This 2-story brick home is part of the Historical District of Jonesboro. It was built ca 1880 for Leander Carruth Hutcheson, a prominent citizen and sheriff of Clayton County. It features a central hall and crosshall with two story galleries on two sides of the house. The front and side entrances on both floors feature rectangular window lights and interior doors with four paned transom lights. The roof has several gables with ornate iron grillwork in the air vents. The bulustrades and posts on the galleries are Victorian in design. The main building is a four room cube on each floor. It is now owned by the First Baptist Church.
