taste of all the day that ever was

How They Were Reunited.

A somewhat romantic incident took place within a stone's throw from where I am sitting, the happy denouement of which was due to a somewhat of this kind.

On Christmas day, when a gentleman, with an air of displayed by a daughter of her own independence to ask how she obtained it.

Evidently it was an undesirable and somewhat embarrassing question. However, the gentleman was nearly a year before under circumstances which left no taint upon her reputation, but rather clouded his, and it was only in consideration of long acquaintance and intimacy that he had consented to join the holiday throne. With some difficulty he extracted the information that the pendant was a gift from a gentleman friend, and also gained the address, the individual he meant of town that day, and therefore not present at the early evening.

With this clue the gentleman started on a search, not so much for the recent owner of the pendant as for his wife, for the ornament had been hers, and he had recognized it at once, and he had brought it with him, and he knew, notwithstanding her defection, that only the direct strait had induced her to part with it. The gentleman, when found could tell him nothing but that he had purchased it of a second hand dealer, a fact he was very anxious to keep from the lady to whom he presented it, and to this dealer, a woman well known and doing business on the upper part of Broadway, the distressed husband went.

The pendant, it seemed, had only been in her possession a few days before she sold it. She remembered perfectly the small, slender, closely veiled woman from whom she purchased it, in fact, she had bought it partly out of sympathy with her apparent distress, and had promised that it was not sold before the original owner was able to redeem it, and let her have it back at a slight advance on what she had paid for ly determined never to be caught in such a scrape again, insisted on his right to do as he pleased, and passionately to whom he pleased ending with taking her, clamoring the door, and when he came home, I was walking off to the pair room.

The next morning his wife was gone. She had taken but little of her belongings with her, and none of the jewels that he had given her, with the exception of her wedding ring and this pendant; and though he had searched daily from that day down to Wednesday of the present week he had never succeeded in finding her.

He had put advertisements in the personal column of the Herald informing, "N." with the singular obtuseness of a man, that if she should come home he should be forgiven and forgotten, but N.

didn't seem to have seen it and sense for nearly had ever reached him. He had given up their pretty house, gone to a hotel to board, and spent his leisure in through the veil of every small, slender woman he could meet expecting to find his wife. He did not communicate all these facts to the policeman. He simply told them of his desire description, and it was, while he was still talking with them that one exclaimed, "By Jupiter!

There she is now." Sure enough, the light figure, the delicate face now very thin and worn—that he knew so well came out of a store with a bundle in its hands, and without waiting even to complete his sentence the husband sprang across the street, seized the hand, from which the bundles drew off into the gutter, and rolling over within his arms said to the poor little trembling woman, "Now I have found you, I shall not let you go again." It is not forty-eight hours since this came to place.

Terrible Suffering.

OF THE CREW OF THE POW WOW.

Powwow, Jan. 15.—The night of the 20 and the morning of the 21st must have been terrible for those unlucky mariners who found themselves in a snowstorm, being driven on the treacherous sands of Cape Cod. Five vessels were lost. Four will leave these bones to be bleached upon the sands. From the largest two not a soul was saved; every man with ice and his arms clutched in these death grips a coil of froze rope. And at last the captain whispered hoarsely, "Good-bye boys

I shall try for the shore; may God keep me for my poor wife's sake." A cry was not over the side, but was crushed in an instant. Captain Caton then tore off the cabin skylights, and, heaving it overboard, sprang after it.

His support was soon wrenched from his grasp, but he struggled manfully. He reached the shore twice he stood erect on the sand, but the undertow was too powerful, and he was drawn under the surf. The ten men who remained on the vessel were desisted to be saved. After day light the life-saving station men, who had previously been devoting their energies to vain attempt of rescuing the crew of the other wreck, arrived. The first time they fired the morning shot, but the line attached fell over the ship's stay, but the men were so chilled with cold that it was impossible to get it. After several trials, however the line fell where they could reach it. At 10 a. m. they were all ashore and were tenderly cared for at the Humane House. Most of the survivors suffered from frozen arms and legs, but all probably recovered. The Powwow has now broken up, and with no in-
