The Odd Fellows of Atlanta are going to build a handsome temple.

Maconites have invested over $500,000 in new buildings during the past twelve months.

Mrs. T. M. Jones, of America, has received a check for $2,000, the amount of the insurance policy held by her late husband in the Knights of Honor.

Confidential postal cards have been discovered in Pittsburgh which are so skillfully executed that their detection is very difficult. This is the first attempt to put spurious postal cards in circulation.

The Dove of Ireland is an interesting monthly publication issued by the Sisters of Peace, with headquarters at Jersey City. The May number contains cuts of their summer homes for girls, on the Hudson, and at Englewood, N. J.

A cat saved the life of William German, of Pennsylvania the other night, by frantically tearing at his blankets and awaking him when the house was on fire, and when he barely had time to escape by way of a window.

In the stomach of a cow which was butchered recently at Tuscaloosa, Ala., were found forty-two nails, four buttons, one rubber-headed pin, one copper cent, three pieces of a watch chain, two pieces of glass, one oyster shell, four pieces of brass wire and a piece of hoop-skirt. What became of the boy who owned the pocket is a mystery.

A stout-looking tramp who stole a cow from a farm in West Lempeter, Lancaster county, and who was arrested when trying to sell it, was found to be the possessor of six coats and five pairs of trousers, which he wore one over the other. When he was dismantled, so to speak, his scrupulous became a thing of the past.

A famous stock farm in Orange county, New York, known as the Orange county farm, was sold the other day. The farm, which is the best land in the county, and over $100,000 have been spent on it. It has a splendid race track. Its purchaser was a Mr. Conkey, an Englishman, who will import stock from the best racing establishments in England, and who paid only $27,570 for it.

Mrs. B. W. Hunt of Georgia, has quite a pretty little poem called "A Bachelor's Secret," in a late number of Harper's Weekly. This is not the first time, however, the poem has appeared in print. It was written by Mrs. Hunt several years ago and at the time was printed in the Easton Messenger, under the heading, "A Bit of Gold." Mrs. Hunt is a woman of decided talents, which, by the way, she puts to practical use on a well equipped and paying dairy farm.—Sav. News.

This center of population has steadily moved southward, except during the war and between 1830 and 1846. In point of fact the south is increasing more rapidly in population than the north, when foreign immigrants are left out of the calculation. The last census shows that the southern states are adding 650,000 children to their population each year against only 798,000 in the north, with nearly twice the population.

Kansas City, Mo., is agitated over the question whether public morals are injured by allowing the schoolboys to play marbles "for keeps," or "for good." The principals of the schools have held several meetings to discuss it, some of them holding that the game is one of hazard and its influence is pernicious; while others contend that it is a game of skill and tends to educate the boys' faculties for taking of chance. The boys themselves, to whom the game is so popular, are not in favor of the school boys' game. They are in favor of the game of chance, and they are in favor of the game of chance.

GRAND PICNIC AT GRAY.

[From the Jasper County News.] On last Friday morning, Maj. J. O. Key, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Penn, Miss Maud, Master Henry, Miss Mattie and the rest of the Penn's, Misses Annie Lee Greer, Lillie Harvey, Hubis Jordan, Maggie Childs, Irene Roberts, Savie Hecht and Agnes Webb, took the train for Gray station to attend the picnic. At Adgate, Col. Adgate and his lovely little niece joined the already happy company, but of course our happiness was increased by their presence. At Ronald Oak, Mrs. Robt. Smith, Miss Ada Goolsby and Miss Shropshire, Mr. Henry Hunt and others joined the band, and greatly enhanced the beauty, pleasure and wealth of the already prosperous party. The train arrived at Gray exactly on time. Our party was greeted with a perfect shower of welcomes by the large and good looking company of picnickers that had gathered in the beautiful grove surrounding the summer residence of Col. Blount. While chatting for an hour or so, while the children were playing all kinds of innocent plays, there seemed to be a number of persons very busily engaged in another quarter. The question was often asked, what are they doing, but no one seemed to know. At about twelve however, the long desired information was obtained. It consisted in all manner of goodies from the nearest grocery to the largest barbed-mutton, and cakes and pies and lemonade and ice cream, and lastly, but not least, first class Jones county butter milk just taken off of ice, from the dairy farm of our friend, Mr. Childs. The reader may imagine what happened. I tell you the information was entirely demolished in less than fifteen minutes. The writer is happy to say that in all the week, no lives were lost save sheep, pigs, chickens & co. There was one thing very potent to all when the racket was over, namely, that our long friend from Monticello and the one from Grandfield were very much improved in appearance and a great deal more cheerful. In fact, the happiest two on the ground except our short friend from Monticello, who of course alighted the right to be happier than anybody.

After dinner the genial Col. Bob Hardeman called the crowd together, after which the invincible J. C. Key was introduced "as the Key to the situation" and he entertained the crowd with one of his unique and instructive addresses. This man is always found contributing to the happiness of others. He is one of the bravest, gentlest and truest of christian gentlemen. Time would fail us to mention all the pleasing persons and incidents of the day. However, we will say that Col. Bob Hardeman and wife are the happiest couple in the world. Col. Ike Hardeman of Macon, Mr. Childs and his excellent wife, Judge Ross and our good friends, Holsenbeck and many other excellent ladies and gentlemen did all in their power to make everybody happy, and succeeded. The most of our party left on the evening train for home, while others so infatuated with Jones and its people, staid over and spent the night in the historic Clinton, where they attended divine service.

Respectfully,
PENNOLDER.

This admirable weekly for the youth of this great land is now well established, and has an increasingly large and well-deserved patronage. It is well worthy the examination of parents who wish to provide their children with a large amount of carefully-prepared miscellany, at once entertaining, instructive and clean. It is edited with ability, and shows a sympathetic with the pleasures of the young people, and a clear out look for their welfare.

AN ACCIDENT.

Last Saturday morning the excursion train from Macon to Madison ran off the track below Hillsboro, and came near having a serious wreck. The engine jumped the track and turned over, while the trucks and some of the cars were injured. After the excitement had somewhat abated, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of all the passengers in the excursion train are hereby tendered to the Engineer, William Roberts, for his prompt action in putting on the air brakes, reversing his engine and holding the lever until the engine went down, thus practically saving the lives of all the passengers by his courageous fidelity. Also to his colored fireman, George Ross, who stood at his post and aided in the prevention of a most dreadful accident.

Resolved, 2. That we commend most earnestly the faithful and vigorous work of the Conductor, Frank B. Whitehead, who while the glass and fractured timbers were flying in every direction, leaped from the cars, and going to the help of the imprisoned engineer, before the engine had fully settled down, and at the risk of his own life, threw the engine from its perilous position, and thus aiding in saving his life. The passengers also adopted a resolution of thanks to Dr. E. O. Cotter for his prompt and valuable services in attending the engineer and others.

Beautiful Description of A Country Home.

BY M. M. POLSON.

"Down the sweeping vista we saw the outlines of the stately front of a hoary homestead, old and grey, where the master of the mansion brought his fair young bride in bygone days.

The nearer we approached, more impressively and lovely the scene. In the front yard are great clumps and clusters of blooming roses, beds of fragrant lilies whose azure blossoms reflect the vivid dyes of the fairest skies of spring.

On either side of the doorway stand faithful sentinels, to the left a sturdy oak and to the right a stately harked aspen with its tremulous leaves quiver, flustering like expectant herald of some shy maiden keeping tryst for her lover.

Honeysuckle and woody vine clomb over the pillars, and bees hum drowsily about their fragrant blossoms.

It is a picture of peace and contentment as rare as it is beautiful.

Down at the barn yard some few Jersey calves peep through the bars with great wondering eyes with an expression so child-like that we almost forget that they are only young cattle after all. The cute little creatures have been tramping all day among the clover blossoms sipping a tender shoot here and there, and slaking their thirst in the crystal waters of a brook that goes chattering in and out among the alder bushes. The youthful equines have gorged themselves, and tired of rambling, they have come to the gate to meet their mothers, who are trudging feebly home from the fields.

A squadron of little pusley pigs, with dumpy ears and inquisitive noses, are grunting among the straw piles, and a dapper peacock is showing off his accomplishments to a troupe of neisty fowls.

The big buff cochon rooster looks down with ineffable contempt on the presumptuous and fussy, self important little bantam, who is sidling around the biggest, plumpest and most maternally domineering hen in the barn yard.

A troop of querulous and suspicious looking guinea fowls, that might be so handsome if they were not so gossipy and selfish, are "pot-racking" along the hedge-row, and on the pinnacle of the tallest gate post on the farm is a rowdy looking game cock, crowing as loud as his lungs will allow him.

Then there is the old-time smoke-house, through the cracks of whose wall creep the seductive odor of brown hams, with suggestions of red gravy in the dim and distant meat preserve.

In the old garden are ranks of onions, plantations of green peas, forests of berry bushes and tangles of grape vines.

A peep into the dairy reveals ingots of yellow gold butter and great pans of milk, on which the cream is so thick that the real milk is indiscernable.

Out near the chicken coops, where the oddities are cheeping and chirping after their seditious mothers, rises a grand statue of some hero of the olden time. The stranger gazes on this apparition and begins to wonder why it is there, and grows very much mystified until, finally, a closer inspection reveals that the statue the willow statue is only an awkward looking rag man placed there to scare the hawks out of their wits.

Ah, there are many things we saw that I could tell you of. I could describe to you a sweet-faced lady, on whose placid brow the cares of life sit lightly. I could tell you of her gentle voiced welcome, and I could tell you of the generous hospitality of her worthy lord, but I forbear.

The whole scene is a perfect picture of the home of a fine old Georgian gentleman, few of whom are left to rehearse the wondrous story of the wealth, refinement and magnificence of the grandest race of people that ever inhabited the earth.

They are passing away. The old homes and their inheritors will soon disappear and their places will be occupied by a money-seeking restless and coarsely practiced, sort of men who will delight in nothing more than the destruction of all these time honored traditions so dear to the soul of the southerner.

PUBLIC SCHOOL NOTICE.

The attention of patrons and teachers of Public schools is called to the following point in the revised and amended school law, and to the instructions of the State School Commissioner, in accordance therewith.

1st. Schools must use the text books adopted by the county Board of Education. No pupils, who use other books, will be allowed to receive the benefit of the public school fund.

The following are the text books adopted by the board last Dec. for five years to wit: Sander's School Primers, Swanton's spellers, readers, geographies and histories, American graded readers, Catheart's literary readers, Robinson's Arithmetic, Wells grammar, Webster's school dictionaries, Smith's physiology and hygiene, Spotsgeria copy books.

2nd.-It is enmeshed on County Boards to establish one school, each, for white and colored children in every school district, as near as practicable to the center of the district, preference being given to school-houses already erected, and to the location of said school district and to the location of white and colored schools with regard to contiguity; no additional school can be established in the sub-district without the enrollment therein of not less than twenty-five pupils.

I will be in Clinton on May 31st for the purpose of examining teachers of Public Schools, who have not yet undergone an examination. Those holding unexpired license are not included. All Public Schools will open on 1st Monday in July.
