

Dennis B. Muse of the County of Franklin in Tennessee on the 28th day of May 1858 in our presence in his last sickness and in his own dwelling house made and published a noncupative will and we were specially required to bear witness thereto. Said Muse desired that his property & effects should be disposed of as follows
 1st That his tract of land containing 28 acres adjoining the lands of Rainey Morton & others and such portion of his personal property as could be spared by his family should be sold by his executor and with the proceeds that his debts should be paid but his sorrowfully which is called Mary Dodd should not be sold. 2nd That all his property both real and personal not sold by his executor should belong to his wife & children in common and to be used by them in that way. 3rd & That J. J. Morton should act as executor and that his son Kindred W. Muse should take charge of the family and manage for the family under the advice of & subject to the control of his executor. In testimony of which we have caused this to be reduced to writing and we have hereunto subscribed our names the seventh day of June 1858

J. H. ^{his} Davis
