

DEATH OF MR. A. C. VAN EPPS.

He Breathes His Last at 4 O'clock This Morning—A Good Man Gone.

This morning at 4 o'clock Mr. A. C. Van Epps died at his home, on the Flatshoals road, three miles from the city.

The cause of his death was dropsy. Although he has been in bad health for some time, his death was unexpected.

The deceased was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. He was seventy-five years of age, and lived in Atlanta since the war, having moved here from Chattanooga in 1866. He was the father of Judge Howard Van Epps, and the city court was adjourned this morning.

At 3 o'clock the arrangements for the funeral had not been made. It will probably take place some time to-morrow, and the remains will be interred in Oakland cemetery.
