In the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia
J. William C. J. Smith, do swear, that I, being now in full possession of my faculties of mind and memory and being assured of my perfect competency to dispose of my property, do make public and declare this, my last Will and Testament, that I, J. W. C. J. Smith, do hereby give and bequeath all my estate, real and personal, to my wife, J. E. Smith, to have and to hold unto her, her heirs and assigns forever, and I do hereby discharge my debts.

Item 2^d. I will that all my property remain together until my minor children become of legal age, and then I will that an equal division of all my property be made among my children and my wife; unless my wife should marry, then she is to have a third part of the said property, and the said children are to have the balance of the said property, and I do hereby give and bequeath an amount of the said cash as I may see fit, and I do hereby give and bequeath no other part of my estate.

I appoint my wife J. E. Smith, Executor to carry out my last will with the right to take in time and wherever she may choose to assist her, if she needs and can.

September 10th 1892.
