. He stamped upon my memory as a being apart and superior to all others in every way, a man with whom none I every knew and very few of whom I have read are worthy to be classed. U. S. Grant, a native of Ohio, who had founded his reputation as a great commander in the battles of Vicksburg, Ft. Donelson and Shiloh was given the chief command of the Northern armies in the early part of 1864. In those battles he had founded a new realm of military tactics. He had violated all the existing traditions of modern warfare. He had disregarded the advice of competent military experts. He had disobeyed the instructions of his superiors. But in the end he had justified amply by the results he attained the unusual methods to which he had resorted and well pleased president Lincoln. At this time Grant was about forty-five years of age, study, tireless, watchful, earnest and devoted. Alexander Stephens, vice president of the Southern States said, "Grant is not aware of his own abilities." Such was the character of these opposing commanders. In the spring of 1864, Grant started out from Washington with his army of over 100,000 men to take Lee's army of 50,000 and capture Richmond. Let met him in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Laurel Hill, North Anna and Cold Harbor. Grant was repulsed in each battle losing in all 60,000 men. Lee lost about half that number. Yet these losses were small in comparison to those sustained by Grant's army, they could not be replaced, while the resources of the North were almost inexhaustable they had the whole world practically at their command. If we consider the colassal odds against which the South was struggling and the victories they gained we can partially appreciate the spirit and enterprise of the Southern people. After his defeat at Cold Harbor where he lost ten thousand men in twenty minutes, where human blood ran in streams along the paths, Grant seeing he could not take Lee's army, or capture Richmond moved on Petersburg, crossing the James River at City Point at the junction of the James and Appomattox Rivers a few miles below Petersburg, and at this point established his base of supplies. His plans were to destroy the Wedon R. R. over which the Confederate supplies came from the South and besiege Lee's army in Petersburg. The siege of Petersburg thus began with the close of June 1864. Grant moved his army up to within a half mile of the Confederate defences and began the erection of intrenchments around the eastern and southeastern part of the city. After the two armies had been in this position for a few weeks Col. Pleasants of the 48th Pennsylvania regiment, an expert mining engineer, who had mined coal in western Pennsylvania, saw from the Federal fort on the opposite hill a natural formation in the little valley between the lines only 508 feet from the Confederate defences but entirely hidden from view of the Confederates at any point on their line, how he could dig a mine from this point to one under Ft. Elliot, one of the strongest forts on the Confederate line and blow it up making a gap of one-half mile in the Confederate defences, giving the Federals a chance to rush through and capture Petersburg. Col. Pleasants proposed this plan to Gen. Grant and other Federal officers, they discouraged it as being impracticable, but Pleasants insisted to which Grant yielded with this restriction that there should be no official aid from the army in the way of army supplies for the work except the privilege of using his own regiment and when the failure came it would be on him personally and not show in the records that the regular army undertook such an impracticable step as they believed it would be.

The 48th regiment went to mining, going down 16 feet, they made a tunnel 6 feet each way when they had gone one-half of the 508 feet. Pleasants discovered the Confederate's counter mining around the front of their fort going down only ten feet. Pleasants then ordered his men to go down thirty-five feet and they went down on an incline until they came to the proper depth. After getting the mine under the Confederate fort Pleasants ordered his men to dig two wings to the tunnel embracing the length of the fort. The earth that was taken from the tunnel was carried a few feet from the mouth of it and put it in a deep ravine out of view of the Confederates.

Pleasants then ordered his men to place 8,000 pounds of powder in the two wings of the tunnel under the Confederate fort, the main tunnel then to be filled up with sand bags about thirty feet from the powder, a fuse in the way of a small wooden trough leading back to the magazine was placed at the right length to allow those lighting it ample time to get out. By their calculation it was to be exploded at 3:30 p. m., July 30, 1864. The sun had begun to rise, yet it had not exploded while the brave Col. Pleasants was in despair two of his men volunteered to go up the tunnel and ascertain the cause, the fire had gone out at a defective place in the fuse, they relighted it and within twelve minutes the explosion came killing instantly three hundred brave Confederates and burying them forty feet under the earth and debris.

The gap in the Confederate line was made, Col. Pleasants had succeeded in his part of the project, though Grant's army on the opposite hill did not move, except the 4,000 union troops composed of Gen. Ledlie's first Division of Burnside's corps and Ferrios' negro division which was secreted in the little valley below. They marched up the hill to the fort, leaving their commanders in a bombproof at the foot of the hill drunk. When they reached the great hole made by the explosion of the powder they fell into it for protection from the two Confederate batteries on either side. Gen. Lee ordered Gen. William Mahone, with two brigades, to the scene and he had them at the mercy of the bayonet. Grant's army of 40,000 on the opposite hill was waiting orders to move Gens. Burnside and Meade were in command, Grant was at his headquarters. The orders to advance were never given. Ledlie was drunk, Burnside and Meade were quarreling, jealous and treacherous, and Grant was not near, the charge was never made. After Gen. Lee had closed up the gap in his lines the Federals began a cannonade on the Confederate defences with 160 guns. Col. Pleasants disgusted made his report with diagram of his work, resigned his command and went home dying a tragic death.

It is interesting to go over this old field and see history so vividly recalled to ones mind.

The little museum of old implements of war is also interesting and instructive. And as we left it the last rays of the setting sun was falling on this souvenir of the Civil War.

OLDEST MAN IN SOUTHWEST VIRGINIA.

In the Alleghany Mountains of Virginia, in the county of Bland lives "Uncle Jimmy" Surratt, half Indian, half white man, said to be 118 years old. At this age he is still vigorous, and does a rude sort of farming at his mountain home.

When visited he was found mowing grass with a scythe, but immediately left off, and with child-like obedience stood in front of his cabin to be photographed.

Although illietrate, he talked very interestingly of his long life, stating that he walked from Alabama to North Carolina when he was a young man, perhaps not more than twenty. His first wife died there, and he married a North Carolina woman, who came with him a few years later to Bland county, Virginia, where he has spent the remainder of his remarkable period of life.

His home is the most primitive, containing no windows, but a few splint bottom chairs and a bed evidently manufactured by "Uncle Jimmy" himself. He has a son, now eighty years old, living in Smyth county, Virginia, the child of his second wife, now dead. He spoke of her as "Old Suze," but evidently meant no disrespect.

He is now living with a third wife, who is some forty or fifty years younger than he.

"Uncle Jimmy" is a teetotler, having forsworn drink and joined the "Sons of Temperance" some forty years ago, when only eighty or thereabouts. Although the organization soon perished from that portion of the earth familiar to the old man, he regarded his pledge as for life, and has clung to it with true Indian tenacity.

He stated that he could return to Alabama by the same paths over which he came nearly hundred years ago, and could "cross the rivers at the same places.'"

He claims that his father was an Indian chief.—Clinch Valley News.

The Crater Battlefield.

This afternoon I spent a while looking over the Crater battlefield which is about two miles Southeast of the city, and can be reached by trolley car, or if you prefer to take the walk you will find yourself plodding along the old Jerusalem plank road which will lead you to the same destination.

The very balmiest of breezes were kissing the dark green foliage of the trees that stand sentinel by the road side and point you ever onward to the battlefield. The birds were making merry everywhere by their discordant murmurings with the myriads of insect lovers a piping out of tune, and the ripening corn and the orchards below the hazy horizon presents vividly the picture of the dying summer.

Peace reigns over the old field where forty-seven years ago the deafening note of war resounded. The cloud of death has vanished from the sky leaving it serene and blue.

The ripening corn now decorates the fields where the camp fires burned and the dead and dying soldiers lay.

These words from Bannatyne are expressive:

"We traveled in the print of olden wars,
Yet all the land was green,
And love we found and peace,
Where fire and war had been,
They pass and smile, the children of the sword,
No more the sword they wield,
And O, how deep the corn,
Along the battle field."

A bountiful harvest now makes beautiful the landscape where then the scene of war and misery met the gaze.

At that time the old Dominion as well as many other States of the Southland was the victim of the ruthless hand of Civil War, such as no other nation ever saw, yet today she blooms with peace and love.

Our guide, Mr. Williamson, a man over three score years and ten, whose hair is white with age, and whose form is bowed with years, but devoted to the Southland, took much interest in showing us the exact position of the contending armies and giving us many details of this battle and the siege of Petersburg. He was personally acquainted with Gen. Robt. Lee and many other notable men of the war, and had entertained Gen. and Mrs. Gordon at his home during the ten months siege of Petersburg.

Whilst the many granite markers that stand here and there on the battlefield each have a story to tell, though one gets very little satisfaction out of a visit of this kind without a well informed guide. In contemplating the trenches and approaches by which the fire of the enemy was brought close to the Confederate defences in my imagination I could hear the deafening roar of the battle:

"A clash of arms, and death, a hush
Of horrors of which death is least."

Parts of the old intrenchments lying parallel on the summits of the hills that remain unchanged are covered with grass and wild flowers suggesting the wish that the enmity between the North and South had been buried beneath these green mounds. The blood of those three hundred patriots which was mingled with the earth and debris of that explosion has forever consecrated this spot called the Crater, and the large pines which have grown up on its sides stand moaning, the livelong day over the dust of these martyrs. This ground was made sacred by the life blood of those patriots who died for the cause they believed to be just. It is sacred to those sorrowing and loving hearts to whom death has brought surcease of sorrow for evermore.

It was the patriotism which thrills all Americans that prompted them to respond to their country's call for aid. It was the spirit which moved Washington and Jefferson which led them away from their happy homes to struggle for their sacred rights.

They bade their mothers, sisters and brides adieu in the morning of life when the South was abloom, but they never came back any more, and the cemeteries on every hillside throughout the land bear mute witness to their devotion.

The noble women of the Southland deserve the highest praise, yet history the most enduring monument of all does not mention as it should the valor and devotion of these patriotic mothers, sisters and wives. It has been said that secession was born in the hearti of the Carolinian women, but still let us not forget that in the eighteenth century it must have thrilled the hearts of Washington, Jefferson and Henry. Let us glance at the leaders of this Civil War and the sentiment that moved them. The president of the Southern States, a native of Kentucky, and one of the foremost statesmen of his time, Jefferson Davis, stated, "We are not fighting for slavery but for independence."

The president of the Northern States also a native of Kentucky, one of the wisest men of his time Abraham Lincold, said, "We are struggling to maintain that form and substance of government whose leading object is to elevate the condition of man." R. E. Lee, a native of Virginia, holding a commission in the United States army, offered the chief command of the Northern armies by President Lincoln in 1861, gave up his commission, declined the attractive offer of President Lincoln and accepted the command of the Southern armies. He could not draw his sword against his native state and fireside. At this time Lee was about fifty years of age and apparently in the prime of life.

Let us permit Lord Walseley to describe him: I have met many of the great men of my time, but Lee alone impressed me with the feeling that I was in the presence of a man who was cast in a grander mold and made of different and finer metal than all other men. He stamped upon my memory as a being apart and superior to all others in every way, a man with whom none I every knew and very few of whom I have read are worthy to be classed. U. S. Grant, a native of Ohio, who had feunded his reputation as a great commander in the battles of Vicksburg, Ft. Donelson and Shiloh was given the chief command of the Northern armies in the early part of 1864. In those battles he had founded a new realm of military tactics. He had violated all the existing traditions of modern warfare. He had disregarded the advice of competent military experts. He had disobeyed the instructions of his superiors. But in the end he had justified amply by the results he attained the unusual methods to which he had resorted and well pleased president Lincoln. At this time Grant was about forty-five years of age, study, tireless, watchful, earnest and devoted. Alexander Stephens, vice president of the Southern States said, "Grant is not aware of his own abilities." Such was the character of these opposing commanders. In the spring of 1864, Grant started out from Washington with his army of over 100,000 men to take Lee's army of 50,000 and capture Richmond. Let met him in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Laurel Hill, North Anna and Cold Harbor. Grant was repulsed in each battle losing in all 60,000 men. Lee lost about half that number. Yet these losses were small in comparison to those sustained by Grant's army, they could not be replaced, while the resources of the North were almost inexhaustable they had the whole world practically at their command. If we consider the colassal odds against which the South was struggling and the victories they gained we can partially appreciate the spirit and enterprise of the Southern people. After his defeat at Cold Harbor where he lost ten thousand men in twenty minutes, where human blood ran in streams along the paths, Grant seeing he could not take Lee's army, or capture Richmond moved on Petersburg, crossing the James River at City Point at the junction of the James and Appomattox Rivers a few miles below Petersburg, and at this point established his base of supplies. His plans were to destroy the Wedon R. R. over which the Confederate supplies came from the South and besiege Lee's army in Petersburg. The siege of Petersburg thus began with the close of June 1864. Grant moved his army up to within a halt mile of the Confederate defences and began the erection of intrenchments around the eastern and southeastern part of the city. As we go to press, we have not received the list of appointments of the last Conference of the M. E. Church, South. Rev. W. B. Belchee, whom many of our people know, having been pastor at Bane, has been appointed for Pearisburg District; Rev. J. L. Prater, our present pastor, goes to Bristol, Tenn., while Rev. Miles, present pastor at Bane, will remain there another year. Rev. S. S. Catron still remains as our presiding elder.

Jack Daniel, one of the most noted distillers in the United States, died at his home a few miles south of Nashville, Tenn., on the 9th inst., aged 63 years. For forty years he was engaged in the manufacture of whiskey. Another one gone to receive his reward. Wonder where he will receive it. All his life—after he had arrived at the age of discretion—making rum and ruining his fellow man. Can you guess, or even think, where he will reap his reward?

If you have chapped lips or something the matter with your mouth, that you can't laugh, do not attend this exhibition of the Neil Litchfield Trio.

See letter from Mr. John H. Durham, our sheriff, in another column. Mr. Durham should certainly have the sympathy of our citizens in our county, on account of serious sickness in his family. Circuit Court is in special session, for the trial of Tanner's, Admr. vs N. & W. Ry. Co. The widow of Thos. H. Tyler of Radford, while the interests of the company are cared for by Col. Jas. D. Johnston of Roanoke, Judge John W. Price of Bristol and Mr. M. P. Farrier of this place. Quite a number of railroad people are here as witnesses in the case.

We had the pleasure on last Saturday of being in Newport, where we had gone to be present at the tournament and base ball game between Newport and Pearisburg, but on account of the very severe rain the program was called off. We are always glad to go to Newport, as the town is full of good, energetic business people and we always come home feeling glad that we had mixed with the very best people of the county. Quite a large number of people were present and during the rain gathered in the hotel and stores and talked politics to the various candidates who were present. "Ye editor" was accompanied by Mr. W. B. Snidow, the Democratic candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney, who spent the time talking to the good people of Newport, and from all we could hear they will give him a handsome majority there. Mr. K. C. Pack, candidate for Commissioner of the Revenue, and Mr. A. H. Woodyard, candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney, also drove over together and spent the day talking to the voters.

A RARE TREAT.

Everybody is looking for a rare treat of fun and music in the entertainment to be given by the Neil Litchfield Trio at the Pearisburg High School Building, next Thursday night, October 19th. The first part is made up of music, humorous recitals, and impersonations. The latter half is taken up by the rural comedy playet, "Down at Brook Farm," written by Mr. Litchfield and presented over 3000 times in America and England. The Litchfields have recently returned from England where they were highly spoken of by the London and other papers. They have appeared in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco and all the large American cities, and the papers all praise their work. Pearisburg is fortunate in securing this attraction.

DEATH OF T. J. GERALD.

The death of T. J. Gerald occurred last Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at his home on Floyd Street, Bluefield, W. Va. The deceased was 47 years old, and his death was caused by sciatic rheumatism which had incapacitated him from work. Mr. Gerald was a former engineer and had a run on the Radford division. He had a large circle of friends and many of them went with the body to Vicars last Sunday morning to pay their last respects to his memory.

The deceased is survived by a widow and five children, the oldest of whom is sixteen years of age. He is also survived by three brothers and a sister, who are, Jube of Bluefield; Robert and Sim of Radford, and a sister, Miss Gerald of Bluefield.

Mr. Gerald was known by many people of our county, and his death will be sincerely regretted by them. He was a man of kindly, jovial disposition and very popular.

He married Miss Maud Durham, a daughter of Mr. J. H. Durham of Ripplemead, and to her and the now fatherless children, the sincerest sympathies of the many friends of the family in this community, will go out.

NEIL LITCHFIELD TRIO.

The entertainment of The Neil Litchfield Trio, who are to appear at Narrows, Va., Saturday night, October 21, 1911, is built for "laughing purposes only." They offer no platitudes, preaching, lecturing or advising, but deal out clean and pure fun in wholesome quantities.

Some people can't laugh—perhaps they have chapped lips or something of the kind—to such our advice is, don't come.

Henry Ward Beecher, the noted divine, said:

"Mirth is God's medicine. Everybody ought to bathe in it. Grim care, moroseness, anxiety, —all this mist of life ought to be scoured off with the oil of mirth. It is better than emery. Blessed is he who has a sense of the humorous. He has that which is worth more than money."

NEWPORT.

A large crowd assembled in our little town last Saturday to witness a game of baseball between Pearisburg and Newport nines and the game was to be followed by a Tournament and Ladies Riding Contest, but owing to the inclement weather the games were called off. But the Ice Cream supper at the High School Building that night was quite a success. Immediately after the ice cream supper the crowns were sold for the benefit of the churches. Mr. Maurice Puckett delivered the coronation address. Miss Ina Criner was crowned queen by Mr. Clyde Payne; Miss Myrtle Steele was crowned first maid of honor by Mr. Harry Miller; Miss Alice Pastorfield was crowned second maid of honor by Mr. Alban Payne; Miss Hallie Bowen was crowned third maid of honor by Mr. Paul Farrier. Immediately after the coronation, the court withdrew to the music room and were very pleasantly entertained with music rendered by Miss Irma Smith.

Mr. Hardwick, his daughter, Miss Lula and little grand daughter Alma Hardwick, were on their way home last Monday evening and a runaway team overtook them and ran over their buggy. Mr. Hardwick was bruised and received a bad cut on his head. Miss Lula and Alma were badly bruised. The former had her hand mashed and several bones broken. Their escape from being killed was miraculous.

Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Givens spent a few days in Roanoke this week visiting Mrs. Robinson, a sister of the latter.

Mrs. K. J. Payne of Beckley, W. Va., is visiting relatives and friends here.

We notice that "George" takes his frequent trips up the Craig road, even if the roads are muddy????

An Old Book.

'The Christian Hymn and Tune Book"
—memories sweet its pages bring
As I turn them, old and yellowed by the flight of passing years.
Good old Zion songs my mother loved to sit and softly sing
With a faith that never faltered and that banished doubts and fears.
Old and worn, its faded pages bring back days of long ago
When the faithful few would gather in the mid-week hour of prayer;
And their voices joined together in a chorus soft and low—
"When we hear the music ringing," and "There'll be no parting there."

Through the tear-haze that has gathered I can see my father turn
To the "evening lesson, brethren;"
hear him read in rev'rent tone
From the Book of Books before him lessons that he loved to learn
As adown life's path he traveled, knowing he walked not alone.
I can see their dear old faces all alight with Christian joy
As arose the songs of Zion on the mid-week evening's air;
Songs of hope that cheered them onward, songs of faith without alloy—
"On the mountain's top appearing,"
"Jesus saves," "Sweet hour of prayer."

"He leadeth me!" I heard my mother sing it with a faith divine
As she drew near to the valley and the shadow of the vale.
"Blessed thought"—she never faltered—"I'm my Lord's and he is mine"—
For she knew the arm that held her was an arm that never failed.
Singing low and singing softly, she could see with lifted eyes
Through all clouds that gathered
'round her as the long years passed away,
Mansions that her God had builded in His house beyond the skies—
"In the Christian's home in glory" where there shines eternal day.

Dear old book, your faded pages bring back days of long ago;
Days of youth and days of playtime
when the skies were always fair.
Bring again the sound of voices singing sweet and singing low
Songs of hope and faith to cheer me on to that "Home over there."
Sweet old songs; your echoes ringing down the vista of the years
Cheer me ever on and upward as my heart with rapture thrills;
And I know my brother waits me far beyond the doubts and fears,
"When the mists have rolled in splendor from the summit of the hills."

A Memory.

"I will read for our evening's lesson a few verses from the sixth chapter of Second Corinthians, beginning with the first verse: 'We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.'"

That was not the first words spoken, of course. The scripture reading did not occur until after a couple of songs and a short prayer. Of course you remember what the first song was—always:

"Sweet hour of prayer, sweet hour of prayer,
That calls me from a world of care;
And bids me at my Father's throne
Make all my wants and wishes known."

Had father adjusted his spectacles, cleared his throat and pitched any other tune it would not have seemed like the regular mid week prayer meeting. Just had to sing that old song to start things off right.

"Has any brother or sister a selection?"

A moment's pause, then Sister Maguire would speak up and request number 141. Remember it? I do, for father almost invariably pitched it a couple of notes too high:

"Hark, ten thousand harps and voices
Sound the note of praise above,
Jesus reigns and heaven rejoices;
Jesus reigns the God of love."

Having pitched it too high father broke down on the "sound the note," and mother would nudge me when I giggled, having recalled the story of the man who, under similar circumstances called out, "Start it at five thousand, brother!"

About half the time the organist didn't show up for the prayer meeting, so father had to lead the singing. And he could do it, too. He knew all those old songs by heart, and having started one he would throw his head back, close his eyes, and sing with an earnestness and a faith that really was inspiring. Say, you up to date people, when you go to church now and hear a quartet perched up in a loft singing with highly cultivated voices an operatic anthem—honestly, do you get from it the thrill you used to get at the mid-week prayer meeting where the dozen or fifteen faithful souls there gathered and sang with zeal some of those old songs? Did you ever feel like rising right up and shouting, "Glory Hallelujah!" after the salaried quartet had finished one of its numbers? I guess not!

"Has any one a word or a prayer to offer?"

This, of course, after two or three songs, a scripture reading and an opening prayer. Always there was a long pause, each one seeming loath to start things going. Then father would break the silence and say:

"Brother Willard, will you lead us in prayer?"

After that there was no hesitancy. Everyone present had a word of testimony or a prayer to offer. As a rule the brothers spoke up bravely, but the sisters almost invariably spoke in trembling tones and sat down with streaming eyes, asking a "share in your prayers."

The more backward members—by that I mean those who did not have the courage to give a testimony or offer a prayer—would stand up and read a few verses of scripture, and as each one finished and sat down the elderly members would say "amen." And the meeting was not to be brought to a close until each one present had spoken, read, or offered a short prayer. When that end had been reached father would stand up and say:

"Brethren, we have been blessed with the privilege of again meeting in the house of the Lord. Let us carry home with us the lessons we have learned. Remember the regular services next Lord's day, morning and evening. Prayer meeting one week from to night, as usual. Let us now stand and join in singing number 408, 'Blest be the tie that binds,' after which we will be dismissed with a few brief words of prayer by Brother Hill."

The song sung and the prayer spoken, there was a season of handshaking, and voices that could scarcely be heard in the solemnity of the meeting were rattling away loud enough to be heard a quarter of a mile down the road.

You could always depend on meeting certain brothers and sisters at prayer meeting. If one of them was absent you knew sickness had befallen. The sisters present were always the ones who cooked the most for the church suppers, and who always remained after everybody else had gone and washed the scores of dirty dishes and cleaned up the church. The brothers were always the ones most depended upon to keep the church finances straight. As a plain matter of fact, it was always a safe proposition that a census of the mid-week prayer meeting was a census of the real workers in the church—barring, of course, the country members who could not be present as a rule, because of distance and press of farm work. I do not pretend to speak as one having authority, but I make bold to say that those little prayer meetings of the olden times were responsible for the "ginger" in religious works then. Aside from the C. W. B. M. meetings and the regular Lord's day services, the prayer meeting was the only distinctly gathering. Nowadays we've got something doing all the time—with the young people's meetings and Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s, and Christian Endeavorers, and this that and the other—a whole raft of things that really demand an expert bookkeeper to keep track of for us. And I'm going to rid my mind of something. I'm going to assert, and stick to it, that the whole "kit an' bilin'" of them are not in it with the old time mid-week prayer meeting, zeal-renewing, faith-inspiring enthusiasm.

Honestly now, wouldn't you like mighty well to step back forty years or so and walk into that little village church where gathered the faithful few for the mid-week prayer meeting?

For the Home Mother.

So much of family health and happiness depends upon the cook, whether she be the "home" woman or the hired, that she should be very carefully trained in her duties. It is better to put the little girls into the kitchen at an early age, letting them trot along beside the mother or elder sister, doing little tasks that carry a moiety of responsibility with each, and suiting the size of the job to the little soft muscles that are in training. It is not all muscular work, as we well know, and the little mind is awakening and strengthening as the tasks progress. Teach the little tots to amuse themselves, and find amusement in the little work they do. It is better than letting them run the streets, dressed like dolls. They must learn something, and it will never hurt them to begin at the beginning and grow up in the home. The child is never so safe as when trotting beside its mother about the rooms of the home, and every little task, lovingly laid upon its dimpled shoulders, and lovingly eased, draws mother and child closer together. Let the children assume a measure of responsibility for the home happiness from the first, and teach them to take a pride in doing well what they undertake. You may have to learn a few lessons, yourself; but no matter. No teacher is fitted to guide a pupil until she has learned the lesson thoroughly, herself. Housework is only drudgery to those who make it so. It may be distasteful in some of its branches; but the world is full of distasteful duties, and all promotion is preceded by preparatory drudgery. Teach the little ones to look upon such work as "of course" jobs, that must be done, that are necessary to the happiness and comfort of the home and family, and that must in no wise be shirked, if they fall to their hands. Home making, housework and cookery are all becoming matters of scientific adjustment, and happy is the woman child that has grown up to a knowledge of such things from the first.

Bristol Printer Dead.

Bristol, Tenn, Oct. 10.—John C. Barry for ten years a popular lineotype machine operator on the Bristol Newspapers died of typhoid fever in St. Luke's hospital here this afternoon, aged 30 years. He would soon have been married to an esteemed Bristol young woman. He was a native of Mountain City, Johnson county, Tenn., and his body will be taken there.

METHODISTS ON NEW PROBLEMS.

Divorce, Socialism, Labor Unions and Wealth Discussion at World's Ecumenical Conference.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 11.—Divorce, socialism, labor unions and wealth were some of the subject concerning which emphatic opinions were expressed by speakers at the sessions of the Ecumenical Methodist conference here today. The general topic was "the church and social service."

Divorce was sharply discussed by the Rev. Dr. Gross Alexander of Nashville, Tenn., editor of The Methodist Review. He asserted that there is "urgent need for more preachers like Dr. G. G. Richmond of Philadelphia, who fearlessly exposed the inquiry of the recent marriage of a divorced millionaire. All honor to him and equal honor to the poor Methodist preacher who flatly refused a fee of $10,000 to perform the ceremony, and then declined a gift of another $10,000 offered to him as a reward for doing his duty.

Socialism, Christian and anti-Christian, was the topic of the Rev. B. B. Haddon of Gates Head on Tyne, England. "There is a socialism" he said, "which denies God, ignores the Bible, trifles with family ties, and sacrifices the individual to society. Such socialism can receive no quarter from the Christian. But this type is passing away. The leading socialists of today are Christian in spirit and purpose. Christian socialism demands a change in modern conditions, which are nothing less than a scandal to civilization.

That the labor union is the greatest force in the United States to the public school was the statement of the Rev. George Elliott of Washington, D. C. "Nothing is doing more to make homogeneous our population than our labor unions," he said. An innovation was a resolution presented by the business committee, calling for the creation of what would be practically a world's welfare commission. Action was deferred, but it is expected that before the close of the conference a permanent international Methodist commission will be created, composed of fifty delegates from the eastern division and an equal number from the west.

Delegates today received many messages endorsing the position of the convention as expressed in the adoption of a resolution yesterday advocating universal peace and urging "the Christian nations represented in the Ecumenical conference speedily to take the necessary legislative action to consummate the arbitration treaty which has been signed by the representatives of the British Empire and the United States."

Her Preference.

Said the brunette maid
To another quite fair;
"For flirting 'tis said
You really don't care—
But it's oodles of fun
To flirt with a fan"
"Fudge!" said the fair one,
"Give me a fool man."

One Would Think So.

"I tried to touch my wife for a dollar this morning but she was doing her hair and wouldn't be disturbed."

"Why, I should think that would be just the time that she would coil up."

NEW BABY HOLDS UP TRAIN IN VIRGINIA.

While Southern train 236 was speeding from New Orleans to New York Wednesday night, the stork overtook it and paid an unexpected visit to Mrs. George W. Fraker, wife of the president of the Carolina Cotton and Woolen Mills Company, of Spray, N. C. The train was held at Charlottesville one hour, while Dr. M. L. Rea, of the University of Virginia, was summoned, and attended mother and child. The mother was made as comfortable and possible, and, after a trained nurse had been summoned, the train started again on its journey, carrying Dr. Rea along. Mr. Fraker telegraphed ahead and engaged an ambulance to meet the party at Matuchen, N. J., and carry Mrs. Fraker and the little one to Plainfield, whither they were bound.

In the party was Judge William Warren, 83 years old, who was Abraham Lincoln's law partner, and who is the father of Mrs. Fraker.

Mr. and Mrs. Fraker, with Mr. Warren, left Spray Thursday to spend a few months in Plainfield, N. J. The child was born in Albemarle county, Va., at 8:20 o'clock, and fulfills the hopes of the grandfather by being a native son of Virginia. Mr. Warren belongs to the famous Warren family of Virginia, but long before the war moved out to Illinois, where he practiced law and became associated at the bar with Abraham Lincoln in Springfield.—Washington Post.

Houston Portrait Now at Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11.—In accordance with the action of the legislature of Texas, the portrait of General Sam Houston, of Texas, which the Lone Star State proposes to present to the Commonwealth of Virginia, has been received at the State library here and will be held there until the time arrives for the formal presentation. The plan is to have this event take place during the coming session of the legislature.

An exchange contains the following bit of philosophy: When one hog gets an ear of corn every other hog will trot along behind and squeal and beg and is ready for a bite, but just let that hog get his head in a crack and every son of a sow will jump on and tear him to pieces. Just so it is with men. As long as a man is prosperous and has money he can't keep his friends off with a base ball bat. The moment he is unfortunate and his wealth is gone he is only snubbed by his former friends, but they begin to do him all the harm possible. When a man starts down grade the world greases the track and steps to one side.

There is no need of any one hereabouts going far away to springs of a healing and curing nature, when we have one within a stone's throw of our village. A woman weighing 97 pounds, after drinking from this spring at intervals, for a few days, weighed herself, and to her great surprise, weighed 127 pounds. This spring is one and a half miles from Pearisburg and is known as Hobson's Alum. What spring or springs can beat this one?

During the wind storm here Tuesday afternoon it blew down a tree in front of Dr. J. L. Maney's residence. The tree was like the Dr.'s politics—more dead than alive.

Don't forget the entertainment here Thursday night, given by The Neil Litchfield Trio, entitled "Down at Brook Farm." Fun and music is sure to interest you. You are warned not to come if your mouth is in such a condition that you can't laugh. This entertainment is for the benefit of our High School and should be patronized by every one. Tonight at the High School building.

Rev. J. L. Prater preached his last sermon here Sunday. Quite a large congregation was present. Bro. Prater has preached for us two years, and no more able minister or more earnest worker has been in our midst for years. It seems that he held back the best for the last, as the sermon here last Sabbath, in our opinion and many others also, was the best he has delivered here. Bro. Prater and his estimable family have endeared themselves to our people, and it is with deep regret we part with them.

Now that we have a nice concrete sidewalk from one end of Main street to the other on the west side, would it not be a good thing to have a few street lamps, say about half a dozen, along the line of said sidewalk—or on either side of the street for that matter. The cost will be trivial. Who will be the first energetic citizen to erect one? Once started others will follow. It is a shame to have this beautiful village in total darkness.

The man who edits the average country newspaper cannot well avoid treading on somebody's toes continually; must expect to be censured often for unintentional failures; must expect hard work and little thanks; must expect to be called a coward because he does not "pitch into" everything that somebody thinks is wrong, and a fool if he speaks out too plainly on public evils; must expect to patronize home industry while half or more of the business men go elsewhere for their printing; he must expect to grind other people's axes—and turn the grindstone himself. Still we think it is one of the noblest professions on earth; the one in which the earnest man can do the most good to his fellow man in which an honorable man can wield much power for good.

RETURNED.

Dr. J. T. Parker, wife and little daughter, Mary Blackwell, have returned to Pearisburg, after a stay of two or three months in Roanoke on account of the health of Dr. Parker.

After a rather prolonged stay in a hospital in Roanoke, where he went when in quite feeble health occasioned by a stomach trouble, he returns very much improved, and with every good reason to think that he is now on the road to complete recovery.

Their many friends here will be glad to welcome this family back in Pearisburg.

VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

As we go to press, we are informed that Mrs. M. B. Easley, wife of Dr. J. W. Easley, deceased, died very suddenly Wednesday morning at her son's home, Dr. C. A. Easley of Chestnut Level, Va., of heart trouble.

We are very sorry indeed to hear this, as she was a very lovable lady.

BASKET BALL IN PEARISBURG HIGH SCHOOL.

The grounds are being prepared on the campus of the Pearisburg High School for basket ball, in which the young ladies of the school are very much interested. They have purchased a good ball and expect soon to engage in this form of recreation and amusement. As soon as practical teams can be organized there will probably be some exciting games in basket ball before the session closes.

SALE OF FINE HORSES.

The wide reputation Giles has made for raising fine horses, brought to the county last week Mr. W. P. Mundy, who for a number of years has been handling the best class of saddle and driving horses and is regarded one of the best and most successful horsemen in Virginia.

He came here to get the walk, trot and canter horse with action, style and beauty to be shipped to a winter resort in South Carolina for the benefit and pleasure of its guests, among whom are a number of sports and millionaires, who do not hesitate to go down in their pockets to pay for a good mount. He found here the horses he wanted and purchased twelve head. Six of the twelve were Red Kings, all of which were purchased at a cost exceeding two hundred dollars each. From Mr. M. P. Farrier he got two Red Kings for $430.00, from Mr. Webb Farley one Red King at $220.00 and from Mr. W. W. Mason he got three Red Kings at a cost considerably in excess of two hundred dollars each.

Mr. Mundy is well pleased with all of his purchases and delighted with his visit to the county and says that he will come to Giles every year to buy his saddle and driving horses.

YOURS FOR BARGAINS,

W. O. COBURN,
NARROWS, VA.

HORTON-GANDLER.

A marriage, beautiful and impressive, in its home simplicity in which Miss M. Stella Candler became the bride of Mr. Joe Marshall Horton, was solemnized Wednesday morning, October 11th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Candler, Peterstown, W. Va.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a limited number of friends and relatives by the Rev. J. B. Chambers to which a rich harmony was added by strains of music rendered by the sister of the bride, Miss Annie Candler.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion in colors in perfect harmony with the autumn morning.

The bride was handsomely gowned in a tailor suit of Copenhagen blue, with hat and gloves to match, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses.

Mrs. Horton is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Candler, is an accomplished young lady of the most lovely character, being admired and loved by a wide circle of friends in her home town.

Mr. Horton is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Horton of Jeraldstown, Tenn., and is a highly esteemed young man, popular among his many friends and associates, and has been for several years connected with the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway at Johnson City, Tenn., in positions of trust and responsibility, in which he has acquitted himself with ability and credit.

The happy young couple left immediately after the ceremony for Detroit, Buffalo, New York City and other Eastern points.

Will be at home in Johnson City to their friends after November 1st.

Suicide at Wytheville.

Wytheville, Va., Oct. 13.—Mrs. Charles MacAlister, who has been in failing health for several months, committed suicide here today about 1 o'clock. She placed a pistol in her mouth and sent the ball through her brain, living only a few minutes. She and her husband were prominent and affluent citizens and from their beautiful home dispatched a generous hospitality and showed an active interest in charities. She had prepared to spend the winter abroad, hoping to recuperate. She was a leading member of the D. A. R., having been regent of the chapter here.

Mrs. MacAlister was a Miss Wilkerson of Baltimore, and is survived by her husband, father and mother.

WHITE GATE.

"Forty-eight! And drawing closer to the grim half-century mark;
Silver sheen that shines so clearly in the hair once deeply dark;
Little crowsfeet slowly spreading, deepening wrinkles o'er the face—
All a proof that time is flying at a swift, relentless pace.
Growing love of peace and quiet in the sweet confines of home;
Gone the old unrest that led me in days gone to widely roam.
So the changes come upon me, changes slow but growing great,
And I realize the difference one can feel at forty-eight."

At this writing, Oct. 16th, we are still enjoying real summer weather.

The mountain tops show slight touches of autumnal tints, in golden, brown and red, and Jack Frost may be expected almost any time.

Geo. Henderson was a business visitor here Tuesday.

Jacob L Peters of Bluefield, attended the burial of Mrs. M. B. Easley at this place on last Friday.

Miss Nellie Brown Eaton who is attending our High School, spent Saturday and Sunday at her home near Wabash.

We would advise some of the candidates who are getting a little shaky at the knees, to take some assafoetida pills to steady their nerves.

Judge Martin Williams and R. Allen Brown attended the wedding of Williams-Allen at the church at White Gate Wednesday evening.

Little Miss Mary Francis Mason is confined to her home with typhoid fever. We hope for the best, however, and that she will be well soon.

Miss Nancy Pearson who has been in Jefferson Hospital for the past six or eight weeks, returned home last week much improved in health.

The way to keep your friends is to let them use you, particularly, your pocket book. In our case, we are not very particular about this kind of friend.

The hearts of men cannot be warmed with cold storage sermons. A great many of them get warmed in another fashion—that of the old woman's tongue.

Mrs. Cecil Painter of this place attended the Wood-Hunter wedding at Radford on Wednesday, the 18th inst. She reports the wedding as being a very brilliant one.

Go to see "Wilfred, the Wizard," at Narrows, Saturday evening, November 4th. Proceeds for the benefit of Narrows High School heating plant.

Rev. W. B. Belchee will preach next Sunday at the following churches: Narrows, at 11 a. m.; Bluff City, at 3 00 p. m.; Pearisburg, at 7.30 p. m. All are cordially invited to these services.

Misses Coleman of Pennsylvania, Winfred French and Mr. I. E. Johnston of Narrows, were in our city Saturday. The young ladies were very pretty, but as to the last individual, we prefer to be "mum."

Wirt French of Springton, W. Va., A. J. French and James French of Rocky Gap, gave us quite an extended call on Friday last at our sanctum. Call again, sometime, our latchstrings ever hang on the outside.

K. C. Pack was in town Saturday evening smiling under an old hat and said, "He had another ten pound Democrat at his home, but she can't vote until Woman's Suffrage is allowed."

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Easley of Athens, W. Va., and eight of their sons, Fred, Elliott, James, Robert, Jesse, William, French and Andrew, attended the burial of Mrs. Minerva B Easley. She was Mr. Easley's step-mother.

If you don't see right, you can not live right. Get right with yourself by having your eyes fitted with the proper glasses. Examination free by Dr. J. Harry Martin, who will be in Pearisburg, November 14th and 15th.

Fred Parrish of Hurley, Va., but who has been in Canada for the past six months at work, was in town last week on "very particular business." When he left Canada a few days ago, there was three inches of snow on the ground and more coming down.

Rev. H. J. Dudley, pastor of the Christian church at Narrows, will have services as follows: Preaching Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, subject, "Seven Voices on the Cross." Evening subject, "The Brotherhood of Man." Good music by the choir. All are cordially invited.

Pearisburg High School seems to be THE SCHOOL of schools. They seem to come here from all quarters of the globe. The latest addition to the school here is Mr. L. G. Burton of Spokane, Wash., while not a scholar in his "teens" is not by any means an old man. We understand he has purchased a building lot and has let to contract a nice residence. We welcome you, you are of the right kind and such as we need.

This is to certify that I am again in my office in Pearisburg, and will be pleased to see all who may need my professional services.

J. THOMAS PARKER, D. D. S.

Rev. J. L. Prater and family left here last Friday for their new home in Bristol, Tenn. Of all preachers' families who have been on this circuit, none have more endeared themselves to our people, than Rev. Prater's. It is with deep regret that we part with this reverend and his estimable family.

While on a visit to Narrows last Saturday, we had the pleasure of meeting Rev. H. A. Brown of the Baltimore Conference, who is on a visit to his brother, Prof. C. A. Brown. Rev. Brown is the oldest one in his family, but for all this, he is looking hale and hearty. He is now stationed at Upperville, Va.

We received a very pleasant call on Saturday last from A. L. Kingrea, candidate for Road Commissioner from Walker's Creek district. Mr. K. forgot to file his name with the clerk 20 days before election, which is law, therefore his name will not be on the ticket, but he wishes it distinctly understood he is still a candidate.

Mr. Lane, a representative of the Virginia Iron C. & C. Co., was registered at Savoy Hotel first of this week and made a trip to Angel's Rest mountain to examine iron ore properties. Mr. G. W. Boggs of Cleveland, Ohio, also visited the mines, having come up from Narrows. Mr. W. D. Pearson acted as escort on this occasion.

Mrs. J. D. Miller of Newport, who has been in a hospital in Richmond for about a month, returned home, accompanied by her husband. Mrs. Miller has greatly improved in health, though at present, is very weak. We hope to hear of her having her full strength soon. They spent Monday night with their brother, Dr. Frank Miller on their way home.

Rev. W. B. Belchee and family received a severe "pounding" on Monday night last by the good people of this place. This kind of "pounding" was not of a serious nature, because it consisted in bringing to this worthy family many of the necessaries of life, in the way of replenishing the inner man—or woman either for that matter. Such "poundings" as these are far more graciously received than poundings which bruise and maim one another for life.

The Ministers' and Laymen's Institute of the Valley Baptist Association of Virginia, were in session here Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, at the Baptist church in this place. Several ministers and laymen were present and carried out an interesting and instructive programme. Dr. Hugh C. Smith of Christiansburg, preached the introductory sermon. The meeting was of great benefit to the church, town, and the pastor. Rev. Royall is very grateful for the interest shown by the people.

We return thanks to Prof. B. Ellison of Hoge's Store, for the invitation to be present at Patrons' Day, also for the invitation to dine with him.

While at Narrows last Saturday, we had the pleasure of dining at dinner time with Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Campbell, who moved from Pearisburg a few weeks ago. They seem to be well pleased and from the good meal we had with them, would say they are prospering in their new home.

We have received the following from our old friend, Mr. W. Z. Holliday, who resides in New Haven, Conn., which has the true ring to it: "Inclosed please find money order for one dollar to keep the VIRGINIAN coming another year. Sorry I am not in Virginia this fall to vote for four of your good candidates, J. H. Durham, G. W. Barger, W. W. Walker and T. B. King."

The entertainment given here last Thursday night and at Narrows, Saturday night, by The Neil Litchfield Trio, was about the best thing seen here for years. Every one who seen it were loud in their praise of this trio. It will exhibit here again, Monday night, November 6th. A much larger house will greet them next time than the one before.

We are in receipt of a letter from Mrs. J. B. Jackson, Altapass, N. C., in which she states she would like for us to give more news from Newport. We have tried a number of times to secure a correspondent at Newport, but up to this time, have not succeeded. Will not some one act for us in that capacity at that place. Who will be the first one to do it?

PATRONS' DAY IN THE SCHOOLS

The Public Schools of the county are arranging for Patrons' Day, which is next Friday the 27th, we are glad to see this. The efficiency of the schools depends more largely upon the work and co-operation of the patrons than is generally realized, and we hope they will give next Friday to this work. We hear that Judge Martin Williams will address the school at Hoge's Chapel on that day. Judge Williams seems not to loose his interest in the public schools, and we are specially pleased to know that he will be returned to the legislature without opposition.

WORDS OF PRAISE.

The following from the Galax Post-Herald will explain itself in relation to Rev. W.B. Belchee, who is now our new circuit rider, but who for the past year was preacher in charge of the Galax circuit. We welcome Bro. Belchee and family to this charge and deeply sympathize with the Galax people who have been so unfortunate as to lose this reverend gentlemen, and hope at some future time he may be returned to them:

"It is with much regret that the people of the Methodist church see their pastor, Rev. W. B. Belchee leave for his new charge at Pearisburg. Mr. Belchee is a popular man and an able preacher and has had a most successful year as pastor here. His wide circle of friends, not only Methodists but people of all the churches had hoped to have him back again and his removal came as a great disappointment to them. Since it was learned that he was moved, he and his family have been entertained nearly every day in the home of some friends and the people have tried to show their appreciation and esteem in a way that he may not forget the people here. He and his family carry the good wishes of many warm friends to their new home who shall always be ready to welcome them back to our town."

TO THE TEACHERS OF GILES COUNTY.

Every teacher now employed in the public schools of Giles county is expected to be present at the Annual Association at Pearisburg, November 10th and 11th.

Arrangements have been made whereby all teachers so attending and answering roll-call on both days will be paid for the Friday so used as if they had taught. Any teacher failing, refusing, or neglecting to so attend will be subject to a $5.00 forfeiture from salary, unless a most satisfactory excuse in writing is duly filed with the secretary of the Association.

The purpose of these meetings is to acquaint our teachers with the very best possible methods, and to bring about a greater uniformity of school work through out the county; hence the necessity for every teacher to be in strict attendance to help or to be helped.

In addition to our own good teachers we expect the presence of some of Virginia's leading educators, and this promises to be one of the very best meetings we have ever had.

Very respectfully yours,
C. A. HARDWICK, Div. Supt.

Very Serious

It is a very serious matter to ask for one medicine and have the wrong one given you. For this reason we urge you in buying to be careful to get the genuine—

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT Liver Medicine

The reputation of this old, reliable medicine, for constipation, indigestion and liver trouble, is firmly established. It does not imitate other medicines. It is better than others, or it would not be the favorite liver powder, with a larger sale than all others combined.

VOL. LII. Pearisburg, Giles County, Va., Thursday, November 2, 1911. No. 48.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

Concerning V. P. I.

Is it possible that there is to be a test of just how much Virginians will endure in the way of displacing tried administrators to make way for political or personal favorites? Hardly has the penitenti . . candal grown cold before the attemp: to remove Dr. Paul Barringer from the presidency of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute is again revived. Is it taken for granted that the present Board of Visitors is more subservient than its predecessor?

In the face of direly discouraging circumstances, handicapped by unconcealed animosity where support should have been given, persecuted by captious critics who were powerful enough to obtain a respectful hearing for their slanders, Paul Barringer has worked diligently, faithfully and most intelligently in the cause of the institution over which he presides and is making one of the most valuable schools of the State.

Through a vista of libels and contemptible detractions, the president of the V. P. I. has walked with a sincere disregard of those who have snarled at him. A weaker man would have abandoned the struggle long ago, would have retired in disgust from such a contest with unworthy foes, who hit in the dark or use poisoned arrows when they have to get in the open.

That a man of Paul Barringer's standing, with the reputation that he made at the University of Virginia as well as the record given to him by the last Board of Visitors who investigated conditions at the V. P. I. could be guilty of countenancing conditions making for immorality at the school is too banal to merit even a passing consideration.

Burton, the great Oriental scholar, tells a story about an eastern potentate who hired a prophet to tell him when to expect rain. One day the soothsayer predicted clear weather and the king rode forth. He met a poor peasant riding a donkey, and the humble subject said: "Sire, you had better hurry else the rain will overtake you." "But," said the king, "my prophet has said that there will be no rain today." To which the peasant answered: "It may be true, sire, but my donkey's ears tell me that the rain will come." The rain did come; so the king discharged his prophet and hired the donkey. Burton remarks, concerning this incident, that ever since that day asses have tried to hold public office.

It might be premised that the long-eared gentry would not struggle for college presidencies, yet the history of the Polytechnic Institute affords conclusive proof to the contrary. It has not yet been disclosed who wants to succeed Dr. Barringer; but it is fairly certain that the inspirers of the new bits of malice have either picked their man or they are working in the interest of a man who has picked himself.

To the credit of the student body, the cadet corps of the institute, be it said that they are not willing to remain quiescent while they are being indicted in the campaign of slander aimed at the president of the school. It is rather tough when villifiers are able to distribute broadcast malicious attacks on boys. Even youth is not sacred when place is at stake. The cadets, on Monday evening, formally repudiated the insinuations and charges; they asked the press to brand them as "wilful untruths and slanderous statements." The Landmark believes in those boys at Blacksburg just as it believes in the president of their school. The resolutions passed by the corps, after indignantly denounc ing such charges as affect them continue:

They (the cadet corps) assert their loyalty and confidence in their president and his administration and wish to go on record as stating that in their belief, the charges were either brought by one not in full possession of his senses or by one acting as the tool of shrewd men who are trying to further their own selfish interest by libelous statements.

The cadets are charitable to infer the possibility that the emanations are due to diseased mentality. It is extremely commendable in them to advance that alternative; but events would tend to attenuate, if not entirely to banish, any such probability.

The present slanders make only a recrudescence; and unfortunately these outbreaks recur with an apparent periodicity, in the midseason of a gubernatorial term. Dr. Barringer can afford to rest content upon his performance to establish his claim to the gratitude of Virginians and to the affection of the youths whose care has been entrusted to him; but that confidence by no means assures his continuance in office. It is not pleasing to state such a proposition, but it is the unfortunate truth.

The resolutions of the cadet corps conclude:

Understanding that their former commandant is the fountain and source of several more charges to be preffered, they wish to state that in their opinion his removal from his post was conducive to the general welfare of the school and also to say that the present morals of this school are very high in the hands of a new commandant who is apt to keep it so.

The assumption in this paragraph may be unwarranted; but the students are very good judges of the man who directs them, and their testimony in favor of their present commandant must be taken at face value, else it can only be assumed that they wish deliberately to deceive the people of the State. Imputing such a debased motive to Virginia boys is too monstrous a conception to find the briefest lodgment in an untainted mind.

Dr. Paul Barringer has had gallant champions but there is none to whom he owes more sincere appreciation than to the boys of his school who have rallied to his support in such a manly, honest, courageous and convincing manner.

A Tax Payer's Hard Luck Story.

Mr. J. B. Botts, some city's efficient tax collector, received the other day his best hard luck story. A tax payer who was not as prompt as he should have been had his salary attached for taxes. He paid the bill without an oral murmur, but along with the tear stained tax statement sent the collector these lines:

A HARD LUCK STORY.

His horse went dead and his mule went lame,
And he lost his cows in a poker game;
Then a hurricane came, on a summer day
And blew the house where he lived, away,
Then an earthquake came; when that was gone
It had swallowed the ground the house stood on.
Then the tax collector, he came around
And charged him up with a hole in the ground.

DULANEY-ROBINSON.

(Last Thursday's Items.)

Bane, Va., Oct. 23.—Last Wednesday at high noon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robertson, Miss Zobeda Robertson became the bride of Theodore Dulaney.

The wedding was a surprise to the community, nothwithstanding the fact that the contracting parties had been sweethearts from childhood.

This old Virginia home, where hospitality is always generously dispensed, was beautifully decorated with dahlias and chrysanthemums in profusion.

Miss Clara Eaton presided at the organ. As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were sounded, the bridesmaids, gowned in white lingerie and carrying white chrysanthemums, entered the parlor, attended by the groomsmen. Miss Pauline Croy was with William Bourne, Miss Francis Robertson with George Johnston, Miss Ola Johnston with Frank Robertson. These parties as they entered the parlor, forming an aisle through which the bride and groom advanced and were met by the Rev. D. T. Miles, who read the impressive ceremony of the Southern Methodist church, which united them for life.

The bride was exquisitely gowned in white lingerie and carried bride's roses. The groom wore conventional black.

Immediately after the ceremony the guests were invited to the dining room, where a sumptuous repast, of many courses, was elegantly served.

Mrs. Dulaney is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robertson, and is a young lady of estimable character and a general favorite in the community. Dulaney is an enterprising young farmer of Thessalia, Va.

Later in the afternoon the party left for Thessalia, where a reception was tendered them at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dulaney.

Mr. and Mrs. Dulaney will be at home to their friends at Thessalia.

The Virginian joins in with their numerous friends in wishing them a long life of happiness.

(Last Thursday's Items.)

Radford, Va., October 20.—Grove Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, East Radford, was the scene Wednesday evening October 18th, of a very pretty wedding, when Mrs. S. A. Hunter gave in marriage her daughter, Miss Mary Margaret, to Mr. William Henry Wood of Victoria.

Just before the entrance of the bridal party, Mr. Preston of Roanoke, rendered "Thine," in an excellent tenor voice. Mrs. J. Harvey Barnett presided at the organ. Promptly at 8 o'clock to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, Boyd Roby and Katharine Caldwell, ribbon girls, entered and opened the gates for the bridal party. Following these were Robert Burton, John Mundy, Ambrose Wilson and Troy Sowers, ushers. Then entered the bridesmaids and grooms men in the following order: Miss Ethel Page and James Marks, Miss Maggie Epling and George W. Bond, Miss Lila Stump and Gamble C. Shuler, former pastor of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride was exquisitely gowned in white duchess satin with pearl trimmings. The bridal veil was caught with lilies of the valley, and the flowers were a shower bouquet of bride roses.

The mother of the bride wore a handsome gown of black. The brides maids were costumed in messaline to effect the colors of the rainbow, which was the color scheme. The church was tastefully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers.

The bride and groom left at 9:20 for New York. From thence they will tour Canada, after which they will return to their home at Victoria, where the groom is engaged in the lumber business.

Mr. H. B. Shelton,

My Dear Sir:—

I regret that I did not succeed in having your corn entered at Petersburg Fair for a premium. I wrote the Fair officials there in regard to it last week, but in the rush of preparation, I suppose, they overlooked replying. I saw all the premium corn at the Fair here, (and there was at least 300 samples), and I also saw the corn in the 32 county exhibits, and yours was conceded to top them all. I am sorry you did not think of it in time to enter it for a premium. It will be put in our Department exhibit here at the Capital, but Mr. Koiner requests that if in shucking out your crop you can pick out two or three dozen ears that is any better than this, that be will be glad to have them for exhibit sent to the Department of Agriculture by express collect, and your name and address will appear as the grower.

Yours truly,
Jas. W. Williams.

PHLEGAR.

[Last Thursday's Items]

Mother Nature is changing her color from green to a yellowish brown.

We are always glad to welcome the change of seasons, most especially the Autumnal change.

E. W. Hobbs of Narrows, passed through our town the first of last week on his way to Nobusiness to do some surveying for the Nobusiness Lumber Company.

Judge Bernard Mason of Pearisburg, passed through Phlegar last week on a business trip to Nobusiness.

On account of a heavy rain which fell on Tuesday 17th, Wolf Creek was swollen about sixteen inches higher than it has been for over a year, causing a great deal of damage in places, especially to the little bridges at lumber camps.

The weather continues warm and pleasant, and unless Jack Frost makes his appearance in a very few days we can welcome October without any frost in this section.

W. W. Burton, who has been very ill for some time, passed to his reward about two o'clock a. m., Tuesday the 17th. The bereft relatives and friends of the deceased have our sympathy.

French Bros. have recently purchased the St. Clair farm at Phlegar. We wish these gentlemen well and hope to have them as neighbors in the near future.

Best wishes to the patrons and readers of the Virginian.

Next Tuesday, November 7th, is election day. On that day some hearts will be overjoyed, while others will have hearts as heavy and as dull as a wagon load of wood. 'Twas ever thus.

Wilfrid, the Wizard, at Narrows High School auditorium, Saturday the 4th and Pearisburg High School auditorium, Monday the 6th inst., are sure to please and make you laugh until your sides are sore.

The Bookkeeper or Stenographer who has the recommendation of the Mountain State Business College, Parkersburg, W. Va., can always secure employment. Write today for their 96 page catalogue.

We were shown one day this week a three-legged chicken, all three good legs too, only one was shorter than the other, and was so constructed it could scratch the lice off of itself while it traveled along on the other two.

If you don't see right, you can not live right. Get right with yourself by having your eyes fitted with the proper glasses. Examination free by Dr. J. Harry Martin, who will be in Pearisburg, November 14th and 15th.

Tuesday night was halloween night, and from the way things are piled up and strewn around town, the youngsters must have had, what they call "a glorious time." The young misses and boys were out early in the night, but soon returned to their homes.

Patron's Day at the High School here a decided success, and will doubtless prove to be in its effects of great future benefit to the school. When teachers and patrons combine in spirit and in work, success is assured.

Hon. P. F. St. Clair of Bane, is with his brother Charles of Dublin, who is in a hospital at Roanoke, having undergone an operation for appendicitis. We hope the operation was a success and that he will be out soon.

Mrs. Gibbs, daughter of John Hollins of Bluff City, died in Ohio Sunday and was brought to Pearisburg on No. 4 Tuesday morning and was buried in the public graveyard near D. W. Mason's, Tuesday evening. The burial service was conducted by Rev. M. W. Royall.

We return thanks to the President and Directors of the American Association for Highway Improvement for an invitation to attend the American Road Congress to be held at Richmond, Va., November 20th to 23d. We are very sorry we cannot attend, but our heart is with you in the good roads movement. We hope a great deal of good will be accomplished at this congress.

Dan P. McMullen and wife of Cheboygan, Mich., gave us a very friendly call on Saturday last. Mr. McMullen is at the head of a printing firm known as McMullen Printing Co. His wife was a Miss Francis of White Gate, this county. It is very seldom we have printers from so far off a country, pay us a visit. We welcome you, come again when you are within reach of us.

The young lady pupils if the Pearisburg High School showed their appreciation, love and esteem for Mrs. J. T. Wassom by going to the home of Prof. Wassom on Thursday evening last and unloading on their table all kinds of jellies, and many other choice and delicate eatables. Mr. and Mrs. Wassom will have a sweet tooth for many weeks to come as the result of these kind lovable, and sweet young Misses.

Little Pauline French, age seven years, died Sunday night about seven o'clock. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. French of Carve. She had been afflicted in a strange way for about two years. She is at rest with Jesus. The funeral service was conducted at Pearisburg Baptist church Tuesday morning by Rev. M. W. Royall, assisted by Rev. W. B. Belchee, after which the body was laid to rest in the French graveyard. A more extended notice will appear later.

All those who failed to see the Litchfield Trio at the High School auditorium a few nights ago added to the disappointments of their lives, one more cause for regret. It was positively their last appearance in Pearisburg this season, but Rutherford and Rianhard who are under the direction of The Radcliffe Lyceum Bureau, will give a high class humorous and refined entertainment at the High School auditorium here on Monday evening, November 6th. These monarchs of magic are in a class by themselves.

While we were on the other side of the river last Friday at Patrons' Day exercises at Hoge's Store, we had the pleasure of stopping at the High School at Pembroke, also Patrons' Day there, where Judge Martin Williams delivered an able address, but owing to the lateness of the hour the Judge had to cut his address a little short. The young ladies of this school acquitted themselves with honor, and shows they are students well trained. There is one thing certain they need a new and much larger schoolhouse at Pembroke, and we hope to hear of them having a large and commodious structure in the near future.

Rutherford and Rianhard, in Wilfrid, the Wizard, will be given in the Narrows High School auditorium on Saturday night, November 4th, and at Pearisburg High School auditorium, Monday, the 6th inst. This entertainment is a twin brother to the one we had a couple of weeks ago, and with which all were so well pleased. This entertainment is clean, refined, and sure to please. This one is said to be better than the other one. So, if you want to have two hours or more of good, solid fun—and laugh from start to finish—be sure and take in this entertainment. The press, all over the State, are loud in their praise of this entertainment. Remember the places and dates.

We, in company with Judge Martin Williams, on Friday last, started for Hoge's Store to "take in" Patrons' Day at that place. The day was beautiful one and we certainly enjoyed it as well as the good company we were with. At noon hour, we had the pleasure of dining with Mr. and Mrs. B. Ellison. By the way, they have the prettiest and sweetest pair of twins our eyes ever beheld, and which any father and mother should be more than proud of. They also had as guests, Judge Martin Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Snidow. We do not like to praise one's meal too much, for fear we make them blush, suffice to say, it was an elegant and elaborate one and all those around the festive board enjoyed it, judging from the rev-enous manner in which they partook of it. We thank you, and wish you a long, happy and prosperous life.

Mrs. Annie Neal, who lived at Shumate, this county, died last Friday and was buried Saturday at Day's cemetery on Wolf Creek Rev. W. B. Belchee officiated at the funeral services. She was 84 years of age. She leaves one daughter, three sisters, one brother and a host of friends to mourn her loss. She left a very bright testimony; she asked us not to grieve after her, that she was going home to glory. Just a few minutes before she died she said for us not to ask her to stay here for she was ready and willing at any moment to meet her Saviour. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. She said she was going to meet her mother, father, sisters and brothers in the land above. Thus, another good old lady has gone to receive her reward.

We were glad to see W. H. Snidow of Pembroke on our streets Tuesday. We are glad to note his health very much improved.

The Tenth Annual Meeting of the Giles County Teachers' Association will convene in the High School Building, Pearisburg, Va., 10:00 a. m. Friday, November 10th, and adjourn 2:00 p. m. Saturday, Nov. 11, 1911.

Charles Shelburn, five year old son of Mr. Will and Mrs. Effie Lucas, died at Ennis, W. Va., Tuesday afternoon from diphtheria. The remains were brought here Wednesday afternoon on No. 2, and buried in the Pearisburg cemetery, Rev. W. B. Belchee officiating at the burial service here. This is their only child, and is a sad death, and is made the more sad, by the mother being down with the same disease, their home quarantined, and the parents could not attend the burial. We extend our sympathy.

WILLIAMS-ALLEN.

The Presbyterian Church at White Gate was the scene of a beautiful wedding on the evening of Thursday, October 26th, when Miss Josephine Battie Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller B. Allen of White Gate, and Mr. Wirt Carrington Williams of Bland, son of Attorney General and Mrs. Sam'l W. Williams of Richmond, were united in matrimony. The wedding took place at five o'clock, the Rev. J. G. Reveley performing the ceremony. White and yellow flowers, autumn leaves and lighted candles decorated the altar and chancel of the church, and Miss Lucy Williams of Wytheville, played the "Bridal Chorus" and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The bride entered the church with her father, Mr. Miller B. Allen. Her wedding gown was fashioned of heavy white satin, embroidered in pearls and trimmed with some rare old lace. Her tulle veil was arranged with a bandeau of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. Miss Bessie Allen, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of pale green satin, and carried an armful of white roses. Sam'l W. Williams, Jr., brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The bridesmaids, who included Misses Louise Williams, Marjorie Miller, Vara Bane, Kate Bulman and Bettie Fanning, were dainty lingerie frocks, with corn colored sashes and short white tulle veils. They carried yellow chrysanthemums. The groomsmen were Allen Brown, Guy Dunn, Albert Suitor Robert Bane and Andrew Newberry, and the ushers were Miller Allen and Booth Williams.

Immediately following the ceremony a dinner and reception was given at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Williams and his bride will spend several weeks in Richmond and other Eastern cities.

Guests from a distance to attend the ceremony were: Attorney General Williams of Richmond, Miss Lucy Williams of Wytheville, Miss Louise Williams of Richmond, Miss Kate Bulman of Roanoke, Allen Brown, Judge and Mrs. Martin Williams of Pearisburg, and others.

PATRONS' DAY.

The Patrons' Day celebration by the Hoge's Store graded school was quite a success. And why shouldn't it have been? A program consisting of recitations, patriotic songs and flag raising by the school, talks by some of the patrons, and a rousing educational speech by Judge Martin Williams was the order of the day. Judge Williams' personal popularity, his ability as a speaker and his deep interest in educational affairs of the state and county make him much sought for on such occasions. At this particular time he addressed himself to both school and patrons, reviewing the history of the public school system from its infancy to the present and calling attention to its marvelous growth and increasing efficiency. He said and concluded by begging the patrons to give their support and best efforts to the interests of our public schools—the hope of church and state of the coming years. Judge Williams was particularly a welcome guest of our school, because to him we are much indebted for one of the best school buildings of the kind in the county, a recently installed modern heating and ventilating system and an additional appropriation from the State library fund whereby we get a seven months' school annually. Three cheers for the Judge! May his energy and influence in the Legislature never wane.

With Judge Williams came "Ye Editor," Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Snidow, and with Mr. and Mrs. J. T. S. Hoge came Miss Mary Snidow all of whom contributed very much to the social features of the day. X.

A CARD.

Through the courtesy of the PEARISBURG VIRGINIAN I wish to say a few words to the voters of Walker's Dreek District. Had I not been confined to my room on account of sickness for the past five weeks, I would have made arrangements with some capable man in each section of the district who could have oversight of the working and maintenance of the roads. If elected, I will carry out this plan of localizing the working of the roads. By this method and by giving each section its fair share of the funds, I hope to create a healthy rivalry between them for the best roads. I wish to emphasize the fact that I expect to make road drainage one of the special features of road work. I am sure that the "stitch in time saves nine," method applies to nothing more forcibly than to the keeping up of roads.

I wish to say that I have had encouraging reports as to my election and if it should be the good pleasure of the people to give me the office, it will be my highest aim to build up the roads and make them second to none in the county. Thanking you in advance for what you may do for me, I am,

Yours respectfully,
GEO. B. EATON.

C. A. HARDWICK, Chairman.

F. G. THRASHER, Clerk.

What It Cost the Taxpayers of Virginia.

$3,773,874.00.

The tax-payers support the saloon. The saloon costs the tax payers in three items of actual expense, Crime, Pauperism, and Insanity, $277,975.00 more than it pays in total revenue.

Here are the items:

CRIME.

There were at the close of the last fiscal year in our jails and penitentiary 4,514 criminals.

Eighty-five per cent. of these were made criminal by the saloon. The saloon made criminals were 3,851.

The expense to the tax payers for the apprehension and punishment of these 3,851 saloon-made criminals was $452,543 00.

PAUPERISM.

There were, in our almshouses and on the out-door lists, dependent on the tax-payers of Virginia, 9,873 persons.

Forty seven out of each hundred were made dependent by the saloon. The saloon made paupers were 4,640.

The expense to the tax payers of Virginia for the support of these 4,640 saloon made paupers was $166,949 00.

INSANITY.

We have four great hospitals for the insane in Virginia. Their inmates number 4,076.

Thirty-five per cent. of these were made insane by the saloon. The saloon made insane were 1,426.

The cost to the tax payers for the support of the products of the saloon in our Asylums is	$179,282.00
Total expense to the tax payers of the saloon made criminals, paupers and insane,	$708,774 00
Total Revenue from the saloons,	$520,799.00
Balance due the tax payers for direct expense of the saloon in criminal charges, pauperism and insanity,	$277,975.00

Now, if we add to these direct expenses of the saloon to the State, the indirect costs of the institution, the figures become appalling.

For example, the number of persons, mostly able bodied men, composing this body of human derelicts, wrecked and swamped in body and mind by the saloon is three thousand, nine hundred and seventeen (3,917) Virginia citizens.

If we estimate their earning capacity at a dollar a day for 300 working days, we have an annual actual loss to the State of $2,975,100 00 plus the $798,774.00 of actual cost.

By a modest estimate, the liquor business is costing Virginia an annual sum of $3,773,874 00.

When you add to this the sums spent for private charity, and the vast sums sent out of the State for the imported drinks, and the enormous amount spent by our people for intoxicants, we have some idea of the actual expense of the saloon to the people of Virginia.

The saloon is a financial, as well as a moral parasite, a financial blood-sucker. It subsists on the life of our people and is run in the interests of a handful of our own citizens, and for the benefit of vast corporations, beer and whiskey trusts, outside our State.

It holds the cudgel over our politicians and throttles our press.

It is time for Virginia to free herself of the incubus.—From a Leaflet of the Virginia Issue.

PENSIONS ARE BEING SCALED

The Checks for the Old Soldiers Are Discounted to Make Money go Around.

A Richmond special to the Lynchburg News, says:

"Simply because of the enormous increase in the number of pensions the auditor of public accounts was this year compelled to scale the pensions 10 per cent. This appears to all pensioners, and while the amount received by the dependents is small the reduction of 10 per cent. means a great hardship to them. Auditor Donohoe had a total of $450,000 for pensions, the amount carried by the last legislature in the appropriation bill, and that would have been enough to have given each and every one then on the roll the full amount which they had received in the past, but there were many additions to the list, and for this reason alone the amount had to be scaled. The legislature has doubled the sum for pensions in the last few years. The old soldiers and their dependents are dying out very fast but the number of applicants is growing faster even than the death rate. It is understood that about $50,000 would have carried all the amounts to the limit, but the legislature did not contemplate the increase in applicants"

CRIMINAL INSANE.

The criminal insane is a distinct type and needs different treatment from the milder class of demented patients in our State hospitals.

Too often citizens are killed by men who are acquitted on the plea of insanity, and, after a short stay in an asylum, are discharged.

It is comparatively easy to escape the electric chair, when an astute lawyer raises the doubt in a jury's mind of the sound mental condition of the homicide.

Homicides by insane people are so frequent in Virginia as to create alarm.

"It is the duty of the State," declares the Charlottesville Progress, "to relieve society of the risk of the repetition of insane killing. The homicidal impulse once effective should be made thereafter ineffective forever, even if the asylum should become the refuge of murderers whose records are due wholly to criminal instincts and perversion. This would be better than turning these creatures loose on society because some astute lawyer for the defense succeeds in hypnotizing the jury into believing a cunningly constructed presumption of insanity. There is no such thing as 'expelling the demons' from those possessed of the devil, as in the days when sacred history recorded such exercisings. A man who takes life should forfeit his own if he is sane, and if insane he should forfeit his liberty forever. There is no other way under heaven by which the quick use of the gun by grouchy perverts can be discouraged.

"If one thing or the other had been in Virginia with inflexible inevitableness, Dr. Pettit would not be in his grave today. Life would be safer everywhere in the State."—Richmond Journal.

The liquor man knows which side his bread is buttered on. He is always and everywhere opposed to Prohibition.

The liquor man stands for unlimited liquor. The anti-saloon man stands for unlimited prohibition.

ELEVEN HATFIELD BROTHERS JOIN CHURCH.

Sons of "Devil Anse" Professed Conversion at the Funerals of Elias and Troy.

Of surpassing interest is the latest story of the Hatfield family which comes down from Logan county. The announcement that "Devil Anse" Hatfield, the patriarch of the great family which waged war so long against the McCoys in the mountains of Logan and Mingo counties, had embraced religion and been baptized in the water of Island Creek by Uncle Dyke Garrett, came to Huntington just before the shooting of Elias and Troy Hatfield, sons of "Devil Anse," in Fayette county.

This was a sensation, added interest being given by the prominence of the Hatfields in the feudal days. Troy and Elias Hatfield were shot by an Italian named Gerome and as they fell their own bullets found the heart of their assailant.

Their bodies were taken back to their native Logan home for burial and "Uncle Dyke" Garrett, the veteran preacher of the mountains, with his "son in the gospel," J. G. McNeeley, went to the funeral.

On this occasion a wonderful thing took place. Troy and Elias Hatfield were two of thirteen brothers. Every one of these boys was trained in his youth to be prepared to fight to bring about, if necessary, the extermination of the McCoy clan.

But when they saw their brothers cold in death and heard the final benedictions pronounced over them, sorrow filled their hearts and they all together went forward and made a public confession of faith in the God their mother and, more recently, of their father as well. The mother of the eleven converts has long been of the church.

Among the brothers were "Cap," who in the days of the feuds, was the possessor of a name feared through all the mountains, Bob, John, Dr. Ellis, Tennis, Johnson, Floyd and Joe.

"Uncle Dyke" and Brother McNeeley are to baptize the Hatfield boys in the near future. A special day is to be set for the baptism.—Huntington Advertiser.

And Other Letters, Too.

The gentleman who sits on a keg of powder to rest from his labors and lights his pipe, is somewhat of a noodle, but he displays rare good judgment when compared to the full grown man of mature years who sits down and deliberately writes a love letter. One of the prominent western millionaires is just finding out and he is apt to lose his happy home and a large slice of his fortune.

The love letter is an institution which belongs to those who have not reached their full mental development. It is usually associated with the teens and any person who writes one after he has passed the age of twenty one should not be entitled to the ballot.

The love letter has life eternal. When everything else fades away and passes into dissolution, the love letter remains to haunt a man until he steals it or buys it and feeds it to the furnace. When he writes it he puts a lot of silly slush into it that is bound to rise later and slap him in the face, even if he marries the girl, for even after twenty years of married life, it may be thrust upon him for his perusal in case of a domestic misunderstanding.

A single man who writes a love letter is a chump and a married man who writes one is a fool, for in ninety nine cases out of a hundred it spells trouble.—Exchange.

OBITUARY.

Eliza Rebecca Henderson was born in Giles county, Virgina, August 29, 1840, died in Hillsboro, Ohio, May 11, 1911, aged 70 years, 8 months and 12 days.

At the age of sixteen she united with the M. E. Church at the old Wabash Camp Ground, and her life bears witness to all who became acquainted with her, that she found her Saviour and that her sins were pardoned; for her life was like a sunbeam growing brighter and brighter as the days went by, until Jesus called and she went home.

On February 22, 1871, she was united in marriage to James Turner. Two children came to bless and make their home a very happy home, Ola May and Carey.

Ola only lived about two years and God sent his messenger and took her unto himself. The mother's heart was broken, but through it all, her eyes were heavenward and she said, "She cannot come to me but I can go to her," and with aching hearts they faced the future, and after twenty seven years of love, joy, happiness and sorrow, the Messenger came again and took the husband and father. She said, "Thy will be done."

Their married life was an exceedingly happy one. They were all and all to each other until God called the dear one home and she was left with one son, Carey, to mourn a loss that no one can fully understand except those who have experienced a like event; but through it all, she looked unto her heavenly Father and said, "Thy will be done;" and through those trying times. O, how often has the writer seen her face shine like that of an angel, when she talked of the loved ones over there and the glorious meeting she would have by and by. She is gone. The body that lies before us is but the house in which she lived. She is with her loved ones praising God for his loving kindness and that she is forever free from pain, sorrow and trouble.

She loved her friends and her neighbors with a steadfast, unflinching devotion. It took more than idle gossip to shake her faith in a friend or neighbor. She was always looking for the bright side, the good side, and to her all her friends were noble characters with which she expected to spend eternity. But her little grandson, Jimmy was the apple of her eye. Every thought was of him and for his welfare. Even while suffering intense pain his welfare was uppermost in her mind. But grandma is gone, and we, who believe as she believed, and we know as she knew, that Jesus will meet his own at the dark turbulent river's edge and safely gather us to himself, do not need to mourn, for we shall all be at home by and by.

One by one we are laying our loved ones out here in the quiet church yard; one by one we take the long last farewell look and soon and very soon, others will look their last farewell look and say goodbye to us and then we will be with Grandma Turner.—Hillsboro (Ohio) Dispatch.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

Ship Your Turkeys

To the Old Reliable Poultry Firm

FRANK HELLERICK & CO.,
349 New Market St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

We take pleasure in announcing to all Poultry raisers and dealers that last Spring we moved into one of the largest and best located stores in the East and this season, with our two outlets, immense floor space and storage rooms and more than double our former force of help, we are in far better shape to handle your poultry than ever before. The buyers here realizing this are of course expecting us to have a tremendous amount of fine fat poultry (the kind they always get from us) for Thanksgiving, and are now rushing in their orders for Turkeys and most of them are saying: "Just double our order for last Thanksgiving." We are accepting this immense pile of orders believing that our friends in the country are going to furnish us the goods with which to fill them. We are going to depend upon you and when your shipment comes you can depend upon us. No matter how small the shipment we will give it our personal attention, get every cent we can for you and send prompt returns. We have been working all Summer and Fall with both brain and muscle preparing for this season's poultry business and we say without hesitation, that no firm on God's green earth can get you more money for your TURKEYS than we are prepared to do and will do. We have the buyers, we have the room and the help to handle four times as much dressed poultry as we ever received before. We were the recognized leaders in our old quarters. What are we going to be in our new? Behind this great enterprise is plenty of hard cash, an abundance of energy and hustle and 31 years experience in the handling of dressed poultry. Where could you look for a firm better qualified and more able to render you satisfactory service?

We earnestly hope every one whoever shipped us before will ship us again this year and all who have never yet tried us will do so now. Nobody at home or on the markets will work harder for you or give you more net money for your Turkeys (Eggs too, they are high and going higher) than Frank Hellerick and Emory Sodlers ship nice fat stock for Thanksgiving and hold your thin stock for later shipments. Prices are going to be good from present outlook, especially on fancy stock. Write us at once what you have and we will keep you posted and advise best days to ship. Remember our motto: "Best goods for our buyers, top prices for our shippers and a square deal to all." We have stood by this motto for 31 years and are willing to rest our future upon it.

Awaiting your shipments, we are yours to serve.
