

BY WELDON L. HATCHER.

EMORY COLLEGE, Oxford Ga., May 21, 1922.

NHE senior class of Emory College which will graduate on June 11th, contains thirty-two men, who represent Georgia, Alabama and Florida. After graduation twenty-nine will enter some one of the professions, while three will enter business. Of the thirty-two members, eleven will teach, three will follow medicine, ten will plead at the bar, one will enter the ministry, one will enter the journalistic field, two will go to foreign fields as missionaries, two will enter the mercantile business, and one will go into the insurance business.

The class officers are: Dux, T. H. Wade, of Columbus; historian, J. LeRoy Duncan, of Atlanta; prophet, V. B. Moore, of Bolton; poet, T. T. Turnbull, of Monticello, Fla.; chaplain, A. C. Manning, of Waleka.

T. H. Wade entered the class as a sophomore and since his entrance he has been a leader in class work. He was a speaker both his sophomore and junior years, and will represent his class on the stage at commencement. He is editor-in-chief of the Emory Phoenix. He will teach after graduation. He is a member of Phi Gamma society and of the Sigma Nu fraternity.

V. B. Moore entered as a freshman. He is considered as one of the best athletes in college. He was a junior speaker. He will practice law. He is a member of Few society and of the Chi Phi fraternity.

J. LeRoy Duncan entered the class as a sophomore. He was a speaker his sophomore year. He has proven himself to be the best writer in the college body. He will enter business. He is a member of Few society and of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

T. T. Turnbull, of Monticello, Fla., joined the class as a freshman. He has always taken a high stand in the class, and will represent the class at commencement. He is prominent as an athlete. He will practice law. He is a member of Phi Gamma society and of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

A. C. Manning entered the class sophomore year. Since entering college he has made himself prominent as a debater and writer. He is literary editor of the Emory Phoenix. He will enter the ministry after graduation. He is a member of Few society.

Robert H. Atkins, of Atlanta, entered the class as a freshman. In athletics he has taken quite a prominent stand. Playing on his class baseball and basketball teams. He was quarter back of the football team. He is athletic editor of the Emory Phoenix. He will practice law after graduation. He is a member of Few society and of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

C. H. Lewis entered the class as a junior. He has been prominent in college affairs both as a speaker, writer and debater. He will go into the insurance business after graduation. He is a prominent member of Phi Gamma society and of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Thomas W. Connally, of Atlanta, entered the class as a freshman. He is one of the most popular students in college. He will study law at Harvard after graduation and practice in Atlanta. He is a prominent member of Few society and of the Chi Phi fraternity.

R. F. Hemphill entered the class as a freshman. He has represented his class on the relay team, basketball, baseball and football teams also. He holds the college championship for Tennis. He will enter journalism. He is a member of Few society and of the Chi Phi fraternity.

L. E. Middlebrooks, of Northern, entered as a freshman, and has been on several of the class teams in football and baseball. He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

John W. Marshall, Jr., entered three years ago as a sophomore, has distinguished himself as a writer, a number of his pieces appearing in the Phoenix. He won the sophomore essay medal and was a junior speaker, and is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

F. Gray Rush, of Apalachicola, Fla., entered the sub-freshman class five years ago. He was pitcher for his class both junior and senior years, and is considered one of the best athletes and most popular men at Emory. He is a member of the Innocent Social club and Sigma Nu fraternity.

Aubie Robertson, of Covington, has been on several of the class teams and was this year literary editor of the Emory Phoenix. He is a member of the Phi Gamma literary society.

Marmaduke H. Blackshear, of Dublin, entered college four years ago and distinguished himself as a debater and athlete. He will be one of the champion debaters for Few society on the commencement stage this year. He has played on baseball nines and football elevens. He is a member of Few society, Innocent Social club and Alpha Psi Omega fraternity.

Robert H. Timmons, of Atlanta, entered Emory four years ago and ever since that time has taken a prominent stand in debates and speaking in general. He won both the freshman and sophomore declamation medals; last year won the Boynton essay medal and was Emory's alternate to the state oratorical contest. Mr. Timmons is also president of the Emory College Athletic association, and has been on several class teams. He is a member of Few Literary society and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and the Innocent Social club.

Clifford G. Quillian, of Atlanta, entered college in the fall of 1898 and has taken a high stand in literary society and debates. He was a speaker on the commencement stage last year and will be one of the twelve speakers this year.

He is a member of Phi Gamma society and Alpha Psi Omega fraternity.

John E. Rose, of Atlanta, entered college his freshman year and won a speakers' place that year, establishing a custom which he has never dropped. In his junior year he was anniversary of Few Society. He is a member of Few and Sigma Nu fraternity.

Lamar Payne, of Atlanta, has been prominent in athletics, having been on the track team every year and on the football team last fall. He is a member of Few Literary society.

Paul R. Turner, of Cedartown, entered as a freshman and has made a good stand as a student and athlete. He has been on the commencement stage for two years in succession and will no doubt be one of the speakers this year. He has been on baseball, basketball and football teams and is secretary of the Emory College Athletic association. He is a member of the Chi Phi fraternity.

Stewart R. Roberts, of Macon, entered the junior class here after graduating from the medical college in Atlanta. He won the junior oratory medal and the Pasco physics medal, also ably represented Few society in the champion debate last year. He is a member of Few and Kappa Alpha fraternities.

Charles B. Shelton, of Valdosta, entered in sophomore. He was a speaker on the commencement stage last year and will fill the same place on June 11. He is a member of Phi Gamma society and Sigma Nu fraternity.

V. V. Morgan, of Cho, entered four years past and is a good student and able debater and very popular in his class. He is a member of Few literary society.

Thomas C. Hucheson, of Watkinsville, won the prize story contest last year and was this year exchange editor of The Emory Phoenix. He is a member of Few society and Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

John C. G. Brooks, of Forsyth, has distinguished himself as a speaker and debater. He was on the winning side of the champion debate last commencement. He is a member of Few literary society.

M. R. Smith, of Sycamore, entered when a sophomore and was junior and will be senior speaker. He is a member of Phi Gamma society and Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

S. C. Oliff, of Coleman, has been president of Few literary society and has been on a number of debates. He is a member of Few.

W. H. Morton, Jr., of Athens, will be one of Phi Gamma's champion debaters on the stage in June and has taken a high stand in his class ever since his entrance four years ago. He is a member of Phi Gamma society and Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

H. W. Means, of Oxford, a grandson of Alexander Means, former president of Emory, entered the class as a sub-freshman and has been prominent in athletic affairs all the way through his course and at the same time has taken a good stand in his class.

J. P. Dell, of Bascom, will be one of the champion debaters for Few society on the stage commencement week. He has always taken a leading part in literary work and has been a hard working student. He is a member of Few society.

M. J. Guyton, of Dublin, entered the class five years ago, when they were subs, and has proven himself all the way through to be one of the most popular men in his class. He is a member of Few literary society and the Sigma Nu fraternity.

Herman L. Johnson, of Palmetto, entered freshman year. He has been on several inter-society debates and was during his senior year business manager of The Emory Phoenix. During commencement he will represent Phi Gamma society on the champion debate.

M. L. Neal, of Columbia county, entered as freshman and has been a hard student for the last four years. He is a member of Few literary society.