Jan lanterns grious colors were hung on the bought no outspreading trees that met and ed a canopy so cool and refreshing it rested one just to look beneath

e by-paths of the various groves of and oaks were perambulated by those a sentimentally inclined and moon-strolls were indulged in by some the harcade in Seney hall and the

between the Arcade in Seney hall and the various places of amusement.
On these "cupidor" excursions the young college student lost no time in translating if to his girl in lover's song, low, gentle stid caressing, with depths of meaning that was not heard by tolle listeners, but spoke volumes to lovers' keen senses. Great interest is always manifested in these-receptions, but more than usual this yest.
