

will be necessary to go early.

Mrs. R. J. Redding.

The death of Mrs. R. J. Redding yesterday evening in this city has saddened many hearts and will be deplored throughout the State, where she is known and esteemed for her worth. She had suffered long, and death came with merciful hand to end her sufferings. She was the wife of R. J. Redding, assistant commissioner of agriculture. Mrs. Redding was in the prime of life, an earnest, exemplary member of the First Methodist church, a lady who was noted for her benevolence and charity. Her remains will be carried to Marshallville, Ga., for interment to-day. To the bereaved husband and mother the JOURNAL tenders its sympathy and condolence. The Department of Agriculture was closed to-day in respect to her memory.