In obedience to an order of the court of Goochland county, we whose names are hereto subscribed have this day examined the account of Peter Johnston administrator of Valentine Wood deceased and the vouchers by which the same has been sustained and do find according to the statement hereto prefixed, that he is indebted to the estate of his decedent in the sum of two pounds five shillings and ten pence three farthings: but he has given credit in the said foregoing account for the sum of thirty pounds one shilling and four pence which he has recovered by suit from William Morrow: yet has never received, an execution therefor having issued, and having returned without making the money or any part thereof. So that if the said sum of thirty pounds one shilling and four pence is never obtained by the said administrator the estate of his intestate will be indebted to him in the sum of twenty seven pounds fifteen shillings and five pence one farthing. The said administrator also claims a credit for eleven pounds and five pence stated by him to have been paid to a certain Alexander Colvard administrator of Benjamin Colvard deceased; and should he at any future period produce a proper voucher for such payment, the estate of Valentine Wood deceased will then be indebted to his said administrator in the additional sum of the said eleven pounds and five pence besides the twenty seven pounds fifteen shillings and five pence one farthing aforesaid. Given under our hands this twenty second day of October in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety nine.
