

L. O. Grice Goes To France as First Lieutenant in "Q. M."

L. O. Grice, formerly chief clerk in the general offices of the Atlanta and West Point railroad, in the Terminal station, but for several months past in the quartermaster corps of the army in Washington, has been ordered to France, to report for duty to the quartermaster general of America's expeditionary forces.

This order is said to have come in response to a cable request from General Pershing, and before going he was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. He had also been recommended by his major for the rank of captain, but his immediate departure held up this promotion, which his friends expect will come to him in the regular course.

Lieutenant Grice has a host of friends in Atlanta who will be glad to know of his promotion.
