THE BADCOCK FAMILY OF MASSACHUSETTS.

CORRECTED AND ENLARGED FROM THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER FOR JULY, 1865.

THE Badcock family was formerly so unfortunate as to be honored with an elaborate traditional pedigree, more richly furnished with mistakes than is usual even in such. It may be read at length in Hinman's "First Puritan Settlers of Connecticut," pp. 92 and 106, and justly excited the indignation of the Hon. James Savage. The long list of births, supposed to have happened in England and at Dorchester, Mass., is certainly wrong. In 1862 I examined the register of the Church of Wivenhoe in Essex, and none of them can be found there, nor did I see a single entry of the name of Badcock. I greatly regret that I am not able to give the name of the place whence the emigrants really came.

I have no doubt that the family in Massachusetts was founded by DAVID BADCOCK, who was a member of the Church of Dorchester 1640, and was probably father of George Badcock and Robert Badcock, both of Milton, and possibly father of James Badcock, who was born about 1612, was of Newport, R. I., 1642, and of Westerly, R. I., 1661. The names David, George and Robert are all found among the early descendants of this James, and his grandson James of Stonington, Conn., came for a wife to Milton, the home of his presumed cousins, where he married 12 June, 1706, Sara Vose. Margaret, wife of Henry Leland of Sherborn, seems to have been sister of George and Robert Badcock, who are first found about 1650 in that part of Dorchester, which in 1662 was incorporated as Milton.

SECOND GENERATION.

✓ 2. II. GEORGE BADCOCK had wife Mary; he was Supervisor of Highways for Dorchester in 1657, and died in 1671. Children:

- i. Mary, b. ———; m. Daniel Ellen or Allen of Milton.

† For his other marriages and children see Weaver's "History and Genealogy of Ancient Windham."

‡ For his marriage and children see Weaver's "History and Genealogy of Ancient Windham."

§ On Milton records this Samuel is said to have been born to Samuel and Hannah, but I have no doubt it is a mistake of the clerk, repeating the name of child.

11. III. EBENEZER BADCOCK, born at Milton 2 October, 1662; married Hannah ———; lived at Sherborn; died 15 December, 1717. Children, born at Sherborn:
