

John Brown's Family.

[Exchange.]

Owen Brown, the son of John Brown, and the last survivor of the raid into Virginia in 1859, is now in California. His brother, Jason, and his sister, Ruth Thompson, with her husband, children and grandchildren, are living on the mountain side, near Pasadena, where they have taken up land for a fruit farm. In another part of California, Saratoga, Santa Clara county, two daughters of John Brown are living, Sarah, who was for some years employed in the San Francisco mint, and Ellen (Mrs. Fablinger). These daughters own a fruit farm there which was their mother's, the widow of John Brown, who died nearly two years ago. The other daughter, Anne (Mrs. Adams), is living with her children at Rohnerville, in northern California, and her brother, Salmon, who owns a sheep range and a large flock of sheep, lives at Bridgeville, Humboldt county, not far from Rohnerville. None of the family are very prosperous in worldly goods.
