PARISH REGISTER EXTRACTS

FROM THE NOTEBOOK OF AN 18TH CENTURY ANTIQUARY, SIR JUSTINIAN ISHAM, 5TH BARONET, OF LAMPORT, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE,

---

Being Extracts from the Lost Registers of

BARBY, MAIDWELL, PYTCHELEY, AND ROTHWELL IN NORTHAMPTONSHIRE,

AND

FROM THE REGISTER OF STONELEIGH, IN WARWICKSHIRE.

PARISH REGISTER EXTRACTS,

*From Barby, Maidwell, Pytchley, and Rothwell, co. Northampton,

These commence, with the exception of Stoneleigh, earlier than the date of the now [1907] existing registers.

Sir Justinian Isham, fifth Baronet* of Lamport, co. Northampton, (born 1687; died 1737) compiled a very valuable book of notes relating to the history and genealogy of the county. In it are notes from old books, extracts from parish registers and wills, and a variety of genealogical material, much of it concerning his own family and the families with which he was connected. There are extracts from twelve parish registers in Northamptonshire, viz., Barby, Braunston, Brixworth, Faxton, Hannington, Lamport, Maidwell, Pytchley, Rothwell, Scaldwell, Walgrave and Wold, and from one such in Warwickshire, viz. Stoneleigh. In the case of four of the Northamptonshire parishes (Barby, Maidwell, Pytchley, and Rothwell) the early registers are now lost. Sir Justinian's copy of these is therefore extremely valuable. The extracts are printed here, just as he wrote them.

BARBY.

In the time of John Bridges (born 1666; died 1724), these registers began in 1558 [Northamptonshire, vol. i., 25]. George Baker, however, in his history of that county, published in 1830 [vol. i., p. 265] states that "all the early volumes have been lost or destroyed through subsequent negligence; and the present series does not commence till 1748." The manor of Barby was bought by Gregory Isham early in the reign of James I. He was a grandson of Euseby Isham of Pytchley. The extracts given chiefly relate to the families of Isham and Holled, three of the Holled family, all having the Christian name of Knightley, having been rectors, 1677—1700, 1701—1755, and 1755—1794. A full pedigree of the family of Isham is in the genealogical volume entitled "Northamptonshire Families" of the "Victoria History of the Counties of England."

* Cr. 1627.

MAIDWELL.

This parish Register, according to Bridges' Northamptonshire [vol. ii., 48], began in 1570. The now (1907) existing one dates from 1708. The extracts given relate chiefly to the family of Haselwood who bought Maidwell in the time of Henry VIII. (Bridges, vol. ii., 46), and to that of Osborne of Kelmarsh. Besides the account in Bridges' Northamptonshire (vol. ii, 39—42, and 46—49) a good pedigree of the family of Haselwood, of Maidwell, &c., is in the Genealogist [orig. series] vol. i., 43—54, and one of Osborne, of Kelmarsh, in the Visitations of Northamptonshire 1564 and 1618, ed. by W. C. Metcalfe (1887) pp. 39 and 122.

PYTCHELEY.

This parish register, according to Bridges' Northamptonshire [vol. ii., 124], began in 1568. The now (1907) existing one dates from 1695. The extracts given relate chiefly to the families of Isham and Washbourne. Almost certainly tracing their descent from the manorial family of Isham of Isham (the neighbouring village), the Ishams made Pytchley their home from about the 13th century. In the 17th century the manor passed to Anne Lane, wife of William Lane, Esq., of Glendon, and granddaughter of Sir Euseby Isham, who built the manor house here. It is curious to note that there is no Isham monument in Pytchley Church. See, as to the Isham family, "Some Notes on Sir Euseby Isham and his Virginian Descendants" (Mitchell and Hughes, London 1898), and also page 3, above, under "Barby."

*In his Will dated 3 April 1670 pr. 30 May 1671 at Northampton by his widow Catharine Coles, sole exec. he mentions his nephews William Hart and Theophilus Hart, and his niece Ann Hart, who were children of Theophilus Hart, the wicked rector of Wappenham.

The Washbournes, coming out of Worcestershire, probably bought the manor from the Lanes. There are several of their monuments in the chancel of Pytchley, including even a monument of earlier date, which they brought with them out of their own county. Some notice of this family, besides what is given in Bridges' Northamptonshire, vol. ii., 125, is given in Burke's Commoners (1838) vol. iii., pp. 621, 622. For pedigrees of the families of Turville and Cave see the Visitation of Leicestershire 1619, and in particular the short pedigree therein on page 133, which also explains the connection with Marbury.

A history of "The Washbourne family of Washbourne and Wichenford" has been written by the Rev. James Davenport, M.A., vicar of Wichenford. [Methuen, 1907].

The families of Barker were numerous. They and the Ishams intermarried more than once, and it is difficult to disentangle the various relationships.

ROTHWELL.

This parish register, according to Bridges' Northamptonshire [vol. ii., 62], began in 1614. The now (1907) existing one dates from 1708. The principal families in this parish in the 17th and 18th centuries were those of Lambe, Hill, Lane, and Lant. The family of Hill and their descendants have now been connected therewith for nearly 300 years, the Rev. John Hill, M.A. (afterwards Rector of Holdenby and Vicar of Rothwell) having married, 25 July 1626, Susan, daughter of Edward Lambe of Rothwell, niece and heir of Sir John Lambe, of Rothwell, Dean of the Arches, on whose death, in 1647, she inherited a considerable estate there. On the death, 21 Feb., 1808 (aged 92) of her great-grandson, George Hill, Serjeant-at-Law, Lord of the manor of Rothwell, this estate devolved on his daughter, Barbara, wife of the Hon. William Cockayne. This lady (then the Hon. Barbara Cockayne-Medlycott) died a widow 2 June 1838, aged 85, and was buried, with her ancestors, in Rothwell Church. An account of the family of "Hill of Rothwell, co. Northampton," is in the Genealogist, N.S., vol. xv pp. 103, 178, and 228. It was, however, written before the entries, which are before 1708, in this parish register were known of and they should be incorporated with it, as also should be the marriage by licence at Desborough, 25 July, 1626 of the said Rev. John Hill, as "John Hill, de Lester, generosus & Mrs. Susan Lambe de Rothwell," and the baptism at Waddington, co. Lincoln 27 Sept. 1715 of the above-named George Hill [the future Serjeant-at-Law] son of the Rev. Nathaniel Hill (d. 1731 aged 61), son of Edward Hill (d. 1705 aged 69), son of the said Rev. John Hill (d. 1669), all of Rothwell.

As to the family of Lane of Glendon (a village without a church in the vicinity of Rothwell) there is a good pedigree down to about 1660 in the Appendix to the Visitations of Northamptonshire, 1564 and 1618, edited by W. C. Metcalfe in 1887, besides much information as late as 1694 in the monumental inscriptions in Bridges' Northamptonshire, vol. ii., pp. 64, 65

The family of Lant, of Thorpe Underwood, a hamlet of Rothwell, became possessed thereof by inheritance from Richard Andrew, Lord of that manor, who died 1654 aged 74. On the death of Andrew Lant, 17 Jan. 1694-5, aged 56, it appears to have devolved on Sarah, one of his three daughters and coheirs, who married in July, 1705, Sir John Humble, 4th baronet [1660] and died his widow Oct. 1739. Her son Sir William Humble, 5th baronet, died Oct. 1742 and was succeeded by his son Sir John Humble, 6th and last baronet, on whose death at the age of 6 years, 6 Feb. 1744-5 that title became extinct. All the persons mentioned in this paragraph were buried at Rothwell.

STONELEIGH, CO. WARWICK.

The grandmother of Sir Justinian Isham, the compiler of these extracts, was Vere, daughter of Thomas (Leigh), 1st Baron Leigh of Stoneleigh. Hence his interest in adding to his collection those from Stoneleigh, which may be interesting also as having been taken about or before 1730, and before there was any thought of the "Leigh Peerage" case.
