

dormitory capable of accommodating twice as many girls as had been boarded in the old college building was completed, and it was filled at once, so that now the growth of the institution is demanding that much more room. It will probably be secured in some way, as the church has shown a very liberal disposition toward the college in recent years.

The commencement sermon will be preached tomorrow morning by Dr. John F. Goucher, president of Woman's college, Baltimore. He will probably attend the meetings of the board of trustees throughout the week, and there is much rejoicing at his presence in the city, because of his high standing among educators.

Miss Lewis' elocution recital will take place Monday night. All of her large class will take part, and this is looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure.
