The following are apparently the answers to some questions written to someone by Mrs. Jackson. I, (Mrs. E. H. Fluker, Jr.) do not have the questions:

1 - They were printed in Hearst Sunday American, by the genealogist, now dead, Col. R. H. Peck. He ~~want~~ sent me free copies and said that they could not be obtained again.

2 - Yes - I will rewrite the line with references, for $5.00. When I sold you the family history it was only the Staples line that you requested & I also gave you the Starke line. I will also send the three papers (American Sunday) of the complete Wyatt line, Coat of Arms.

3 - Col. John Starke was a member of the Committee of Safety in Hanover Co., Va. in 1775. John Starke, Sr., his son John Starke, Jr. together with (son-in-law) Barrett White were members of the Committee of Safety for Hanover Co, 1775. (See Oct. Quarterly - p. 104) This is copied from Wm. & Mary College Quarterly v. April 1897. John Starke of Hanover Co. & Anne Wyatt married May 25, 1735 (Mr. N. A. Brock found the entry of the marriage on the fly-leaf of the acts of the Assembly for 1735 and also found the names & dates of the births of his children which I have sent you. (copied from Wm. & Mary Quarterly - page 257, Apr. 1897)

4 - I have never made any claim that John Starke was ever a member of the Virginia Assembly. There is no reason to think that we could be Colonial Dames on the Wyatt line as easily as the children of the first marriage. The second line children have only in the past few years been traced & are not as well known historically as the first wife's children.

THE FOLLOWING IS A COPY OF INFORMATION COMPILED BY CORNELIA FRANCES FLUKER JACKSON
AND COPIED VERBATIM BY DENNIS JOAN GODDARD FLUKER (MRS. EDWARD E., JR.)

I tried for five years before I could get Anne Wyatt Starkes line traced.
At last I got it from Mrs. C. H. Gray from New Palmyra, Mo.

Mrs. James C. Wynn of Atlanta is a Colonial Dame on the Wyatt line (first marriage) which has no connection whatever with our line. They went in on Wyatt line.

6 - Haute Wyatt was a minister in Jamestown, during the first administration of his brother Sir Francis Wyatt, Gov. of Va. He was the youngest brother of Sir Francis Wyatt, came to America on the "George" — was minister of Jamestown from 1621 - 1625 when he returned to England & became Vicar of Boxley in Kent Co.

8 - No date on Jane Osborn

9 - Rice Jones family — no

18 - No further data on Stephen Staples, although there has been a Staples book written but I have never seen it. I have a great deal of Staples' history that I cannot claim — I have a description of the Staples Coat of Arms!

The wills I have are not necessary to Col. Dame line except they verify the children. I have Thomas Starke's will (he is son of John Starke) and Staples will.

VIRGINIA MAGAZINE OF HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY — VOL. III., NO. 2

Sir Francis Wyatt was Governor of Virginia from 1621 to August 26th, 1625, when a new commission was issued to him and he continued in office until September 18th, when he received permission to go to Ireland where his presence was required by a matter of business consequent upon the death of his father, Sir George Wyatt of Boxley, Kent, England. He was again Governor of Virginia from November 1639 until February 1641. He was born 1588, knighted July 7th, 1618, and was buried at Boxley August 24, 1644.

Rev. Haute Wyatt, brother of Sir Francis, was born 1594, matriculated at Queens College, Oxford, October 25th, 1611 and was a student at Gray's Inn. He was minister at Jamestown during his brother's first administration but returned to England with him; served at Marston Chapel 1630, became Vicar of Boxley, Kent, 1632 and died July 31, 1638. He married (1) Elisabeth — who died October 31, 1626 and (2) Anne, who died February 1631. By the first marriage he had two sons, George and Edward who came to Virginia, whose descendants live in Virginia, Kent and other counties. The old estate of the Wyatts' is in Gloucester, was named Boxley.

In 1663 "Edward Wyatt, Gentleman" patented land in the middle Plantation and with his wife, Jane, sold it in 1667. In 1662 he patented land in Gloucester, and after that date resided there.

Sir Henry Wyatt of a Yorkshire family, was a Lancastrian and resisted the accession of Richard III to the throne. He was imprisoned in the tower for two years and, according to his son, was racked in the presence of Richard himself. There was a family tradition that while in prison, he was saved from starvation by a Tower car who brought him a pigeon each day. Lord Romney, the representative of the Wyatts, has a portrait of Sir Henry seated in a prison cell, with a cat drawing towards him a pigeon through the bars of the window. The Biographical sketch in the dictionary of National Biography calls attention to the cat that this portrait represents an old man and must have been painted long after the alleged event.

On ~~1503~~ the accession of Henry VII, Henry Wyatt was released and admitted to the Privy Council and was one of the executors of that King and guardian of Henry VIII. He was admitted to the Privy Council by the new King in April 1509, and became Knight of the Bath on May 23rd. following. He accompanied Henry VIII to the Field of the Cloth of Gold and was in the Vanguard at the Battle of Spurrie, Aug. 16, 1513. He purchased in 1492 the Castle and estate of Arlington in Kent, which Henry VIII visited in 1537. He married Anne, daughter of John Skinner, of Holgate and Surrey and died March 10th, 1537. His children: Thomas, Margaret, who married Sir Anthony Lee, of Quarrendon, (and was the mother of Sir Henry Lee K. G.) and Henry, whose descendants were settled in Essex, England.

The son, Thomas Wyatt, the poet, was born in 1503 and died October 1542. His seat was at Arlington Castle; "Undoubtedly the leader and acknowledged master of 'the company of Courtly' makers, who, in the reign of Henry VIII under the Italian influence, transferred the character of English poetry". He took a Bachelor's degree at Cambridge at 15, was knighted in 1536 and was twice sent as Ambassador to the Emperor (Charles V) a strong proof of his repute as a statesman and diplomatist" (Encyc. Brit.) He was constantly employed in Henry's service and was apparently in high favor; but was sent to the Tower in 1536, perhaps because it was desired that he should incriminate the Queen, Anne Boleyn, whom he had known from childhood. He was released in the fall of that year. In March 1537 he was knighted. In 1541 he was again imprisoned in the Tower on the old charges; but made an eloquent and manly defense and was released in a few months. He married Elizabeth (who married secondly Sir Edward Warner) a daughter of Thomas Brooke, 3rd, Lord of Arlington Castle, which with Boxley Abbey, Kent, he inherited from his father. From 1543 to 1545 he had a command at Boulogne. In 1554 he joined the conspirator who combined to prevent the marriage of Queen Mary with Phillip of Spain. He led a force of Kentishmen to London and entered the city; but his attempt failed and he was captured, imprisoned in the Tower and beheaded on April 11, 1554, and his estates confiscated. He married Jane, daughter and co-heiress of Sir William Hawte, or Haute, of Brune, Kent and had a number of children, George, Richard, Henry, Jacosa and Ursula.

George Wyatt, Eldest son of Sir Thomas, was restored to his estate of Boxley by Queen Elizabeth in 1570. He married October 8, 1582, Jane, Daughter of Sir Thomas Finch of Eastwell, Kent, Francis, Maute, Henry, A. M. and Minister were his children. He died in Ireland and was buried at Boxley Sept 1, 1624.

Rev. Maute Wyatt was born 1594, matriculated at Queens Col. Eng., Oxford October 25, 1611 and was a student at Grays Inn. He was minister at Jamestown, during his brothers first administration and returned to England with ~~with~~ him. He served Marston Chapel 1639, became Vicar of Boxley 1652 and died July 31, 1658. He married first, Elizabeth, who died October 31, 1620 and second, Anne, who died February 1631. By his first marriage he had Edward, George and Thomas. By his second marriage he had Anne, Baptized 1631 and John.

MARY GEORGIA PIONEERS WERE MEMBERS OF PHILLIPS CHURCH

by Mrs. W. I. Jackson (as it appeared in a newspaper article)

Wilkes County is one of the oldest counties in Georgia, having been created at the first Constitutional Convention in 1777. And it was the first county to have its boundaries defined.

Phillips Mill Church (as it was first called) is one of the oldest churches in the state and, fortunately, its minutes have been preserved from the very beginning. On the first church list there are many notable names — among them the Mercers, Chivers, Davis, etc. The Thomas Chivers that appears on the list is either the Wilkes County poet or his uncle, Thomas Holley Chivers. They both had the same name. Thomas Holley Chivers, the poet, was born in Wilkes County, Georgia, near Washington, at Digby Manor, October 18, 1809. A great deal is being written of Thomas Holley Chivers at the present time.

Samuel Davis' name also appears on this list. He was the father of Jefferson Davis, and his home was not far from the church. Jefferson Davis was born in Kentucky, however.

The Mercers, Silas and Jesse, came from Halifax County, North Carolina, about 1767.

Phillips Mill Church was originally built on Little River, near Quaker Springs, but was moved to the present site in the southwestern part of Wilkes County about 1840. It took its name from a Revolutionary War soldier who built a mill on Kettle Creek. Its name was first, "The Church at Phillips Mill", but the congregation afterwards bought out Salem Church from the Presbyterians and then called their body "Phillips Church."

Silas Mercer was the founder of the church and served as pastor 11 years. He was followed by his son, Jesse Mercer, who was pastor 37 years. Phillips Church is the parent church of the Washington (Ga.) Baptist Church, and Jesse Mercer was the first pastor. He wrote "Mercer's Cluster", hymnbook, which probably was the first book published by anyone living in Wilkes County.

On May 7, 1785, "We, Silas Mercer, Meshark Turner, George Lea, William Parker, and others, who had formerly been baptized upon a profession of faith and had come from different parts, and settled on Little River, near Phillips Mill, inconvenient to any other constituted body of our order, met at George Lea's in order to consider what would be best for us to do. And in conference concluded it would be best for us to be constituted in order to keep up a Godly Gospel Disciple for God's glory and our happiness. Accordingly, we sent for our beloved brethren, Sanders Walker and Peter Smith, who met with us at George Lea's on June 10, 1785. And examined our standing and finding us orderly and well recommended by letter they received us, viz., Silas Mercer, Meshark Turner, William Parker, George Lea, Owen Fluker, Jesse Tolbert, Dorcas Mercer, Rebekah Turner, Elizabeth Parker, Lucy Lea, Elizabeth Monroeaf, ~~mentioning~~ Sarah Fluker, Florannah Wingfield, Anne Wingfield, Nancy Glass and Mary Leverette, into their fellowship and constituted and declared us to be a church according to Gospel Order; and we entered into the following ~~memoranda~~ covenant In testimony and ratification whereof, we have each of us signed our name hereto. And may the Lord help us to perform the same — Silas Mercer, Meshark Turner, William Parker, George Lea, Owen Fluker, Jesse Tolbert.

Other Revolutionary War soldiers were entered on the minutes later — George Smith, John Wilson, John Turner, Nathaniel Harris and John Rice.

Besides the minutes of Phillips Church, those interested will find much of value in Miss Eliza Bowen's "History of Wilkes County", while the list of Revolutionary War soldiers will be found in the Wilkes County list and in Smith's "Story of Georgia".

One rather remarkable feature of this church is the record of four generations of one family in its membership — Owen Fluker, a Revolutionary War soldier, was one of the founders. His son, Isaac, joined this church in 1828. And Isaac's son, William Thomas, joined in 1828 also, and William Thomas, Jr., joined in 1862.

COPIED FROM AN ARTICLE WRITTEN BY ANNIE FLUKER, daughter of William Thomas Fluker, II

Emily Reid Murden was born at Robinson, Ga., Sept. 27, 1848, married William Thomas Fluker Feb. 11, 1869.

The first 12 years of her life were happy care-free years. She was born on a large plantation and with two brothers and three sisters led the happy go lucky life of a plantation child.

Her father was a slave holder who treated his negroes well - he never bought - nor sold a slave -. He was often heard to say that he would have been a rich man if he hadn't had so many negroes. Emily said that the only time she had ever heard her parents disagree on any subject was when her mother wished to sell some negroes in order to send her older brother to the University of Virginia and her father refused. This argument was never settled - one brother went to the army and one went to the munition factory in Augusta and the girls took up the work of sewing, spinning and weaving for the family. The slaves on the plantation and for the soldiers. The oldest girl Sarah with the assistance of her mother did the ~~most important~~ sewing, the second daughter Mary did the spinning and Emily with the assistance of one negro woman, in her thirteenth year took up the task of weaving for an entire plantation. I have often heard her say that her feet were so bruised from the heavy wooden treadle of the loom that her stockings were stiff with blood when she took them off at night. After the war ended her youngest brother was brought home, with eleven bullet holes in his body. He had been buried on the battle field in a coffin bought by a Yankee officer. Her oldest brother had not been heard of for months, but he finally came home from a Northern prison more dead than alive.

At the age of 20 this true patriot was married, and as she had given her early years to the service of her country and her home even more willingly did she now give them to her large family.

Truly her life was one of service.

Thomas Fluker, British Secretary of the Piscataqua Colony - Maine - Mass., 1742

Gen. Henry Knox - Born July 25, 1750, married "the lovely Lucy" Fluker, June 20, 1774.

THOMASTON WOMEN SEEK AID FROM STATE LEGISLATURE (a newspaper article)

by James McLeod

If the valiant efforts of the patriotic women of the General Knox chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of Thomaston, Me., prevail, the famous old mansion of the general, "Montpelier", will be reconstructed, and the grounds restored to their original glory as a national shrine and memorial to Henry Knox, Boston bookseller, astute strategist and engineer, friend of Washington, and by many considered the mainstay of "The Father of His Country" during the revolutionary war.

Already, by diligence, hard work and self-sacrifice, the women of the quaint old town in Maine have raised $10,000 toward the sum of $25,000 they declare will be ample, and they are seeking a contribution from the state of Maine to help along.

An appeal also is contemplated to the fine city of Knoxville, Tenn., founded for Gen. Henry Knox, and named in his honor. It has become a flourishing, wealthy city, and the spirit of Henry Knox is reflected in its people.

United States Supreme Court Justice Sanford is a Knoxville man, and has frequently expressed his profound admiration for the brave man from Boston, who never hesitated at duty's call, but who, leaving all his possessions in Boston, braved the wrath of his former Tory relatives and friends and with his wife, fled Boston in the night shortly before the war's furies broke out to take up active work for his country.

Knox was born here, July 25, 1750; his father, a Scottish Presbyterian of the line of John Knox had come here from the West Indies to settle. Young Henry was educated in the common schools of Boston, and at an early age joined the militia.

He kept a bookshop in old Cornhill, where his shop was a rendezvous for educated persons. He was renowned for his admirable ability to listen and say little, and although suspected of sympathy with the Sons of Liberty, he succeeded in allaying any personal troubles. He was fishing for something — and caught it.

His social qualities gave him entree to the ruling circles and he married Mrs Lucy Fluker, daughter of the provincial secretary. This kept him closely in touch with what was going in British officialdom.

Then he joined the grenadier guard of Maj. Dames, and was given every opportunity to study warfare, particularly in engineering and fortifications, and to qualify as an artillerist.

He was one of the last of the "rebels" to leave Boston, escaping with his wife, carrying no baggage except his sword, which was concealed in the folds of the dress worn by Mrs. Knox. This was shortly before the battle of Bunker Hill, and Gen. Gage was highly disturbed on learning that the able clever and brave Knox had escaped. Knox joined as a volunteer aid to Gen. Ward and reconnoitered between the Heights and the Colonial army headquarters; so great was Ward's faith in him that his own orders depended wholly on Knox's reports.

His very great skill in engineering and in ballistics attracted this attention of Washington, who sent for him and placed him in command of the first regiment of artillery. Washington told him to get some cannon — and Knox did. With comparatively small aid he went to Lake Champlain and brought back on the long journey by ox teams through the winter snows the cannon used by the Continentals at Bunker Hill.

He brought 60 cannon, mortars and howitzers on his long train of sledges, and it was due to him and his efforts that the siege and bombardment of Boston, held by the English, was successful. Then Washington called him to take over the management of all the New York island artillery. Knox was the last man out when the vast English forces compelled the evacuation of New York.

Subsequently he distinguished himself in the New Jersey campaign, and the government records show that it was the well-directed courage of the former Boston bookseller and schoolboy that repulsed Cornwallis in every one of his attacks and attempts to pass the Assumpink. Knox had full share in the glories at Princeton.

Congress made him a brigadier-general of artillery, sent him to this state, and then he was called by Washington to handle the Hessians in and near Philadelphia. He was with Washington during that harrowing winter at Valley Forge, improved the army's discipline, and was the most prominent figure at the battle of Monmouth.

It was there that Washington paid his great tribute, saying: "I have the satisfaction to inform Gen. Knox and his officers that the enemy has done them the justice to acknowledge that no artillery could be better served than theirs." He was in the thick of the revolutionary war battles from start to finish, and at Yorktown was in the grand battery by the side of Washington, who with Lafayette, praised him and his skill.

After the armistice he was placed in charge of West Point, and on him devolved the delicate task of disbandment. He arranged the surrender terms in New York with Sir Guy Carleton, and after the peace became secretary of war.

Retiring from the cabinet in 1795, he moved to Maine, locating at what is now Thomaston, where he erected his famous old mansion. He was a pioneer in developing the mineral resources of Maine, and was a great figure in the early days of the lime rock quarries, as well as in lumbering and shipbuilding. He named his mansion "Montpelier" in compliment to Lafayette, his friend and guest.

In peace, he was an exalted figure, and began conciliating the Indians. He entertained the entire tribe of Penobscot Indians at "Montpelier", and other occasions were signalized by the presence of such notables as Louis Philippe, afterward King of France, and the great Talleyrand.

Montpelier mansion was torn down in 1871, but its treasures are safe and plenty of photographs and plans, made for the purpose of use if ever funds were available for rebuilding, were put away. Even the two great eagles that surmount the gates to the grounds are in a state of excellent preservation, ready for the rebuilt Montpelier estate.

Folks may have an idea of the patriotic urge back of the worthy women of Thomaston, among whom real descendants of revolutionary heroes are numerous, by learning that they have sold soap, practiced rugged economics and endured many self-denials to raise the first $10,000 before seeking aid. There are 40 women in the chapter and they have been only eight years in raising the money.

A great-grandson of Gen. Knox is Prof. Fowler of Brown, and he, naturally, is interested deeply. The chapter has the IoT and a fine start and although three sessions of the state Legislature have been asked for the money, without avail the devoted band of 40 women are not dismayed. They have given parties and fairs and all that, but feel as if the state, now without any such national asset, should appreciate the honor and appropriate the sum asked. However, it will be raised in some way.

Gen. Henry Knox is the patron saint of Knox county, Maine, where he lived until his untimely death on Oct. 26, 1806, when only 56. A chicken bone lodged in his throat and caused death.

So now you understand why the D. A. R. of Thomaston are seeking a pittance of $15,000 to restore the home of that great stalwart of the revolution Henry Knox. Boston schoolboy and bookseller, who staked life and fortune willingly and gladly and shared all the privations endured by the brave men who called into being the United States of America.

Putnam and Cox, Boston architects, are working out the plans for the restoration, and their labors actually were rested on a rough sketch of the room arrangement, found on the back of a piece of the wall paper, preserved by a thoughtful workman at the demolition. This paper came to Miss W. J. Sattie of the chapter, and the Boston architects declare the mansion was one of the noblest ever reared in this country.

Its vast rooms, high-posted and stately proportions reveals the master craft of the late 18th century.

The chapter, of which Miss Hortense B. Wilson is regent and chairman of the restoration committee, has been very busy. The former regent, Mrs. Emily Wilson Stevens, is actively engaged in the work, too.

Miss H. J. Watts provides us with some "recollections of Montpelier" from which it is learned that the bookseller-warrior-statesman was his own chief architect. He engaged a Boston architect, Ebenezer Dunton, to go down to Thomaston and oversee the construction, with a view to location as well as the erecting. Eagles were the ornaments for Knox was a patriot, through and through. One of the birds, carefully preserved, is of iron and weighs 500 pounds.

The main house was 56 feet frontage by 48 feet deep, with plenty of room for a promenade. The great oval reception room, with its two fireplaces, was for generations a show place. Its walls were adorned with famous paintings. One, of Thomas Flucker the colonial secretary and father of Mrs. Knox is now in the Bowdoin College art gallery.

The furnishings have been traced apart from those safe in Thomaston, and it is hoped eventually to have them housed in their old setting where the masterpieces of European workmen were in company with the best colonial productions.

The article by Miss Watts reads like an enchanted story, as she tells how in girlhood she visited the mansion, with its wonderfully decorated walls and heavily embossed papers. A feature was the "Dead Room", in the second story, laid out as a room for any of the family awaiting burial. It was fitted ~~with~~ as a small church, a mortuary chapel.

The basement, with its kitchen and other domestic offices, and the deep wine cellar, was a feature. Miss Watts has in her possession the massive state bed, Windsor chairs and other priceless treasures which have ~~been~~ long been vainly sought by outsiders. They are treasures above money price. In the event of restoration, they may, in season, be back in their old place, where the coming generations may visit and pay homage to one of the great men who made this nation possible — the Boston bookseller, Scot Covenanter, who was unafraid.

Thomas Flucker of London, England was Royal Secretary of the Piscataqua Colony, Maine-Massachusetts, in 1742. He married 1st Hannah Waldo, second Judith Bowdoin, a life-size portrait of this Thomas Flucker, hangs in Bowdoin College, Massachusetts.

COPIED FROM THE TRAIL OF THE MAINE PIONEER

By members of the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs, Lewiston, Maine.

(Regarding the only son of Sir William Pepperrell, Bart. of Kittery Point, Maine)

"Andrew, was unhappy in his love affairs. There were rumors of a match between him and Mary, the daughter of Rev. Benjamin Stevens who lived at Kittery Point from 1741 to 1791 and was an intimate friend of the Baronet, but Mary married another, and when Andrew, after many delays, went to Boston to marry Hannah Waldo, the Boston beauty refused to let the ceremony go on. Doubtless she had heard of Mary Stevens, and chose her own time to punish young Pepperrell for his procrastination. Six weeks afterward Miss Waldo became Mrs. Thomas Flucker, and their daughter, "the lovely Lucy" married Henry Knox, once the handsome bookseller, afterwards Washington's comrade in arms, and, still later, the magnate of Thomaston, the Maine Waldo patent.

(Major-General Henry Knox of Boston, Mass.)

"Soon after the "Boston Massacre-1770" — Henry Knox went into business for himself by opening "The London Book-Store" in Cornhill. The store became a popular resort for young and old, while British officers and Tory ladies were frequent customers. A certain young lady of the fashionable Tory society, Miss Lucy Flucker, became one of the most frequent callers at the Knox store. She seemed to be fond of reading, especially of books sold by Knox and soon an intimacy sprang up between the young bookseller and his distinguished patron. Their regard for each other was mutual but her parents, who were aristocratic Tories, were bitterly opposed to the union

Thomas Whelby, the father of Lucy, royal secretary of the province, tried to make her believe as he did, that, when the colonies were subdued by the imperial government, she would, if united with Knox, regret having acted contrary to the advice of her parents At last her parents gave a reluctant consent to the marriage, which was performed by Rev. Dr. Cenor on June 20, 1774."
