ANOTHER CRIME.

The Strange Way in which a Tramp Saved a Baby's Life.

From the Messenger, Texas.

Many cases are known in which a third party has been mysteriously implicated in the commission of a crime. Both, reason and interest have resulted in the detection of crime. A young unmarried woman, living in a good situation with an Oxfordshire farmer, had with her child, a boy of 2½ years old. This incoherence standing in the way of her being married, she made up her mind to rid herself of it. Obtaining a holiday she left the farm with her boy, giving out that she was about to visit a relative some miles off. Next day she returned, and stated that she had left the child to be brought up by her cousin. The statement was naturally believed.

On the following afternoon two men were at work in a field on the next farm to where the mother was employed. One of them was a laborer or tramp, and inquired of his companion the best way to get to the place where he had taken lodgings. The best way was told him, and he was further instructed that when he reached a small copple he was not to go through, but round it, otherwise he would fall down an unprotected old dry well. All the remainder of that day the thought of this well worried the tramp; he felt an intense and unaccountable desire to see it, and so earnestly solicited the farmer to take him to the place which he had told him to do so. Presently the tramp came down a stone, which, instead of hearing the sound of its fall, they heard a splash. Another stone was dropped, and the same result. Certain that something alive was at the bottom, they promptly went to the nearest farm house and returned with more men, a lantern, and ropes.

A plucky lad volunteered to go down, and was lowered on a rope around his waist, the lantern tied to his wrist. He found at the bottom, 120 feet from the surface, lying between four pointed perpendicular walls—an cinder of what he might have been been impaled—a living, bleeding, and sobbing baby boy, which when brought to the surface, was at once recognized as the child of the girl at the adjacent farm. The mother, who was sitting in the house, when she was asked how she got the child down the well without killing it, instantly replied that she had not the heart to throw the boy down, and she had longed to see the child over the child's body, and when it reached the bottom let go of one end she drew the cord up by the other. The amount of blood poured by a mother who had been so long in the perilous position of starvation to preference to laying her child to rest very small both in quantity and quality. The poor innocent was twenty-six hours without food and in misery, darkness, and was cut, scratched and bruised that he still bore the marks weeks afterwards, when at the trial he was stripped and placed on the table to show them. And had his mother another any heart in her composition she must have felt in the very core, when the poor little fellow put on his arms and cried to go home. The death sentence was recorded against her, but commuted to penal servitude for life.

THE LAST SHOT.

A Reminiscent of the Old Days of the War.

From the Overland Co. (California).

We had the pleasure of meeting Tuesday the man who had been ordered to shoot last shot on the Confederate side during the late unpleasantness. He is Mr. A. F. Faircloth of Canulla, Mitchell county, Ga., a gentleman of modest but brave bearing. The incident was told us by Capt. D. H. Sanders, an old comrade in arms with Mr. Faircloth, and forms a unique feature in the unwritten history of the great struggle. Telling in itself the incident is really interesting and valuable by reason of its being, so far as the actors in it know, the very last hostile act of any armed force of the seceding Confederacy. Faircloth belonged to a C. and Georgia cavalry first, a part of Whelan's brigade, afterwards with Wheeler's command. This regiment was for some time associated with Terry's famous Georgia Rangers, whose exploits are among the highly prized traditions of the war. The intimacy that grew up between these two commands was very close and warm, and numbered among them the aid. A "Ranger" would succor a second Georgia cavalryman in distress as quick as he would his own brother. They fought together, bivouacked together, and were often on many a wild adventurous raid. But to the incident. Lee had surrendered. Johnson had surrendered.

Only Kirby Smith had remained at the head of the army and was in the Confederacy was in its death throes. Wheeler determined not to surrender his men but to force his way across the country, to join Smith and the Confederate army. To this end he procured the removal of his command from Johnson's army, and started upon one of the most hazardous of the annals of war. While everywhere Confederate troops were grounding their arms, taking the oath of allegiance to the United States government and returning to their homes, this little band under their gallant leader rode to the "stars and bars." Wheeler's bold movement was kept a profound secret, known only to his own men and Gen. Johnston. All thought now that the war was over. The Federals came freely into the country, and the Confederates were a general reorganization of the "Blue and Gray." It fell to the lot of Company C, to guard Wheeler's rear. A band of robbers was discovered just inside the reserve picket line, and these old veterans, with true soldierly instinct, soon tapped it and were fast getting into a hilarious condition. The Lieutenant in command of the picket line, in a short time unable to distinguish a Confederate from a "Yank," and was relieved by Mr. Faircloth, the Orderly Sergeant. The amount of that band was waited to the officers of the United States army, and a troop of cavalry was sent coming at a headlong charge upon that band. Sgt. Faircloth obeyed the orders of his chief, and the dashing squadron was confronted with a volley from their picket line. They were demoralized, and without retreating the fire, showed a white flag. The Sergeant advanced to parley with the leader of the flag of truce. "What the devil do you come for?" "Don't you know the war is over?" This was jerked out by the spokesman on the other side. "I obeyed orders," calmly replied the Sergeant. "No troops can pass my line." "That man, Johnston has surrendered and the war is over. Come, let us pass, we want to taste that brandy over there." "I must carry out my orders," sternly maintained the Sergeant Faircloth, and if your men advance they will be fired upon. But," he added, "I am expecting orders calling in my men every minute, and if you will wait, perhaps you may get some of the brandy." "Strangely to say," the Corps waited, and soon the order came. There was a grand rush for the barrels where "Johnny Reb." and "Yank" got a taste of it.

This was the last shot fired in the war, and the incident, now published for the first time, will be read with interest by those who participate in the historical scene, as well as the general public.

To complete the story it only remains to tell that, acting under the orders of Johnston, Wheeler gave his men the order to fire, and the Confederates were the last to be fired upon.

A Releasant's Mission.

A portion of the Northern press seem disposed to brandish that there is about as much race prejudice in this section of the country as there is in the South. The Auburn Park incident appears to have opened their eyes a little and shown them that in the detection of the race question they have not been altogether free from cant and hypocrisy. The New York Sun, commenting on this question, says: "In truth the color line is sharply drawn at the North as well as at the South, against which we have no right to bring the charge of race prejudice and discrimination. The only difference is that the South is honest in expressing its antipathy and its determination to keep the races apart. Here there is disposition to hide the same feeling and purpose under a cloak of cant and humbug." The Boston Herald has this to say on the same subject: "The fact is that prejudice does exist in both sections. It would be strange, indeed, if it did not exist in the South. A people who in themselves and their ancestors have lived for several generations with the black race is likely to be prejudiced, and who even admitting the nature of inferiority of the black to be just in charge—have seen them in entire ignorance of what is taught by color education, cannot be expected to accept a feeling of equality with such a race readily. Personally, the Southern is often kinder to the ignorant black than are those of white blood at the North. He is more used to personal association with him, and has less of that antipathy to personal contact that often prevails here. But there must always be with this assertion of personal superiority.

The Northerner is not in a position to lecture the Southerner for his prejudice against the negro. When it comes to the point of personal association with the negro on terms of equality, he finds that he has the same feeling as the Southerner has. It is not that the Southerner has a feeling for him, without the kindly feeling for him which the Southerner has. The Northerner does not want to be brought into contact with the negro in any way, while the Southerner only objects to his assumption of equality. It may be true that the negro has assimilation to places in the North to which he is not admitted at the South, but this is because of the overwhelming numbers of the negroes at the South. If the negroes were as numerous at the North as they are at the South, the prejudice against them would be even more marked than there is here. This is a fact shown by the hostility to the negro which is shown at Ashbury Park as soon as they come to gather there in large numbers. If the Northerner people will look at this matter fairly they will see that they are not superior to the Southern people when they condemn race prejudice at the South. It is noticeable that those of them who come South have a great deal less sympathy for the negro than the Southern people have, and are the quickest to resent anything that looks like an assumption of equality. They are not at all anxious to prove by their conduct the sincerity of their opinions which they expressed so freely on the race question at the North. When the Northerner people show that they are free from race prejudice their criticism of the Southern people for entertaining race prejudice will be in better taste. —Savannah News.

Gold is coming from Europe to this country in large sums. On Saturday one firm in New York received $500,000, and it is estimated that within the next fortnight more than $6,000,000 will arrive. Some of it will doubtless find its way South to aid in railroad development.

News in Ogichthorpe.

The walls of Arnold, Maxwell & Co.'s store go up as if by magic.

White and colored public schools opening all over the county.

J. M. Paul is raising a new kind of melon called the banana melon.

A wagon load of melons sold in Lexington the other day for one dollar.

Rev. Simon Peter Richardson preaches at Glade on the 30th and 31st.

The syndicate have a large acreage in tomatoes along with their watermelons.

Mr. Tom Callaway pulls five hundred watermelons at one pulling.

Miss Maude Leary is on a visit to Lexington, the guest of Miss Jessie Latimer.

Mose and Luke Arnold spent a few days in Lexington this week with friends.

Will some one explain the terrible falling off in taxable property in this county?

The lay club sells watermelons every fifteen minutes when some one sets 'em up.

Considering the large crop of berries, but little wine in Ogichthorpe this year.

Doubtless the doctor will be called in to see some melon thieves around town ere long.

Rumor says there will be another ruin of Stinson and Woodstock Glades ere long.

We'll have to get up some kind of a boom to peep up with the balance of the State.

The watermelon crop seems to be unaccountable, and the fruit is unusually large and luscious.

Hon. J. T. Olive was down from Atlanta on Sunday, and was accompanied by his son, Sam.

It would be a capital idea to have an exhibit of Ogichthorpe granite at the two fairs this fall.

Capt. Hutchins now has for pets a pair of young jay birds, and he says they beat the world for sense.

There is not much sickness in the county, considering the intolerably warm weather we have had.

The Lexingtonians at Watson Springs gave a barbecue yesterday and invited several from here down to it.

The court-house corridor is the coolest place in town, but there the security stood at 10 Sunday and Monday.

There is some talk in the county of organizing a military company.

We would be glad to see the movement put through.

The soldiers' reunion and barbecue at Mouru came off last week.

Our Mr. Young was present with his company, the Green Rifles.

Regret very much to have such reports from crops in the White Oak section. In other parts of the county they are not so bad.

A number of little boys were brought before his honor, G. O. Smith, Mayor pro tem, Wednesday for rolling hoops on the streets.

There being no ordinance against their crime no cases were made. In fact the whole procedure was a farce.

The boldest piece of thieving of which we have heard in some time was committed upon Mr. Andrew J. Young's watermelon patch on Monday night last. Some party or parties drove a two-horse wagon to said patch, loaded it with melons and brought them to Lexington, so the tracks of the wagon indicate. No clue whatever to the daring thieves.

Owing to the ravage of some dread disease to the trees, this section is in a fair way to be entirely without peaches in a few years. This disease has been going on for some time in a small way but this year it is killing on a large percentage of the trees, which when they are attacked the leaves turn brown, curl up and in a few weeks the tree is dead. No remedy has yet been found to prevent its spread.

Married, with the license of the bride's parents, at 8:30 o'clock, on Monday last, 16th inst., Dr. J. G. Gibson officiating, Mr. J. F. Drake and Miss Ada Wise, both of this county.

And we see again two lives and hearts blended together for mutual happiness. This must come. The groom is one of the best known and most sterling men of the county, endowed with traits of character that best him to take in charge the lovely one he has won. A man in the zenith of his manhood surrounded with enough of this world's goods for his comfort and that of his fair charge.

The bride the third daughter of Dr. M. Mrs. Jos. Wise, of the fairest of Ogichthorpe's fair. Though but little more than a child in years a woman in her graces, loving and one to be loved, capacitated to carry full happiness and comfort into the life of the one to whom she has given her keeping, and is a helpmeet to him. Born of noble parents, a noble woman herself, well may the heartiest congratulations be extended the winner of her heart and hand. The couple the center of a host of admiring friends who wish them every good with for their future, bespeaking for them happiness, peace, plenty and tranquility, and many days together as loving and as loved as now. The bride joins in these congratulations. The bride couple boarded Monday's steamer at Crawford for a trip to Atlantic City and North Georgia. Returning today they will go home keeping in their handsome residence near Woodstock.

Around the Mill.
We had a fine rain on Saturday evening and all of the farmers seem happy.

A nice barbecue was held at "Lodge Grove Seminary," on Saturday, for the benefit of the pupils' delightful dinner and social gathering.

General James F. Graves, accompanied by little Miss Daisy May, from Albany, has returned home after spending the winter in Florida.

Many of the school children do love them.

Dr. Emma Stephens and Dr. Laine have been on a visit to Rev. F. T. Simpson's family.

Mr. Hal Simpson leaves to-morrow to visit relatives and friends at Union Point.

A neighborhood barbecue will be held near Apple on Wednesday; some one come all, and be happy.

GENERAL RAILWAY NEWS.
Reports of Money and Management About Various Lines.

The Marietta and North Georgia road is having a hard time of it. The Legislature refuses to permit its extension to Atlanta, and the cause of this refusal is the fact that it competes with the property of the State and injury the value of the Western and Atlantic road.

A New York dispatch says that a syndicate copartnership of New York and London bankers has agreed to furnish the money necessary for the completion of the "Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus railroad, and President Williamson, who was in New York conducting negotiations, left for Rome Wednesday and will begin work on the line at once.

The right of way through the street of Palatka, now occupied by Palatka station, for the railway was granted on Wednesday night and St. Augustine and St. John's and Halifax river railroads, and the same ordinance provides for the building of a bridge over the St. John's to the foot of Adams street. The material is already on hand, and all doubt as to the completion of the bridge, as well as the passage of the roads, through the city would seem to be set at rest.

The work on the extension of the Orange Belt Railway, from Oakland westward, is going on rapidly. The grading between Tarpon Springs and Macon is nearly completed, and the bridges over Tacony creek are finished, and there is no doubt but that rails will be laid into Tarpon Springs early in October. The occasion will be one of much rejoicing not only to the people of Tarpon Springs, but all along the coast, especially the military. These latter are proud in their denunciation of the atrocious service which has been given them by the steamboats of late and are feeling very bitter against the steamboat company. The boats have been withdrawn without any notice or warning whatever, and freight has been delivered at Tarpon Springs by lighter and more private boats, which have had to go to Cedar Keys to get it.

POISON IN THE ASHES

What the Mt. Lebanon Shakers Found—Incident in the History of a Quiet Community.

The Mount Lebanon (New York) Shakers are a quiet community, secluded from the fret and worry of the outside world. They are widely known, however, for their strict honor and probity in business.

The Shakers believe that nature has a remedy for every disease. A few have been found—the rest are as yet unknown. Many were discovered by accident. Others came to light as the result of patient experiment and research.

Nervous Dyspepsia is a comparatively new disease, growing out of the conditions of modern life. It is a joint affliction of the digestive organs and of the nervous system. These two were formerly treated as separate ailments, and it was left for the clairvoyant Shakers to prove that the basis of this terrible and often fatal complication lies chiefly in the "disordered and depraved functions of digestion and nutrition. They reasoned thus:—"If we can induce the stomach to do its work, and stimulate the excretory organs to drive out of the body the poisonous waste matter which remains after the living elements of the food have been absorbed, we shall have conquered Nervous Dyspepsia and Nervous Exhaustion. And they were right.

Knowing the infallible power of Shaker Extract (Segel's Syrup) in less complicated though similar diseases, they resolved to test it fully in this. To leave no ground for doubt they prescribed the remedy in hundreds of cases which had been pronounced incurable—with perfect success in every instance where their directions as to living and diet were scrupulously followed.

Nervous Dyspepsia and Exhaustion is a peculiarly American disease. To a greater or less extent half the people of this country suffer from it—both sexes and all ages. In no country in the world are there so many insane asylums filled to overflowing, all resulting from this alarming disease. Its leading symptoms are these: Frequent or continual headache; a dull pain at the base of the brain; bad breath; nervous eructations; the rising of sour and pungent fluids to the throat; a sense of oppression and faintness at the pit of the stomach; fatulence; wakefulness and loss of sleep; distress and loss of sleep; weakness from the need of sticky or slimy matter on the teeth or in the mouth, especially on rising in the morning; furred and coated tongue; dull eyes; cold hands and feet; constipation; dry or rough skin; inability to fix the mind on any labor calling for continuous attention; and oppressive and sad forebodings and fears.

All this terrible group Shaker Extract (Segel's Syrup) removes by its positive, powerful, direct yet painless and gentle action upon the functions of digestion and assimilation. These elements of the food thus built up and strengthened the system are sent upon their mission, while all waste matters (the ashes of life) which were removed, poison and kill, are expelled from the body through the bowels, kidneys and skin. The weak and prostrated nerves are quieted, tone and fed by the purified blood. As the result, health, with its joys, peace, blessing and power, returns to the sufferer, who had, perhaps, abandoned all hope of ever seeing and enjoying well day.

Pistols and Whiskey.

In a neighboring state a few days ago, a party of young men went on an excursion from the town in which they lived to another town about fifteen miles distant. They were regarded as harmless law-abiding citizens and in the main they were. Occasionally more than one of them carried a pistol, and sometimes all of them carried under the influence of liquor than was proper. On the occasion in question all of the party were provided with a flask of whiskey each and at least two were armed.

During the excursion when the whiskey had made the party about half drunk, the two young men who were armed became involved in an altercation with each other about some trivial matter. They drew their pistols and fired at each other, and one was shot through the heart and instantly killed. Since the first of May the newspapers have recorded a large number of cases like that just described. It seems that many young men regard it as the proper thing to carry a pistol on excursions, and as a rule, a flask of whiskey is considered a fit companion for a pistol. In a case of murder on an excursion, reported from Ohio, the young man who took the life of his companion said: "It was all due to whiskey. I thought I couldn't have fun unless I carried whiskey with me. I drank too much, and I fired the fatal shot hardly knowing what I did." In another state a murder was committed while a Sunday school was on a steamboat excursion. In this instance a flask and a pistol were again companions and the young man who shot another boy said: "I was drunk. I angered me and I shot him. I carried a pistol because I was afraid there might be a difficulty. I carried a flask of whiskey because I wanted to have a lively time."

If ever pistols and whiskey are out of our country, on such occasions people are sure to be pleased. They do not anticipate trouble, and the young men who carry pistols for fear there will be a difficulty, are generally responsible for the trouble which comes. There is as much sense in taking a pistol to a wedding as there is taking one on an excursion, and the "fun" caused by whiskey is almost to be regretted. There is a grave responsibility upon those who manage excursions, and whenever it is possible they should see that the young men who carry pistols and whiskey are compelled to stay at home.—Saratoga, N.Y.

Railroad Foreclosure Sales and Executions.

The Railway Age contains an interesting and instructive summary of the foreclosure sales of railroads for the first half of 1987. To this is added a list of railroads which went into the hands of receivers during the same period. It appears that nineteen railroads with a bonded debt of $67,108,000 and a nominal capital stock of $87,720,000, making a total of nearly $155,000,000, of securities have been sold under orders of court and passed into the hands of new proprietors. These are large figures, but they are small in comparison with those for the corresponding period in 1896 when, although the number of railroads was less than two, the mileage was 21,000 miles, or more than two and a half times that of the last six months, and the apparent capital involved was $250,000,000. Of the nineteen railroads included in the Railway Age summary, six are located in the South. The remainder are in the North and West.

Glancing the words of the Railway Age: "If the record of foreclosures for the first six months of this year is taken as an indication of what is to be expected for the entire year it would seem to be far from gratifying. The 'railway' (there are many roads still in the hands of receivers, their number and the amount of liabilities involved) is steadily decreasing; the sale for the entire year of the remaining six months of the year will probably equal these six months' record." It is proper to add that the foreclosures sales which are now occurring owe their origin to the financial troubles which began several years ago, and do not indicate that railroad operation at the present is necessarily unprofitable.

The number of receivers appointed during the past six months was very small. The total was five, only one Southern railroad being affected and that of little importance. The same point is to be noted in the statistics of receivers in 1896, when the number of receivers was seven on the mileage, 1,584, against 62 miles this year and the liabilities over $45,000,000 against $18,000,000 in the last six months. Compared with the record for the first half of 1896, when thirty-six railroads, with a total of 6,200 miles and nearly $200,000,000 of capital and debt were turned over to receivers, the Railway Age regards the showing so far this year as very encouraging.

The financial outlook of the railroads is encouraging, and there is every reason to believe that "the black and disgraceful records of mismanagement," through which, during the past twelve and a half years, $20,000,000,000 with a mileage of over 200,000 miles and a nominal capital stock and bonded debt aggregating almost $2,500,000,000, have been sold under foreclosure, will not be repeated.

An Incident in Krupp's Life.

It is said that the leading newspapers of Europe are full of anecdotes and historical reminiscences of the late Frederick Krupp, the great gunmaker of Essen. "That he was a great man, and that he exerted a great influence in the affairs of the world there is no doubt."

His immense establishment at Essen will be conducted by his eldest son, who, while perhaps not possessing his father's ability, may yet be the business thoroughly, and is capable of conducting it successfully. It is said that in the centre of the grounds occupied by the Essen works there is a little building containing a few old style forges, and facilitating the molding of iron in a rather rude way. This was the beginning of the famous Krupp establishment, and it is said that the great gunmaker was born in this building, when he was about 10 years of age, when he stole a piece of bread from one of the father's workmen to satisfy his hunger.

The fact that there ever was a time in Frederick Krupp's life when his hunger was so intense that he stole the means to satisfy it shows how great the possibilities in a man's life are. His father must have been very poor, and must have struggled long and earnestly, denying himself and family even the necessary of life to start the factory which eventually grew under the direction of Frederick Krupp's masterful genius into such colossal proportions.

A BLOODLESS MAN.

A Soldier Has Daggers and Knives Thrown Him Without Injury.

A dispatch from Berlin to the Philadelphia News says: Physicians and scholars are at a loss to account for a freak of nature which lives but a few miles from here. The man whose name is Otto Schreiber, apparently has no blood. This fact was discovered less than a month ago when Schreiber, who is a soldier, had a duel with a fellow soldier. His opponent ran him through with a sword, but no blood flowed, and he did not appear to be harmed in the least. The man was so astonished that Otto had no difficulty in killing him. Since that time he has let his comrades amuse themselves by his body with knives and daggers through his body without injury whatever, not even a drop of blood flowing. He visited a medical college in Berlin and in the presence of the whole college had a sharp knife run through his mouth, coming out at the back of his head. No mark whatever was left. He was then examined by a committee of distinguished surgeons, who confessed themselves totally unable to explain the miracle. Otto Schreiber is a Corporal in the German army and next year when his time is up, he will exhibit himself in Berlin, Paris, London and America.

A diabolical outrage was committed at Mirgo, O., on Saturday night last. While a negro ball was in progress a number of white men "blew up" the ballroom, with dynamite. Many of the negroes were hurt. As this outrage occurred in Ohio it is not likely that the rabid Republicans of that State will make any sympathy upon the unfortunate victims.

President R. B. Cable, of the Rock Island railroad, says that he does not recall any season when there have been brighter crop prospects than the Northwest has just now. The same condition of affairs exists along all the leading railroads in agricultural lands. The news is cheering to the farmer. When the farmers prosper the country prospers.
