Reduction of duties on Wisse.—The fullowing joilicious remarks are translated from a litte foreign journal:

Among the measures recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury for adoption by the Congress of the United States, we remark a reduction of the duties. It has been exabilished by authentic documents that the export commerce of the United States to the wise countries has, as it was natural to expect, decreased in the same proportion as the heavy duties are diminished the importation from them. Thus, inconsequence of this system of high duties, not only the revenue of the government has diminished, and as a necessary result the profits of merchants and arctularist slee, instead of selling the products of the American soil for exportation, have been obliged to convert them into spirituous tiquor, both nausenous and hurtful. These motives, and it woulk non't recommend a
