Lineage.

The name of Baillie is met with in the time of EDWARD I. Sir John Baillie is mentioned as being appointed one of the arbitrators to hear and determine upon the claims of the competitors for the Crown of Scotland in 1292, whose name and seal, seven stars with the motto "Quid clarius astris," is attached to that document. Tradition says that on a certain occasion one of the family single-handed killed a wild boar, and relieved his sovereign from danger, whereupon he was desired henceforth to bear nine stars, which all his descendants do, but some of them have the boar's head for a crest, and others the arm and scymitar, being the weapon with which the deed was done.

SIR WILLIAM BAILLIE, of Lamington, co. Lanark, by Marian, his wife, daughter of Sir John Seton, of Seton, had a numerous issue. The three eldest sons, it is said, had maimed a clergyman, who had been taken into the house as tutor, for a grievous offence which he had committed in their family, of which injury he died. The power of the Church at this time being great in Scotland, the three brothers were (continues the tradition) obliged to fly.

The eldest, who settled in Inverness, is stated to have fought at the battle of Brechin, and to have been for his services rewarded with the lands of Dunain and Torbreck, part of the castle lands of Inverness; from him springs the family of Dochfour, and its derivative branch of Redcastle and Tarradale (see Burke's Landed Gentry of Great Britain and Ireland). The second, of whom presently, settled in Ireland, and the third went to the Isle of Anglesey, and founded the family of which the Marquess of Anglesey is a descendant. The second brother was

ALEXANDER BAILLIE, who settled in Ireland, at Innishargie, co. Down, in the reign of JAMES I., about the year 1620, and d. 1687. He had issue, JOHN (Capt.), of whom presently; and Edward, who settled at Ringdufferin, co. Down, and was ancestor of the family of Baillie of Ringdufferin (see Burke's Landed Gentry of Great Britain and Ireland). The eldest son,
