In order to repair the lamage in a competent manner, twas found necessary to remove hem a few feet from their resting place. The one containing the remains of Martha Washington is removed first, but attracted so attention. But the unusual weight of the one containing the remains of Washington aroused the curiosity of the official who was superintending the work of removal, and it was decided to open the sarcophagus in order to ascertain the cause. This was done and the remains were found to be petified; in fact, a solid stone resembling a statue, the feature-sembling a statue, the feature-sembling a statue, the feature-sembling as attempt and the sarcophagus. The body is of a dark leathery color, and may be said to be a soft sand stone, which would likely break should an attempt be made to remove it from the sarcophagus. Edward Baker, an aged colored man, who has resided upon the farm since he as a boy, and who assisted in removing the remains from the old tomb to the present one, informs us that it is thirty eight years since he their last removal. At that time they had rested in the old tomb thirty eight years, and were exhumed in a state of preservation beyond all expectation, being a solid compact mass, with the skin drawn tightly to the bones, petrification no doubt having commenced its work. The repairs to the tomb will be completed to day, and the sarcophagus is not likely and the immortal Washing-vill then be as enduring as his
