PREFACE

THIS volume is the outgrowth of an investigation begun in the year 1897, and carried on at intervals to the present time. While the movement of the English and Welsh Quakers to Pennsylvania has been treated to some extent by historians, that of the Irish Quakers has been overlooked, and it was with the hope of filling, in a measure, this deficiency that the present work was undertaken.

It has been my endeavor to give a plain, orderly presentation of the facts, without embellishment ; and I have deemed it of greater interest to let the contemporary records, as much as possible, tell their own story. The inequality of treatment in portions of the book is due partly to variation in the materials ; at one point they are abundant and at another scanty. In Part I., I have attempted only an outline of the early history of the Quakers in Ireland ; the full history is yet to be written. An abundance of material for such a study lies buried in the manuscript records of the Society in Ireland, and it is to be hoped that some one will be sufficiently interested to prepare a thorough and systematic treatise upon the subject. The propriety of introducing so much genealogical matter in the Appendix may be open to question, but I find justification in the belief that this material will have a special interest for many of Irish Quaker ancestry.

While I have endeavored to be careful and painstaking, yet by the very nature of this work, drawn as it is from many sources, errors and omissions are likely to occur ; and I shall be very glad to receive corrections, so that they may be noted in a standard copy of the book to be placed in the collection of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, or incorporated in a possible future edition of the work.

I desire to express my grateful appreciation of the kindness of the many persons who have assisted me in various ways in connection with this work ; especially would I mention Professors William I. Hull and John Russell Hayes, of Swarthmore College, to whom I have been indebted throughout for helpful criticism and kind encouragement. In no less degree am I under obligation to Gilbert Cope, of West Chester, Pa., for valuable suggestions and for material from his unrivaled private collection of manuscripts relating to the early history of Chester County.

My thanks are also due to Howard M. Jenkins, of Philadelphia ; to Professor Arthur Beardsley, Librarian of Friends' Historical Library of Swarthmore College ; to John W. Jordan, A.M., and the other courteous officials of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania ; to Professor John Bach McMaster, of the University of Pennsylvania ; to

Hon. Samuel W. Pennypacker, of Philadelphia ; to Dr. Henry C. McCook, of Philadelphia ; to President Isaac Sharpless, of Haverford College ; to Dr. Joseph S. Walton, of George School, Pa. ; to Dr. John A. M. Passmore, of Philadelphia ; to the late Charles Roberts, of Philadelphia ; to Thomas Hamilton Murray, of Woonsocket, R. I., Secretary-General of the American-Irish Historical Society (for a copy of his paper "Early Irish Friends in Rhode Island") ; to Warren S. Ely, of Doylestown, Pa. ; to Ellwood Roberts, of Norristown, Pa. ; to Edward H. Ogden, of Philadelphia ; to Thomas Maxwell Potts, of Canonsburg, Pa. ; and to custodians of Friends' records, in particular, George J. Scattergood, John H. Dillingham, Alfred Moore, Benjamin Walton and the late Joseph M. Truman, Jr., of Philadelphia, the late Ellwood Michener, of Toughkenamon, Pa., Truman C. Moore and wife, of West Grove, Pa., Lewis Palmer, of Concordville, Pa., Charles Palmer, of Chester, Pa., Henry Mendenhall, of Media, Pa., Morgan Bunting, of Darby, Pa., William Woodman, of Buckmanville, Pa., and Kirk Brown, of Baltimore, Md.

Nor must I neglect to make acknowledgment of the many courtesies extended to me in the course of my researches in England and Ireland during the summer of 1900. At the British Museum and at the Bodleian Library I received kind attention. To Isaac Sharp, Secretary of the Society of Friends, I owe thanks for his kindness in giving me access to the great collection of Friends' books at Devonshire House, Bishopsgate Street, Without, London.

In an especial measure do I wish to express my appreciation of the kind interest and generous hospitality accorded me in Ireland. I am indebted to William Moore, K.C., M.P., of Moore Lodge, County Antrim, who received me most cordially at his pleasant seat, and in every way possible befriended my investigations; to John Pim, J.P., of Belfast, who freely opened to me his rich stores of notes on the early Friends of Ireland; to Jane M. Richardson, of Moyallon House, Gilford, County Down, author of Six Generations of Friends in Ireland, for kindly reception and valued criticism upon parts of my manuscript; to William D. Braithwaite, Head Master, Joseph Radley, formerly Head Master, and Frederic Bell, Secretary, of Ulster Provincial School, Lisburn, for much courtesy and valuable information; to John Bewley Beale, for opportunity to examine the Friends' records in the Meeting House in Eustace Street, Dublin; and to Henry F. Berry, M.A., of the Public Record Office, Dublin, for permission to search the records in his care. I also received kindly attention in Paris at the Bibliothèque Nationale.

By deed of September 9, 1755, Lord Charlemont leased the burial ground and meeting-house land near Charlemont to William Greeves and T. Greer, evidently in trust for the Society of Friends.

PART I.
THE PLANTING OF QUAKERISM IN

CHAPTER I.

THE RISE OF QUAKERISM IN ENGLAND

THE period of the Civil War and Commonwealth in England was one of controversy and upheaval. The introduction of the Bible into every cottage of the land had set the people to thinking, and they gave themselves up to the consideration of questions of civil and religious liberty and to the solution of the great problems of life and death. Puritanism became a mighty power, and in the middle of the seventeenth century it arose in all its strength and freed the nation from the yoke of Episcopacy and from the tyranny of Charles I. Under the Commonwealth and Cromwell toleration existed in some measure, and there was greater opportunity than formerly for the development of such sects as that of the Society of Friends or so-called Quakers.

State of England in the Middle of the Seventeenth Century

 The history of the early years of the Society of Friends is the history of its great leader and founder. George Fox (1624-1691) was born at Drayton-in-the-Clay, now known as Fenny Drayton, Leicestershire, England, in 1624. He says, "My father's name was Christopher Fox ;

Beginnings of Quakerism

he was by profession a weaver, an honest man. . . . The neighbors called him Righteous Christer. My mother was an honest woman; her maiden name was Mary Lago, of the family of the Lagos and of the stock of the martyrs."<sup>1</sup> At an early age Fox had a "gravity and stayedness of mind not usual in children,"<sup>1</sup> and as he grew up, under good home influences, he came to know "pureness and righteousness";<sup>1</sup> so truthful and so determined was he that it was a saying among his associates, "If George says 'Verily' there's no altering him."<sup>2</sup>

In 1643, as a youth of nineteen, "graceful . . . in countenance," stalwart and "manly in personage,"<sup>3</sup> and with a bright piercing eye he left his home, and spent the next five years wandering from sect to sect, weighing and considering the religious opinions which obtained in that seething and fervid time; but with all his seeking he seemed unable to find anything that appealed to his spiritual condition. Finally, after much conflict of spirit, he became convinced that the true source of religious comfort and consolation is the "Inner Light," the voice of God speaking directly to each human soul without the aid of any earthly mediator. With this idea as the basis of his religious system, George Fox developed those doctrines and practices peculiar to the Society of Friends and felt himself divinely called to proclaim this message to the world.

In 1647 and 1648, amid the conflicting ideas of the time, he began to preach, and went forth with all the ardor of a youthful knight of the Crusades, sans peur et sans reproche, spreading his new doctrine of the "Divine Light" through the towns and shires of England. He appealed to judges and justices to give righteous judgments, and to inn-keepers to be moderate in the sale of drink. He petitioned Parliament against allowing more inns than were needful for travelers. He raised his voice against wakes, feasts, sports, and plays. He went to fairs and markets urging men to deal justly and to speak the truth. He went into the "steeple houses" and openly testified against a "hireling ministry" and formalism of worship, the churches in which he spoke being usually those belonging to the Independents, who allowed discussion after the sermon. For these and other peculiar testimonies, so foreign to the ideas of the time, he was subjected to the most severe and cruel persecution; but not even years of confinement in dark and loathsome dungeons could restrain his dauntless spirit.

The first years of his ministry were spent chiefly in the midland counties, where he found but few assistants in his missionary work, but when he reached the northern counties many were convinced, and by 1654 he had organized a band of sixty traveling ministers, who had caught his spirit and who had begun to preach his doctrines. This zealous missionary band of young spirits—yeomen, tradesmen, gentlemen—went up and down the land carrying the message of Quakerism with such power and courage that thousands flocked to their standard, and by the end of the century, 60,000 Quakers were numbered in England.<sup>1</sup>

THE CROMWELLIAN SETTLEMENT OF IRELAND

DURING the reign of Queen Mary, there had been adopted, for the first time, the plan of clearing off the native tribes of Irish from whole districts of Ireland, by expulsion or extermination, to make room for English and Scotch settlers. But the natives resisted and defended their homes with desperation; and from the beginning the settlers had to fight for their newly acquired possessions, aided, however, in their work of extermination by Government forces. During the twenty years from 1556 to 1576, plantations were attempted in the present Queen's County and County Antrim; but though the planters committed frightful atrocities, both attempts in a great measure failed.<sup>1</sup>

Plantations

By far the most successful of all the plantations was that made by James I., who confiscated six counties of the Province of Ulster, and then poured in English and Scotch colonists, giving the natives only the poorest land to live on.<sup>2</sup> The new settlers were an industrious class of farmers, mechanics, weavers, and laborers;<sup>1</sup> and soon farms, homesteads, churches, and mills rose amidst the desolate wilds. "The foundations of the economic prosperity which has raised Ulster high above the rest of Ireland in wealth and in intelligence were undoubtedly laid in the confiscations of 1610."<sup>2</sup> This confiscation met with no opposition at the time from the evicted Irish, who sullenly withdrew to the lands which had been left to them.<sup>2</sup> The "earth tillers," the lowest class, however, in this, as in the other plantations, were spared and allowed to live in peace, scattered among the colonists.<sup>3</sup> Further confiscations were made in the Province of Leinster, under James; and Charles I. and his agent, Strafford, continued the work.<sup>4</sup> These confiscations and plantations were carried on for about a century and a half, and were the chief cause of the great rebellion of 1641.<sup>5</sup>

After the departure of Strafford from Ireland in 1640, the natives all over the county were in a state of dangerous exasperation, due partly to the spread of the plantation system and partly to the measures taken to suppress the Catholic religion.<sup>6</sup>

The disbanded soldiers of the army that Strafford had raised, spread over the country, and blew the smouldering disaffection into a flame. A conspiracy, organized with wonderful power and secrecy by the Irish, broke forth in Ulster, and spread like wildfire over the center and west of the Island. Dublin was saved by a mere chance; but in the open country the work of murder went on unchecked. Great numbers of the settlers were butchered by the Irish, and the most dreadful outrages were perpetrated.<sup>1</sup> The estimates of those who were slain vary all the way from 50,000 to 200,000. The real number was probably less than 5,000.<sup>2</sup> In England a cry for bitter vengeance arose, but, the Civil War breaking out, the troops were detained for home service, and eight stirring years, which witnessed the fall of the Monarchy and the rise of the Commonwealth, had passed before active measures could be taken for the subjugation of Ireland.<sup>3</sup>

Meanwhile, the turn of events in Ireland had brought the Irish Catholics and the Royalists into power, and to subdue them the Parliament of the Commonwealth sent over Cromwell as Lord Lieutenant, in 1649, to reduce the country to obedience. "We are come," said Cromwell on landing at Dublin with his "New Model," "to ask an account of the innocent blood that hath been shed, and to endeavour to bring to an account all who by appearing in arms shall justify the same."<sup>1</sup> From Dublin he marched to Drogheda, and the storming and taking of that stronghold was the first of a series of awful massacres. This was followed by the terrible slaughter of Wexford. The fate of these two towns produced such terror that town after town surrendered. Finally, in the spring of 1650, seeing the island almost subdued, Cromwell sailed for England, leaving Ireton, his son-in-law, to finish the war. Ireton and his successor, Ludlow, followed up the work with savage effectiveness, and by 1652 the conquest of the country was complete.<sup>2</sup>

Settlement

In 1642, just after the rebellion, the English Parliament confiscated between two and three million acres of Irish soil. Debenture bonds were issued, payable in land when the country should be re-conquered. Bonds for a million acres had been taken up, and money had been raised on them for the payment of troops sent to Ireland previous to Cromwell's arrival. Similar debentures were issued afterwards for Cromwell's own army, though not thrown on the market like the first, but given to the soldiers in lieu of their pay; and now that the Island was subdued, the time had come when all these engagements were to be redeemed.<sup>1</sup> To accomplish this end, to prevent the intermixture of the Teutonic and Celtic races, which had been a result of the previous plantations, and to remove all cause for future Irish rebellions, Parliament, in 1652, passed an act to dispossess the Irish landholders. The whole of the population of the three provinces of Ulster, Leinster, and Munster, except the poorer sort—small farmers, tradesmen laborers, etc.—were ordered to transport themselves across the River Shannon into the Province of Connaught, where they were to be given small allotments of ground that had been left waste. The exodus, for the most part of the middle and upper class, across the Shannon, went on from 1652 to 1654. Later, however, many of the exiles returned to their old homes, forming bands of outlaws or “Rapparees,”<sup>2</sup> and from their lurking places in bogs, mountains, and forests, made the most cruel depredations on the colonists whenever opportunity offered. The lands vacated by the Irish gentry were given to Cromwell’s officers and soldiers, and to other bondholders.

Under the direction of the Lord Lieutenant, Henry Cromwell, son of Oliver, the great Cromwellian plantation was begun. The soldiers were settled down regiment by regiment, troop by troop, company by company, almost on the lands they had conquered. Many of them, however, sold their lands to the incoming Protestant pioneers from England and Scotland. The Irish poor classes remained in their natural homes, as under-tenants, or farm servants to the settlers. The order and industry of the new owners soon changed the face of Ireland, and it began to wear a look of quiet and prosperity.<sup>1</sup>

The Cromwellian Settlement, and the other plantations which preceded it, bear the closest relation to our subject, for they virtually prepared the ground for the planting of Quakerism in the Island; and it was from these Protestant planters and soldiers, almost entirely, that the first Quaker missionaries to Ireland drew their recruits.

CHAPTER III.

THE BEGINNINGS OF QUAKERISM IN IRELAND

THE founder and leader of Quakerism in Ireland was William Edmundson (1627-1712), one of Cromwell's soldiers. He was born at Little Musgrave, in Westmoreland, England, in 1627, the son of John and Grace Edmundson. "My father," he says, "was well accounted among men who knew him and religious in what he knew."

William Edmundson

Will Edmundson

His parents died while he was quite young, and he was bound an apprentice in York to learn the carpenter's trade. Then, he relates, "I went into the Parliaments' Army, and there continued part of the War betwixt the King and Parliament; and when that was over, I went into Scotland under Oliver Cromwell in the year 1650." He was greatly influenced by the Puritan movement of the time, and during his apprenticeship and army life his mind was often exercised over religious questions. "Sometimes when I had been on Service most of the Day, and was lying down in my Tent at Night, then would arise in my Mind the eminent Dangers I had passed that Day, and the narrow Escape my Life had, and what would become of my Soul, if I had fallen.

In the Year 1651, the Scotch Army marched for England, we followed and engaged them at Worcester, and overthrew their Army." He was at the taking of the Isle of Man, then returned to England, and was quartered in Derbyshire, where at this time "the common Discourse of all Sorts of People was of the Quakers," but he did not have an opportunity of hearing any of them preach at this time. "After some Time spent in divers Exercises, we marched again for Scotland, at which Time I had a Charge of some Men for recruiting other Companies in Scotland, then left the Army, came back to England, and visited my Relations in the North; from thence rode into Derbyshire, and married a young woman, to whom I was contracted before.<sup>1</sup> After some time I was about to settle in Derbyshire in the way of Shop-keeping, at which Time my Brother, [John] who was a soldier in Ireland, came into England to see his Relations and highly commending Ireland, persuaded me to go and live there, which I, with my wife, concluded to do."<sup>2</sup>

Taking with him a stock of goods to commence a "Trade in Merchandise," William Edmundson, his wife, and servant took shipping at Whitehaven and landed at Dublin in 1652. On learning of his brother's arrival, John Edmundson came down from the north of the island, where his troop was then stationed, and transported William and his household to the town of Antrim. Here William rented a house and opened a shop, his brother living with him. Trade being then very brisk, the goods were soon disposed of, and in 1653, William returned to England to renew his stock.

On coming into the north of England, he says, "George Fox and James Naylor were in that country, James Naylor having a Meeting about three Miles from where I was, I went to it with my eldest brother, Thomas, and another Kinsman, having an earnest Desire to have Converse with some of that People, retaining a Love for and believing well of them from the first hearing the Report of them, and I was glad of this Opportunity, and we were all three convinced of the Lord's blessed Truth." Having accomplished his business in England, he returned to Ireland, and in the spring of 1654 removed with his family from Antrim to Lurgan, in the County of Armagh, where he kept a shop and took some land for grazing cattle. In his new home the use of the plain language, the keeping on of his hat, and the other peculiar Quaker customs which he had adopted since his conviction, were the cause of much wonder and offence to his neighbors, and socially and in his business relations he was subjected to much vexation and discomfort.

The First Meeting in Ireland, 1654

His wife and brother had been convinced of the principles of Friends shortly after his journey to England and they all now met together in a meeting twice a week at his house. He says, "In a while after four more were convinced; then we were seven that met together to wait upon God, and to worship Him in Spirit and Truth." Thus in the year 1654, at Lurgan was established the first meeting of Friends in Ireland.<sup>1</sup>

The Traveling Ministers and Their Work

The First Ministers Arrive

Now came a period of earnest and zealous proselyting on the part of missionaries from England. The first of the ministers to arrive were Miles Halhead, James Lancaster, and Miles Bate-man, who came over from England in the early part of 1654, and made a short tour from town to town through the Island, preaching to the people, to magistrates, and to officers of the army. Having convinced many of the truth of their principles, they went into the north and took shipping at Belfast for England.<sup>2</sup>

The next year was an important one in the history of the Society of Friends in Ireland. Ten earnest preachers came over and laid the foundations of the most important Quaker strongholds in the island. John Tiffin was the first to arrive. He came to William Edmundson's at Lurgan, and during his sojourn of five or six weeks many members were added to that meeting. He and William Edmundson went to neighboring fairs and other public gatherings, explaining their principles and carrying on discussion with those of other beliefs. "Truth began to spread, tho' thro' great opposition ; for now the Priests and People began to be alarmed in a rage, and Friends were exposed to great Sufferings upon several accounts, particularly, as the testimony of Truth was against all hireling Teachers and their forced maintenance, these made it their business to incense the Magistrates and Rulers against Friends."<sup>1</sup>

About this time William Edmundson went over to England and conferred with George Fox, whom he had not yet seen, telling him of the conviction of Friends in Ireland, "of the Openness among People in the North of that Nation, to hear the Truth declared, and of the Want of ministering Friends in the Gospel there."<sup>2</sup> Soon after his return to Lurgan, Richard Clayton came on a religious visit from England, and the two spent several days journeying on foot through the counties of Antrim, Londonderry, Tyrone, and Armagh. At Coleraine they preached in the streets, but the people drove them out of the town, so that they had to lodge in a cabin on the mountain. At Londonderry and Kilmore they met with better success, and at these places many were convinced and meetings were settled.

Anne Gould and Juliann Wastwood

About the year 1655 two women ministers from London, Anne Gould and Juliann Wastwood, landed at Dublin and "all on Foot in Winter Time, wading Rivers, and dirty miry Ways,"<sup>1</sup> traveled in religious service to Londonderry, from there to Coleraine and through the country of the "Scotch People and Presbyterians" to Clough. Here the poor women sank down exhausted and disheartened, and Anne Gould was confined to bed. But William Edmundson happening to come that way, they were so rejoiced at seeing him that they recovered sufficiently to be taken to his home, where they were well cared for until their departure for England.

William Edmundson had now gained more experience as a minister, and traveled continually, preaching in public places and in churches. Other meetings sprang up, and "People more and more were convinced, insomuch that the Priests and Professors still raged, many tender people leaving them; and to revenge themselves they cast William Edmundson into prison," at Armagh.<sup>1</sup> He was soon liberated, however, and came forth with even greater zeal than before. Soon after his liberation, he felt a religious calling to leave shop-keeping and to rent a farm in order that he might set the example of bearing testimony against tithes, for as yet no one had borne that testimony in Ireland. With this in view, he and several other Friends and their families, leaving Lurgan Meeting well-settled, removed into the County of Cavan in the southern part of Ulster, where they rented land and began farming. Cavan Meeting was founded and many converts were made in that neighborhood. It was not long before these Friends experienced the sufferings they had anticipated. Many of them, for non-payment of tithes and other non-conformities, had their goods taken from them and were imprisoned.<sup>2</sup>

Edmundson bears a Testimony against Tithes

But the Quaker movement was not confined to the north of Ireland. At the same time that William Edmundson and his co-workers were spreading Quakerism through Ulster, other missionaries were working with equal zeal in the provinces of Leinster and Munster. In the beginning of the year, Elizabeth Fletcher and Elizabeth Smith, from England, landed at Dublin and made a few proselytes. For preaching in the Church of St. Audeon in that city, they were imprisoned by order of the Lord Mayor, in Newgate. After their release they had a meeting at the house of Richard Foukes, a tailor, near Polegate. This was the earliest meeting of Friends held in Dublin, although the first established meeting in that city was at George Latham's near Polegate. From Dublin these faithful women traveled south into Munster, holding meetings in the towns through which they passed. At Youghall, among numerous converts, were Captain James Sicklemore and Lieutenant Robert Sandham, two of the Cromwellian soldiers stationed in that town. Elizabeth Fletcher and Elizabeth Smith were the first Quakers to enter Cork, and in that city an equal success attended their efforts.

The summer of this year, 1655, is memorable for the landing at Dublin of two of the most determined and courageous apostles of Quakerism, Francis Howgill and Edward Burrough. Francis

Howgill had been educated for the Church at one of the English universities, and his magnetic personality and persuasive eloquence drew so many to his doctrines that he is conspicuous in the annals of Quakerism as one of the chief founders of the Society. Edward Burrough, perhaps not so polished a man as his companion, was one who performed every undertaking with all his might, and his power and vigor as a speaker were so marked that he was known as "A Son of Thunder."<sup>1</sup> They spent three months of aggressive work in Dublin, holding successful meetings and issuing tracts of appeal to magistrates and soldiers. Then, leaving Edward Burrough to continue the work in Dublin, Francis Howgill set out in company with a cornet of the army, and others, for the dangerous journey to the south of the island, visiting only the "great towns and cities; for generally the country is without inhabitants, except bands of robbers, which wait for their prey and devour many."<sup>2</sup> At Kilkenny and the coast towns of Waterford, Youghall, and Cork he was enabled to carry on successfully the work begun by the women Friends. At Bandon, a large market town, he was hospitably entertained by one Edward Cook, a man of ability and influence, "Cornet of Horse in Oliver Cromwell's own troop, and Receiver to the Lord Cork."<sup>3</sup>

They went together to the church, where Francis preached and where Edward Cook invited the people to a meeting at his house that evening. Many attended this meeting and there embraced the principles of Friends.<sup>1</sup>

At Kinsale, a great port town, Major Stoding, Governor of the fort, was kindly disposed, and numbers of the soldiers became Friends. Many meetings were held in the garrison, which so enraged the "priests" that they informed against the officers and sent to Dublin for a warrant ordering the arrest of the Quakers. The Governors of Kinsale and Cork, however, having a friendly regard for Francis Howgill, did not enforce the warrant and allowed him to go on with his work unmolested. For his encouragement of the Quakers Major Stoding, shortly afterward, was dismissed from the "commission of the peace" at Kinsale. Colonel Phayre, Governor of Cork, seems to have been especially impressed with Friends, for in a letter from Cork, Francis Howgill writes to Margaret Fell at Swarthmore Hall,

<sup>1</sup> Among those convinced at Bandon at this time was Thomas Wight (1640-1724), son of Rice Wight, minister of the town of Bandon, and grandson of Thomas Wight, also minister of the same town and originally from Guilford, in Surrey, England. Thomas Wight is to be remembered as the first historian of the Irish Friends, having compiled an excellent contemporary "History of the Rise and Progress of the People called Quakers in Ireland," from 1653 to 1700. His manuscript was revised and carried down to the year 1751 by Dr. John Rutty (1699-1775), a Friend of Dublin, and a native of England, who published the work in Dublin, in 1751. (See Rutty in Bibliography.)

the headquarters, as it were, of the Society in England, that the Colonel has said, “More is done by the Quakers, than all the priests in the country have done [in] a hundred years.” Francis then says of his work: “Now many are moved daily to bear witness against the priests: the work of the Lord is great,—glory to Him forever!”<sup>1</sup>

preaching through the towns to Cork, where he met Francis again after a separation of several months. In company with James Sickelmore and Edward Cook, they went to Limerick and attempted to speak in the Church, but were rudely driven out of the city. As they rode through the streets, Edward Burrough preached on horseback, and outside the city gates, he and his companions had an opportunity to speak to the great multitude that followed them. Richard Pearce, an apothecary, and others of the city, became Friends as a result of this preaching, and a flourishing meeting was established. The ministers now returned to Cork, but the "priests" had been so active during their absence that both Howgill and Burrough were arrested and carried to Dublin by order of Henry Cromwell. As they were conducted on the way, the guard of soldiers were kind to them and allowed them to hold meetings in the towns through which they passed. After seven months of active work they were finally banished from Ireland and compelled to embark at Dublin for England.

Blaugden
Arrives*

One of the most intrepid of these early ministers was Barbara Blaugden, who made two effective visits through the southern part of the island. After an adventurous voyage from England, she landed at Dublin on the very day that witnessed the enforced departure of Howgill and Burrough. Nothing daunted she gained admittance to Henry Cromwell, the Lord Lieutenant, and warned him of the consequences of his cruelty to her people. Her message seems to have had some effect, for Captain Rich, at whose house she was staying, told her that the Lord Lieutenant "was so troubled and so melancholy that he could not go to Bowles, nor to any other Pastime."<sup>1</sup>

The stream of Quaker missionaries continued to pour into the country, so that nearly two hundred had come over before 1700. Dr. Ritty shows in his table, that during the first century of the history of the Society some five hundred and fifty men and women ministers visited Ireland.<sup>2</sup>

With the Restoration of Charles II., in 1660, Friends everywhere looked for a respite from their persecutions, but the rising of the Fifth Monarchy men under Venner gave the clergy a pretext for checking the growing power of Quakerism, and an act was passed forbidding the Quakers to meet in public worship.<sup>3</sup> As a result, persecutions among the Friends in Ireland were carried on with greater rigor than under the Commonwealth. William Edmundson says: "Now was King Charles coming in, and these Nations were in Heaps of Confusion, and ran upon us as if they would have destroyed us at once, or swallow'd us up; breaking up our Meetings, taking us up in Highways, and haling us to Prison; so that it was a general Imprisonment of Friends in this Nation." <sup>1</sup>

At this time Edmundson was a prisoner at Marysborough, but obtained a short leave of absence from the sheriff, went to Dublin and petitioned the Earls of Orrery and Mountrath and Sir Morris Eustace, Chancellor, that Friends in the nation might be set at liberty. He says: "I was close exercised in that Service, but the Lord's Power gave me Courage, opened my Way to proceed and gave Success to it; so that I got an Order for Friends' Liberty throughout the Nation, though they were full of Business; and Abundance of People of all Sorts attending." On this as on many similar occasions, he seems to have exerted a strong and subtle influence over those in power, and we may well believe that men were drawn to him by his attractive qualities of mind and person, as well as by his strong and noble character.

The persecutions, however, did not end here. The Church of England being now thoroughly established, the clergy bent all their efforts upon making the dissenters conform,<sup>2</sup> and Friends continued to suffer for their non-conformity until the Act of Toleration for Protestant Dissenters was passed in 1689, in the reign of William and Mary. During the reign of Charles II., 1660–1685, according to Rutty's table, seven hundred and eighty Friends suffered imprisonment.<sup>1</sup>

It was during this time of persecution that Thomas Loe, a gifted minister of Oxford, and at one time of Oxford University, made one of his frequent visits to Ireland, and at Cork converted to the principles of Quakerism the young cavalier, William Penn, the great founder of the Commonwealth on the Delaware.<sup>2</sup>

By 1668, the number of Friends had so greatly increased that it became necessary to adopt some form of church government, and William Edmundson, as one of the chief instruments in gathering and preserving the Society in Ireland, was a prime mover in the work of carrying out George Fox's scheme of organization in Ireland. Provincial meetings were established to be held once in six weeks, the chief business being to take care of the poor, the fatherless and the widows; to see that marriages were properly solemnized; and to watch over the moral conduct of the members. In the following year George Fox himself came over, and he and William Edmundson traveled all over the Island, establishing national half-year meetings and monthly meetings.<sup>1</sup>

Under
William III.

Great alarm was created among the English and Scotch Protestants in Ireland, by the accession of James II. and by his measures taken for the restoration of the Catholic religion. The Earl of Tyrconnel, a strict Catholic, was sent over as commander of the forces, and immediately proceeded to disarm the Protestant militia and to place Irish Catholics in the Army. This innovation, and later Tyrconnel's appointment as Lord Lieutenant, together with the efforts of the Irish to recover their confiscated estates, and the raids of the Rapparees, caused the wildest alarm among the Protestants, and they trembled both for their estates and for their lives. Rumors of a general massacre, like that of the Rebellion of 1641, flew through the land, and many of the terrified people left the country or hastened to the fortified towns, such as Enniskillen and Londonderry, where at the latter place they bravely withstood the siege of James in 1689.<sup>2</sup>

In the war that followed, the Friends generally kept their places and maintained their meetings.<sup>3</sup> In some districts, however, the danger was so great that members moved into the towns until the conflict was over.<sup>4</sup> Those who remained were continually being robbed by the Irish soldiers and Rapparees. In this, as in many other trials which came upon him, William Edmundson stood forth as the sturdy champion of his sect, and on many occasions went to Dublin to solicit the government in behalf of Friends. Tyrconnel heard him with attention, and measures were taken with a view of protecting the Quakers from robbery; but such was the state of anarchy prevailing that no effectual remedy could be applied. As the Friends were known to be an inoffensive people, opposed to war, the Catholics in authority were disposed to shield them from the severities inflicted upon other Protestants. But, notwithstanding all the endeavors made, the Friends were exposed to great perils. Many of the lost all of their personal property, and some were even stripped of their clothing and had their homes burned to the ground.<sup>1</sup> In 1692, after the war was over, it was estimated that the material loss of Friends throughout the nation amounted to £100,000.

After the landing of William and Mary in England, James had fled to France, and now, with the hope of recovering his lost kingdom, he was come again with an army into Ireland. During the fierce struggle that ensued, the Provinces of Leinster and Munster were ravaged by advancing or retreating armies, and many Friends who continued in their homes were plundered and subjected to gross maltreatment ; but not being classed as belligerents, their lives were generally spared. They were sometimes enabled, indeed, to perform kind offices for both sides, at one time pleading for their Irish neighbors, when the English had obtained the ascendancy, and at another sheltering the Protestant English when the Irish had gained a temporary advantage.

After Battle of the Boyne

After the defeat of James at the Boyne, in 1690, his Irish troops disbanded, and roamed through the country, carrying terror and devastation into the Protestant districts.<sup>1</sup> William Edmundson, now living at Rosinallis, was one of the greatest sufferers in this war. In reading his quaint and graphic account of his sufferings and experiences in these unhappy times one is filled with admiration for his courage and heroism. At one time he is at Dublin telling James of the calamities which have fallen upon the Protestants, and at another he risks his life in pleading with infuriated English soldiers for his Irish neighbors. He relates that after the Battle of Boyne, the Rapparees burst into his house one night, abused his wife with such violence and cruelty that she died soon after, and ruthlessly seized him and his two sons and carried them away with intent to hang them. This crime, undoubtedly, would have been committed if an Irish officer had not opportunely interfered.

In spite of all the trials and hardships so nobly endured in his foster land, and in spite of long and wearisome journeys in Europe and America, William Edmundson lived to the ripe old age of eighty-five, and on the Thirty-first day of the Sixth Month (O. After William III. had brought the nation into a peaceful condition, the Friends continued to increase in numbers, and during the next half century many new meetings were formed. At the present day, although the Society has greatly decreased, there still remains a considerable number of meetings, many of which are well attended.

CHAPTER IV.

RACIAL ORIGIN OF THE FRIENDS OF IRELAND

THE converts to Quakerism in Ireland were drawn almost exclusively from the English and Scotch Protestants. Most of them had previously been in membership with other non-conforming denominations, such as the Baptists, Independents, and Presbyterians, although some few had been members of the Church of England.

The principles of Friends in early days found little acceptance with the Celtic-Irish, nor has the Society acquired much increase in after years from that source. For, aside from race differences and antipathies, arising from the English plantation system, the Irish almost to a man were Catholics, and as Beck says: "It seems to need the passing through the various stages of non-conformity, before a Catholic can appreciate the doctrinal views of Friends."<sup>1</sup> During the early period, at least prior to 1700, I have been unable to find in Stockdale, Rutty, Besse, Sewell, Leadbeater, or in the journals of ministers, any instance of a Celtic-Irishman becoming a Quaker. Of Besse's two hundred and ninety-one names of representative

Quaker sufferers in Ireland, from the rise of the Society to 1689, there is not one Mc or other Celtic prefix ; all are old English names.<sup>1</sup>

Although the statement of Joyce<sup>2</sup> and Prendergast, that the Cromwellian settlers were absorbed by the Irish in two generations, may be true to a large extent of the other Protestants, it is, I believe, by reason of the strict church discipline which obtained, but slightly true of those who remained in the Society of Friends.<sup>3</sup> Apropos of this, John Grubb Richardson (1813-1890), a prominent and representative Irish Friend, says of his family : "We were members of the Society of Friends, our forefathers having been convinced by the preaching of William Edmundson in 1660. All our ancestors came from the north of England in Cromwell's army, and received grants of land from him to settle in Ireland."<sup>4</sup>

In the migration of the Irish Quakers to Pennsylvania, there were represented only five surnames with the Celtic prefix Mc — McCool,

<sup>3</sup> Rutty states in his table of meetings in Ireland (Rise and Progress, page 350) that between 1714 and 1739 a small meeting was established at Connaught, the province to which the Irish were expelled in the Cromwellian Settlement, and it is possible that the members of this meeting were of Celtic-Irish stock, but unfortunately I have been unable to find any data bearing on the point. I am able to state, however, from my examination of Friends' records of Pennsylvania, that no members from this meeting came over during the emigration period, 1682-1750.

McMollin, or McMillan, McClum, McNabb, and McNice; but, as this prefix is common to both Irish and Scotch surnames, it is unsafe to use it as a means of distinction. The McCool and McMollin families were from Ballinacree Meeting, near Ballymoney, County Antrim, in the midst of the "Scotch country," hence if any distinction can be made, it lies in favor of the Scotch or Scotch-Irish descent. The McClums were from County West Meath; the McNabbs from County Meath, and the McNices from County Cavan, localities in which the Scotch had also settled, although not in such great numbers as in the more northern counties. The only Quaker family with a distinctively Irish name, that came over to Pennsylvania, was that of the O'Mooneys, who came from Ballinacree Meeting, and settled at Sadsbury, Lancaster County.

In a letter of 1898,<sup>1</sup> John Bewley Beale, an Irish Friend, writes: "There were additions from the pure Irish stock to the Society, but much fewer in number than from the Protestant settlers and their descendants. We have some Irish names amongst us still, such as Murphy, Macquillan, etc." This view is confirmed still further by Joseph Radley, until recently Headmaster of Ulster Provincial School, the Friends' School, at Prospect Hill, Lisburn, Ireland. He writes (May

7, 1898): "The Quaker character found little on which it could be grafted in the Celtic population. This was almost entirely Roman Catholic. Consequently, but few names of the old Celtic families occur now amongst Friends. A few O'Heils, McQuillans, etc., still are to found." During my travels in Ireland, in the summer of 1900, I heard similar views expressed by many other Irish Friends, notable among whom were John Pim, J.P., of Belfast, for many years a student of the history of Irish Friends, and Jane M. Richardson, of Moyallon House, Gilford, County Down, the author of Six Generation of Friends in Ireland. My own conclusion is, that the increase from the Celtic or Hibernian stock was very slight indeed, and that such converts as were made were obtained after the great migration to Pennsylvania.

The Scotch Presbyterians had come over in great numbers to the north of Ireland during the spread of the plantation system, and at the time of the Cromwellian Settlement constituted the largest part of the Protestant population of Antrim, Down, and some other counties of Ulster. The early traveling preachers of the Friends report in their journals that the meetings in the "Scotch country" were well attended by the Presbyterians. There is no evidence, however, that any considerable number became Friends. J. Bewley Beale says in his letter: "There were also some Ulster Scotch amongst the early Friends, but I think the proportion was also small."

Quite early, meetings were established at Coleraine, Ballynacree, Lisburn and other places in Antrim, but they were not as large as other meetings without the pale of the Scotch. Thomas Story,<sup>1</sup> in his account of a religious visit to Ireland in 1716, relates that at Grange in Antrim great numbers of the Presbyterians came to hear him, and that one of their ministers, Moses Cleck, educated at Glasgow, Scotland, had been convinced of the Quaker principles. Prominent among Scotch-Irish Quakers were John Chambers, a minister of Dublin; Alexander Seaton, of Hillsborough, County Down; Archibald Bell, of Shankill, County Armagh; Patrick Logan, of Lurgan, County Armagh, and his son, James Logan, later one of the most distinguished statesmen of colonial Pennsylvania.

Anglo-Irish

We may safely say that the great majority of the Quakers in Ireland were English, or of English descent. Long after the Cromwellian Settlement, and well into the first half of the eighteenth century, Quaker colonists continued to come from England. Some of these were members when they arrived, and others became members after their settlement.<sup>2</sup> The certificates of removal which the Irish Friends brought to Pennsylvania show that many of the emigrants were natives of England and had lived but a few years in Ireland. It is especially interesting to note that so many of these early Irish Friends had been officers and soldiers in Cromwell's "New Model," and that the same splendid zeal and courage shown at Naseby and Worcester, but now directed in a peaceful cause, contributed so largely to the up-building of Quakerism in the nation.

PART II.

CHAPTER I.

CAUSES OF EMIGRATION

THERE was but little foreign immigration of Introductory Quakers into the colonies of New England, New York, and the South during any period. The Society in these provinces was composed, for the most part, of converts and the descendants of converts made during the period from 1656 to the end of the seventeenth century by that zealous band of Old World missionaries under the stirring and effective leadership of such men as George Fox, John Burnyeat, and William Edmundson. In the distinctively Quaker colonies of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, however, the Society was made up almost entirely of immigrant Friends from Europe attracted by the superior opportunities for settlement.

While it is true that the majority of the Quaker settlers of Pennsylvania came from England and Wales, it is also true that a considerable body of them were immigrants from Ireland, who took a prominent and useful place in the affairs of the Province and rendered an important contribution to the making of the State. Historians hitherto have overlooked this feature of the early immigration, but it is one that deserves in the fullest measure their close attention and study.

The Irish Friends removed to several of the American colonies. At an early date they were on the eastern shore of Maryland. In 1682 a shipload of them came to West Jersey.<sup>1</sup> They are also known to have gone to the Quaker settlements in the Carolinas,<sup>2</sup> and Virginia.<sup>3</sup> But by far the greatest and most important migration was that to Pennsylvania during the period 1682 to 1750, and it is this movement that we are now to consider.

Causes

Although the causes which led to the migration are well known, it seems fitting, if only for the sake of completeness, to enumerate and briefly discuss them. The religious persecutions were powerful factors in the movement, and during its first stages gave to it its greatest impetus. Later, however, <sup>1</sup> These Friends were from in and near Dublin, and having purchased an interest in West Jersey, they chartered the ship of the adventurous Quaker captain, Thomas Lurting, and sailed from Dublin the latter part of September, 1682. In about eight weeks they arrived at Elsinburg, near Salem, New Jersey, and made a settlement in what later was called the Irish Tenth, in Camden County. Here was established Newton Meeting, first held at the house of Mark Newby, one of this company. A full history of the Irish Friends of the Newton settlement is given in Judge John Clement's Sketches of the First Emigrant Settlers in Newton Township, Old Gloucester County, West New Jersey. especially after the passing of the Act of Toleration of 1689, by which the persecutions were somewhat relaxed, it would appear that the economic restrictions had a greater influence. Then, too, along with these causes went that old Teutonic love for adventure, that same historic force which, to a great extent, inspired the Völkerwanderung—the Wandering of the Peoples—of the Early Middle Ages, which led the Angles and Saxons to Britain, which took the Franks and later the Normans into Gaul, and which led to the discovery and exploration of the New World.

The causes are given herewith under the two main heads: I. Religious Causes; II. Economic Causes.

I. RELIGIOUS CAUSES

The Acts of Uniformity passed at the time of the Restoration of Charles II. continued to be enforced with varying severity far into the eighteenth century. All the non-conformists suffered more or less by them, but especially the Friends and Scotch-Irish Presbyterians. These sufferings were relieved in a large degree, in 1719, by the passing of an act which allowed greater freedom of worship.<sup>1</sup>

Religious Causes

*Acts of

The Friends were continually persecuted for maintaining their testimony against tithes. Says Rutty (p. 364), "The Priests were commonly the Instruments of stirring up the Magistrates, and even the Rabble against them; and . . . they very frequently had their goods spoiled and taken away; sometimes to three, six, ten, or twenty times the value, and were kept Prisoners several years, and sometimes unto Death." During the four years of King James II. (1685-1689) the Friends were deprived of £1,583 worth of goods, and twelve suffered imprisonment. In the thirteen years of William and Mary (1689-1702), their "sufferings" included £13,724 and thirty-three prisoners; in the twelve years of Queen Anne (1702-1714) £16,199 and thirteen prisoners; in the thirteen years of George I. (1714-1727) £22,513 and twenty-seven prisoners; and in the first twenty-seven years of George II. (1727-1760) until 1750, about £38,726 and six prisoners. During the whole period from 1685 to 1750 the "sufferings" amounted to £92,745 and ninety-one prisoners.<sup>1</sup>

Oaths

The Friends were constantly inconvenienced and defrauded in business on account of their refusal to take the oath in a court of justice; "For instance," says Ruddy, "in the county of Wexford, Thomas Holme [who afterward became Surveyor-

General of Pennsylvania] having about £200 due to him from one Captain Thornhill, for

And in Dublin, James Fade having about £40 due to him from one Ezekiel Webb, was by the said Webb, subpœna'd into Chancery and because the Friend could not give in his answer upon Oath, he not only lost the said debt, but was constrained to give about £70 to get clear of the Debtor."<sup>1</sup> This form of persecution continued until 1719, when Parliament passed an Act which allowed Friends to substitute affirmation for the oath.<sup>2</sup>

The Friends often endured the greatest cruelties and depredations at the hands of the rebellious Irish. In 1719 one of the Irish gentry, James Cotter, was hanged for an outrage committed against a Quaker family of Cork. Upon this, "All Cork and all the South of Ireland burst into a wail of rage, and the Friends were marked for retribution. Placards covered the walls. . . . No quaker could show in the streets. . . . The passion spread to Limerick, to Tipperary and at last over all Catholic Ireland. Quakers' meeting-houses were sacked and burnt. Quakers travelling about the country were waylaid and beaten."<sup>3</sup> The rage against the Friends continued, until in 1725 it culminated in the most inhuman and bar-

II. ECONOMIC CAUSES

Causes

Cromwell had placed English and Irish commerce on an equal footing ; but early in the reign of Charles II. an Act was passed, with the result that all export trade from Ireland to the colonies was forbidden, as was also the import of Irish cattle into England. Dreadful distress all over Ireland followed immediately, for the people could find no market for their produce. When the cattle trade ceased, much of the land had been turned into sheep walks. A large and increasing woolen trade and manufacture now sprang up, so that it became one of the chief industries of Ireland ; whereupon the English merchants, fearful for their own trade, in 1699, succeeded in having passed an Act which forbade the export of woolen goods from Ireland, and thus ruined the wool trade of the Island. About 40,000 industrious Protestant workmen were thus thrown out of employment and reduced to poverty ; 20,000 of these emigrated to America. Many of those that remained suffered all the misery of famine. Subsequently, almost all branches of Irish industry were interfered with and suppressed by England.<sup>2</sup>

As an example of this distress, may be cited

In his certificate of removal, signed 5 Mo. 26, 1709, the Friends of Cork say, "y<sup>e</sup> sayd Samuel being a bristall [England] man came over into this Country with his wife som time after y<sup>e</sup> Wars ended to settle in Corke and follow y<sup>e</sup> Cooping trade and although he was observed to be a Laborious painful man ye world favoured him not with success. We hope and Desire it may be better in that Country where we suppose workmen of that Calling are no so plenty as in this nor materials to worke on so hard to be obtained as here."<sup>2</sup> Again, the Friends of Waterford, in a certificate, dated 2 Mo. 13, 1712, sent to Philadelphia, for William Moore, say, "A great Reson of his Removeall is for want of a good Imploy his trade being bad here."<sup>1</sup>

At times the landlords became very oppressive, High Rents raising the rents all they possibly could, regardless of what the tenants had done to make the land valuable. Much land was held on long leases, and when these expired the rates of renewal were made almost prohibitive, many tracts of land being secured by the Celtic-Irish, who were ready to give almost any price to recover possession of the soil.<sup>2</sup> The Friends of Cork, in a certificate, dated 5 Mo. 17, 1710, sent to Philadelphia for Samuel Massey, tallow chandler and soap boiler, say: "The cheife motive Represented to us for his Remove is y<sup>e</sup> want of trade to answer y<sup>e</sup> great Rents here and charges of his family w<sup>ch</sup> he hopes will be easier to him in that Country he is Industrious and Carefull, and his Conversation orderly having a wife and five children besides servants."<sup>1</sup>

Famine*

The majority of the Friends of Munster and many of those of Leinster lived in the cities and towns; but those of Ulster were largely farmers or yeomen, and were directly affected by the memorable failure of crops in the year 1729. Famine and sickness prevailed in that year throughout the whole of Ulster. In spite of aid from their brethren in England and in other provinces of Ireland, the Friends of Ulster suffered severely,<sup>2</sup> and it was evidently this calamity that caused the Pennsylvania migration to reach its highest point in this year. Crop failures seem to have been frequent in those times, as they are to-day, for in a letter that has come down to us, Mungo Bewley, a Friend of Edenderry, King's County, Ireland, writes to Israel Pemberton, merchant of Philadelphia, under date of 1 Mo. 16, 1742-3, "Some time Since there hath been a

INDUCEMENTS THAT LED THE IRISH FRIENDS TO IMMIGRATE INTO PENNSYLVANIA

William
His Colony

THE severe persecutions to which the Friends were subjected in both the Old and the New Worlds, but especially in New England, led George Fox as early as 1660, to suggest the purchase of land in America for a Quaker colony, where Friends' views and principles might be fully exemplified.<sup>1</sup> Fox's proposition was carried out with considerable success in the Quaker settlement of West Jersey, but it remained for the broad and liberal mind of William Penn to bring the idea to its fullest realization in the Province of Pennsylvania.

His Charter

William Penn (1644-1718), as we have seen in a preceding chapter, had been convinced of the principles of Quakerism in Ireland, and was now one of the most prominent and influential members of the sect. As one of the owners of West Jersey he had become directly interested in American colonization. His father, Sir William Penn, an admiral in the English navy, bequeathed to him a claim against the crown for sixteen thousand pounds. In payment of this he induced Charles II. (1681) to give him a proprietary charter for forty thousand square miles in America.

Penn immediately began the work of settling his colony of Pennsylvania. He offered to sell land at very low rates. "He proposed to establish a popular government, based on the principle of exact justice to all, red and white, regardless of religious beliefs; there was to be trial by jury; murder and treason were to be the only capital crimes; and punishment for other offences was to have reformation, not retaliation, in view. By the terms of the Charter Penn was, in conjunction with and by the consent of the free-men, to make all necessary laws."<sup>2</sup> These proposals attracted widespread attention, not only among the Friends and other persecuted sects, but among many enterprising people who wanted to better their economic condition. The stream of colonists from many countries, more especially from England, Wales, and Ireland, now set in, and Pennsylvania was rapidly settled.

The constitution drawn up by Penn provided that the proprietor was to choose the governor, but the people were to elect the council and also the members of a representative assembly. The first assembly, called by Penn soon after his arrival in 1682, sustained his idea of government. Among other important measures, laws were passed providing for the humane treatment of the Indians and for religious toleration.<sup>1</sup>

the Colony*

Under the wise and beneficent rule of Penn, the progress of Pennsylvania was rapid. The care taken to maintain friendly relations with the Indians spared the colonists from the cruel Indian warfare of New England and left them to pursue the arts of peace uninterruptedly. The fertile soil and temperate climate made agriculture the chief industry. The soil was carefully cultivated and gave rich returns, the principal crop being wheat, although there was much variety of products. There were some small manufactories, and a good export trade in grain, flour, and furs was carried on with England and the West Indies. So prosperous was Pennsylvania that it became one of the richest and most populous of the American settlements; and before the Revolution, Philadelphia, the great market of the province, became the largest town in the thirteen colonies.

With this brief account of the beginnings of Penn's province, let us turn our attention to those agencies that were directly influential in leading the Quakers to come to the "Promised Land" of Pennsylvania.

Penn's Invitation

From his first conviction William Penn had been brought prominently before the Friends of Ireland, and was often able by the use of his power and influence to relieve his fellow members from their sufferings. In 1669 he had gone to Ireland to settle some business on the Penn estates, but was so affected by the general imprisonment and persecution of Friends, that he left all private affairs and went at once to Dublin to work for their relief. At the General Half Year Meeting, held at his lodgings in the city, an account of the sufferings of the Society was drawn up in an address to the Lord Lieutenant. Penn himself carried the document to the Castle and presented it with such success that Friends in prison were soon released.<sup>1</sup> His general work for the good of the Society, his own sufferings, his writings in defense of Friends' principles, but especially his travels in the ministry through Ireland, made him well known to Irish Friends, and they had the greatest confidence in him. They were among the first to whom he opened his Pennsylvania project, for, on March 5, 1681, the very next day after his Charter was signed, he writes to his friend, Robert Turner, a Quaker of Dublin, stating that his province has been confirmed, and adds: "Thou mayest communicate my graunt to friends, and expect shortly my proposals."<sup>2</sup>

sylvania, issued by Penn and others between 1681 and 1691, were widely scattered through Ireland, and the attractive accounts gave a strong impetus to the first wave of migration. The first of these pamphlets, entitled Some Account of the Province of Pennsylvania, etc., a folio of eleven pages, printed in 1681, contained Penn's proposals for settlement and a general description of the country. Other pamphlets went further into details, telling of the rich natural resources of the colony, of improvements that had been made and were to be made, of the best kind of houses to build, of the ways and means of migration, and all details that intending colonists might wish to know.<sup>1</sup>

Activity of the Free Society of Traders

The Free Society of Traders was also influential in the first migration of the Irish Friends. This Society, consisting of over three hundred members, made a purchase of twenty thousand acres of land in Pennsylvania with the purpose of developing it.<sup>2</sup> Several of the prominent Irish Friends, as Robert Turner and Samuel Clarridge,<sup>3</sup> of Dublin, John White, of Carlow, and Dennis Rochford, at this time residing in England, were mem-

In 1683, with his daughter and seventeen indented servants,<sup>2</sup> he removed to Philadelphia, where he took a prominent part in the affairs of the colony, and no doubt by his personal influence did much to forward the migration of his countrymen, "who," as he says in one of his many letters sent back to Ireland, "sojourn in a Land of great distress, wherein I have been."<sup>3</sup>

During the period of migration there was more communication between Pennsylvania and Ireland than has been generally supposed. People were continually going back and forth, and in spite of the difficulties and slowness of travel and the dangers incident to those primitive times, many letters and messages were exchanged between the colonists and their friends in Ireland.

Ministers and Others*

From the first visits of George Fox and William Edmundson to the Delaware, before Penn received his grant, to the end of the eighteenth century, a steady stream of traveling ministers came over to the Province. These preachers, and those who had come to reside in the colony, carried favorable reports of Pennsylvania to Ireland, and no doubt did much to counteract false rumors and silence objections to migration; for in the first years of the migration many Friends took a somewhat conservative attitude toward the Pennsylvania movement and carefully examined into the reasons for removal, as is instanced by the certificate given forth by Ballyhagan Meeting, County Armagh, 1 Mo. 31, 1682, and brought over to Middleton Meeting, Bucks County, by the widow Ann Millcum and her children, who arrived in the Delaware on the ship Antelope, 10 Mo. 10, 1682.<sup>1</sup> The following is quoted from the certificate:

*Ann Millcum's
Certificate*

“The said meeting inquired of them the reason why they had a mind to such a great journey, having no man in their family except they might get a servant or servants, and having no want of things necessary for a livelihood; the said Ann Millcum replied that her daughter Jane had a great desire to go and being not willing to part with her, after such a manner, was rather willing to take her adventure with her other daughter, and so go all together, being accompanied with another daughter of hers, and her husband and children with several other neighbors also, and seeing it was her resolution to go as aforesaid," the meeting gives its consent.<sup>1</sup>

There were many friends also who thought that to emigrate was to fly from persecution and to desert a cause. That such views existed is shown by the certificate of removal brought over to Pennsylvania, in 1683, by Nicholas Newlin, a gentleman in easy circumstances,<sup>2</sup> who settled in Concord, then Chester County. The certificate is as follows:

"At the request of Nicholas Newlin we do hereby certify, that the said Nicholas Newland acquainted our mens meeting with his intention of removing himself and family out of this Nation into New Jersey or Pennsylvania in America, and we have nothing to charge against him or his family as to their conversation in the world since they frequented our meetings, but hath walked honestly among men for aught we know or can hear of by inquiry, which hath been made, but our Friends' meeting is generally dissatisfied with his removing, he being well settled with his family, and having sufficient substance for food and raiment, which all that possess godliness in Christ Jesus ought to be contented with, for we have brought nothing into this world, and we are sure to take nothing out. And he hath given us no satisfactory reason for his removing, but our godly jealousy is that his chief ground is fearfulness of sufferings here for the testimony of Jesus, or courting worldly liberty—all of which we certify from our mens' meeting at Mountmellick, 25th of 12th Mo. 1682. And we further certify that inquiry hath been made concerning the clearness of Nathaniel and John Newland, sons of said Nicholas Newland, from all entanglements of marriage, and that they are released for aught we find. The traveling ministers journeyed from meeting to meeting and from house to house among the Friends in Ireland, and in their social mingling we may well believe they did not confine their discourse to religious subjects, but when the conversation turned to Penn and his colony, an interesting topic in all Quaker households, we may be assured that these influential preachers would relate to their eager listeners accounts of their travels in America, and would give glowing accounts of that "sweet asylum" on the Delaware, where the broad and generous terms of the philanthropic founder gave opportunity for the oppressed of all nations to find a home with religious and political liberty.

But aside from the work of these traveling missionaries, the later migrations were stimulated signers are given as Tobias Bladwell [Pleadwell?] and Christopher Roper [Raper?].

I have tried to find the original certificate, intending to reproduce it in this work, but my search has been in vain. It is stated in a footnote of the Jackson Genealogy, page 118, that the copy printed in that work "was taken by J. J. Parker, of West Chester, Pa., 1 Mo. 19, 1874, from the original, which was in the possession of Nicholas Newland's granddaughter, Mary Mifflin of Hartford Co., Md., then in her 79th year"; but Gilbert Cope, of West Chester, in a letter dated 2 Mo. 17, 1901, corrects this statement. He writes: "The Jackson Genealogy is in error where it says that John J. Parker copied the original Newlin certificate in 1874, as I am satisfied he never saw it. In 1888 I made an effort to locate the old document, but without success. I have two copies from different sources and have known of others, but believe no copy has been made from the original since 1820. Amongst others I wrote to Josua Husband, Dublin, Hartford Co., Md., aged about eighty, a grandson of Mary Mifflin, and got a copy of a copy made in 1820. He obtained his copy from some one in Washington, and perhaps I should have tried to trace back on this line but did not."

by the return to Ireland, on short business trips, of those who had gone over to settle in Pennsylvania some years before. In 1688, Henry Hollingsworth, of Newark or Kennett Meeting, who had come over as a servant to Robert Turner in 1683, returned to Ireland to marry and brought back his wife. In the latter part of 1713, Benjamin Fredd, of Concord Meeting, who had arrived in the early part of the year, made a business trip back to Ireland. Amos Boaks, of the same meeting, came over in 1734 and made two visits to Ireland, one in 1735 and the other in 1736. In 1738, Chester Monthly Meeting signed a certificate for Thomas Faucett, son of Thomas Faucett, to go to Lisburn Meeting in Ireland. Many other such instances could be cited.

*Favorable

Then, too, numerous Irish Friends made the journey merely to see the country and to visit friends and relatives. John Parvin came over to Chester Meeting, in 1732, to make a short stay, and William Lightfoot, of Moate Meeting, County West Meath, in 1725, came to "visit his father [Thomas Lightfoot] and relations." After his return to Ireland,

Thomas Hutton, of Carlow, County Carlow, under date of 6 Mo. 20, 1726, writes to his sons in New Garden, that "Cousin Wm. Lightfoot tould me y<sup>t</sup> you dwelt in love."<sup>1</sup>

The number of favorable and urgent letters written by the first settlers back to Ireland were strong incentives for the Irish Friends to join their relatives and old neighbors in Pennsylvania. By the merest chance some of these letters have been preserved; but from hints and references to other letters in those extant we know that there must have been many others. In the meeting records, also, there are frequent references to letters sent in relation to the business of the meeting, and often these afforded opportunities for the exchange of personal messages. All these letters were read with the greatest interest in Ireland, and passed from house to house in a neighborhood, a custom also in Pennsylvania when letters came from the old home.

These letters afford us interesting glimpses of the migratory movement and of the social side of colonial life. A few of the first letters were printed in the descriptive pamphlets, but the first manuscript letter that has come under notice is one to William Porter in Ireland, from George Harlan,<sup>2</sup> a Friend, who had come over from

The communication relates particularly to the estate of Thomas Childs, an Irishman, who had died in New Castle County, at the house of Valentine Hollingsworth, another

The following quaint letter<sup>2</sup> was written by John Carpenter, while traveling in Ireland, to his friend and neighbor, Michael Gregg, of Chester County. Unfortunately we have but this one letter of his; had more of his letters come down to us we should, no doubt, learn as to whether he found the girls in England more to his "fancy" and not so much like "Prispaterans," and whether he finally met the "trusty Companion" for whom he seems to have been seeking.

By far the most important and comprehensive of these letters is that written by Robert Parke (1694/5-1736/7), of near Chester, to his sister Mary, wife of Thomas Valentine, of Ballybrumhill, County Carlow, and as it throws such a flood of light on all phases of our subject, I venture to insert it in full. But first, a few details about the Parke family, by way of introduction, will give a better understanding of the migration of a representative Irish Quaker family.

Thomas Parke (1660-1738), the father of Robert Parke, was a farmer and owned several tracts of land in Ballilean, Ballaghmore, and Coolisnacktah, County Carlow. On May 21, 1724, with all of his family, excepting two married daughters, he took passage at Dublin, on the ship Sizargh, of Whitehaven, Jeremiah Cowman, master, and after a rough passage of three months, on August 21st arrived in Delaware Bay. Thomas leased a property from an Irish Friend, Mary Head, near Chester, as a temporary home, but on December 2d, purchased 500 acres from another Irish Friend, Thomas Lindley, in the Great Valley of Chester County, on the west side of what is now Downingtown, where he removed and lived the remainder of his life. His son Robert was a clerk at Chester, and for some years acted as Recorder of Deeds. Robert died unmarried.<sup>1</sup> The letter is as follows:

CHESTER TOWNSHIP the— of the 10th Mo. 1725.
DEAR SISTER MARY VALENTINE,<sup>2</sup>

This goes with a Salutation of Love to thee, Brother Thomas & the children & in a word to all friends Relations & well Wishers in Generall as if named, hoping it may find you all in Good Health, as I with all our family in General are in at this present writing & has been since our arival, for we have not had a days Sickness in the family Since we came to the Country, Blessed be god for it, my father in Particular has not had his health better these ten years than since he Came here, his ancient age considered. Our Irish Acquaintance in general are well Except Tho<sup>s</sup> Lightfoot who Departed this Life at Darby in a Good old age about 4 weeks Since.

According to J. P. Parke, Robert Parke kept a journal of the passage over in 1724, and also of a voyage made back to England and Ireland, in 1727; likewise of the return voyage in 1728, when the list of passengers included sixty-three servants, of whom six were brought over by Parke himself. Unfortunately, I have been unable to locate these MS. journals, which no doubt would contain many interesting details of sea-travel during the period we have under consideration.

Thee writes in thy letter than there was a talk went back to Ireland that we were not Satisfied in coming here, which was Utterly false: now let this Suffice to Convince you. Parke's influence seems finally to have had the desired effect, for in the spring of 1728 we find Thomas and Mary Valentine presenting a certificate of removal to New Garden Monthly Meeting, in Chester County.

Hundreds of just such favorable letters and descriptions found their way to the Old World, urgently setting forth the desirability of removal to America and presenting the special inducements offered to immigrants in the Quaker Colony. These pleasant pictures of the happy conditions existing in Pennsylvania—the great and good character of the Founder, his wise and liberal laws, his cheap and fertile lands, the mild and healthful climate, the successful peace policy with the Indians which Penn adopted, and above all his religious toleration—filled the minds of the poor and persecuted of Europe with ardent longings, and made them leave behind forever kinsfolk and fatherland and risk all that was near and dear to them for the long and perilous journey to the strange land beyond the sea.

PLACES IN IRELAND WHENCE THE FRIENDS CAME

TO make some attempt at an accurate determination of the places in Ireland whence the Friends emigrated, an examination of records of all the monthly meetings in Pennsylvania has been made for all certificates of removal brought over by Irish Friends between the years 1682 and 1750. With these data as a basis, supplemented by additional facts from authentic manuscripts, county histories, genealogies, and other works, I have compiled the following statistical table showing as nearly as possible, the number of adult Friends that came over from each meeting, county, and province of Ireland, during the above-mentioned period. The meetings were not as careful to record all certificates of removal brought over during the first two decades of the colony, as they should have been; but later a faithful account was kept.

The table shows that from Ulster came 172 adult members; from Leinster 183; from Munster 42; and from places which are not specified 43. This makes a total of 440 adult persons from twenty-nine or more meetings. If, however, we count the children and the women whose names evidently have not been recorded, and likewise those persons of whose emigration we have no record, we may safely estimate that at least between 1,500 and 2,000 Irish Friends came to Pennsylvania between 1682 and 1750.

County Armagh in the Province of Ulster sent ninety-five colonists, more than any other county. Dublin Meeting sent fifty-four, more than any other meeting. Grange Meeting, in a country district near Charlemount, County Armagh, comes next with forty-one; then follows Ballynacree, an obscure county meeting near Ballymoney, County Antrim, with thirty-five. The Friends from Ulster and those from Leinster, with the exception of Dublin, were almost wholly from the country districts. Some few were tradespeople, but the majority were yeomen or farmers, and when they came to Pennsylvania, they bought farms and engaged in agriculture. The Quaker colonists from Munster, on the other hand, were nearly all tradesmen from the cities and towns. They, with the emigrants from Dublin, settled for the most part in Philadelphia.

CHAPTER IV.

WAVES OF MIGRATION

THE migration may be considered in three waves. The first wave, beginning in 1682 and continuing to 1710, was caused largely by the severe religious persecutions carried on against the Friends before the Act of Toleration of 1683 was passed. The wave was the heaviest in 1682 and 1683, thirty-two adult colonists coming over in these two years. After this, the wars of James and William coming on, there was little migration until 1708. From 1710 the stream continued to flow steadily, reaching the highest point of the whole migration in the great famine year of 1729, when sixty-four adults came over. After 1710, the economic causes of migration were probably more potent than the religious.

First Wave
1682-1710

Second Wave
1710-1730

The third wave reached its highest point in 1736, when thirty-three adult settlers arrived. From 1741, the movement declined, and after 1750 very few Friends came over to settle.

Third Wave

CHAPTER V.

WAYS AND MEANS OF MIGRATION

The
of Removal

IN preparing to emigrate the Friends usually gave at least a month's notice to the meeting to which they belonged, of their intended departure, requesting that a certificate of removal, certifying to their membership in the Society, be given them to take into the new land. If, after due inquiry by a committee appointed for the purpose, the applicants were found to be in good standing in the Society and in the neighborhood in which they lived, the document was drawn up and signed by members of meeting in due time for the day of departure. In many cases, however the emigrants waited until after their arrival in Pennsylvania before writing to Ireland for the certificate. The following extract from the minutes of the Preparative Meeting at Grange, near Charlemount, Ireland, shows the mode of procedure in the preparation of the certificates :

“Att a men's meeting held y<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>d</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> 4th month [1736] Joshua March [Marsh] having an Intention to transport himself & family to America & desires from us a certificate therefore Jacob Marshill James Pillar is desired to

The principal ports whence the Irish emigrants embarked for Pennsylvania were Belfast, Dublin, Cork, and Waterford. Frequently vessels were sailing directly from the Irish ports, but more often passage was taken in vessels which had sailed from Whitehaven, Liverpool, or Bristol, in England, and which touched at the Irish ports for passengers and cargo.<sup>1</sup> Philadelphia was the principal port of entry, but many settlers landed at New Castle, on the Delaware, and some few at points in Maryland and Virginia.

Places of Embarking and Landing

At times obstructions were placed in the way of Irish emigrants, as appears from the following letter written to Proprietor Penn. in 1763, by a sea captain at Dublin: <sup>2</sup>

Obstructions to Emigration

<sup>1</sup> Sometimes vessels sailing from English ports, bound for America, were driven into Irish ports by contrary winds, as stated in certificate of removal dated 6 Mo. 6, 1709, brought over from Cork to Philadelphia by Martha Griffiths, "whose Husband of Late being settled at Kingstown in Jaimaca and hath wrote to his wife to com over to him and shee being willing to goe by An oportunity of Shiping that put into this Harbour by Contrary winds bound to Jaimaca."

<sup>2</sup> The original, which is in the Penn MSS. of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and which is printed in the Penna. Mag., XXI., 485-7, is addressed: "To Sr Penn, Knight Proprietor of Pensilvania now in London," and is endorsed, "Letter from an Irish Capt<sup>o</sup>. about Ships being stop'd going to Pensilva."

Voyage

The voyage was a long and trying one, especially so when attended by rough weather. The length of the passage varied all the way from six weeks to three months. Vessels were often driven far out of the course by contrary winds and carried as far south as the West Indies. Dangerous diseases, such as small-pox, were of frequent occurrence, and many passengers died at sea. During the French Wars, vessels were often attacked and the passengers imprisoned or subjected to loss of property and to harsh treatment. As an instance of this, may be cited the case of Samuel Massey and family who sailed from Cork in 1710, intending for Philadelphia, but the vessel was seized by the French and they were carried off to the Island of Antigua in the West Indies.<sup>1</sup> Finally, after much suffering and hardship, they reached Philadelphia, but so impoverished that they were unable to pay for their passage from Antigua, and Philadelphia Monthly Meeting had to assist them to the extent of thirty pounds. The French had taken even their certificate of removal, and Massey had to request the meeting in Cork to send a duplicate certificate.<sup>2</sup>

In 1728, Robert Parke, while on the return voyage from a business journey to England and Ireland, notes in his diary<sup>3</sup> that there were a number of cases of small-pox aboard, several persons dying with it. Under date of June 11, 1728, he says: "This day one Margaret Darlington took the small pox and three of her children being down in it. Our true course is judged to be south." It seems that even in those days the sailors were ready to exact tribute from the unwary landsman. On June 14th, Parke writes: "This day Samuel Ask and I paid our observing muggs on the fore staff." It is inferred from this that the sailors demanded a mug of grog from any one who took an observation of the sun by means of the "fore staff" or "cross-staff," the predecessor of the sextant. Another curious incident of the voyage is thus quaintly recorded in the diary, as of July 3:

"We also some years ago Gave he[r] a certificate to the same purpose which with her Daughter was taken by the french and mis-carried."

"At 12 last night we seen a light right a starn which some caled the half way house and said, 'There lived one Peg Trotter.' Then all hands were called upon deck to se the said house and if possible to purchase some buttermilk for the passengers. It caused great rejoicing among all hands fore and aft. It contained a light upwards of one hour and half. The above light we put out on purpose to encourage the passengers, it being the imitation of y<sup>e</sup> half way house. It was a pitched barrel fixed in a large tub."

A Favorite
Vessel

One of the favorite vessels with the emigrants was the Sizargh of Whitehaven, Jeremiah Cowman, master. The Parkes, Jacksons, and many other Irish Friends, settlers in Chester County, came over on her. Robert Parke says in his letter of 1725: "Be sure you come with Capt. Cowman & you will be well used for he is an honest man and has Civell Saylor as any that Cross the Seas, which I know by Experience, the Ship has been weather bound Since before Christmas by reason of frost & Ice that floats about in the River & the Saylor being at a Loose End Came down to Chester to See us."

The following advertisement of this vessel appeared in the American Weekly Mercury<sup>1</sup> a newspaper printed at Philadelphia, September 2, 1731:

"For BRISTOL directly.

THE SHIP Sizargh, Nathan Cowman Master she being almost Loaded, and intends to Sail in Ten Days for the above Port, if any Persons have a mind to take Passage on Board the said Ship they may apply to said Master on Board where they may agree on reasonable Terms and be kindly used."

The meetings in Pennsylvania, and particularly Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, extended a paternal care over immigrant Friends, advising them as to settlement and frequently rendering needed financial assistance, especially in the payment of passage money, as in the case of Samuel Massey, just referred to. As early as 1685, Philadelphia Monthly Meeting took action in the matter, as appears by the following extracts from the Minutes:

9 Mo. 2, 1685.—“It being taken notice of by several friends of this meeting, that this meeting is greatly burthened and oppressed by the increase of the poor, more than any other place in the province by reason of people’s general landing here, the meeting appoints Edward Luffe to mention the same at the Quarterly meeting for their conversation & advise for assistance.”

11 Mo. 4, 1685.—“The testimony of advice to friends from Frances Taylor before she deceased, was read and ordered to be Recorded, and as to that part of her advise for counselling such as come over from England, at their first arrival, what course to take, to manage what they bring and also relating to their settlement,” a committee of thirteen is appointed “to Enquire as Ships come in, and as occasion presents Give account to the monthly and Quarterly meeting.”

At Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, 8 Mo. 25, 1711, “The widow of Mark Carlton applies herself to this meeting for advice in relation to her affairs, being lately come from Ireland. In order, therefore, Anthony Morris and Richard Hill are desired to assist her with the best advice they are capable of.” And, 7 Mo. 24, 1736, “A Certificate from the Mens Meeting at Coote Hill in Ireland dated the 21st Second Month 1736 on behalf of Isaac [Isaiah] McNiece who intends to settle in this City was read and well received, the Meeting being apprised that he labours under some Difficulty to raise Money to pay his passage Consent to lend four Pounds which Sum John Jones is directed to let him have and take his Obligation payable in twelve Months."

Many of the Irish Friends who came to Pennsylvania were young men just starting out in the world, and it was quite common for them to bring with them letters of introduction from well-known Friends in Ireland to prominent Friends in Pennsylvania, requesting assistance for the young immigrants in securing business positions. A letter of this character is preserved among the Pemberton Papers of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. John Barclay writes from Dublin, June 17, 1743, to Israel Pemberton, of Philadelphia :

"I send this by Thos : Henderson 3d Son to our late Friend Patt<sup>k</sup> Henderson<sup>1</sup> who left a great Family of Children behind & this Young Man inclined to go to your Country, he has been of a Sober Conversation so far as I know of, the Ship going away Sooner than his Mother & he expected, they did not ask for a Certificate from Mountmelick Meeting in time, but I believe there will be one Sent after him  $\text{¶}$  next Ship. He has no great stock I believe to trade with therefore I should think it would be advisable to get him into Some Friends Counting house."

*Emigrants Assisted by
Ireland*

The meetings in Ireland also gave assistance to their needy emigrant members. An instance of this is found in the Minutes of the Preparative Meeting of Grange, near Charlemount. At the meeting 2 Mo. 3, 1741, "Patrick Holm & his wife also Hugh Kenedy & his family having Laid before our meeting their Intention of Removing to America, they being poor friends & in want of help therefore this meeting agrees that William Delap doe Lay out y<sup>e</sup> Sum of fiveteen pounds Ster: to help to pay their fraughts and other necessaries for y<sup>e</sup> Journay untill he be paid y<sup>e</sup> Same out of y<sup>e</sup> Interest Left to poor friends of this meeting also John Whitsit James Pillar William delap Thos Greer & Benj<sup>n</sup> Marshill are Desired to Draw Suitable Certificates for ye S<sup>d</sup> Hugh Kenedy and for Jacob Hinshaw & his wife who Intends y<sup>e</sup> Same Journy."

The Cost of Passage

The cost of passage varied somewhat according to the time, but was, as Robert Parke states in his letter, about £9. Some of the ways of paying the expense of the sea voyage are suggested by Parke. He says: "I desire thee may tell my old friend Samuel Thornton . . . to Come here for both his & his wife's trade are Very good here, the best way for him to do is to pay what money he Can Conveniently Spare at that Side & Engage himself to Pay the rest at this Side & when he Comes here if he Can get no friend to lay down the money for him when it Comes to the worst, he may hire out 2 or 3 Children & wod have him Cloath his family as well as his Small Ability will allow, thee may tell him what things are proper to bring with him both for his Sea Store & for his use in this Country. I wod have him Procure 3 or 4 Lusty Servants & Agree to pay their passage at this Side he might sell 2 & pay the others passage with the money."

It was a frequent occurrence for poor emigrants to sell themselves into temporary servitude, usually for a term of four years, in order to defray the cost of their transportation to Pennsylvania. On engaging passage the emigrants made an agreement or indenture with the shipmaster that they were to be sold after their arrival, and were known on this account as indented servants or redemptioners. It is evident from certificates of removal and other manuscripts that many Friends, particularly those from Ireland, arrived in this manner.<sup>1</sup> The redemptioners could not be sold out of the Province without their consent freely given in open court or before a justice of the peace. At the end of their service, if their behavior merited it, they received a suit of clothes, a set of tools of the occupation in which they were engaged,<sup>2</sup> and frequently a sum of money, and those who had come over with first purchasers were allowed by Penn to take up fifty acres of land at a rent of one half-penny an acre per annum.<sup>3</sup>

Many of the Irish Friends brought over indented servants and disposed of them to advantage in the colony, where there was a great demand for laborers. William Pim writes in 1732, from Chester County, Pennsylvania, to his uncles in Ireland, that he had lost a servant, "Jo: Gavin, by the small-pox," and adds, "I am in expectation of Ja: Nicholson in a little time, ¶ whom I expect an acct from Ireland & if he dont bring me a servant or servants I shall be in great want, for I am soe now. I hired an Indifferent hand lately at Husbandry & it cost me 36<sup>s</sup> for 4 weeks (and diet)."<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Mungo Bewley, a minister, who made a religious visit to Pennsylvania in 1732, in writing from Edenderry, Ireland, to Israel Pemberton, of Philadelphia, under date 1 Mo. 16, 1742-3, says: "I now Send these lines by the Hands of Samuel & Joshua Fayle the sons of a Poor Friend belonging to our Meeting who is for transporting themselves into your Country as Servants as also a Certificate from our mens meeting recommending of them." The Fayles were probably grandsons of William Edmundson.

When Robert Parke returned from his business trip to Ireland, in 1728, he brought with him six servants, there being sixty-seven others on board the vessel.

Among the earliest and most prominent of the Irish Friends to bring in servants was Robert Turner, who arrived at Philadelphia in 1683, with his family and a cargo of seventeen redemptioners. Fortunately, a list of these, with their time of service and other interesting particulars, has been preserved and is given herewith : <sup>1</sup>

Owing to harsh treatment and to dissatisfaction with their condition of servitude, the redemptioners were continually running away, and much of the business of the provincial courts consisted in hearing the complaints of masters and servants. The colonial newspapers are filled with advertisements of rewards offered for the return of bond servants, such as the following<sup>1</sup> by James Logan, the most eminent of the Irish Quakers in Pennsylvania :

“RUN away from James Logan's Plantation near German Town the 28th Instant, an Irish Servant Lad, named Patrick Boyd, aged about 17 or 18 years, with streight dark Hair, a freckled Face and a smooth Tongue, cloathed with a double-Breasted Pee-Jacket, a brownish Kersey Coat, a Pair of Leather Briches, and a good Felt Hat ; but he had other Cloaths with him. Also a fine short Fowling Piece of a Carbine Length, or less. He went in Company with one Miles MacWard. Whoever takes and secures him shall be well rewarded for their Trouble.”

PART III.

CHAPTER I.

PLACES OF SETTLEMENT

AS the population of the Province increased by birth and immigration, the richest lands of the old settlements along the Delaware were purchased and placed under cultivation, with a resultant rise in value ; and the later comers, if unable to purchase the best lands, or if not satisfied with the less desirable lands, had to seek out fertile plantations in the forest wilds beyond the pale of the settlements. The latter course was usually pursued by the greater part of the later immigrants, excepting those who settled in the towns ; for to a large extent these people had but small means with which to establish themselves in the new country.

Although some few Irish Friends came over during the first decade of the Colony and secured good lands in the old settlements, the greater part of them arrived later, after the best lands had been seated, and having little other capital than strong arms and brave hearts, the farming element in particular were obliged to leave behind the cultivated districts and push into the wilderness to fell the forests and clear the land for the upbuilding of the frontier homes.

Distribution of the Irish Friends

The table given herewith shows that fully ninety per cent. of the Irish Friends presented their certificates of removal to Philadelphia Monthly Meeting and to the monthly meetings of Chester County, then including Delaware County. Chester County heads the list with nearly sixty-five per cent. of the total number, or two hundred and eighty-three adults, eighty-two of these being received at monthly meetings in what is now Delaware County. Philadelphia follows with twenty-six per cent. of the whole, or one hundred and seventeen adults. After Philadelphia Monthly Meeting comes New Garden, with one hundred adults; then Kennett, formerly Newark, with eighty-two; and Chester, with sixty-three.

A large number of the Irish Friends remained within the limits of the monthly meetings to which they brought their certificates, but many of them made only a temporary home until a more suitable location could be found. The tradespeople, who were chiefly from Dublin, Cork, Waterford, Limerick, and Wexford, naturally settled in Philadelphia, where conditions seemed most favorable for their occupations and for their former mode of life. On the other hand, the farmers, or yeomen, who came largely from the country districts of Ulster and Leinster, and who constituted the greatest part of the migration, mostly sought out farms away from the towns.

THOMAS FAIRMAN'S MANSION AND PENN TREATY ELM

BANK MEETING HOUSE, PHILADELPHIA, 1685-1789

Philadelphia, as the metropolis of the new Province, became better known in the Old World than any other part of Pennsylvania, and a large proportion of the steady stream of Quaker colonists which poured into the country made this city its objective point; and of the nineteen monthly meetings established in Pennsylvania prior to 1750, as the writer's investigations have shown, Philadelphia Monthly Meeting easily ranked first as to the number of certificates of removal received. Philadelphia

The first Quaker settlers on the west side of the Delaware, within the present limits of Philadelphia, attended business meetings of the Society at Burlington, in New Jersey, but as their numbers increased they established a meeting of their own early in the year 1682, at Thomas Fairman's house at Shackamaxon, now Kensington, where in the autumn of the same year William Penn is reputed to have made his Great Treaty with the Indians. *First Meeting
maxon* Later in this memorable year a meeting was founded in the city proper, and a temporary house of worship called "the boarded meeting-house" was erected. This structure, it is supposed, was located on Front above Arch Street, where afterwards the Bank Meeting House was built, in 1685.

The Bank Meeting House was intended for First-day afternoon meetings, and the Center *Bank Meet-

Square Meeting House, built in 1685-86, where the City Hall now stands, for the more important First-day morning and business meetings; but as the Center Square was in the midst of the forest, far from the center of the town's population along the Delaware, the meeting was not well attended, the Friends preferring to wait for the afternoon meeting at the Bank Meeting rather than take the long walk to the morning meeting at Center Square, so that in a few years the meeting here was abandoned.

Great Meeting House

In 1695 the Great Meeting House was built at the southwest corner of Second Street and High (now Market) Street, opposite the spot, where several years later the historic Old Court House was placed. This meeting house with some additions was used until 1754, when it gave way to a more commodious building. Here for more than a century were held the most important business and religious meetings of the Society in the City.<sup>1</sup>

The Irish Friends of Philadelphia, with the notable exceptions of James Logan, Thomas Holme, Robert Turner, and some others, seem to have taken but a small part in meeting and civil affairs, and in associating with other nationalities apparently soon lost those characteristics which had been acquired in their Irish environment. For this reason little will be said of them collectively, but attention will be given to those Irish Friends who removed to the country districts, usually to settle, clanlike, near each other, and who intermarried and for generations preserved much of their racial identity.

Several families of Irish Friends produced certificates of removal to the Monthly Meetings of Falls, Middletown, Buckingham, and Wrightstown, in Bucks County, but they were too few in number to deserve further mention than is given in the Appendix.

Bucks County

A few Irish Friends came to the Monthly Meetings of Gwynedd and Abington, in what is now Montgomery County, but their number was also small.

Montgomery County

Although no certificates from Ireland were received at Exeter<sup>1</sup> Monthly Meeting in Berks County, yet many Irish Friends, who had first settled in New Garden and other places in Chester County, removed there and settled within the limits of the meetings of Exeter and Maiden Creek. Conspicuous among these Friends were: Moses

Berks County

Starr, from County Meath, justice of the peace and first representative from Berks County into the Provincial Assembly; Benjamin Lightfoot, justice of the peace and sheriff of Berks County, 1752-1754; Francis Parvin, from County West Meath, justice of the peace and representative to the Provincial Assembly; and Nehemiah Hutton (son of Thomas), from County Carlow.

Delaware
County

As the table shows, eighty-two adult Irish Friends arrived at the three monthly meetings in what is now Delaware County, sixty-three being received at Chester Monthly Meeting, sixteen at Concord Monthly Meeting, and but few at the Welsh Monthly Meeting at Radnor, or Haverford, with its subordinate or particular meetings of Haverford, Radnor and Merion (Montgomery County).

Chester
Monthly
Meeting

Robert Wade, an English Friend, the first member of the Society to locate on the west side of the Delaware, settled among the Swedes and Dutch on the west bank of Chester Creek at Upland, later called Chester, in 1675, and in that year William Edmundson,<sup>1</sup> then on a religious visit to the American colonies, held a meeting at his house.<sup>2</sup> This was the first Friends' meeting held in the Province of Pennsylvania.<sup>2</sup> A meeting was probably held regularly after 1677, by which time several other Friends had arrived in the neighborhood.<sup>1</sup> No doubt the First-day and mid-week meetings continued to be held at Robert Wade's house, known as Essex House, until 7 Mo. (September) 11, 1682, shortly before the coming of William Penn, when the Monthly Meeting "agreed y<sup>t</sup> a meeting shall be held for y<sup>e</sup> service & worship of god every first day at y<sup>e</sup> court house<sup>2</sup> at Vpland."<sup>3</sup>

It was at the landing place opposite the famous Essex House that the Proprietor first touched the soil of the Province which bears his name. Penn sailed from<sup>4</sup> Deal, in England, 6 Mo. (August) 30, 1682, on board of the ship Welcome, of three hundred tons burden, Robert Greenaway, commander, in company with about one hundred passengers, mostly Friends from Sussex, among whom was at least one party of Irish Friends, Dennis Rochford, with his family and two servants, originally from Enniscorthy, County Wexford.<sup>5</sup> Great distress was experienced during the passage in consequence of the breaking out of small-pox, the Small-pox."<sup>1</sup> Otherwise the voyage was prosperous, the vessel arriving, 8 Mo. day the Welcome stood up the Delaware and casting anchor off the mouth of Chester Creek Penn landed, and was hospitably received and entertained by Robert Wade at Essex House.<sup>1</sup>

As early as 1687, steps were taken for the building of a meeting-house at Chester, but this was not finally accomplished until in 1693, when a stone structure was erected on the east bank of Chester Creek.

First Meeting House at Chester, 1693

The first "monthly meeting of friends belonging to marcus hooke & vpland held then at Robert Wad's house," occurred "the 19 day of y<sup>e</sup> 11 month, 1681," and was the first monthly meeting established in Pennsylvania. The Monthly Meeting was sometimes held at Chester, possibly at Robert Wade's house or perhaps at the old Court House, where the Particular Meeting of Chester was held; but at a Monthly Meeting held 12 Mo. 7, 1686, it was "order'd y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> monthly meeting from hence forthe be kept at Walter fossett's<sup>2</sup> house [in Ridley Township] untell farther order."

<sup>2</sup> Walter Fancett, with his wife Grace, arrived at Chester as early as 1684. For a time I thought it probable that he had come from Ireland, whence came the other Fancetts of Chester Monthly Meeting, but Gilbert Cope, of West Chester, Pa., informs me that Walter Fawcett, of Haverah Park, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, was married, 3 Mo. 23, 1675, in a Friends' Meeting, at Henry Settle's house, Harefield, in Netherdale, Yorkshire, to Grace Atkinson. Besse notes in Sufferings of the Quakers (II., 156) that in 1683 one "Walter Fawcett, for being at a

Thus it continued until 1693, when it began to "circulate" at the houses of John Simcock, in Ridley; Robert Vernon, Thomas and Randall Vernon, and John Edge, in Nether Providence; George Maris, Joseph Stedman and Bartholomew Coppock, Jr., in Springfield; and Caleb Pusey,<sup>1</sup> at Chester Mills, near Chester. After 1700, meeting-houses having been erected for the particular meetings constituting Chester Monthly Meeting—especially for Chester, Springfield, Providence and Middletown—the Monthly Meeting circulated more at the meeting-houses, finally Besse also notes (II., 122): "May 27d, 1670. At a Meeting of Quakers at the House of Thomas Fawcett, at Hawes in Wenslydale [Wenslydale North-Riding, in the County of York]: His Fine £20"; and June, 12, 1670, at a meeting at Bainbrigg Pastures, Vorkshire, Thomas Fawcett had a fine taken from him (II., 123). Walter Fawcett settled on the north-east side of Ridley Creek, his land extending to Crum Creek, and took a prominent and active part in civil affairs and in meeting work, being a minister among Friends. In 1685 he was appointed one of the Peace Makers for Chester County—then an office of considerable responsibility—and also served one year as a member of the Assembly. For many years Chester Monthly Meeting was held at his house, notwithstanding that it was kept as a tavern or inn for at least part of the time. His wife Grace having died in 1686, he was married to Rebecca Fearn, of Darby, in 1694. He died in 1704, leaving two sons—John (who married Grace Crook) and Nathan, by his first wife; and three daughters, Rebecca, Mary and Sarah, by his second wife. In 1698 he paid a religious visit to England (Dr. Smith's Delaware County, 462).

Monthly
Meeting

A particular meeting was established by Chester Monthly Meeting at Chichester, in the latter part of 1682, and a meeting-house was built in 1688 on a tract of two acres of land given to the meeting by James Brown. This building was destroyed by fire in 1768, and the present house erected the following year.<sup>2</sup>

Concord

Concord Particular Meeting was regularly established in 1685; for at Chester (now Concord) Quarterly Meeting, 9 Mo. 1, 1685, "It is agreed y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> meeting formerly held at John Gibbons house should from this time forward be held one first day & one fourth day at John Gibbons' & another first day & fourth day at Nicholas Newland's, until further order." At the meeting 6 Mo. 2, 1686, it was "Agreed y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> meeting formerly ordered to be one first day at Nicolas Newland's<sup>3</sup> and y<sup>e</sup> other first day at John Gibbon's be from this time removed & kept at Nicholas Newlands only, till further order (viz.) y<sup>e</sup> first & fourth days meeting." 9 Mo. 4, 1695, "it was agreed that Concord meeting which was moveable be now fixed at the new meeting house."<sup>4</sup> It would seem Birmingham Meeting, in Birmingham Township, Chester County, was subordinate to Concord Monthly Meeting until its erection into a monthly meeting in 1815. The meeting was first held "at John Bennet's house," in 1704. The first meeting-house was built about 1721 on an acre of ground "near the Great Road," conveyed to the Meeting by Elizabeth, widow of Richard Webb, for a consideration of £3. The present meeting-house was built in 1763, Benjamin Hawley noting in his diary of that year that he "went to the Raising of y<sup>e</sup> meeting-house."

Three of the prominent Irish members of this meeting were John Fred, from County Carlow; his son Nicholas Fred; and Samuel Hollingsworth (son of Valentine Hollingsworth), justice of the peace and representative to the Provincial Assembly.<sup>2</sup>

In its earliest days the Monthly Meeting was known as Chichester, then as Chichester and Concord, and finally as Concord Monthly Meeting. At the Quarterly Meeting at Chester, 12 Mo. 4,

After 1729 it was held altogether at Concord.<sup>1</sup>

New Castle County on Delaware

The meetings in New Castle County "on Delaware" received an important migration of Irish Friends, and although now within the State of Delaware, in those early days were in that part of Penn's possessions known as "The Territories" or "Lower Counties" of Pennsylvania<sup>2</sup>; therefore they come properly within the range of our study.

Newark
Meeting

About 1682, several Friends with their families arrived and settled near each other on the east side of Brandywine Creek, in New Castle County. Among these were: Valentine Hollingsworth, from Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, justice of the peace and for many years a representative to the Provincial Assembly; his son-in-law, Thomas Conway, or Connaway, from Lisburn, County Antrim; William Stockdale,<sup>1</sup> justice of the peace, probably from County Tyrone, Ireland; Adam Sharply,<sup>2</sup> possibly related to Ralph Sharply, of Belfast; John Musgrave, from north of Ireland, later a settler in Lancaster County and a representative to the Provincial Assembly; Morgan Drewett, who came from London to Burlington, <sup>1</sup> He may have been nearly related to William Stockdale, a minister, of County Tyrone, who came over to Philadelphia on the ship Friendship, in 1684, and served as a member of the Provincial Council.

<sup>2</sup> Adam Sharply and wife Mary were active in the affairs of Newark or Kennett Monthly Meeting. Their children, Benjamin and Charity, were born 11 Mo. 10, 1686-7. Adam died 9 Mo. 27, 1694, and was buried in Friends' burial ground at Newark. Rachel Sharpley, probably a daughter, was married about 8 Mo., 1686, under the auspices of Newark Monthly Meeting, to Thomas Pierson, Deputy Surveyor, of New Castle County, and died 7 Mo. 2, 1687; burial at Newark. (Records of Newark Monthly Meeting.) A daughter, Abigail, was married, 12 Mo. 23, 1692-3 to Alphonsus Kirk, and died in 1748. There was also a William Sharply, probably a son (authority of Gilbert Cope).

Possibly Adam Sharply was related to one Ralph Sharply mentioned, by Rutty (343), who states that a meeting was settled at Belfast about 1671 or 1672, "and Ralph Sharpley came from England and resided there; but apostatizing into evil Practices, lost his condition and corrupted others, which with the removal of some to America proved a means of that meeting being lost." No doubt this was Ralph Sharply, the Friend, of Derbyshire, of whom the following account is found in Besse (I., 137): "On the 21st of the Month called August [1659] Ralph Sharpley" and others, "going toward the Meeting at Ashburn, were, by Order of two Justices, set in the Stocks above an Hour. After they were released thence, Ralph Sharpley was concerned to preach to the People, for which he was sent to the House of Correction," for two days, and finally committed to "Derby Goal, where he was kept ten Days." In 1661 for attending a meeting at Eyam in the High-Peak he was imprisoned and subjected to cruel treatment (Besse, I., 138-139).

A meeting was continued here until 1754, when the Friends "being suited with a better conveniency, it was laid down."<sup>5</sup>

A meeting was held at the house of William Cox, at Hockessin, in Mill Creek Hundred, in New Castle County, as early as 1730, but was not regularly established until 1737. The meeting received its name of Hockessin from an Indian village formerly near the place. Among the first settlers were John Baldwin, William Cox, and the Irish Friends, Henry and John Dixon. In 1738, a meeting-house was built, and enlarged in 1745.<sup>2</sup>

A meeting for worship was established in the newly founded town of Wilmington in the early part of 1738, and held for a few months at the house of William* Shipley, one of the founders of the town, until later in the year a small brick meeting-house—now a part of Friends' School at Fourth and West Streets—was erected. In 1748 a larger house was built. This in turn was succeeded by the present structure, erected in 1816. The monthly meeting was formed in 1750 by a division of Newark Monthly Meeting.<sup>3</sup> Quite early in its history, Wilmington received Irish

For several years during the summer months they attended Newark Meeting at Valentine Hollingsworth's, but in the winter season were allowed to hold a meeting of their own at the homes of some of their number, doubtless most of the time at the house of George Harlan. At Newark Monthly Meeting, 10 Mo. 7, 1687, was granted "y<sup>e</sup>

Chester
County

Chester County,<sup>3</sup> one of the three original Counties of the Province established by Penn in 1682, received the larger part of the Irish Quaker migration and deserves a full measure of our attention. Early in the eighteenth century the tide of migration began to move into the backwoods, and we find Friends from the old settlements in New Castle County and what is now Delaware County pushing their way through the forests and developing new locations in the wild but fat and fertile uplands of Chester County. For a time these Quaker pioneers made the long and often dangerous journey to attend the meetings of the old settlements, but as other members settled near them, meetings of their own were erected, held at first in private houses, later in rude log meeting-houses, and ultimately, keeping pace with the development of the country, in more substantial buildings of brick or stone.

Four monthly meetings, Newark, New Garden, Bradford, and Goshen, were held within the present limits of Chester County previous to 1750. Newark Monthly Meeting, the parent of New Garden and Bradford, was established in New Castle County, in 1686, and included not only the meetings of New Castle County, but all those of southern Chester County, until the erection of the Monthly Meetings of New Garden in 1718, and Bradford in 1737. Goshen Monthly Meeting, formed from Chester Monthly Meeting in 1722, included within its bounds nearly all the northern meetings of the County.

Newark Monthly Meeting, since 1760 known as Kennett Monthly Meeting, held its first sessions, according to the minutes, in 1686, at the house of the widow Welsh in New Castle, and continued there until 6 Mo. 28, 1687, when it was decided "y<sup>e</sup> it may be more Convenient<sup>t</sup> for y<sup>e</sup> present, that it be kept twice over y<sup>e</sup> other Side of Brandywine y<sup>e</sup> third . . . to be kept at New-

At length it became settled at Kennett, and on that account dropped the old name of Newark<sup>2</sup>

Samuel Smith, in his history of the Pennsylvania meetings,<sup>3</sup> says that in 1707, “Vincent Caldwell, Thomas Wickersham, Joel Baily, Thomas Hope, Guyan Miller [an Irish Friend], and others, being settled in Kennet and the east end of Marlborough, had liberty to keep a meeting for worship sometimes in private houses. In the year 1710 a piece of land was purchased and a meeting-house built, which was enlarged in 1719; in

BUILT 1710. ENLARGED 1719 AND 1731

In 1699, William Penn directed Henry Hollingsworth, deputy-surveyor of Chester County, to lay out a tract of 30,000 acres of land for his two children, William and Letitia Penn. This survey included all of the present Township of New Garden and the greater part of Kennett, with several thousand acres in the northern part of New Castle County.

Manor of Steyning or Letitia's Manor

The large survey was divided, the eastern part, consisting of 15,500 acres, being conveyed to Letitia Penn, and the western part, of 14,500 acres, to her brother William Penn, Jr. Letitia's tract was confirmed to her by her father's patent, dated October 23, 1701, in consideration of one "Bever skinn" yearly and "the fatherly love and natural affection I bear to her my said daughter." This tract received the name of the Manor of Steyning, also called Letitia's Manor, with the privilege "To have and to hold a Court Baron with all things whatsoever to a Court Baron belonging, and to have and to hold view of ffranck pledge for the conservation of the peace and the better Government of y<sup>e</sup> tenants holding or hereafter to hold of the said Mannor."

Letitia Penn, who had come over to Pennsylvania with her father on his second visit in 1699, returned with him to England in 1701, before her departure by power of attorney authorizing James Logan and Edward Pennington to dispose of land and to have the management of her property here. Pennington soon died and Logan was her sole attorney, until in 1711, having married William Aubrey, a London merchant, Letitia and her husband executed another power of attorney to Logan and Samuel Carpenter.

Kennett
Township

The land described in Letitia Penn's patent included nearly all of the Township of Kennett, excepting a few small tracts already conveyed to settlers, and although for some years known by its manorial name, it soon came to be called Kennett.<sup>1</sup> Kennett is first mentioned on the court records in February, 1705, when Henry Peirce appeared in court as constable for that township. In 1706, he was appointed supervisor of the highways, and Ezekiel Harlan (son of George Harlan), the heaviest tax payer in the Township, succeeded him as constable. George Harlan and Gayen Miller were probably the first of the Irish

Friends to secure land in Kennett. In 1702, Miller purchased 200 acres on the east branch of Red Clay Creek, including the eastern part of the present Borough of Kennett Square.<sup>1</sup> He was elected to the Provincial Assembly in 1714.<sup>2</sup> Harlan, as we have previously stated, settled at first at Centre in New Castle County, but soon moved up the Brandywine and purchased 470 acres in Kennett, now Pennsbury, Township. While living here he had for his neighbors, over the creek in a great bend, a settlement of Indians. After they had gone away he obtained, in 1701, a warrant for 200 acres in this bend of the creek, the land being granted "in regard of the great trouble and charge he has bore in fencing and maintaining the same for the said Indians while living thereon." George Harlan was elected to the Provincial Assembly from New Castle County in 1695, and from Chester County in 1712.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The name Kennett, it is thought, was suggested by Francis Smith, who in 1686 had taken up 200 acres of land at the mouth of Pocopson Creek, within the original limits of the township, and who had come from Devizes, in Wiltshire, England, in which county there is a creek and a village called Kennett.

Of the forty-three persons taxed in Kennett, in 1715, there were nine Irish Friends, as follows: Gayen Miller, 8s. 6d.; Michael Harlan, 5s. 6d.; Ezekiel Harlan, 12s. 6d.; Aaron Harlan, 5s. 6d.; Moses Harlan, 4s. 2d.; Valentine Hollingsworth, 2s. 9d.; James Harlan, 2s. 6d.; Joshua Harlan, <sup>1</sup> Kennett Square was laid out and named about 1768 or 1769; for in a deed of 9 Mo. 29, 1768, William Dixson conveyed to Joseph Musgrave a tract of 3 acres in Kennett Township, "in a place intended to be laid out for an inland town called — town," the blank indicating that a name had not yet been chosen; and the next year Dixson conveyed to Musgrave another tract "near a place called Kennett Square." Both grantor and grantee in this transaction were of Irish Quaker stock.

New Garden
Township

As we have stated, William Penn, Jr., received the western part of the 30,000 acres surveyed by Hollingsworth, in 1699, and his sister Letitia the eastern part. The western tract of 14,500 acres was granted by patent to Penn, by the commissioners of property, May 24, 1706, and like his sister's land received the name of the Manor of Steyning. Before obtaining the patent young Penn had already appointed Griffith Owen, James Logan, and Robert Ashton as his attorneys, he being about to return to England. The land was not immediately taken up by settlers, but about 1711, several families of Friends from Ireland, principally from the Province of Leinster, with a few from the Province of Ulster, arrived and, presenting their certificates of removal to Newark Monthly Meeting, settled in that part of the Manor which lay north of the circular line, giving to their new home the name of New Garden in remembrance of New Garden Meeting, in County Carlow, Ireland, whence came John Lowden and others of the company. Some time after, the part of the Manor north of the circular line was erected into a township and called New Garden.

These Irish Friends in most cases had been settled on the land some years before obtaining their titles. In 1712, Gayen Miller, of Kennett, purchased 700 acres, while the next year grants were made to John Lowden, James Lindley, Michael Lightfoot, Joseph Hutton, from County Carlow ; James Starr, from County Meath ; William Halliday, from County West Meath ; Thomas Jackson, from Queen's County ; and John Miller, from Grange near Charlemont ; and in 1714, to Thomas Garnett, from Grange near Charlemont, and to Joseph Sharp, possibly from Dublin or near by. The whole amount of land purchased by these Friends, including two grants to Mary Rowland, in 1708, and to Abram Marshall in 1713, Friends not from Ireland, was 5413 acres, at the rate of £ 20 per hundred, or according to modern computation, one dollar per acre.

The tracts, as may be seen, were mostly rectangular. In the north-east corner we find Robert Johnson, from County Carlow, with 200 acres, confirmed to him in 1715; Evan Evans, probably a Welshman, with 500 acres in the north-west corner, which he sold some time prior to 1716 to Thomas Garnett; Joseph Sharp below him on White Clay Creek, 200 acres, tory of the land, as laid out in this draft, from the first to the present owners, which appeared in the weekly issues of the Kennett Square (Pa.) Advance, during the years 1898 and 1899. Ellwood Michener, who is a prominent member of New Garden Monthly Meeting and a son of the late Dr. Ezra Michener, author of A Retrospect of Quakerism, so frequently cited in this work, is the custodian of a large collection of Friends' records kept in a safe at his residence in New Garden, and as a surveyor and conveyancer for many years in the Township, he has had exceptional opportunities for the compilation of these sketches. What makes the sketches of special value is the fact that he has made use of the original title deeds, many of which have not been recorded.

granted in 1717; James Lindley, 200 acres, lying north of the Toughkenamon<sup>1</sup> Hill. The remaining land north of the hill, about 1,050 acres, was vacant. From the hill a line ran south through the middle of the Manor, following the course of the present road from Toughkenamon to New Garden Meeting House, almost to the circular line. Taking the east side we have first, Mary Rowland, 700 acres, including the beautiful valley which extends from the present village of Toughkenamon to Kennett Square. Next south of this tract 800 acres were divided among John Sharp, doubtless a brother of Joseph Sharp, on the east side 300 acres; Joseph Sharp, 200 acres, confirmed to him in 1714, but sold by him the next year; and Thomas Garnett, with 300 acres. South of these on the Kennett line were William Tanner, probably an Irish Friend, with 200 acres, which passed finally into the hands of Thomas Milhous, with a large tract, the greater part of which extended into New Castle County. He was appointed a justice of the peace in New Castle County, in 1726.<sup>1</sup> Between these and the middle line were Michael Lightfoot, (300 acres), who arrived in 1712, became an eminent minister of the Society, and some years later removed to Philadelphia, at the time of his death being Treasurer of the Province; John Wily, from County West Meath, with 200 acres; Thomas Jackson, with 200 acres; and continuing southward, William Halliday, with 200 acres. John Miller owned 1,013 acres which extended from the middle line to London Grove Township on the west, and from Toughkenamon Hill to New Garden Meeting House. He lived on White Clay Creek, on or near the site of Avondale, and built a grist mill—the first in that region—which did the grinding for the inhabitants many miles around, even, it is said, as far as Lancaster. New Garden Meeting was held at his house as early as 1712. He also owned a smaller tract of land, No. 15, the greater part of which extended into New Castle County. He was appointed a representative to the Provincial Assembly in 1714, but died the same year.<sup>1</sup> Next south of Miller's large tract, Joseph Hutton held 250 acres on the west line, and James Starr 350 acres on the middle line. Of 900 acres south of these, Francis Hobson, from Grange near Charlemont, held 200 acres in the north-east corner and the remainder was purchased by Gayen Miller. From this southward there was a vacant tract of several thousand acres.

Of the twenty-two persons taxed in New Garden in 1715, fifteen were Irish Friends, as follows: Mary Miller, 9s.; Michael Lightfoot, 2s.; William Halliday, 2s. 7d.; Margaret Lowden, 2s.; James Lindley, 4s. 6d.; Thomas Jackson, 3s.; James Starr, 3s.; Francis Hobson, 2s.; Joseph Garnett, 2s.; Robert Johnson, 2s.; John Sharp, 3s. 6d.; Joseph Sharp, 2s.; John Wiley, 2s. 4d.; Thomas Garnett, 3s. 9d.; Benjamin Fred, 2s. 1d.

At first the Friends of the New Garden settlement attended Kennett Meeting, but soon they were allowed to hold a meeting of their own, as evidenced by the following extracts from the Minutes of Chester Quarterly Meeting:

12 Mo. 2, 1712.—“Newark monthly meeting requests that there may be a first & fifth Days meeting settled at John Miller's. This meeting, considering thereof, thinks fitt to Refer the further Consideration thereof to the next Quarterly meeting.”

3 Mo. 4, 1713.—“This meeting, Considering further of settleing a meeting at or nere John Miller’s, Do allow that a first and fifth Dayes meeting be kept at John Miller’s Dwelling House for this Ensuing Quarter, or until further order, and the said meeting to belong to Kennet Preparative Meeting for the Present.”

6 Mo. 3, 1713.—“Also the said Meeting Requests that the ffrriends of the meeting kept at John Miller’s may have Liberty to Build a meeting house near Michel Lightfoot’s, which this meeting, takeing into Consideration, do allow the same ffrriends of that meeting so to do, and not to Exceed half a mile from the said Michel’s.”

A meeting-house was built probably later in this year, on a rectangular tract of six acres, in the south-east corner of John Miller’s original plantation. James Miller, of New Garden, yeoman, son and heir of John Miller, for a consideration of £1, 16s., granted the six acres, by deed of 10 Mo. 26, 1717, to Simon Hadly, James Starr, Thomas Jackson, and Michael Lightfoot, evidently in trust for New Garden Meeting, for by deed of December 12, 1723, the latter Friends formally transferred the land to the Meeting.<sup>1</sup>

New Garden Monthly meeting, formed from Newark Monthly Meeting, in 1718, included the meetings of New Garden, Nottingham, London

Grove, and others subsequently formed to the westward, and was first convened 5 Mo. 12, 1718. It was held sometimes at Nottingham, now in Cecil County, Maryland, until the establishment of Nottingham Monthly meeting, in 1730; and afterward alternated to London Grove, until the erection of London Grove Monthly Meeting, in 1792. The first clerk of the Monthly Meeting was James Starr, who served until 1726, when he was succeeded by Benjamin Fred.<sup>1</sup>

Adjoining New Garden on the west is London Grove Township to which also came many Irish Friends. This township was organized in 1723. On August 12, 1699, William Penn sold to Tobias Collet, Daniel Quare, Henry Goldney, and Michael Russell, Friends of London, among other lands, 60,000 acres, not then located, and granted a warrant, dated 6 Mo. (August) 17, 1699, for the survey thereof. These persons admitted others into partnership with them, and formed a company, generally known as the London Company, for the improvement of their property, the number of shares eventually reaching 8,800, and the shareholders several hundred. acres, a survey in Chester County, was made of 16,500 acres, which included nearly all of the present Township of London Grove and the greater part of the Townships of Franklin (formerly a part of New London) and London Britain. This tract was rectangular, being over three miles wide, and about eight and six-tenths miles long. That part of London Grove which lies directly north of New Garden, containing 718 acres, was subsequently added to the former survey, so that the London Company owned, altogether, 17,218 acres in Chester County, for which a patent was granted June 25, 1718. Much of the land was originally leased for a term of years, with stipulations that a certain number of acres should be cleared and plowed yearly, orchards planted, etc.

The following advertisement was probably circulated soon after the land was taken up :

“THE PROPRIETORS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA LAND COMPANY IN LONDON DO HEREBY GIVE NOTICE

“To all persons that are willing to settle upon lands in Pensylvania, and the territories thereunto belonging,

“That they will Give to Every such Person or Persons Fifty Acres of Land to them and their Heirs for ever, Free and Clear of all manner of Quit-Rents: Ten Families to Settle together for the Conveniency of Good Neighbourhood in every Five Thousand Acres. This Encouragement we promise to Give to a Hundred Families ; and so soon as each Family have Built them a Cottage, and cleared Ten Acres of Land, every Family so settling shall have Deeds executed by the trustees, and sent them over upon Certificate for that purpose first obtained under the Hands of this Company's Agent or Agents Residing in Pensilvania.

"Samuel Carpenter & Tho. ffairman are the Comp's Agents."

Under the direction of the Company's agent, John Estaugh, of Haddonfield, in New Jersey, Isaac Taylor, Deputy-Surveyor of Chester County, surveyed many tracts for settlers on the Company's lands. Like those of New Garden the subdivisions in London Grove were mostly rectangular, and a large number of them seem to have been laid out in 1718 and 1719. Many of the settlers obtained deeds for their lands, dated March 14, 1722-3, from Collet, Quare, and Goldney.

John Cane, a Friend, who with his wife Ann came over from County Armagh about 1713, was one of the first settlers of London Grove, but he did not long survive to enjoy his new home. John Allen, who was an Irish Friend, arrived as early as 1714 and located in the Township on the north-west line of New Garden. Here he built and operated one of the earliest mills of that section. In 1719 he purchased from Thomas Garnett an adjoining tract of 200 acres over the line in New Garden, being part of the 500 acres granted to Garnett by Evan Evans, as previously stated. Below Allen we find Joseph Sharp with a tract of 100 acres, which joined his plantation in New Garden. Joseph Sharp, a tanner by trade, was appointed one of the overseers of the poor in the newly-organized Township of London Grove in 1723. His son, Samuel Sharp, a resident in London Grove, served as a member of the Continental Congress. In 1722, James Lindley, of New Garden, purchased 400 acres and in the next year became the first constable of the Township. Jeremiah Starr, of Oldcastle, County Meath, brother of James Starr, of New Garden, arrived with his family in the year 1717, and took up a tract of land in London Grove, a little north-west of Avondale. He represented Chester County in the Assembly from 1738 until 1743, when he became Collector of Excise, a position he held until 1756.<sup>1</sup>

Of the forty-two taxable persons in London Grove in 1724 there were ten Irish Friends: John Allen, 8s.; Joseph Sharp, 13s.; Jeremiah Starr, 4s.

London Grove Meeting was established by authority of Chester Quarterly Meeting in 1714, and was held at the house of John Smith, son-in-law of Caleb Pusey, in what is now East Marlborough, until 1724, when a meeting-house was erected in the north-east corner of London Grove. In 1743 this was replaced by a larger house. An addition was made to this building in 1775, for Richard Barnard, a member of the meeting, notes in his diary under date of 10 Mo. 19, 1775, that he was "At London Grove, raising addition to meeting house."<sup>1</sup> This structure was removed in 1818, and the present meeting-house built.<sup>2</sup>

North of Kennett, New Garden, and London Grove was Marlborough Township, named from Marlborough, in Wiltshire, England, and organized in 1704. The eastern part was laid out about 1700, in right of purchases made in England, as was also some of the western part. The Township was divided into East and West Marlborough in 1729.

Joseph Pennock

The only resident Irish Friend mentioned in the list of twenty-eight persons taxed in the Township in 1715, was Joseph Pennock, a native of Clonmel, County Tipperary. He removed to what is now West Marlborough Township as early as 1714 and settled on a large tract of 1250 acres, of which he became proprietor by virtue of a grant from William Penn to his grandfather, George Collett, of Clonmel. In 1738 he built a mansion called "Primitive Hall," which is still standing in a good state of preservation. Pennock took a prominent and active part in meeting and civil affairs, serving as a member of the Provincial Assembly almost continuously from 1716 to 1744.<sup>1</sup> For many years he was a justice of the peace,<sup>2</sup> and in 1736, during the Cresap War, rising from the dispute over the boundary between Pennsylvania and Maryland, he was one of the five men appointed by Governor Thomas Penn to investigate a conspiracy hatched by agents of Maryland among the settlers of New Garden and London Grove.

By the Minutes of the Board of Property, 1 Mo. 6, 1724-5, we find that "Joseph Pennock requests the Grant of — acres of the tract called S'r John Fagg's [Fagg's Manor], if to be disposed of."<sup>3</sup> This land was probably in that part of Fagg's Manor which later was erected into Londonderry Township and which adjoined London Grove on the west. At this period the Manor was exposed to the encroachments of the Scotch-Irish squatters, who caused the authorities much annoyance by the irregularities of their settlements. John Taylor, the surveyor, notes in his memorandum-book that on April 3rd, 1730 he "went and warned the Irish off Fagg's Manor." In the following letter to James Steel, manager of the land-office, in Philadelphia, Pennock evidently is writing of the tract requested of the Board of Property, and, not having a patent, doubtless has been having trouble to hold his land against the squatters. The letter<sup>1</sup> is given with the quaintness and phonetic spelling of the original.

J. PENNOCK "

Joseph Pennock's son Nathaniel Pennock also served many years in the Assembly, until in the memorable year of 1756, with the beginning of the war against the Indians, he and other Friends resigned their seats declaring that they could not be a part of a government openly at war.

In the moving and drifting about which was continually occurring among the settlers, other Irish Friends made their way to the Marlboroughs, among the earliest of whom were Ezekiel and William Harlan of the numerous progeny of the Harlans, Thomas Jackson, who came over from New Garden Township as early as 1718, and Samuel Beverly, from Ballinacree Meeting, County Antrim.

Crossing the northern boundary of Marlborough we come to a township the whole of which was owned by an Irish Friend, Nathaniel Newlin, of Concord, and named in his honor Newlin Township. This tract, consisting of seven thousand seven hundred acres, through the center of which flows Brandywine Creek, was purchased by Newlin, evidently as a land speculation, from the trustees of the Free Society of Traders, by deed of June 10, 1724, for a consideration of £800, and at once negotiations were entered into for the sale of portions of it.

Soon a difficulty arose with the Indians, who had a village on the north side of the Brandywine in the east end of the tract, and laid claim to the land one mile wide on each side of the Creek; but Newlin and the purchasers from him paid no attention to their demands. Thereupon, in the summer of 1725, several of the tribe led by the chief Checochinican proceeded to Philadelphia and appeared before the Provincial Assembly, through their interpreters, one of whom was Ezekiel Harlan, making complaint of the encroachments upon their lands. The Assembly carefully considered the case, but made no satisfactory adjustment before adjourning.

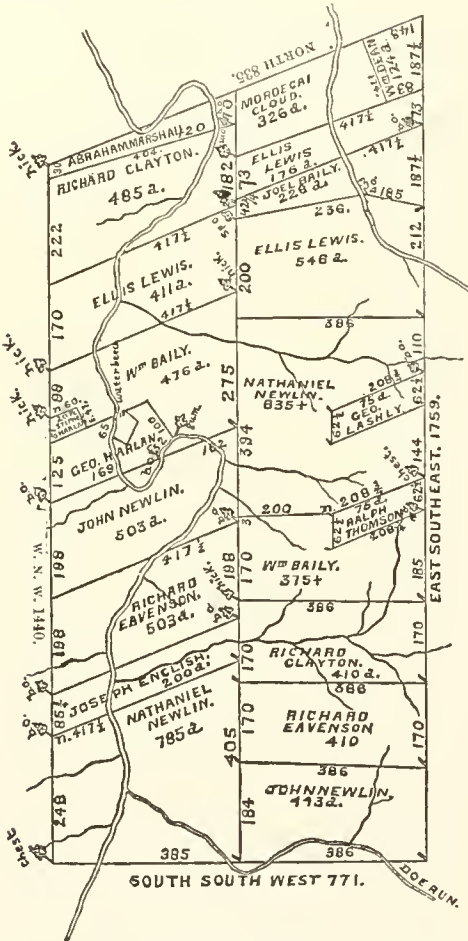

Newlin Township Owned by an Irish Quaker

Newlin's Difficulty with the Indians

At the beginning of the next session in the following year, the Indians again appeared and urged their claims. The subject was again taken up and James Logan on behalf of the Commissioners of Property reported that they had "used such means as they thought most likely to satisfy" the Indians, "and continues them in the quiet possession of their claims, and for that end . . . had agreed and accommodated the matter with Nathaniel Newlin." Newlin was then summoned before the Assembly, and declared in writing that "neither he nor his heirs will, by any means, disturb or molest the Indians in their possessions or claims." With these assurances the Indians expressed themselves as satisfied, and after shaking hands with Newlin in a friendly manner, quietly returned to their homes.

The work of settlement, however, seems not to have been retarded, and in 1729 the chief Checochinican, on behalf of his people, appealed once more to the government, writing that notwithstanding Newlin's promise that they should not be disturbed in the free and peaceable enjoyment of their lands on the Brandywine, some of their lands had been sold, and they had been forbidden even to make use of timber growing thereon for the building of cabins. What action, if any, was taken upon this complaint has not been learned, but not long after, the greater part of the Indians removed from the County, and all trouble growing out of their claims ceased.

NEWLIN TOWNSHIP, CHESTER COUNTY, IN 1730

from Newlin: George Harlan, 169 acres for £50, 14s.; Stephen Harlan, 20½ acres for £20, 10s.; Joseph England, 200 acres for £30; Mordecai Cloud, 326 acres for £97, 16s.; Abraham Marshall, 120 acres for £36; Joel Baily, 228 acres for £68, 8s.; William Dean, 124 acres for £37, 4s.; George Lashly, 75 acres for £22, 10s.; and Ralph Thompson, 75 acres for £19, 19s., 9d., a total of 1337 acres for £383. The purchasers were also to pay a yearly quit rent of one shilling per hundred acres.

On the death of Nathaniel Newlin in 1729, those portions of the Township yet unsold were divided among his children as follows: John, 946 acres; Nathaniel, 1,620 acres; Jemima, wife of Richard Eavenson, 913 acres; Kesia, wife of William Baily, 851 acres; Mary, wife of Richard Clayton, 895 acres; and to children of deceased daughter Elizabeth, who had married Ellis Lewis, 1,133 acres.

Pikeland
Township
Granted to Joseph Pike,
an Irish Friend, of Cork

Newlin was not the only township in Chester County owned by an Irish Friend. By patent dated December 3, 1705, William Penn granted to Joseph Pike,<sup>1</sup> a wealthy Quaker merchant, of

<sup>1</sup> Joseph Pike, the author of several works relating to Friends (see Joseph Smith's Catalogue of Friends' Books, II., 414), son of Richard and Elizabeth Pike, was born 11 Mo. 15, 1657, on a farm called Killeaghy, seven miles west of Cork. The father, Richard Pike, was born about 1627, in the town of Newberry, Berkshire, England, of parents of good reputation "and having some estate in houses there"; and about

Cork, a tract of over 10,000 acres of land, lying north of the Great Valley, which was organized under the name of Pikeland Township, and in 1838 divided into East and West Pikeland. Joseph Pike died in 1729, and by his will, dated 1727, and proved in the Prerogative Court of the Archbishop of Armagh, devised Pikeland and a tract of over 1,500 acres in Caln, on the southern part of which is now Caln Meeting House, 1648, he "came over to Ireland a Corporal in a Troop of Horse in Cromwell's Army." He married Elizabeth Jackson, born in London about 1636, of parents of good repute, "some of her connexions having been chief magistrates of that city," and settled near Cork. Richard and Elizabeth Pike were among the Friends convinced by the ministry of Edward Burrough at Cork in 1655. In 1664, they removed from the farm of Kilcreagh to Cork and kept a shop. Richard died 4 Mo. 1668, while a prisoner for his Quaker principles, and was the first Friend interred in the burial ground of the Society outside the south gate of Cork. Elizabeth died in 1688. Their children were: Elizabeth, married Henry Wheddon, merchant, and died in 1693; Joseph; Ebenezer; Richard; Sarah; and Benjamin, who died the same day as his father.

Joseph Pike was married in 1682, to Elizabeth Rogers, eldest daughter of Francis Rogers, a minister of the Society. After his marriage he joined his brother Richard in opening a linen-draper's shop in Cork, the first of the kind in the city. His business affairs frequently took him to England, Holland, and Flanders. On one of these journeys he accompanied William Penn to Holland and attended the yearly meeting at Amsterdam. Thomas Story notes in his journal (p. 533) that in 1716, while on a religious journey to Ireland, he visited Joseph Pike, of Cork, among whose guests one day at dinner were the young Countess of Kildare, her maiden sister, and three others of the gentry. Joseph and Elizabeth Pike had fourteen children, of whom seven survived: Richard; Mary, married Thomas Beale, son of Joshua, of Mountmellick; Elizabeth, married to Joshua Beale, brother of Thomas; Rachel; Samuel; Benjamin; and Anne.—Autobiography of Joseph Pike, Friends' Library, II., 351-414; Leadbeater, 169-184; Rutty, 316-318.

to his wife Elizabeth. The widow Pike held the lands until her death in 1733, when they came into possession of her son, Richard Pike. He died about 1752, and by his will<sup>1</sup> bequeathed all his estate in Pennsylvania to his kinsmen, Samuel Hoare and Nathaniel Newberry, merchants of London. In 1756, Hoare purchased Newberry's interest and became the sole owner. The land was then offered for sale in small tracts. Among the first settlers were Samuel Lightfoot (son of Thomas), a surveyor, and builder of the first mill in that neighborhood; Michael Lightfoot; Thomas Millhous, who removed there from New Garden Township about 1744; and Timothy Kirk, of the Kirks of Lurgan, County Armagh.

The Great Valley

A number of Irish Friends removed to the rich limestone lands of the Great Valley, which extends from east to west across the center of Chester County, and most of them became members of Bradford Monthly Meeting and of Caln Particular Meeting. Bradford Monthly Meeting, consisting of the Particular Meetings of Bradford and Caln, was formed from Newark Monthly Meeting in 1737.

Caln Meeting

A meeting "at Calne in y<sup>e</sup> Valey" was held as early as 1716, and a meeting-house was probably erected the same year on John Mendenhall's land. In 1726, it was decided to build another meeting-house "upon the further side of y<sup>e</sup> mounten." Some years later Richard Pike, a Friend, of Cork, who owned over 1,500 acres in Caln Township, conveyed to Thomas Parke and Robert Miller, of East Caln, for the use of Friends, a lot of ground on which a meeting-house had been built with his consent; whether this was the second or a third location has not been determined. In 1801 the meeting-house was enlarged to accommodate the new Quarterly Meeting of Caln.

Caln Township, originally including the territory East Caln Township now embraced in Caln, East Caln, West Caln, East Brandywine, West Brandywine, and a part of Valley Township, and the Borough of Downingtown, and that part of Coatesville lying east of the west branch of Brandywine Creek, was named from the town of Calne, in Wiltshire, England, and was organized as a township about 1714. In 1728 it was divided into the Townships of East and West Caln.

In East Caln settled William Pim, from Queen's County, for many years clerk of Bradford Monthly Meeting, overseer and elder of Caln Meeting, and justice of the peace; his sons Thomas and Richard Pim; Thomas Parke, from County Carlow, an elder of Caln Meeting, purchaser of 500 acres of land at the site of Downingtown or near by, where some of his descendants of the name yet reside ; Robert Valentine (son of Thomas Valentine and grandson of Thomas Parke), from County Carlow, an eminent minister of the Society of Friends, who made a religious visit to Great Britain at the close of the Revolution ; Thomas Coates, son of Moses Coates, from County Carlow ; Thomas Pain, from Queen's County ; Joseph Wilkinson, son of Francis Wilkinson, from Ballinacree, County Antrim ; and Evan Wilkinson, probably the latter's brother, from Ballinacree, a settler in West Caln.

*Coatesville Named for
Quaker*

Moses Coates, grandson of Moses Coates, the emigrant from County Carlow, was married in 1770 to Hannah Musgrave, daughter of Thomas Musgrave, an Irish Quaker, of Sadsbury, Lancaster County, and became the owner of a tract of land now occupied by the Borough of Coatesville, which was laid out and named in his honor by his son Dr. Jesse Coates.

*Phoenixville
First Settled by Irish Quakers*

In 1731, Moses Coates, a Friend, originally from County Carlow, purchased 600 acres, and James Starr, one of the first settlers of New Garden, 350 acres, in Charlestown, now Schuylkill, Township, on the north side of French Creek at its junction with Schuylkill River, and became the first settlers at the site of Phoenixville. Judge Pennypacker, who has written an interesting history of the beginnings of this town, relates that previous to his purchase Moses Coates "had lived for about a year upon the other side of the Schuylkill, where stands the present village of Mont Clare, a locality he selected because the Indians were there less numerous. At night he slept with a loaded gun at his side, and a servant lay at the door of his hut with a pitch fork. Upon longer acquaintance, however, he found the Indians disposed to be friendly, and his fear of their hostility being dissipated he changed his place of residence"<sup>1</sup> to the other side of the River. Here he "blazed paths through the wilderness about his home, by cutting chips from the sides of the trees, so that his children should not be lost."<sup>2</sup>

In 1732, James Starr erected a mill which was placed under control of his two sons, James and Moses; and this was the first use of the water power of French Creek.<sup>3</sup> A near neighbor of the Starrs and Coates was Thomas Valentine, originally from Ballybrumhill, County Carlow, who settled across the Schuylkill in New Providence Township, now Montgomery County.

East Nantmeal
Township

In the summer of 1736, Joshua Marsh and his son John Marsh, with their families, from Grange near Charlemont, arrived and settled among the Welsh in East Nantmeal Township. Two years later they were joined by Joshua's son-in-law,

Thomas McMillan, and family from Ballinaecree, County Antrim. The only other Irish Friends known to be in the locality were their nearest neighbors, William and Timothy Kirk, sons of Alphonsus Kirk, of New Castle County, William Kirk for many years serving as overseer of Nantmeal Meeting.

These Friends brought their certificates to Goshen Monthly Meeting, thereby becoming members thereof, and attended Uwchlan Particular and Preparative meetings until the establishment of Nantmeal Particular Meeting and the erection of a meeting house there in 1741, when Nantmeal became their place of worship, although they still attended preparative meetings at Uwchlan.

A meeting-house was built at Nantmeal in 1777. This was burned about 1795, and another house was built. For many years the meeting has been extinct. Uwchlan Particular Meeting was established in 1712, and the Preparative Meeting two years later. The present meeting-house was built in 1756.

About 1750, the Marshes and McMillans joined the early westward movement and migrated to Warrington Township, York County, becoming members of Warrington Meeting.

Nottingham Among the Irish Friends who made their way to the Nottingham settlements, now in Maryland,

UWCHLAN MEETING HOUSE, CHESTER COUNTY, BUILT 1756

son of Timothy Kirk, of Lurgan, County Armagh; Benjamin Chandlee, originally from County Kildare; and Eli Crockett, from Ballinacree, County Antrim, a settler at Bush River Meeting.

The Friends of Nottingham were residents of Chester County, until about 1765, when the running of the famous Mason and Dixon line brought them within the limits of Cecil County, Maryland. In 1701, a company of friends, prominent among whom were John Churchman, Andrew Job, William and James Brown, and Henry Reynolds, removed from the old settlements in the vicinity of Chester and settled on a tract of some 18,000 acres of land called Nottingham on Octorara Creek.

In 1705, they had a meeting settled among them, held at the home of William Brown, until the erection of a meeting-house in 1708-9. This building was replaced by one of brick in 1724. John Churchman notes in his journal that in 1748 the latter was destroyed by fire, and until a new meeting-house could be built the meetings were held in a private house. When rebuilt, a stone addition was made to the original brick-work. The wood-work was again destroyed by fire in 1810. In 1811 the present structure was erected, and although one-half stone, has always been known as the "Brick Meeting."

Nottingham Meeting constituted a part of Concord Monthly Meeting until in 1715 it was transferred to Newark Monthly Meeting. On the erection of New Garden in 1718 it became a part of that Monthly Meeting, thus continuing until 1730, when Nottingham Monthly Meeting, consisting of the meetings of East Nottingham, West Nottingham, and Bush River, was established.

The first of the Irish Friends to settle in what is now Lancaster County were John Musgrave and his son, Moses Musgrave, who as early as 1713 had taken up land in the almost uninhabited region on Octoraro Creek within the present limits of Sadsbury Meeting, the father purchasing 600 acres and the son 300 acres.<sup>1</sup> John Musgrave, as we have stated before, came over from the north of Ireland in 1682, as an indented servant to Valentine Hollingsworth, and served his time with his master in New Castle County.<sup>2</sup> He was an active participant in the local affairs of his neighborhood, and in 1730 and 1731 represented Lancaster County in the Provincial Assembly.<sup>3</sup>

Lancaster
County

For a decade the Musgraves were probably the only Irish Friends in Sadsbury, or indeed in all the County, there being no others mentioned in the tax lists of 1718 for either Sadsbury or Conestoga;<sup>4</sup> but about 1723 an advance-guard of a larger migration, conspicuous among whom were Andrew Moore and Samuel Jackson, from Ballinacree, County Antrim, arrived and located near the Gap at the end of the Great Chester Valley. Soon these pioneers were joined by other members of the Society, many of them remaining in Sadsbury, and others, under the leadership of Hattill Varman, from County Wexford, pushing farther to the westward and forming a settlement in Leacock. Such a large proportion of these Friends were from Ireland that the meetings, which were soon established, were frequently known as the Irish meetings. Edmund Peckover, a Friend of the ministry, from England, who visited these "back-settlers" in 1742, speaks of them as "Friends from Ireland" who have "three or four meetings; though Friends are but thin to what they are in other parts of the province."<sup>1</sup>

In addition to those just mentioned, the following were some of the immigrants to this region: Thomas McClun or McClung, from County West Meath; William McNabb, from Oldcastle, County Meath; Neal O'Moony, John Boyd and sons William and Samuel, James Hunter, Samuel Wilkinson, and William Courtney, from Ballinacree, County Antrim; William Evans, from County Wicklow; John Griffith and son Christopher, from Grange near Charlemont; Jonas Chamberlin, from King's County; James Love and Thomas Nevitt, from County Cavan; Isaac Steer and sons John and Nicholas, from County Antrim ; James Smith, from County Armagh ; Thomas Bulla and Lawrence Richardson, from Grange, probably near Charlemont ; and Thomas Lindley (son of James Lindly), a representative to the Provincial Assembly.

Meetings of an informal character were held in Sadsbury in 1723,<sup>1</sup> but a regular meeting was not established until the following year, when "Samuel Miller and Andrew Moore made application, on behalf of themselves and their friends settled about Sadsbury, for liberty to build a meeting, which being granted by the Quarterly Meeting, they built one in 1725, which goes by the name of Sadsbury Meeting."<sup>2</sup> The stone-work of the present meeting-house was built about 1760, but the wood-work was burned during the period of the Revolution.<sup>3</sup>

Sadsbury Meeting

In 1729, "Sadsbury Preparative Meeting requested on behalf of Friends who live beyond Pequea, to have a meeting at the house of Hattell Varman [in Leacock Township] every sixth-day of the week ; which this meeting allows."<sup>4</sup> The regular First-day meeting at Leacock was established in 1732 and held at Varman's house. Township and the name of the meeting changed to Lampeter.

Sadsbury
Monthly
Meeting

In 1737, the Meetings of Sadsbury and Leacock, which up to this date had formed a part of New Garden Monthly Meeting, were erected into Sadsbury Monthly Meeting, sessions being held alternately at the two places. The Meetings of Newberry, Warrington, Huntington, and Menallen, in what is now York and Adams Counties, formed a part of Sadsbury Monthly Meeting, until 1747, when a monthly meeting of their own called Warrington was established.

York and Adams Counties

The founding of the Sadsbury settlements initiated that westward migration of Friends which during the several succeeding decades moved across Lancaster County to the west side of the Susquehanna and gave rise to the meetings in that part of the County which in 1749 became York County. By 1727 this movement had reached the east bank of the Susquehanna, at Hempfield, now Columbia, where in that year settled John Wright, Robert Barber, Samuel Blunston, and others. Here it was delayed for a time by the Cresap War rising from the boundary dispute between the Penns and the Lords Baltimore, but soon it crossed to the west side of the River, and as early as 1738 at Newberry had begun the first of that belt of Quaker settlements extending across the northern sections of what is now York and

Adams Counties. The Irish Friends were not in the vanguard of the York County migration, but during the middle decades of the century they arrived in large numbers and figured prominently in the affairs of the settlements.

Newberry<sup>1</sup> Meeting, during its first three or four years called Manchester Meeting, was included in Manchester Township, until in 1742 with the organization of Newberry Township it fell in the latter.<sup>2</sup> The first settlers came from the meetings in southern Chester County and New Castle County and presented their certificates of removal to Sadsbury Monthly Meeting. The Sadsbury minutes contain an interesting account of the beginnings of the York County meetings and we shall let the records tell their own tale.

Until some years later, when a meeting-house was built, this meeting evidently was held at the house of John Day, for the early marriages<sup>2</sup> are known to have taken place there.

The following list of witnesses to the marriage certificate is of interest as showing who were the settlers at that date :

The original Newberry Meeting land, which is in the present village of Newberrytown, consisted of a hexagonal tract<sup>1</sup> of 42 acres and 61 perches, surveyed April 10, 1767, to John Garretson and Joseph Hutton, in trust for the Society of Friends. Our information about the early meeting-houses is very meagre, but the first building, which is said to have been of logs,<sup>2</sup> was probably erected on this tract. The old burial ground,<sup>3</sup> which at the time of the writer's visit to the place in 1897 was an almost impenetrable wilderness of briars and sumac, is all of the plot that is now owned by the Society. The remainder of the land and the meeting-house,<sup>4</sup> which according to the inscribed stone in the west gable was erected in 1792,<sup>5</sup> was sold about 1811, by authority of a special act of the State Legislature,<sup>1</sup> and the meeting was moved to another location about two miles from the town. Here a stone meeting-house was built on a five-acre lot sold to Jesse Wickersham and George Garretson, in trust for the Society, by Samuel Garretson and Alice his wife, by deed of 10 Mo. 4, 1811.<sup>2</sup> The meeting is now extinct, and at the time of my visit in 1897 the meeting-house was in a sad state of decay, but recently it has been recovered with a slate roof and thoroughly repaired.<sup>3</sup> In 1897, the graveyard presented a well-kept appearance and was enclosed by an iron fence.

The Newberry community received a considerable body of the Irish Friends, but not so large as did Warrington and Menallen. Some of those who located at Newberry were: Timothy Kirk and his sons Jacob, Timothy, Caleb, Ezekiel, and Jonathan Kirk; Robert Whinery, originally from Grange, probably near Charlemont; Robert Miller and his son Samuel; George Boyd; Joshua Low; Joseph and John Hutton; William Wilson; and several members of the Hobson family.

<sup>1</sup> At Warrington Monthly Meeting, 12 Mo., 19, 1810, "Newberry preparative meeting informs they have agreed to sell the land where the present meeting House is built and to purchase other in a more convenient and central place."

Warrington

Warrington Meeting, in Warrington Township, about nine miles south-west of Newberry and midway between the present villages of Wellsville and Rossville, was regularly established<sup>1</sup> in 1745,<sup>2</sup> and a log meeting-house<sup>3</sup> erected the same year on a tract of 29 acres and 156 perches, "near the

This was the marriage of James Frazier to Rebecca Cox, daughter of Thomas Cox. The following is a list of the persons who signed the marriage certificate :

This log meeting-house stood a little south-east of the present stone building, on a part of the tract that has since been enclosed in the graveyard. The foundations were discovered in the latter 80's by persons digging in the graveyard.

A warrant, dated July 5, 1745, was issued for the land to be held in trust for the Society of Friends, but owing to an irregularity, the land was later, by proclamation, declared vacant and afterward granted by patent, dated 1 Mo. 22, 1767, from John Penn, Lieutenant-Governor, to William Garretson, William Underwood, William Penrose, and Peter Cleaver, in trust for the Society, the consideration being £9, 12s, 9d.<sup>1</sup>

In 1769,<sup>2</sup> a new stone meeting-house was built near the old one.<sup>3</sup> In 1782, it was found necessary to enlarge the building to almost double its original size in order to accommodate the Quarterly Meeting, and a stone addition was made to the north end.<sup>4</sup> The following year the old end was thoroughly repaired and given a new floor and a new

<sup>3</sup> At Western Quarterly Meeting, held in Chester County, 8 Mo. 21, 1769, Warrington Monthly Meeting reported "One new Meeting House built at Warrington near the old one." George McMillan, an Irish Friend, of Warrington, son of Thomas McMillan, from Ballinacree Meeting, County Antrim, notes in the credit column of his Account Book (1769-1795), which is in possession of the writer, a descendant, that in March, 1769, there was "due by subscription to Wm. Garitson for bilding a New meeting house in Warnton, £3," and in January, 1770 "by ditto, £1." In the debtor column he notes: "May 5th, 1769, Pay<sup>d</sup> to Wm. On account of the westward emigration the regular meeting was discontinued about the middle of

For several months afterward we find Walker turning aside from his many other duties and actively engaged in pushing forward the building of the meeting-house. One day (7 Mo. 30) he goes to York for lime; another he is hauling stone; and another (8 Mo. 7), he drives "to the pigeon hills for Lime 35 Bushels." 8 Mo. 8, "Ditto and halling Corner Stone from Elihu Underwood." 8 Mo. 27 he is "halling the Summer Beam." By 9 Mo. 6, 6th day, the stone work had so far progressed that our diarist notes, "At our Meeting f[or] Suffrings Raising y<sup>e</sup> New End of y<sup>e</sup> meeting house." 10 Mo. 14, he hauled "Shingles from y<sup>e</sup> Meeting house to Wm. McMullins [brother of George McMillan] to Soak." By 10 Mo. 21, no doubt the shingles were sufficiently soaked, and evidently he is returning them, when he writes under this date, "halling Shingals for y<sup>e</sup> Meeting house."

The addition was soon completed, and, 1 Mo. 2, 1783, we find the committee settling with "the Masons for Building y<sup>e</sup> new meeting house and ther is Due to them £44-4-0."

Repairs on the old end were begun the following summer. 5 Mo. 27, 1783, they were "Striping the old Roof off[f]," and 6 Mo. 20, "halling Sleepers for the Meeting house." 8 Mo. 11, they were "taking up the Meeting house floore." 9 Mo. 26, Walker went "to Manahan to Allin Tarbuts for a Load of Boards for y<sup>e</sup> Meeting." 11 Mo. 17, they settled "with the Carpenters that Built the Meeting house; it Came to £47-15-7½."

the nineteenth century, and now meetings are held on only one First-day each year.

A large number of Irish Friends made their way to the Warrington settlement. Among them were Thomas Wilson, from Grange, near Charlemont, about 1748, a little later removing to Fairfax Meeting, Virginia; Thomas Blackburn, from Ballyhagen, County Armagh, about 1749; the brothers George, John, and William McMillan, from Nantmeal, Chester County, about 1750; John Marsh and sons John, Joshua, Jonathan, and William, also from Nantmeal, about same date; Peter Marsh, brother of John, from same place about same date; William Nevitt, a minister in the Society, from Moate, County West Meath, about 1751; William Hutton, from New Garden, Chester County, about 1751; Samuel Hutton, from Exeter, Berks County, about 1753; Nicholas Steer, from Sadsbury, about 1759; John Boyd and son William, from Sadsbury, the former about 1765 and the latter about 1754; James Love, from Sadsbury, about 1761; Francis and Thomas Wilkinson, with their mother, Elizabeth, widow of Joseph Wilkinson, from Chester County, about 1760; Francis Hobson,<sup>1</sup> from Ballyhagen, County Armagh, about 1764; Aaron Coates, from Bradford, Chester County, about 1767; William Pillar, from Grange near Charlemont, about 1767,

About nine miles south-west of Warrington, in Latimer, now Huntington, Township, Adams County, is Huntington Meeting House, situated on a wooded ridge overlooking Bermudian Creek, some two miles south-east of the Borough of York Springs, formerly Petersburg. Unauthorized meetings were held in the neighborhood as early as 1745, for at Sadsbury Monthly Meeting, 9 Mo. 4, 1745, William Garretson was directed to read three papers of acknowledgment "at Huntington Meeting." These meetings evidently convened at the house of John Cox, where nearly all the early marriages<sup>1</sup> are known to have oc-

The Meeting land, consisting of a rectangular tract of five acres, called "Zion," was conveyed to trustees of the Meeting by William Beals, by deed of 12 Mo. 9, 1766, and was part of 50 acres granted to Beals by the Proprietors' warrant of June 24, 1763.<sup>2</sup> The present edifice, erected in 1790,<sup>3</sup> has recently been covered with a slate roof and otherwise placed in a good state of preservation, but regular meetings have long ceased to be held.

In the early years of the Huntington settlement, few if any Irish Friends located there, but in the latter half of the century several families made it their home.

The first location of Menallen<sup>4</sup> Meeting was about seven miles west of Huntington, on the east side of Opossum Creek, in Menallen, now Butler, Township, Adams County. 6 Mo. 4, 1746, Sadsbury Monthly Meeting "tolerates the Friends

In its early years Menallen Meeting was distinctively an Irish meeting, the majority of its members being from Ireland. Among them were John Blackburn,<sup>4</sup> Judge of the York County Court in 1764, County Treasurer in 1759 and 1766,<sup>5</sup> and the tract to the Dunkers or German Baptists, at the rate of one dollar annually for a term of fifty years. Upon this plot the Dunkers erected a wooden meeting house and laid out a burial ground. York Meeting

The Friends were among the earliest settlers at York, the county-seat of York County, but a meeting seems not to have been held there until 1754. Under date of 12 Mo. 21st of that year, Warrington Monthly Meeting minutes state: "Our Friends in and about York, living remote from any of our meetings, Requests the liberty of holding a meeting among themselves for this winter season, which this meeting has good unity with." A regular meeting was established in 1764, and on October 29th of the following year a lot of ground on the north side of Philadelphia

<sup>1</sup> Moses Harlan obtained a patent for 855 acres of land on the upper fork of the Conewago Creek, in Menallen Township, Oct. 9, 1745. He and Margaret, his wife, by deed of July 21, 1747, conveyed to John Blackburn, 258 acres thereof. The will of Moses Harlan, of Menallen Township, was dated 10 Mo. 10, 1747 and proven March 29, 1749. He mentions his son-in-law John Blackburn; grandson Jacob Cox, son of daughter Mary Cox; grandsons Thomas and Moses Blackburn; and granddaughter Dinah Cox

Street was purchased from Nathan Hussey and Edith his wife.<sup>1</sup> Upon this lot a brick meeting-house was erected in 1766.<sup>2</sup> By will, dated 1 Mo. 25, 1773, Nathan Hussey bequeathed to the Meeting a lot adjoining on the west. About 1786 the meeting-house was enlarged to its present proportions, an addition being made to the west end. The Society in the city is now almost extinct and regular meetings have been discontinued.

Among the most prominent of the Irish Friends to settle in York were the Loves and Kirks.

We see, then, that the Irish Friends first located in the original counties of Philadelphia and Chester. Thence, with the expansion of the Province, many of them joined the southward and westward migrations of Friends, which during the third and fourth decades of the eighteenth century began from the Quaker strongholds of the original settlements.

Expansion of Pennsylvania
Quakerism

For three-quarters of a century one of these streams of Quaker migration injected a new and vigorous element into the Quakerism of the South.<sup>3</sup>

Southward

At Western Quarterly Meeting, 8 Mo. 11, 1767, report was made that "Friends in and about York have now built a Meeting-House."

<sup>3</sup> For the principal facts of the southward movement I am indebted to Dr. Stephen B. Weeks' Southern Quakers and Slavery, which is a most thorough and scholarly treatment of the subject.

The movement reached the Monocacy region of Maryland about 1725. Here it rested for a time, and then crossed the Potomac River and struck Hopewell, north of what is now Winchester, in Frederick County, Virginia, in 1732.<sup>1</sup> In that year a company of Friends from Pennsylvania, under the leadership of Alexander Ross, an Irish Friend, settled on a tract of 100,000 acres of land, called Hopewell, on Opequan Creek, in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley, obtaining a charter for the land from the government of Virginia. A meeting called Opequan, afterward Hopewell, was established two years later; and Hopewell Monthly Meeting, including the meetings of Hopewell and Monocacy, in 1735.<sup>2</sup> Among the Pennsylvania Friends of Irish name who made their way to Hopewell we find the Kirks, Hollingsworths, Wilsons, Greggs, Hiatts, and Steers.

About the same time with the founding of the Hopewell settlement a branch of the same migration moved from Maryland into Loudon and Fairfax Counties, Virginia; thence to the southern counties of that colony; and by 1743 it had gotten as far as Carver's Creek in Bladen County, North Carolina. During the next twenty years Friends swarmed into the central sections of the latter state and founded Cane Creek, New Garden, and a large number of other monthly meetings. About 1760, the movement was once more on its way southward, and by the time of the Revolution had spent itself in the founding of a series of meetings in South Carolina and Georgia.

Among the Friends of the Carolinas we find the Starrs, McCools, Steers, Greggs, Musgraves, Sharps, Hobsons, Newlins, Hadlys, Harlans, Hollingsworths, Coates', Dixons, Stanfields, Jacksons, Johnsons, Lindleys, Milhous', Hiatts, Hinshaws,<sup>1</sup> and many other families of Irish name, formerly from Pennsylvania.

By the end of the eighteenth century the southern Friends had taken such a firm stand against the institution of slavery, that they were no longer able to come into economic competition with their neighbors who utilized slave labor. Their situation was rendered still more uncomfortable by the hostile attitude assumed by these slave-holding neighbors, and the passing of the century witnessed a great exodus of the Society to the newly opened free Northwest Territory. Thousands of Friends, including many of Irish name originally from Pennsylvania, left their old homes to escape the hated system, and following several routes through Virginia and Kentucky, poured into the new country.

Westward

The direct westward migration,<sup>1</sup> as previously narrated, reached Sadsbury, in Lancaster County, about 1723. By 1727 it was on the east bank of the Susquehanna, where it halted for a decade; then with the close of the Cresap War it moved in full force upon York County. Here its westward course was checked for a time by the great barriers of the South Mountain and the Allegheny ranges, and by the French occupation of the western country, and the movement was deflected southward into Maryland, Virginia, and the Carolinas; but with the close of the French and Indian War, at the Peace of Paris in 1763, the rich alluvial lands of the Monongahela Valley or Redstone Region in Western Pennsylvania, which with the Mississippi Valley had now come into possession of the English, were thrown open to settlement, and once more the tide of migration was westward bound.

From the original York County the migration passed to points in the Cumberland Valley, most detachments moving through Shippensburg. Here the migration divided. One branch, taking the less mountainous and, for a time at least, the more popular route, proceeded down the Cumberland Valley into Maryland and then followed the devious course of the valley of the Potomac to Fort Cumberland; thence, advancing along the line of march of the ill-fated Braddock, it crossed the great ridge of the Alleghenies, and passing again into Pennsylvania made its way over Laurel Hill through Beesontown,<sup>1</sup> to Redstone Old Fort, later Brownsville, on the Monongahela, where it was diffused over the valley of that river. The other branch, crossing an almost continuous series of mountain ridges, advanced directly westward along the old military road from Shippensburg by way of Fort Littleton and Bedford<sup>2</sup> to Redstone, where the two branches were again united.

So far as known, the first Friend to settle in the Redstone region was Henry Beeson, who removed from Berkeley County, Virginia, in 1768, and became the founder of Beesontown, now Uniontown.<sup>3</sup> He was soon joined by other Friends from Virginia, Maryland, and a little later by those from the eastern part of Pennsylvania;<sup>4</sup> and by 1773, when the ministers John Parrish and Zebulon Heston,<sup>5</sup> on their return from a mission to the

In this same year of 1776, the British commander at Detroit began to incite the Indians to attack the frontier of Pennsylvania, and the assaults of the red men upon Wheeling and the neighborhood of Pittsburgh in this and the following year caused such alarm among the settlers that large numbers, including some Friends, returned to their former homes. Margaret Cook, a minister, on her way to this county in the spring of 1778, mentions in her Journal that she and her companions "met some going back with their fleetings<sup>3</sup> driving as if the Indians were just behind them, and the road was so filled with pack horses that it was difficult getting along."<sup>4</sup> Later in this year the Quarterly Meeting was informed "that many of the Families of Friends settled there have removed back to the Meetings from whence they went and they were much dispersed.”<sup>1</sup>

After the victories of George Rogers Clark in 1778–79, and the subjugation of the Indians, the Redstone settlers feared attack no longer, and many of those who had fled now returned; but the remainder of the war period was marked by few accessions of emigrants, a census of the Friends in these sections in 1780 showing only seventeen families or about one hundred and fifty persons.<sup>2</sup> The close of active hostilities, however, witnessed a great inpouring of immigrants along the two routes. In 1782, a meeting for worship and a preparative meeting were established at Westland, about six miles west of Redstone Fort. By 1785, the Quaker population had so increased that another meeting for worship was erected at Redstone, and these two meetings were formed into a monthly meeting called Westland. Other meetings soon followed, and in 1793 a new monthly meeting called Redstone was organized.

Among the Irish Friends in the van of the movement, as mentioned by Parrish in his Journal of 1773, were Joseph and Anthony Blackburn and Simon and James McGrew, living between the two Sewicklys; Solomon Shepherd and his brother

Joshua Brown, travelling in 1787, speaks of Joshua Dixon, of Fallowfield, in what is now Washington County<sup>1</sup>; and Peter Yarnall, who made a visit in 1789, mentions Alexander and Finly McGrew, of near the Sewicklys, and Henry Dixon on the Monongahela.<sup>2</sup> Other Quaker arrivals of Irish name, as shown by the records of Westland and Redstone Monthly Meetings, were the Huttons, Pennocks, Hobsons, Newlins, McMillans, Whinerys, and Kirks; in fact, few Irish names were unrepresented in this and the later great migration to the Middle West.

By the opening of the nineteenth century the Friends became infected more strongly than ever with the prevailing spirit of migration, and again we find them on the westward march. A stream of migration more powerful than any of the preceding, arising to considerable extent from new sources in eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and even New York, now flowed in a steady current through the two well-worn channels to the gateway of the Redstone region, where, gathering new strength, it moved to the River Ohio and spread out over the broad and fertile plains of the Old Northwest. Here, mingling with the great stream of Quakers from the South, it gave rise to many new meetings, almost if not equaling in number those of the Atlantic seaboard, and became an important factor in the formation and development of the great commonwealths of the Mississippi Valley.

CHAPTER II.

SOCIAL LIFE OF THE IRISH FRIENDS

Introductory

OF the social conditions among the Irish Friends in early Pennsylvania some idea will have been formed from the preceding chapters, particularly from Robert Parke's long letter<sup>1</sup>; now let us consider this phase of our history more in detail, dwelling especially upon some of the more important sides of country life. The diaries, wills, and inventories of the time, and the ancient records of Friends, abound in quaint and interesting items reflecting the manners and customs of the period, and it is these rich stores chiefly that have been drawn upon. On many points, however, authentic material was not at hand, and this in part accounts for the somewhat inadequate and fragmentary character of portions of the chapter.

Irish Friends Well Adapted for Pioneer Life

The Irish Friends were an active and enterprising people, particularly well adapted for pioneer life, doubtless more so than the English and Welsh Friends; for the unsettled state of Ireland through so long a period,—that of the Cromwellian Settlement, the raids of the Rapparees, the troubles between James II. and William III., and the religious persecutions and other causes of emigration—had inured them to privation and hardship and prepared them to contend with the difficulties of the new country.

Although the majority of these Friends were of English stock, yet those families that had been in Ireland for a generation or more had become modified by their Irish environment and by contact with their restless and aggressive Celtic- and Scotch-Irish neighbors, developing habits and characteristics that distinguished them from the English Friends of the Province.

*Mostly of English Stock
but Modified by Irish Environment*

These characteristics crop out in the old meeting records, which show that the younger Irish Friends especially were impulsive and full of spirit, chafing under the restraint of the strict and repressive discipline of the Society as enforced in those days ; and it is quite common, as we shall see, to find them “marrying out by y<sup>e</sup> priest” and otherwise breaking the rules. In this connection it is also worthy of note that in those meetings in which the Irish element was strong there was a tendency to be more liberal in belief and less stringent in the administration of some of the rules of discipline.

In those neighborhoods where the clan spirit was strong, and where most of the marriages occurred among their own number, these Friends preserved much of their Irish identity for generations ; but by the early years of the nineteenth century they had lost much of this peculiarity and were becoming rapidly absorbed in the new composite American race.

The Arrival

On their first arrival from Ireland, and before their own homes could be provided, immigrant Friends did not want for food and shelter ; in that era of simple kindness and free-hearted hospitality the old settlers were ever ready with open door to receive the newcomers and to assist and counsel them in choosing a location. The great body of these Friends brought only small capital with them, but they were young and vigorous and the favorable opportunities offered here enabled the most of them to begin a fairly comfortable settlement. Men with families usually brought their household goods with them, purchasing in the Colony, horses, cattle, and such other necessities that could be bought to better advantage on this side of the water.

Temporary Home near Landing Place

It was customary for those Friends who intended to establish themselves upon inland plantations, first to provide temporary homes for their families near the place of landing, and then to go, often several in a company, prospecting for farm land in the interior.

The Settlement

Ties of kin and of friendship had an important bearing on the selection of lands ; those who had been kinsmen or old friends in Ireland naturally desired to locate near each other in Pennsylvania, and in consequence we find such distinctive Irish Quaker settlements as those of Newark and Centre in New Castle County, New Garden in Chester County, Sadsbury in Lancaster County, and Menallen in the original York County.

*Selection of Land Affected by Ties of Kin
Friendship*

Once the land was selected and steps taken to secure the title thereto, usually by warrant<sup>1</sup> from the Proprietary, haste was made to remove the families thither so that the settlement might be well advanced before the winter season had begun.<sup>2</sup> Pack-horses, almost the only means of transportation, were now made ready with saddles and pillions, and the women and children and farm and household effects were loaded upon them, the men frequently travelling on foot, leading the horses and driving the flocks and herds before them. Thus equipped the little procession would set off through the dark and lonely woods, following the Indian trails and the paths marked by blazed trees to the new abode.

New Home*

<sup>1</sup>The planter applied at the land office for the warrant, which was issued by the Proprietary, or the Commissioners, and addressed to the Receiver-General, authorizing that official to have a survey made on terms described in the document. The warrant then passed to the Surveyor-General, who made a copy, returning the original to the warrantee to be held as evidence of title until the patent was issued. The Surveyor-General gave the copy of the warrant with an order to the Deputy-Surveyor of the county in which the land was located, directing the survey to be made. After the Deputy-Surveyor had completed his measurements, he reported to the office of the Surveyor-General, who then issued a patent to the purchaser of the land. It usually happened that the patent was not issued until some years after the warrant.

Clearing the Land

The site of the dwelling on the plantation was generally near a spring of water, either on low ground or on the warm southern slope of a hill, for the sake of protection from the bleak and piercing winds of winter. With an energy and enthusiasm born of the thought that they were no longer tenants but absolute owners of the soil, the whole family now worked to win a home from the unconquered wilds. The trees fell quickly under the sturdy blows of the woodman's sharp-edged axe, and soon a little clearing appeared amidst the encircling forest. The next concern was the erection of a house. This first habitation was only a rude cabin built of timber hewn and sawed by hand from the fallen trees; but before many years had elapsed, with the large increase that blessed his labors, the farmer was enabled to erect a more comfortable and commodious dwelling of brick or stone, often making it an addition to the original house.

House Building

There were several methods of constructing the first wooden house. One of those suggested by Pennin his Directions to Such Persons as are inclined to America,<sup>1</sup> issued about 1682, was doubtless followed by many of the early settlers. He writes:<sup>2</sup>

board House*

To build then, an House of thirty foot long and eighteen foot broad, with a partition near the middle, and another to divide one end of the House into two small Rooms, there must be eight Trees of about sixteen Inches square, and cut off, to Posts of about fifteen long, which the House must stand upon, and four pieces, two of thirty foot long, and two of eighteen foot long, for Plates, which must lie upon the top of those Posts, the whole length and breadth of the House, for the Gists to rest upon. There must be ten Gists of twenty foot long, to bear the Loft, and two false Plates of thirty foot long to lie upon the ends of the Gists for the Rafters to be fixed upon, twelve pare of Rafters of about twenty foot, to bear the Roof of the House, with several other small pieces; as Wind-beams, Braces, Studs, etc. which are made out of the Waste Timber. For Covering the House, Ends, and Sides, and for the Loft, we use Clabboard, which is Rived feather-edged, of five foot and a half long, that well Drawn, lyes close and smooth: The Lodging Room may be lined with the same, and filled up between, which is very Warm. These homes usually endure ten years without Repair. . . . The lower flour is the Ground, the upper Clabboard. This may seem a mean way of Building but 'tis sufficient and safest for ordinary beginners.

Dankers and Sluyter<sup>1</sup> the Dutch Labadists, on their journey from New York to the Delaware, in 1679, met with this form of house at the Falls of Delaware, now Trenton, New Jersey. and have left the following description:

Nov. 17th.—Most of the English, and many others, have their houses made of nothing but clapboards, as they call them there, in this manner: they first made a wooden frame, the same as they do in Westphalia, and at Altona, but most so strong; they then split the boards of clapboard, so that they are like cooper's pipe staves, except they are not bent. These are made very thin with a large knife, so that the thickest end is about a pinck (little finger) thick, and the other is made sharp, like the edge of a knife. They are about five or six feet long, and are nailed on the outside of the frame, with the ends lapped over each other. They are not usually laid so close together, as to prevent you from sticking a finger between them, in consequence either of their not being well joined, or the boards being crooked. When it is cold and windy the best people plaster them with clay. Such are most all the English houses in the country, except those they have which were built by people of other nations. Now this house was new and airy; and as the night was very windy from the north, and extreemey cold.

This description is confirmed in "An Account of East Jersey, in 1684":<sup>1</sup>

"They build not only of Wood, but also of Stone and brick, yet most of Country Houses are built of Wood only Trees split and set up on end on the ground, and coverings to their Houses are mostly Shingles made of Oak, Chestnut and Cedar Wood, which makes a very neat covering:"

The Log House

The most common form of the early dwelling, however, was the more permanent log cabin,<sup>2</sup> built of squared logs, placed horizontally one upon the other and notched together at the corners. The interstices between the logs were filled in or "chinked" with stones or wedges of wood, and then plastered over with mortar or clay. The roof was covered with boards or oak shingles, either pinned by wooden pins or pegs or held in place by "weight timbers."<sup>3</sup> Says Ash-

<sup>2</sup> Dankers and Sluyter (Memoirs L. I. Hist. Soc., I., 175) in their journey of 1679, give an account of the log house of Jacob Hendricks, a Swede, of Burlington, New Jersey, stating that it was "made according to the Swedish mode, and as they usually build their houses here, which are block houses, being nothing else than entire trees, split through the middle, or squared out of the rough, and placed in the form of a square, upon each other, as high as they wish to have the house; the ends of these timbers are let into each other, about a foot from the ends, half of one into half of the other. The whole structure is thus made, without a nail or a spike. The ceiling and roof do not exhibit much finer work, except among the most careful people, who have the ceiling planked and a glass window. The doors are wide enough, but very low, so that you have to stoop in entering. These houses are quite light and warm; but the chimney is placed in a corner."

mead :<sup>1</sup> "Locks in ordinary use were unknown ; the doors [were hung on wooden hinges or straps of hide and] were opened by strings, which on being pulled from the outside raised heavy wooden latches within, to which they were made fast, and intrusion was prevented when the inmates pulled the latch-strings in at the outer doors. From this common practice originated the ancient saying descriptive of generous hospitality, 'the latch-string is always out.'"

A stone chimney of immense size, capable of receiving a whole cord stick on the hearth, was built into one end of the house. The great fireplace was used for cooking and heating. Here were to be found frying-pans, chafing-dishes, and spits, and suspended over the andirons by pot-hooks from an iron bar or crane, were the pots and kettles, which were so highly prized by the settlers that they were frequently bequeathed by will. George Harlan, of Kennett, in his will of 1714, devised to his son Aaron a "great brass kettle," and William Halliday, of New Garden, in 1741, left "unto my Daughter Deborah Lindly my big pott that I brought from Ireland." We may be sure that his bequest was all the more highly regarded because it had come over sea.

Halliday also gave to his daughter-in-law, Mabel Halliday, "a gridle."

The great hearth fire was the center of attraction in the long winter evenings. Its dancing flames filled the room with good cheer, throwing into the shadow the bare and homely outlines and lighting up with gentle touch the prominent features,—the rude furniture, the floor bare save for a rug or two, the overhanging beams, the mantel bright with pewter and brass,<sup>1</sup> and the walls unadorned excepting perhaps for a map or sampler or a fowling-piece. Here by the fireside the household and perhaps a few neighbors would assemble to enjoy the evening fire and to chat of affairs of common interest and to exchange the marvelous stories current in those days; but no one has equalled the gentle Whittier in giving the spirit of this scene of domestic peace and contentment:

Shut in from all the world without,
We sat the clean-winged hearth about,
Content to let the north-wind roar
In baffled rage at pane and door,
While the red logs before us beat
The frost-line back with tropic heat;
And ever, when a louder blast
Shook beam and rafter as it passed,
The merrier up its roaring draught
The great throat of the chimney laughed;
The house-dog on its paws outspread
Laid to the fire his drowsy head,

<sup>1</sup> Dublin Half Year Meeting, in writing to Friends on the Delaware, in 1681, advise them to avoid "flourishing needless Pewter and Brass" in their kitchens.

The cat's dark silhouette on the wall
 A couchant tiger's seemed to fall ;
 And, for the winter fireside meet,
 Between the andirons' straddling feet,
 The mug of cider simmered slow,
 The apples sputtered in a row,
 And, close at hand, the basket stood
 With nuts from brown October's wood.

What matter how the night behaved ?
 What matter how the north-wind raved ?
 Blow high, blow low, not all its snow
 Could quench our hearth-fire's ruddy glow.<sup>1</sup>

A study of the inventories of the estates of Inventories some of the deceased Irish Friends shows quite accurately the character and extent of their possessions, and enables us to form a fairly clear idea of the furnishings of the houses and of the stock and implements of the farms, and to compare the wealth of the settlers with that of their

Chester, weaver," made in 1714, after Lowden had been in this country about three years, indicates how bare and meagre were some of these homes :

One Cow and Calf; a horse; wheat 6 acres; a feather Bedd and Bedding; a flock Bedd and Bedding; Course Sheets; Table Linnen Wareing Apparell; Linnings; 2 Saddles and a pair of Boots; Iron Tools; Gunn and Gunn Barrell; Small irons; Twoo potts; Pewter & two Brass Candlesticks; two Chests; An Old Box; Some Wooden Vessels; A Spade; Three Hundred Acres of Land. [Total value of estate £ 205-2-0].

The absence of the items of furniture such as chairs, tables, and bedsteads, from this and other inventories of the time, seems due to the fact that much of the furniture was of such crude construction, that it was not considered worthy of inclusion in the list. John Miller, yeoman and miller, one of the largest land owners of the New Garden settlement, died in the same year as Lowdon, but seems to have been more well-to-do. His household goods were :<sup>1</sup> potts; an old Gunn barrell & a spitt; nine Sickles<sup>1</sup>; a spade & two Shovles; Seven bars of Lead; Some barr Iron; two Crooks & two Smoothing Irons; four old bells.

From the articles of this list we can well picture to ourselves the appointments of a New Garden dinner table in 1714. The rough home-made board with its supporting trestles was covered with snowy cloth—board-cloth—and napkins of linen, spun, woven, and bleached by the good housewife, doubtless, in her old home in Ireland. The dishes were mostly of wood with some few pieces of pewter, always kept bright and shining. The center-piece was the salt-cellar, which in many colonial homes divided the guests, seated “above the salt,” from those of lesser note, placed “below the salt.” Large shallow pewter platters were heaped high with meats and vegetables. Wooden trenchers served as plates, and wooden noggins as drinking cups; and mustard cup, wooden tankards for water or liquor, and pewter porringers likewise graced the board. There were no covered dishes, saucers, glass or china, although earthenware was to be found on some tables.

*A New

<sup>1</sup> From evidence of old diaries the sickle seems to have been used in Chester County up to the Revolution, and then the grain-cradle was introduced. Richard Barnard, of East Marlborough, on a visit to Deer Creek, Harford County, Md., notes in his manuscript diary, 6 Mo. 4, 1775, that he “observed a Creadle to Cradle wheat,” and on 7 Mo. 10th we find him engaged “about Cradle to Cradle wheat.” On the 24th of the same month Samuel Hunt (see Futhey and Cope, 338), of East Caln, records that “Leathe Ingrum began to Cradle Oats at 1s. 6 d. pr acre & 1 Pint of Rum a Day.”

Knives were used, but forks did not come into general use until later, so that the hands had to be constantly employed for holding the food, and on that account napkins were a necessity.<sup>1</sup>

Farm*

From other items enumerated in Miller's inventory, we may judge of his general equipment for farming:

Six Cows & two Calves; two yoaik of oxen; one Bull; a two-year old hefer 2 year old bulocks & 1 hefer; twenty Sheep & Eight Lambs; three Horses a mare & Coult; whate in y<sup>e</sup> barn; a field of y<sup>e</sup> wheat & barly; one Stack of oats; flower & wheate in y<sup>e</sup> mill; the mill and Bolt-ing mills and four hundred ackers of Land; three hundred ackers of Land near y<sup>e</sup> Meeting hous; The Housing & plantation Containing three hundred ackers; Joyners Small tools; oagers & hand Saws; two old whip Saws & a Cross Cut Saw; one Cart & gears belonging to it; two plows & three Irons; three pitching & three Grubing axes; two old Squaring axes & two hand axes; one grinding Stone; an old Mare & Colt. <sup>1</sup> Some wills and other inventories of Irish Quakers mentioning indented servants were those of Joseph Coebourn, of Aston Township, now Delaware County, 1723, "A Woman Sarv<sup>t</sup> 3 years £8" and "A nagro man called Tobitt £30," the latter no doubt held as a slave; Thomas Jackson, of Marlborough, Chester County, 1727, "my two Sarvants Samuel Hughes and Elizabeth Driskle [£15]," Joseph Kelly [£10], and William Kean, 20£"; Ann Marshall, of New Garden, "late from Ireland," 1729, "a Sarvant Man w<sup>ch</sup> She Sould to ffra: Hobson," £8, and "ye halfe of y<sup>e</sup> time of a sarvant girl," £4; James Miller, of New Garden, 1732, "a Sarvan man," 12£; Joseph Hutton, of New Garden, 1735, "2 Servant Women," £15; Neal Moony, of London Grove, 1751, "a Boy," £10; William Pim, of East Caln, Chester, County, 1751, "a Servant Lads time, £9."

carts had come into use on the farm. The dressing table is rather an unexpected luxury.

There is much of similarity in all these lists, but I shall give yet another including a number of articles not enumerated in the preceding lists. It is the inventory<sup>1</sup> of James Lindley, smith, of London Grove, Chester County, who had the most considerable estate of any of those mentioned:

[Total value £1115.9s.8d.]

The bells mentioned, no doubt, were those attached to cattle and sheep in order to trace the animals in their wanderings through the woods. This is the only reference to a "Looking glass" that I have noted in the inventories. The best beds were filled with feathers, but many persons of the poorer sort had to be satisfied with ticks filled with chaff. William Pim, of East Caln, in 1751, had a "Beadstead, Curtains and Rods."

The tall "Grandfather" clock was seldom met with in the early years, but later it was not uncommon to find it in the homes of the prosperous farmers. In 1723, Joseph Coeburn's "Clock & Case" was appraised at £10, and in 1728, Thomas Jackson, of Marlborough, Chester County, had a clock and case valued at £12, and also a watch.

The manner of purchasing one of these clocks, shown in the manuscript account book of George McMillan (a native of County Antrim, Ireland), of Warrington, York County, is an interesting example of the system of barter common in new countries where money is scarce. In 1 Mo., 1774, we find this Friend buying a clock case from Thomas Kirk, an Irish Friend, of York; he notes on the credit side of the account under that date:

and on the debit side at another date:

Allso by 2 bushels of Indin corn.....	0	6	0

This case McMillan took to Rudolph Spangler, clockmaker and silversmith, of York, later a captain in the "Flying Camp" of the Revolution, and had it fitted with clock works. He then records in his credit column :

Rudy Spangler Credit by one Clock Set agoing at 12 o'clock and a little later in the same year in the debit column :

This ancient clock,<sup>1</sup> measuring about seven feet in height and bearing on its face the inscription, "Rudy Spangler, York-town," is preserved as a precious heirloom in the McMillan family<sup>1</sup> and is still an excellent timekeeper.

Dress The dress of the Friends in the early years of Pennsylvania differed but little from that of the other settlers of the same class. It was not until the close of the first quarter of the eighteenth century that Friends began to make an effective protest against extravagance in apparel and to adopt a more formal costume<sup>2</sup> of "home-spun drab and gray." The clothing of the planters was generally simple and substantial, coarse cloth and deerskin being used for that of the men, and linsey and worsted for that of the women. The costume of a man consisted of leather breeches, long collarless coat reaching to the knees, waistcoat, neck cloth, woolen yarn stockings, low buckle shoes, and a flat felt or beaver hat. Often in summer, breeches made of a coarse linen called osenbrig were worn. Robert Parke, in his letter of 1725, writes:

In Summer time they wear nothing but a Shirt & Linnen Trousers, which are breeches and stockings all in one made of Linnen, they are fine Cool wear in Summer.

Wigs were worn by many Friends Penn attended carefully to his wigs, and purchased several during his short stay here. In a letter from London in 1702, he writes to Logan: "Did not a fine new wig come to thy hands for me? It cost me fifty shillings sterling."<sup>1</sup> In 1719, Jonathan Dickinson, a Friend, in writing to London for his clothes, says: "I want for myself and my three sons, each a wig, light good bobs."<sup>2</sup> The Friends to a large extent had laid aside their "Wiggs" some time before the middle of the century, but the fashion was kept up in general society until 1755; then, with the return of Braddock's defeated army, who had lost their wigs in flight, the custom was abandoned.

Some of the wealthy Friends of Philadelphia had large and costly wardrobes for that time, as, for example, that of Robert Turner, one of the richest of the settlers, enumerated in his inventory,<sup>1</sup> made after his death, in 1700:

Upper Room above Stairs: 2 pairs of hair Plush Breeches lined with leather, £3. 10s; 1 Jacket & one Dublett Ditto £3. 10s; 1 pair of Old Black Leather Breeches £1; 2 pair of Leather Summer Breeches £1; 1 pair of Shagg Breeches 10s; 1 Course Broad Cloth Coat new, £2. 10s; 1 old Shagg Coat 15s; 1 Old Grey Coat, 10s; 1 Old Cloth Searge Coat Turned, 15s; 1 Old Jackett, 10s; 2 Wasted flustian Jacketts £1. 4s; 1 lining frock, 6s; 1 do. new, 10s; 2 white swan skin wast coats, £1. 4s; 2 Pair loosed Stockings; 3 pair yarn ditto 8s; 2 pair of Stirrup Stockings & 1 pair of Socks, 4s; 1 leather Belt, 3s; 2 Old Caster hatts, 8s; 1 pair of New Shoos & one pair old, 10s; 1 gray Jackett & a Neck Hood, 6s; 1 fustian Wastcoat, 10s; 5 pair of Stirrup Stockings, 11s. 8d; 9 Shirts at 10s., £4. 10s; 7 handkerchiefs, 10s. 4d; 5 Neck Cloths & 8 Night Capps, 13s; 2 Very old Jacketts two Old Coats three pair of Breeches & three pair old Stockings, 10s; 1 light Coloured Broad Cloth Coat not new, £2. 5s; 2 new Caster<sup>2</sup> hatts.

In 1726, Philadelphia Yearly Meeting took a decided position on the subject of plainness of apparel, the women in particular being advised to greater simplicity in such matters as follows:

"That immodest fashion of hooped petticoats, or the imitation of them, either by something put into their petticoats to make them set full or wearing more than is necessary, or any imitation whatsoever, which we take to be but a branch springing from the same corrupt root of pride. And also that none of our friends accustom themselves to wear gowns with superfluous folds behind but plain and decent; nor without aprons;<sup>1</sup> nor to wear superfluous gathers or plaits in their caps or pinnars; nor to wear their heads dressed high behind; neither to cut or lay their hair on their foreheads or temples.

<sup>2</sup> The caster hat, at the end of the seventeenth and beginning of the eighteenth century was distinguished from the "beaver" and was said to be of rabbit's fur. In 1688, "Of Hatts . . . the Caster is made of Coney Wooll mixt with Polony Wooll."—R. Holme in Armory, III., 129 (cited in Murray's Oxford Dictionary).

And that friends be careful to avoid striped shoes, or red or white heeled shoes or clogs; or shoes trimmed with gaudy colors.

Likewise that all friends be careful to avoid all superfluity of furniture in their houses, and as much as may be to refrain using gaudy flowers or striped calicoes and stuffs.

And also that no friends use that irreverant practice of taking snuff, or hand snuff-boxes one to the other in meetings.

Also that friends avoid the unnecessary use of fans in meetings, lest it divert the mind from more inward and spiritual exercise which all ought to be concerned in.

And also that friends do not accustom themselves to go with breasts or bare necks.<sup>2</sup>

The high degree of interdependence and division of labor that characterizes our modern life was quite unknown in these early days. At that time every farm house was a little factory and every farmer an adept in many branches of labor, and independent to a considerable extent of the outside world. In summer the farmer and his sons were busily engaged in clearing and planting the land; in winter, if the weather were too severe for outside work, they applied themselves to indoor labors, making shoes for the family, beating out implements of iron or constructing household furniture and utensils.

The wife and daughters were even more fully occupied than the men. They not only attended to a score or more of domestic duties—cooking, washing, dairying, candle-making, soap-making, spinning, knitting, and weeding the garden—but also frequently assisted the men in the work of the field; and in truth they might say with the old adage,

Man works from sun to sun,
But woman's work is never done.

The women devoted much time to the homespun industries, picking, carding, and spinning wool, and swingling, hatcheling and spinning flax; and from their own homespun they manufactured the clothing of the family. The large stores of linen that were produced by this industry were folded away with lavender in wooden chests, and were a source of much pride to the colonial housewife. Beautiful specimens of the linen made by the Irish Friends are still treasured as heirlooms in the families of descendants, and attest that the ancient skill in the handicraft for which Ireland is famous was not forgotten in the foster land.

Markets and Fairs

The produce of the farm was carried to Philadelphia, Chester, and New Castle, on horseback, and sold or exchanged for articles to be found at shops, fairs, and markets. Parke writes, in 1725: "There is 2 fairs yearly & 2 markets weekly in Philadelphia also 2 fairs yearly in Chester & Likewise in New Castle, but they Sell no Cattle nor horses no Living Creatures but altogether Merchants Goods, as hatts, Linnen & woolen Cloth, handkerchiefs, knives, Scizars, tapes & treds, buckels, Ribonds & all Sorts of necessarys fit for our wooden Country." He humorously adds : " & here all young men and women that wants wives or husbands may be Supplied. Lett this suffice for our fairs."

The early settlers were much annoyed by certain of the wild animals that preyed on their flocks and herds. Foxes and wolves were the most persistently destructive, but black bears also frequently stole into the farm yard and carried off fine porkers. In 1721, a bear was killed near Darby, now Delaware County, and yet ten or fifteen years later, when Nathaniel Newlin (son of Nathaniel), of Concord, married Esther Midkiff, of Darby, her parents were inclined to make objections because Newlin lived in the backwoods of Concord where bears abounded. Mrs. Deborah Logan relates that one night in 1740-41, one of these animals was seen at the old Logan home in Chester.<sup>1</sup> The family of Alphonsus Kirk, the early Irish Quaker settler, of New Castle County, had a thrilling experience with a bear. A granddaughter of Alphonsus Kirk, Rachael Price, a minister of Birmingham Meeting, Chester County, tells the story in her Recollections :<sup>2</sup>

A Bear Story

My father, William Kirk (son of Alphonus and Abigail Kirk) was born 1st mo., 1708. He and his youngest brother Timothy, had many adventures together when they were young; they used frequently to meet and talk these over, which was very entertaining to us children. One occurrence, however, which took place in their childhood, and which I heard my father relate, struck my infant mind with horror and dismay. It so happened that my grandmother was left at home with only these two little boys when a large bear came up near the door before she saw it. It was a double door, and she had only time to shut the lower part before he had his feet upon it, and she could not get the upper door shut quickly, as there was something hanging on it that prevented the door from closing. She pushed it against his paws with all her strength and called to the little boys to bring her the axe which was in the house, but they could not find it; then she told them to bring her the rolling pin, with which she beat his feet until he withdrew them, when she could get the door fastened. He then attempted to climb on a shed which was over the door, and which extended to a window in the second story. She seeing his determination told her little sons to go to the cellar and get into a chest that was there, but not to shut down the lid so tightly they could not breathe, while she went up stairs to keep him out, if possible. The shed was built of round saplings, which were covered with brush (wood) and a light snow. Some of these rolled under the clumsy creature and let him fall through. They had killed a beef that day, the smell of which had probably attracted him; she threw some parts of it to him which he devoured with great eagerness, appearing to be very hungry, and then went off.

The next morning several men went in search of him; his foot being wounded the blood upon the snow enabled them to track him, so that they soon came up to him. Grandfather's stout dogs attacked him with violence, but the bear seeming likely to gain the victory, he went to their assistance with his axe. In the meantime the eldest son and the rest of the company came up, and seeing the scuffle but not that his father was there, [the son] incautiously raised his gun in order to fire, but his companions called to him in time to prevent it. They soon succeeded in killing the bear.

Social Intercourse

Colonial farm life was not all a monotonous round of labor and care; time was also found for social enjoyment. The Irish Friends, as well as other members of the Society, were eminently a sociable people, and despite the hard travelling, visited each other continually. All the events of community—harvests, huskings, raisings, vendues, meetings, weddings, funerals—brought the widely scattered neighbors together in social mingling. On such occasions a spirit of sincere and hearty good-will and neighborliness generally prevailed, and in time of distress and need there was never lack of help and sympathy.

A great event among the Friends was a wedding. Weddings The first and important preliminary to the marriage was “to pass meeting,” or obtain the consent of the monthly meeting. To this end the contracting parties appeared in two monthly meetings and declared their intentions. Then, after a searching inquiry by a committee, if the couple were found to be “clear of all entanglements,” they were left at liberty to accomplish their marriage, according to “y<sup>e</sup> good order,” of Friends. As an example of a “passing” of the Irish Friends the following extracts from the minutes of New Garden Monthly Meeting, Chester County, are given :

Att our Monthly Meeting of New garden held att New garden the 8th of y<sup>e</sup> 9th mo: 1718 . . . One month later the couple again declared their intention:

At the next Monthly Meeting the committee reported on the marriage as follows:

Att our Monthly Meeting of New garden held att Notingham the 10th of ye 11th mo : 1718-19

The friends y<sup>t</sup> were Appointed To See y<sup>e</sup> orderly Accomplishment of Thomas Jackson & Mary Willeys Marriage, Make report That it was Accomplished orderly.

It often happened that marriages were not celebrated with that high degree of good order which the committee thought necessary at such functions. There seems to have been a constant tendency, especially after the fourth decade of the century, to bring some of the ways of the "world's people" into the marriage ceremony. In 1761, at Warrington Monthly, a marriage was reported orderly, except for the couple<sup>1</sup> "having a man & maid to wait on them, which practice this meeting doth not approve." In 1773, at the said Monthly Meeting, a groom<sup>2</sup> was complained of for having "assistance in taking of his Gloves." In 1775, the nuptials of Richard Atherton and Phebe Hobson seem to have passed off to the satisfaction of the men Friends of the meeting, but the women members were scandalized at the presence of "assistants to pull off the glove and hat." In 1785, Friends had a concern as to the "practice of keeping on the Hat at the time of Solemnizing Marriage."<sup>3</sup>

Many young Friends, impatient of the slow and troublesome process of passing meeting, would hasten off to "ye priest" or to a magistrate, and be married without any delay or formality. Ancient church registers, notably those of the Old Swedes' Churches of Philadelphia and Wilmington, record the marriages of many young runaway Quaker couples. The monthly meeting minutes abound in the record of such infractions of discipline, and the elders of the meeting were ever busy laboring and dealing with the delinquents. If the offenders would not confess their fault they were "disowned" or expelled from the Society. At New Garden Monthly Meeting, in 1730, a complaint was made that "Mary Moore<sup>1</sup> is gone out from friends & is Married by a Justice of y<sup>e</sup> peace Contrary to freinds advice to her." For this she was disowned.

priest" were dealt with for misconduct. Such complaints as this are frequent in the minutes: New Garden Monthly Meeting, 12 Mo. 22, 1734-5, is informed "y<sup>t</sup> Thos. Jackson Jun<sup>r</sup> went a Long with Stephen Hayes when he went & gott married by y<sup>e</sup> priest."

Warrington Monthly Meeting, in 1779, had a difficult love affair to settle. John Delap made objections to the marriage proposals of Joseph Garretson and Rebecca McMillan, declaring that he had a prior claim to her "which he is not willing to give up, and it appears that she kept company with him a considerable time after she altered her mind." The meeting finally decided against poor John, and the marriage was duly consummated without any further interruption from him.

The bride would ride to meeting behind her father or next friend seated on a pillion, but after the ceremony the pillion was transferred to the husband's horse, behind his saddle, and with him she rode home.<sup>1</sup> After the wedding the company were invited to return to the home of the bride's father, where a bountiful repast was served. Great preparations were made for the wedding dinner, and Friends had frequently to be cautioned against lavish entertainment on such occasions. At Warrington, in 1767, a marriage was reported orderly, "Except some unnecessary provision."<sup>1</sup>

Courtship among Friends was a solemn affair, Courtship and must be pursued in a most decorous and circumspect manner. Before declaring his affections, the young man must first have the consent of the young woman's parents. This permission granted, he came "a courting," but he must strive by his grave and staid demeanor and "solid conversation" to make an impression on the object of his regards. If, however, he did not first obtain the paternal sanction, he was dealt with by the meeting. In 1726, George Robinson<sup>2</sup> had to sign the following paper before he was allowed to proceed with his marriage :

WHEREAS I have Made My Mind Known to Mary McKoy Upon y<sup>e</sup> Account of Marriage before I had her parents Consent Contrary to y<sup>e</sup> order of friends for which I am Sorry as witnes my hand

George Robinson

<sup>1</sup> In 1725, Thomas Chalkley "was at a Marriage at Horsham (at which was present William Keith, our Governor) and I was concerned to speak . . . After this Meeting I return'd Home without going to the Marriage Dinner, as I generally avoided such Entertainments as much as I could, having no Life, or liking to them, being sensible that great Companies and Preparations at Weddings, were growing Inconveniences among us."—p. 147, Journal, London, 1751.

<sup>2</sup> George Robinson, of Cecil Co., Md., son of George and Catharine (Hollingsworth) Robinson, "of Newark In y<sup>e</sup> County of New Castle upon Delaware" was married 2 Mo., 14, 1726, at Nottingham to Mary, daughter of Robert McKoy, of Cecil Co., Md.—New Garden Marriage Book, 33.

Again, in 1732, when Robert Johnson, son of Robert Johnson, of New Garden, and Katharine Hadley, daughter of Simon Hadley, of New Castle County, declared their intentions of marriage for the first time, they were not permitted to proceed until Robert produced the following acknowledgment:

WHEREAS I have Endeavored to draw out ye affections of my friend Katherine Hadley before I had ye Consent of her parents, which s<sup>d</sup> Action of mine being Contrary to ye Rules of friends & I knowing in my Self it not to be Right Wherefore I do Condemn all Such practices & do take ye blame on my Selfe & desire y<sup>e</sup> friends may pass it by & hopes I Shall be more Carefull for time to come of giving any just offence to friends as Witness my hand this 26 day of y<sup>e</sup> sixth moth 1732

Funerals A funeral was always an occasion for a great gathering of Friends. Thomas Chalkley notes that in 1725 as many as a thousand persons were present at a funeral.<sup>1</sup> The body was placed in a plain coffin and borne to the meeting-house, where after a short meeting in memory of the deceased, interment was made in the adjoining graveyard. The company then repaired to the house for dinner, which was almost as elaborate a repast as that served at weddings. Friends were warned to "keep out of superfluity at maredges and bueriels." The funeral expenses of James Lindley, of London Grove, as shown by the accounts filed by his executors, were £4. 10s., and "y<sup>e</sup> Coffin," £1. 8s. The funeral charges of Thomas

Jackson, in 1728, were £3. In the estate accounts of John Lowden, of New Garden, is the item: "for ye funerall of William Johnson," £5. In the accounts of Ann Marshall, deceased, of New Garden, "late of Ireland," are recorded these charges: "A Coffin £1; Sider at ye funerall 10s; ye Grave Diging, 3s. 6d."

A few items gleaned from executors' accounts show what physicians' fees were in this early period. Physicians' Charges
George Harlan's estate "paid Isaac Taylor for Physic as  $\text{ᶒ}$  his receipt Dated ye 25: 1<sup>mo</sup> 1715 £8. 18. 0." Ann Marshall was ill thirteen weeks but her estate had to pay "to ye Doctors" only 2s. In Thomas Jackson's account were items: "to Doctter Curry, £3"; "to Doctter Dellwood, £2. 4. 7"; to Doctter Taylor, 7s."

The meeting was one of the strongest forces in the social life of the Friends. Meetings for Worship
Twice a week, on "First-day" and usually on "Fifth-day," it brought together the members from their scattered holdings for worship, and at the close afforded opportunity for a short season of quiet and genial converse. Of the two meetings for worship, that of the Sabbath had the better attendance. On

<sup>1</sup> Some young Friends in going to meeting evidently did not always carry themselves with that degree of "gravity and moderation" that was seen wending their way to the plain little meeting-house, embowered amid the trees. Reining up by the horse-block at the door the riders dismounted, and before entering the edifice would linger, perchance, for a few words of friendly greeting with the neighbors. There was no peal of bells to call them to the house of praise, but at the appointed time the company took their places on the hard, unpainted benches, the men on the one side and the women on the other side of the house. After a few moments of silent and reverent worship, seeking from the raised seats of the gallery, where sat the ministers and elders facing the body of the meeting a minister would arise to deliver his spiritual message. Frequently the speaker was a traveling Friend, from England or Ireland or other distant parts. Perhaps it was Thomas Chalkley, or Thomas Lightfoot, who expected of them by their elders, but took advantage of the ride to show off the paces of their fine young horses. As early as 1681, Friends of Dublin Half Year Meeting had a concern as to this departure from "y<sup>e</sup> path of truth" and sent an epistle, signed by William Edmundson, Abraham Fuller, and Amos Strettell, to Friends on the Delaware, urging that "all young Men and others in Riding to or from Meetings or other occasions refrain from Galloping and Riding after an aciry flurting manner."—Amelia Mott Gummere, *Friends in Burlington, Penna. or John Fothervill, "an antient man tall and Well Shap'd Very Zealous against Sin and Iniquity"<sup>2</sup>; or perchance it was quaint and eccentric old John Salkeld, of Chester, of whom a contemporary writes, in 1739 :

Salkeld from silent sitting slow would rise
And seemed as with himself he did advise.
His first words would be soft, but might be heard ;
He looked resolved, yet spoke as if he feared

Proposed his theme, and sometimes would repeat,
Lest some should not observe, or should forget :

Thus louder then he strained his cheerful voice,
The sounds grow tuneful and their hearts rejoice.<sup>3</sup>

It not infrequently happened that some good Friends, wearied with the arduous duties of the week, would drop off into restful slumber. But woe betide these offenders of good order and the testimony of truth, if John Salkeld chanced to be present at the meeting! Their dreams were then of short duration. On one occasion, it is related, when he noted several members overcome with drowsiness, he suddenly sprang to his feet, exclaiming, "Fire! Fire!" Every one was awake immediately and one of the excited sleepers cried out, "Where? Where?" "In Hell!" responded John, "to burn up the drowsy and unconcerned."<sup>1</sup>

The close of meeting was announced by the shaking of hands by two gallery Friends, the signal passing down seat by seat through the house. After a friendly and genial chat the Friends dispersed, many of them taking guests home to dinner.

Business Meetings

The business meetings of the Society, from the point of view of social opportunity, were of greater moment even than the meetings for worship. The latter were usually only local in extent, but the former, especially the quarterly and yearly meetings, brought together large numbers of Friends from many distant points and thus enlarged and broadened the range of social intercourse. The business meeting was usually preceded by a meeting for worship, at the close of which wooden shutters were drawn down from the ceiling, leaving the women to conduct their branch of the meeting separate from that of the men.

Quarterly Meeting

The Quarterly Meeting, which continued often for several days, and in early times "circulated" to various fixed places in a district, occupied a conspicuous place in the life of the Friends. The season was looked forward to with pleasant anticipation by young and old as a time not only for religious worship but for social pleasure. Great preparations in the way of cooking and baking were made for Quarterly Meeting guests. Whole families would often come from great distances to "Quarterly" and visit around in the neighborhood during the progress of the meeting.

Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, the central authority, to which all the other meetings of Pennsylvania, Delaware, and parts of New Jersey and Maryland were subordinate, was the most important of the meetings and had the largest attendance. The meeting lasted for upwards of a week each year, oscillating for a time between Philadelphia and Burlington, but finally settling down to regular sessions in Philadelphia. Country Friends took advantage of Yearly Meeting week to bring to town farm products, to exchange for articles to be found in the shops and markets. The visitors were always received and entertained with generous hospitality by the city members.

*Yearly

The Monthly Meeting, local in its character, was the real working body of the Society, in matters relating to the individual members. It "undertook to see that justice was done between man and man, that disputes were settled, that the poor were supported, that delinquents, whether as to the Society's own rules or those of the State, were reformed, or if reformation seemed impossible, were 'disowned' by the Society, that applicants for membership were tested and finally, if satisfactory, received, that all the children were educated, that certificates of good standing were granted to members changing their abodes, that marriages and burials were simply and properly performed, and that records were fully and accurately kept. Under these were the Preparative Meetings."<sup>1</sup>

Discipline

The Friends in general maintained a high standard of conduct and morality, but among the young members, especially in the later generations, there was a falling off in this respect and a tendency to drift into the ways of the world's people. The monthly meeting was constantly engaged in laboring with offenders.

Some additional extracts from the meeting records throw light on disciplinary action and afford further interesting glimpses of the manner of life among the Irish Friends.

Card-playing and Dancing

The Friends had a strong testimony against such "wicked practices" as card-playing and dancing, their sentiments being expressed by Thomas Chalkley, who denounces cards as "engines of Satan" and declares "that as many Paces as the Person takes in the Dance, so many Paces or Steps they take towards Hell."<sup>2</sup> But in spite of all such protests many young members were found playing cards and engaging in such "vain and viceious Proseedings as Frollicking Fiddling and Dancing."

At New Garden Monthly Meeting, 4mo. 12, 1725:

"New Garden Preparative Meeting has Acquainted this Meeting y<sup>t</sup> Nehemiah Hutton has been found In Company keeping & playing Cards which has brought reproach upon truth & friends, & this Meeting has put him upon to Draw up Something for y<sup>e</sup> Clearing of truth Against y<sup>e</sup> Next Monthly Meeting which he Acknowledges and is willing to do

"Joseph Hadley being Also in Company w<sup>t</sup> Nehemiah Hutton and had y<sup>e</sup> Cards In his hand which he is Sory for y<sup>t</sup> he did not leave y<sup>e</sup> Company. It is y<sup>e</sup> Mind of this Meeting y<sup>t</sup> he condemn the Same So far as he is Guilty"

6 Mo., 6, 1725. "Nehemiah Hutton has given in a paper Condemning himself for his playing at Cards which paper this meeting receives & orders him to read y<sup>e</sup> S<sup>d</sup> Paper in y<sup>e</sup> place where he was playing & in y<sup>e</sup> presence of Benjamin ffred & Will<sup>m</sup> Halliday & that they give an Account to y<sup>e</sup> next Monthly Meeting & that he is desired to forbear coming to meetings of business until friends be better Satisfied with bim as to his conversation and Sincerity to truth." Joseph Hadley was dealt with in the same way.

At Warrington Monthly Meeting, in 1769, Timothy Kirk acknowledged his error in dancing, and in 1777, Elizabeth Blackburn expressed her sorrow for "having Endeavored to dance."

The Friends, in common with other people of the early part of the period under our study, seem to have indulged freely in strong drink. The Temperance movement, which was initiated by Friends, was of later origin. So long as members kept sober no complaint was made, but when they got so deep in their cups as to become foolish and beligerent they were promptly taken in hand by the meeting. It was thought that no crop could be garnered, no building raised, in fact no difficult work accomplished, without the use of stimulants. On all social occasions liquor was freely passed around.

In 1725, Chester Quarterly Meeting, which included nearly all the meetings of what is now New Castle County in Delaware, and the counties of Delaware and Chester in Pennsylvania, made some attempt to correct abuses that had sprung up. "It was desired [that] y<sup>e</sup> friends take care at Burralls not to make great provision as to provide strong Liquors and hand it about ; but lett Every one take y<sup>t</sup> is free to take it as they have ocaion and not more than will doe them Good."

The next year the Yearly Meeting took up the subject and adopted strong resolutions against the practice of giving liquor at public vendues, as it excited bidders and created an incautious rivalry. The expenditure for rum was frequently the largest item in vendue accounts. At the vendue of Ann Marshall, of New Garden, as shown in her accounts of 1729, there was paid "To John Read for Rum at y<sup>e</sup> Vendue 13s. 4d.," while "ye Clerke" received only 4s. and "William Rowan Cryer at y<sup>e</sup> Vendue" only 10 s.

In 1733, a writer in the Pennsylvania Gazette complains that

“It is now become the practice of some otherwise discreet women, instead of a draught of beer and toast, or a chunk of bread and cheese or a wooden noggin of good porridge and bread, as our good old English custom is, or milk and bread boiled, or tea and bread and butter or milk or milk coffee &c that they must have their two or three drams in the morning.”

10 Mo 12, 1724.—“Thomas Jackson of Thomas Town in Marlborough has appeared at this meeting as desired & has Signified y<sup>t</sup> it was not y<sup>e</sup> greatness of y<sup>e</sup> quantity of drink but beeing unwell for Some time before which he thinks was y<sup>e</sup> cause of this Sickness but for y<sup>e</sup> Clearing of truth he is willing to give in a paper, therefore he is desired to bring it y<sup>e</sup> next Monthly Meeting.”

2. Mo. 10, 1726.—“Dear friends whereas it Accidentally hapened y<sup>t</sup> I was overtaken In Licquor and I do believe y<sup>t</sup> my being before unwell & weak of body was Some occasion of it & I am Sory for it as witness my hand.
THOMAS JACKSON.”

11 Mo. 25, 1734.—New Garden Preparative Meeting reports “y<sup>t</sup> James M—— Sen<sup>r</sup> was overcome with Strong Licqor & did Strik & abuse his wife.” He was disowned, 12 Mo. 22, 1734-5.

8 Mo. 30, 1736.—Mary B——ly has “been Adicted to Drunkenness for some years past & has been visited and Admonished against it Divers times yett Does not Desist from it.” Disowned 9 Mo. 27, 1736.

In harvest time neighboring families assisted each other, the women often working in the fields with the men. Says Parke: "The[y] also make great Preparations against harvest both Roast & boyled, Cakes & Tarts & Rum stand at the Lands End, so that they may eat and drink at Pleasure." Frequently refreshments of cider and rum were too much for Friends, and exciting scenes attended the harvest. We have an instance of this in Warrington Monthly Meeting records of 1748. A Friend made the following acknowledgment:

I was overtaken with the effects of spirituious liquor in the harvest field, reaping for John Rankin in Red Land Valley [near Lewisberry, York County] last harvest. It was a hot day, I drank more than I should have to drive out the sweat to make me in better capacity to follow my work, but it produced the contrary effect, so that I was for a time light in the head and I talked foolish.

At New Garden Monthly Meeting, 5 Mo. 29, 1729, London Grove Preparative Meeting made report:

yt Will<sup>m</sup> Lowdon was a fighting with Michaell Harlan Jun<sup>r</sup> ye Last Harvest for w<sup>ch</sup> he is Sorry & has Given a paper Condemning ye Same which this meeting Takes as Sattisfaction.

In 1754, Warrington Monthly Meeting expelled Robert W——, on complaint of John Farmer who said that R. W. came "to his house full of drink and did abuse him and his family, and when he provoked some of them to strike him he took warrants for the whole family, considerably to their damage."

Again, in 1758, John W——, of Menallen Meeting, made the following acknowledgment: Disorderly Conduct

“Whereas, some time ago I went to the Burial of one of my Neighbours; from the Grave yard I went a few miles where I heard there was a Gathering of men, Expecting to see some men I had business with, and notwithstanding I have made profession of the blessed truth for many years past, thro’ unwatchfulness Committed that great Evil of taking more strong drink than I ought to have done, the Effect of which brought on another Evil, for Rideing home in Company with some of my Neighbours, a difference fell out amongst us where I received, as I thought at that time, provocation Enough to do as I did, (but I am far from thinking so now,) which was the putting of my hat and Jacket in order to have satisfaction,” etc.

In 1758, James McG——, of Menallen, produced an acceptable acknowledgment for being overtaken with strong drink; “the adversary having got the advantage I took the undue liberty of singing Idle songs along with a company that was Engaged in that Exercise.” His paper was read on “First-day” at Menallen Meeting.

At New Garden Monthly Meeting, 2 Mo. 26, 1729, Nottingham Preparative reports “that Roger Keirk son of Alphancius Keirk was a Rasseling for a weger which he seems to aveade.” 4 Mo. 28th, it is reported “y<sup>e</sup> he said he hoped to be more Carefull but did not appear at this meeting nor is not willing to Condemn it any further.” 7 Mo. 27th, he appeared at the meeting but being of “Rather a Cavelling Contentious Spirit than otherwise this meeting thinks it of Necessity to disown him.”

11 Mo. 31, 1729, New Garden was informed that John C—n in Controversie with Thomas L—ly did through provocation Curse & Swear, and that y<sup>e</sup> s<sup>d</sup> L—ly Did use Scurrilous vain & unbecoming Language to John C—n.” An acknowledgment from these offenders was accepted, but the privilege to sit in business meetings was withdrawn. 2 Mo. 25, 1730, “John C—n & Thomas L—ly was a fighting.” The former was then disowned, while the latter expressing his sorrow was retained in membership.

Report was made to New Garden Monthly Meeting, 11 Mo. 28, 1737-8, that certain Friends appointed to read a testimony against John St—r, of Sadsbury Meeting, for not complying with “y<sup>e</sup> Award of y<sup>e</sup> friends Chosen by him & his brother” in a dispute, shewed it to s<sup>d</sup> John, and that he & and his father Joyned in running out against friends & said y<sup>e</sup> Testamony was a parsil of lies that they had made up amongst themselves and when a friend stood up & began to read it at y<sup>e</sup> breaking up of a first day meeting according to y<sup>e</sup> Direction of y<sup>e</sup> monthly meeting, Isaac St—r [father of John] stood up & bid him Leave of reading it for it is a parsil of lies & staped to y<sup>e</sup> friend & Caught y<sup>e</sup> paper & tore it to pieces, whereby y<sup>e</sup> reading of it was stoped at that time.”

Indented Servants*

One of the duties of the monthly meeting was to investigate cases of alleged mistreatment of indented servants. At New Garden, 12 Mo. 25, 1726-7, Sadsbury Preparative Meeting made a Complaint against James Musgrave Son of Jn<sup>o</sup> Musgrave of Sadsbury for Strikeing a Servant man of Caleb Perces [Peirce's] the which he Seems to Justifie therefore this meeting appoints Saml<sup>l</sup> Miller & Caleb Perse to Endeavour to bring him to a Sence of his Evill Action.

versus Smith*

One of the most interesting cases concerning indented servants that Friends were called upon to settle was that of Lowden versus Smith, brought before New Garden Monthly Meeting. It seems that William Lowden, probably after the death of his father, John Lowden, in 1714, was bound as a servant, until the age of twenty-one, to John Smith, of Marlborough, son-in-law of Caleb Pusey. As young Lowden approached his majority a difference arose between him and his master as to the date of expiration of the term of service. Evidently there were not exact data at hand to determine the point. Thereupon, 3 Mo. 9, 1724, the matter was brought up for the Monthly Meeting to decide.

At this meeting, as a first step in the proceedings, a committee was appointed "to write to y<sup>e</sup> Monthly Meetings of y<sup>e</sup> Grange In y<sup>e</sup> County of Antrim & to New Garden In y<sup>e</sup> County of Carlow both In Ireland for y<sup>e</sup> Ages of y<sup>e</sup> Children of John Lowdon."

At the next Monthly Meeting, held 5 Mo. 11th, Friends being Informed Att our Last Monthly Meeting of A Difference between John Smith and William Lowden about y<sup>e</sup> Age of William Lowden he being bound to John Smith Untill he come of Age & y<sup>e</sup> Last Meeting Appointed Thomas Jackson James Lindley Benjamin ffredd Simon Hadly Joseph Sharp & Michael Lightfoot to See they could help them to Accomodate it,

And Now these friends gives this Meeting An Account that they Mett with them & they could not fully End it, but John & William Mutually have Chosen four friends whom they have left it to fully to determine.

The young man, becoming impatient of the delay of the arbitrators, probably left his master before the proper time, for on 9 Mo. 7, 1724, just three days before what later proved to be his twenty-first birthday,

A Concern coming Upon this Meeting concerning Wm : Lowdens disorder In not Leaving his Difference he had w<sup>t</sup> his Master to y<sup>e</sup> Arbitrators as he had agreed to do, Therefore we now desire y<sup>e</sup> Visitors to speak to him to bring him to a Sence thereof that he may condemn y<sup>e</sup> Same & y<sup>t</sup> they give an account to y<sup>e</sup> Next Monthly Meeting.

No further mention of the matter is to be found in the minutes until 7 Mo. 11, 1725, when the desired evidence from Irish registers—showing the value of such records—had arrived :

“ This Meeting has received an account from y<sup>e</sup> Mens Meeting In Ireland held at James Moores Sen<sup>r</sup> In y<sup>e</sup> County of Antrim Concerning y<sup>e</sup> Age of Wm. The records show that during the several wars Military Service in which the Province was involved, not a few Friends departed from their peace principles and enlisted as soldiers. In the period of the French and Indian war, we have an instance in the Warrington minutes. 1 Mo. 17, 1756, "Menallen Meeting informs this meeting that John Blackburn [an Irish Friend, sometime Judge of York County] and John Pope, at a report of Indians doing mischief at a great distance from them went out in a warlike manner to meet them Contrary to our Peaceable principles." For this breach of discipline the offenders finally expressed their sorrow and were continued in membership. With the opening of the Revolution, however, Judge Blackburn was reported to the Monthly Meeting, 2 Mo. 10, 1776, as having "inlisted as a soldier" and was subsequently disowned. Other members of the same family also joined the American ranks. 6 Mo. 7, 1777, Joseph Blackburn "hath Enlisted to be a soldier." 7 Mo. 12, 1777, Thomas Blackburn, Jr., and Anthony Blackburn, Jr., have "associated or joined in the Military Exercises."

As President Sharpless points out in his valuable monograph,<sup>1</sup> the Society of Friends in the struggle for independence took a neutral position and stood firmly by their testimony against war. They were "friends of liberty, but opposed to war, desirous of maintaining their civil rights, but by other means than illegality and revolution, and unwilling to afford aid to the British; divided in their sympathies, but largely united in the stand that they could take no part in the strife of the day. . . . When war and revolution became inevitable . . . they issued a declaration of neutrality."<sup>2</sup> They were neither Tories nor revolutionists." In considering the question of Quaker sympathies in the conflict, the author continues: "About four hundred, perhaps, actively espoused the American side by joining the army, accepting positions under the revolutionary government, or taking an affirmation of allegiance to it, and lost their birthright among Friends as a result. Perhaps a score in a similar way openly espoused the British cause, and also were disowned by their brethren. These members very likely represented proportions of silent sympathizers."<sup>1</sup>

The Revolutionary government of Pennsylvania was resolved that if the Quakers and other non-combatants would not fight they should at least pay the expenses of those who did. The Friends accordingly were ordered to pay heavy war taxes. This, however, they refused to do on the ground that they could not consistently contribute to the support of war, and those members who obeyed were dealt with by the meeting. Thereupon, the tax collectors seized the property of Friends to the value of the taxes and the fines imposed for non-compliance. An example of such exactions, covering the period 1778–1790, is recorded by George McMillan, an Irish Friend, of York County, in his manuscript account book, and it is of such interest that I venture to print it in full:

But little data on early schools attended by Irish Friends have been gleaned, but the evidence indicates that from the earliest days of the Colony provision of some sort was made for education in nearly all Quaker neighborhoods. In 1725, Parke mentions an Irish Quaker pedagogue. “Unkle Nicholas Hooper,” he writes, “lives very well he rents a Plantation & teaches School & his man dos his Plantation work.”

CHAPTER III.

SOME PROMINENT IRISH FRIENDS OF PENNSYLVANIA

one of the most important personages of the Province, was James Logan, the faithful friend and efficient secretary and agent of the Proprietor, William Penn. He was born of Scotch parentage, 8 Mo. (October) 20, 1674, at Lurgan, County Armagh, Ireland.<sup>1</sup> His father, Patrick Logan, a native of East Lothian, Scotland, whose ancestry has not yet been satisfactorily determined, was graduated from the University of Edinburgh, with the degree of Master of Arts.<sup>2</sup> and became a clergyman of the Established Church, serving for a time as chaplain to Lord Belhaven<sup>3</sup>; but later he joined the Society of Friends and removed with his family to Lurgan, where he took charge of a Latin school.

*His Auto-

About all that is known of James Logan's early life is contained in his autobiography, which, as it has never been published—so far as I can learn—is here printed in its entirety :

Ancestry

My Father was born in E Lothain in Scotland: was educated for the Clergy, & was a Chaplain for some time; but turning Quaker, he was obliged to go to Ireland & to teach a Latin School there—He had several children,<sup>1</sup> of whom none are now living, nor have been, more than these 50 years past, saving my B<sup>r</sup> W<sup>m</sup> who took his degree of Doctor of Physick in Holland—and is now the chief Physician in Bristol—and myself—My Mother was Isabel Hume Daugh<sup>t</sup> of James Hume—a younger Brother of the House of St Leonards, of the Shire of Mers (as I think) in the South of Scotland. He was Manager of the Estate of the Earl of Murray—who owed, but never paid him £1500 Sterl. tho the said Earl lodged for some years in his House in the Shire of Fife—My Grandmother, before she married, was Bethia Dundas,<sup>2</sup> Sister of the Laird of Dundas, of Didiston, about 8 miles west of Edinburgh a fine seat, and the Earl of Murray assisted my Grandfather in carrying off my Grandmother—She was nearly related to the Earl of Panmat [Panmure] &c.

*Education
ticeship*

Having learned Latin, Greek, and some Hebrew, before I was 13 years of age—in my 14th I was put Apprentice to a Linnen Draper—one as considerable with his Partner as any in Dublin. But the Prince of Orange, landing before I was bound (tho' I served my Master 6 months) in the winter 1688, I went down to my Parents—and the wars in Ireland coming on, In the Spring I went over to Edinburgh with my Mother—after which my Father soon followed, who being out of employment—repair'd to London, & was there gladly receiv'd by our friends—Deputies to the Genl Meeting from Bristol in that City—as their schoolmaster<sup>3</sup>—for the

In 1693 after above 3 years stay there, pretending to go over for my Mother,<sup>1</sup> but with a real design never to return He left me in his school, not full 19 years of age—ordering me on the receipt of his Letter Signifying my Mother would not come over, that I should give up the school & return to him. But our Friends would not give me up, I therefore continued in the same employment until the peace of Reswick in 1697.

In which time, as I had in Edinburgh in my 16th year, happily met with a book of the Leyborns on the Mathematics, I made myself Master of that, without any manner of Instruction, and in the time in which I kept school, I further improved myself in the Greek looking a little further into the Hebrew—I also learned French & Italian with some Spanish; but went 3 mos. to French Master to learn the Pronunciation, without which I was sensible I should never be able to speak it. But otherwise I never paid one penny for Learning any thing whatsoever, and tho' I had my course of Humanity—as it is called in Ireland from my Father, I can safely say, he never gave me the least instruction whatsoever, more than he gave to the other scholars—good scholar, and an apt schoolmaster to instruct youth in Latin, &c., is a present out of employment, and, upon some discourse of it among Friends at London, is in some expectation that he may be serviceable to Friends' children at Bristol. upon consideration of which this meeting is desirous to promote it, in hopes it may be serviceable to our youth." In 9 Mo. following the treasurer was desired to hand Patrick Logan "£ 50, and to pay Jno. Harwood's note of carpenter's work for the said school."—William Tanner, Three Lectures on the Early History of the Society of Friends in Bristol and Somersetshire, London, 1858, p. 124.

But to return; After the Peace, having first agreed in Bristol, to go over with another Factor to Jamaica, I went over to Ireland to see my Parents<sup>1</sup>: and having told them my intention of going over to that Island, my Mother was so averse to it, that she affirmed she would much rather see me dead—On this I was obliged to change my measures, & began with a cargo, from Dublin, to enter on a trade between that place and Bristol, which I followed for about 8 months.

*Becomes
tary, 1699*

When in the spring of 1699, our old Proprietor [William Penn] sent for me, and made me his proposals to come over to Penn<sup>a</sup> as his Secretary, and desired me to take time & advice upon it—Some of my Friends advised me to accept, & some others as strenuously against it; but in some few days I went over to Bath—with my fr<sup>d</sup> E<sup>d</sup> Hackel, & accepted of it.

Pennsylvania*

In 8th 1699, being then at Sea, in our voyage hither—I was 25 ys. of age—The Proprietor continued here 2 years wanting about 5 weeks, and left me in more offices that I was fit to undertake & got thro'. But had I left his whole business—at the time of his departure, I might—considering my singular good fortune—or the kind Providence that has ever attended me—for which I can never be sufficiently grateful, I might I say with great ease have doubled my present fortune—& equaled what the Prop<sup>le</sup> son Tho<sup>s</sup> charged me with having—according to an information he had rec<sup>d</sup> viz:—£ 60,000 but I am fully content with what I have tho' not half so much—The old Proprietor was willing to give me what I would ask, for my ten years service, & considering his melancholy circumstances in 1711 I set it at £ 100 a year cur<sup>cy</sup> for all manner of services whatsoever, But told him I would stay in his service no more than 2 years—But he was seized with an apoplectic fit in less than 1 year which tied me down to his business, vastly it proved to my loss—as my Letters designed at first for our Proprietor Thos Penn fully demonstrate—<sup>2</sup>

Public Life

<sup>1</sup> William Penn wrote to James Logan from London, 4 Mo. 21, 1702: "Of thy Family.—Thou hast heard of the death of thy father and marriage of thy mother with one not a Friend; an exercise W. Colony. Young Logan soon showed such marked capacity for business and administration that his services became indispensable, and Penn, on his departure for England in 1701, not only continued him as Secretary of the Province but gave him a general charge both of the government and property, saying, "I have left thee in an uncommon trust with a singular dependence on thy justice and care."<sup>1</sup>

The Proprietor's confidence was not misplaced; for though beset by many troubles and vexations, Logan ever remained true to his trust, and discharged his duties with fidelity and judgment. His life becoming more and more occupied with public affairs, for the next forty years he was always holding some high office—Commissioner of Property, member of Provincial Council, Judge of Common Pleas, Mayor of Philadelphia, Chief Justice; and, in 1736–38, as President of the Provincial Council, acting as Governor of Pennsylvania.<sup>2</sup>

He became the devoted leader of the Proprietary Party in the long and bitter political conflict that was waged after Penn's return to England, and zealously guarded the Penn interests and prerogatives against what were deemed the encroachments of the Popular Party of the Assembly, led by David Lloyd, and of the Church Party, led by Colonel Robert Quarry. It is true that in these earlier years of his life Logan did at times become heated in partisan controversy, to such an extent as to make himself unpopular ; but later in life he was generally respected for his learning, character, and ability. He remained a Friend all his life, but differed from the great body of the Society in his belief in defensive war.

*Relations
Indians*

Like his friend Penn, Logan knew how to win and keep the confidence of the Indians. It was largely due to him that friendship and alliance between them and the Province was so long maintained. He often had them as guests at Stenton, his beautiful county-seat, near Germantown. On some occasions, it is said, there were as many as three or four hundred, who would remain for days enjoying the hospitality of the plantation<sup>1</sup> The high regard in which he was held by the Indians was expressed by Cannassetego, chief of the Onondagas, in a speech at the making of a treaty between the Six Nations and Governor Thomas and the Council, at Philadelphia, in July, 1742 :

Brethren, we called at our friend James Logan's on our way to this city, and to our grief found him hid in the bushes and retired through infirmities from public business. We pressed him to leave his retirement, and prevailed with him to assist once more on our account at your council. He is a wise man and a fast friend to the Indians, and we desire when his soul goes to God you may choose in his room just such another person of the same prudence and ability in counseling, and of the same tender disposition and affection for the Indians.<sup>1</sup>

It is not only as a statesman but also as a man of letters and science that James Logan is conspicuous in our colonial annals. The fortune which he acquired in commerce and in trade with the Indians enabled him to spend his later days in scholarly retirement at Stenton,<sup>2</sup> in the enjoyment of his library and in writing. He carried on an extensive correspondence with the most learned men of Europe and America, and wrote numerous <sup>2</sup> The picturesque and dignified old mansion of Stenton, built by Logan in 1728, is one of the most interesting examples of colonial architecture extant. Thanks to the loving zeal of the Pennsylvania Society of the Colonial Dames of America, it has recently been carefully restored, and under their trusty guardianship it has been opened to the public. The house, still surrounded by ample grounds and reached by a fine avenue of hemlocks, is a two story brick structure with two great towering chimneys and a heavy roof set with dormer windows.

Passing up the curious circular stone steps, firmly clamped together with iron, one enters the great hall, paved with brick and wainscoted to the ceiling. In one corner is an open fireplace, and in the rear the stately double staircase. On either hand are lofty rooms, also handsomely wainscoted. The large fireplace in the room to the left has in it a backplate of iron inscribed "J. L. 1728." In another room the fireplace still retains some of its original blue and white Dutch tiles, of most grotesque pattern. One of the most attractive rooms is the library, in which the book-loving master of the place spent much of his time. This is a large, finely lighted apartment, taking up half of the front of the house in the second story. Indeed, the ancient house is full of delights for the antiquary and the lover of the olden time. From garret to cellar there are all sorts of quaint nooks and corners, mysterious cupboards and closets and secret staircases; and leading from the cellar to the stables is a long underground passage, the subject of many a strange legend.

works, many of which are still unprinted. His letters and writings show that there was almost no topic in science or literature that he could not discuss with the scholars of his time. "Sometimes Hebrew or Arabic characters and algebraic formulas roughen the pages of his letter-books. Sometimes his letters convey a lively Greek ode to a learned friend; and often they are written in the Latin tongue."<sup>1</sup> His friend Linnaeus, in compliment to his botanical knowledge, named after him a natural order of herbs and shrubs, the Loganiaceæ, containing some thirty genera in three hundred and fifty species. He published Latin essays on reproduction in plants, and on the aberration of light; translated Cato's Disticha and Cicero's De Senectute, and issued many other works which are listed in Joseph Smith's monumental Catalogue of Friends' Books.<sup>2</sup> His correspondence with the Penn family, from 1700-1750, which is a mine of historical information, reveals his carefulness and intellectual breadth. Says Professor Tyler, "Occasionally one finds in it a passage of general discussion, in which the clear brain and the noble heart of the writer utter themselves in language of real beauty and force."<sup>3</sup>

He bequeathed to the City of Philadelphia his private library of 3,000 volumes, comprising all the Latin classics and more than a hundred folios in Greek. These books formed the foundation of the Loganian Library which later was included in the Philadelphia Library Company.<sup>1</sup>

"James Logan was tall and well proportioned, with a graceful yet grave demeanor. He had a good complexion, and was quite florid even in old age, nor did his hair, which was brown, turn gray in his decline of life, nor his eyes require spectacles. According to the customs of the times, he wore a powdered wig. His whole manner was dignified, so as to abash impertinence; yet he was kind and strictly just in all the minor duties of acquaintance and society." William Black, a Virginia gentleman, who visited Logan at Stenton, in 1744, says of his host, that he "seem'd to have some Remains of a handsome . . . Person and a Complexion beyond his years, for he was turn'd off 70."<sup>3</sup>

From his correspondence with Penn we learn of Logan's early disappointment in love. It seems that he had formed an attachment for Ann Shippen, daughter of Edward Shippen, the first Unsuccessful Courtship

Mayor of Philadelphia, but the fair Ann was inclined to listen to the vows of another suitor, Thomas Story, the eminent minister. The progress of the love affair soon became the town-talk, and even reached the ears of Penn in England.<sup>1</sup> "I am anxiously grieved for thy unhappy love," writes Penn to Logan, under date, 11 Mo. 16, 1704-5, "for thy sake and my own, for T. S. and thy discord has been of no service here, any more than there; and some say that come thence that thy amours have so altered or influenced thee that thou art grown touchy and apt to give rough and short answers, which many call haughty, &c. I make no judgment, but caution thee, as in former letters to let truth preside and bear imperinencies as patiently as thou canst."<sup>2</sup> To this Logan replied, 12 Mo. 11, 1704-5, "I cannot understand that paragraph in thy letter relating to T. S. and myself; thou says our discord has done no more good there than here, and know not who carried the account of it for I wrote to none that I know but thyself in 7ber, 1703. . . . Before that we had lived eighteen months very good friends, without any manner of provocation, only that I had about three or four months before spoke something to Edward Shippen. . . ."<sup>3</sup>

In the following year Ann Shippen and Thomas Story were married, and Logan seems to have become reconciled to the match. He wrote to William Penn, Jr., August 12, 1706, "Thomas Story carries very well since his marriage. He and I are very great friends, for I think the whole business is not now worth a quarrel."<sup>1</sup> In the course of time he recovered from his disappointment, and on the 9th of 10 Mo., 1714, was happily Marriage married to Sarah Read, daughter of Charles Read, a wealthy merchant of the City, sometime Mayor and Provincial Councilor.<sup>2</sup>

James Logan died 10 Mo. 31, 1751, in his Death seventy-seventh year, and was interred in Friends' burial ground at Fourth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia. Of his children, Sarah married, in 1739, Isaac Norris; William Logan, who married Hannah Emlen,<sup>3</sup> served as Provincial Councilor, 1747-1776<sup>4</sup>; and Hannah married John Smith,<sup>5</sup> of the scholarly Smiths of Burlington, New Jersey, ancestor of John Jay Smith, for many years at the head of the Philadelphia Library Company.<sup>5</sup>

Thomas

tain Thomas Holme, Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania and Provincial Councilor.<sup>1</sup> He was born in

thinks there is little doubt that his birthplace is in England, possibly in Yorkshire. He is styled "gentleman," and evidently came of good family, probably from a younger branch of the family of Holme of Huntington, in Yorkshire, as he used an armorial seal on his official papers, corresponding with the arms<sup>2</sup> of this family.

In Ireland

Thomas Holme was residing in Limerick, Ireland, in 1655, for it is stated in A COMPENDIOUS VIEW OF SOME EXTRAORDINARY SUFFERINGS OF THE . . . QUAKERS . . . IN . . . IRELAND, etc.,<sup>3</sup> that in 1655, James Sicklemore, one of the early converts made by Elizabeth Fletcher and Elizabeth Smith "being peacably in Thomas Holme's House in Limerick, was seized on with a Guard of Soldiers, and committed to Prison and banished the City by Order of Colonel Ingoldsby.”<sup>1</sup>

In 1657, Thomas Holme and others, “being peaceably in their Friends House in Cashel, and their Horses at an Inn, as travelling Men, were apprehended by a Guard of Soldiers, in the Year 1657, by Order of Colonel Richard Le Hunt, and being brought before him and examined, were violently (by Soldiers) turned out of the Town, and the Gates kept against them though it was near Night, and a dangerous Time for Englishmen to lie out of Garrison, because of the Tories or Robbers, and thereby exposed to the Hazard of their Lives.”<sup>2</sup>

In 1659, he and fifty-two others published an address to Parliament reciting “the Cruel and Unjust Sufferings of the People of God in the Nation of Ireland Called Quakers.” This pamphlet<sup>3</sup> relates that “Thomas Holme (late a Captain in the Army) . . . and several of the Lords people, being in a peaceable meeting at Wexford had their meeting forcibly broken and many of them violently haled and turned out of the Town, by order from Edward Withers Mayor then.” It may reasonably be presumed from this account that Thomas Holme came into Ireland as a member of

He became one of the earliest converts to Quakerism in the Island, and about the time of the issue of the address of 1659 was living in Limerick, for it is stated that a guard of soldiers from Colonel Ingoldesby, Governor of the town, "rifled the houses of Richard Piercy and Thomas Holme, and took away what books and papers they pleased." At a later date he was residing in Waterford, but probably held property in Wexford. He seems to have travelled extensively over the central and southern parts of the country, attending meetings of the Society. At Cashell, as related in the pamphlet, he, Thomas Loe, and others, being "on their Journey" were brought before the officer in charge of the town, who commanded his soldiers "(violently) to turne them out of the town and to cut their pates; three of them were not suffered to go into the town again for their horses."

In 1660,<sup>1</sup> and also in 1661,<sup>2</sup> Thomas Holme and other Friends were taken from meetings in Dublin and committed to Newgate prison by order of the Mayor of the City. In 1672, he and Abraham Duller, of Ireland, published "A Brief Rela-

F.”<sup>1</sup> On page 44 we have seen how in 1673, Holme lost £200 on account of his scruples against taking an oath in court. In 1676, “Thomas Holme of Kilbride Parish [County Wexford] had taken from him for Tith, by Garret Cavenagh Tithmonger,” wheat, barley, and oats, valued at £1. 5s.;<sup>2</sup> at another time in the same year the “Priest” of Stephen’s Parish, County Waterford, seized his “Warning-pan,” worth 10s., for a tithe of 5s.<sup>3</sup>

Thomas Holme was one of the first of the Irish Friends to take an active interest in William Penn’s proposed colony of Pennsylvania; he was a First Purchaser, having acquired the title to 5,000 acres,<sup>4</sup> and also became a member of the Free Society of Captain Holme sailed for Pennsylvania in the Amity, which left the Downs April 23, 1682,<sup>3</sup> bringing with him his family and John Claypoole, an assistant surveyor. house of Thomas Fairman, who in this year sent a bill of charges to William Penn for lodging Captain Holme and his two sons and two daughters.<sup>1</sup> Holme brought a friendly letter from Penn to the Indians, which says of Holme himself, "The man which delivers this unto you, is my Special friend, Sober, wise and Loving, you may believe him." He made a memorandum on the letter, "I read this to the Indians by an Interpreter 6 mo 1682—Tho Holme."<sup>2</sup>

Holme at once entered upon the duties of his office, and was much occupied with the country purchasers and surveys of their land. At the same time he was also acting with the commissioners in the development of plans for the City of Philadelphia, the site of which, no doubt, had been selected before his arrival. After Penn had come to a decision as to the final plan, Holme laid out the city in much the same form as we know it to-day. "A Portraiture of the City of Philadelphia," drawn up by him and printed in a book<sup>3</sup> published in London in 1683, is the earliest whole work of laying out the land of the settlers and locating towns and highways was under his supervision. With the rapid growth of the country the responsibilities of the office increased, so that it became one of the most important positions in the Province. Holme held this post the remainder of his life and discharged his duties with faithfulness and ability.

He was also appointed to many other places of trust and honor. In 1682, he served as a member of the first Assembly of the Province, which began its session at Upland, December 4th, Penn presiding. In 1683, he was elected a representative from Philadelphia County to the Provincial Council for a term of three years, and took a prominent part in its transactions, serving on several important committees. In 1 Mo., 1683, he was a member of the joint committee of the Council and Assembly that drew up the new Charter, or Frame of Government. Later in the year he was one of the commissioners appointed to treat with the Governor and Council of West Jersey in regard to certain differences between the two colonies. In the following year he and two others were on a committee to investigate the actions of Lord Baltimore in connection with the boundary dispute. In the same year, 1684, he was one of three appointed to draw up a charter for the incorporation of Philadelphia as a borough, with a Mayor and six Alderman.

About the middle of Holme's term (6 Mo. 18, 1684), Penn authorized the Council to act in his place as Governor. Thomas Lloyd, as President of the Council, now became acting Governor, but in 1685 he was absent a large part of the time, and Holme was elected to act in his place, presiding at twenty-seven out of the fifty meetings held this year and also at a number of meetings the next year ; so that during Lloyd's absence Thomas Holme acted as Governor of the Province.

Residence*

After Philadelphia was laid out in 1682, Holme removed his family to a house he had built on his lot<sup>1</sup> at the northwest corner of Front and what is now Arch Street, and lived there until 1688. Then he took up his residence at his plantation of "Well-Spring," in Dublin Township, Philadelphia County, and, excepting for several extended visits to England, continued there for the rest of his life, which terminated in March or April, 1695.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The name of Thomas Holme's wife is not known. Oliver Hough says she probably died before 1682, as she did not come to Pennsylvania with her husband. Their children were : Sarah Holme, who married Richard Holcombe, but is not known to have come to Pennsylvania ; Michael (?) Holme, who died without issue before his father ; Tryall Holme, who also died without issue before his father ; Eleanor Holme, married (1) Joseph Moss, and (2) Joseph Smallwood, by the latter having one daughter, Sarah Smallwood ; Esther Holme, married, in 1683, Silas Crispin, son of Captain William Crispin, formerly of the English navy, and died April 17, 1696, leaving six children.—See Hough in *Penna. Robert
Turner

Robert Turner, who has several times been referred to in previous chapters as a prominent Irish Quaker, and one of the wealthiest men in the Province, was the son of Robert and Mary Turner,<sup>1</sup> of Royston, Hertfordshire, and was born 8 Mo., 1635, in Cambridge, England.<sup>2</sup> We first hear of him as a Quaker in Ireland about 1657; Ruty<sup>3</sup> states that about this year he was "instrumental to the convincement of a few [Friends] who lived at Grange, near Charlemont [County Armagh], in the province of Ulster."<sup>4</sup> In 1658, according to Joseph Smith,<sup>5</sup> he issued a book in behalf of the Friends called Truth's Defense, etc.<sup>6</sup>

In the pamphlet "To the PARLIAMENT of ENGLAND . . . A NARRATIVE of the Cruel and Unjust Sufferings of the People of God of the Nation of Ireland, called Quakers," printed in London, in 1659, is this entry concerning Robert Turner :

Rob. Turner, for speaking a few words in the Steeple house at Bandon, (after the Priest had done) had his Hat taken away, and was beaten : And for speaking a few words in the Steeple-house at Dublin, was very much abused, and had his coat taken from him in the said place, and not restored to him again : And for asking a Question of a Priest in Dublin, was sent to Bridewell, and after kept three months in prison, was put into a Cell or Dungeon, a very noisome place, graves being over his head, and under his feet : And being in a meeting at London-Derry, was violently haled thereout, and drawn along the street by the Arms and Legs, (the Mayor of that City then present, and helped with his own hands) and put him out of the said town ; and two dayes after haled him as before, and one with a Knif in his hand, threatened to cut off his Members, and turned him out again, and tyed him back and legs on a Horses bare back, with a haire rope, and led him about as their sport, at their pleasure.

In 1660 and also in 1661, for attending Quaker meetings in Dublin, Robert Turner was committed to Newgate ; and in 1662 for the same offense was sent to Bridewell.<sup>1</sup>

" Robert Turner of Brides Alley having his Shop open on the day called Thomas day, the Mayor came and took Samuel Randall his Servant, sent him to Goal, and the same day released him : and for the like cause on Christmas day (called) the Mayor come with a Guard of Souldiers and abused the said Robert, sent him to Newgate, where he was detained five days : also the rude multitude did beset his House with stones and staves, and throwing, broke down the Windows, to the hurting of some, endangering the Lives of others, one stone weighing nine pounds, and said they had Orders from the said Mayor : also on the day called Newyears day, for the said cause, the said Mayor committed the said Robert and Samuel Randall to Newgate, but released them next day : and on the day called Twelfth day the said Mayor for the like cause committed Robert Fuller Servant to the said Robert to Prison, and released him the same day : besides other wrongs the said Robert by breaking his Windows was damnified fourteen shillings six pence."

In 1675, he had taken "by the Wardens, for Priest Gowburns Wages, out of the Shop-box three shillings." <sup>1</sup>

He seems first to have become interested in colonization in 1677, when he and other Irish Friends acquired one whole share of West Jersey, their land being laid out on Newton Creek, near the site of Camden, in 1681, and settled by Irish Friends.<sup>2</sup> In 1681, he joined with the Earl of Perth, William Penn, Robert Barclay, the Apologist, and other eminent personages, in the purchase of East Jersey from the estate of Sir George Carteret.<sup>3</sup> About the same time his friend Penn received the grant of Pennsylvania, and Turner became actively concerned in that project, purchasing 5,000 acres of land in the Province<sup>4</sup> and subscribing £500 of stock in the Free Society of Traders.<sup>5</sup> It is evident from a letter of James Claypoole that before 11 Mo. 9, 1682, Turner had a prospect of going to Pennsylvania,<sup>6</sup> but he did not take his departure until a few months later, probably in 5 Mo. 1683, his certificate of removal being signed 5 Mo. 3rd. As previously stated<sup>1</sup> he arrived at Philadelphia, 8 Mo. 14, 1683, in the Lion of Liverpoole, bringing with him his daughter Martha and seventeen redemptioners. Here he took up his residence and continued his mercantile business. In the summer of 1684, he erected the first brick house<sup>2</sup> in the city, using brick, as he writes to Penn, "after a good manner to encourage others . . . and now (6 Mo. 3, 1685) many brave brick houses are going up."<sup>3</sup>

Almost from the day of his arrival until his death in 1700, Turner was closely identified with public affairs.<sup>4</sup> At the Province Council, 8 Mo. 26, 1683, he was impaneled as a juryman.<sup>5</sup> In the following year he became Justice of the Peace and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas;<sup>6</sup> he also served as Register of Wills and Judge of Quarter Sessions and Orphans' Court.<sup>7</sup> In 1686, he was appointed Deputy Surveyor of Philadelphia County<sup>8</sup> and Receiver-General.<sup>9</sup> For a time he was one of the Commissioners of Property. 1686, he was elected a member of the Provincial Council, being re-elected in 1693 and 1700. In 1688, he was one of the five Commissioners from the Council appointed by Penn to govern the Province.<sup>1</sup>

He seems to have been active in the business of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, but in the controversy between the Friends and George Keith he took the side of the latter.<sup>2</sup>

Robert Turner was first married in Dublin, 1 Mo. 27, 1662, to Elizabeth Ruddock, of Dover, who survived only one year.<sup>3</sup> He then was married at Rosenallis, Queen's County, 10 Mo. 7, 1665, to Martha Fisher, of Cheshire. She died 3 Mo. 1682,<sup>4</sup> and at the time of his emigration, as his certificate states, he was a "Widdow man and clear from all women upon account of marriage." He was married the third time, under the care of Newark Monthly Meeting, New Castle County, about 12 Mo., 1686, to Susanna Welch,<sup>5</sup> of New Castle, daughter of William Welch. Turner died in 6 Mo., 1700, and was buried on the 24th.<sup>6</sup> His daughter Martha, was married, 8 Mo. 18, 1689, to

Griffitts

Thomas Griffitts, son of George<sup>2</sup> and Frances Griffitts, of Cork, was another of the Irish Friends to serve as Provincial Councillor and to hold other important positions. The Friends of Cork signed him a certificate of removal, 8 Mo. 16, 1716, stating that he was clear "in respect to marriage." At that date he was residing on the Bay of Donna Maria in Jamaica, but was about to remove to Pennsylvania.

The Meeting at Kingston, in that island, also gave him a certificate, 11 Mo. 21, 1716, and his parents wrote from Cork to Isaac Norris and Jonathan Dickinson, of Philadelphia, desiring them to assist him "in that weighty affair." He then settled in Philadelphia, became a merchant, and in 1717 married Mary, daughter of Isaac Norris.

In 1723, he was appointed Treasurer to the

In the following year, in the City of Cork, George Griffitts for a tithe of 3 s. 6 d. had taken "one large pewter dish and a Tankard," valued at 8 s. and 10 s. In 1729-30 and in 1733, he served as Mayor of Philadelphia. He was Keeper of the Great Seal of the Province from 1732 to 1734, and in 1733, took his seat in the Provincial Council. He was Judge of the Supreme Court from 1739 to 1743. He died in 1746, leaving three children to survive him : Isaac Griffiths, sometime Sheriff of Philadelphia County, married Sarah Fitzwater, in July, 1745, and died July 1, 1755 ; Mary, born March 20, 1721, died, unmarried, in 1791 ; and Hannah, born 1727, died, unmarried, in August 24, 1817.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Robert Cuppage, born in Cumberland, England, in 1619, married Elizabeth, daughter of Joshua and Sarah Warren, of Colchester, England. He had been a major in the army, but became convinced of the Quaker principles, and in 1662, at Wexford, for refusing to take the oath of "Grand-Juryman," he "was committed to Prison" (Besse, II., 472). In 1672, for tithes, he had taken from him hay, wheat, barley, oats, and lambs, to the value of over £1 (Stockdale, 23). He died at Lambstown, 7 Mo. 15, 1683 (Leadbeater, 92; Kutty, 149). At a meeting of the Board of Property at Philadelphia, 2 Mo. 7, 1712, there was a recital of a deed, dated Oct. 6 and 7, 1708, in which Thomas Cuppage, of Lambstown, Parish, of Whitechurch, County Wexford, Ireland, gentleman, since deceased, appears as one of the grantees. and John Burnyeat published a small book called "The INNOCENCY of the Christian QUAKERS Manifested," etc.<sup>1</sup>

About 1716, Robert Strettell went to London and engaged in trade, but losing a large amount of money in the South Sea Bubble, he decided to remove to Pennsylvania. A certificate of removal, dated 11 Mo. 26, 1736, for himself and family, from Friends' Meeting at Horslydowne, Southwark, was received by Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, 4 Mo. 24, 1737. He made his residence in Philadelphia and opened a shop; in a newspaper of 1738 is this advertisement: "late imported and to be sold by Robert Strettell at his store in Water Street facing Fishbourne's Wharf," muslin, cambrics, "flowered damask," India velvet, blue and white China plates, Japanese tea kettles, Scotch snuff, "fine London Pigtail tobacco," etc. His business prospered, and by 1744, when William Black visited the city, he had attained such affluence that he was able to keep up a country house at Germantown. Black writes in his Journal,<sup>2</sup> June 1, 1744:

Mr. Strettell carried us to Germantown about a mile further where he had a little County House to which he used to come and spend some part of the Summer Months, his Wife was then there: . . . Strettell began his public career in 1741. In that year he was elected a member of the Common Council of the City and also appointed to the Provincial Council. In 1748, he was elected Alderman, and in 1751, Mayor of Philadelphia. He was a Friend, but like James Logan, was a believer in defensive war.<sup>1</sup>

He was married, 5 Mo. 18, 1716, at Reigate, Surrey, to Philotesia Owen.<sup>2</sup> He died in June, 1761, and in his will mentions his "Proprie-

<sup>1</sup> In 1741, he was appointed on a committee to determine whether or not a letter on defensive war, written by James Logan to the Yearly Meeting, should be read before that body. Strettell was in favor of having the letter read, but the other members of the committee overruled and a negative report was made to the Meeting. Thereupon, Strettell arose in his seat and began to express himself as adverse to the decision, but one of the committee caught him by the coat, saying sharply, "Sit thee down, Robert, thou art single in that opinion."—Letter of Richard Peters to John Penn, October 20, 1741. William Stockdale, Provincial Councillor of Pennsylvania, and minister of the Society of Friends, first appears in the annals of Friends in 1657, as of Lanarkshire, Scotland. On February 26th of that year he wrote a short statement of some of the sufferings of Friends in Scotland, which is given in the second<sup>3</sup> edition of a Quaker pamphlet called, "The DOCTRINES and PRINCIPLES: the Persecutions, Imprisonment, Banishment, Excommunicating of the Saints of God, by the Priests and Magistrates of Scotland, contrary to the Doctrine of CHRIST and the APOSTLES,"<sup>1</sup> issued by him<sup>2</sup> and several others in 1659.

<sup>1</sup> John Strettell remained in England and was brought up to business by his uncle, John Owen. He became an opulent merchant in Lime Street, London, for some time residing at Croyden in Surrey. He died in 1786, leaving an estate of over £45,000.

In this little work is the following account of Stockdale's persecutions:

William Stockdale, and John Boweram, being moved of the Lord to go to Strahaven [Strathaven] in Evandale [Avondale, Lanarkshire], and declaring the word of truth there one a Market-day to the people, was oftentimes knockt down with stones, and stoned out of the town with violence by the wicked people (p. 3).

William Stockdale, was knockt down in the Steeple-house yard of Damanoy, and the people set their feet upon him, and pulled much hair off his head; insomuch that some of them cried he is kild, for he could not speak nor rise off the ground for along time (p. 4).

William Stockdall, was put in prison four days in a hole where he could scarce get room to lye down for speaking to James Nesmith, Priest of Hambleton (p. 6).<sup>3</sup>

In 1670, we find William Stockdale living in County Tyrone, Ireland, probably in the Parish of Benburb, for in this year he had a "pair of Pot-hooks" valued at 5 d. seized for refusing to contribute 2 d. towards the repairs of the "Seats and Glass windows of Benburb Parish Worship house."<sup>4</sup> He was a member of Grange Meeting near Charlemont, and with the exception of two years spent in missionary effort at Londonderry,<sup>1</sup> he seems to have resided in that neighborhood until his removal to Pennsylvania. John Whiting in his Memoirs, published in 1715, says that he "travelled much in the Service of Truth in England and Scotland and was very serviceable; especially in Scotland as aforesaid, and also in Ireland, where he dwelt."<sup>2</sup>

In 1683, he published a book entitled, "The Great Cry of Oppression: or A Brief Relation of some part of the Sufferings of the People of God, in scorn called Quakers in Ireland, for these 11 years—for Tithes, &c.—with a Testimony against taking and paying Tythes."<sup>3</sup>

He sailed from Ireland for Pennsylvania with his family, probably in the ship Friendship, of Liverpool, in 1684-5,<sup>4</sup> as he witnessed a will made on board that vessel, January (11 Mo.) 16, 1684

<sup>3</sup> He states that in 1680 he had seven "carloads of Hey" taken for tithes (p. 150). In 1682, "William Stockdale, after his Tryal at the Assizes in Londonderry, for being at a Religious Meeting, to worship God, in the County of Tyrone, was closely imprisoned for ten Months, upon Pretence of Fees, by Procurement of John Rooke, Clerk to Richard Reeves, who was then Judge there."—A Compendious View (Dublin, 1731), 58.

(probated at Philadelphia, 11 Mo. 8, 1685).<sup>1</sup> He lived for a number of years in the northeast part of New Castle County, of which he was chosen a Justice of the Peace in 1685 (July 29), 1689, and 1690.<sup>2</sup> He was a member of Newark Meeting, the Newark Monthly Meeting registers recording the deaths of his daughter Ruth, 6 Mo. 30, 1687, and his wife Jane, 7 Mo. 8, 1688. In 1689, he was again married, under the care of the Monthly Meeting, to Hannah Druett.

On 2 Mo. 1, 1689, he was admitted to the Provincial Council as a representative from New Castle County,<sup>3</sup> and took an active part in its deliberations. His name does not appear in the minutes after 7 Mo., 1690. In the doctrinal controversy between George Keith and the Friends he was an ardent defender of the principles of the Society.

At Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, 3 Mo. 26, 1692, he "appeared before the meeting and Signified his mind to leave this Province and desired a Certificate," but 8 Mo. 28th, "his inclination for removal of his family at present is ceased." He had now become much reduced in circumstances, so that at the above meeting a committee was directed "to look into his necessity and 1687, inclusive,<sup>3</sup> had resided for many years prior to his emigration within the limits of Mountmellick Meeting, Queen's County, Ireland. From Stockdale's<sup>4</sup> account of his sufferings for tithes, and from other sources, it is evident that he was a prosperous farmer with large flocks and herds and several servants.

In 1680, there were taken from him for tithes, seventeen "truckle-loads of Hey, and nineteen sheaves of Beans, and thirty-three sheaves of small Barly, all worth one pound one shilling";<sup>5</sup> seventeen "fleeces of Wooll" and five lambs, valued at £1. 7 s. The church-wardens took from him, 4

<sup>1</sup>Whiting (Memoirs, 131-2) says: "William Stockdale an ancient Publick Friend formerly belonging to Charlemount Meeting in the North of Ireland . . . removed to Pennsylvania in the year 1687 (?) and was concerned in the Controversie with G. Keith and there died . . . 1693."

Mo. 13, 6 lambs worth 15 s.; 4 Mo. 23, three fleeces of "Wooll," eight "Lambs fleeces" and some coarse wool, worth 5 s. 4 Mo. 25, church officers "brought a pair of Sheep-shears and took a Sheep and shored it, then the said Nicholas caused the Pen to be broken, and the Sheep to be drove out, as he had done before, to hinder their intent; the said persons struck many blows with a stick on the Backs, Arms and Hands of those that drove out his Sheep; afterwards the said persons penned up the Sheep again, and shored and carried away with them five fleeces of Wooll," in all valued at £2. 15s.<sup>1</sup>

With the hope of ending these persecutions he made ready to remove with his family to Pennsylvania. Mountmellick Meeting signed a certificate for him and his family, 12 Mo. 25, 1682, stating, as we have seen on page 58, that he had "walked honestly," but that Friends were "generally dissatisfied with his so removing, he being so well settled with his family, and having sufficient substance for food and raiment . . .; but our Godly jealousy is that his chief ground [for removal] is fearfulness of sufferings here." He sailed the early part of 1683, in the Levee of Liverpool, James Kilner, Master,<sup>2</sup> and settled on a large tract of land in Concord, now Delaware County.

FROM A DRAWING BY JOHN SARTAIN 1837

Here he built a mill and became an important man in the affairs of the meeting and neighborhood. Meetings were held at his house as early as 1687, and after his death were continued for a number of years at his widow's. For a time he served as Judge of the Chester County Courts. He died in Concord, May, 1699.<sup>1</sup>

We have already mentioned his son Nathaniel Newlin, the owner of Newlin Township. He was born about 1660, and came from Ireland with his father. He resided in Concord, and was also a prominent character. In 1698, he was elected to the Provincial Assembly from Chester County, and was re-elected several times. In 1700, he was one of the committee to consider and draw up a new Frame of Government and to revise the laws. He was subsequently appointed one of the Commissioners of Property and a Judge of the County Courts. In 1722, he became one of the Trustees of the General Loan-Office of the Province. He died in May, 1729.<sup>2</sup> warning of the intended attack of the British on his army at White Marsh, in 1777, was an Irish Quaker. She was born about 1729, the daughter of John Barrington, a Friend, of Dublin, and was married 11 Mo. 2, 1753, at Friends' Meeting, in Sycamore Alley, Dublin, to William Darragh (born about 1719) of the same city. They came to Philadelphia about 1765 and lived, it is thought, on Second Street, below Spruce.

William Darragh died 6 Mo. 8, 1783, and his widow, on April 22, 1786, purchased a house on the west side of Second Street, between Market and Chestnut Streets, where she resided and kept a shop. She died 12 Mo. 28, 1789, and, although she had been disowned from the Society for neglecting to attend meetings, she was buried in Friends' burial ground at Fourth and Arch Streets. The inventory of her estate amounted to £1628 17 s. 9 d. In her will she mentions her son Charles Darragh, who served in the American Army, as "Ensign in Second Penna Feby 1777 and 1st Lieut retired 1 July 1778."<sup>1</sup> For this breach of discipline he was disowned by Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, in 1781.<sup>1</sup>

We have now noticed a group of Irish Quakers who were most conspicuous and influential in the governmental affairs of Pennsylvania during the Quaker regime, 1682-1756. Many others of prominence have been referred to in the chapter on "Places of Settlement," and still others receive attention in the Appendix.

While outnumbered by the English and Welsh Quakers, these Irish Quakers compare favorably in the performance of public services; for they gave to the Province eight Provincial Councillors, three acting Governors, one Proprietary Secretary, two Receivers-General, one Register-General, one Surveyor-General, one Provincial Treasurer, one Chief Justice, three Judges, one Master of Chancery, two Keepers of the Seal, twenty-two Justices of the Peace, eighteen Assemblymen, two Sheriffs, one County Treasurer and three Mayors of Philadelphia.<sup>1</sup> Serving in these important capacities in a province, which, it is significant to remember, was founded and controlled by Quakers down to 1756, and which has ever been of foremost rank in the union of States, the Irish Quakers have had a strong formative influence upon our State and national institutions, and thus have been important factors in stamping upon these institutions imperishably the doctrines of civil and religious liberty.

Nor did the Irish Quakers play a less important part in the social order. Here also they were a distinct element of strength. Like most of the Quaker settlers they were plain yeomen and tradesmen, springing from that great middle class of society which has ever been the stay and strength of Britain, not only upon the field of battle but also in the pursuits of peace. They had escaped from a land of contest, imprisonment, disaster, and suffering, and found within the Quaker commonwealth religious freedom and economic opportunity. Their thrift and energy made them a substantial and stable part of the population ; and their principles as exemplified in their lives have entered into the bone and sinew of our Republic.

He produced a certificate, dated 8 Mo. 23, 1681, from Friends at Drogheda [Ireland] to Philadelphia Mo. Mtg. At Phila. Mo. Mtg., 1 Mo. 6, 1683. “ Several Certificates were brought into the meeting & Produced, amongst which there was a certain Certificate, dated from Clanbrazil [probably Lurgan Meeting] in the County of Armagh in Ireland, touching one James Atkinson (who now resides at Griffith Jones’s) his coming into this province contrary to the Consent of friends of the meeting whereunto he belonged, whom friends by the aforesaid Certificate signified to be very much in Debt, and C<sup>a</sup>.”

At the Mo. Mtg., 5 Mo. 3, 1683, “ Agreed that Thomas Holme, Thomas Wynne and Griffith Jones do satisfy by a few lines, the friends of the meeting at Canbrazil concerning James Atkinson, as touching his departure out of England and Ireland into Pennsylvania ” In 1684, he married Hannah, widow of Mark Newbie, of Newton Meeting, N. J. James Atkinson, of Philadelphia, shopkeeper, being aged, made his will 2 Mo. 16, 1711 (probated Sept. 6, 1711) and mentions son Thomas.

In 1655, William Edmundson (Journal, 20) says, “ We came to a Widow Woman’s House, one Margery Atkinson, a tender, honest Woman, whose House [near Killmore, County Armagh] I had been at before: She was convinced of the Truth and received us lovingly. So we had a Meeting there; the tender People thereabouts generally came to Meeting, most of them received the Truth . . . We settled a Meeting there, which became large.” In 1660, for a demand of 8s. 4d. tithes, Margery Atkinson had taken from her two cows worth £3. 10s. (Besse II., 467).

DENNIS ROCHFORD, son of William Rochford, was born in Emstorfe[y] [Enniscorthy] Co. Wexford, Ireland, about 1647.

He became a Friend about 1662. According to Besse’s Sufferings (II., 476) he and other Friends being “ assembled in their usual Meeting-place in Bride-street [Dublin, in 1669,] were taken thence ” and committed to prison for five weeks, and also imprisoned in Wicklow “ Gaol,” in 1670, for attending a meeting at the house of Thomas Trafford, in Wicklow (Ibid., 479).

He “ went into England and landed in Whitehaven in Cumberland the 30th of the 3d month, 1675; dwelt in Brighthelmston in Sussex 3 years and kept a grocer's shop, and came into the province of Pennsylvania with Mary his wife, Daughter of John Heriott, of the parish of hostper poynt [Hurstpierrepoynt] in Sussex in Old England (she was Born on the 14th of the 3d month [16]52) in the ship called the Welcom, Robert Greenaway comander, with two servants, Tho: Jones & Jeane Mathews: the said Dennis' two daughters, Grace and Mary Rochford, dyed upon the seas in the said ship; Grace being above 3 years old and Mary being 6 months old: the said Dennis Rochford Landed with his family in Pennsylvania about the 24th day of the 8th month 1682 [not so early by a few days] Mary Rochford the second daughter of Dennis & Mary Rochford was born in the Province of Pennsylvania at Egely poynt, in the county of Philadelphia, the 22th of the 8th mo. 1683, between 10 & 11 at night, she being the second daughter of that name" (Hist. of Chester Co., 23; Penna Mag., VIII., 334).

Dennis Rochford settled in Concord Township, Chester (now Delaware) County, where he had located a large tract of land. In 1683, he represented Chester County in the Provincial Assembly (Dr. Smith's Hist. of Delaware Co., 497). Later, apparently, he removed to Philadelphia, where his name appears on the minutes of the Monthly Meeting, 5 Mo. 1, 1684.

ROBERT TURNER and family, from Men's Meeting in the City of Dublin; dated 5 Mo. 3, 1683. He being "an Antient friend of this meeting" and "a Widdow man." See notice of him, pages 257-262.

PHILIP ENGLAND, certificate dated 3 Mo. 21, 1683, from Men's Meeting, Dublin, Ireland.

BENJAMIN CHANDLEE, unmarried, son of William Chandlee, of Kilmore, County Kildare, Ireland, from Edenderry Mtg., King's County, Ireland, dated 11 Mo. 18 [year omitted, but probably about 1701 or 1702]. Signed by William, Jr., and Nath. Chandlee.

Benjamin Chandlee, son of William, of Kilmore, County Kildare, Ireland, came to Philadelphia and learned the trade of a clock and watchmaker with Abel Cottey, whose daughter Sarah he married, 3 Mo. 25, 1710, and about 1715 settled on a tract of land in Nottingham, Chester County, which had belonged to his father. There he built a smithy and made brass cow bells, then much needed. In 1741, they removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he died about 1745. (See further account in Hist. Chester Co., p. 496.)

In 1676, in County Meath, one William Chanley, of Killncross, Parish of Trim, had his goods seized for tithes.—Stockdale, 68.

CHRISTOPHER PENNOCK was married prior to 1675 to Mary, daughter of George Collett, of Clonmell, County Tipperary, Ireland. After residing there and in Cornwall, England, for some time, he emigrated to Philadelphia about 1685, and died in that city in 1701. A son, Joseph, born at Killhouse, near Clonmell, Ireland, 11 Mo. 18, 1677, was a merchant in Philadelphia until about 1714, when he removed to West Marlborough Twp., Chester Co., and settled on a large tract of land, of which he became proprietor by virtue of a grant from William Penn to George Collett, his grandfather. In 1738 he erected a large mansion, "Primitive Hall," in which he died, 3 Mo. 27, 1771. (See pages 144-6.) By his wife, Mary Levis, he had twelve children, an account of whom may be seen in History of Chester County, p. 680.

According to Besse's Sufferings of the Quakers, in 1660 (11., 467), 1666 (11., 475) Christopher Pennock, of Cork, Ireland, was imprisoned for attendance at Friends' meetings, and in 1670, for the same reason, he had 49 yards of "stuff" worth £2, 9s., taken from him (11., 478). In William Stockdale's Sufferings (p. 12), printed in 1683, he is mentioned as having 6s. taken from him for maintenance of a "Priest." In 1675, in Cork the "Priest" took seven shillings out of his "shop-box."—Stockdale, 60. In Cork, in 1676, Mary Pennock for keeping shop open on Christmas day was imprisoned for one night.—Stockdale, A Great Cry of Oppression, 231. In the summer of 1900, the writer saw the original MS. of Dr. John Kutty's Rise and Progress of the Quakers in Ireland (in possession of John Pim, J. P., a Friend, of Bonaven, Antrim Road, Belfast), bound in a piece of old parchment, which on a hasty inspection seemed to be a seventeenth century deed, containing the names of Christopher Pennock and George Collett, both of Cork. In 1680, George Collett, of Clonmell, had seized for tithes six "Pewter Dishes and a Pewter Candlestick," valued at £1.—Stockdale, 165.

The following extract from a letter, dated 2 Mo. 7, 1685, addressed to Christopher Pennock, doubtless refers to George Collett: "Dear Brother Pennock, Myne and my wife's affectionate love is to thee, and we are heartily glad it is in thy wife's hart to be with thee, and that the way is made for her ffather's condescension and willingness thereto." (Pennock Papers, belonging to Mrs. William H. Miller, of Media, Pa.)

JOHN MCCOMB, from Ireland, was at Philadelphia, in 1688.

"To friends of the Monthly Meeting at Philledelphy these are to Satisfie yu concerning John McComb who I doe understand is

"JOHN FULLER, of the towne & Countie of Philadelphia," merchant, made his will 3 Mo. (May) 25, 1690, and it was proved 10 Mo. 5, 1692, by Robert Turner, executor. Samuel Carpenter and Patrick Robinson were assistant executors.

He leaves "To Elizabeth Cuppage,<sup>1</sup> of Lemsone [Lambstown, County Wexford], in the Kingdome of Ireland, my mother the sum of" £ 130 "to be paid to her in Ireland," in "case the ship Tryall in which I goe for England shall goe well home, then I doe give unto my s<sup>d</sup> mother further the sum of twenty pounds money aforesd—to Robert Turner younger—the sum of five pounds, and to Mary Turner, Daughter to the s<sup>d</sup> Rob<sup>t</sup> Turner Sr the sum of five pounds—to my friend George Keith of Philadelphia, the sum of twenty Pounds—to Benj<sup>n</sup> Acton of Salem in West New Jersey—the sum of five Pounds—to my friend Sam<sup>l</sup> Carpenter—the sum of five Pounds—to John MacCombe—the sum of thirty Pounds—to my friend Patrick Robinson of Philadelphia—the sum of five Pounds, to the Poore of the People called Quakers in the towne of Philadelphia the sum of Tenn Pounds." John Camm probably settled in Philadelphia for a time, but subsequently removed to what is now Delaware County, where his name appears in a list of taxables in 1715. On August 29, 1716, then residing in Upper Providence Township, and styled stocking weaver, he purchased from Elizabeth, widow of Charles Booth, a messuage and one hundred acres of land in the said township, for a consideration of £75. Mr. Ashmead in his Delaware County (670) is authority for saying that John Camm was the first stocking weaver in America. In 1732, Camm inserted the following advertisement in the American Weekly Mercury, issued December 10th.

"Whereas, Matthew Burne, of Chester County, served John Camm two years (that is, ten or twelve months at stocking weaving and other work), during which time John Camm's stockings bore many reflections, and now the said Matthew Burne goes about selling stockings in John Camm's name as though they were his own make, which is false and not true.

Nicholas Fred, son of John, married about 1720, Ann, daughter of Joseph Need, of Darby. He lived in Birmingham and was interested in a mill there. Had children: Mary, John, Joseph, Catharine.

NEWARK OR KENNETT MONTHLY MEETING

Of Chester County, Pa., and New Castle County, Delaware.

Established in 1686.

VALENTINE HOLLINGSWORTH, wife Ann, and children came over to Pennsylvania in 1682, from Balleniskcrannell, Parish of Sego, County Armagh, Ireland, and settled in New Castle County on Delaware.

HENRY HOLLINGSWORTH, son of Valentine, came over from Ireland in 1683, in the Ship Lion, as an indented servant to Robert Turner.—Penn'a Mag. VIII., 334.

VALENTINE HOLLINGSWORTH,<sup>1</sup> son of Henry Hollingsworth, of Belleniskcrannell, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, Ireland, and Catharine, his wife, was born at Belleniskcrannell, "about the sixth month in the yeare 1632"; was married 4 Mo. 7, 1655, to Ann Ree, daughter of Nicholas Ree,<sup>2</sup> of Tanderagee, County Armagh. She was born about 1628, at Tanderagee, and died 2 Mo. 1, 1671. He then was married a second time, 4 Mo. 12, 1672, to Ann Calvert, daughter of Thomas Calvert, of Dromgora, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, and Jane his wife. The following is a copy of the marriage certificate :

"This is to certifie the truth to all people that Valentine Hollenworth<sup>3</sup> in y<sup>e</sup> psh of Segoe in y<sup>e</sup> county of Armagh, and Anne Calvert of the same psh having intentions of marriage according to the ordinance of God, and Gods joining, Did lay it before mens meeting before whom their marriage being propounded, then y<sup>e</sup> meeting desired them to wait some time, w<sup>ch</sup> they did, so the meeting making inquiry between the times whether y<sup>e</sup> man be free from all other women, and the woman free from all other men, and so the second time they coming before the mens meeting, all things being found clear, so they being left to their freedom. A meeting of the people of god being appointed and assembled together at the house of Marke Wright, in the psh of Shankell the twelfth day of the fourth month in y<sup>e</sup> yeare 1672 whene they tooke one another in marriage in the presence of god and of his people

<sup>1</sup> The records of this family in Ireland are from the registers of Lurgan Meeting, County Armagh. There is, of course, no foundation for the tradition that Valentine Hollingsworth married Catharine, daughter of Henry Cornish, High Sheriff of London, who was executed in 1685. It is probable that the Hollingsworths went over from England to Ireland with other planters early in the seventeenth century, but there is no proof to show that they came from Cheshire, as stated by some historians of the family. For an extended record of descendants of Valentine Hollingsworth see Hollingsworth Genealogical Memoranda, by William B. Hollingsworth (Baltimore, 1884); also see McFarlan-Stern Genealogy, 6-11, 56-60, History of Chester County, 605.

1671, County Armagh, "Valentine Hollingsworth had taken from him for Tithe, by Thomas Ashbrook Tithmonger twenty nine stooks of Barly, and three stooks and a half of Oats, all worth one pound one shilling ;" 1672, "Valentine Hollingsworth for Tithe by Edward O'Maghan, 26 stooks wheat, 3 car-loads Hey, 26 stooks of Oats, 26 stooks of Barley, Value £2, 18s ;" 1673, corn and hay, valued at £2 ; 1674, wheat, hay, oats, barley, valued at £3 4s.

In 1682, Valentine Hollingsworth and his family, accompanied by his son-in-law, Thomas Connaway, and by John Musgrave, an indented servant, sailed from Belfast for the Delaware,<sup>2</sup> and, as we have already stated,<sup>3</sup> settled on a large plantation of nearly a thousand acres on Shelpot Creek in Brandywine Hundred, New Castle County, about five miles northeast of the present city of Wilmington. He was prominently identified with the affairs of Friends, the early meetings being held at his house. In 1687, he gave "unto ffrriends for a burying place half an Acre of land for y<sup>t</sup> purpose." A meeting-house was afterward built on this plot and the meeting known as Newark, from the name of the plantation, which in the original survey was called "New Worke." Valentine Hollingsworth was appointed a Justice of the Peace for New Castle County, in 1685, and represented the county in the Assembly in 1682-3, 1687, 1688, 1689, 1695, and 1700.<sup>4</sup> He died subsequent to 1710, and his wife Ann died 8 Mo. 17, 1697. They were interred in Friends' ground at Newark.

1. Mary Hollingsworth, born 1 Mo. 25, 1656, at Belleniskcrannell, married, first, 4 Mo. 28, 1682, at the house of Francis Robson, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, to Thomas Conway or Connaway, of Parish of Lisburn, County Antrim. They came to the Delaware with her father in 1682, and settled near him in New Castle County. Thomas Connaway died 11 Mo. 30, 1688-9, and his widow, in 1693, married, secondly, Randal Malin, widower, of Upper Providence, now Delaware County (originally of Great Barrum, Cheshire, England). Randal Malin became a Quaker minister and in 1727 removed with his wife and family within the limits of Goshen Monthly Meeting.

By her first husband, Thomas Connaway, she had three children: (1) Elizabeth, b. 7 Mo. 9, 1687, m. 1st Charles Booth, 1705, and 2d, Thomas Babb, in 1720; Ann, born about 1688, m. Philip Taylor, 6 Mo. 10, 1705; Sarah b. about 1689, m. 3 Mo., 1710, to John Yearsley, b. in England about 1685, son of John and Elizabeth. By her second, Randal Malin, she had three children: Hannah, b. 1 Mo. 7, 1695-6, m. Daniel Williamson, Jr., about 1716; Rachel, b. 5 Mo. 24, 1702, m. 2. Henry Hollingsworth,<sup>1</sup> b. 9 Mo. 7, 1658, at Belleniskcrannell, is thought to have come over to Pennsylvania as a redemptioner to Robert Turner, in 1683. Subsequently he lived for a time with his father in New Castle County. In 1688, he returned to Ireland for a wife and on 6 Mo. 22d of that year was married to Lydia Atkinson, of Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, whom he shortly after brought to Pennsylvania.<sup>2</sup> For a number of years he was Deputy Surveyor of Chester County. In 1695, he resided in Chester, and was Sheriff of the County. He also represented New Castle County in the Provincial Assembly. In 1700, and for some time after he was Clerk of the Courts, and Coroner of Chester County. He removed to Elkton, Md., about 1712, in which year he was appointed (3 Mo. 9 by Lord Baltimore) Surveyor of Cecil County. His manuscript commonplace book, which is a medley of receipts, poetry, astrology, alchemy, chemistry, some of which is in Latin, is in the collection of the Hon. Samuel W. Pennypacker, of Philadelphia. He died 2 Mo. or 3 Mo. 1721. His children were: Ruth, m. George Simpson, 12

<sup>2</sup> It is possible that John Calvert was of the same kin as the Calverts, Lords Baltimore and Proprietors of Maryland; for he came into Ireland prior to 1617, from Moorsham, Yorkshire, only about twenty-five miles from Kilpin, in the same county, where about 1580 was born George Calvert, the first Lord Baltimore (son of Leonard Calvert, a well-to-do country gentleman, by Alice Crosland, his wife, and grandson of John Calvert).—See "George Calvert" in Dictionary of National Biography and pp. 1-4, George and Cecilius Calvert ("Makers of America" Series, by William Hand Browne, N. Y., 1890).

In the latter part of the seventeenth century there was a presumption that such a relationship existed; for on June 4, 1735, Samuel Hollingsworth, of Chester County, made a deposition before the Mayor of Philadelphia, in connection with the boundary dispute between the Penns and Lord Baltimore, that in 1683 one Colonel Talbot and a party of Lord Baltimore's surveyors were the guests one night at the home of his father, Valentine Hollingsworth, in New Castle County; and that in the course of conversation during the evening "the said Talbot enquiring into the Place from whence this affirmant's ffather and Mother came and the maiden name of his mother, which was Calvert, the said Collonel Talbot invited this affirmant's ffather to come down and live in Maryland, assuring him his Lordship would be very kind to him on account of his wife's having been a Calvert."—McFarlan-Stern Genealogy, 58. Mary Calvert and William Whitesite, were married 3 Mo. 27, 1696, by Friends' ceremony at the house of Thomas Calvert near Carrickfergus.

at Lygasory, near Lurgan, County Armagh, and about 9 Mo. 11, 1647, married Jane Glasford, daughter of Hugh Glasford and wife Margaret, of "Stranmillis (nere Belfast)," County Antrim. At Ulster Province Meeting, 4 Mo. 7, 1680, £1. 13. 9d. was paid to Thomas Calvert for the apothecary at Carrickfergus, evidently for attendance on Friends confined in Carrickfergus jail; for on 6 Mo. 6, 1681, L. Alyson and T. Calvert were directed to supply the wants of prisoners there, £2. 10s. being appropriated for the purpose. In 1681, Thomas Calvert, of Parish of Carrickfergus, County Antrim, had some hay and oats, valued at 11s., taken for tithes.<sup>1</sup>

Children of Thomas and Jane Calvert :

1. John, born 8 Mo. 6, 1648, near Belfast.
2. Ann, born about 9 Mo. 1650, in Killwarlin, near Hillsbrough, County Down.
3. Margaret, born about 4 Mo. 24, 1661, at Killurigan, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh.
4. Elizabeth, born 4 Mo. 26, 1664, in County Armagh; m. 10 Mo. 25, 1701, at Ballyhagen Meeting, Thomas Toppen, of Ballyhagen, County Armagh.

John Calvert,<sup>2</sup> son of Thomas Calvert, of Drumgor, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, Ireland, and Jane, his wife, was born 8 Mo. 6, 1648, in Stranmillis, near Belfast; was married 3 Mo. (May), 29, 1673, at the house of Roger Webb, to Judith Stamper, daughter of Hugh Stamper and Bridget, his wife, of Lurgan, County Armagh. Judith Stamper was born 3 Mo. 12, 1652, at "bowlton wood,"<sup>3</sup> County Cumberland, England.

John Calvert removed with his family about 1683 to Pennsylvania, and settled in Upper Providence Township, now Delaware County, where he owned 300 acres of land, granted to him by William Penn, 1 Mo. 13, 1683. An adjoining tract of 300 acres was also granted at the same time for Thomas Calvert, the father, who probably did not come to this country. Still another tract of 100 acres, contiguous to the above, was granted on the same date to Margaret Calvert, probably the daughter of Thomas. On 2

A copper battle-axe was lately found in the moss at Bolton Wood, four feet below the surface."—Lewis, Topographical Dictionary of England.

Mo. 11, 1691, it was ordered that a patent for the whole tract should be made to John Calvert, to whom it was made appear to belong.<sup>1</sup> At Chester Monthly Meeting, 4 Mo. 6, 1687, mention is made of a difference between John Calvert and Thomas Hollingsworth (stepson of John Calvert's sister Ann, who married Valentine Hollingsworth) about dividing their lands in Upper Providence.

Children of John and Judith (Stamper) Calvert :

I. Ruth, b. 6 Mo. 2, 1674, at Lurgan, Ireland ; m. about 1697, Edward Paviour, of Upper Providence.

II. Isaac, b. 9 Mo. 2, 1676, at Lurgan.

III. Thomas, b. 9 Mo. 27, 1678, at Lurgan, bought a lot in Chester, in 1700, and sold it in 1702.

IV. Joshua, b. 8 Mo. 18, 1680, at Lurgan. At a Chester County court, held 6 Mo. 25, 1702, the sheriff made a return of an execution on the estate of John Calvert, which was sold to Thomas, Joshua, and Thomas Calvert for £243. Joshua was constable of Upper Providence in 1704. In 1724, he had 370 acres of the Calvert land in Upper Providence. The remainder seems to have been in possession of Daniel Calvert. Joshua Calvert m., in 1709, Deborah, daughter of George and Elizabeth Harlan, and is thought by Gilbert Cope to have been the parents of Thomas Calvert, who married Sarah Williamson, about 1739, lived in Edgmont, now Delaware County, and probably in East Marlborough, Chester County.

V. Daniel, b. 5 Mo. 6, 1685, in Pa. ; m. about 1709, Elizabeth Pritchett.

VI. Mary, b. 12 Mo. 19, 1687, in Pa.

VII. Judith, m. 10 Mo. 8, 1725, Daniel Broom, of Marple, now Delaware County.

JOHN MUSGRAVE, born about 1669, came over from Belfast, with his master, Valentine Hollingsworth, in 1682, and served his time for four years in New Castle County.

Later he removed to Sadsbury, Lancaster County, and on June 4, 1735, then aged about sixty-six, made a deposition in connection with boundary dispute between Pennsylvania and Maryland.<sup>2</sup>

John Musgrave, of Lancaster County, made his will in 1745. Mentions children : John, James, Thomas, Abraham, Esther, wife of John Griffith, Martha, wife of Benjamin Miller, Sarah, wife of Theophilus Owen, and two other daughters who married John Ferree and Thomas Powell.

THOMAS CONWAY, or CONNAWAY, of Lisburn, County Antrim, was married 4 Mo. 28, 1682, at the house of Francis Robson, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, to Mary Hollingsworth, daughter of Valentine (Records of Lurgan Meeting), and in the same year came over and settled near his father-in-law, in Brandywine Hundred, New Castle County. The records of Newark Monthly Meeting give the date of birth of a daughter, Mary Conaway, as 7 Mo. 9, 1687, and the date of Thomas Connaway's death as 7 Mo. 17, 1689. In 1693, the widow, Mary Connaway, married Randal Malin, of Upper Providence, and in 1727 removed and settled with her husband within the limits of Goshen Monthly Meeting.

WILLIAM DIXSON and Isabelle Rea, both of Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, Ireland, were married at the house of Roger Webb, Parish of Segoe, 5 Mo. 4, 1683. Among those who signed the marriage certificate were Henry Dixson, Rose Dixson, Thomas Harlan, and Isabelle Logan.—Marriage Book of Lurgan Mo. Mtg., Ireland.

This, no doubt, is the same family that came over to New Castle Co., prior to 1690. Henry Dixson, it is said, kept an inn at New Castle and had three children: (1.) William was married about 1690 to Ann Gregg, daughter of William Gregg,<sup>1</sup> who, it is believed, also came from the north of Ireland. William was a weaver by trade and settled on Red Clay Creek, in Christiana Hundred, New Castle County. He made his will 1 Mo. 31, 1708, and it was probated Sept. 20, 1708. He mentions his wife Ann, and appoints his brothers, Michael Harlan and John Gregg, <sup>1</sup>William Gregg settled on a tract of 400 acres of land in Christiana Hundred, New Castle County, surveyed to him 3 Mo. 11, 1685. Marriage certificate signed by: Thomas, Christian, and Catharine Harlan. (Records of Lurgan Mo. Mtg.) I have seen no evidence to show that any of the family of Thomas Harlan came over to Pennsylvania.

George Harlan settled at first about where the village of Centreville, New Castle Co., Delaware, now is, and the early meetings were held at his home. Later he removed farther up Brandywine Creek, and purchased 474 acres of land in Kennett, now Pennsbury, Township, Chester County. While living here he had for his neighbors over the creek, in a great bend, a settlement of Indians. After they had gone away he obtained, in 1701, a warrant for 200 acres of land in the bend of the creek, granted "in regard of the great trouble and charge he has bore in fencing and maintaining the same for the said Indians while living thereon." He died in 1714, and was buried by the side of his wife at Centre Meeting House.

In his will, dated 2 Mo. 21, 1714, probated 8 Mo. 2, 1714, George Harlan mentions his brother Michael Harlan, his servant Mary Mathews, and directs that his body be interred in the new burying ground on Alphonsus Kirk's land.—Hist. Chester Co., p. 587; Chester County Wills.

"George Harland [County Down, in 1680] had taken from him for Tithe, by Daniel Mac Connell . . . twelve stooks and a half of Oats, three stooks and a half of Barly, and five loads of Hey, all worth ten shillings ten pence."—William Stockdale's A Great Cry of Oppression.

The following is a list of the children of Timothy Kirk: Deborah, b. 7 Mo. 5, 1677; Samuel, b. 10 Mo. 15, 1678; Jacob, b. 10 Mo. 30, 1680; Sarah, b. 8 Mo. 9, 1682; Joseph, b. 1 Mo. 23, 1685; Roger, b. 2 Mo. 31, 1686; John, b. 10 Mo. 31, 1687; Ruth, b. 7 Mo. 29, 1690; Jane, b. 7 Mo. 18, 1692.

(Mar) 12, 1689. He arrived in New Castle County 3 Mo. 29, 1689, bringing with him a certificate of removal, dated 10 Mo. 9, 1688, from the meeting at John Robson's [Lurgan Meeting] stating "that he hath lived with his father from his infancy until now . . . and since his convincement he hath belonged to our Meeting." This document was signed by the following members of the Meeting: Robert Hoopes, Jno. Robson, William Porter, Timothy Kirk, Jno. Hoop, Robt. Kirk, Mark Wright, William Crook, Thos. Wainwright, Jno. (Certificate is printed in full in Friends' Intelligencer, of Philadelphia, 3 Mo. 30, 1872, Vol. XXIX., p. 71.)

He was married 12 Mo. (Feb.) 23, 1692-3, to Abigail, daughter of Adam and Mary Sharpy, of Shelpot Creek, New Castle

County on Delaware. He settled in Christiana Hundred, near what is now Centreville, in that County. Centre Meeting House was built on his land. He died 7 Mo. 7, 1745, and his wife in 1748. Of these children Roger removed to Nottingham, and William and Timothy settled in East Caln or Pikeland. William was twice married, and had nineteen children, of whom one was Rachel Price, a minister of the Society. (Hist. Chester County, 624.) See pages 207-8.

Jacob Kirk, son of Timothy, and grandson of Roger Kirk, was born 10 Mo. 30, 1680, and according to the minutes of Ulster Province Meeting, was married 7 Mo. 20, 1716, at Hillsborough Meeting, to Rebecca Robison, of Lisburn Meeting, County Antrim. He produced a certificate of removal from Ballinderry Meeting, County Antrim, to New Garden Monthly Meeting, Chester County, 11 Mo. 31, 1729, and settled on Conestoga Creek, in Lampeter Township, Lancaster County. He died prior to 1744, leaving at least three children:

Nov. 19, 1721, James Kirk, three weeks old, son of Jonathan and Mary (p. 266), and on Jan. 26, 1723, Elizabeth Kirk, born Jan. 11, 1723, daughter of above, were haptized (p. 279).

NATHANIEL CARTMILL and wife Dorothy came from Ireland to Pennsylvania, in 1685 and settled within the limits of Newark Monthly Meeting. They had at least two children: Martin, b. 1 Mo. 19, 1685, at sea on the voyage from Ireland; and Thomas, b. 2 Mo. 29, 1689, disowned 12 Mo. 4, 1715, for marriage out of Society (Records of Newark Mo. Mtg.). In 1689-90, Nathaniel Cartmill and Timothy Atkinson were each granted 200 acres of land in the Manor of Rockland, New Castle County, at a rent of one penny per acre, "being unwilling such good Husbandman should leave the Government" (Minutes of the Board of Property, Penn'a Archives, 2d Series, XIX., 25). At Newark Monthly Meeting, 7 Mo. 3, 1715, Nathaniel Cartmill was dealt with for consenting to his son's marriage out of the Society; for this breach of order he produced a satisfactory acknowledgment. In 1669, Godfrey and John Cantrell, of Queen's County, Ireland, had goods taken from them for refusing to contribute money for the church at Rosenallis (Besse's Sufferings of the Quakers, II., 477).

GAYEN MILLER, who first appears in Chester County in 1702, is thought to have been a near relative of John Miller, of New Garden. As stated on page 128, he purchased 200 acres at the site of Kennett Square, and in 1712 acquired 700 acres in New Garden. He also secured several other tracts. He took his seat in the Provincial Assembly in 1714. 6 Mo. Lightfoot

Thomas Lightfoot,<sup>1</sup> a highly esteemed minister of the Society of Friends, was born about 1645, perhaps in Cambridgeshire, and may have been the son of another Thomas Lightfoot who suffered persecution for his Quaker belief at Cambridge, in 1653,<sup>2</sup> and was a companion of George Whitehead in his religious journeys. In 1692, the younger Thomas was living in the neighborhood of Lisburn Meeting, County Antrim, Ireland; for on 8 Mo. 27 of that year he was appointed on a committee to buy the Friends graveyard at Lisburn from Robert Richardson. In 1694, he removed from the north of the Island to Moate Meeting in County West Meath.<sup>3</sup> Thence in 1716<sup>4</sup> he came to New Garden, Pennsylvania. Early in 1724 he paid a religious visit to New England. He died at Darby, now Delaware County, 9 Mo. 4, 1725, "greatly beloved" says his intimate friend Thomas Chalkley,<sup>5</sup>

By first wife he had four children: Ruth, who married Joseph Martin, Isaac, Samuel, and Benjamin. He came to Pennsylvania about 1717, and was married a second time, 10 Mo. 25, 1718, at New Garden Meeting, to Mary Wiley, of New Garden, probably a step-daughter of Thomas Lightfoot. He died in East Marlborough, in 1727.

At New Garden Monthly Meeting, 7 Mo. 28, 1728, "Mary Jackson acquainted this Meeting that she intended to go to Ireland to Visit her Relations and Requested to have a Certificate." Her certificate was signed 8 Mo. 26, 1728.

Mary, widow of Thomas Jackson, of East Marlborough, made her will 8 Mo. 28, 1729, and it was probated Dec. 20, 1729. As her husband, William Andrews, did not produce a certificate, it is presumed he was not a Friend. In his will,<sup>1</sup> dated 11 Mo. 23, 1747-48, probated March 25, 1748, he is mentioned as yeoman of Christiana Hundred, New Castle County, upon Delaware. He speaks of his "servant, James Nash, a man bought of George Robinson," and bequeaths his property to his wife Miriam and children, Ruth, Ezekiel, Hannah, and John. The Andrews were related in some way to the Hollingsworths; for "At a meeting of the Commissioners of Property 8 b<sup>1</sup> 2 d 1731 * * * Samuel Hollingsworth (on behalf of his Kinsman Wm. About the latter part of 1740, he was married by a Presbyterian minister to Isabel ———, who was not a Friend. Wilmington Preparative Meeting made report of this infraction of the Society's rules to Newark Monthly Meeting, 1 Mo. 7, 1740-1. He was assessed as a single freeman in Kennett Township in 1747 and 1749, and in East Marlborough Township, in 1750, 1753, and 1754.

By deed of May 19, 1771, Robert Whinery, of Newberry Township, York County, weaver, and Isabel, his wife, conveyed to their son Thomas a tract of 290 acres of land which had been granted to Robert by warrant of April 4, 1768 (Recorder's Office, York, Pa.). In his will, dated Jan. 7, 1785, probated Sept. 23, 1791, Robert Whinery mentions his children, Hannah McCreary, Thomas, William, and Catharine Whinery, and grandchild Sarah McCreary.

(Minutes of Ulster Province Meeting, Ireland.)

Andrew Moore, according to his biographer and descendant, Dr. Passmore, was born 6 Mo., 1688, in County Antrim, and was a son of James Moore, of Ballynacree, County Antrim. His wife Margaret died probably about 1722 or 1723, shortly before his emigration. He and his family arrived at New Castle on Delaware, 8 Mo. 3, 1723, and settled on a tract of land lying in Sadsbury Township, Chester and Lancaster Counties. Here he engaged in milling and farming and was an active and influential member of Sadsbury Meeting. He was married a second time, 4 Mo. 24, 1725, to Rachel, daughter of William Halliday, another Irish Friend. He died 7 Mo. 5, 1753, and was interred in Friends' burial ground, at Sadsbury Meeting House. Children were as follows :

1. James, b. 3 Mo. 6, 1716, came to Pennsylvania with his father in 1723 ; m., 1st, 2 Mo. 16, 1741, at New Garden Meeting, Ann, daughter of Jeremiah and Rebecca (Jackson) Starr ; m. 2d Mary, daughter of Joseph Wildman, of Bucks County ; m. 3d Ann, daughter of Caleb Jackson ; m. 4th Ann, daughter of John Minshal. <sup>1</sup>In 1897, Dr. John A. M. Passmore, of Philadelphia, issued an elaborate and carefully prepared genealogy of Andrew Moore and his Descendants, in two large octavo volumes of 1600 pages. In the light of the above marriage record it would seem that he had come to a wrong conclusion in stating, on page 7, that Andrew Moore had married Margaret, daughter of Gayen and Margaret (Henderson) Miller.

3. Margaret, b. in 1719, m. Alexander Love. After living some years in York County they removed to near the present town of Yorkville, South Carolina, where Alexander became a prominent citizen, serving as a member of the Provincial Congress of S. C.

He speaks of it as the third visitation of the disease since the settlement of the country by the English. He had lost a servant, Jo: Gavin, by it, making three out of his family of 12 persons. "I am in expectation of Ja: Nicholson in a little time,  $\text{P}$  whom I expect an acc<sup>t</sup> from Ireland & if he dont bring me a servant or servants I shall be in great want, for I am soe now. I hired an Indifferent hand lately at Husbandry & it cost me 36<sup>s</sup> for 4 weeks (& diet)."

"This Country I find most agreeable to my Health (else it is wth working harder): this country also is governed by more agreeable Laws than that."

“ JOSHUA PIM, }
Loving Cousin, }
 “ TULLYLAST, CO. KILDARE, }
 11th of 11 mo. 1768. }

In answer to thy request mentioned in thine of the 9th instant I send thee this : I can go no further back than to my great grandfather Richard Pim, who before his marriage lived a considerable time, a cook, with (I think he was called) Sir John Stanhope, ancestor to the Earl of Chesterfield. I heard of but one brother that he had, called Robert Pim, who he said came into Ireland when young, of whom he heard no more. We suppose he was that Robert Pim that Sir John Temple mentions to have been murdered by the Rebels at Graigue-ne-manch, in the County of Kilkenny. Richard Pim, before his marriage, had acquired what they call three livings : I suppose that to be three small pieces of land with each a dwelling on it.

He took a liking to a neighbor's daughter, a comely young girl of thirteen years of age, and as he and his fellow servants rode out on a merry-making, one of his fellow-servants took a pillow behind him and found her playing ball with other girls and asked her to go with them, which she did (it is probable that this was by conceit) and the said Richard married her and sent her to a boarding school for two years and then took her home at fifteen years of age. By her he had my grandfather, William Pim, and several daughters ; one married Godfrey Cantrell and one married to William Neale.

My grandfather, William Pim, married Dorothy, the sister of William Neal, and dwelt if I remember right, at his grandfather Neales house in Castledunnington, in Leistershire, in the year 1641 ; and in the year 1655 Godfrey Cantrell and family came into Ireland and Richard Pim, then very old, came with him and some time after died at Godfrey Cantrell's house, near Rosenallis (in the Queen's County), and was buried in the Church at Rosenallis. The same year my grandfather William Pim, and William Neal and families came over and settled in the County of Cavan, where after some years my grandfather died and was buried in his orchard at his own request, tho of the profession of the church of England ; about which time William Edmundson and Richard Jackson and some other Friends removed to the Queen's Co. William Edmundson settled near Rosenallis, Richard Jackson and my father near Mount Melick. My father had his mother to take care of, and one sister, Ellen, afterwards the wife of Thomas Nevitt. My father joined partnership with Richard Jackson in the Butchering trade, and at Mount Melick became acquainted with my mother, Mary, the daughter of William Pleadwell, who was born at Normanton upon Scree, in Nottinghamshire. My grandfather, William Pleadwell and his wife came into Ireland in 1655, they being Baptists, and settled near Killaloe. He had by his first wife Tobias Pleadwell, and by a second wife John Pleadwell, and by a third wife Thomas Pleadwell and my mother and two other daughters, one of whom was married to William Neale; and some time after my grandfather settled near Killaloe he was convinced by the ministry of Edward Burroughs and died not after; and as his son Tobias Pleadwell was convinced some time before his father and settled at Mount Melick, my grandmother and her children came to dwell at Mountmelick, and in the year 1663 my father & mother married and settled at Mountmelick; but in the year 1665 my father and several other friends were sent to prisoners for Tythe to Maryborough Gaol, where they continued prisoners for several years, though he had nothing titheable but a garden; so he got a house in Maryborough for my mother to dwell in and by favour of the Gaoler or Gaolers followed some business in his trade at Maryborough, and after they were discharged from the prison he took a farm at Coalnecart, part of the lands thy father now holds, and in 1678 or 1679 he went to live at Mountrath. As to the time and place of the births and burials of my brothers and sisters I refer thee to the abstract of the monthly meeting records of births and burials of Mount Melick Monthly Meeting, which abstract, so far as relates to Mountrath meeting is mostly in my handwriting. I suppose it is in the hands of John Clendenon.

P. S. Richard Jackson, before mentioned, had three sons, John, Thomas and Robert, and one daughter, Sarah, the wife of Nicholas Gribble. John I had no acquaintance with: Thomas, thy grandfather, lived at Killenare, and Robert at Mountmelick: thy grandmother, Sarah Pim, was born at Killenare. Thou may get all their genealogies out of the records of births and burials of Mountmelick monthly meeting." <sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Thomas Pim, the writer of the above letter, was the sixth son of John and Mary Pim. He resided at Mountrath until about 1735, when he went to live with his son's family at Tullylast, County Kildare. He died a few months after he wrote the letter, in his 86th year. He had two sons who had large families. My mother was his son Robert's eldest child. She was 16 years old when he died, and often spoke of him with great respect. His last grandchild, John Pim, died last summer in his 89th year. His sister, Hannah, died in her 91st year in 1849. There are now not any of his descendants of the name of Pim among Friends.—Robert Goodbody writing in 1852.

THE IRISH QUAKER SETTLERS OF NEWTON, NOW
IN CAMDEN COUNTY, NEW JERSEY

“ Let it be remembered y<sup>t</sup> upon y<sup>e</sup> nineteenth day of September, in y<sup>e</sup> year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and eighty-one, Mark Newby, William Bates, Thomas Thackara, George Goldsmith and Thomas Sharp, set saile from y<sup>e</sup> Harbor belonging to y<sup>e</sup> city of Dublin in y<sup>e</sup> Kingdom of Ireland, in a pink called Y<sup>e</sup> owner's adventure, whereof Thomas Lurtin, of London, was commander, and being taken sick in y<sup>e</sup> city, his mate John Dagger, officiated in his place; in order to transport us, and y<sup>t</sup> we might settle ourselves in West Jersey, in America. And by y<sup>e</sup> good providence of God we arrived in y<sup>e</sup> Capes of Delaware y<sup>e</sup> eighteenth day of November following, and so up y<sup>e</sup> bay until we came to Elsenburg, and were landed with our goods and families at Salem, where we a'bode y<sup>e</sup> winter. But it being very favourable weather and purchasing a boat amongst us, we had an opportunity to make search up and down in y<sup>t</sup> which was called y<sup>e</sup> Third tenth, which had been reserved for y<sup>e</sup> proprietors dwelling in Ireland, where we might find a place suitable for so many of us to settle down together, being in these early times somewhat doubtful of y<sup>e</sup> Indians, and at last pitched down by y<sup>t</sup> which is now called Newton creek, as y<sup>e</sup> most invitingist place to settle down by, and then we went to Burlington, and made application to y<sup>e</sup> commissioners y<sup>t</sup> we might have warrants directed to Daniel Leeds, y<sup>e</sup> Surveyor General, to survey unto every of us, so much land as by y<sup>e</sup> constitution at y<sup>t</sup> time was allotted for a settlement being five hundred acres, or y<sup>t</sup> we had a right to, for a taking up it under, which accordingly we obtained.

Dublin, and had been settled in Salem, four years before, joined in with us who had a right to a tenth, Mark Newby to a twentieth, William Bates to a twentieth, Thomas Thackara to a twentieth, Thomas Sharp (out of his uncle Anthony Sharp's right) a twentieth, and George Goldsmith (under ye notion of Thomas Starkey's right) a tenth; all which of us excepting William Bates who took his on ye southerly side of Newton creek, we took our land in one tract together for one thousand seven hundred and fifty acres, bounding in ye forks of Newton creek and so over to Cooper's creek and by a line of marked trees to a small branch of ye fork creek and so down ye same as by ye certificate of it standing upon record in ye Secretary's office it doth appear. And after some time finding some inconvienency in having our land in common together being at ye time settled at ye place now called Newton in ye manner of a town for fear as aforesaid at which being removed we came to an agreement to divide. George Goldsmith he chose the head of the creek, Thomas Sharp the forks or lower end of the land next towards the river by which means the rest kept to their settlements without any disadvantage to themselves.

THOMAS SHARP."

Thomas Sharp was Recorder and Clerk of the Courts of Gloucester County for many years. He was also a surveyor and made several important maps of the early settlements which are reproduced in facsimile in Judge Clement's First Settlers of Newton. He acted as agent for his uncle, Anthony Sharp, of Dublin, who had large holdings in New Jersey. In 1684, he was made Commissioner of Highways, and in the following year was returned as a member of the Legislature. In 1700, he became Judge of the Gloucester County Courts.

Thomas Sharp was married in 1684, to Sarah Fearn, of Darby. A daughter Elizabeth, m. 8 Mo. 3, 1709, at Darby, John, son of John and Mary Hallowell, and resided at Darby and Newton. Children of John and Elizabeth Hallowell: Sarah, b. 11 Mo. 16, 1710, d. 7 Mo. 17, 1747, m. John Hurst; Samuel, b. 3 Mo. 10, 1713; John, b. 7 Mo. 10, 1715, d. 7 Mo. 26, 1778, m. Hannah Lewis; Thomas, b. 11 Mo. 13, 1717, d. 8 Mo. 29, 1788, m. Ann. Thomson; Joseph, b. 12 Mo. 28, 1721, d. 5 Mo. 8, 1792, m. Elizabeth Holcomb; Mary, b. 2 Mo. 1, 1729, d. 12 Mo. 16, 1791, m. John Elmslie.

ISAAC SHARP, son of Anthony Sharp, of Dublin, came to New Jersey about 1702-3, and settled at Blessington, now Sharptown.

He was Judge of Salem Court and served as a member of the Assembly from 1709 to 1725. About 1726 he returned to Ireland and resided on his estate called "Roundwood," in Queen's County, where he died in 1735. He married in 1704, Margaret Braithwaite, of Salem, and had children: Anthony, Isaac (of Blessington, Salem County, N. J., died in 1770. He was also Judge of Salem Court), Joseph, Sarah, Rachel (m. Daniel Delaney, of Queen's County, Ireland, by whom she had children: Sharp, William, Martin).—American Genealogist, 146.

ROBERT ZANE, of Dublin, "Serge Maker," pioneer settler of Newton, or the Irish Tenth, in Gloucester County, N. J., probably came out with John Fenwick and his party, in 1675, for he was one of the members of the Friends' Meeting established at Salem that year.

By deed of April 12, 1677, he became one of the Proprietors of West New Jersey. In 1679 he was married, at Burlington Meeting, to Alice Alday, who is thought to have been an Indian. In 1681 he became a settler at Newton. He was elected to the first Legislature in 1682, and was returned in 1685. He died in 1694, leaving his second wife, Elizabeth (daughter of Henry Willis, of Hempstead, Long Island), and several children to survive him.

Children were: Nathaniel, b. about 1673, m. Grace Rakestraw, of Philadelphia, in 1697; Robert, m. Jane ———; Elnathan; Simon; Mary; Esther; and Sarah. (For further details see Clement's First Settlers of Newton, 11-22, and Penna. Mag., XII., 123-25.)

WILLIAM BATES, carpenter, of County Wicklow, who was imprisoned in 1670, for attending Friends' Meeting at Thomas Trafford's house in Wicklow (Besse, II., 470), was one of a company of Friends who purchased a share of West New Jersey, by deed of April 12, 1677.

He sailed from Dublin in September, in 1681, in Ye Owners Adventure, and settled with the other Irish Friends at Newton, where he owned 250 acres of land. In 1683 he was one of the representatives from the Irish Tenth in the Legislature of the Province of West New Jersey, and was the same year appointed constable. The next year he was again returned as a member of the Legislature, and was appointed one of the commissioners for laying out highways. He died in 1700. His children, all born in Ireland, were : Jeremiah, m. Mary, daughter of Samuel Spicer ; Joseph, m. Mercy Clement, in 1701 ; Abigail, m. Joshua Fearne, in 1687 ; William, said to have married an Indian girl ; Sarah, m. Simon Ellis, in 1692.<sup>1</sup>

GEORGE GOLDSMITH, a Friend, came over from Dublin, in Ye Owners Adventure, in 1681-2, and settled at Gloucester, N. J.<sup>2</sup>

His grandson, James Parrock, a Friend, of Philadelphia, shipwright, aged seventy-six years, in a deposition made at Philadelphia, Jan. 2, 1751, states that his grandfather had formerly lived at Ballinakill, Queen's County, Ireland, and had served in Ireland as Lieutenant in Cromwell's Army.<sup>3</sup>

JOHN HUGG, from the Parish of Castle Ellis, County Wexford, was an early settler on Little Timber Creek, in the Newton settlement, where in 1683 he purchased 500 acres of land from Robert Zane.

He served as a member of the Jersey Legislature in 1685. He died in 1706. His children were : John, Judge of Gloucester County courts, 1695-1706, Provincial Councillor of West New Jersey, etc., m. Priscilla, daughter of Francis Collins ; Elias, m. Margaret, sister of Priscilla Collins ; Joseph, m. Sarah ——— ; and Charles.<sup>4</sup>

MARK NEWBIE, says Judge Clement, "was a resident of the city of London, and a tallow chandler." He was a member of a Friends' Meeting, whose house of worship was in a street of that city, called "Barbican," and removed to Dublin, in 1681.

Unfortunately the Judge does not give his authority for this statement or it might be confirmed ; but this date of removal to London is at least ten years too late, for Stockdale mentions Newbie as a persecuted Quaker shopkeeper residing in Thomas Street, Dublin, in 1671. Says Stockdale :<sup>5</sup>

In 1671, Mark Newby, of Thomas Street, Dublin, "because for Conscience sake he could not be an observer of Holidays (so-called) he opened his Shop on the 25th of the 10th month, called Christmas day." For this he "had his house assaulted by a rude multitude," who with great violence threw dirt and stones into "his Shop, endangering his Life and his Families; spoyled Shop-goods, broke Glass-windows and Pewter vessels, abused their Neighbours for reproving them; the said Mark was damnified" 16 s. 6 d.

Mark Newby set out for New Jersey, in the latter part of 1681, in Ye Owners Adventure and settled at Newton, the first Friends' meetings being held at his house. In the political affairs of New Jersey he took a prominent part and filled several positions of trust and responsibility. At the May term of the Legislature, in 1682, he appeared as a member, and was selected by the Governor as one of his Council. He was made one of the Land Commissioners and one of the Committee of Ways and Means to raise money for the use of the government. He died probably early in 1683, for at the May term of the Legislature in 1683 he is mentioned as deceased.

As far as ascertained, he had two sons and two daughters: Rachel, m. Isaac Decou, in 1695; Stephen, m. Elizabeth Wood, in 1703; Edward, in Hannah Chew, in 1706; and Elizabeth, m. John Hogg, in 1714.

THOMAS THACKARA, "stuff maker," of Dublin, by deed of April 12, 1677, in conjunction with other Friends, purchased one whole share of West New Jersey.

He sailed with his family from Dublin, in September, 1681, in Ye Owners Adventure, and settled on 250 acres at Newton. He became one of the leading men of the settlement, serving as a member of the first Legislature that sat at Burlington to frame and adopt laws for the Province. In 1682, he was appointed one of the Judges of the Court for the Irish Tenth and served until 1685, inclusive. He was also one of the land commissioners. The first Friends' meeting house built at Newton stood upon lands conveyed by him to the trustees of the Society. He died about 1702, letters of administration on his estate being granted in that year. His first wife probably died after his settlement here, as in 1689 he married Hepzibah, daughter of Francis Eastlake.

Children were: Benjamin, m. Mary, daughter of William Cooper; Thomas, m. (1) Ann Parker and (2) Abigail Bates; Hannah, m. John Whittall; Sarah, m. John Eastlack; and Hepzibah.<sup>2</sup>

JOHN JARVIS, or Jervis,<sup>1</sup> a Friend, of Roscore, King's County, Ireland, with his son Martin, as stated in the deposition of James Parrock, made at Philadelphia, in 1751, was "obliged to fly from Ireland [in 1688] with as much haste and privacy as he could for fear of being massacred by the Papists." He came to New Jersey by way of Boston and took up his residence with his old friend George Goldsmith, of Gloucester, N. J., where he remained until 1691, when he settled on a large tract of land which he had purchased at Cape May. He was appointed Justice of the Peace for Cape May County in 1695, 1696, and 1697. In 1701, he returned to Ireland. He had five<sup>2</sup> sons: I. Charles Jarvis<sup>3</sup> (b. about 1675 in Ireland, d. in London, in 1739) studied in London under Sir Godfrey Kneller, court painter, and became a celebrated artist. (He was a friend of Pope, the poet, and translated Don Quixote.—See National Dictionary of Biography, XXIX., p. 354.) II. John Jarvis, who in 1753,<sup>4</sup> was living in King's County, Ireland. III. Mathew, died young. IV. Trevor, died young. V. Martin Jarvis, shoemaker, b. about 1675, d. 1742, says Parrock, settled for a time in Newton, then Gloucester County, N. J., and married in 1698, Mary Champion (whose father John Champion came afterwards from Long Island and settled near Gloucester). In 1705, Martin Jarvis purchased a house and lot on 2d Street, between Market and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia, and made his residence there the remainder of his life. His daughter Sarah married William Sandwith, an Irish Friend, of Philadelphia, and became the mother of Elizabeth (Sandwith) Drinker (wife of Henry Drinker, of Philadelphia, one of the Quaker exiles to Virginia, in the war of the Revolution), whose diary,<sup>5</sup> covering the period 1759-1807, is a valuable record of the social life of the time.

About 1749 or 1750 he went with his family to York County, and settled on a tract of 193½ acres of land called Adington, in Warrington, now Washington, Township, granted by the Penn Proprietors by warrant dated May 29, 1749.<sup>1</sup> He died in 9 Mo., 1753, and was buried in the burial ground at Warrington Friends' Meeting House, near the present village of Wellsville. #### THE MARSH FAMILY

JOHN MARSH, a Friend, of Armagh, County Armagh, Ireland, was residing in that town as early as 1664, for in his will, dated 1688, he mentions "the half tenement and Garden plott Situate lying and being in the Scotch Street in Ardmagh which I have by lease from the primate of Ireland bearing date the twentyeth day of October 1664." He was staunch and true to his Quaker principles and on account of them had to endure severe persecutions. From the record of these sufferings it was evident that he was a thrifty yeoman or farmer, having servants and cattle and sheep, and raising wheat, oats, barley, etc. In 1660, "John Marsh [County Armagh] being sued for Milch-money and Offerings, to the value of about 3l. at the Mannor Court of Loughall (by Humphrey Pettard Priest) had taken from him so many of his Cattel as were worth 18l."<sup>1</sup>

"The said John Marsh being sued again, in the said Court, for five years' Tythe of sixty-two Sheep (by the said Priest) had the very whole number of sixty-two Sheep taken from him (being all he had) worth 12l."<sup>1</sup>

In 1666, for refusing to pay tithes he had taken from him "Cattle and Sheep worth £30,"<sup>2</sup> and in 1669 "John Marsh being sued for Priests and Clarks Dues (so-called) and such like things, to the value of 8s. 3d. in a Temporal Court at Ardmagh, by Thomas Blevin Clark, had taken from him by the Bailiffs, a Brass Pot, and four Pewter Dishes, worth £1. 17s.<sup>3</sup> In 1673, he was one "Of those who suffered Distress for Tithes of Corn, Hay, &c."<sup>4</sup> "In this and some preceding Years, several had suffered Distress for refusing to contribute to the repairing of the Parish Worship-house at Kilmore, in the County of Armagh." Among these, from John Marsh were taken "two Heifers, three Sheep, and two Calves, worth £3. 7s."<sup>5</sup> In 1673 "John Marsh had taken from him for Tithe, for the Dean of Ardmagh, forty three stooks of Barly and fifteen car-loads of Hey, all worth one pound sixteen shillings."<sup>6</sup>

"ANNO 1674. Isabel Lancaster, Servant to John Marsh, of the County of Armagh, was sued in the Primate's Temporal Court for carrying Home her Master's Corn, under Pretence of its being Tithe, though it was neither markt nor set forth as such. An Execution was obtained against her, on which she was imprisoned in the Bayliff's House, and after two Weeks removed thence to another Bayliff's, where she was detained six months."<sup>7</sup>

In 1674 "John Marsh had taken from him for Tithe, by the Servants of James Downham, Dean of Ardmagh, thirty stooks of Barly out of two hundred thirty eight, and nine stooks of Oats out of three score and ten, worth one pound four shillings six pence."<sup>8</sup> He also suffered similar persecutions in 1675 and in 1676.

At the time of the making of his will John Marsh was "Sick in body" and probably died about that time, in 1688, leaving Dorothy, his wife, to survive him. Children, probably by Dorothy, his wife, were: Joseph, Rebecca, Sarah, Hester, and perhaps others. The following is a copy of the will:

JOSEPH MARSH, son of John Marsh, for some breach of discipline, was disowned from membership in the Society of Friends, 10 Mo. 5, 1674, at Lurgan Meeting, held at Roger Webb's house near Lurgan, County Armagh. In the testimony issued against him he is mentioned as late of Lisneny near Loughgall, County Armagh, widower, "who for several years past frequented our meetings." According to his father's will Joseph died prior to 11 Mo. (Jan.) 7, 1688, leaving at least two children, Joshua and Margery.

JOSHUA MARSH, of Drumanicannon, Parish of Segoe, County Armagh, son of Joseph Marsh, was married, 6 Mo. (Aug.), 28, 1695, at Friends' Meeting place at Alexander Christy's, County Armagh, to Elizabeth Rogers, of Drumanicannon, possibly a daughter of John Rogers, whose name appears at the head of the list of men signers to the marriage certificate. Christy Rogers, who heads the list of the women signers, may have been the mother. The following interesting records of the marriage have been found:

"At our [Ulster] Province Meeting held at Richard Boyes' house [near Ballinderry, County, Antrim] y<sup>e</sup> 6th of y<sup>e</sup> 5th Mo. 1695 . . . In the spring of 1736, shortly after the signing of the above certificates, the Marsh family started on the long and wearisome voyage to Pennsylvania, where they arrived, it is believed, some time in August, for in John Marsh's land warrant, dated Nov. 24, 1736, he is mentioned as having been settled on the land "about three months." The two families of the father and son settled near each other on two tracts of land in East Nantmeal Township, Chester County, adjoining other Irish Friends, William and Timothy Kirk, of the Kirks of Lurgan Meeting, County Armagh. Soon after their settlement the Marshes were received as acceptable members of Goshen Monthly Meeting, Chester County, as appears from the following extracts from the minutes of that meeting:

Minute of Men's Meeting, 8 Mo. 18, 1736.—"John Marsh Produced a Certificate to this Monthly Meeting from the Monthly Meeting of friends held at Grange near Charlemount in ye North of Ireland dated ye 2d of ye 4 Mo: 1736 in behalf of himself & wife [Elizabeth] which [is] to friends Satisfaction and ordered to be recorded."

Minutes of Women's Meeting.—"At our Monthly Meeting held at Goshen the Eighteen Day of Eighth Month [1736] Elizabeth Marsh Produced to this Meeting a Certificate from Friends in Ireland jointly with her Husband which we accept on her behalf."

Minutes Men's Meeting.—"At our Monthly Meeting held at Goshen ye 13:h day of ye 9th Mo. 1736 Joshua March [Marsh] Produced a Certificate to this Monthly Meeting from the Monthly Meeting of friends at Grange in Charlemount in the North of Ireland dated ye 2d of ye 4th month last in behalf of himself & wife [Elizabeth] & 3 of his children, viz: Jonathan, Peter & Abigail which is to the Satisfaction of friends here & ordered to be Recorded."

Minutes of Women's Meeting.—"At our Monthly Meeting held at Goshen the Fifteenth Day of the Ninth Month [1736] . . . Elizabeth Marsh Produced to this Meeting a Certificate from the Monthly Meeting of Grange in Ireland which this Meeting Accepts on her behalf."

Joshua Marsh settled on a tract of two hundred acres of land which he purchased from the Penn Proprietors. The following abstract of his land title is from the records preserved in the Department of Internal Affairs, at the capital, Harrisburg, Pa.:

No. 55. Joshua Marsh, of Chester Co., Pa., warrant for 200 acres of land "Adjoyning the Lands of John Griffith and John Rees in the Township of Nantmill," granted October, 26, 1737; patented Oct. 12, 1742, 195 acres returned (A. 10, p. 505).<sup>1</sup>

Joshua attended Uwchlan Friends' Meeting until the establishment of Nantmeal Meeting in 1740, and was appointed a representative from Uwchlan Preparative to Goshen Monthly Meeting.

to which Uwchlan was subordinate. The minutes of the Monthly Meeting show that he was appointed on committees to inquire into requests for certificates of removal, to oversee marriages, etc. His name appears for the last time in the meeting records, 9 Mo. 1, 1745, when he signed a marriage certificate. He was taxed in East Nantmeal Township, in 1737-8, 1s.; in 1739, 1s. 3d; in 1740-1, 1s. 6d.<sup>1</sup>

He died probably in the spring of 1748, for his will was made August 18, 1747, and probated May 17, 1748. As his wife is not mentioned in the will, he must have survived her. The following is a copy of the will:

Joshua and Elizabeth (Rogers) Marsh had children as follows :
I. Deborah ; II. Joseph (?) ; III. John ; IV. George ; V. Abigail ; VI. Peter ; VII. Jonathan.

I. DEBORAH MARSH, from whom the writer descends, was married 5 Mo. 10, 1727, at Grange Meeting, near Charlemont, County Armagh, Ireland, to Thomas McMullen [McMillan], of Grange Meeting, County Antrim. See "McMillan Family," page 399.

II. JOSEPH MARSH, "of Crenah in the parish of Tillenisky & Countie of Tyrone" (who is thought to have been a son of Joshua Marsh, since Joshua's name appears on the marriage certificate next to that of the bride's father, Francis Hobson, who heads the list of signers in the column reserved for relatives under the bride and groom's names), probably named for his grandfather, Joseph Marsh, was married 5 Mo. (July) 27, 1732, in the Friends' Meeting House at Ballyhagen, County Armagh, Ireland, to Ruth Hobson, "Daughter of Francis Hobson of Drummilly in the parish of Loughgall & Countie of Ardmagh." Some of the signers to the marriage certificate<sup>1</sup> were :

Francis Hobson	Sarah Hobson	JOSEPH MARSH

Joseph Marsh is not mentioned in Joshua Marsh's will and nothing further has been learned of him.

III. JOHN MARSH, son of Joshua, married Elizabeth ———, prior to or about 1724, as has been stated above, came over from Ireland, in 1736, and settled in East Nantmeal Township, Chester County. The following abstract of his land title is from the records of the Department of Internal Affairs at Harrisburg:

No. 52. John Marsh, of Chester County, 200 acres "of Land scituate in Nantmil Township, whereon He has been about three months settled & adjoining to William and Timothy Kirk," granted Nov. 24, 1736; patented Mar. 14, 1790. Acres returned 11.76. Patentees, John Marsh (Vol. A 14, p. 268), James Pugh (Vol. P 18, p. 251). Survey.<sup>1</sup>

Patent Deed: Thomas and Richard Penn, Proprietors of Penn'a, on June 9, 1747, patent to John Marsh, of Chester County, Pa., in consideration of £33. 3d., 213 acres of land and allowance, in East Nantmeal Twp., Chester County, described as follows:

Beginning at a marked hickory by Timothy Kirk's land, S. 25° E. 100 P. to a marked hickory; S. 65° W. 30 P. to a marked chestnut at a corner of Robert Wetherall's land, by same, S. 25° E. 44 P. to marked black oak; E. 20 P. to marked hickory; S. 25° 149 P. to marked black oak, by Henry Phillip's land S.E. 40 P. to post by Callowhill Manor, corner of Vincent Township; N. 42° E. 150 P. to corner post, by John Well's land; N. 48° W. 80 P. to marked black oak standing at a corner of John Price's land, thence by same N. 18° W. 26 P. to a marked white oak; N. W. by W. 16 P. to a marked chestnut; W. N. W. 126 P. to a corner post, thence by Simon Woodrow's land; W. S. W. 40 P. to a corner marked white oak; thence, by the Meeting Land, N. 85° W. 80 P. to place of beginning, containing 213 acres.

John Marsh and his son Joshua, on complaint of Uwchlan Preparative Meeting, for breach of discipline were disowned by Goshen Mo. Mtg., 3 Mo. 17, 1742. About 1750 John Marsh removed with his family from Chester County and settled on a tract of land adjoining his brother-in-law, Thomas McMillan, in Warrington Township, York County, Pa. The records at Harrisburg show the following purchases of land:

Warrant No. 41, John Marsh, 25 acres, "adjoining Thomas McMillan & Peter Cook on Doe Run in Warrington Township," York County, granted Sept. 10, 1751; patented May 25, 1855.— (Patent Book G. 489).

other Land & Elihu Underwood & Isaac Kole in Warrington'' Twp., York County, granted Oct. 21, 1769; patented Dec. 14, 1822. (Survey.)

Warrant No. 236, John Marsh, Sr., 26 acres, "joining his other Land granted by warrant of the 21st of October Instant in Warrington'' Twp., York County, granted Oct. 30, 1769; patented Dec. 14, 1822. (Survey.)

John Marsh was living in 1769, but the date of his death has not been learned. His wife, Elizabeth died in or prior to 1761. As far as can be learned they had the following children: 1. John; 2. Margaret; 3. Joshua; 4. Jonathan; William (?); Ruth (?)

1. John Marsh, born in Ireland, in 1724, died 3 Mo. 10, 1804, and was buried in Friends' graveyard at Warrington Meeting House, York Co., where his gravestone, with inscription, may still be seen. He probably removed from Chester to York Co., with his father, about 1750, but his certificate of removal from Goshen Mo. Mtg., dated 8 Mo. 17, 1752, was not received at Warrington Mo. Mtg., until 11 Mo. 18, of that year. At Warrington Mo. Mtg., 5 Mo. 20, 1758, he produced an acknowledgment for marrying "by a Justice with a young woman not Joined amongst friends." His wife Margaret was received into membership, 7 Mo. 12, 1760.

By warrant, No. 125, dated June 4, 1762, John Marsh, Jr., was granted 125 acres "adjoining Peter Cook in Warrington'' Twp., York Co.; patented July 11, 1795 (Z, 281). Survey.

In his will, dated, Washington Twp., York Co., 4 Mo. 30, 1802, probated Apr. 2, 1804, he mentions his wife Margaret, his eleven children, and a lot of ground within fourteen rods of "Baltimore Town." Children by his wife Margaret were: (1) Jonathan, b. 6 Mo., 1, 1760, d. 3 Mo. 20, 1850, removed to Baltimore, Md., about 1798, and finally to Middleton Mo. Mtg., Ohio, in 1808; (2) Elizabeth, b. 7 Mo. 27, 1762, removed to Baltimore 1 about 1797; (3) Margaret, b. 11 Mo. 28, 1764, removed to Baltimore about 1797; (4) Mary, b. 1 Mo. 16, 1767, took a certificate to Baltimore in 1801; (5) Rebecca, b. 3 Mo. 16, 1769, d. 11 Mo. 13, 1770; (6) Susanna, b. 3 Mo. 7, 1771, m. 9 Mo. 12, 1793, John Everitt, son of Isaac and Martha; (7) John, b. 3 Mo. 7, 1771, d. 1806, m. in 1802, Catharine ———; (8) William, b. 7 Mo. 28, 1775, took a certificate to Baltimore in 1797; (9) Rebecca, b. 8 Mo. 2, 1777, d. 4 Mo. 14, 1858, buried at Warrington; (10) Lydia, b. 10 Mo. 20, 1779, m. 2. Margaret Marsh was married 12 Mo. 30, 1756, at Warrington Mtg., York Co., to Elihu Underwood, schoolmaster, of Warrington, son of Alexander. Signers to marriage certificate were:

3. Joshua Marsh seems to have disappeared from the records after his disownment.

4. Jonathan Marsh, of Warrington, was married, 1st, 6 Mo. 18, 1761, at Warrington Mtg., to Rebecca, daughter of Hugh Morthland, deceased, and Rebecca, his wife; m. 2d 12 Mo. 16, 1768, at Merion Meeting, Chester Co., to Ann Packer, of Haverford, daughter of Philip and Ann. He served a number of years as overseer of Warrington Meeting. He died in 1795, leaving at least four children: (1) James, by first wife, m. 9 Mo. 14, 1797, at Warrington, Edith Hussey, daughter of Record and Miriam, of Warrington, took a certificate to Baltimore, in 1810, with wife—children, Zilla and Amos—, and finally removed to Ohio; (2) Ann, by first wife, m. 1797, to John Edmonson, of Warrington; (3) John, by second wife, m. 5 Mo. 14, 1789, to Hannah Hussey, daughter of Record and Miriam, removed to Gunpowder Mtg., Md., in 1790; (4) Elizabeth, m. 1 Mo. 12, 1792, at Warrington Mtg., to Joseph Edmondson.

5. William Marsh, supposed to have been the son of John, was disowned by Warrington Mo. Mtg., in 1763, for marriage out.

6. Ruth Marsh, supposed to have been the daughter of John.

IV. GEORGE MARSH, the first of the family to come to Pennsylvania, produced the following certificate of removal to Kennett Mo. Mtg., Chester Co., 7 Mo. 6, 1729. He is mentioned in his father's will, but no further record of him has been found: <sup>1</sup>

V. ABIGAIL MARSH was married 9 Mo. 4. 1741, at Nantmeal Friends' Meeting House, Chester Co., to Thomas Atherton, son of Henry and Jennet (Thelwall) Atherton. The following persons signed the marriage certificate :

Hester Hockley	William Williams	THOMAS ATHERTON

Thomas Atherton was taxed 2s. in East Nantmeal Twp., Chester County, in 1740-1. At Goshen Mo. Mtg., 6 Mo. 18, 1740, "Thomas Atherton with the approbation of Uwchlan Preparative Meeting Proposes to joyn himself to our Religious Society who is Received by us as his Conduct Proves Agreeable to our Our Principles." He was appointed an overseer of Nantmeal Meeting, in 1754. In 1763 he received a certificate to remove with his wife Abigail and three children, Richard, Henry, and Elizabeth, to Warrington Mo. Mtg., York County. The certificate was received at Warrington, 1 Mo. 14, 1764. He died, probably in 1782, for his will<sup>1</sup> was dated Feb 2, 1774, and probated Sept. 23, 1782. His wife and three children survived him. Children: (1) Henry; (2) Richard; (3) Elizabeth.

1. Henry Atherton, m. 3 Mo. 22, 1780, at Warrington Mtg., to Ann Hobson, of the same place daughter of Francis and Ann Hobson, Friends from Ireland. In 1784, Henry was disowned by Warrington Mo. Mtg. for attending musters. About 1790 they removed to Western Pennsylvania, and in 1794 were reported as living in the Glades of Stony Creek, probably in Bedford County. Children: Mary, Thomas, Francis, and Ann.

2. Richard Atherton, m. 5 Mo. 18, 1775, to Phebe Hobson, sister of Henry's wife. The committee appointed to oversee the marriage reported that the occasion had been orderly, "Except having assistants to pull off the glove and hat." In 1784 he produced an acknowledgment for marriage by a "hiring Teacher." He removed within the limits of Westland Mo. Mtg., about 1790.

3. Elizabeth Atherton, m. 1 Mo. 16, 1777, to Alexander Elliot, of Newberry Twp., York County, son of Isaac, deceased. At Warrington Mo. Mtg., 6 Mo. 13, 1778; they were complained of by Newberry Mtg. for having differed and parted; disowned 8 Mo. 8, 1778. In his Diary (1780-1786) Benjamin Walker, of Warrington, under date of 5 Mo. 22, 1781, 3d-day, notes that he was "Diging a Grave for Elizabeth Ellet formerly Atherton," at Warrington Friends' burial ground.

VI. PETER MARSH, with the concurrence of Uwchlan Preparative Mtg., requested of Goshen Mo. Mtg., 4 Mo. 21, 1740, a certificate of removal to Oley (Exeter) Mo. Mtg., Berks County. The certificate was received at Exeter 6 Mo. 28, 1740. A certificate for him to return to Goshen was signed by Exeter, 8 Mo. 29, 1741. At Goshen Mo. Mtg., 6 Mo. 15, 1743, "The Representatives of Uwchlan Preparative Meeting Acquaints this Meeting that Peter Marsh Persists in keeping Company in Order for marriage with a young woman not of our Religious Society." At the meeting 7 Mo. 12, 1743, he was reported married out of the Society. He was then disowned, 9 Mo. 21, 1743, the testimony against him to be read at Nantmeal Meeting House. He was taxed in Nantmeal Township, in 1739. In the tax list for 1740-1 his named has been crossed off.

He removed to Warrington Township, York County, about 1750, about the same time as his brother John and his brother-in-law Thomas McMillan, and settled on a tract of land at the foot of Round Top. A warrant (No. 36) for 25 acres of land "on a Branch of Beaver creek adjoining Robert Veale [Vale] in Warrington Township," was granted to him May 7, 1751; patented Dec. 7, 1762 (G. 489). In his will,<sup>1</sup> dated 4 Mo. 21, 1788, probated April 4, 1789, he speaks of his "meadow next Roundtop." He leaves 88 acres of land, which was surveyed May 3, 1753, to his son Jonathan, and mentions his other children, John, Mary Jones, Deborah Frazer, Jane Phillips, Lydia Brunton, Rachel Howe, Rebecca, and Esther.

Deborah, daughter of Peter Marsh, born 4 Mo. 5, 1746; m. 1 Mo. 22, 1772, to Joshua Frazer, son of James and Rebecca (Cox) Frazer. A daughter, Elizabeth Frazer, married William Brinkerhoff, who when living in Ohio, in 1876, at the age of ninety-two years, gave the following interesting reminiscences<sup>2</sup> of the Marshes and Frazers:

Peter Marsh's wife Margaret was a Welsh Quakeress of gigantic size. Deborah, the daughter, was buried beside her husband and parents at Warrington Meeting House. Joshua Frazer was first engaged to a younger sister of Deborah's of about his own age, and they were to have been married in the spring of 1771; but in the fall of 1770, with an eye to securing some ready money to help him set up housekeeping, Joshua kissed his sweetheart good bye and went down into North Carolina to chop wood during the winter. Here he met with such success that he concluded to stay a little longer than had been arranged for, and wrote to his intended to that effect. But, unfortunately for him, she never received his letter, and when he failed to appear at the proper time "the girl was mad and up and married another fellar to wonst."

Soon after, the young Joshua returned with his pockets weighted with hard earned money and his mind filled with pleasant anticipations of the coming event. But, alas, for all his high hopes, the girl had gone with another man.

At length, Deborah, an older sister, came to the rescue. It was true she was somewhat too old, but what better could be done? So, in 1772, she became my future mother-in-law. When Joshua asked Peter Marsh for Debby, Peter replied:

"Joshua, I gave thee one girl, and I'm not going to give thee another.—But, if thee will come with two horses and a side-saddle, and the girl wants to go with thee, take her right along."

The test was soon made and with a happy result for Joshua, for "the girl she climbed into the saddle, she did."

VII. JONATHAN MARSH was married, in 1748, by authority of Exeter Mo. Mtg., Berks Co., to Mary Long, of that meeting, probably a daughter of Robert and Rachel Long. The marriage was authorized 9 Mo. 24, and reported accomplished 10 Mo. 29, 1748, so that the ceremony must have occurred between the two dates. He died shortly afterward, letters of administration on his estate being granted to his widow Jan. 19, 1749-50. The following inventory<sup>1</sup> of his estate was filed March 1, 1748-9:

THE MOORES OF BALLINACREE, COUNTY ANTRIM

JAMES MOORE,<sup>1</sup> Quaker, was residing on an extended estate in the Townland of Ballinacree,<sup>2</sup> Parish of Ballymoney, County Antrim, Ireland, as early as 1675. In that year he had "taken from him for Tithes, by James Cunningham, Tithemonger under John Dunbar Priest of Bellimunny Parish, twelve Stooks of Barley, forty nine Stooks of Oats, and seven car-loads of Hay, all worth three pounds four shillings six pence." (Stockdale, A Great Cry of Oppression, 48, printed in 1683.) The following year the same "Priest" took his oats, barley, wheat, and hay to the value of £2. 13s.; and thus each year down to 1682 he suffered a similar loss. In 1682, the birth of a son is thus recorded in the Friends' Registers: John Moore, son of James and Elizabeth Moore, of Ballinacree, County Antrim, was born 6 Mo. 9, 1682.

At the Province Meeting 4 Mo. 21, 1707, "Friends of Ballymony meeting give account y<sup>t</sup> [they] are making preparation towards building a meeting house, tho they have not yett gott y<sup>e</sup> place made Sure So they are Still desire to continue their care."

Whether or not the plans for building a meeting-house were carried out at this time I have been unable to determine. In 1796, Thomas Scattergood (Memoirs, 190) records in his journal that he "Rode to Ballinacree, and on the 22d (1 Mo.) held the preparative Meeting. This meeting-house joins a dwelling, and on sitting down, it seemed like sitting in a cellar: two men, two women and three children composed it." On a visit in 1809, Thomas Shillitoe (Life of Friends' Library, 120-1) says that Ballinacree Meeting consisted of parts of two families and that the Meet-near Ballymoney, in 1673, and doubtless was held at James Moore's house, as later meetings were regularly held there. John Gratton, a Quaker minister, notes in his Journal (183) under date of 6 Mo. 14, 1696, that he lodged at "J Moor's" at Ballinacree. James Moore's daughter Alice was married in a Friends' Meeting at his own house, 10 Mo. 17, 1697, to Thomas Irwin, of Lisnegarvy (Minutes of Ulster Province Meeting). 6 Mo. 13, 1698 at the Province Meeting there is mention of "y<sup>e</sup> men and womens meeting held at James Moors y<sup>e</sup> 30th of y<sup>e</sup>  $\frac{2}{mo}$ , 1698." From this time on there are constant references to this meeting. In 1698, James Moore, of Ballymoney, was appointed on a committee of the Province Meeting to obtain subscribers for Barclay's Apology.

Thomas Story, a Quaker minister, gives the following account (Journal, 537) of his visit to the Moores, in 1716 :

"On the 18th [7 Mo.], the great Rains having raised the Waters, we had but a small Meeting at Dunclaudy ; but a very broken tender Time it was, and we were generally comforted. That Evening I went forward about ten Miles to James Moor's at Ballimuny ; but his Wife being ill he directed us to his Son James about a mile farther ; where we staid that night.

"On the 19th I had a Meeting near James Moor's, the elder ; which was small, being Harvest, and wet weather, and not so open as the last ; and yet a good Meeting. That Evening I went over the River again to Ely Crocket's."
