

AT REST IN OAKLAND. FOR SYSTEMATIC ROBBERY OF BRIDE ROOM CAME NOT.

COLONEL GRANT'S BODY COMMISSIONED TO THE GRAVE.

SERVICES AT THE CHURCH THIS MORNING.

The City Council Takes Action at a Special Meeting.

A Committee Appointed to Formulate Appropriate Memorial Resolutions—The Funeral Largely Attended.

The funeral of Colonel L. P. Grant was conducted from the Central Presbyterian church this morning at 11 o'clock. The casket, hidden beneath flowers, was brought into the church at that time, the choir singing, "Rock of Ages."

The floral offerings were many and unusually beautiful. To the right and to left of the altar were shafts, symbolical of a finished life. A dove above them represented its purity.

The church was well filled with those who had long known and esteemed Colonel Grant. The members of the city council, city hall officials and the park commission occupied seats in a body, while all classes and ages were represented.

The choir sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" and "Nearer My God to Thee," both favorite hymns of the deceased. Dr. Henry McDonald offered prayer, and the pastor, Rev. G. B. Stricker, then delivered the funeral sermon.

In the course of his remarks, he said, "I shall not so much notice Colonel Grant's long, faithful and efficient service for the city, the commonwealth and in some sense the country in his secular pursuits, but will dwell upon his character and traits as a Christian."

"He was not alone a Christian, but a happy Christian, the most uniformly happy one I have ever known. Not so by profession, by church membership and intellectual conviction, but in his own delightful experience. He consecrated and loved God and God loved him. He took pleasure in talking upon the subject again and again, and I have heard him say that he had no doubts or fears of the future."

"He was not only a happy, but a grateful Christian. One of the last things he said was, 'Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all within me bless his holy name.' It was his habit to thank God for every good thing—for his length of life, for the success that crowned his arduous labor, for the comforts about him, and for his loved ones and friends and their kind ministrations. He abounded in thanksgiving."

"He was useful by benevolence. In the possession of ample means, there is abundant evidence that he deserved the words, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.' He was always the only man in Atlanta I ever heard of giving against. He was a generous and liberal contributor to the various benevolent societies of the city, and his gifts were of a liberal and generous nature. His life suggests the passage, 'Mark the perfect man—perfect in the sense of sincerity, uprightness and consecration.' The casket was borne by the following pallbearers: A. J. Orms, T. M. Clarke, R. M. Farrar, D. A. Beatty, W. L. Calhoun, J. E. Daniel, W. P. Paulino and E. A. Weber."

The honorary casket was: Messrs. J. H. Porter, G. N. Adair, Judge Logan E. Bickley, Judge John S. Hopkins, Sidney Root, T. J. Hightower, W. J. Hammond, George H. Roper, Joseph B. Smith, E. E. Baver-

A MAN SIXTY YEARS OF AGE IS ARRESTED.

THE GRAND JURY INDICTED HIM TODAY.

T. W. Bidgood Apprehended and Taken to Jail.

He is Charged With Having Lobbied the Store of W. M. Middlebrooks—Some of the Goods Found in a Barn.

T. W. Bidgood, a man of affluence and nearly sixty years of age, was this afternoon arrested on the charge of systematically robbing the store of Mr. W. M. Middlebrooks, at 157 West Peters street, for some time past.

For more than a year the place of the ex-councilman has been relieved of large amounts of grain, oats, and various other contents. He was in a constant puzzle as to the identity of the guilty party. The speculations continued, but despite a careful watch no clue to the perpetrator could be obtained.

Several days ago Patrolmen Bates and Patterson were told that Bidgood had been seen removing some goods that had been stolen. They worked carefully upon this clue, and it resulted in their becoming convinced that it was he who had committed the larceny.

This morning about noon they took the man in charge and raided his barn in the rear of the store. There they found a stock of stolen stuff amounting to nearly $2000 in value. When faced with the discovery Bidgood acknowledged everything.

He all but broke down and would not tell why he had taken the goods. He said that he had hauled it away on trucks during the day.

When brought to police headquarters and locked up he leaned against his cell, a forlorn and pitiable old man.

He would not talk to any one. In the neighborhood where he lives he owns the buildings in which are two general stores, a drug store, a wood yard, a meat market, and several houses. He had retired from business. His reputation has always been the best. He has four well known children.

About one o'clock Bidgood was carried to jail on a warrant issued in consequence of an indictment found by the grand jury charging him with larceny. He has been living in Atlanta for a long while. He customarily dresses very shabbily.

FUNERAL OF MR. LYNCH.

It Occurred from the Church of the Immaculate Conception this Morning.

The funeral of Mr. Michael Lynch, whose death was announced in THE JOURNAL yesterday, occurred this morning at the residence of his family, 110 West Peachtree street. The funeral was held at the church of the Immaculate Conception, and was a most beautiful and impressive one.

The floral offerings were numerous. The interment occurred at Oakland cemetery.

BRIEFLY TOLD.

—The meeting of the Hibernian Rifles at the armory in the new Coker building on Hunter street, last night, was a most enthusiastic one. Twenty new members were admitted.

—The East Lake Land Company intends to build a thirty-room hotel on its property this spring, and is in conference with local architects on the subject.

TWICE WAS THE WEDDING FEAST PREPARED

AND TWICE DID CANNADA FAIL TO SHOW UP

Now the Community of High Shoals is Indignant.

Cannada Arrested in Atlanta Today—He May Be Summarily Dealt With When High Shoals is Reached.

Doc Cannada, alias Marian L. Cannada, a badly wanted man at High Shoals, was arrested in Atlanta this morning. The community at that place is incensed against Cannada, and when he returns there sometime during the next day or two in the custody of an officer, he may find himself summarily dealt with.

Cannada is a jack-of-all-trades. He is forty years old and heavily built. A year or two ago he moved to High Shoals, after having lost his second wife. While there he worked in a carriage shop. He met Miss Gessie Williams, sister of George Williams, who is well known in Atlanta, and whose family has for thirty-three years been one of the most prominent in Oconee county.

Cannada obtained a marriage license and promised to marry the girl. The wedding was arranged and Miss Williams had dressed herself for the affair. But Cannada failed to show up. He was found and taken in charge of by the girl's brother. Arrangements again were made for the ceremony. A second time Miss Williams was attired for the occasion, and, as before, Cannada was missing.

This time he made good his disappearance. The community was incensed and every effort was made to catch the man. Yesterday a letter was sent to Sergeant Jennings stating that Cannada was probably in Atlanta and offering a reward for his arrest. The mother of his last wife, a Mrs. King, lives here now.

This morning Cannada was found at her home, at 101 Thompson street, near Nelson, and was arrested by Patrolmen Barrett and Moncrief. He acknowledged his identity and seemed entirely indifferent. A second letter received at police headquarters says that "the whole of High Shoals is perfectly outraged."

The officers at police headquarters have fears that Cannada will be lynched when taken back there.

The authorities at Oconee have been notified of the arrest.

ORGANIZING THE CLUBS.

Atlanta's Baseball Directors Picking Out a Tip-Top Team.

The directors of the Atlanta baseball club met yesterday afternoon at the office of George Roper.

The directors of the club are: George Roper, president; J. H. Porter, vice president; J. E. Daniel, secretary; and W. L. Calhoun, treasurer. Among them the directors think they have some of the strongest that will be seen in the Southern league.

The men will report here on the 15th of March. Manager Murray will be here on the first of that month and will have the grounds ready for team practice by the time his men reach the city.

Bobson and his team of Chicago players will be here about the 1st of April and will play a series of exhibition games with the local club.

IN THE CITY HALL.
