ROSTER OF THE BATTALION OF THE

GEORGIA MILITARY INSTITUTE CADETS

N THE CONFEDERATE ARMY SERVICE IN THE CI

FROM MAY 10TH, 1864, TO MAY 20TH, 1865

PREPARED BY EX-CADET ROBERT L. RODGERS, MEMBER OF COMPANY "B."

ATLANTA. (1905) GEORGIA

In May, 1864, and previous to that date, the Georgia Military Institute, at Marletta, Georgia, was composed of the various Progressors and Cadets. They were interested, in the prospect of being soon ordered "to the front," and the old "G. M. "c ampus was an interesting scene of active preparations of the boys to go to war. About the first of May studies were practically abandoned in the contemplation of active duties in the field. At that time the Faculty of the Institute was composed of splendid the field. At that time the Faculty Institute was composed of splendid sors, distinguished as educators,

GENERAL FRANK W. CAPERS,
Superintendent and instructor in Military Tactics and Engineering.
CAPTAIN JAMES S. AUSTIN, minandant of Cadets, and Professor of English Literature?
CAPTAIN JOHN M. RICHARDSON,
Professor of French.
CAPTAIN JOHN M. RICHARDSON,
Professor of Higher Mathematics.
CAPTAIN PAUL EVE,
ofessor of Mathematics and English
Branches. GENERAL FRANK W. CAPERS,

REV. JOHN W. BAKER, Chaplain of the institute, and Professor Belle Lettres.

DR. E. J. SETZE, Physician and Surgeon, G. M. I. MAJOR DOBBS, Quartermaster and Commissary.

About the first of May, 1864, orders were received for the Battalica to prepare for active service. Equipments of army, guis and accourtements, knappacks, haversacks, haversacks. and accourtements, knapsacks, haversacks, and canteens were received, and issued to the callets. They were intensely interested in these preparatory events. The Battallon was divided into two Companies, in the dutles at the Institute, Campany "A." and Company "B.", composedor boys 16 to 18 years of age, and in the same way they entered the army service.

General Capers was paced in command as, Major of the Battallbn. Commandar James S. Austin was assigned as Captain of Company "A." Professor V. E. Manget was assigned as Captain of Company "B.". The other officers of the companies were members of the cadet corps.

or company B. The other officers of the companies were members of the cadet corps.

Rations of "hard-tack" and bacon were issued and pretty soon things began to take on the aspect of active war. The first david the were in acting as proveds guard about the City of Marietta, and other general duties were in acting as proveds guard about the City of Marietta, and other general duties incident to their position at that time, in the rear of General Joseph E. Johnston's Confederate army.

In a few days an order was received for a detachment of Cadets to be sent to Resaca, and there, on the 14th of May. 1864, the detail of Cadets were first under fire from the guns of the Federal enemy.

A Federal officer, Lieuteant James S. Oates, of the Ninth Illhois Mounted Infantry, writing of the "mirching through Georgia" and of the first day's fighting in the battle of Resaca, says: "It was during the advance of that day that we dame in contact with the Georgia Cadets, from the Mitary Instiffic at Marfetta, who had come out from the woods at Resaca and formed their line behind a rail fedec. After a volley from the Cadets which killed several of our men, our regiment charged them."

Thus it is shown and acknowledged by one of our opponents that the Cadets were intrepid and effective in their very first engagement.

At the time of entering the service the

The battalion of cades was a conspicuous organization in the Confederate service, in the Western army, commanded by General Joseph E. Johnston. The battalion served under General Hood, and was a notserved under General Hood, and was a noted battalion of youths from the celebrated military school, the Georgia Military Institute. The boys were in excellent discipline, splendidly drilled, and with fine courage and great enthusiasm and patriotic spirit. They were a marked battallon of as fins mettled youths as war for any country.

war for any country.

Major F. W. Capers was proud of his "boys," as he affectionately spoke of them. When they were under severe artillery fire at Turner's Ferry, over chattahoochee river, Major Capers said he was very proud of them, as exhibiting a cool courage and skill, remarkable in every respect, and he said that he believed that if he had a full division of such boys he could repulse the whole Yankee army.

division of such boys he could repulse the whole Yankee army.

Major General, Henry C. Wayne was in command of the forces with which the cadeis served, as they confronted Sherman's farmy, on the "Marching Through Georgia." General Wayne, in his official report of February 6, 1865, gives account of the distinguished conduct of Georgia cadets in the campaign through Georgia. His report is fully set forth in the official war records, series 1, volume 53, supplement, on pages 32 to 37 inclusive, in serial No. 111. On page 38, General Wayne says: "I would consple wously mention Majors Hartridge and Capers, and Captains Tabbo, Pruden, Austin, and Warthen. The gallantry of these gentlemen cannot be surpassed. To Major Capers I am under the greatest obligations. His qualifications for military command are of the highest order, and entitle him to a preminent position. They have been brilliantly illustrated by the corps of cadets, whose gallantry, discipline, and skill equal antitling I have ever seen in any military seyice. I cannot speak too highly of these youths, who go into a fight as cheerfully as they would enter a bail-room, and with the silence and steadiness of veterans."

Local Control Cadata who the last organized Confederate soldiers on duty east of the Mississippi river, and their last service, as the first, was on provost duty, guarding the city of Augusta, Ga., and the Confederate arrends and army stores at that city. They obeyed the last order of a Confederate officer, Major General Lafavette Mo-

Chaptain of ine institute, and Professo Belle Lettres. DR. E. J. SETZE, Physician and Surgeon, G. M. I. MAJOR DOBBS, MAJOR DOBS, Onartermaster and Commissary.
About the Irrat of May, 1864, orders were received for the Battalicn to prepare for active service. Equipments of army guns and accourtements, knapsacks, faversacks, and canteens were received, and issued to the callets. They were intensely interested in these preparatory events. The Battalion was divided into two Companies, in the duttes lat the Institute Champany "A.," and Company "B.," composed of boys 16 to 18 years lof age, and in the same way they ion wis divided into two Companies, in the duties at the Institute, Campany "A." and Company "B." composed to boys 16 to 18 years of age, and in the same way they entered the army service.

General Capers was pixed in command as Major of the Battallon. Commandant James S. Austin was assigned as Captain of Company "A." Professor V. E. Manget was assigned as Captain of Company "B." The other officers of the companies were members of the cadet corps.

Rations of "hard-tack" and bacon were issued, and pretty soon things began to take on the aspect of active war. The first duties were in acting as provost guard about the City of Marietta, and other general dittes incident to their position at that time, in the rear of Geheral Joseph E. Johnston's Confederate army.

In a flew days an order was requived for a detachment of Cadets to be sent to Resaca, and there, on the 14th of May, 1804, the detail of Cadets were first under fire from the guns of the Federal enemy. A Federal officer, Lieuteant James S. Oates, of the Ninth Illinois Mounted Infanty, writing of the "marching through Georgia" and of the first day's fighting in the battle of Resaca, says: "It was during the advance of that day that we dame in contact with the Georgia Cadets, from the Military Instiffice at Marietta, who had come out from the woods at Resaca and formed their line behind a rall fevice. Major General, Henry C. Wayne was in command of the forces with which the cadets served, as they confronted Sherman's General Wayne, in his official report of February 6, 1865, gives account of the distinguished conduct of Georgia andets in the campaign through Georgia. His report is fully set forth in the official war records, series 1, volume 53, supplement, oa pages 32 to 37 inclusive, in serial No. 111. On page 36, General Wayne says: "I would conspic uously mention Majors Hairtridge and Capers, and Captains Taibot, Pruden, Austin, and Warthen. The gallantry of these gentlemen cannot be surpassed. To Major Capers I am under the greatest obligations. Hit qualifications for military command are of the highest order, and entitle him to a preminent position. They have been brilened. prominent position. They have been brilliantly illustrated by the corps of cadets, preminent position. They have been brilantly illustrated by the corps of cadels, whose gallantry, discipline, and skill equal anything I have ever seen in any military service. I cannot speak too highly of these youths, who go into a fight as cheerfully as they would enter a ball-hoom, and with the silence and steadness of veterans.

Lac Lacovet Cades were the last organized Confederate soldiers on duty east of the Missistph river, and their last service, as the first, was on provost duty, guarding the city of Augusta, Ga., and the Confederate arsenals and army stores at that city. They obeyed the last order of a Confederate officer, Major-General Lafayette McLaws. The order was issued after the surrenders of General Lee and General Johnston, and was dated May 1, 1865, and they served under that order till the 20th day of May, 1865, when they were relieved from their duties by a Yankee garrison, who came to Augusta to take charge of the city and Confederate supplies there.

The order of General McLaws is in copy, on page 420, in the volume 53, of series 1, supplement, of the official war records. It is as follows:

is as follows:

"SPECIAL ORDER.—Headquarters, Augusta, Ga, May 1, 1865. The battallon of Georgia Cadets will proceed at once to the city half, in the city of Augusta, taking one day's rations with them, and will bivonac there until further orders, for the purpose of preserving order in said city. They will suppress all disturbance and will make such details for the preservation of order and property as may be called for by Major Henry Bryan, 'inspector-generia. Upon the zeal and honor of this battalion rests the good name of their State and the safety of Augusta. Augusta.

"Major and Assistant Adjutant-General."
Approved: By command of Major-General LaFayette McLaws.

HENRY BRYAN. "Major and Assistant Inspector-General."

Battalion Cadets."

(47) On the 20th of May 1865, the battallon was disbanded, and the cadets returned to their respective homes. Thus the boy solders of the South, and of Georgia, were the last to do duty in the cause of the Confedertae States of America. In their manhood they have made good clitzens, and are now fast passing from the active scenes of life ferever.

The first duties were in acting as provost guard about the City of Marietia, and other general daties incident to their position at that time, in the rear of Geheral Joseph E. Johnston's Confederate army.

In a few days an order was received for a detachment of Cadets to be sent to Resaca, and there, on the 14th of May' 1854, the detail of Cadets were first under fire from the guns of the Federal enemy.

A Federal officer, Lieutenant James S. Oates, of the Ninth Illinois Mounted Infantry, writing of the "marching through Georgia" and of the first day's fighting in the battle of Resaca, says: "It was during the advance of that day that we dame in contact with the Georgia Cadets, from the Military Instifute at Marietta, who had come out from the woods at Resaca and formed their line behind a rail feince. After a volley from the Cadets which killed several of our lmen, our regiment charged them."

Thus it is shown and acknowledged by one for our loponents that the Cadets were intrepld and effective in their very first engagement. of our opponents that the Cadets were in-trepid and effective in their very first engagement.
