FROM THE EDITOR

The balance of the research section for Volume II of the Arkansas Genealogical Research Aid is being mailed in this issue. The Compendium pages, which comprise the bulk of the volume, will be included in the next two issues. They will be mailed by the end of this year.

The Research Aid has continually been late due to many family problems. I have now acquired an Associate Editor, Mrs. Alice Venson. With her capable services, I feel the publications will be on schedule in the future.

Sincerely,

Mrs. William H. Counts
Editor

ARKANSAS RESEARCH

One of the most important keys to successful research in any state is a thorough knowledge of the formation of its counties.

Two maps have been included in this issue to further aid the researcher in obtaining a clear picture of Arkansas counties. Study the map of Arkansas Territory in 1819, and then note the changes made by adding 32 counties on the map of 1836. This was the year Arkansas became a State. In later issues, we will have at least one other, possibly two, additional maps showing formation of counties until all 75 were formed.

In searching for family names in records of a certain county, the researcher can readily trace back to the parent county. Keep in mind that many of the new counties were formed from several counties and that county lines were moved from time to time. Knowledge of the date or approximate time ancestors arrived in a county is very helpful but if not known can be determined usually by searching the county tax records.

If the county is not known nor the approximate date ancestors arrived in Arkansas, the researcher should first search the index to the 1830 and 1840 census of Arkansas. Prior to 1830, check the Territorial Records. By 1850 there were 53 counties in Arkansas which makes it highly impractical to search each county, however, a great number of the 1850 county census have been transcribed and alphabetized. In future issues, we will take up the problem of locating an ancestor when only the name is known and the various sources to search and in what sequence.

The five original parent counties are shown below with the subsequent counties carved from them through 1836.

The name sources for Arkansas counties extend to a great variety. The state's 75 counties are named for governors, congressmen, presidents of the United States, judges, pioneers, explorers -- in fact, the name sources include just about every stratum of society, from Arkansas legislators to foreign noblemen. Also, some are named for rivers and other geological formations.

A county was named for each of Arkansas' territorial governors - Miller, Izard, Pope and Fulton. The first three counties were created during Arkansas' territorial period, 1819 to 1836. Fulton County was not formed until 1842, six years after Arkansas became a state.

Arkansas has had 36 state governors, but only three counties were named for state governors - Drew, Baxter and Yell.

Although the state's first governor was James Conway and the fifth governor was Elias N. Conway, Conway County was named for Henry H. Conway, Arkansas' territorial delegate to Congress at the time the county was formed in 1825.

James Conway, at that time, was a surveyor and had lived in Arkansas only five years. Elias H. Conway did not move to Arkansas until 1833, eight years after the county was created.

Garland County was named for Augustus H. Garland, who was a governor of Arkansas, but not at the time the county was formed. On April 5, 1873, when this county was added, Garland was practicing law in Little Rock. He had been a delegate to the state convention of 1861, and, although opposed to secession, acquiesced in the will of the majority. He had served in the provisional Confederate Congress throughout the Civil War. But he did not become governor of Arkansas until the next year after Garland County was created. He went on to serve in the U. S. Senate and later as attorney general under President Cleveland.

Clay County was originally named Clayton, but it was not named for Gov. Powell Clayton. John H. Clayton, then a member of the State Senate, was the one honored.

Clark County was named for a governor, but not for Arkansas' Gov. James P. Clarke, who was not born until 36 years after the county was formed. It was named for Gov. William Clark of Missouri Territory.

Of Arkansas' 36 state governors, 22 have served since 1883 when the last county was created.

Pike County, formed November 1, 1833, was named for Lt. Zebulon M. Pike, an early 19th century explorer of the southwest. Arkansas' illustrious Albert Pike at about that time, was a young pedagogue and teaching a one-room school near Van Buren, Arkansas, for $4 a month, half of which was paid in money and the other half in pigs.

Ten counties are named for presidents of the United States. There is a county named for President U. S. Grant, who apparently had little respect for the South, but Johnson County was not named for President Andrew Johnson, who was favorable to the South. The reason: Johnson County was formed November 16, 1833. At that time Andrew Johnson, 25 years old, was learning to read and write and was holding his first public office - alderman of Greenville, Tennessee. Johnson County was named for Benjamin Johnson, an Arkansas territorial judge.

The other counties named for presidents are Washington, Monroe, Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren, Madison, Polk, Lincoln and Cleveland.

Arkansas County is the oldest. It was created by the Territorial Legislature of Missouri, December 31, 1813, and embraced about nine-tenths of the present state of Arkansas. Four other counties - Lawrence, Clark, Hempstead and Pulaski were also formed by the Missouri Territorial Legislature.

Miller County was the first county added after Arkansas became a territory. It was formed April 1, 1820, and named for James Miller, the first territorial governor. Much of the territory in the original county belonged to the Republic of Mexico, since the boundary between the United States and Texas had not been established. In 1838 Texas was accused of usurping jurisdiction over Miller County. As a consequence, the county was disorganized and the territory attached to Lafayette County. The boundary dispute was settled after the war with Mexico for Texas independence in 1849. Miller County was reestablished with its present boundaries on December 22, 1874.

Boone County, according to the late Dallas T. Herndon, state historian for many years, "was named for Daniel Boone, the celebrated Kentucky pioneer and Indian fighter." But other historical sources, including the Arkansas Almanac, say the county, created April 9, 1869, from territory taken from Carroll and Madison counties, was originally "Boon." When the Legislature was asked to create it, the sponsor of the bill is supposed to have said it would be a "boon" for those residents who could not without difficulty reach the county seat of Carroll. It is not known when spelling of the name took on the "e".

Nevada County is the only one named for a state. It was named for the state of Nevada because, according to official sources, the outline of the county is somewhat similar to the outline of the state. But the pronunciations differ. The state is pronounced "nee VAD ah." The county is pronounced "nee VADE ah."

Five counties were named for rivers. They are St. Francis, Mississippi, Ouachita, Little River and White. While some historians say the county was named for White River, which forms the greater part of the eastern boundary, others contend that it was named for Hugh L. White of Tennessee, at that time the Whig Party candidate for President.

Seven other counties were named for natural formations - Lonoke, for the "lone oak" that stood in Lonoke, now the county seat; Saline, for the salt springs; Stone, for the geological structure of the region; Prairie, for the open country; Chicot, for Point Chicot (the French for "stump") on the Mississippi River, and Hot Spring, for the hot springs which then lay within the boundaries. The springs were lost to the county with the formation of Garland County 44 years later.

Columbia County was named for the Goddess of Liberty, Independence County for the Declaration of Independence, and Union County for the Union of States.

Cleveland County, formed April 17, 1873, was first called Dorsey County, in honor of Stephen H. Dorsey, then one of the U. S. senators from Arkansas. In 1885 the name was changed to Cleveland, honoring Grover Cleveland, who had just become president of the United States.

Logan County, created March 22, 1871, was originally named Sauber County, for a state senator. Four years later, the name was changed in order to honor James Logan, one of the pioneers of that section.

Lovely County was formed October 13, 1827, and continued to October 28, 1828. In his history, "Arkansas and Its People," Dr. David Y. Thomas dubbed it the "lost county of Lovely."

In 1816 William and Peter Lovely purchased a tract of land from the Osage Indians, which was included in the western boundary of Arkansas, as laid down in 1824. This territory eventually became Lovely County, or the major part of it. Unfortunately, this same region had been granted to the Cherokee Indians in 1818, creating difficulties which were not settled until 1828, when the present boundary of Arkansas was established. As a consequence of the settlement, most of Lovely County was made a part of the Indian Territory, now the state of Oklahoma. What remained in Arkansas of the original area of Lovely County, finally became a part of Washington County, formed in 1828.

Marion County was the first created after Arkansas became a state and Cleburne County was the last. (Article taken from the Arkansas Democrat - research by Karr Shannon).

ARKANSAS CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT ARKANSAS' ROLE IN THE CIVIL WAR

Arkansas was second only to Virginia in the percentage of men of military age, and second to North Carolina in the number of battle casualties. Arkansas was the only state that furnished men that marched in every command and participated in every major campaign. It was the only state that had more men killed in battle and those men now lie buried in every state that was in the Confederacy. All this despite the fact that 9,600 Arkansans served in the Union Army.

The Third Arkansas Regiment was the only Arkansas unit serving in Lee's Army of Virginia. The battle cry of the Third Arkansas was "First in, last out", and their footprints were left in all the great battles of the Civil War. They were the shock troops of the war and were in the first battle at Bull Run and also the last battle at Gettysburg.

No Arkansan among "The Immortal Six Hundred" took the oath of allegiance. There were six hundred Confederate officers captured and held prisoner in the stockade at Morris Island, South Carolina, under fire of Confederate guns then shelling the island; and who were subsequently starved on rations of rotten corn meal and onion pickle at Fort Pulaski, Georgia, and Hilton Head, South Carolina, 1864-65, by order of Edwin M. Stanton, United States Secretary of War. Among these Confederate Officers were a number of Arkansans captured in Arkansas in 1863, whose names are listed below:

ARKANSAS MILITARY BOUNTY GRANTS (WAR OF 1812)

Compiled by Katherine (Mrs. Paul) Christensen, Genealogist and Research Compiler - Member of Prudence Hall, North Little Rock Chapter, of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

ARKANSAS MILITARY BOUNTY GRANTS FOR THE WAR OF 1812 is one of the finest genealogical publications that we have had the pleasure to review. It is the first published work of Katherine Christensen and we hope that this volume will be followed by many more containing the same quality work and wealth of genealogical data.

This 255 page reference book contains a complete index and gives the names and other genealogical data on the men who fought in the War of 1812 and for their services were given land grants in Arkansas. It lists name of applicant, warrent number, patent date, comments and the county in which the land was located.

Research in this book is not limited to Arkansas as many of the men included never moved to the Arkansas Territory. Many exchanged their grants and a great number of the men are thought to have "passed through" Arkansas on their way to Texas and the great southwest.

It is an excellent source for finding the name and location of an ancestor, or other family members, who emigrated West during the early pioneer days. In many cases valuable genealogical data pertaining to the men and other members of their families are given. The Land Grants were located in the following early Arkansas Counties:

ARKANSAS	CONWAY	LEE	PULASKI
BENTON	FULTON	LONOKE	RANDOLPH
CLEBURNE	INDEPENDENCE	MONROE	ST. FRANCIS
COLUMBIA	IZARD	PERRY	SHARP
FAULKNER	JACKSON	PHILLIPS	WHITE

TOMBSTONE INSCRIPTIONS OF MADISON COUNTY ARKANSAS,
VOL. I - Compiled by Larry C. Bohannon

This book is approximately 5 1/2 x 8 1/2" and contains 102 pages, including a complete index. From the foreword:

"Due to fire, there are virtually no court house or newspaper records of Madison County, Arkansas, before 1900. As the state did not record births and deaths until about 1914, vital statistics of the 19th century are particularly difficult to obtain, especially for a researcher living many miles away.

To help fill this genealogical resource gap, this book is planned as the first of a series of volumes, through which the compiler hopes to eventually record all known tombstone inscriptions in the county".

This volume contains a map of Madison County and a partial listing of county cemeteries; inscriptions from the South, Center and North part of the Huntsville Cemetery, the Clifty Cemetery, Riverside Cemetery (St. Paul) Wesley Cemetery and Parker Cemetery. Index of persons buried. Price: $6.00

Query #2 - HEFNER-HEIFNER

This does not seem to be a common name in early Arkansas records. We need to know more about the connection with Arkansas in regard to Peter & Daniel Hefner of Tennessee, to offer any helpful suggestions.

There are no Hefner-Heifner's in the 1830 Index to Ark. Census.

A Frederick Hefner is listed in the 1840 Index to Ark. Census in Independence County.

Later Heffners - Two tombstone inscriptions from the Martin Cemetery, Pulaski County, Ark.
