

Gen. Henry R. Jackson.

The JOURNAL is glad to welcome home on a brief visit this distinguished Georgian, now representing our country in Mexico as Minister to that court. How he is regarded there by Christian people is shown by Bishop R. S. Foster, of the Northern Methodist church, who writes as follows to the Western Advocate, of Cincinnati:

"Our Minister of Legation to the Republic of Mexico is Gen. H. R. Jackson, of Savannah, Georgia. I was glad to meet him and his accomplished wife, and Mrs Wilder, her sister, and her daughter, at a dining of brother Butler. He is an educated gentleman, a graduate of Yale, who has seen service in legation abroad. I am sure they have high appreciation of our missionary staff, and they are of mutual advantage to each other. The General has been but a short time at this post, but I feel sure that he will enjoy the respect of the court circle here, and will honor the country whose representative he is. He occupies the very beautiful home built by President Diaz for himself. He speaks in high terms of the President as a man of great practical wisdom, and the real as well as nominal leader of his nation."
