INTRODUCTION.

2021457

The following work, though of small pretensions, has involved in it more labor than any one unacquainted with such work would naturally suppose. We have aimed to be accurate, and yet it is not to be expected that no mistakes have inadvertently crept in. All the apology we have to make is that we have done the best we could under the circumstances.

We first attempted to make out that the Buxton Hobsons descended from John Hobson, of Rowley, who had so much to do with the early history of the town, and who was besides an "honorable" man, serving his town and country in various capacities for many years. But John had no son William, and there was not time for another generation to intervene. The Rowley records were so imperfect that it seemed impossible to determine who was the father of Wm. But upon the examination of the Probate court records at Salem, Mass., this point was satisfactorily determined. Instead of descending from Wm. and Ann Reynor through John, he descended from them through Wm., the third son, and Jere. his son, so that Wm. of Buxton was the son of Jere. of Rowley, the son of Wm., who was the third son of Wm. & Ann Reynor.

In the investigations necessary to secure accuracy in this matter we have been surprised to see how little people know even of their own father's family. None of the oldest members of this family could tell the name of their great grandfather—the father of William who lived to a great age, and whose anecdotes they could relate. This is not a peculiarity of this family. It is simply because that in the whirl of business no attention is given to this matter. But there is a satisfaction in a knowledge of history, and especially the history of our own immediate ancestry. If this little book will contribute to this end its object will be accomplished.

First Generation.

The first Hobson in this country, of whom we have any authentic account, came over from England and settled in Rowley, Mass., about 1650. His name was William. The town was settled and incorporated about ten years before, taking its name from Rowley, England. Rev. Ezekiel Rogers, with sixty families, commenced the settlement in 1639. A church was organized and Mr. Rogers installed the same year.

Whether Wm. Hobson brought his wife with him or was married after he came over we are not informed. We only know that his wife's name was Ann Reynor, by whom he had three sons, Humphrey, born 1655, John, 1657, and William, 1659.

We find no record of William's death, but Ann Hobson, his wife, administered on his estate in 1694. At that time only one son, Wm., was living, and two grandsons who represented the other branches of the family, Humphrey, the son of Humphrey, aged 10 years, and John, the son of John, who was 14 years of age. The property was divided equally between the three. Mrs. Hobson died the same year.

Second Generation.

1. HUMPHREY married Elizabeth Northend, 1683, by whom he had one son, Humphrey, born 1684. The father died the same year, aged 29.

2. JOHN was a Narraganset soldier in 1675. He married Sarah Varnum, 1679, and had one son, John, born 1680. John, senior, died 1683, aged 26. The inventory of his property was taken the next year and his wife made oath to it, but she did not administer on it until after the death of John's mother.

3. WILLIAM, son of Wm., married Sarah Jewett, 1692. The children were Wm., born 1693, and died an infant, Sarah, born 1695, Mary, 1699, Wm., 1701, Martha, 1703, Caleb, 1705 and died 1706 and Jeremiah, 1707. Wm., senior, died 1725, aged 66 and Wm., junior, 1727, aged 26.

Third Generation.

1. HUMPHREY, son of Humphrey, married Mehitable Payson, by whom he had two sons, Humphrey, born 1718, Samuel, 1728; and two daughters, Elizabeth and Mehitable. Elizabeth married Thomas Lambert and had one son, born 1748, and two daughters. Humphrey, senior, was Deacon of the first church of Rowley nineteen years. He died 1742, aged 58.

2. JOHN, "son of John," was a member of the legislature twenty years, one of the committee of the legislature on the Narraganset townships several years, and Speaker of the House, 1741. He figured extensively in the early history of Buxton, though he never resided there. For ten years he was clerk of the proprietors of the township Narraganset No. 1, was appointed on various committees by them, helped survey it, acted as assessor and collector for them, and drew half a dozen lots of land for his father and others. He married Dorcas Pearson, 1699. The children were Hephzibah, born 1700, Humphrey, 1702 and died 1704, Moses, born 1704, John, 1707 and died 1719. Losing his wife, "Hon. John Hobson, Esq., married Mrs. Mehitable Hidden, 1757." He died 1770, aged 90. He made his will the year before, and speaks of himself as "old in years but of a sound mind." He left a son Moses, a daughter Hephzibah, a grandson John, and a granddaughter Martha, whom he remembered in his will.

The first step is to identify the main components of the system. This involves a thorough review of the system architecture and the data sources. Once the components are identified, the next step is to determine the relationships between them. This is done by creating a data flow diagram (DFD) or a similar diagram that shows how data is processed and stored within the system.

The next step is to analyze the requirements of the system. This involves identifying the functional and non-functional requirements that the system must meet. These requirements are then used to guide the design and implementation of the system.

Finally, the system is implemented and tested. This involves writing the code for the system and running it against a set of test cases. The results of the testing are used to identify any defects or issues with the system and to make the necessary corrections.

CONCLUSION

The system described in this paper is a complex one, but it can be implemented using a structured approach. The first step is to identify the main components of the system, followed by determining the relationships between them. This is followed by analyzing the requirements of the system and implementing and testing the system.

The key to the success of the system is the careful analysis and design of the requirements. This ensures that the system meets the needs of the users and is easy to use. The implementation and testing phases are also critical, as they ensure that the system works correctly and is reliable.

In conclusion, the system described in this paper is a good example of a complex system that can be implemented using a structured approach. The key is to follow the steps outlined in this paper and to carefully analyze and design the requirements.

3. JEREMIAH, son of Wm. married Jane Dresser, 1729. The children were Wm., born 1730, Ann, 1732, Joseph, 1734 and died, Elizabeth, 1736, Joseph, 1738, Sarah, 1740. Jeremiah died 1741, aged 34. His will gave his wife all his "personal property, housings and land for improvement," until Wm., who was eleven years of age, should be 21, when he was to have his portion. She was to have the rest until Joseph became of age, when he was to receive his part; the mother retaining the third portion, which, after her decease, was to be divided equally between the two sons. Wm. was to pay $300 to Ann when she was 20 years of age, and $300 more when 22; also, $300 to Elizabeth, to whom Joseph was to pay $300; and, to pay Sarah $300 when she was 20, and $300 more when 22. The estate was prized at some over $13,000.00.

Joseph was drowned when twenty-eight years of age and Wm. was appointed administrator of the estate, from which he must have received considerable, being the sole, male heir.

Fourth Generation.

4. WILLIAM, son of Jeremiah, is the one in whom we are more especially interested, as he was the oldest settler in Buxton of the Hobson name, though his sons, Joseph and Samuel, came into town before him. He married Hannah Johnson, 1753. Their children were Jeremiah, born April 9, 1754, and Hannah, Sept. 13, 1756. His wife dying, Wm. married Lydia Pursons, 1759. Children, Wm., born May 9, 1760, and died in infancy, Joseph, about 1785, and became the progenitors of the two families of Hobsons in Buxton and vicinity. They first settled near the Lower Corner.

He died at Buxton. 1827, aged 97.

Before this, John Hobson, son of John the Narraganset soldier, drew lots of land, Nos. 10 and 12, Range B., near Pleasant Point, above Union Falls. Also, No. 2, Range E., on which the Lower Corner church now stands, and No. 19, below Peter Emery's. Also, No. 9, 2nd division, Range A., on which stands the house formerly occupied by Lewis Goodwin; and No. 1, Range D., now occupied by Charles Hobson, grandson of Samuel.

○ JOSEPH married Rebecca Sawyer, of Buxton. How long they lived at the Lower Corner we cannot tell, but they were settled on the above lot, No. 1, before 1800. The Hobsons finally settled about West Buxton some forty years ago, and most of them engaged in the lumber business with varied success. The first important emigration was to Steep Falls, ten miles up river, where they followed the same avocation. But within the last thirty years things have changed very much. This seventh generation, reckoning from Rowley, or fourth in Buxton, have scattered very much, so that there are none left there in the lumber business. Some pursue it elsewhere, but the most of them have gone into other business. Almon L., in Portland, Joseph in Saco, and Isaac T., in Wiscasset, and the Lords of Steep Falls are still quite extensively engaged in it, a large quantity of lumber passing through their hands annually. Some are merchants, some mechanics, some farmers, some ministers, &c. Rev. Andrew Hobson, of Steep Falls, is quite feeble with age; his son, Rev. P. M. Hobson, disabled by poor health, was obliged to leave preaching for merchandise. Another son, William, a graduate of Bowdoin College, was wounded in the last battle of the Rebellion, while in charge of a regiment, and breveted Gen. He is now practicing law in Boston. Charles is a merchant at West Buxton, where his brother Alvin and his uncle Amos, with his youngest son Edwin, now reside. There are others in Boston, Portland, Saco, Wiscasset, Steep Falls, Limington, Great Falls, N. H., and elsewhere; and in a little while it will be difficult to trace the whereabouts of these families, but those having this book can on blank leaves follow down the genealogy of their own families to the latest posterity, to whom the book will be more valuable than to us, and this work will then, at least, be appreciated.

The graduates from college connected with this family are mostly of the seventh generation. Humphrey belonged to the sixth. He graduated from Dartmouth, 1814. The husband of Ethelinda Hobson graduated from Dartmouth College, 1843, from Andover Theological Sem., 1846, and received the degree of D. D. from Hillsdale Coll. 1869. Rev. D. P. Harriman graduated from Bowdoin, 1843. Gen. Wm. Hobson from Bowdoin, 1849. Rev. G. W. Howe from Bowdoin, 1858. Also, Col. Henry C. Woods graduated from Bowdoin 1854. Dr. G. L. Goodale, husband of Henrietta J. Hobson, graduated from Amherst, 1860, and afterwards from Harvard Medical Coll. He became Prof. at Bowdoin, thence he removed to Harvard, where he is now acting Professor. Frank O. L. Hobson graduated from Bowdoin, 1861, and Geo. W., 1870. Drs. Buzzell and Cobb are medical graduates. Henry D. Hobson is senior in Harvard. Several have taken a partial course. Others, not having been to college, have become enterprising business men and occupied positions of honor and responsibility.

This sketch will enable any descendant of the family to trace back his genealogy to the original Wm. HOBSON who came from England to Rowley, Mass., two hundred and twenty-five years ago.
