a general view of the dissentions which have arisen between the Blouse of Assenlily of Lower Canada and the Goreranlily of Lower Canada and the Gorerangive him permanent revenue acts, and permanent appropriations, which they asfineded. The grounds for this reducal be justifies—the revenue and resources of the colony are very variable; there is no hadependent house of Poers, me independendent judicary, and the halm and features of the British Constitution. Under such circumstances it was a bazard-ous step in the Governor to demand a heavy appropriation for a civil list, for the life of the Kng; rad, on a refusal, to pay some of the salaries and expenses out of the colonial governor. It was natural that the representatives of the people should be galates of such inhad been made satisfactory to all partic in the colony, he used his influence is England to have it rejected. "The ingle spectod Perract—There is an Esserm story of a person who saught his parrot to repeat only these worlds: "What doubt is there of that?" He carried it to the market for sale, faing the price at 100 rupees. A Mogul asked the price at 100 rupees. A Mogul asked the price at 100 rupees. "Mogul asked the price at 100 rupees." What during the first the first the soon found out that this was all it could say. Ashamed over of this bargain, he said to himself "I was a foot to buy this bird. "Plee partot exclaimed, as usual, "What doubt is there of that?"
