

Crittenden, Virginia, August 23, 1917.

I, George L. Coggins, being of a sound and disposing mind do hereby make, publish and declare this to be my last will and testament hereby revoking all other wills by me at any time made.

First: I desire all my just debts to be paid, if I shall owe any at my death.

Second: I give all my household and kitchen furniture and all my chattle property to my wife, Jennima J. Coggins. She is to dispose of this property in anyway she may see fit for her own support.

Third: The homestead and land thereto attached I give to my wife, Jennima J. Coggins, her life time. At her death the property is to be sold and the proceeds to be given the following persons, who are my nearest relatives: A brother, B. L. Coggins, a sister Annie E. Baker another sister Bettie S. Richardson, each one to share alike.

In witness whereof I hereunto subscribe my name and affix my seal to this my last will and testament which is written without any interlineation or erasure on one sheet of paper and witnessed on a second sheet this 23 day of August, 1917,

George L. X Coggins.
