HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

The Four Courses of Chicken.
At first the chicken is killed and plucked brown with apple sauce and trussing, and then the trussing, all covered with thickened butter, poured over and laid flat to hide the bones. And then what may be done up into pie, with pastry, and just fitted up as a dinner for all. Of this eventful bird is chicken, and of the general having and the serving-up of which, legs, heads, necks, bones and every thing.

—New York World.

How to Wash Lace.
The only way to wash lace is on a bottle. Cover the bottle with a cotton cloth, sew the lace around, sewing down all the delicate points; then sponge it clean; or, if necessary, soak the whole thing in soap or borax-water, or ammonia water, or whatever you think the best; then rinse by soaking in clear water, and let the whole thing dry perfectly before taking the lace off. Lemon juice can be applied to spots before the soap water is used. If the lace carefully sewed down in the first place it should come out as fresh as when it was first sewed. —Detroit Free Press.

A Homemade Juice Press.
The ordinary method of extracting juice from fruits, lard from scraps, etc., by placing the material in a strong bag or cloth and squeezing and wringing it by hand, is exceedingly irksome. There are screw presses for the purpose, but they are more or less expensive and are to be found in few kitchens. Much aid may be derived from the use of a simple lever press, made on the principle of a lemon squeezer. It requires two persons, however, to manage this, one to hold the material in the bag or cloth and the other to apply the pressure. But if one of the halves of the press is hinged to a piece of board, a foot long and six inches wide, and set upon a table with one end a little elevated, it can be worked by one person. This press will be found especially convenient in jelly making time, as with its aid the juice may be pressed without either unduly staining or tiring the hands. —Brooklyn Citizen.

HOUSE FLIES.

I have discovered a good way to destroy house flies, says a lady in the Register. It has the advantage of cheapness and also preventing flies from falling into everything, as they do when poison is used. Mix thoroughly equal parts by weight of kerosene and mixed — which will take only a minute. While yet a little warm, spread this mixture on any paper that is not porous. Use foot-caps, etc. Spread the focus covers, show bills, etc. Spread with a case knife, or any straight-edged instrument, slightly warmed. Leave a narrow border to handle with. Leave papers on tables, shelves or any spare room where flies are troublesome. They will soon cover the paper. As soon as they alight they will stick fast, and soon will themselves die. The oil prevents the resin from hardening and has the peculiarity of not evaporating. The oil leaves no odor when the mixture will buy enough to kill all the flies in a hotel.

RECIPES.

CHEAP RICE PUDDING.—Two quarts of milk, two-thirds of a cup of rice, a cup of sugar, small piece of butter, and a little salt, stir it occasionally until boiling hot, add rice to a slow oven until the consistency of cream.

CREAM BEETS.—Cut three or four boiled beets into pieces the size of a quarter of a cup. Place in stew pan, add pint-cut beets add one teaspoonful rich sweet milk, piece of butter size of nutmeg, cinnamon and sugar to taste. Boil the same as squash pies. If the potatoes are very moist use less milk.

CUTTED SQUASH.—One peck of ripe potatoes, six green peppers, six onions, two teaspoonsful each of ground allspice, cloves and nutmeg, two cups of brown sugar, five cups of vinegar, salt to taste. Scald and skin tomatoes, chop onions and green peppers, boil altogether slowly three or four hours, then bottle.

ASPARAGUS A LA PORTUGAISE.—Boil the asparagus in salt and water until cooked into a length of about three inches. After draining them let them lie before the fire a few moments. Next take one ounce of fresh butter, two yolks of egg, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of pepper and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Cook in a sauce pan till thick, dip up in a pyramid and pour over the liquor.

AROMA SAVOR.—Mix into a syrup one cupful and a half of sugar and one cupful of boiling water. Cut two oranges transversely, leave the peel on and put them into the syrup and boil them until soft; then add six apples, peeled, cored and sliced. The oranges are to be put and place in a bowl, then boil the apples in the syrup till soft enough to run into sauce; keep them in the syrup four apples and syrup over the oranges. Serve cold.

THE WAY TO WIN.

If on the field of love you fall,
With smile conceal your pain;
Be not too slow to sure a thrill,
But lightly wear his chain;
Don't kiss the hem of Beauty's gown,
Or tremble at her tear,
And when caprice weighs you down,
A word within your ear;
Another lass, another lass,
With laughing eyes and bright—
Make love to her,
And trust me, sir,
'Twill set your wrongs aright.

Whenever a sweetheart proves unkind
And greets you with a frown,
Or laughs your passion to the wind,
The talk of all the town,
Find not your cause on bent knee
And murmured sighs profound;
But rather from my ministry
The burden of my song:
Another lass, another lass,
There's always beauty by—
Make love to her,
And trust me, sir,
'Twill clear the clouded sky.

The Wily Counterfeiter.
The professional counterfeiter rarely, if ever, places his own work into circulation. He sells to what is known as the "second party," and the latter in turn to the "abover" or "layer down." Experienced detectives claim that the "second party," as a rule, pays about thirty per cent. of the face for the "quarer" and he in turn sells to the "abover" at an advance of from fifteen to twenty per cent. The "abover" generally travels in company with a "pal," who carries the bulk of the "clams" and is done in order that if the counterfeiter is fastened upon the "abover," and his arrest follows, and no other counterfeiter is found on his person, it relieves him in a measure from the suspicion of being a "professional." The prices paid, of course, with the greater or less degree of workmanship in the counterfeit, and so is the manner of circulation adapted to the circumstances. Smaller notes are pretty generally circulated without regard to union in action, as big bills have to be floated arrangements are made by which the bulk of the queer can be put in circulation simultaneously—down to the minute—in every large city and in various places out of the city. This is done to circumvent any telegraphic "pointers," sent from one city to another to disclose the counterfeiters. —Washington Star.

A Ghost Party.
A novel party was lately given for Philadelphia at a summer resort. Invitations were sent for a "ghost party," and the evening was devoted to the recitation of weird and gruesome tales of horror and to the recounting of personal experiences that were in every way calculated to make the hair of the assembled company stand on end. When the blood of all the guests was beginning to curdle the wailing hour of midnight was rung out by the clock. This proved to be the signal for supper, and immediately lights were brought and the ghostly scenes were over.

DEATH OF "OLD JANUARY."
The Man Who Won $40,000 with a Candy Lozenge for a Check.

[From the N. Y. Sun.]

Mr. Janney, once a noted New York gambler, is dead. He died on Monday evening at the Godfrey House, where he had been living with his wife. He will be better remembered by New Yorkers who were men about town in his day as "Old January," for that is the way his name was usually called. In fact, many who were quite well acquainted with him thought that was his real name. In these days few were kind and backers and dealers were in a peculiar standpoint where successful book-makers are today, and in a social position, vastly better than their modern prototypes.

"January," graduated from the position of card writer in the old St. Nicholas Hotel, and began his career as a gambler in 1874. After that time, as a banker, dealer, and player on both sides of the layout, he went through the customary vicissitudes of a gambler's life. He made and lost half a dozen fortunes, and was more than once worth a million dollars. His first venture was at Broadway and Fulton street in partnership with Ed. Kline, where both of them made a couple of hundred thousand dollars, which was then as much as a couple of million is now. His next room was at 473 Broadway, where gamblers and visitors from Southern cities were the principal customers. He was afterwards in Barclay street, Ann street, Twenty-eighth street, and had games in a dozen of other places at different times. His varied luck in these places gave him experience ranging from those of a "high roller" to those of a "check diagrammer."

The incident that gave him the most fame among gamblers verged closely on "check diagramming." He was on the outside of the table one night playing against a well-known Southern player in Broadway, near the corner of the corner. He was against him, his last check had been swept up by the dealer, and he hadn't a cent to buy any more. Putting his hand lightly into his pocket, he felt a candy lozenge there. As he drew it out it looked so much like a white check that he was inspired to play it. As he laid it down on a small pile, put a marker on it to cover the bet, it looked all right. He won, and the dealer paid him a good solid check, which was made by the dealer. He was a dollar apiece in that game, and "January" luck proved to be on the turn when the dealer was made. He put his dollar up to $3,000 before leaving the table, and three days later he had $40,000 in his pocket, all won upon the candy lozenge. He was fond of telling this story himself, and John Morrissey has told it many times. The dealer was a limited circle, where he was playing, and he was made a new country man, and the funeral expenses will be defrayed by his Masonic lodge.

He Sized Him Up.

Don't Scare the Locomotive.

It isn't so many years since the railroad was extended to a cotton gin, and the day on which the cars reached the jubiliant little city in which I am writing was observed as a holiday. It was because was held, and I don't know how many others. The country people were in the streets, and the countryman naturally raised his umbrella.

"Put that down!" exclaimed my acquaintance with a cotton gin, "you will frighten the locomotive!" The umbrella came down.

Mrs. J. O. Bonner (formerly Miss Lester) died at her home near Pleasant Grove, Jones County, last Wednesday. Her death was sudden and distressing. The heartfelt sympathy of the entire county goes out to Mr. Bonner and family in their sad bereavement.

We call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of Price which appears in tolysha Paper. Mr. Price will take pleasure in handling your cotton for you, and has scores of friends and acquaintances in Jones, who will be pleased to see his announcement and give him a liberal support. He has energy, skill and experience, and is an honest, reliable, warm hearted gentleman in whose success we will heartily rejoice.

We call especial attention to the ad. in another column of Messrs. Rodgers, Worsham & Co. They have ample capital, and buy only direct from the producer out West, and abroad. They import their "Kaint" and other fertilizing ingredients and manufacture at Macon the famous fertilizer known as "PLOWBOYS BRAND" which by analysis of the State Chemist the past season far exceeded all others. They say the only way to sell the best guano cheaply is to manufacture it, and their factory in Macon, soon to be built, will fill up their different warehouses one of which is in Monticello. They invite their patrons when in Macon to visit the factory, where the famous "PLOWBOYS BRAND" is made.

C. B. WILLINGHAM.

This gentleman has an advertisement in this issue that will not fail to attract attention. He is a live business man, and presents his claims to the farmers of Jones and Surrounding Counties. This firm established for a series of years, has steadily increased in popularity and the magnitude of its operations, until now it stands in the very foremost rank of the progressive Merchants of Macon. The attention be given to all of his customers, getting the highest price for all cotton that is sent to him, and makes liberal advances on cotton in store. Judging from what we saw a few days ago, in the number of bales of cotton that was being unloaded and arriving, this house is certainly doing an immense business.
