145 James Dearmond July 1834

It is my desire in the first place that all my just debts be paid out of such property as my executors herein after named may think most advisable to dispose of, for that purpose I wish them to make a sale on such credit as they may think most advisable to meet the demands of all my just debts. And it is further my wish that all my land remain the entire property of my wife and children until the youngest attain to the lawful age to transact business for him or herself. If my wife should marry thru I wish her interest in the land to cease and so much as shall be her part of said land to be equally divided among my children and if it is further my desire with good desire that all the property belonging to my estate after my debts are paid remain together for the purpose of raising and educating my children except such as shall be thought necessary for any of them to have in case they should marry and leave the family and then and in that case my executors shall ascertain what such property so disposed of shall be worth given him as soon as it shall be convenient for my executors to dispose of on. And I do
