

CHRONICLE.

FRIDAY, APRIL 14, 1815.

THE destinies of Europe are still in the hands of the Congress of Vienna, whose deliberations are private, and all their communications confidential—nothing has yet transpired on which we can form a correct judgement, as to the fate of the minor States of Germany—We have one consolation however, favourable to our tranquility and interest—we can in no degree be affected by their proceedings, as their sole object is their own territorial arrangements.

By Last Night's Mail.

We have it from an authentic source, that Commodore DECATUR is appointed to command the first squadron now fitting out at New-York, and destined for the Mediterranean. This squadron is to consist of five frigates, and will be accompanied by the squadron of small vessels originally intended to be under the command of Captain PORTER.—The Commodore will display his broad pendant on board the Guerriere.

United States' Creditors.

It is stated by a writer in the Philadelphia Democratic Press, that three individuals of foreign birth, in Philadelphia alone have loaned to the government four millions of dollars, viz:

Stephen Girard, from France, 1,900,000
(all held by himself yet)
David Parish, from Germany, 2,500,000
Jacob Gerard Koch, Holland, 800,000
(500,000 at 6 per cent.)
