

THE ATLANTA JOURNAL

"OVER THE TOP" AT CAMP WHEELER. These pictures were taken at Wheeler on "Atlanta day," and show part of the thrilling maneuvers which men of the old Fifth Georgia, now the One Hundred and Twenty-second United States infantry, performed for the benefit of the home folks. The particular scene shown here occurred when a squad of picked men, stripped to their shirt sleeves, were stationed in a trench. At the signal, they "went over" with a yell. Every rifle was thrown to the top of the parapet first. They hit the ground with a single crash. The men followed, grabbed their guns, paused for half a second and then were leaping across No Man's Land, stabbing "dummy Huns" and giving a ferocious shout every time they drove home the bayonets. Thus are the boys of the Dixie division ready to treat the Hun when they face him in France in the near future.—Staff photos by Winn and Mathewson.

Manufacturing Plants Warned Over Telephone By Mysterious Woman

As the result of a telephone warning from a mysterious woman who refused to give her name, special precautions were taken Thursday night to guard against damage to the plants of the Atlantic Steel company and the Southern Iron and Equipment company.

At 6 o'clock and again at 9 o'clock the woman called Assistant Superintendent Greene of the Southern Iron and Equipment company, informing him that an attempt would be made Thursday night to set fire to the two big manufacturing plants. She refused to give her name and all efforts to estab-

High School Seeks Names of Students In National Service

Relatives or friends of former students at the Atlanta Boys' High school now in the service of their country, are asked to send in these names to the high school in order that they may be represented on the school's service flag.

Albert Staton, of the senior class this year, is chairman of a committee appointed to get the names of all old high school boys now in service. Mr. Staton is having no little difficulty in checking up all the old grads now in uniform and has asked their friends to
