

C. HENRY COHEN, solicitor-general of the Augusta circuit, Georgia judiciary, was born in Charleston, S. C., in 1856. When a mere child his parents removed to Augusta, Ga., and his education was received at the Richmond County academy, located in Augusta, and at that venerable and renowned Catholic institution, Georgetown college, in the District of Columbia, receiving his diploma as a graduate from the literary department of the latter college in 1877. Returning to Augusta, he entered the law office of Barnes & Cumming, and was admitted to practice in the superior courts of Georgia in 1877. Mr. Cohen at once entered actively and successfully upon the practice of his profession, and so rapid was his rise at the bar that he was appointed solicitor-general by Gov. Henry D. McDaniel, and reappointed during the administration of Gov. William J. Northen. Mr. Cohen is very prominent in several fraternal, benevolent and protective orders, and is district deputy grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. He was happily joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, in 1882, to Miss Nora V., daughter of the late Col. J. R. Sneed, a very prominent citizen of Savannah, Ga., and this union has proved an ideally happy one.

DR. THOMAS D. COLEMAN, a prominent physician of Augusta, Ga., was born in that city in January, 1865. He was reared and received his primary education there, and in 1881, he entered the Kentucky university, at Lexington, and graduated there in June, 1885, with the degree of A. B. Dr. Coleman then studied medicine a year with his father, Dr. John S. Coleman, in Augusta, Ga., and then went to Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, where he took a post-graduate course. He was made assistant physiologist in that university for a year, and then went to the university of the city of New York, where he remained two years, being made assistant physiologist the second year in that institution. In 1890 Dr. Coleman came to Augusta and commenced practice. In March, 1893, he was made professor of physiology, to which, in 1894, pathology was added, in the medical college of Georgia, at Augusta. Dr. Coleman belongs to the State Medical association, the American Association of Surgeons, the Association of American physicians and surgeons, the Georgia medical association, the Georgia association of physicians and surgeons, the Augusta academy of medicine, and is a member of the Augusta board of health. He is a consistent member of the Christian church. Dr. Coleman was married in June, 1890, to Miss Annie Lee Adams, of Lexington, Ky.
